

CØRPUS THEMETICUM

A Guide to THEM Whoso Are Worthy

-The Temple of THEM -

To Them that believe in my belief in THEM

...And to Lovecraft's Mad Arab Abdul Alhazred,
Of whom I am the living embodiment.

Embrace. Exhaust. Evolve.

Throughout my life I have collected and collated dozens of books from various magickal currents to preserve them for our and future generations, but for varied reasons I have never performed the same kindness/duty for the Temple of THEM. Corpus Thematicum is an attempt to digitally store and transfer the majority of my written works concerning my occult journey and archive the wild tangle of changing insights and discoveries I have had and made in the past twenty-five years.

In style, it is nowhere close to being as ornate and decorative as the full-graphic 'Themonomicon', the illustrated 'Temple Guidebook 2015', or the colourful 'Oto Anorha' magazines. Such adornment and visual care has taken place at other stages of my texts life; to be found in the archives of Chapter 11: The Vault. But this, is not that kind of book.

For the first time in its history, I have attempted to place the majority of THEM's texts in an 'order of concept' - to help mentally/magically dismantle the Ziggurat systematically; and to add structure to the chaos of so many writings within. This collection is far beyond the limited effort of Threshold that sought to offer an overview with a small number of texts across four themed books, and Corpus Thematicum features almost 1300 pages of occult philosophical thought, experiment and madness.

Not all texts are written by my hand but I largely present what appears under the collective of THEM. Multiple currents are represented at varied stages of my life. What is contained herein should be considered of historical importance to the tradition of the occult and not necessarily reflective or encompassing my current views which have grown both increasingly complicated in many regards - and infinitesimally simple in others...

At 45 years of age, my involvement in the Occult has brought me both sublime internal peace, Knowing what I know, and churning, roiling insanity and dark depression, Knowing what I know. Somehow, I have managed to withstand the onslaught of interaction with these forces, but not without deep and lasting scars and the loss of a great many loves. The price paid to bring you this book, for it to contain what it contains; and that it finds you in whatever time, whosoever you are; was a very high price.

Books, are portals. Reading the right book at the right time by the right person can completely shatter their world. This book is a portal to many portals, and was built to shatter All Worlds. If you come this way, may THEM watch over you. And may you someday join me in the Abyss among the stars in the blackest black.

Know Thyself.

SUMMARISING THE OCCULT ZEITGEIST

PROKARYOTES

DARKNESS. A WORLD WITHOUT LIGHT BUT THAT WHICH SHONE UPON THE CRESTS OF COLOSSAL WAVES AS THE EARTH SWAM CLAD IN A PERPETUITY OF TEEMING OCEAN. IN THE HOLLOW AND RAVINES, TRENCHES AND DEEPS, IN THE EYELESS WILDE WHERE THE IMMENSE POWER AND PRESSURE CRUSHES ALL BUT THE STRANGE ADAPTED. BIOLUMINESCENCE, FLEETING DASHING STARS IN A BLACKER THAN BLACK GALAXY, ALIEN, AUTONOMOUS, LONG CRUEL TEETH AND BALEFUL BLINDED MILKY EYES, A PLACE TO STARE INTO THE ABYSS AND HAVE IT STARE BACK. IN SUCH A TERRAIN, PREDATORS AND PREY, MONSTERS TOO MAN HAS LONG CEASED TO BELIEVE IN, SO OLD, SO FORGOTTEN. LITERALLY AND CUMULATIVELY, SLEEPING NOW AS MARROW IN THE BONES OF ALL BEFORE. A DESCRIPTION THAT APPLIES TO THE OCEANS, OUTER SPACE AND THE HUMAN PSYCHE AS A UNITARY VELVET. AND REMNANTS TOO, OF THE EARTH BEFORE WE KNEW IT, BEFORE IT BECAME OUR INHERITANCE AND SMUGLY, WE LOOKED BACK ON ITS HISTORY AS IF A SIMPLE THING, A CHRONOLOGY SO VAST YET WE SO-SAGELY AND COMPACTLY IMAGINE WE CAN IMAGINE. A LUXURY OF LARGESSE. SILENT THOSE SHAPES, BULKY, ANGULAR, SENTIENT, MONSTROUS, OF GEOMETRIES LIKE THOSE SPOKEN OF BY LOVECRAFT, WHEN REFLECTIONS OF LIFE WERE NEWER, COLDER, WHEN THE PRIMAL NATURES OF BEINGS WERE BECOMINGS AND ODD PODS RULED THE EARTH AGAIN AND AGAIN IN SAVAGE DYNASTY FORGOTTEN BY CYCLES, THE WOOD AGE, THE ICE AGE, AND THE SLOW ACCUMULATION BY THE NIGHTMARES OF OUR MODERN DREAM, THE ANCESTORS WHOM PASSED THROUGH THE PRIMORDIAL EVOLUTIONARY STAGES OF THE APEX, WHO FORGED THE LAYERS OF THE SUBCONSCIOUS IN CRUSTED BOWELS FILLED WITH WATERY GUTS DEEP BENEATH THE MOVING OVERSEER, THE DEEP GUARDIAN OF ALL OUR SECRETS THE UNDERWORLD OF THE OVERWORLD. THEM.

THE MESSAGE OF THOTH FROM THEM

“From the First Angle is the Dream:”

And there came to one of us in each generation a vessel with the power of remembrance – They who dream of the shining light that sat between the world into which we were born – and the world we were born from – and whose dream becomes life. And They who are touched Remember what has been forgotten – that which sent us, hidden from beyond sight, and a secret – and that which must be Restored.

“From the Second Angle Is the Master holding the baying Hounds of Hell:”

The first angle is always the Dream, for the Dark Ones cannot reach across the planes without the necessary preparation of horrid angles and lunatic geometry. To the denizens of the abyss such angles and their design are the paragon of sublime – and for that – nightmares, awkward, ungainly and the cathedral of absolute evil to those guardians of the gate: those hounds of hell who wear crowns of light.

“From the Third Angle Is the Key to the Silver Gate of Time:”

Grasps hir who steeps the world in shadow, who seizes the hounds of the world dragon by the throat and turns them to hir command, the Eternal, for hir crafts defences against all entropy and interference in hir dark magic and holds aloft the blazing shapes of death and the dead.

“From the Fourth Angle is the nascent horror of Eternity:”

And hir that would challenge his mortal coil and spit in the face of the gods could learn to live among them but never again return to earth. And for stealing the fire of the gods forever be accursed to carry it – a star – doomed that all whom near it for illumination be incinerated by its fury and its glory as punishment.

“From the Fifth Angle is the cracking of the skulls of the righteous:”

To hir of the Voice are drawn disciples whose priests shall receive hir powers to crack the firmaments. Believers will turn and fall to the hands of the grasping.

“From the Sixth Angle is the gloating of the Ones of Darkness Who have waited:”

Where the star has walked a great fire shall burn, until all is aflame and the world a raging inferno.

“From the Seventh Angle Is the Reign of the Avenger”

And he shall set the Openers and the Closers in the sands to spill a river of blood.

“From the Eighth Angles Is the Victory of the Night of Seething Fury giving release to tortured screams:”

From the smoking ash and twisted brackage, sweeping swords of cleansing death announce new names and new ways, from the old names of always.

“From the Ninth Angle Is the Coming of the Ones of Old who have slept in the Dreams of Men.”

And None shall Know the Wyrn.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE BRIEF HISTORY OF THEM

After attempting to establish numerous proxy nexions, many of which involved archiving the work and ethos of the ONA - The Temple of THEM was founded in February 2006 by myself (of a thousand names but best known as Ryan Anschauung (then Tnepres) and another individual known as 'The Sorceress'. Our meeting in 2003 represented a collision of determined individuals with unique ideas and Wyrds that would feed each other to the present day. These ideas were tempered, tested and evolved by more than a decade of involvement between two Masters. One being Christos Beest who instructed me in the Hebdomadry of the British, ONA the other a powerful Sorceress from Eastern Europe. I was mentored in magick by what I derived from the ONA and its associated nexions, my own personal Mvimaedivm and what was taught to me by the Sorceress, my Mistresses, and my Mother.

The Temple of THEM's exoteric form straddles seven major disciplines drawing influence from each; (1) the Septenary Way, (2) Private Thracian Lore, (3) The Chaos Magic of the Illuminates of Thanateros, (4) The Mythos of Lovecraft, (5) Mvimaedivm - a personal and unique Archetypal/Narrative Magic developed as my life has unfolded (6) The Sorcery of Carlos Castenada & (7) The Analytical Psychology of Carl Gustav Jung.

The decision to form THEM arose from an observation of a satanic monopoly emerging that threatened to snuff out the range of approaches and methodologies for appreciating the occult and the advancement of our own growing Aeonic Urges and implementations to interfere/alter the present course of the human psyche. Numerous individuals then undertaking the Way of the Septenary who found it did not meet their needs, or appreciate their individual opinions, criticisms, insights or variations joined forces - each from high-ranking positions in other magical/occult currents around the globe inc. OTO, ONA, IOT, TOS, and many more each offering their specialist knowledge of their current to the collective pool. The Temple of THEM shaped itself as a platform that would allow these isolated and often harried voices the opportunity to speak loudly and clearly even and especially when it interfered with the trending status quo of satanic philosophy in order to transcend duality itself.

INCARNATIONS

Naturally when it began THEM was very different from its present course. And over the duration of the nine years it has existed, has taken on a myriad of different incarnations to explore, expand, evolve and meet certain needs and lived a variety of forms. Among these have been the 2010 Sinister 101 Syndicate (previously known as the Mvimaedivm Forum) which was a thriving online business hub for all things Septenary, Sinister and ONA. It is still in existence, but activity has all but ceased after operations were moved to other cyber quarters and remaining membership is a shadow of what it used to be. Mvimaedivm White, Mvimaedivm Black, were two projects by the Temple researching the Magi and the Lore of the Dark Gods. These studies resulted in the publication of a 250-page collaboration called "Ki En Gi r Black" and consisted mostly of a hybrid of Sumerian academia and occulture. Some 500 additional pages relating to Sorcery & Combat Techniques, The Dark God lore in Prehistory/Egypt/Indo-Europea, Star Lore, and numerous other topics of interest at the time have been archived but are not accessible to the public.

The forum Mvimaedivm Black also still exists, under the watchful eye of one of THEM, but its level of activity is much like that of S101S, a ghost town after THEM vacated it in favour of new stomping ground. Other groups not available or visible to the public such as 'Otherland' were additional attempts to unite a collective of Sorcerers across the globe in perfecting and exploring magical technique and sharing personal philosophy and techniques. Otherland also concerned itself with psychedelic experiences,entheogenics - or using substances as pathways to Allies, astral travel and out of body experiences. Numerous Wordpresses, a digital notebook platform, have been utilised by the Temple over the years including the inventively named 'Ryan Anschauung WordPress', 'Dark Planet WordPress', 'Mvimaedivm', 'Temple of THEM' Word-presses too.

The only currently active WordPress utilised by THEM is the re-incarnation of templeofthem.org WordPress which is a private archive accessible only to members of THEM and guests with special permission. Another website titled 'Mvimaedivm' has been inactive a year to the day (April 20, 2015) but was taken hold of by an Italian member of the Temple who dedicated himself wholly to an alternate project.

Mvimaedivm web was a tendrill he intended to dedicate to Sinister/Esoteric Music under the name "Canor Sinistrum" - but which transformation has not yet come to fruition. Building up real estate and handing it over to fledgling members to look after was considered a suitable method to allocate the current to many hands rather than leave it focused in a centrality. A short-lived page (now in hibernation) for the Temple on Facebook was developed into a new forum that is currently active and represents the most recent online representation of the Temple acting as a hub for announcements and file sharing. What dictates which media are kept public or put into hibernation varies - the Temple changes shape according to which criteria it believes have been or need to be achieved and looks out for the appropriate signs that a certain energy, form or attitude has taken root either in an individual or group, which triggers a response from us and a re-organisation of our geometry.

THE BLACK GLYPH SOCIETY

The diversity and expertise in respective magical fields by its members allowed THEM access to documentation kept private by each organisation and this mountain of material would later become the archives of the Black Glyph Society - a society dedicated to keeping alive useful and practical information on systems that we felt contributed to the aims of the would-be Sorcerer. The Black Glyph Society changed hands in approximately 2012 from RA in Australia to TD in the United States - but continues to exist to meet the needs of wanderers of the occult paths. The Glyph as it is affectionately known, operates on a two-tier system. To those we feel deserving of the information in our archives, pending interest and dedication, the Glyph offers free files and materials that relate to that individual's study or in some cases that we feel may open up new vistas or esoteric advancement by having access to. The other tier gives individuals the option to buy a restricted catalogue of materials as printed books mostly relating THEM's studies and philosophy or other unique strains of philosophy on the matter of the Sinister, Satanism or Self-Development. A lesser-known function of the Society is the encouragement and extension of aid to individuals to compile, publish or otherwise share their unique point of view by using our contacts to obtain a publishing deal, or simply assisting in layout, editing, illustrations, or morale. The Glyph is still active, and books can still be purchased by placing an order from the website. Additional materials can be found archived inexpensively for a few Euro a book at a digital download site called Amenthes, from The Spire - a new incarnation of the Glyph (but part of the original society) , or from various portals on the internet. Searching for deliberately obscure keywords such as Mvimaedivm, Oto Anorha, Liber 13/13, or Insynsian will usually bring links up where we have posted material and essays in assorted forums. Such words are unusual because it makes their use, and spread, easy to track.

THE SPIRE

The Spire is a subsidiary of THEM that was launched in 2015 designed to meet a number of goals. (1) To supply affordable quality materials by THEM that have become very expensive or rare over time. (2) To supply Tarot, Star Games and other Occult Items and Services to increase the tools available to others to encourage/enable them to develop certain skills (3) To re-advertise and compliment the resources sold by the Black Glyph with new or rare releases (4) To re-advertise and compliment the resources sold by the Fall of Man and Amenthes digital store with new or rare releases by THEM and other Sinisterion (5) To fund the purchase of land by the Asov and THEM for future phases of its charters.

OTO ANORHA

Oto Anorha is a periodical released at intermittent intervals by the Temple, beginning with the first public issue numbered #28 in 2006 and has charted the progress, methods, magical development, achievements and aims of the Temple over the course of its short but enduring life. Issues have included contributions by members of THEM on varied topics and special editions focused on a theme. The magazine is not restricted only to members of THEM; friends and allies of THEM have been invited to contribute insights to the magazine in previous issues. The mysterious name Oto Anorha stems from the desire to honour the founders (ex)-companion and is an anagrammatic dedication to her. Back Issues of Oto Anorha are still available from the Black Glyph as a printed magazine or from Amenthes in digital format. The most recent issue, Issue #34 is only available from The Spire as a printed magazine.

NOMENCLATURE: A GLOSSARY

+O+ - A personal signature that has two meanings. It is shorthand for +empe of +hem. But was also my signature for many years as I laboured under a specific psychological and exoteric approach to things borne of a complex shape-shifting magical system that has taken me from one name to another (and through dozens) as I morph shape and personality, approach and intent within a system I term the Galactic Organic. Symbolically +O+ represents a dissected 8-spoked mandala and in the Jungian sense, Individuation. A human archetype. -O- - represents an alternate, contradictory approach to the previous persona adopted and a more ruthless, less forgiving one at that. An inhuman archetype and the growing of tendrils. The Abyss within beginning to wake.

Aeurekanequeo - A hybrid of two words, Eureka meaning 'I have it' and Nequeo meaning 'Impossible' - the Aeurekanequeo is the unfolded multidimensional essence of the Thrasz symbol. It details the Temple of THEM's ontology or philosophy on how things come to be and their relationships to Being. The 'A' at the beginning is for Australia.

ASOV Australian Satanic Organisation Victoria. A predominantly off-line tendril of THEM.

Apexing - treating one form as all-important.

C*R*U*X The Temple of THEM's Australian version of Naos: A Guide to Hermetic Magic. Contains extensive revisions and additional material to make the guide a fuller companion to understanding and using the Sinister current.

Dyph, i.e. more than two people coming into contact with one another just as planets on a macro scale orbit closer or further from one another.

Enematia - a word to short cut having to say good and evil continuously and referring to a phantom suggestion of an Other or opposing form(s).

Form The a priori natural state of world content before it is interpreted.

Force The a priori natural state of world content that acts on Form before it is interpreted.

Insynsia - Groups or a group that claim sovereignty or monopoly over any form or any one system of fulfilment Insynsian - Elevating a singular form to act as a replacement for God. The habit of making any one thing into a God and/or championing it above all other.

ISS In Supra Solidarity - formerly, In Sinister Solidarity. Sinister was considered too restrictive for THEM's purposes and dropped. A code of conduct developed and practiced by the Temple. ISS is a respectful acknowledgement or parting statement of kinship.

Lyfe - the life-force within and specific to the paradigm of the Form.

Magi A traditional nemesis of the Sorcerer, dating from the Persians. The Magi are both an ancient people believed to have subverted natural forces to create a prison-state we have inherited, and a set of behavioural characteristics that are ingrained in human beings on a fundamental level through repetition and the elimination by the Magi of any resistance to their Empire. The Magi is to be found at first outside of the Sorcerer, then inside, then in the difficult act of reuniting a paradox and contradiction.

ONA/O9A/Order the Order of Nine Angles

One of THEM A Being that Nature has evolved with the inner fire and any number of means to struggle past the reigning psychic state of humanity and evolve. Not tied to race, religion, morality, time or space. Such may arise anywhere at any time using any Form(s).

OroR - An acronym meaning Our Rite of Remembrance, this is a celebration that takes place on the 17th of every month and remembers all of the members of THEM past and present, their contributions and personal efforts and combined Wyrds that got us to the point we are at now.

Oto Anorha An e-zine and printed magazine released by the Temple at random intervals charting its progress, aims and insights.

Phorm The interpretation of world content made by the psyche (the term 'Phorma' with emphasis on the A is used in verbal conversation to distinguish between the similar sounding Form and Phorm)

Phorma See above. + Non-verbally it refers to the gestation of Forms arising from the Phorm within the Psyche and the Affectation they experience as a result of contact with it.

Phorce The interpretation of world content that acts on Form made by the psyche, i.e. 'Gravity', 'Change', 'Entropy'.

Phyrm A term taken from the Latin 'Terra Firma' and associated with the metaphysical realm outside of our skin (Pseal) and the content thereabout. A realm that may have its own existence that may or may not be affected by interpretation by the human psyche. Loosely used to refer to, but not limited to, the 'World' and its content.

pMYRIAD An unpublished exhaustively comprehensive study on Form.

Q A document marked with a Q is strictly an eyes-only, that is Temple member only, document. It is generally marked with a slightly different variance copy to copy to track unauthorised release.

Remember The defining watchword of the Temple, reminding of the overall reason for its existence: namely to remember there was a war (Mind War) that our ancestors lost and we are still engaged in.

The Sorceress Co-founder of the Temple of THEM and my great mentor in the arts of sorcery. Deriving from the IOT I owe an invaluable debt to the Sorceress for years of training and guidance to become who I am. With as many names as myself she remained a shadowy figure who never revealed herself entirely – nor did I ever ask. Together we built the Temple of THEM, together we woke the Dragons. Though she claimed herself an orphan of the Left-Hand Path, the Temple will always be her Home and I shall always be her occult Family. Since 2003 she moved in synch and yet in her own circle, defiant and rebellious but impossibly learned in the arts of magic. She penned the Sorcery of THEM and the other half of the dialogue in Mvimaedivm Vol IV – she gave me a vast number of secrets to keep, access to archives of occult repositories found nowhere online and her persistent time, attention and allegiance. She taught me and taught me. Castenada, Crowley, Schopenhauer, Hitler, Jung, Psychodrama, Psychofascism, World History and the Mysteries through an occult lens. Prone to disappearing for years at a time – she is doubtless watching from afar. We did not always see eye to eye and her puzzlement at my moves was often evident. Yet she later admitted her proudest sorcerous work was Our Temple. She must never be forgotten so long as THEM shall live. By Her many names I Remember. By her many teachings I conquer. In a volatile crucible of Mvimaedivm, Her Mentorship and the teachings of the Grand Master – We were forged.

Sinisterion The collective term used by THEM to denote all of the people involved in the application or philosophy of the Sinister current.

Tendril Multiple Meanings. Denotes a specific 28 set of Images used (in development) by the Temple to indicate new Archetypes specific to THEM. A nexion, group, outlet, subsidiary, associate, idea, meme in some way connected to the Temple of THEM

T.H.E.M Terato Haruspex Engram Maleficia. A statement that reflects the essential philosophy of the Temple of THEM. 'Look deep inside the entrails of the Monster – Remember – and become One of THEM'.

Themonomicon A project in development that combines an homage to Lovecraft's Necronomicon and seeks to house the entire corpus of THEM's texts in an ambitious tome of illustrated puzzles, sex, death, blood, ciphers, codes, scripts and symbolism. It represents a re-write of the majority of THEM's texts to reflect changes, updates, new insights and revisions to older works.

Theph The analogy of the brain as a city within the human skull with its own infrastructure relating to neuroscience and neurophysiology.

Thrasz A symbol used by the Temple of THEM in ritual, decoration and personal development.

Threshold Multiple Meanings. An anthology of key texts by THEM published by Fall of Man. A symbol used to mark a space between one world and the next.

Vyrd - synonymous with Wyrd.

ABRACADABRA

+O+ So to begin.

The secrets of the Ancients have been buried deeply in the twisted labyrinth of forms. The Magic from which the Sorcerer can draw exists but the means to access it have been mangled by the Obscuranti and their living mind war of forms – each one a sadistic seed that has long sprouted into a sapling, a plant, a tree, a forest, dropping more sadistic seeds, spreading lies, misinformation, and deceit. Advanced beyond most observers' abilities to appreciate, the polymorphic virus of the Magi can with ease take on the guise of any form – even systems and words that promise to be antidotes to itself such as Satanism, Anti-Christianity, Anarchy, Chaos can and have been compromised by the vicious snarls of poison roots.

The Temple of THEM has spent years attempting to untangle the forms in which such magical prowess have been choked into submission – crawling through the darkness of any number of magical systems of evocation, enchantment, alchemy, shamanism and as many strains of the Sinister we could find to struggle past the outward aesthetics and toward the root cause of all of them – Symbolism. From Symbolism we reduced all the myriad possibilities of magic into condensed understanding of what makes those that work, work, and what makes those that do not, not work. This was isolated to the complex relationship between the Organism and the World and the Organism's particular view of the world and its place within it. The 23 Syndrome is the stance an ego takes at any given moment [unconsciously] and uses to interpret. Thus, someone in thrall to National Socialism sees the world through an NS-related lens – whilst a religious individual sees the world through a religiously-related lens.

What happens of course, during the length of life, is that firmly held beliefs and truths Change. Each form of 23 syndrome is considered as a current [*Thrall] or form that seizes control of the ego either by thrall [unwittingly] by being convinced of its usefulness to perceive through or by “willingly” adopting such a syndrome through conscious choice. Often – once chosen, such a thrall takes a long time to settle itself into the Ego which must make room, change things around, or adapt itself to synchronise with the other forms which make-up the composition of the Thrall.

A Thrall is the name of a form that attaches itself or is attached to the Organism in a symbiotic relationship. Picking up a book on some subject or another, encountering someone who talks about a subject, experiencing or seeing someone else experience some subject or another are all transmissions of the form – and if accepted or sufficiently impressed [imprinted] with the desire to become the Form or use it – form becomes Thrall. As in, they are in Thrall to the form, submit to it and live it.*

Sometimes, because of how powerful forms are and how weak the human being is – a form can be adopted from the beginning of life right up until the point of causal death. Such a thing is known as fanaticism – and a good example is the Catholic Church. The Catholic Church governs its thralls from before their birth to well after their death with its control system. It has rites which control and restrict everything. The human being has early formative experiences that shape and set the Ego's particular view in place and these can be extremely difficult to break, and in some cases should not be for the sake of sanity. But the Sorcerer must be willing and able to go mad if they are to truly live as One of THEM where reality is neither rational nor irrational but a ghost.

To go through life without changing one's view is to resist natural alchemy and unnatural. No one form has the power to fulfil one's Wyrð and many roads must be walked to narrow it down and finally seize it. We often see that it is religious types who do not change their view – who Cannot change their view – and who thus become the Mask that was made for them. It needs to be realised that there is power in fanaticism – it is the dominant agent of the Magi and has reshaped this World in their image without question. But the fine line between using a form and it using you is fine indeed. We seek to avoid all instances of any false absolute – all Gods stem from THEM, a plural, a group, a collective – there are no forces however they be perceived or from whatever system of belief that do not come from the same pool as THEM. They are all manifestations, depictions, forms of the Forces that are THEM. – variations on a theme.

Forms that enthrall have their own life span – they are living things that grow, excrete, communicate, have their own language, multiply, move, change and so on. A young man deeply into the writings of Nietzsche and who pulls on the cowl of Nihilism may be able to explore that form for many years – but age and the changing role of oneself within society brings with it unexpected changes and challenges that affect one's philosophy of life – as do near, supernatural or traumatic or other kinds of experience. With such changes, one's 23 syndrome suffers a fatal stumble where the form cannot encompass or explain the new experience and doubt enters one's sphere causing the rigid tentacles of the thrall to loosen and the mind to change. Often what changes the mind is then adopted. It is a continual passage of thesis, antithesis, and synthesis. A natural progression of picking up one thing, comparing it with another, and finally making a conclusion based on mixing the two which mixture then becomes the new one, to which another second form is sought to compare and continue the entire process anew.

This process is an unconscious miasma that keeps one in thrall most of their lives to one form or another. It is however possible, once becoming aware of the function of the ego and its operations such as through Insight Roles, to consciously enter roles that actively change the consciousness in an alchemical fashion by adding a deliberate set of elements. The power of Insight Roles burns away the certainty that holds forms in place by making conscious the fallibility of the whole belief process – wherein one consciously sees that what they held to be airtight conviction was in fact flawed – even more compounded by the more forms they digest. Deliberately done – this can bring enormous power and insight into the function of the ego and help compartmentalise the psyche by driving a wedge between the automatic actions and behaviour of the ego which acts on behalf of the organism and the organism itself who develops a new sense of self that allows it to see the ego as if at the helm of the mind driving the car – without this sense of separation and mind functions it is impossible to gain control of the psyche in any useful manner as all actions are driven by the ego – even those that insist they are not. By mixing certain elements or roles – one can deliberately break certain insidious programming forming a barrier to releasing the brain from its thrall or its conscious awakening to the fact that this is how the ego behaves.

The danger is that one merely swaps one form for another believing themselves to then be conscious of the behaviour of the Ego – and forms can even be constructed to appear as if they will free one from the Ego. Freeing oneself from the Ego is a process doomed to fail and a deadly trail to pursue for the serious Sorcerer who needs their Ego – they just need it in an unusual way. It is an exceptional and unique resource and needs only be understood and its functions put to conscious use to be of inestimable power when coupled with the signs from the unconscious toward Individuality. It is a resource and should be made use thereof for there are things the Ego can accomplish that nothing else can – and the Self merely by itself is an unknown quantity – certainly as insane as the Ego by itself.

The Ego can be tamed to function as a carrier of a form under the yoke of the Self – a deliberate use of its function to achieve an aim. Such an aim might be to believe in a system or another for a limited time demonically, that is with full belief, adopting its forms, words, language, ways and methods as a lifestyle to live that way as if it were truly ones way – then one adopts a contradictory role causing the previous way to mesh with the second and the ego to see that it can easily be led to adopt any way and that yet whatever it adopts can be replaced with yet another way, a new way – no matter how much it believes or believed in the validity of the 23 syndrome it afflicted itself with – it is as a container, able to be emptied and filled in accordance with what the Sorcerer needs it to be filled with in order to achieve certain goals.

Thus, one learns to shift-shape by annihilating the Egos savage persistence and insistence of form. But this focus on THEM on compartmentalising the psyche or achieving Mvimaedivm is genuine black magic – it is not known whether such an achievement is a return to a former state once achieved by humanity en masse before a cataclysmic series of events enshrined the Ego and only the Ego, or if it is an evolution forward toward an as yet unknown state of being. What is known is that Nothing is more violent more unpredictable, more ruthless and vengeful than an Ego attempting to perform its function of maintaining stasis and live out its 23 Syndrome. When threatened the ego often turns into a savage snarling animal – this can occur even with gentle attempts at dislodging one’s own or another person’s ego as if evidenced the world over by the petty means require to start blood wars, vendettas, vengeful acts of retribution and revenge, fights, disputes and slights.

A serious attempt to move the Ego out of the way of the driver’s seat can be expected to be met with considerably dangerous resistance and this is what makes our work all the more dangerous – for it is the egos function to protect its view at all costs and thus it can be next to impossible to split the mind and get it to relinquish total control. Every step of the way we are fought by this function within ourselves and within others – whereas other systems seek either to annihilate the Ego [which only makes it stronger in a false sense of being erased it actively participates in talking about it as if it were gone with every manner of wordplay employed to successfully deceive its host that it has achieved the impossible.] THEM seeks only to recognise and utilise its functions as best as it can in a conscious and directed manner. This does not mean that the organism can successfully or completely control the Ego – its forces are far stronger than can be imagined and its operations driven by esoteric secrets that cannot be known – only its actions and functions can be seen in what it does and acts upon us to do. It means that the Ego can be seen as one of many functions and the Sorcerer may use them all consciously rather than be enslaved to forms that are stronger than him or her unconsciously.

Through this process – one can not only learn the behaviour of forms and the way they act on people to speak on their behalf as an automatic thrall – but also to put themselves in the other individuals’ shoes to see the way they are from the point they are. All organisms are treated as being in thrall to one form or another for even when conscious of the process involved in the Ego’s adoption of thralls forms are a necessary requirement for the Ego to function – otherwise it does not know how to be, who to be, and this can rapidly cause psychosis and mental collapse – nihilism is gently related to this but the true extent of trying to tear out the proverbial carpet of forms from under one’s own feet can result in some spectacular self-destruction. This process – loosely called Empathy – is an esoteric understanding of the nature of forms and the way they change within oneself and within others. It involves a dedication to learning the way Archetypes, forms, and thralls speak or communicate, live, thrive, change or die – and as such – this knowledge can be used to manipulate a person in thrall by directing their form in a controlled fashion. This process of Empathy is entirely pagan in nature. There is a detached disdain for words by the Temple of THEM until actions have proved the One able to carry them through. Thus, Ones word is one's bond – it is their Wyrđ. Truly we would rather you achieve in silence than enervate us with an endless stream of assurance about your intentions. In the meantime, the Ego will speak and chatter and will say whatever it must to convince itself it is the Self. If the Ego can substitute its function for the Self, then it will – in this way it protects itself from being dislodged. See Radia Star.

Empathy does not equally occur in all humans – some have very little, whilst some have too much. The balancing act of the Sorcerer, some say a paradox, is to learn not just to think but to feel – not with the head, but with the heart – to attune themselves to how something makes them feel or the emotions, visions, associations it inspires. This means to attune themselves to what may be very subtle almost invisible threads of magic the Sorcerer must learn to make themselves extremely sensitive to such threads and this can only be achieved through a close and prolonged relationship to the forces of THEM – not just the manifestation as Dark Gods but the forces and current of the world as they Are not as they are Known. Such is the role of the External Adept Rite and the Rite of Rain Magic – where Empathy is first approached in a magical methodology to provide a genuine experience of a non-human centric mode of time where the Ego has very little control over its passage and its experience and where the Sorcerers archetypal meanderings over the Tarot, their life and Wyrđ come to the fore of the Ego's thoughts as all it can do is think and allow time to pass slowly, slowly, slowly – in some individuals allowing a realisation of a very specific nature to occur.

The use of the Tarot is an immensely powerful first step allowing one to make conscious their own Ego's projections – to put forth what may have been unconsciously held fears, prejudices or simply images and ideas of various archetypal energies that the Ego uses in its function. This exploration of archetypal energies is often a life-long process that many just do in thrall – but to deliberately expel one's archetypes via this process can be done in a matter of weeks [one card per week]. It is necessary to let each archetype once stirred and brought out activate its key associations and to let them live out their summoned presence which in turns brings the whole flow of what is attached to such an archetype forth in a prolonged stream. Most of these key associations are brought up first because they are the strongest and over the course of days as the Ego and Self ruminate on them and 'discuss' the meaning and purpose of each between themselves in what we experience as 'mind chatter'. The next week a new meditation is attempted – building on the previous – and allowing even more archetypal associations to arise, not only connected with the present card, but the previous as well. A rich tapestry begins to unfurl itself before the Sorcerers eyes allowing them deep into the unconscious contents of their psyche in a conscious and deliberate manner. With the full Major Arcana explored and these deep-seeded images and associations regurgitated into visible life – the next process of integration can begin. Integration involves such methods as Insight Roles which allows the Sorcerer to themselves make sense of the way these archetypes form, rule, and collapse. We hesitate to use the word Understanding – because Anyone can understand or pretend to understand – but however much they pretend or their Ego deceives them [Deceitful Occult Ego] that they understand – until they experience for themselves, they cannot Know or Feel or reap the benefits of performing these alchemical experiments.

With the knowledge of the lives and behaviour of archetypes comes a deeper understanding of how, why and what thralls' others. As a lesser form of magic this can provide wisdom of the means to enthrall or free another or oneself from archetypes or forms – but primarily belongs to the greater Work of unfolding the secrets of the Universe and our own bio-physiology – making conscious on a new level the functions that govern us from within and without and an appreciation for our weakness in being controlled and manipulated by such forms. This appreciation for one's own human weakness is a vital humility required to develop for later works of Magic such as Aeonie and Archetypal Magic. The present and persistent insistence by so-called 'Satanic' manuscripts on strength, power, Ego, or Crowleyesque 'Do what Thou Wilt' is a mantra that fundamentally fails to empathise with the World and its Occult Secrets and is a misguided form of reactionism against the stifling conformity of religion. Whilst it is also a means available to the Sorcerer to believe this mantra as needed and as necessary to evoke the Ego into certain actions and to believe what it is necessary to believe in order to provoke the necessary geometry to be inspired to rise in reaction to ones pulling the strings – it too is the enshrinement of the Ego at the expense of the other functions of the psyche, sacrifice of the great range of perceptual windows one can look through, and a restriction of the Sorcerers being by being bound to yet another form – even if that form claims to be anti-form.

The Temple of THEM recognises this same problem exists even with its own structure – but that it is unavoidable to have a name, symbol and works – for how else can the Self communicate with the Ego. If there is no language, no form to grab, no one to speak with, no means to carry a message either through words or actions – the Ego cannot be reasoned with. Since we aim to change the Ego, we are forced to speak its language until such time a critical mass of Selves can experience the Self en masse enough to learn the state of being Self and devise alternate, Self-inspired forms of communications. One such attempt is the creation of one's own Tarot.

Empathy also requires a realistic approximation of one's potential and abilities and this is often realised only when the Ego is shattered or cannot live up to its impossible or unrealistic standards. The Temple of THEM regards humans as low on the scale of important creatures or forces – and those of THEM well above them. Such forces as weather, gravity, emotions, love, forms, thralls and so on being far more powerful, far older, and beyond humans' ability to control or understand. We refer to a life-centred geometry – not a human-centred geometry for when the Ego is enshrined [and it is socially polished and shined like a bright mirror –the blind idiot god Azagthoth] it views itself as a centralised conscious sentience around which the world revolves; it cannot accept the humility of its biophysical short-comings such as its fragility and functions almost in complete reaction to what is around it – never surpassing the forms that it encounters around it.

It is convinced of its superiority and the validity of its human-shaped perceptions. It has an extremely challenging time [without terrible and harsh alchemy being used] accepting that it is anything but what it says it is – and will argue to the death what it is with anyone who dares challenge it. This human-centred geometry can be witnessed anywhere at any given time between human beings – all our objects and buildings are also human-centred, as are the aims, needs, institutions, past times and creations of man – stemming from the hand. It is a natural bias of seeing the world as we were bio-physically intended, but it is a thrall, an unconscious enslavement and lock-out of other dimensions, other ways of perceiving or being, or as other beings, that the Sorcerer seeks to master to be One of THEM. [See Liber 13/13]

The Sorcerer – if they be one of THEM – must be deeply connected to the Word / Wyrd state of living. They must be empathic, wise in the arts of synchronicity, in solidarity with the forces of the world, themselves and THEM. This connexion cannot be faked and it cannot be otherwise had if the would-be Sorcerer is not One of THEM. The Anglo-Saxon noun Wyrd is derived from a verb, weorþan, 'to become', which, in turn, is derived from an Indo-European root uert-* meaning 'to turn'. [1]. Wyrd means 'that which has turned' or 'that which has become'. It carries the idea of "turned into" in both the sense of becoming something new and the sense of turning back to an original starting point. In a metaphysical term, Wyrd embodies the concept that everything is turning into something else while both being drawn in toward and moving out from its own origins. Thus, we can think of Wyrd as a process that continually works the patterns of the past into the patterns of the present.

One ramification of Wyrd in personal human terms is that our past (both our ancestry and our personal history) affects us continually. Who we are, where we are, and what we are doing today is dependent on actions we have taken in the past and actions others have taken in the past which have affected us in some way. And every choice we make in the present builds upon choices we have previously made. The philosopher Schopenhauer voiced the notion that "our lives are somehow irresistibly shaped into a coherent whole by forces beyond our conscious will". [5] He believed that neither chance events nor inborn character were enough to explain the consistency and direction in the life course of an individual, and so he postulated "the intention of Fate" to explain this controlling force in our lives. Many people have equated the notion of Wyrð with this sort of “fate” concept, and the Norns with the Moerae or Parcae, the Greek and Roman Fates. However, to do so is to ignore the constant interplay between personal Wyrð and universal Wyrð and the role we each play in creating our own destiny.

The key Schopenhauer seems to have missed is that what he calls “the intention of Fate” is itself created by an interplay between the events that happen to us and our inborn character. We interact with Wyrð (that which has become) to create certain personal patterns which affect and are reflected in universal patterns. Those universal patterns, in turn, exert forces which shape our lives. What must be born in mind is that trusting ones decisions or guidance to any one particular source, such as Dreams, a Guru, a System of Divination is dangerously simplistic – it promotes a false sense of simplicity to just follow some current or another to stay on the right track – whereas it is a gruelling life-long commitment that always requires vigilance and exceptional alchemy. One must always be ready to change, to add more or less of something to keep or deliberately shift the balance of the psyche and the Wyrð. To follow some God or oracle blindly is to trust one’s autonomy to something external and absolves one’s responsibility for one’s vehicle – and therefore alchemical suicide. Trusting Wyrð is not a slavish acceptance that one’s destiny is set but working with the portents and signs available to one to determine one’s own path in accordance with what is unravelling – it is keeping the eye on the past mindful of the future – of reading the signs and making decisions based on the best information one can attain – but it is not an abandonment to some power or another- it is a working symbiosis.

The ancients believed that if a man would make a promise to the Gods, and he kept his Word, then they would reward him. With this power he could unleash his Wyrð so long as he kept his word. The Cosmic Being seeks to devour all life, around its centre stand the shades that are THEM, a vanguard of demonic forces that can help the Sorcerer if he seeks to be free of his destiny to be devoured or destroy the Sorcerer if they fail to free themselves. Ebbing in tides of death and life, the Cosmic Being breathes out creating life, this is what we are, then breathes in, which is what happens when we die. Much of this life is embodied in our sexual energy and fluids and withholding them [abstinence] is a form of indulgence that can bring great power to the Sorcerer who may bargain with Them for the release of such energies in exchange for something in return. Such magical rites as the Ordeal of the Moon are based on this Tempting of the Dark Gods with one’s energies and one’s death to fulfil certain bequeaths.

The universe is possessed of signs and portents that can guide the Sorcerer in the right way to unleash and control his Wyrð – such signs are known as synchronicity also known as coincidence, when two unlikely events occur. In times past, Sorcerers have trusted their Wyrð to a particular phenomenon – this is dangerous as the judgement of the human is discarded in favour of an external force of guidance.

When the Sorcerer is travelling the right Wyrd his synchronicities will align and increase in frequency whilst if they are travelling the wrong path the same will decrease until tragedy befalls the Sorcerer. One means of ascertaining the correct Wyrd for each individual is to open the Bridge between the conscious and the Unconscious by recording and interpreting the archetypes contained in ones Dreams as a regular operation. One must be aware however that the subconscious has its own life and directs the Organism from a veil we cannot but hope to penetrate. Composed of mostly irrational elements the subconscious has a limitless array of methods of both madness and genius for getting its needs to the Ego across in its messages.

The same dream often occurs with frequency until a certain amount of conscious understanding affects the dreamer. If the message is extremely urgent the subconscious may employ a nightmare or shock tactic – and nothing shocks quite like the subconscious can with the power to shake us to the very core as nothing else can. If the message may prove harmful or explosive to the conscious then the subconscious takes a longer route and uses muted or different symbolism until the conscious gradually and safely assimilates the message a piece at a time or as it is ready. The core structure of all dreams is as Jung identified – archetypal and geared toward compensatory functions that act to balance the Ego and the underlying quest for the psyche to achieve Individuation.

As powerful as the subconscious can be – it would be foolish and highly dangerous to turn one's decisions over to the content stemming solely from the subconscious – a restraint-less function of darkness and light in equal measure, beyond measure – it is kept in check from self-destruction and the destruction of others by the Ego. It is also not just archetypal dreams that it throws up but fears, thoughts, alternate explorations of events, conversations, do-overs, self-image, memories, fantasies, and so on. To try and make sense of much of it would require living a half-life in the living world and burying oneself in the limitless content and associations that spew forth from the subconscious and are filtered by the Ego. It would be the equivalent of trying to write down with a rock the conversations of a hundred voices each speaking a different language at rapid speed.

Trusting entirely in any one phenomenon is dangerous and another meaning of THEM is to become Adept in as many of these signs as one can. One such phenomena is dreaming and decipherment of the dreams in question – but were one to trust the subconscious with all their decisions they should quickly become a sub-human driven by the irrational madness and violence the ego helps to control. This is what happens in cases of possession or evocation and possession by a form [thrall] is the most common experience of possession of all human beings.

Yet its power to inform one of impending danger, inspire moments of genius, remember Everything, access untapped modes of being or thought or experience cannot be replicated or underestimated. It is an invaluable resource to most people but often completely under utilised. As a Sorcerer we must make use of everything to achieve everything. But we can only do this if we are conscious of those tools. The observation of the underlying forces of Empathy, Solidarity, and Synchronicity are the tools necessary to develop the means to live in accordance with ones Wyrd and the Will of THEM. Easy enough to summarise – the depth of each is such that it could take a lifetime to exhaust a study of anyone, let alone all three. But these are the keys to being One of THEM and it is up to each Sorcerer to explore the means and ways by which these keys can be understood, explained, experienced and induced.

There are basic laws that result from certain combinations of energies, forces, functions acting on one another that must be found or learned. These are archetypal energies that occur in the same core way but often through any combination of elements or aspects much the same way dreams retain an archetypal core but can appear a thousand ways to a thousand different people and yet all warn of danger. One example is the Law of Erotic Charge. With any undertaking that generates Wyrd or helps another unlock their potential comes a magical ‘high’ especially when working as a group that presences itself as an erotic charge. This charge comes from the authentic transcendence of limits and the subsequent feeling of increased freedom or wisdom – it originates from working together on something usually intimate. Such as a student learning to play the piano and breaking new ground and the teacher being particularly good at teaching. Such erotic charge usually overwhelms the participants and is expressed as sexual energy or lust. What then happens is that – if either one of the participants recognises this, but the other does not – is a rejection by one side of that lust and an emphasis on the Work. This is a massive disruption of the Ego to the other as the Ego gets confused when it is not involved – and in moments of pure transmission of Love such as when teaching others how to free their abilities – it is not. Often, feelings get hurt as the Ego seeks to distance itself from its perceived slight and – the Work. For out of defence, it has attached a memory of pain to that Work and seeks to avoid it altogether resulting in a terrible loss of potential for the teacher to instruct the student and the student to learn. This erotic charge is exceptionally strong and can even be mistaken for love.

As teachers of the black arts, it is often exceedingly difficult to avoid students suddenly developing such attachments, since what has been removed requires a replacement and the replacement is usually being given by the teacher... What is the answer? Often there is none – this is a case of one of those forces that is Stronger than any method to avoid it. Another example is the Law of Hubris. For a Hero to exist the archetype must be projected upon them by others. Whilst they believe in the Hero – if they accept the role the Hero becomes exactly that and the examples he sets as the one to look up to may inspire a slew of others to act like him or for him. But this is all illusion – one day, the people cease to project the Hero archetype upon him – usually as punishment for something they have done that broke the spell after believing all the hype surrounding them. The nature of power is the origin of pride comes before a fall.

In the case of the controlled phantasm of Ryan Anschauung the Hero status is used to show Ryan as humble, fair, willing to learn, fallible, strong, not afraid, self-honest, loving of people, arrogant, determined, driven, daring, and so on in the hope that others are inspired to emulate him and adopt his values as their own. This is one means by which THEM aims to undermine the Magian structures by causing others to question things the same way Ryan does and increase those innate intuitions and values of the Organisms own heuristic enquiry until they are One of THEM. For as many as possible to emulate Ryan it is necessary for Ryan to have exposure and this can be done through writing and imagery that unlock Wyrld. As Ryan sets himself up as a teacher, others may come to see him as such thus self-fulfilling the chosen role with each feeding the others projections back and forth to solidify the role. With enough time – this can turn to adoration and idolisation wherein the projections get stronger and the Ego in danger of ballooning out of control or proportion, fat on the praise and love of others for what is not only an archetype, but not even a real individual.

This is where mistakes begin to arise, full of themselves they make hasty ill-conceived decisions believing themselves to be what their fans tell them they are – only to overstep the mark and come smashing down for making the fatal mistake of breaking the spell of the Hero. This is the death-knell of all human's forms – with endless examples of rulers and tyrants letting the power people give them go to their head, revel in excess, abuse their power, and invite the wrath of the Gods [the natural consequences of their actions]. This is why Ryan Anschauung is faceless and anonymous – he forms a second step between the Ego and the creator of the phantasm and allows a greater distance to be kept between believing the praise – the praise going to Ryan and thus a constant reminder that Ryan is an archetype – not to Ryan's creator via his real name as praise to him. Thus, with a degree of separation does he keep control of the device without risking hubris as much as direct praise would invite. There is a form of magic which we shall refer to as Idolatry – wherein the target is not openly attacked and challenged but is given sycophantic mountains of praise to try and destroy them when they believe it and overreach causing them to come crashing down via their hubris. The Law of Hubris is also why the Temple of THEM set a 30-year charter with now 24 years to go. A realistic duration in which to set out to achieve what we intend which is to create the Undividual or First Human and remake how humans do things by altering their traditional modes of thought and action.

Only through the Ego can we achieve conscious direction of Intent. And only through Empathy, Synchronicity, and Solidarity can we come to truly understand the geometry of the forces we seek to Master and where and how to work with each one and one another to achieve our Will. At the same time as THEM holds these basic elements to be of use – one should come to understand that this is just one way of an endless many ways to achieve one’s goals, one set of eyes through which to see the world, one briefly described and exoteric system of magic. One must find one own Wyrd and way and often when they do – the outcome is that they no longer need the Temple of THEM but have learned what they needed to learn. There are a great many individuals who have taught and learned from the members of THEM but who have achieved what they were meant to achieve and moved on as Undividuals – those who need no Temple, no guidance, or teachers and it is those types of individuals we seek to create – those that do not need the Temple or occult strictures, tools, settings, or companions but experience the forces of THEM as they Are without the mediums through which those forces are at first channelled. For it is those types that will find it hard to be enthralled again – either by Magian or Sinister designs and be closer to THEM than any controlled environment with form will ever get them. This said, let the adherent research the threads of the Temple through Threshold, Sinister 101, the Themonomicon, Tendril, the Mvimaedivm Black Project and the Temple of THEM WordPress.

DIRECTIVE A-66

Why don’t we Kill?

We don’t kill because we fear the unknown – even when we have a reason to kill. Even when we understand that is what is required to keep the planets standards high, its airways clean, and its refuse to a manageable minimum. We don’t kill because we have no idea how easy it is – there are so many complications that enter our mind, borne of the endless enactments of others we have witnessed and catalogued for reference. We dare not take that leap – knowing that once the door is opened it cannot be closed. We know there is no coming back. But what if we don’t want to come back. What if, we realised, this is as good as it gets? An endless coil of repetitive cycles day after day, year after year, realisation after realisation – coming back to the uncomfortable truth.

This is as good as it gets. To be trained in school, groomed from day one to work for the machine – to adopt and aspire to the goals of the wealthy elite who frame our choices – our only recourse to sell ourselves to the highest bidder and join those in chains grinding the mill. And toward what? They teach us Loyalty to the machine is everything. They teach us only that which feeds it, only that which nourishes and greases it. We are not taught to think, or to question why. We are told – be everything you can be – you can be anything you want to – but when we, based on our observations of what is required, what is necessary, what is right – become something other than a grinder of the machine – when we dare to step out of the light of the all-seeing eye and make our own choices- then, then we are demonised Then, we are called criminals, eccentrics, extremists. But all we are doing is making the best choice – the choices no-one else can see, so deluged are they by the pills forced down their throat due to their lack of foresight or beaten down by reprimand after reprimand – which as we know – suddenly changes to be all that you can be, with the proviso, for the Machine.

Hitler chose to be all that he could be. We can be sure he was encouraged to do his best, to aspire to greatness, to study and scheme for his opportunity to presence his visions, his ‘career’. Germany needed strong leadership, Germany needed political stability, and Germany needed a new vision. And of volition did Hitler not stand tall among lesser men and be all he could be? Did he not answer the Question we are still asking? And when he did? He was hunted, punished, destroyed – for listening to those who work for the Machine, for taking on board the notions that he should be all he could be, for doing what was required of him, what they demanded of him from birth. There is no Loyalty to the Machine that goes unpunished. Good people spend their lives at the coal face, giving up everything for their Masters, only to be discarded when they have served their usefulness; their life wasted furthering the pockets of the rich, the boss’s holiday by another Martini. Struggling toward the dream brainwashed into us that we can be Him or Her, from birth – a dream that doesn’t exist – a dream that becomes a nightmare the moment we question the Machine. Only the unfeeling killers get to the top.

Those willing to do anything and fall back on the claims they were just doing their job. Drunk dry and their lifeblood usurped, we are dumped in the street when fresh blood comes coursing through the veins, naive and willing, to blindly feed the Machine with the corpses of the Loyal. It is all that awaits all of us – dreaming foolishly of an idyll of superannuation, retirement, and rest after a life well-lived – we know we are oppressed, we know we are in chains and why we daydream, why we imagine the future, why we drink our sorrows – it’s all toward Escapism.

We want to escape. We spend our whole lives in the service of the Machine naively believing there is an escape. There is no escape. This is the best we can hope for. We are trapped here. Around us fools dance and jingle their bells, grinding the mill with their solemn labour tending the gardens and neutralising the weeds. I speak to you who are the weeds – the proud and the strong who seek only the light of the sun. Who struggle up from beneath the ground through soil and dirt and loam in the hope that there might be something worth finding on the surface and who discovered the disappointing truth of life. Those of you who did not fall prey to the wiles of the schools and saw through the economic schemes of the Capitali and who were told to be all you can be – only to be told No when you were.

Some of us don't have all the right words, and some of us don't know the right actions – to express this truth – to express our rage, indignation and sorrow at what is occurring – all we have is a feeling. That feeling is the most precious thing you have – it is the same Silent Knowing that has driven hundreds of thousands of human beings to recognise the absurdity of their Time, the endless waste of lives and potential fulfilling the cold desire of a Machine that cares for nothing but replication of itself. Replication after replication in the name of “Progress”. Look around you, are we not still the same as we have always been – trapped in a delusion like hamsters on a wheel that just so long as we keep running everything will be alright? It is of no consequence if you cannot find the words for that feeling – it is a feeling that cannot be justified and never accepted where the only Listeners are the puppets of the Machine. But you must hang onto it -it only comes to a few of us – those few who slip between the cracks and see through the lies, through the brainwashing, and the cheerful world facade that darkens when we turn of age – or those of us who never believed the ruse in the first place – who saw what was being done and that people were lining up one after the other in blind columns ready to cut open their veins and drain their lifeblood into its engine, like sheep clambering to die for the Machine.

The Machine cannot grab us all. It tries – it has every conceivable net cast to catch and mould everyone, however different – but something stronger than the Machine shares the same space. Something Older than the Machine dominated this world – something primal and chthonic, earth-bound that emanates within our every cell and tells us what we are seeing is wrong – something that wants to return, as if it remembered a time when it was, a golden age of humanity. There has never been one.

This feeling does not come to all – most are indoctrinated and pressed into service readily from the beginning – their instincts suppressed by an endless soup of falsities that turns the brain to mush, yolks it, and controls it. This feeling comes to the Weeds, the organic thorns in the Machines side that find their way into any garden bed, any tended field, refusing to succumb to poison, thinning out, and any amount of scrutiny.

This feeling sets off alarm bells in our head that this is not the way it should be – screams at us that the angles are wrong, the geometry flawed, the innocuous thinly veiled by the sinister. We cannot explain what it is – we are not meant to – the Machine has created the infinity of forms to cover up and disguise itself – a million x a million paths for us to travel down in our desperate search to make people see what we see – but all of them dead ends. Wasted time trying to convince those who cannot be convinced, those who are dead inside, whose only programming is to accept those fuels that feed the Machine. We are the ones who truly understand Futility – how conversation leads to more running on the treadmill, more escapism – and alerts the guardians of the Matrix to our defiance, to our existence as freed from the tyranny of Hope. We are not among the stupid. We are not among the slaves. We recognise clearly what we have been born into. And what we must do. There are No exits marked in this prison. But we hinge. We pause. We hesitate. Because we are held back by the traces of programming that have laid their sickly roots in our heads. We think – what can I do – the problem is so big, so infinitely vast and complex – and my life so fragile and brief. It is true – our lives are fragile and brief – we only appreciate that when it is threatened – or almost taken away. This is the leverage through which the machine controls us – destroys us – by threatening to take us from the pen in which we are housed and tag us, target us, torture or terminate us. In reaction to action – it takes our lives. It locks us up – or it shuts us down. It even ignores us. For what can we do, just one more blip on a screen, one random number on a file, one tiny organism against a Leviathan thousands of years in the making.

Its defences are vast and its resources powerful – its vengeance is lasting and cruelly swift. Like an all-seeing Eagle it soars down to pluck those who dare stand tall – to smash those individuals who slip beyond its reach, beyond its re-education programs, beyond its ability to reason with them. It takes us one by one – our fragile lives – one way or the other. We die for it, or we die from it. When we are overwhelmed by its madness and the torturous regime it inflicts on others and we make too much noise in protest, when we explode in rage at the injustice of its justice, when we try to voice what is wrong – and show ourselves to be free – it pounces, tears us to shreds as an example to others, makes us fear for our lives, our safety, our fragile brief lives... It spins our efforts into its web of lies, paints us as evil, as morally corrupt, as traitors, or the mad. We are not mad. We with that feeling are the only sane ones left. That is why it hates us. That is why it seeks to destroy us. That is why it has always hated us and why it continues to scan for us and destroy us when we surface uninvited into its sterile gardens and raise a finger to the machine.

Every War begins with groundwork. It begins with someone like you, who has a feeling that something is very wrong with the world and can't place their finger on it – or who finds themselves unable to place enough fingers in the dam to stem the tide of this terrible geometry the Machine has wrought – who finds themselves overwhelmed by the enormity, who thinks themselves Alone, an isolated soul driven with a dark feeling of recognition of having somehow, somewhere, seen all of this before – and who can see through the mirage of a carefully erected, tended and varnished exterior of the world perfected in its purpose, meaning, bright hues and innocent architecture to the reality of a filthy dungeon of tangled broken lines and twisted horror – where nothing meets where it should, nothing is true, everything is permitted.

That feeling is our collective Memory. It is not your memory, or my memory, but the deep gouges and traces left by the impact of ancient onslaughts against the psyche and against the mind. It may have been enslaved two thousand years, but it Remembers – it Remembers Everything. Despite the programming, despite the Machines eradications and purges – that feeling persists – a nagging sense that this is all wrong, alien, an invasion. There was an invasion. A Mind-War which we lost. We were imprisoned. We have been here so long we've forgotten it ever happened; forgotten we are prisoners. We were forced to forget. Yet something in us remembers and we spend our days inside mentally escaping. Escaping into a new life, a new car, and a better me. But it's all in our heads – we sit in our cells and use our limited freedom in vain – whatever we do, we remain imprisoned, and the Machine watches over us with a malevolent eye. It takes good and evil both in its stride, necessary outbursts that justify its existence, its dominance, its tyranny.

Nature persists in throwing up avatars of that feeling. Those who Remember. We carry within us and our brief fragile lives the renewed hopes of those who tried to escape – those who defied the jaws of the Monster destined to repeat the endless cycle of striving to destroy the Machine and were crushed beneath its merciless wheels trying to halt its progress. Life after life, broken bodies and shattered dreams piled high toward the Sun – the procession of an aeon of soldiers of That Which Defies the Machine – desperate to stop the stories in motion in their Time and change the archetypal mythos unfolding as the noxious geometry of the Machine took hold of our planet.

What did they reveal?

They peeled back the wallpaper of the Matrix to show the underlying wire frame – that it had infrastructure, layers, pipes, sewers, beneath its seamless visage. Props and mounts, supports and struts that held it in place. We, with that feeling can choose to unscrew our bolt.

They revealed that a Symbol endures and outlasts causal death, whilst the Individual does not. Endless individuals fought the Machine on its own terms only to be utterly annihilated or literally owned by it. Bought out, paid off, many like us joined the Factory Floor as overseers and supervisors – enabling the Machine to learn from all our assaults and adapt ways to insulate itself against them. But the Machine is not impenetrable. New arrivals seed new assaults. They revealed that Frontal attacks on the machine make it stronger – it is not the limbs of the beast we must hack, but the heart. Only through the shadows of its own Forms can the Machine be caused to turn on itself and self-destruct. The deliberate misuse and bending of the Machines forms back upon themselves have a curious effect – contagion.

Such acts break the hold temporarily and help others to Remember.

It can only be destroyed by using its own strength against it. The Machine exerts a Morality field that filters into everything, taking advantage of loaded emotional phrases, concepts, ideas ingrained during programming to direct its minions against themselves or external threats. The Machines strengths lie in its superior arsenal of forms and its absorption of contradiction. It divides in order to conquer. Assaults must not focus on the Machine, nor the Form – not after A and before Z – but directly in between. We must overcome our directive to protect the Machine and embrace the coils of Chaos. Spam mail – is hated because it slows the Machine. Traffic Jams – are hated because they slow the Machine. Queues are hated because they slow the Machine. Plane delays are hated because they slow the Machine. Graffiti or damage to trains is hated because it slows the Machine. To fear being Late, Delayed, and Inconvenienced – is the unconscious programming of your directive to Love Thy Machine. All of these things interrupt the daily motions, the mechanical processes dutifully played out in monotone rhythm. All of these things cause Chaos – Chaos is the name for that which slows of the Machine – Chaos is hated, feared, forgotten, because it is the one thing that stands in the way of the cold desire of a soulless embodiment that cares for nothing but replication of itself. Replication after replication in the name of “Progress”.

The building blocks, the very A-frame of reality is built upon extremely fragile supports upon which a small amount of pressure can cause them to collapse. But they are seldom leant on – because they have been forgotten – swept under the carpet of forms that thickly conceal these weaknesses. It’s the little things – such as writing left to right so that you can read this page and process the information as quickly as possible in order to get on with your next task that keeps the Machine going...

Teaching others like us to Understand the Machine is why we exist.

There have always been others like us. Before us.

And after us.

We are the Temple of THEM.

We are going to Kill the Machine.

IN SINISTER SOLIDARITY

[Dangerous Knowledge to the Uninitiated]

The moment a person is set free from Time; free from living in the Matrix under the thrall of the Ego; – that developed “I” that gives us animation and the illusion of free-will so necessary to feel ‘human’ – is the moment that psychic Security is undermined.

What allows us to have control in life is the feeling that we are Prescient – and for this, an image of who we are needs to develop over time that allows us to fit into the society we live in. At least, this is usually the goal of guardians raising a child for a number of reasons; some of the majors are a) socialisation is a necessary means of survival; b) there are strong sanctions made against persons who show a marked destructive/creative capacity that is at odds with societies rules: and c) all children are naturally sociopaths and for society to be possible: children must be trained to be subservient for the parent’s well-being, for the child’s well-being; and well-being means authoritative control.

We spend a lot of time learning about the world around us; and at first, we only manage simplistic terms such as a “Rainbow is colourful”. As children we accept this readily enough; but will eventually come to understand that our guardians are fallible and often hypocritical.

When we get older, we will be able to comprehend that a rainbow has seven colours; when we get older still that a rainbow is made up of light; and later still that Light is made up of wavelengths; but eventually we will come to understand that all that we have been taught as fact, is valid only if we believe an authority.

When we are told at university that no-one actually knows what light is, realise that our religion doesn’t have the answers we need, or witness the hypocrisy of our guardians- there are corresponding occurrences of fallibility.

Those with children will often be bemused when a child spends a lot of time animating/anthropomorphizing a teddy bear and pretending it is real and they try to play along with the child’s fantasy. For some time, the child will agreeably let the guardian add concepts such as the teddy is walking, the teddy is hiding; but then suddenly something as simple as “the teddy is drinking” will cause a solemn response from the child to the effect of “it’s not a real bear you know”. These innocent unexpected moments of seriousness are signs of the child’s growing powers of reason to test fallibility. For some children: this is the breakthrough needed to begin becoming autonomous. So it is about this time, that the Ego begins to develop.

Such growth is of course carefully monitored, controlled, steered and guided by guardians of the Matrix: and in this manner; there tend to be built-in submissions to higher authorities. Be they God, State, Police, Parents, or Ethics. Now, because the Ego is trained early on to work on a Reward/Punishment basis; it finds pleasure/pain in obeying/disobeying certain authorities.

Unless the early Ego is given an experience of the fallibility of authorities that causes a re-think of certain notions about the world held dear; it will be happy enough to live out life under the impressions of the world tutored into it; and, once it has decided its Weltanschauung (world-view) it will begin to solidify notions and schemata for the means of maintaining a set stasis. I.e., it will become hardened and resistant to new ideas, in its bid to control the world from the seat of its new identity, the "I". And pending on how fragile the Ego – will even become violent when challenged. Some Egos are flexible; and will be able to accommodate one or two drastic changes and can usually bend a little as means of compromise. But very few have the elasticity caused by seeing continued fallibility in authoritative figures and notions during early formation that cause the socialisation of the Ego to be improperly executed. We teach socialisation by simplistic repetitions; and we are shaped by virtue of simplistic repetition to LIKE a specific and unchangeable world. When something that is a god to a child is shown to be infallible it is often confusing and a shock to the Ego; it throws things into question and causes a re-examination of one's ideas and a rejection of some of those ideas. It is an uncomfortable moment of insecurity and fear that we suddenly have lost control of our matrix; but for most there is always someone to reassure us of the Validity of that God, or somehow comfort us and this actually coaxes us away from facing that fear and examining what it is.

But it can't always be so. The number of human's means there will always be anomalies to the equation. Some will not be comforted by the explanations of others or soothed by the means of rhetoric; indeed, some will be angry and affronted that they have been tricked into being shaped the way they have by others; to being controlled by laws that previously seemed sacrosanct. And with the fallibility of, for example, seeing police beat innocent bystanders, or hearing of a case of a wrongful imprisonment, they will question such authority and subsequently come to reject the musical lull of the fawners in the Matrix. They will attempt to seriously re-examine their lives, their ideas, who they are, and why they are here. This will often result in a quest.

If such a Quest is heuristic, or Satanic, it will usually involve in-depth examination of all authorities as the Satanist seeks to embody the rebellious archetype of Satan. The type of mind that loses faith in authorities and openly questions/rebels against them – is in the eyes of the World, Sinister in its being. The type of mind that loses faith in authorities will closely scrutinise them and with enough study see right through each of them and understand them for the illusions they are. The vulgar truths that are revealed via such study can incite intense anger and profound indignation as well as a feeling of being lost in an ethereal nightmare.

The illusions of the Matrix are arranged just like a house of cards: the same way we are taught concepts one by one as children; the same way breaking those concepts causes concepts associated with them to fall down. One by one the destruction of each will cause part of the intellectual world to crumble away as though the backdrops of the world were peeled off and a vast network of wire frame were to be seen underneath: viz. the infinity of the Angles.

Such a disturbing/disappointing find often leads to a renouncement of the quest and the path to madness or mediocrity as in desperation the Ego will fix its gaze on an object in order to cling to its last shred of truth in the Matrix. Without something to cling to, it fears it will lose all control and security and find itself alone, divorced from the convenient reality of others. And if it can let go of the Matrix, it will, in a very frightening, chaotic place with no rules that some call the Unknown and others know as the Abyss.

Such a “dis-discovery” if it does not destroy the Ego and render the organism senseless – often experienced as apathy, nihilism, suicide, depression – will if followed in due course strip away Everything that was held dear in the foundation of the Ego. It is thus important to understand this process and work on dream channelling, psychic-exploration, and other means of establishing a true self to fall back on, and BE, when the Ego is eventually dissolved. A being should expect to have great difficulty in coming to terms with stepping out of the matrix and not being able to go back to believing in the world it knew. The deconstruction of reality leads to a disintegration of the ego and conversations and actions of everyday are all revealed for what they are, dependant on the Matrix.

Without the convenience of a surrounding structure the Ego loses its function to act as a psychic safety net that provides the security or comfort of knowing what to do with your Being, what it is Being, or how it should act.

It is for a long time a seemingly permanent separation of one’s existence from the real – and a plunge in the chill dark of the esoteric. It is an intense moment entering the Angles, and it has not been written about by any Mage I have studied or learnt from. One might consider this a separation from God and the aim of Satan himself translated into human terms – But it is only the beginning. Unless you are willing [and by willing, I mean possessed of a demonic dynamic Wyrd to truly KNOW – a true Satanist] to keep going further into the Angles; you will have only come halfway; and you will feel extreme anguish that there is no foundation that you can trust. You will feel as though you are New, here. The inanity of others who continually refer to aspects of the Matrix that is still real for them will grate on your nerves like nothing you know. Unless you construct an alternate Sinister matrix for the Self to survive in: the horrible things that stalk the Angles will devour you. I don’t just mean the torturous logic, uncertainties, doubts, and fears, inability to explain to your Matrix-entrenched loved ones what is “wrong” with you or wrong with the world – I mean real Demons.

The reason for building a Sinister matrix is the same reason for building the Self: breaking out of the Matrix poses an immediate danger of lack of control over your external form and others’ perceptions of its constructive function in Society.

Adjustment takes time and may put you in a vulnerable state. You face the scrutiny of others and potentially the threat of chemical/physical imprisonment by the State. But the mind and body must be preserved to continue consciously directed growth. The Sinister Matrix is a means of perception that perceives world content as a blank slate, as though it were all black clay over which some have put signposts and tents and coloured flags, and others have built enormous castles and armies of coloured plastic. Much of the clay has been brightly carpeted to cover its dense impenetrable truth, but these illusions and concealments do not fool. Shapes made from this black clay or “matter” visible to the eye are understood to be creations moulded into shape only by the hands and wills of others, and able to be re-shaped by one’s own will into another form. Nothing made of the black clay is permanent. We are not absorbed with the signposts and bright flags – that is the realm of illusion and Semantic knowledge. Our quest is with Intuition, of the “Black Clay”.

Once you have peeled away the wallpaper of the Psyche – and all authorities lay slain and dead at your feet, there is only one place that your Quest can lead you: back unto your Self. Annihilation of the intellectual Matrix does not annihilate “you”. The prescience of “You” will be an immediate puzzle under your own constant scrutiny; and for this it is necessary to develop the power to split into different parts of your Psyche, such as the early and mid-stages of ONA/THEM Satanism teaches. Now you know why.

Because this stripping away cannot be understood [at least it wasn’t, prior to the writings of THEM] by those who haven’t undergone it: because you must travel to an Unknown plane according to the specific dissolving elements of your Ego: and because the words, advice of any kind of authority cannot sate you: the Quest of the Left-Hand Path is a Sinister, and Solitary one. Despite the esoteric frustration you will initially experience when your being reanimates the slain Ego under new control of the Self – the fragility of words, ideas, notions, images, meanings, etc – you will eventually understand these fragments do not form a whole: or if they do, it is a whole that will be entirely dependent on your will: thus, do not need to be logically understood but irrationally allowed to whirl about your mind [for this is the source of material for re-creating the Matrix and becoming a God within it] and the more immediate problem of your Being, your body, the life-force that you can feel somewhere in your animation becomes apparent. Because you have chosen a Satanic Quest: to be like Satan: experiencing the Matrix and the Abyss will not be enough. Knowing what the very heart of the words “Satan” and “God” are and represent at their finest level will not sate you: you will want to know what it is that animates you, what it is that resists against you if not a chair: but a tangle of angles that has thus far been lumped “Matter”.

It is a Quest that THEM are still on. Meanwhile, you will have your feet in two different worlds, one of the Matrix in which you may learn Semantic Knowledge to indulge in your whims as a creative/destructive God, now knowing the secret weaknesses and fragility of all forms. And the other foot in the Abyss, by which you may dissolve your temporary Ego and intellectually modify or alchemically alter to give yourself a type of reason or thought that allows you to change perspective so that you may perform in the Matrix super-human feats of thought and action and override the usually strict encompassing rigidity of the average Ego that says DON'T: because you are no longer bound to obey it: because you are now, "in league with the Devil".

DIVINE JOY

I – Evolution

Today, when the human baby is born, for some time it is blind and for a year or more remains completely dependent on others for its survival. In such a helpless state, how did the first of its kind survive long enough to give birth? Perhaps we are descendants of the monkeys, but how does this solve the original dilemma? The monkey too is helpless at birth. What is the logical sequence of events that preceded us? Logically: unless there was a species capable of caring for a human infant at least long enough to survive to procreate; a species that was somehow not helpless at birth and able to nurture its own growth and independent being (Are there any examples of this in nature?) it is practical to consider the intervention of intelligent design. What genus of animals abandons their young immediately after birth? And could such a genus have helped raise the first human such as wolves, bears, tigers and other animals have been documented doing? Or are we deluded and ignorant of a much different past? Are we descendants of another race?

With Evolution: the causal procession is often assumed a case of which came first: the Chicken or the Egg. It's a lazy paradox. Nature spawns creatures that are tested against it. The equivalent of guinea pigs; slowly tailored to suit and thrive in their unique environmental conditions. Perhaps the first chicken (a result of crossbreeding) was simply dropped in a sac to the ground as a "freak" of nature, (how arrogant to assume what is normal!) and the hard encasement of the "Egg" developed as a result of repeated impact and damage to the sac.

One theory held by THEM is of an interlacing level of organism's organisation, where each individual has as a by-product of its existence a separate role as part of a greater whole via the collective forming another form – i.e., individual ants forming a swarm or army that moves as one unit. Armies of ants then forming a colony, many colonies an Eco-system and so on. To survive; the organisms subjected to impact would over time develop protection at the micro-level of their structure and this is likely to have a knock-on effect that sustains the larger collective form too. This would mean the egg developed well after the proto-chicken. The paradox only emerges when we assume that the “first chicken” was actually a “chicken” too. It seems no less far-fetched to believe that an Acausal intrusion gives life to life, than it is to believe a God has done so.

II – The Great Chaos

The first words of the Christian God are: Let there be light. It is a revelation on two fronts; 1) that there was darkness prior to God, and 2) that there was reason for the light. When the first of our kind was born; we must assume that somehow it survived long enough to procreate. What hideous terror must have assailed the first infant of our kind; what alien and primeval sensations, what noises and smells, what uncontrollable and original/pristine encounters with this dimension must have been the first experiences of that infant. We have considered how the first infant may have survived. Let us be optimistic and think on the experiences of the first men.

The Sun, the Moon, the Sea, the Mountains and the Forests; must have truly overawed the first men. And not merely the visionary sensations but those of sound, smell, touch, pain. With no words, no language, no comparison for what they saw: no comfort of control over the colours, lights, and fury of the old world; it must have been the original act of Staring into the Abyss. So absolutely frightening was this experience that men were forced to understand what they saw in order to survive it. The Great Chaos was too much for first man; as a baby screams in distress at its birth today; so too would primeval man as an infant have been absolutely awed by the experience of suddenly being alive; with no-one to comfort or soothe.

I reason that this first experience of men was captured genetically in the early stages of the formation of memory and experience of the psyche and is at the very root of our nature as the human species as the first repression; a repression necessary to enable men to rise up and control the horrors of their surroundings by giving names and meanings (eventually) to things that shared space with them. This repression of Original Chaos is the ghost at the core of memory that drives all human beings to invent the Matrix: as a means to cover the Abyss with meaning to control it. If we had or could not, we should have perished with fear and would not have become the Human Race. Chaos defines us, and that is why the idea of God(s) resonates hypnotically within the human psyche; that is why “let there be light” are the first words of God, because they are the first act of man.

THE THEORY OF THE BEAST [1]

In the realm of Black Magic it is often useful to borrow metaphors or terms from sources such as Psychology. I shall now aim to represent a psychological foundation for the ideas I have encountered: but I must impress upon the reader that this theory and the use of its constituents may lie outside of conventional Psychology. It is important to address this theory now however, for Psychology has its roots in Alchemy, Alchemy is a highly relative notion to THEM because of its emphasis on Change, and part of Al chemical Change involves knowing thyself. I will give a crash course in Psychological terms and concepts and then relate why I believe suppression of the part of the psyche called the Id, personified and demonised, gave rise to the origin of Satan, to Demons, and to the concept of Evil.

Our minds, when being formed, are protected from psychic harm by a container called the Ego. The ego is a vitally important function of our total Psyche that stores for us the unique, stable set of conditions we each live by, with our actions motivated toward keeping those conditions just right or in 'homeostasis'. It is also the aspect of us that generates our sense of control and security over our behaviour, thoughts, and environment. When the ego is first formed it is malleable, elastic in its growth and able to take on new ideas and information, but as it reaches maturity it hardens and becomes brittle and resistant to change. For this reason, once set, the beliefs of people are often unchangeable. Entwined as they are with their world-view, the ego's protective mechanisms, and sense of identity; the beliefs of a person are a hyper-extension of the ego that can sometimes take control over the organism like an autopilot. Ego is the part of us that will fight like a cornered animal to re-assert its view of reality if it is questioned or challenged.

Another function of the ego is to act like a dam holding back a vast lake of water. It acts as a division in our mind that holds back the contents of our animalistic "Sub-conscious" or "Id". The Id is a separate compartment of the mind that originally dominated our Being. In order to have an individual sense of identity to separate us from our previous animalistic instincts, the ego developed by repressing (blocking out) the subconscious. The content and role of the Id is an on-going matter of speculation; however it is best known for its capacity to act as a psychic waste-land ruled by unknown dimensions; a primeval enigma that contains contents highly disturbing to the logical, rational mind. It is a subliminal pool that contains among other things: our dark secrets, wishes and desires, our irrational urges and impulses expressed without restraint, intense anxieties and repressed memories of fear and pain, the surfacing of which can be extremely dangerous to our fragile well-being.

Our ego helps to deceive us about our innate fragility and keep up protective illusions of safety, conformity, normality, control, security and "Reality". It essentially tries to ignore the Id and takes great pains not to disturb it. Those in the field of Analytical Psychology (Qv. Carl Jung) are painstakingly aware of the care that must be taken when allowing content from the Subconscious of a client to emerge; and Psychopaths and the impulsive/compulsive individual embody examples of the ability of the contents of the unconscious to interfere in sane growth. As well as guarding against internal pressure the ego also helps us to deal with threats from outer forces we face in our external environment. Because it is subjected to enormous psychological and physiological pressures it is important that its development is properly executed. If the Ego is damaged during crucial stages of its development, it may crack and cause unpredictable leaks of content from the subconscious to occur. A significant crack can enable a large flow or even a flood of subconscious content into our consciousness allowing what is called ‘the Abyss’ in magickal terms or ‘the Collective Unconsciousness’ in psychological terms, to be released onto what we know as ourselves: the “I “ resulting in madness or severe psychosis. This theory closely parallels our biological evolution.

Before we gained the level of consciousness that allowed us to recognise ourselves as individual thinking beings separate from each other and the rest of the world, in fact before we were “humanity”, proto-man was ruled by base desires and savage primal instincts. At some point in our evolution we were able to suppress our ruling animal instincts long enough for Consciousness to arise. We eventually achieved a state of self-awareness that allowed us to appraise and wonder at our own existence. This unique state of self-awareness is referred to as the ‘I’ in Psychology and has long been regarded as the single-most fascinating achievement of the human organism. But the emergence of the ‘I’ came at a heavy price. In exchange for Consciousness, we had to forcefully drive our natural, raw instinct of what we were (the Collective Unconscious) back from the fore of our minds and forge a new artificial conscious collective agreement (the Collective Consciousness) on what we wanted to be.

To help do this, over time our species created, and then instilled, Values, Group Obligations and Right Conduct into and onto each other, further suppressing the raw state of our natural being to further the aims of our artificial one – which was a mass social form of indefinitely deferred gratification (having to wait for set conditions to arise before one can gratify ones natural desires). So long as we kept our primal dark forces [The Id] in check, we were able to get along with each other relatively well enough to develop groups and societies – usually ruled by a few, who used fear, violence etc., to enforce Law, Order, and instil conscious conduct.

Over a vast span of time, and as Consciousness spread, the majority of people developed an Ego strong enough to contain the Id indefinitely, or productively released it via outlets of creativity, dance, music, language, symbols, etc. A whole social matrix was built upon the attempts to keep the subconscious out so that our new state of independence could thrive and we began to cloak immediate needs and base desires within respectability and glamour. Such glamour is artifice; all humans contain the Id and all Conscious human beings are scorpions.] We also began to give names and labels to things to begin dispelling fear. The more names we created the more complex the world became. Today, there are so many names for things, and so many institutions to perpetuate more names, that we have forgotten its original point as an exercise in control. Because there are so many concepts and names and ideas that have been layered onto what really Is apparently there [which is geometry] and nameless, there are now millions of illusions that must be broken before a grasp of genuine reality can be achieved. Owing to the hardship required to break free from such illusions most cannot help but be entrapped by the deception of authority and the webs of the matrix.

But, those that made a religion of suppression were ill-prepared for the strength of their new enemy. The Id or “Beast” could not be tamed and the forces of the subconscious proved powerful beyond their wildest dreams. Although punishment was meted out to those unable to hold back the advancing forces of our primal being as a social admonishment to discourage others from releasing what was imprisoned within; suppression did nothing to sate our desires and urges to behave naturally. While some adopted the new Conscious collective agreement and joined the religion of holding back their impulsive urges, some followed only in part by practising its release in private (or in public granted certain power); and still others refused (or were incapable) to suppress it at all, continuing to embody our original natural state of being that sought instant gratification.

Out of growing fear of the Beast to undermine our civility and our human-ness, we denied the unknown realm locked away within us that frightened us for its unpredictability, its cruelty and its propensity to erupt from the calmest human being. Such a force threatened to engulf the conscious accomplishments of humanity in chaos and destruction. In time, various Religions and magical tribes came to call signs of activity stemming from the subconscious by unfavourable names. In effect – A war was declared against the forces of ‘The Great Beast’, the opening psychic shot in a Mind War that would lead to all manner of dark masters/forces Named responsible for the horrors that issued forth from people – various Monsters, Deities, and Gods, and of course, “Satan”, all in a bid to control the subconscious. Other words crept in “Demons”, “Evil”, and so forth that led to wide-spread persecutions to stamp out the Beast. It did not take long for some to realise the power that came from interpreting existence for others... Yet those who suppressed the beast the hardest were often those most afflicted by its insurmountable power.

When the subconscious is kept under lock and key and an option to vent it/express it by ‘exercising the beast’ is denied; the expenditure of energy needed by the ego to hold back subconscious forces grows exponentially. Without outlets, the repressed forces grow stronger by the day until they grow powerful enough to over-run the defences of the Ego or shatter it completely causing psychosis. They manifest outwardly as unchecked acts of raw desire, often many times stronger than when originally imprisoned, often expressed as acts of sadistic cruelty, murder, torture, brutality, violence, blood-lust, war, passion and rape. Or they consume the ego with a barrage of irrational emotions and desires that drive the being to fulfil them or take out its frustration at being unable to fulfil them in other, often destructive ways. The Ego can only do so much to hold the subconscious back until it is eventually overwhelmed. The fact that our natural state is one dominated by the Subconscious tends toward its favour in a war of wills.

No matter how emphatically the subconscious is repressed; like the metaphor of the stubborn weed, the tendrils of the unconscious will keep returning, writhing forth again and again into the fore of the mind in an endless struggle to choke the host plant into submission. By forcing our instinct underground we committed ourselves to a life-long struggle against our very nature in order to maintain an artificial existence. The artificial existence can only prosper under certain conditions: the most important of which is suppression of raw unconscious desires. In the eyes of the Artificers (The Magian Illuminati. Qv. Book III) in our natural, uncontrolled state of being, humans are either; terrifying creatures suffused with a brutal, primal darkness that has been called “Chaos” that are too ferocious to tame; or frightened creatures too timid to work or help create the matrix and further the Artifice. Pending on Environmental and Genetic Factors we might be either – thus we are shaped by the Artifice as soon as possible.

Chaos is representative of the unconscious and is anathema to the Order that the Artificers wish to exist. One may be reasonably sure that the Artificers were simply those that excelled in disguising the Beast, who over time granted their base desires and ambitions using deception and cunning – forming groups of self-interested individuals that conspired to manifest their Beasts within using the forms and illusions of the Artifice to conceal them. There is ample corresponding evidence within Sociology for this. For example an individual who commits Corporate Fraud which relieves hundreds of people from millions of dollars, homes and savings, is far less likely to be charged and go to jail, than someone who steals a single car. Using the illusions of respectability and the forms of the Artifice – the Beast is concealed. The Artificers support suppression of the Beast in others via religion and politics for example, negotiating with others to defer gratification by reason, cultural norm, money, threat of imprisonment or force – but they do not support it in themselves.

They use the subsequent meekness adopted by a populace to rule it. This type of thing has been going on for a long time – and it is known in Satanism as the Great Mind War. The Great Mind War is a fight between the Magian to assert Artificial Forms based on original fear such a moral good and evil existing in the world over the Sinister understanding of the world as Godless and dominated by Chaos. This will all be covered in great detail as we progress through the books. However, because they fear Chaos so rabidly, the Artificers have deliberately fostered great ignorance concerning Satanism and created a whole system of occult blinds and myths intended to prevent any real magical Adeptship from arising in an individual that could seriously pose a threat or challenge to their ruling regime. For this reason it was extremely difficult to learn the Traditional practices of genuine Satanism beneath the tame, safe, watered down version that is happily peddled commercially that misdirects and controls the Beast by dictating the terms of its release. And the simple motives are Jealousy and Greed.

If everyone released the Beast or mastered its control as well as the Artificers, the Artificers would no longer be powerful. Their power rests on maintaining an unequal distribution of power. If for arguments sake everyone was suddenly as powerful as everyone else: power would become mediocre and ergo, normal. All diversity of forms within the matrix would fail and a utopia created which would also be mediocre. The Artificers money, assets, lifestyles that set them apart would become commonplace – and were this so, money would become obsolete because there would be no workers willing to work, thus no-one to generate wealth, thus no socioeconomic growth, no creativity, no slaves, no masters, and no Artifice. Hence: to be powerful means keeping power from others. The means to regain the power are within your reach, but you must first understand the scope of what it is you must overcome, how the system of control works, and how you can begin to set about facing yourself in order of break free of the cycles of lies.

Understanding the creation of the Matrix is the first step to regaining control of ones Being, hijacked by the ego. Through practical and thorough magical/alchemical practice or psychic exploration, the contents of the subconscious can be integrated with the Ego to form a Super Consciousness, or Self.

THE THEORY OF THE BEAST [2]: FURTHER IN

The tendency of some of THEM's mss to turn the Dark Gods into psychological allegories should not be mistaken for the total beliefs or approach to these entities as held by the members of THEM but instead as only one particular angle of a far greater geometry. The theory given in "Theory and the Beast" illustrates – by tracing observations presently available backward to their logical distant causation – a certain speculation encompassing only a certain stretch of time.

That is, while the Theory may claim humanity potentially invented what we have come to know as the Dark Ones as part of a reaction to the unfavourable (for some) usurpation of consciousness over the natural unconscious aspects of the Psyche;- these sets of mss represent only a small part of the beliefs of THEM as concerns the Dark Gods, and was shared to provide an optional and contemporary view that was less occult and more logical to this age-old modicum.

The Theory of the Beast assumes two important things as read: a) that, taking some accepted notions of world history at face value, human beings may have at some point in their evolution been ruled by instinct and savage primal urges until the emergence of the ego, and b) that the ego was a secondary stage and thus represented a new stage of consciousness for human beings.

Now – in light of how this mss challenges certain abstracts that are often used conveniently to phrase the Dark Ones in a duality; which duality then influences the approach and susceptibility to possible answers; and how this mss places the origin of the Dark Ones in a currently popular systemology (psychology) which opens up a new set of questions instead of the same occult cliches – the Theory is useful. But various considerations of the Theory need to be borne in mind to get an approximate understanding that THEM hold of the Dark Ones and their potential existence. For one thing – theory of the beast does not cover the possibility that this process reflects what happened from the beginning of humanity to the present day. Whilst the process expounded in the theory may have more or less occurred at a certain point in the human past – there are many puzzling questions that remain. In relation to the dubious authenticity of World History – including Anthropology – it has been quite some time since anyone updated the work of Darwin whilst other fields of human interest seem to have made leaps and bounds, particularly those dealing with technology.

What the Theory does not make mention of – is that the Temple of THEM do not rule out, and keep an open mind on, the possibility that there were stages of human history that were more advanced than the present time, (2009). Our cynicism is veteran. (Qv. “Alpha-Male, Alpha-Cynic” OA #9 / Liber SSS). It is veteran as a reaction to the quality of the logic employed by a previous surge in consciousness titled the New-Age. While we refer to our nexion as Satanic – we are not so arrogant or ignorant to dismiss, nor to include things, out of hand that many assume would or should be spurned by us merely because of our self-imposed title. The world is a very ancient place, and there is room for many possibilities. But though we keep open minds, well aware of the many limitations imposed by the evidence and limits of evidence available to make an assessment for any possibility there is a reason we are here, we do not fly toward speculation on UFO’s, Levitating Pyramids, Lizard Men, Aliens, Angels, the Devil, or a New World Order.

There is every reason to keep an open mind that the world may have been created by intelligent design – whether by good or evil being(s) depends on whether you believe in sides, and whether you’ve taken one. There is no reason to conclude that other civilisations prior to the one we call the Cradle of Civilisation, Sumer, did not flourish or exist – though nothing remains. We humans have and continue to make do with giving answers based on the evidence available speculating carefully (and sometimes wildly) in the case of missing information. But although there is a lack of evidence – this does not rule out the possibility of the existence of previous cultures, potentially far more advanced than we may ever become ourselves. What of the fact that the majority of the Earth is covered in deep and dangerous seas – seas we're told are billions of years old? It is accepted from the excavations made by archaeology that rock forms layers of sediment – which sediment is caused by the covering up of previous layers over millions of years. We accept that the seas have changed course, and re-shaped the landmass many times, that the continents as we see them today were very different and at times unrecognisable. We accept that sea levels can steadily rise – and volcanic explosions have changed the course of the waters and the shape of the landmass, submerging some parts, raising others. There is no reason to believe, owing to the incomparable size of the oceans, that there does not lie under all that deep or forgotten sediment further clues to our Being. Further clues to our Past, and if so, maybe our Future. But we do not rush to validate the existence of Atlantis, Mu, or Lemuria.

There is every reason to believe – and as every occultist who has ever written of their Work can attest – that much is lost in translation. We know all too well of the difference between living an event and re-telling it. The vivifying life of the event becomes static when fixed in word for the written word is the tomb of interpretation. Words are not able to capture a moment as it Is, only as it Seems, or is wished to be Remembered. These written records strip the numinous totality of life and channel it into a perceptibly smaller and limited paradigm that often prevents any further angles of enquiry into the event being described (esp. where archaeology is concerned).

How much is lost in translation? If very little – there should not be so many occultists trying to complete the Great Work in all its forms. Some of us accept that “History” as Adolf Hitler so memorably commented on during ‘Mein Kampf’ is composed of a list of facts and figures memorised by rote. Moreover that “To the victor goes the spoils” and “History is written by the winners”. History is a curious concept – with the power to raise great storms of emotion or quell them pending the latest ‘discovery’. It is as many of us observe, subject to the whims and prejudices of politicians, religion and even science and can be changed, over night. For instance, The Vatican has an entire library devoted to imprisoning the confiscated, banned or otherwise ‘heretical’ literary treasures that opposed its own tenacious view. The Christians have been persecuting the masses via their cathedrals and churches for millennia with an enormous amount of time to erase, change, alter, the contents or destroy the owner and his writings forthwith by denouncing them as a witch, Satanist, devil worshipper, communist, terrorist, paedophile, sodomist (In the majority of cases unfairly, and with the Churches history, hypocritically). Who knows what that onslaught of destruction destroyed – or what that many forbidden books may say about the recorded History of the World? Each of those documents are the history of the world. And the Vatican is only one tiny contemporary example, for a more modern one, consider the Pentagon. Or for any time period we know of – consider that there was, always someone who did not agree with what was written, what was said, what was recorded. The Pharaohs erased the records of whole Dynasties in Egypt because of political dissent – hundreds of years, gone. And not just books, but statues, monuments, memorials, graves, holy places, stelae, tombs, sculptures, and all the others signs of a culture in passing. And what are these but the butterflies wing of examples?

It has been in the records of humanity a predisposition to conquer, to control, to own, to rule and to destroy or disband what came before. For this reason – the Christians built their Churches on ancient Pagan Sites. The Muslims built their Mosques over the top of other Sites. Emperors and Monarchs razed a dis-favoured city and its people to the ground and built over them so that no trace should remain of their enemies. Now what lies under those Churches may never be known such is the sensitivity shown to Religion. What of the tablets, cuneiform, treasures that didn't survive, were smashed, lost, burned, broken, changed without anyone the wiser... or the fallibility of interpretation given to those that did. This certainty people seem to have of the world and the events that behold it is a great puzzle and a great downfall.

Or the fact that in many cases, there is so much history to record, that even when proved wrong – mistakes remain indefinitely – or remain so because of someone's wishes. For instance, there are maps that clearly show the accurate coastal outline of countries such as Greenland several hundred years before such maps were believed to exist – and made in a time that modern history accepts as impossible without today's technology. Or another little known fact – the Britannica Encyclopedia recorded unfavourable epithets of the Papal clergy. To solve this uncomfortable problem – the Church (The Vatican I believe) bought the Encyclopedia Britannica, and changed the epithets to suit itself. Thus “history” was changed to reflect what the Church wanted others to remember – not, what actually transpired.

Now while it is essential to believe one has a good grasp of the facts of life – the occultist soon uncomfortably discovers that everyone has anything but... The point to keep in mind though – is that recorded History shows itself to be malleable pending the wishes of the powerful or influential and subject to the whims of change if the time in which it is broached pends favour or disfavour. It certainly is not, and perhaps never has been, a means by which to get a honest, fair and truthful approximation of the world we live in, the events it has spawned, or the course it has taken. Moreover, it is only right to remember that such records are and were limited to the few who could write or draw or carve or remember great oral tracts – but that if only a small percentage of the population could convey the insights and stories and so on – that the rest of the experiences of the humans who did not record or write or carve or speak – were forgotten. Lost. As I have said before “humans have a tendency to believe the time they are born into is the most complete, the most up-to-date or ‘modern’ time” – nothing could be further from the truth. Humans are malleable, quite easily persuaded creatures that like order, consistency, and control in and over the world and are happy enough to let the explanations given them – be their gospel, their guide to the authentic history of earth and their role in it.

Such willingness to believe in History is at best an optimism enjoyed by the human race and a fascination for the world around them that others have explored parts of they are only keen to hear about – hearing such knowledge is the equivalent of a fireside tale. But at worst this attitude is reckless for a magician, dangerous for a Satanist who quest is to Know, and onerous according to THEM.

History is extremely fragile, flexible, and fallible. Once the Earth was believed flat – and look at what happened to those who dared object. History is full of people being proved wrong but Humanity is egocentric, fragile, doesn't take criticism well, and is very, very slow to learn. Technology, Religions, Ideas, Fashions, Words, Languages, Styles, even Names go in and out of popularity and usage. What dwindles in popularity in century finds an audience in another. Thus History should be digested with a grain of salt. Cynicism and Optimism make great partners.

So to summarise: There is no reason to believe that human beings have a complete story; a fair and balanced story; or will ever have the real story of the World and its thus far accumulated and accepted explanation for human evolution. This fact opens up the possibility that records of the Ancients were not allegorical or meant to be parables – as our finite and limited wisdom tied to our particular chronological prejudices would have us impose – and that there were real Dark Gods not confined to the metaphors of horrors and neuroses of the psyche – but living flesh and blood creatures/giants (Nefilim, for instance) and perhaps not originally from earth.

Of this possibility – many of the recorded texts or beliefs of the popular world religions unashamedly attest to the existence of various Gods as does almost every culture. I hardly need cite examples: but; The Vedic Bhagadvita, The Norse Sagas, the Christian Bible, The Hieroglyphs of the Egyptians, the Greek Illiad and Greek Pantheon, the Cuneiforms of the Aztec, Toltecs, Mayans, the Aboriginals of Australia, the Maoris of New Zealand, the Polynesians of the South Seas, the cultures of the Chinese and Japanese, and endless more – going right back – to Sumer. They describe various Gods and Beings as capable of varying wondrous things; but from a time so long ago that it dwarfs the imagination. Generally – the imagination, like the ego, doesn't take too kindly to being dwarfed...

With the obvious limitation of being referred to (for convenience and to provide an opposing dialectic) as 'Dark Gods' – the nature of the Dark Ones is often assumed one way or the other to characterise a certain 'nature'. ONA was forced to go to considerable lengths to explain the context of and meaning for using such a title – moreover that this title was more complicated than many inferred.

There are instances even as early as Sumer relating the varying dispositions of the Gods and Beings made mention of. Some Gods were helpful, some were harmful, Some were ambivalent and others could be a tricky mixture of both. There were Gods of Agriculture, and Gods of War. Which – if any – were the Dark Gods? The ONA cites the names (vibrations) given in their Pantheon as Pre-Sumerian. From one point of view – it's a bold claim. There is, (to my albeit limited knowledge) no accepted evidence that any civilisation preceded Sumer. Zecharia Sitchin makes references to Archaeological digs at Sumer that revealed a number of cities had been built over the top of others, but eventually no further underlying foundations could be found – and thus it was presumed to be evident that the oldest and first city and civilisation in the world had been found by process of elimination.

But if the legends of the Sinister Tradition precede Sumer – you might think archaeologists the world over would be clambering to speak to the ONA and enquiring earnestly as to the origin of their information. On the other hand – given what has been said above – the clear and unforgivable short-comings of the human race as a collective and individually – there is still no reason to doubt that evidence of a Pre-Sumerian culture does not exist. Nor that the Dark Ones did not exist. Personally, I've been alive 30 years. When I walk into my lounge and face my bookshelf – I am outnumbered by books 500-1. At a rough guess, it would take me another 4-5 years (or at least, a long time) to read through these books again. But – if I were somehow allowed to suspend the laws of life and try to read the, I don't know, 100,000? books or so housed at one of the local libraries – I should probably never complete the task. In fact I should probably die mid-sentence after around 50,000, aged 70-80 years old.

Who – if anyone – could have read the entire contents of the fabled Alexandria Library which library is said to have been the ancient world's largest and most extensive collection of ancient wisdom the world over? The fact is – humans, limited by their relatively short lifespan, can never hope to read all of the books ever written, let alone all of the books that still survive. And this earnest but modest process – is where most of our evidence where we draw our assumptions and guesses and opinions comes from – an at best, incomplete and rudimentary assessment of a few of the worlds manuscripts – sewn together mentally in the hopes that that small token effort can somehow blanket an understanding of the World. A sobering fact: the totality of books is in the hundreds of millions. That is probably why humans tend to specialise in a subject.

So in all optimism – you or I can only ever gather the smallest parcel of information available to us into our heads and hearts – on which to meditate. And of the books lost, locked away, forgotten, banned, destroyed, in the hands of private collectors, museums, archives, vaults? Herein restrictions exist to further deny the enthusiastic reader more opportunities to gather the totality of the records of the human being.

That task is a pipe dream – it cannot be done. Human biology is against us – Time is against us – Free Access is against us – Politics/Religions are against us – Technology is against us – Memory is against us – and the necessity for Sleep, Food, Water, Shelter, etc – these things are all against us too. Herewith – THEM conclude with finality – that no one can know with any certainty – the History of the World as it happened – only as it was interpreted, recorded, survived. Nor, can anyone know what is outside of being able to be known – but which is known to have been lost by the records within records. The Sinister Tradition, then, may very well be based on records from a Pre-Sumerian culture– it is not so hard to believe.

And because of our particular cynicism/optimism – THEM hold more than a dry psychological interest and involvement in the matter of the Dark Gods. This attitude is in line with the +Law of Remembrance+ and the Weltanschauung of a Life-Centred Geometry; wherein such an attitude engenders an end to the short-sighted arrogance that passes for so-called total understanding harboured by any person (especially authority) – and instead gives way to a more sagely tradition of the understanding of the nature of Knowledge, the limitations and fallibilities interpretation imposes on life and the immense difficulty of a study, and thus the fragility of drawing conclusions about it and ones own existence.

THE MAGI

Historically the Magian were the Persian priesthood. More correctly, they were the priest caste of the people of Medes whose domination on the Iranian plateau preceded that of the Persians in the first half of the 1st millennium BCE. The ancient Iranian peoples were Aryan peoples. After the powerful Aryan Hittite empire perished in 1180 BCE, the Ancient Orient was dominated by the fierce Semite empire of Assyria. It was a dark age for all non-Assyrian peoples including other Semites like Babylonians – Babylon (a megalopolis at the time – about 400 000 citizens) was two times ruined and its citizens massacred. The Assyrians had the most organised and disciplined military force at the time armed already with iron weapons (in fact the Iron Age started about the 1st millennium BCE). Assyria dominated over the Ancient Orient by the means of sheer terror: systematic genocides, mass impalement, flaying, disembowelling, beheading, mass deportations, slavery etc. In the end of the 7th century BCE there was something like a world war in the Orient – all the countries (except Egypt) were they Aryan, Semitic and other made a mighty coalition against Assyria and in 612 BCE the Assyrian capital Nineveh was evened to the earth, and Assyria deleted from the face of the earth.

The main blow against Assyria was given by the Aryan Medes and the Semitic Babylonians. After a temporary domination of the Neo-Babylonian empire in the Orient and after a war between the Medes and their kindred Persian people in 550 BCE, the latter had the upper hand. In fact, the Median priesthood – the Magi made a plot against the Median king and recognised the Persian king Cyrus II as a king of both Medes and Persians. Cyrus II called the Great deserved his epithet – he conquered Babylon and established one of the greatest empires known in the Orient.

The Persian empire's outer politics was very intelligent – everywhere the conquerors were met as liberators by the local peoples – they granted religious tolerance, human rights, good administration, trade, communications etc. It was then when the Jews were liberated from the Babylonian capture, so the Jews were very grateful to Cyrus II. Their Judaic priesthood – the Levites returned in Israel (already a Persian satrapy) and exercised their religious rights by suppressing any thought other than the cult of Yahweh. The Persian administration didn't interfere with the inner matters of any ethnic group provided they obey the empire administrative laws. Another distinctive feature of the Persian rule was that they used to corrupt economically the responsible persons of any hostile country prior to open any war against it – the rest was easy... Persia was a vast multi-ethnic empire with many religions presented therein. It's disputable if the official religion of the ruling Persian estate was the Zoroastrianism but it had a great influence amongst the Persian aristocracy and in the empire in general. In fact, the prophet Zoroaster derived from the Median Magi. His reform was to turn one of the main Iranian deities – Ahura Mazda into a monotheist "God" – the rest of the gods, the devi, were turned into devils.

Yet the Zoroastrianism was far from any fanaticism so characteristic for the Abrahamic religions. It was a dualistic religion but good = truth and evil = lie. The Zoroastrianists were against any form of asceticism and monasticism. Unlike the Abrahamic religions, they do not regard the flesh as evil and the spirit as good. They believed in the Last Judgement but again their dogma was far more intelligently stated than that of the Abrahamic religions. It's more than clear that the Abrahamic religions were the next Semitic corruption of an idea created by another race. The Magi were the elite estate of an Aryan people, the Medes. Seems that the negative connotations with the Magi appeared first in Greece when the Persian empire started its exhaustive wars against the Hellenes...

That's what the history says about the Magi but what is sure is that during that time all that ideology we now know as "Magian" started to take form. Later when Alexander the Great of Macedonia destroyed Persia, the Gnosticism joined the party, then when the Hellenic aeon entered its imperial phase with the late Roman Empire, then the Manicheanism, Christianity (with the 3 Magi bowing before Christ) and at last the Islam joined "Magianism".

I have also another simplistic explanation of how the spiritual corruption took place in the human race. It started when the first Semites adopted the Sumerian idea of personal deity – it was a Sumerian concept that each person has a personal guardian-deity called “lamma”. Instead of feeling happy by adopting such a concept, the undeveloped Semite psyche started to feel uncomfortable by feeling a constant guilt towards his personal deity as if being all the time at odds therewith. Thus, with the ages the concept of the original sin took form in the Semite psyche. If we are to follow the Biblical story of the Jewish patriarch Abraham, he was a citizen of Ur – and Ur was a capital city of the late Sumerian empire (2100-2000 BCE) where both Sumerians and Semites lived together. As any citizen of Ur Abraham had a personal deity – in his particular case it was the desert goblin Yahweh, who tormented his psyche not to recognise any personal gods of any other people until he got mad and was banned for religious intolerance from Ur... The rest is well known by the same fucking Bible.

By the way, please, read this most ancient text which in fact is a part of an authentic “Necronomicon” – the basis of all “Necronomicons” It’s maybe the first written myth about the creation of the human race. The translation could be trusted – it’s done by the Oxford Sumerologists who are dry scholars but objective and precise as far as possible.

MAGIAN IGNORANCE AND modern society

I wrote modern society especially using small letters to show its meaningless to me and also that it’s not worth calling valuable. And today I will also describe my experiences with stupidity, superstition, and mongoloid hypocrisy. It’s mostly based on my own experiences with those kinds of attitudes and persons. I know that others of you also have the same experiences, and we must fight them, but we must do this in wise ways, not just act like a brainless sheepish flock of modern society that is equally Christian. And we know how to do this, we learn every time how to defend ourselves. No matter what age we are – 18, 30 or 50 we’ll still experience their influence for the very simple reason – humanity is not mature enough to enter the new aeon and realise what they are and how they could fulfil their souls and will. Atheists and Christians are very stubborn and they will try to do everything to make us to resign from our path, but when they meet us, they don’t know we are obstacles that they will not be able to overcome so they will attack more, stronger and more furiously our beliefs no matter how they look doing it.

They hate everything that is different from them, someone can say that it’s not true, but the truth hurts, and we know how these things have been from the beginning. Everyone has different points of views on something else that concerns social matters or spiritual. It doesn’t matter to them which principles we are carrying in ourselves – they will fight us, and we will attack them. We will defend our future and our beliefs. Whatever it takes.

We are responsible units not some mere criminals which hide behind every Christian. The Sinister path is deadly and dangerous in itself, the purest essence of everything and they will meet obstacles that make them more crazy and furiously angered with us and our close environment, where we are among those of our kind. We are too strong for them to make us fall. They will bounce from us like the walls of inhuman titanium. It's funny, even then they will not stop attacking us. Even then we will not stop defending us.

What right are they given to criticise us, and what right to restrict us from the criticising of their slave religion? There is no law that can prevent our defence. We attack but also we defend those of our Sinister kind and our beliefs. Not because of our weakness, because they are overcome by our experiences and works, we defend ourselves from mockery of our path and the mongrels that try to twist it. They don't know that their "swords" are double-edged! In many ways they will know this without any results, they are not so smart to take lessons from this and we are smart enough to know how to defend our noble values. No matter who is the attacker. Other possibilities to defend are showing everyone even if we know that they will not learn what the truth looks like about us and about their hypocrisy. This will make them more aggressive and prove their incompetence and weaknesses of their own beliefs.

We know who we are and what we seek, we learn every day – they don't and it's obvious for every smart and thinking person. We work with something more and different from the ego. If we want to, we would not have done anything to prove anything to anyone. We're doing this because our nature is like this, exactly how it's met by the others. Everything on our path is more natural than anyone can imagine. It's your way to find out why and how you will do this depends only on you. If you are smart and brave enough, then go and take a look upon the sinister path it will give you real lessons or will make you end in mental hospital if you are weaker than you thought they were.

The truth will be always attacked by those who live in the great illusion. When that illusion is destroyed their existence will be forgotten and the truth will dethrone the lies of the old aeons. Somehow, they feel upcoming changes and they can't do anything with this. Someone said that the church is changing within the present days but it's not truth at all. If that be so, why they are attacking those who are different? They will never change and never will be opened minded, they will stay forever as narrow-minded mongrels and we will not do anything with that, we will allow them to drown in the mud as is their will to do that.

Everyone have their own free will to do what he thinks that will give him the way to find entity called god, but without looking into the acausal dimension they will never be able to do that, because everything has its origins in their subconsciousness. They are afraid of what it can hide. We are the ones of the Sinister kind that dared to take a journey without end, without the coming back and possibilities to withdraw anyhow which is obvious, since the Sinister path changes everyone who steps upon her.

Thoughts that are gathered here will be mocked by those who are without and are from the grey world. We were from the grey world too and we see the light which showed us that something beyond our limitations lies and is the weapon that is useful to make stable our way and to take lessons that anywhere can be taken. Lessons that really learns not how to strengthen the ego but how to overcome it, if you have not real inner strength in yourself, you will never be able to operate the hammer from the Sinister forge and use it on your soul. Possibilities are countless like countless are threats that lies within it. Let the sheep flock to be madden in their cages and try to attack us without any success. We know why we attack, they attack without intelligence like immature children fighting over tossed candy. We are mature, and maturity is sinister and dangerous. Watch the world and it's functioning, have your own conclusions from those observations.

A SINISTER HISTORY LESSON

These comments are addressed by THEM to the Global Sinisterion as a Reminder – but in the past have also been addressed to those with short or limited memories who have or continue to criticise/demonise numerous political regimes (including National Socialism) for their so-called evils but who fail to take the current tyrannical power and the history of America – to task. Since it is usually America accusing others of tyranny – herein we present a fairer history lesson.

It is vital to remember that it is America that has a long and detailed recorded history of brutality and arrogance world-wide, with some 80 incursions into other nations since World War II citing Vietnam, The Gulf War, Iraq, Afghanistan, North Korea, Cuba, Australia, New Zealand, and its most recent, Georgia, to name just a very few; always with the intent to control, intimidate or invert the invaded nation but citing its reasons for invasion as missions of peace. Whereas in reality, and as history soon shows, the invasions stem from a need and greed for precious resources such as Opium in the case of Vietnam, Oil in the case of Iraq, Afghanistan and/or as part of a geographical strategy to bring it closer to its enemies in order to govern them – America is, as the progeny of Puritans, Witch-hunters, and Inquisitors, a nation mad with paranoia.

What is not largely known is that there is an entire underground methodology employed by America to secretly undermine a country in order to set the stage to play the role as its saviour – characteristic of America's Judaeo-Christian Ethos. Such methodology usually means a trained individual is inserted into the country to cause a specific act – the act provokes outrage by the populace (fuelled by the media) – the actor is caught and a show trial begun – legislation is passed to prevent the act from reoccurring with special police powers distributed. The actor is released back into the secret service.

America's most insidious tactic lies in its power of propaganda; viz. of sending 'Peace Keepers' into countries on the pretence of humanitarianism. It is vital to remember that it is America that generates the most media and the most material concerning its righteous intentions as a God-Loving country – yet as an agent par excellence of the Magian, and as historical records show, has always been ready to throw its own to the wolves, treating its populace and other nations populace's with contempt and as expendable.

While the most vocal about the Human Rights abuses in other countries, the Superpower hypocritically engenders all of these abuses by selectively ignoring or threatening to 'help' countries with its military presence. In regard to Human Rights Abuses: most recently, David Hicks recently served six years in a detention centre in Guantanamo Bay (which then changed its name to the frightening name: Camp X-Ray) – and was only reluctantly released by the US after their illegal detainment of his person without charge. He was required as a condition of his release to sign an affidavit that he would never speak of his experiences during his illegal internment.

Of the recent conspiracy of paranoia created by the Magian, citing the attacks of 9/11 as a farce generated and inflicted on its own people via its own agency where evidence lies in mentioning that there was no wreckage found of the plane that supposedly smashed into the pentagon; that the plane that crashed into the twin towers was identified by military experts as not being a Boeing or passenger plane; that images of the plane show the plane was clearly carrying an incendiary device underneath its hull whereupon a brilliant flash issued just prior to the plane smashing into the building and detonating said device; that the manner in which the floors collapsed directly down flies in the face of all technical principles according to experts in construction; that Jewish workers were contacted and told not to attend work that day; that Bush knew of the fourth plane before it was publicised; that no trace of Osama Bin Laden has ever been found; and that America desired an intensified police-state grip over the world due to its failing propaganda of control via its "War on Drugs", a switch to a "War on Terror" was instigated with the result that the global focus of Western humanity has become self-policing, paranoid and dangerously unstable in its rational, logical thinking, due to being paralysed and shocked with fear and terror of terror.)

That faith and trust is given to America's authority over the events of World War II, let alone the 80 other countries into which it has illegally interred itself and its military forces is an indictment of the stupidity and gullibility of the human race and a triumphant tribute to the power of media, propaganda and fear to control a populace and direct its thoughts and interpretations of events by a government. Thus one can understand that the importance given to the loss of emphasis on a rational analysis of observable facts to allow a non-political examination of any emotionally charged event, or more accurately, any event charged with emotion; and the corresponding dilution of Science that has become increasingly theoretical and driven by the directives of the current politic to dictate its findings; as argued by Myatt – impacts considerably when one allows common-sense and detached analysis of the facts to be over-ridden by emotional sensitivity engendered by careful manipulation and control of facts controlling how an event is perceived, not how it was. Or rather, that the detachment necessary to divine truth has become a morally twisted engagement where it is wrong to perceive one's own opinion of the facts as they stand and contradict the authority of the Authority.

This is not to say that Hitler or Hussein were not hard men that caused atrocity – but that America is more guilty a party for its dishonesty and deception in its role in these wars and of the charges it has laid against others with its moral tribunal of 'War Crimes' than any of the countries and regimes it has persecuted and bastardised with its Jewry. Moreover that America, despite its trickery to conceal its hideous appetites for death and destruction and be seen as exempt from committing such atrocities as it accuses other of, by its own populace and by the world – is irrevocably guilty of not just one holocaust, but of hundreds and has (and is) continually moving from one campaign of deception to another to hide its atrocities just as it is doing now and will always continue to do until it is destroyed, or destroys everyone and everything.

America is the national equivalent of the personified Psychopath – a psychopath that knows only one thing, its own one-eyed Weltanschauung. America is the spoilt child of the West whose vicious, relentless, remorseless behaviour is like that of the small boy caught with his hand in the jellybean jar who denies all the evidence of wrongdoing despite the truths evident. viz, an immature, dangerous, and Inquisitorial Empire. Anyone faced with this evidence unable to make a rational deduction without political pressure or sentimental moralism as to the involvement of America in 9/11 and its propagation of the Holocaust narrative to detract from its own global enduring atrocity, is Magian and Our Enemy.

ARE THE MAGI, SINISTER?

Perception is hampered by faulty assumptions. They carry one along so far before they begin to be damaging – i.e. claiming a division between Magi and Sinister forces serves as a political motivator to create fanatics – a power required in all wars. For the human brain is all too ready to find an enemy – it finds them everywhere – but to join with others in hating an enemy – it loves little more. Then the shadow can come out to play – and humans, are mostly shadow.

Let's examine a common belief. For example, the concept of the Sinister vs the Magi. The Sinister, meaning those who ally themselves on the LHP with some duty, calling, force, intent or some such power, philosophy, world view, to fight against 'Mundanes' 'Christians' 'Magian' etc is what is known as Polemics; or setting one side against another in direct opposition. This is an ancient tactic which originated with Christians attacking other Christians. An Aeon ago they could not agree on how to read, interpret or understand the Scriptures, [An Open Canon] resulting in all manner of groups and sects promoting their own view. To seize a more unified Power as the Church it was necessary to narrow how exactly the Scriptures were to be understood and who by. Many Christian aggressors began to refer to the other Christian sects as Hairesis or Heretics; those who did not follow the TRUE FAITH. The True Faith of course, being the concept of a Closed Canon where Clergy would be the only ones allowed to interpret scripture for the masses and anyone who had an alternate view, was a devil worshipper or heretic. Amidst such propaganda there was mentioned the word Gnosis. Over time this suggestion of a way in fragmented, non-particular terms and in no way suggestive of anything more, was compounded into 'Gnosticism' over centuries of accumulated assumptions, claims and errors – resulting in a belief in it now, as a Category that existed with its own teachings, way of life, anti-cosmic notions of the demiurge and many other fantastic inventions which have absolutely no grounding in the literature from which they are taken, including the Nag Hammadi Scrolls.

Any division into us and them is therefore at its core a repetition of this practice, an ancient Christian device.

Let us consider the Empires stretching the globe – and, for those of us on Facebook and such the endless atrocities people try to call our attention to; mining the rain forest, blood diamonds, ecological disasters, Chernobyl, toxins in water supplies, paedophiles who are judges, lawyers; weapons of mass destruction, war crimes, injustices and the endless, endless, endless deluge of nasty, brutal, suffering inflicted upon human beings by other humans, by corporations, govts, militias. None of which ever take responsibility for their own role in the conflict – but blame it on the enemy.

Without question: there is No force on Earth MORE Sinister than the Magi. It is a mentality enshrined in the human skull to be a hypocrite. Everything they do with a smile they do with a knife behind their back. The sweetest, most altruistic appearances conceal rivers of blood, greed, agenda and violence. Trade-offs for lives, for profit, for gain, for fun. The pretence that they are not committing these acts and the puppet show that they carry on to convince us of their good intentions, of their clear conscience, of their ignorance of the destruction occurring and the shifting of blame to some lesser entity less wealthy and powerful to bear the brunt – is perhaps the most Sinister act a human can do – we know underneath they are guilty but nothing can touch them. For all appearances – they are clean, humanitarian or saints. Legally nothing can be done, spiritually nothing can be done.

The Sinister, is a much vaunted but highly unstable appellation to describe a division of world forces and human mentalities – for the Magi are quintessentially Sinister, whilst the Sinister are quintessentially Dexter. And yet, the fact many refuse to face is that we are equal parts one and the other. There is no division between Sinister and Magi. The Magi are more Sinister than the Sinister – they are more Left Hand Path than the Left Hand Path. They are on top – we are on the bottom. They have the power – we have the complaints...

IN ABSURDUM

Sanity is to a large degree measured by social productiveness. The intensity of a selfish separation from the consensus causes a corresponding ratio of difficulty in disguising it from others. As an individual tries to force reality to bend to match their own view [or to see it clearly without distortion], the values they uphold come into conflict with the values of various authorities. If the view held is extreme, it becomes recognised by the consensus collective that the individual is incapable of performing a productive role in maintaining the Artifice/Society – and that individual is then warned to fall in line, treated to restore 'sanity', or deemed mad and incarcerated by physical and/or chemical imprisonment. Once the pursuit and living of an independent view by an individual reaches a point where it becomes disruptive to society, select boards of authority may remove the individuals (illusory) status of social equality and classify them as mentally fragile, sick or insane. A Medical Board for example, is seen as having tremendous power and once a member of its staff has pronounced a mentally disturbed edict, it is extremely difficult to escape the system set up to enmesh that individual in Hospitalisation, Pharmaceutical drugs, and the taking away of their right to protest as an 'equal' member of society by the persuasion of others to alter schemata (or idea of) the individual in question and agree with the official declaration of insanity.

It should be remembered that the world is a bloody and unfair place largely because it is so very big. When people spend their lives entrenched in a very small perspective that slice of perspective becomes all they know or want to know. It is easy to write someone off if you meet them once and know you don't have to deal with them again, if you don't have to experience the consequences of your diagnosis, if there is something in it for you such as a promotion, or if you are well-paid, apathetic and bored in a job with long hours and its "your job" to assess people in a medical or psycho-therapeutic way. However, for all the good intentions of the Medical Associations we must keep in mind that they are much like the Church: plagued with corrupt individuals. In the same way the Church set itself up to show who was right and who was wrong, who was Christian and who was Satanic; the Medical Board offers a similar illusion of authority; who is mad and who is not, who requires treatment and who is healthy. These types of institution are at the heart of madness; simply successful in bringing their will to power to power at the expense of other wills.

But responsibility begins at home. We go to them, handing our power to strangers and expecting them to play a role – in most cases they know as little as we do about our perceived illness. Why do we hand our power to these people? Reality seems simple because we are all equally mad. But mad or sane, no-one will care, as long as roughly, you fit in and agree to the values of the society you live in. Notorious serial killers are examples of human perfection of the mode of the Chameleon. In such a practice the social patterns for acting 'good' are memorised and performed on the basis of prediction as though inserting expected numbers into known equations. This guise of being just like everyone [Qv. Shrencing] else helps deflect suspicion whilst the destructive capabilities of the beast are released in a separate and to the individual 'valid/true' paradigm. And in this respect, serial killers reveal the Artifice for what it is. If sanity is measured by social productiveness, then the notorious serial killer is the pinnacle of sane. They are well-spoken and polite, often good-looking, often charismatic, hold down a job, are often married, sometimes have kids, and are considered to be friendly unassuming people (sometimes a little strange, but harmless) by most people who know them. When they kill, releasing the Beast in uncontrolled fashion, they are expressing a base element of natural desire – as persons with actions and behaviour definitive of sane this is telling of the sane thing to do, i.e. act naturally and express the unconscious urge.

Highly-intelligent and sane, notorious Serial Killers illustrate the shortcomings of the Artifice, by excelling at using it to fulfil raw instincts. And while the Serial Killer takes lives, other yet socially sanctioned and legalised Serial-Types such as Lawyers, News Presenters, Priests, and Bank Managers perform in a similar fashion as the Serial Killer. However unlike the serial killer, the actions of these four types are often unknown to them outside of their work and are usually performed in a banal manner with no intention of evil: seen as "just doing their job".

All human beings use deceptive means to accomplish their goals. We disguise our motives under social cliches of selfless-ness, kindness, concern, etc and we generally believe that we are what we say we are. But when I say we, I mean the Ego. The Ego is the part of us that needs to believe that in order to live up to its standards of our "I" and our self-image. The other parts of us are usually silent in the face of the Ego- in most cases because they are unconscious, but in the cases where we are consciously aware of our deception because the Ego gets very upset when it is revealed that its beliefs are not genuine. The fact is that the Ego is one function of many that tends to be over-relied on and its perception (by virtue of being limited to one scope) is not truth.

If I asked who is more likely to be deemed crazy, a Bank Manager or a Tarot Reader; you are probably likely to say Bank Manager because the phrasing of the question seems like a trick and you are resisting the lure. However, “common-sense” will tell us that we are more likely to believe a Tarot Reader will be perceived as crazy over a Bank Manager. But why? If it is because Tarot Reading involves occult elements, is less than scientific and offers spurious satisfaction to the desperate or gullible: why does it seem less crazy for Bank managers to involve themselves with Usury (the magical creation of new paper or electronic money out of thin air by Banks that leads people into debt) Economics or working with numbers? The handling of money is quintessentially far more occult than Tarot. Bank Managers seem professional, normal, even essential members of our society but very few people actually know the true hideous power of economic theory, realise it is far more destructive than Christianity has ever been, or even remember how to question the status quo of what is crazy. And I say ‘remember’ tongue-in-cheek, because you cannot remember if you are not taught, and teaching the actual applications of the world is not what Schools or Educational Institutions do.

A Bank Manager really only differs from the Tarot Reader in their presentation of occult mystique, and because they tend to give us something more tangible – and with our loss of faith in the spiritual, the solid takes on a greater meaning in our lives. Consider the process of a Tarot Reading or Bank Appointment. You come in and are impressed by the setting; it seems professional and mysterious (or “professional and legitimate” in bank terms) and you sit down to discuss what you want. The Reader/Manager does a reading for you and tells you that you may encounter some hardships in the next few months but your future will be financially secure and you may even be rich. They then ask you for a fee for performing the reading and because you feel secure and happy being told ambiguities you pay them. With the Tarot Reading, the fee ends when you leave the room. But with the Bank Manager you take a small fee with you called ‘interest’ and it grows and grows every day until you pay it back at huge extra expense, sometimes multiple times what you originally borrowed. Or you succumb to debt and lose everything: like magic.

Does putting people into debt for a job seem respectable or does it seem greedy, cold, and somewhat crazy? And what is crazy? Does buying endless possessions made at an ever cheaper and cheaper rate at someone else's misery and expense, i.e. Materialism, the highest current goal in life for millions of people, seem rational or crazy? Whatever your answer, we forget because we're only here for a short amount of time that life has gone on before us in many different ways with many different types of end goal. We also tend to assume or be led to believe that the time we are born into is the most enlightened and up-to-date, and that its rules and strange geometry are perfectly normal. Except for those persons who continually regress to re-enactment of a frozen phase of time such as the 70's, adopting the values and icons of that age or some other favourable past-phantasm to escape from the forms of immediate madness. It's this 'chrono-centrism' or 'Being In Time' that thwarts most attempts by people to step out of the Matrix.

Tarot Reading is tolerated as semi-respectable in the day I live after thousands of years of persecution simply because of its value to the current goal of society, i.e. it is marketable. Almost everything that is, has been – especially the phantasms of the past with old icons re-hashed or re-presented. All this buying and selling leaves little time for asking some very dangerous and important questions. All societies move through time changing and being possessed by different goals for that society to live up to. In this year 2007, I believe that the Australian as well as American society are in the mid-stages of a destructive phase of the Virtue of Absurdity. It is now increasing at a phenomenal rate with a non-questioning compliance of the way things are leading people to lose the power of rationalisation, be trapped in the modes currently holding our society in thrall, and become completely mad in their aims and goals and values.

The escalation of madness can be seen leaving the quiet isolated solitude of private homes and minds and emerging as a strain of "anti-sub-culture". Wit, Sarcasm, and quintessential humour – the most powerful weapon in the existence of our race for remaining sane by being able to laugh at the absurdity of the world is being eroded as a by-product of Capitalism. Generally, because of the death of God, and because of the loss of direction and purpose in life as a psychological or spiritual quest for wholeness shouted down in previous decades and taken over by Marketing and Media powers, particularly in the 90's and into the millennium, new generations are not forgetting the past, but are being herded forward so rapidly into the Machine, that there is no past for them. Children are born sociopaths – the subsequent moulding of them is important for authorities to maintain control but control means Order, Order means memory, and the Past is about to become forgotten; a victim of Ideicide.

The very structures of grammar and shared meaning are now being attacked as a form of entertainment. The sudden emergence of shows, comments, and actions that are given value because of their random departure from the normal procedure is indicative of a growing race of sociopaths; person's who can imitate emotional transactions and modes, but not actually feel or honour them; in other words, psychotic chameleons. This lack of emphasis on consistency in word and action [As per Corporate/Multi-National Business practices] in the phases of formative behaviour is leading society toward a competition of psychopaths and the gateway of the absurd.

As it becomes increasingly popular to be absurd, society is arming a time-bomb. The nature of absurdity is to out-do itself [drop out of its own geometry] and we will see a very bloody and bizarre expulsion of the repressed traumas, genetic and inherent by members of the human race in the near and distant future. It will differ markedly, in that it will be marketed, and made popular. While our generation may see it as escapism or something that is controlled – subsequent generations born into it will not possess this cynical detachment. They will know it as the most enlightened and up-to-date moment in time and be affected by its ethos, accordingly.

This can already be seen in the rabid cynicism of humour particularly in departing from old ingrained methods and principles of comedy, and the psychopathic way in which individuals talk to one another (the escalation of rudeness). The appearance of movies that break the rules of modern cinema; doing away with predictable endings, and showing new levels of gore and sadistic brutality will become the new norm of media for the coming generations of already child-like parents – and this generation will live entirely for the Future. The Past will be severed, and we can expect to see the new messages from the media coming through particularly in 'Cartoons' that continually illustrate a new response to logical inferences and questions as a platform to launch an attack and ridicule a persons attempt to make a solid logical case from past inferences or previous experience.

What began with “that’s so 5 minutes ago” originates from a technologically based scorn for the Past, and much like the Governmental/Papal/State fixation with the erasure and re-writing of History – the Past is becoming an un-pleasantry to be avoided at all costs with people looking forward only to the next moment when they are immersed in a new wave of technology that supersedes the previous.

Unconsciously, our Western Ethos has entered a new temporary mode with many people unaware that the amount of access to Technology, has supplanted Racism as a form of discrimination. It is already apparent that a division of those that have the latest and greatest and those that have the last model being urged to keep up or lose favour among their peers is occurring. The type of pressure others are placing on their family and friends to stay “Technic” is not far away from the pressures of Religious factions on their members to conform – and is in fact more overt. And it is not out of concern for the latest gadgets that drives this pressure – it is the magic mirror of “Philosophedron” that has possessed people – with people unconsciously imitating and psychically rebounding (every action has an equal and opposite reaction) off the environment in which they live and becoming mouthpieces for the Corporations that sell the technology. This is a form of mind-control that is inherently psychopathic and revelatory of a sinister and sadistic brutality to self-market to ones peer group with the threat of sanctions of exclusion, ridicule, and even violence if said peers do not obtain said technology.

And this aggressive self-marketing serves one main purpose; identical to the fear of Christians and other religious sects to indoctrinate others so that their own uncertainty and will to power can be validated by creating supporters in the same uncertain psychological boat; the self-marketer needs reassurance that the new toys are worth the money they paid in terms of gaining or maintaining status. Hence the undercurrent of sadism that leads the self-marketer to force others to join them in buying the same goods, because then those around him will not have the chance to use their money to buy an even later model, and the self-marketers status remains static.

It should be noted that the psychopathic nature of Corporations, as faceless, ruthless packs of unaccountable persons is being copied in the streets. Where I live groups of up to five hundred youths are gathering together on a regular basis. The manner in which such large groups manage to cohere is a fascinating study of the characteristics of the Alpha-Male and revelatory insights into how such young Alpha-Males are forming these large chains of sycophancy. Such men are the rising Magian envoys of the future and for this reason study of their organic geometry is important for Black Magicians. Cowardice, Leadership, Mediocrity and Despair are some of the key characteristics of such large groups that will be touched on in a later work. But it is worth mentioning that I raise this point because the larger the group of people forming groups, the greater the pressure to conform technically.

On that note, the trend of the Alpha-Male as masculine, strong, tough, is being subsumed and undercut by the sadist that actively seeks ways to attack traditional grammar and the structure of forms in a bid to be the “Alpha-Cynic”. The Alpha-Cynic will come to replace the Alpha-Male because former attributes of genetic endowment will lose their importance with both sexes able to compete to be cynical on an equal footing. Generic Masculinity of the pursuit of bodily perfection will be viewed like all other forms that require discipline, physical exertion, or seriousness: laughable.

It will become an end goal for people to be absurd; media will actively encourage it, peers will promote it, and authorities firmly entrenched in their positions will be forced to use ever more excessive measures to control mad, dangerous, and unpredictable populaces. In small doses this is already happening. People are being pushed faster and harder by Capitalism into trying to do the impossible merely to survive by means of making money; bombarded with conflict about being politically correct, being a good provider, doing what they want with life, living up to values of society, living up to the expectations of others and their own, all the while beaten into mental and physical submission by fear guilt and apathy until they eventually break. The Police, Science, and the Military are all institutions that require the predictable behaviour of human beings and events in order to function as a cohesive group. If no-one is doing what they “ought to be” procedures, laws, principals mean nothing and break down – and with that break down the reign of Capitalism will come to an end, replaced by its end product, Anti-ism.

DIALOGUES, 1 of 10,000

+O+ From the Egyptian thread: Mvim. Black +O+

A magical current becomes dangerous when one is personally engaged therewith. It gives power to one but it demands one's energy in exchange, so when one decides to deviate from the current one is involved in, one may expect a certain resistance on the part of that current. I do agree with you, RA, as regards the 9 angles, but as regards the Illuminates of Thanateros neither you, nor Owy have sworn any personal word of loyalty to their pact – of course, their egregore guards their stuff but the magical harm it could render to you, couldn't be the same as that you could expect from the 9 angles therewith you have been personally involved or engaged.

+O+ Agreed – I only give an example of a magical attack I have experienced – yet the O9's current has been far more treacherous to my health and sanity given how attached I have been to it. My Work continues and my loyalty remains but to that which I originally swore fealty – to THEM – and not to human forces and cults who claim to own them. +O+

These matters are neither to be overestimated, nor underestimated. Moreover, the egregore of a group consisting of treacherous and untrustworthy individuals couldn't be of great power though it could harm.

+O+ The key tenets of this group are deviations from the O9's egregore especially re-designed in the face of bad experiences with the O9's current, present or expected over the course of decades of involvement. These include the elements of Sinister Solidarity, Empathy, Sympathy, Synchronicity and the Sinister – and herewith is meant the Sinister as it is in all its forms not merely the narrow bridges of Long extended from his Ivory Tower. Despite screaming it was not til it was blue in the face, the O9 became dogmatic; a mirror-image of the Church with a Maniac High Priest, slavish Acolytes bullied into submission with the promise of secrets dangled on a stick or a selection of reprobates seeking license for depravity with the promotion of predatory practices against everyone from children to the elderly... to its own kind. Yet it, my, our journey with O9 has highlighted a great many important factors that have shaped this Temple and its attitude and direction, toward each other, toward others, toward the Work. Of course – this is only my opinion based on how I see it. We do differ, from the forerunners of Satanism and from the contemporary styles, temples, groups and orders through hard work and diligence we have been able to cohere a space for our Selves that is conducive to free trade of ideas and conversation but without internecine struggles. I believe this, is possible, due to our group formation, and that by who makes up the Temple we have managed to avoid hubris this far by being there for each other to talk sense, discuss options, talk freely, remind, reflect or steer one another away from the rocks. Rocks such as power going to one's head, internal strife, schisms, personal tragedy, mistrust, making war, losing our way, forgetting where we came from, arrogance, anger, fear, betrayal amid a sea of others have been so far successfully navigated around to keep this Temple intact. It has attained and kept an integrity about itself for the way it conducts its affairs internally and externally and has garnered support across the globe from many corners and its written works have spread far and wide. This is not just from all our hard work on Ourselves and our desire to reach beyond the traditional way of being human and going about our business as Undividuals – but perhaps a reward for doing a will of the Cosmos. By listening to the Forces of THEM we have been riding a wave of synchronicity where our experiments and explorations are leading us further out into the deep black sea of the Unknown – where we can magically submerge our individual lives into the aether, into the abyss, and deep into the consciousness of a great number of people as we Change things. We began/begin with ourselves and for that THEY seem grateful – more willing to impart their secrets and the genius geometry of the world.

That we also have a limited charter of time to be the Temple of THEM is deliberate – 24 years from now we should bow out gracefully and let the Temple such as it was dissolve – for its form is temporary, while its voice endures forever, to be resurrected as others Remember in their lifetimes that connexion we have begun to rebuild a bridge too. 24 years from now we will look back on our achievements perhaps as the young Illuminati I have on occasion envisioned; I will be 58. There are things we simply cannot force; things beyond our control until we attain certain positions or powers; but we needn't exhaust ourselves and our lives trying to make some New World Order of Sorcery happen; we are voices of the a-causal – it speaks through us and to us; and if it is meant to be; synchronicity will show us the way. What really matters is that, plainly put, we are good to each other and rise together. The O9 drawls on about Sinister honour but has it practiced it? No. It has systematically driven away all of its friends and those who cared for it or contributed to it with its hostile arrogance and rudeness.

The Temple of THEM may have sprung from the O9 but it was more a reaction than a reflexion; twisting free since its inception, for while sometimes the bad example is a good example; there was and is more to all of us that binds us than our mere shared background in that cult. There is honour here – there is integrity – and there is a flowing with what is and a respectful presencing and intuition of what is supposed to be. Magically – We each have our own speciality – whether form, magic, sorcery; whatever it may be we are true to our Wyrds; we all have a rare integrity and loyalty that brought us together because there was no one else like us. And now we share a

Home, and the Great Work. And while things do change, tragedies strike, entropy stalks, shit happens – no-one can take away what we've already done to halt the slide of thousands of people into Magian mediocrity with our works, our advice and our presence. Our group is small but we are enough. We are perhaps Enough precisely because our group is small. But we are THEM, and we are a force to be reckoned with. Let us proceed one day, one month, one year at a time, forward. +O+

On the other hand, order never has a total control over chaos – otherwise life could be impossible. The resistance of any magical current one has been involved with and decided to deviate from, is what tempers one's will on the Left Hand Path, since the LHP is the very individual path after all. Those who write rules thereon should know that they are just trying to impose their own will on the others. If they prove strong enough to succeed in this, that's okay, but they should never forget that sooner or later they may meet their match and get outplayed, and very often that will be some fool who cares little about their great power and wisdom. That's the meaning of the Fool in the Tarot.

+O+ Merely by understanding such occult lessons exist and prevail we may seek to avoid the embarrassment of repeating them – there appear to be very few people who actively consciously understand these laws unto themselves and the consequences of certain actions such as the destructive entrance of hubris. Most occult groups had a leader who separated themselves from the other, who ceased to listen to advice, and whose concerns were not a bridge to the conscious and unconscious to make sense thereof of the secret archetypal journey and the inner workings of the psychology, shadow, animus and forms of the world – but to sit on a throne of gold ruling within a demented psychosis, silencing advisers, opposition and themselves and leading to a less than dignified collapse. We can only devise so many safeguards, and intuit so many possibly bad or tragic moves to make in our chess game; but I think we are doing very well six years in, with a solid foundation built and a reputation achieved. These are both hard things to create from nothing – Oto Anorha #28 was full of wishes and stressed the difficulty of making something new – but I believe such wishful even grandiose statements have been vindicated. +O+

As for the magical defence of this present issue of the Temple of Them, it's a matter worthy to be discussed by all. I could say certain things which concern my own interests in this present issue of THEM, and if it happens that they coincide with those of other members, that would be the best. I'm aware of the fact that everybody is different and unique, as it should be, but on the other hand, I'm interested in the resemblances and similarities rather than in the differences which, as I said, are a fact, and should be a fact.

+O+ I should like to continue pushing the formation of the Black Glyph Society and achieve an independent wealth or at least a stable income resource for each member of THEM. I think finance is not to be underestimated in our aims. +O+

Do you know the story about the eagle, the crab, and the pike who tried to draw a cart – each one in its own unique way? Of course, magic is expected to do the impossible. I'm just sharing certain thoughts and ideas. The last one of my current thoughts I would like to share without intending to be offensive to anybody here, is that I tend to be sceptical concerning the real magical efficiency of any group whose members are under their 30-ties, however intelligent they might be. There is a biological matrix which is extremely difficult to be overcome by ambitions to prove oneself only. And this concerns more the males rather than the females.

+O+ You possess that view because you have the privilege of so much hindsight, a panorama of time and experience some of us, myself included have only achieved smaller windows into; it is singularly amazing to me to look back on my writing when I was 12, 21, 28 and today and see the vast differences in style, verbosity, grammar, ideology, conception, content, topic, passion, intensity, colour, emotion – with writings in the style of Shakespeare, serial killer, playwright, poet, sceptic, believer, author, and god knows how many thousands of pages and hundreds of drawings – and yet in all of it I still spy a kernel of my Self – sometimes hidden, but enduring all, beneath the surface;- some wise old man mentality or old spirit peeking through the stupid, the naive, the child, the convictions with a knowing smile – waiting to be Me, today. And no doubt waiting to be Me, tomorrow. 10, 20, 30 years from now I suspect he will still be there and waiting for me to catch up. Yet what is magic? If it is the ability to change events – the Temple of THEM was nothing a few years ago – not by name or nature – and now its works and words, ideas and advice are scattered across the globe in 50+ publications, and hundreds of manuscripts, posts and people. We are known and respected and our current, so different from others, has delighted and entranced many people – taught them a thing or two also – and all this, with mere forms, names, titles, pictures, words from a computer or two, carefully managed and nurtured into the Temple of THEM today – for not a few, a real place of real power. This took time, lots of it, and the assistance of many people under 30, including myself – and, yet, Ush, now 33, only now do I feel I have the experience to really write from an advantageous or experienced position. I never meant to write so many books – and I wrote them pretty young – there are things I see in those books and texts now I would dearly love to change or update – that I didn't see before. But they have to stay the way they are – they're snapshots of the way it was or seemed to be. So – I both agree with you, and somewhat disagree with you on the under 30's thing. I'm not offended by what you said – I merely think we all fought to be here, and a lot of people over 30 are as useless as any under 30. It's our individual characters that have brought us here and shaped this Temple – whether we be young or old – age shall not weary us. +O+

Now about the ideas I would like to share: About the linear historical time – the further from the so called zero year wherein the birth of the Nazarene is supposed to have taken place, the better. That's why my research is back to the historic Bronze Age when humanity was still free from the Magian plague. However, the premises for this fall of humanity into the Magian Aeon were present still in the end of the Bronze Age and the beginning of the Iron Age around the 1000 BCE. To say it with the terms of the Sorcery of Them, this historic passage marked the collective shift of the focus of awareness from the heart to the head. Of course, I don't view this shift as some fall from the ideal but it was a risky shift which caused a certain dis-balance when the connexion with THEM was lost, and this loss of balance was what gave rise to the subhuman Magian Aeon. I said the further from the conventional zero historic year (when the CE – the common era, or the vulgar era, or the Christian era began), the better, but it means as further in the past as in the future. We look for THEM from the future as well. Now it's 2012 CE when the Magianism isn't the same as it was in 1012 CE when the Dark Age in Europe was in full progress, but now it tends to unify all its forms into a global system. We are looking for some alternative by thinking about new archetypes.

+O+ The Alpha-Cynic has well and truly emerged into the world as predicted – but it's in its nice infancy, prior to the next stages which are more dangerous and where people try to outdo each other in the level of absurdity... that won't be a fun time at all... +O+

That's nice but we are also to try simultaneously connecting the non-Magian past with the non-Magian future.

+O+ I think this could be done with our Tarot – revive Sumerian images and such, use Non-semitic imagery and ideology, winding it into a contemporary restoration of certain ideas and heresies long forgotten or destroyed – second coming of Osiris for instance... the Great Flood of Sumer that the Ark stole... cards that help people Remember and tie ancient archetypes to new ones, skipping out the period of Magian Empire and Aeon concepts altogether... +O+

What happened 2012 BCE before that zero historic point of human fall? It was the time of the Sumerian Empire of Ur III dynasty – the first and the last time when that civilisation was unified, as well as the time of the Egyptian XI dynasty which unified Egypt into the Middle Kingdom. A lunar and a solar dynasty ruled the most developed civilisations of the world of that time. It was the time of deified rulers while still alive. But were these rulers really of THEM, or just willing to be of THEM to the extent of forgetting their biologic mortality? Who knew anything about biology then? Hadn't they another knowledge of the things of life, which was still the knowledge of the heart, something the today's scholars cannot perceive? When we see that distant epoch some 4024 years back from now through the eyes of scholars, we see nothing else than greedy for power megalomaniac rulers as materialistic as the present ones but with divine pretences in addition. That's not the correct approach for sorcerers, that's a magically incorrect approach.

If we are to understand were these rulers really of THEM, we are to identify with them personally, not with their subordinate people as the scholars unconsciously do. For example, the materialist Marxist scholars have always been interested in how the people's stomachs felt then, rather than in what the rulers' hearts felt then. They search for social iniquity only in order to prove the necessity of the social entropy called communism. The bourgeois scholars don't go much further except to count for the individual factor – again from the present rational and consumerist point of view projected onto the past with some count for “belief systems” as well. Even the mere historic factology arranged by such people is to be questioned and rethought since they offer the facts in the way their conditioned rationality demands. The atheist science needs to promulgate the idea that the monotheism was a higher concept than the polytheism in order to justify its own existence. And its existence is necessary not to serve any human progress except to better the systems of control and the weapons for mass killing – a tendency that started in the Iron Age yet. We are searching for traces of THEM in the past as we are searching for signals of THEM from the future. We are interested in knowing and manipulating the archetypes of the collective unconscious to say it psychologically. We have seen that from Crowley till nowadays the contemporary Western approach to magic changes its forms only. The concepts even vary for better as far as the LHP is concerned but the world stays generally unchanged. Everything could be reduced to psychology only and the rest is a question of visualisation mainly. In fact, there is no safe organic methodology in magic except the individual luck when applying it practically. Despite of all the smart theories the keys to emotionality which does all magic remain inaccessible. However, Constantin Stanislavski who made of acting a living science has given a method which may prove more adequate for the sorcerers than the occult approach. This method is “me in the given conditions”. If one pretends to be a magician, one shouldn't lack the imagination to put oneself in any given conditions, i.e., to give oneself certain conditions wherein to react by one's own emotionality. One's own emotionality in the given condition of the role is the key to acting, not by pretending to be someone else. The given conditions of a role, however, are not to be visualised, they are to be lived, so imagination doesn't equal visualisation.

+O+ That is how I create the images in Archetypia... it is very difficult, which is why there are only a few.... and how I mimic things. I'd like to know more about Stanislavskis method but I already have a mountain of texts I'm still reading through... so more is probably not a good idea. Anyway, I leave the floor to others to relate how they see THEM taking shape, their vision or hopes and dreams for this group, or predicting obstacles it might face. +O+

There is many a magician who pretend to be someone else during their rituals. Their all energy is wasted while pretending, with a poor effect in the end despite of their precise performance. In fact, there is no response from their emotionality. Either they haven't been themselves in their given conditions by pretending to be someone else during their ritual, or their very ritual hasn't provided "the given conditions" of the role they wanted to play. (When I'm saying "ritual" it doesn't necessarily means "ceremony". A ritual could be each non-mundane act – in fact, each act dedicated to magic is non-mundane, and thus a ritual.) Since this thread is dedicated to the Egyptian studies I will continue with Stanislavski's method of "me in the given conditions" but in the context of the Heliopolis cosmogony.

LOVECRAFT: FATHER OF THE TEMPLE OF THEM

Howard Phillips “H. P.” Lovecraft (August 20, 1890 – March 15, 1937) was an American author who achieved posthumous fame through his influential works of horror fiction. Virtually unknown and only published in pulp magazines before he died in poverty, he is now regarded as one of the most significant 20th-century authors in his genre.

From the upcoming Sinister Dialogues: “Any power reputation or wizardry that the Temple of THEM induce stems from the expressions that Lovecraft gave to the world and set in motion. Our very name, our descriptions of Tendrils, Tentacles, Forces from Outer Space and Inner Space, Dark Entities Sovereign Above Us, The Themonomicon, Angles, Weird Geometry, Strange Dimensions, Starry Rents, Ancient Gods; it’s all there. You get a sense of it through Ryan’s drawings and through the Thrasz, through the love of Black Magic and Illuminatism, through the types of rites to ancient forces employed and the lexicon of unique terms used to describe the world in a very different fashion. We are a living continuation of things that Lovecraft set in motion, we are his Shoggoths, his Yog-Sothoth and Azagthoth. If Carl Jung is the mother of our current, then Lovecraft is the father of THEM. As to whether we are ‘just’ original storytellers to provide a gateway to mysteries uncharted will also have to be evaluated by our visitors and no doubt each will differ in opinion. I think THEM have always been quintessentially Lovecraftian and acknowledging this after wandering the wasteland searching for our roots in awkward places can only solidify its edifice as a true work of art. Everything about Ryan’s illustrations and bearing screams Lovecraft. His literary/esoteric cultus the Temple of THEM is a direct descendant of the bloodline of thought and feeling that Lovecraft etched into being. Lovingly and loyally continued. Albeit in some fucking weird ways.”

JOINING THE TEMPLE OF THEM

“There are some matters that should be cleared up regarding your enquiry into the temple of THEM. The reading of Mvimaedivm is intended as a clue into the operation of THEM by myself and a limited number of others, who have experience in ONA magickal ritual and theory and practice, but do not seek the assistance or company of other individuals in that practice. Mvimaedivm, is essentially meant to show the reader that they do not need anyone to be powerful – that power does not come from ritual – and that there are many misconceptions held by people about the role and operation of Satanic groups.

Firstly – the readiness with which you approach weirdos such as ourselves, *s knowing our link with ONA doctrine and the ready acceptance of human sacrifice, is commendable in my eyes – you’re either fearless, or a little naive. The internet, while useful for communicating ideas and trading opinions, building and helping people with their questions and providing guidance of a sort from a distance – is not conducive to finding people with which to perform intimate and dangerous black magick with, and as such, we do not actively seek members for THEM in the traditional way, but via a mode that has become apparent to us of the magnetic powers of the Self. A person who has or actively seeks to abandon all distractions and can apprehend the world for what it is, by undertaking all necessary means to understand oneself and to become aware of the ego, the self, and the reunion of these two facets into a super-consciousness that bridges the total psyche and can access to greater levels of otherwise subliminal information fed from the psyche to the self via dreams, ones unconscious activities made conscious, art and other subtle signs etc – and can use that information to update, check, reprogram, and reshape oneself, propelling oneself toward the experiences that one’s psyche cries out for – to strengthen, weaken, and otherwise meld together an inhuman, or first human, being capable of feats of thought that dwarf and surpass the modes used by the times we live in that restrict, and impose morality, unnatural pressures, and blind obedience.

A person that has reached or seeks to reach such a mode, is in virtue of seeking after that mode, possessed of a natural dynamic that guides as though an invisible hand that person into the situations required for growth, or destruction – pending on the geometry that comprises that person’s psyche. Some persons are unable to delve into their psyche deeply enough to affect it, without suffering severe trauma, discomfort and psychological damage. But then there are those that overcome these restrictions of the bio-machinery set up by our ego, to discover, and then learn each facet deeply, until such time the ego and self work together, can be made congruent and actively useful in a conscious and directed way that allows the genius of dreams, of inspiration, of originality to surface as a greater manifestation of our acausal nature. Accordingly, such a person, needs no temple and has no need of ritual. Such a person could understand that all is illusion, but that at some point in time that person must become dark and self-possessed, choosing those holograms that Wyrld has shown to them to be the collection point where energies must be collected to give birth to creations that will propel their way onward even more...

Those persons who are self-possessed are of a very limited few – some, on the other side of the veil, the human veil, call them Satanists. THEM, comprised of a number of persons who are sinister and self-possessed, believe the empathy given to us as a group is of an extremely rare nature – it is an organic that has developed over an intense number of years, and is shared only by us. Each of us have had our brush with the ONA, some more deeply than others, but each walked away with an understanding that is not human. A part of that understanding is that others, who come to know the Self, will be part of a growing force that is the presence of the emerging tip of the Aeon of Fire. If these numbers grow; and because there is a half dozen of us with this empathy; we believe this is such a rarity that some kind of wyrdic propulsion is at hand for this to have happened in the first place, that this is the beginning of something hideous and membranous yet to reveal itself. One person, freed or attempting to free oneself from the chains of the current ethos, the tree of Wyrd, is a force within the human matrix, to be reckoned with, while six is a cohesion rarely seen, except perhaps realised by members of our peers, the ONA. The forces and circumstances that allow persons to cohere so strongly are rare to say the least and are often brought about by regular and intimate contact of a frequent basis – but that alone is not enough to give a group genuine solidarity.

Solidarity cannot be emphasised enough as a key factor in the creation of environments and persons that enable change – and is unfortunately one of the greatest energies missing from those that practice Satanism and other types of activity in modern times intended to alter what Is, to what could be. THEM believe, that true solidarity, void of petty interruptions and power-play that lead to entropy and destruction of a group – can only be achieved when each member is free from the possession of their ego, and has developed synchronous empathy with first, oneself, secondly, the acausal, and thirdly, the paradoxical significance and insignificance of the human being.

But there are considerations that perhaps you have not thought about closely. It is a wild, treacherous, and chaotic world – made even more so by the capriciousness of the human nature to be an ally, then an enemy. That THEM has managed to form a number of persons together that can be trusted implicitly by one another is a rare portent; indeed, not one of its members are in the throes of the ego that embodies power struggle, greed, dominance, fear, guilt, etc that is the destruction of many other groups that forge a bond. This is not a circle that can be entered by will or good intentions to assist in the Sinister War alone – it must be proven to US that you are united in yourself and your ego, with access to your subconscious genius, and this is something that cannot be faked. It is a current that is at the very darkest heart of the human condition that each of THEM have experienced. It requires the psyche to be totalized, something very few persons achieve in seventy years, let alone twenty, or for a person to desire above all other things, to realise that totalization.

Further, entry to our circle does not mean you get to rock up on a doorstep somewhere in Sydney to meet us and make our acquaintance. THEM operates like ONA, in cells. We do not know what many of our other members look like, where they are, or anything else about them – only their magickal experiences, prowess, and that they are devoid of ego – knowledge ascertained by speaking for a number of years very closely with these persons, and wisdom felt that there is no preteens, nothing to prove, no hidden agendas, no motivations that enter the script of these persons – a natural aura that would prove impossible to fake.

THEM can offer you guidance from our perspective regarding what you might need to experience or undertake, in order to grow and outgrow your current chains, again and again – but we cannot make your ego and your Self unite. Only you can do that – and that is why access to THEM is difficult. In fifteen years, only three persons have I ever met capable of working genuine heartfelt free black magick with, none of which I met on the internet. It is expected, that to keep our secrecy from being betrayed, that those of self will understand that they must achieve things by their own agency. I.e. They must form their own group with their own contacts to prevent a future spotlight falling on any other members of THEM. Also, performing highly personal rituals such as ONA, or even other magickal systems, for me and for my partner requires a level of empathy with each other very rarely seen in our lifetime, a powerful bond of trust and love that has taken many years and endured countless hardships successfully to achieve. We cannot imagine doing this with persons we do not know, or persons we come to know from the internet that, owing to the capriciousness of human nature, can be vindictive when things don't go their way, would potentially expose us and what we do, which is not limited to writing on internet forums and we are not willing to let that occur.

THEM could be said to work in twos, each of its members couples working together in absolute secret from the world, and in tandem with each other to help each other grow, expand consciousness, and develop understanding and precedent for those things we are experiencing in terms of messages from the body, the psyche, the interactions with the fixed world, that are new, and removed from those things experienced by the ego alone.

As more and more persons become self-possessed, it is expected, owing to what has been understood by the works of Jung, Nietzsche and others that have presented a similar meme, that these persons will, if sustained by other persons possessed of self, and not drowned out and extinguished by ego – solidify as a movement of persons whose thought processes, as per the star game aims, will be symbolic, that will strip the importance of the matrix, of employment, of commerce, of finance, of economics, of petty ego concerns and illusions that this is the only world, etc and seek to become first human, above and beyond all other concerns. When we say to become first human, we mean to unite the animal mind and the ego consciousness as one, dealing with the shadow, the anima, the animus and many other tangled knots that thwart growth into the full capacity of the human being – into a formidable shape shifter freed of the current of the aeon, and truly defy the matrix of form.

THEM has many meanings, it is not just indicative of a group of people, it also means Them, the Dark Gods, and their voice that issues through when the vein of the subconscious is tapped and directs the psyche beyond ego impulses and contrivances.

It is also the state that is experienced when Self and Ego become active as two powers that can direct one, and embodies the loss of identity that allows one to become a shape shifter – this separates US, from them...

It is also a term to denote someone who has truly built their own self-image devoid of others' expectations, that shrugs off the worlds and societies roles from friends, family etc as projections that aim determination of the will that others stand in awe and fear of. Furthermore, the word THEM is an appropriation of a Magian fear meme. For when people quote an unknowable source in relating a scientific or religious fact, they generalise and thus create an illusory authoritarian figure, "they" i.e. "they say that..." or "that's what they say" that builds on the fear felt by all in thrall to the matrix, that gives psychological and magickal credence to one's claim. We have stolen that "They..." and it has become "THEM".

FORM

THE COLD FACTS OF FORM AND MANIPULATION [1]

1. In 2007 it is estimated that those who sustain a roof over their head, are able to feed and clothe themselves and have the luxury of spare change in their wallet or purse make up the luckiest, richest 8% of the global population.

1.1 Basic amenities such as clean drinking water, hot water, a flushing toilet; for instance, or an infrastructure in place that ensures timely removal of rubbish, accurate charge for electricity, water or gas bills, or a competent police force that serve and protect – largely free of corruption, are almost unheard of in some 60% of the world's countries.

1.2 In Psychology/Criminology it is held that for the Serial Killer to have the time to commit murder they must have first satisfied the basic needs of food, water and shelter. Only after satisfying these important primary drives can extraneous luxuries of habit such as time to hunt for victims, stalking, etc be made and other activities explored or pursued.

1.3 The ability to sit down and write is only afforded from a secure environment that satisfies these important primary drives. Adolf Hitler was able to write 'Mein Kampf' whilst imprisoned because he was regularly fed, given water, and sheltered from the elements. His basic survival drives were taken care of allowing him to free up time to think and write that might otherwise have been taken up thinking about how hungry he was, trying to stay alive by eating whatever he could find, extract or somehow filter water and trying to find somewhere safe and warm to shelter or hide. Likewise, Anne Frank, was able to write her diary because her basic needs for food, water and shelter were met – ensuring her survival and the security to write.

2. Thus, because the average writer must first satisfy these drives, and satisfying these three drives is only achieved on a consistent basis by perhaps the top ten percent of the world's population bracket – writing is a luxury. Owning a computer, a typewriter, paper, pen, or other material possessions used to write places the writer even higher in the bracket; that of being wealthy enough to be able to afford them or live in a country where these materials are legal and accessible.

2.1 This does not apply in all cases however, the Marquis De Sade for instance, was denied any writing implements whatsoever after reports of his literature being smuggled out of prison were received. And although all his furniture and possessions were removed from his cell, he devised novel ways to continue to write – including using his own blood for ink and his finger for pen, and even used his own excrement. Nevertheless – without being fed, watered, [at least intermittently] or sheltered he would not have had the luxury of time to think about or pursue his writing.

2.2 Writers are thus, in comparison to the majority of the world's inhabitants, a creature afforded rare luxury. The fact that a writer has the time to sit down and write a text indicates that an environment is available to them that allows them to satisfy the three basic drives so they may write.

2.3 Anton LaVey was clearly able to satisfy the three basic urges and pen the Satanic Bible. Anton Long was also clearly able to satisfy the three same urges in order to write the voluminous material belonging to the ONA. And I, also required these three urges satisfied to afford me the security to write out these points.

3. If writing is not a decadence, then at the very least it is a luxury restricted to the very few able to afford it. The Internet, the access to which is grossly taken for granted, is populated solely by the verse of a decadent upper echelon comprising the lucky 8% of the world's inhabitants.

3.1 Of that verse, most is written by fed, watered, clothed and sheltered individuals able to have a hot shower, drink clean water, and dribble out the garbled nonsense and noise that such security affords them.

3.2 There are some individuals who do not waste the potential of the Internet to reach others or emit the written word – however the majority of useful thoughtful content hosted on the Internet is dominated by classical literature written well before the rise of the computer and the technological age.

3.3 Some writers are consciously aware of and grateful for their fortunate circumstances, realising that writing is a luxury that comes to less than 75% of the world's population. As a result, they take great care with the emission of their words; resisting the modern decadent preoccupation of dribbling shit like an unchanged baby.

4. These writers are extremely rare.

THE COLD FACTS OF FORM AND MANIPULATION [II]

1. The majority of human beings are ruled by Fear and Laziness.

1.2 Laziness is enshrined in the least necessary force required to achieve an aim or intent.

1.3 Fear is enshrined in the lack of strength to do more than the bare minimum. To resist the instinctual impetus to rise above the pathetic standard set by one's society for oneself or recognise one's inherent Choice to obey that standard stems from one's cowardice, ignorance, or fear.

1.4 If the Magi of the East ever possessed the power to psychologically/magically enslave people neither of these two terms would have been understood as being the name of the 'mechanism' or coercing force behind this enslavement. What occurred of necessity to enslave a race or populace was the human-tradition of Force by Physical Submission whether by massive Wars or individual or group Violence, thus was the world sorted into leaders and followers.

2. Aside from Physical Enforcement however, there no doubt grew an awareness of and development of the early science of persuasion/manipulation that involved Appealing to one Mass in order to assemble a Form large or powerful enough in mind, spirit and body to achieve the enslavement of another Mass of People.

2.1 The Magi, if they ever existed, would not have known what psychology was, or perhaps even used the term Magic. There is, despite the frantic and intellectual wishful thinking of scholars, almost no connexion to these people, their world, or their consciousness that relates to modern day people, their world, and their consciousness. The only connexion that exists is that these beings although termed 'human' were termed something else well before Latin terms became popular through Science – shared a roughly similar biological shape to modern day human-beings and perhaps, similar biological drives.

2.2 The Original Magi, are long dead. It is their ideas that have lived on. And the very same special effects that they are remembered for via the Bible are carried out today with almost no-one the wiser. It is still, for instance, common to enshrine some individual with a perceived aura of power and prestige by the mere bringing together of already influential people who are then seen taking said individual under their wing. And it is still common for a similar enshrinement to happen in an invisible, underground manner. This leads to an instant elevation of status by proxy. Thus did the Wise Men or three 'Magi' help make of Jesus a holy man and emperor. Thus did the Roman Army help make of Caesar a powerful leader of Rome. Thus did The Thule-Gelleschaft make of Adolf Hitler the Fuhrer of Nazi Germany.

2.3 The fixation on the personal [and thus aeonically irrelevant except as examples of a type of energetic manifestation] names, achievements, influences of an energetic manifestation in physical persons, physical lodges, deliberate movements, such as 'the Magi' or 'White Lodge' is to apprehend the appearance and not the essence.

2.4 The Appearance/Form/Myth of a "Magi" is sealed with the Western Ethos – remembered because of their role in the Bible – a Form that has now existed for thousands of years. Hence, by a combination of chance and deliberate enforcement, has their myth, by proxy of being associated with the Bible, remained intact and living and, invested with far more importance than is right or deserved. The ‘Magi’ are in Essence, just one mostly irrelevant example of the means to effect deliberate Change in a society. This is nothing new, and nothing magical, but it is and always has been an extremely effective method of controlling the Matrix. It is a practice that has been enshrined today no differently than it was thousands of years ago in the predecessors of the practice of which the Magi was one example in the Neo-Conservative methodology of the American New World Order.

3. All Mutinies, Coups, Revolutions, Dissents, Wars, Peace Marches, Demonstrations, Rallies, Groups, rely on the coercion of others over to one’s side. If one has the benefit of already having those on their side who lead and influence large numbers of important or tactically important persons, so much the better.

3.1 Modern Celebrityism is based on exactly these basic principles. Powerful Media persons take some talent-less hopeful and turn them into a ‘Star’ overnight via the co-operation of the Music Industry, the Marketing Machines, Tabloid and Magazine Moguls, and the Merchandising Industry in a joint collaboration that appeals to each of their interests to grow their influence and make money off a cashed-up susceptible [insert stupid] populace. This collaboration has been recently termed ‘Cronyism’ and means the behavioural habit of looking out for or showing preferential treatment of one’s close colleagues at the expense of all outsiders. There is nothing mystical or magical about this: it is as old as the first demonstration of greed [and how many have you seen in the last few days let alone the last 100,000 years?] and appeals to the base human desire, to ‘own stuff’.

3.2 This energetic meme of greed, of appealing to others to form a group to fulfil some aim or intent; whether it be a mutiny of the Bounty, or the Ultra-Violence of the Droogs, is the only essence of the Magi. An elaborate deception by thousands of persons over time slowly fostered this meme into a human body; the rumours and rampant speculation of which led to such notions as the ‘Illuminati’, ‘White Lodge’ etc. What is rarely understood by aspirants is that it is the artistic/romantic seed of these ideas at the level of rumours that influences some person or other to take it upon themselves to manifest such notions. Thus, in mere suggestion, lies the seed of manifestation. Whilst the energetic meme used by the ‘Magi’ is essentially a neutral magical force: those strong enough to be leaders [All Leaders] have used it and still use it, [IT being ‘Narrative Magic’] to formidable effect. Effect that is interpreted differently pending one’s spiritual division.

3.3 Satanic Mimesis of this meme involves using the meme to create a Sinisterion/Syndicate that eschews laziness and fear. Because the Magian have been so lax in the formulation of other magical applications owing to the astounding success of their prime agent – all structures built and maintained by the Magian are founded on this basic principle illustrated by the Magi and thus conform to an identical geometry at their essence. This has enabled, with the emergence of several black magical weapons previously veiled, the blueprint of the meme to be studied and a solution found to counter the meme involved.

3.4 Just as the Satanist ventures so very far before being tempted sorely to abandon their Quest to be like Satan to go over to the Other side, to God, to the Secret Samadhi and must reject Divinity to return to Earth as a Dark God – using the meme of the Magi to launch an abyssal/aeonic defensive – a structure that mimics those of the Magi must be constructed using intrinsically similar principles but within which writhe conscious tendrils/a twist that redirects the causal forms created by the meme into Sinister crystallizations.

4. Unless the meme being used to affect a re-orientation/ “de-stortion” of Magian control is consciously understood and the ‘de-storters’ self-protected/insulated against the Wyrd/Ethos of the Aeon the meme will be forced to grow in accordance with that Wyrd/Ethos and take the shape/form of a Magian structure.

4.1 Awareness of the vagaries of a meme and its inherent ability and effects and awareness of Aeonics, human vagaries and its historical/memetic record of behaviours is still not enough to insulate a form from Ethos distortion. There must be a supra-personal goal pursued above all individual concerns the implementation of which is designed to strike at the very heart of the Essence of the ‘Magi’ and not the appearance – this involves the collaboration of the extraordinary efforts by Undividuals or ‘first humans’ to solidify as a cohesive force to combat the meme without being seduced by the meme. There must [at this stage in history] be an aggressive, time-based momentum that appeals to the counter-meme characterised by Satan.

4.2 Seduction by an eventuation of Power would mean that the counter-meme has failed to overcome the distortion and become a distortion itself – and as a Representative of Opposition that would require being headed by Adepts – an incredibly powerful one capable of undermining a great many attempts by the Syndicate to reverse the damage owing to their extensive knowledge of the techniques and modalities of the Black Arts. In this event, those Undividuals would become extremely dangerous enemies to the Satanic Syndicate, to the Sinister, and to Change and should be sought out and promptly executed.

4.3 Overcoming Seduction cannot be achieved by a being possessed and driven by a human-centred geometry – geometry that is generally of the personal sphere. Only a life-centred geometrical possession enables the cold detachment necessary to chain the ego to the Undividualized Will of the Satanic Adept.

4.4 The majority of Great Leaders have been seduced by power, inevitably leading to Hubris and their decline.

5. The majority of Great Leaders fell into Hubris either by ignoring the warnings of imminent seduction and excess of power – or did not have the Undivuated support of Five other Satanic Adepts.

5.1 The Enshrinement of Fear and Laziness is the real essence of the Way that has come to be seen as a personalised ‘White Lodge’ or ‘Magian’ distortion comprised of a group of white magical masters acting in conspiracy. Most persons living that Way are, aeonically, as meaningless as those persons who live the meme of the Sinister Tradition which is equated to Wisdom and Striving – for both are superseded by the power of the memes that influence them.

5.2 Part of being an Adept is understanding and accepting these facts as a means to move forward.

THE COLD FACTS OF FORM AND MANIPULATION [III]

1. The Form of the Magi below the Abyss IS diametrically opposed to the Form of the Sinister.

1.1 The Form of the Magi after the Abyss is seen to utilise identical energetic leys/currents/memes as the Sinister. The two forms now swim interchangeable.

1.2 What then is the inherent difference between the Magi and the Sinister?

1.3 When apprehended in the context of ‘Form’ the inherent differences are different pending the Time and Culture and Individual Terminology.

1.4 When apprehended in the context of ‘Dialectic’ the inherent differences are unified and expressed below the Abyss via the ‘Narrative’ Appeal of Leaders.

2. Narrative is racially, spiritually, intellectually, magically, historically etc defined by Pre-time Events. Pre-Time events are events that have their roots in the past, well before the birth of an Individual and are generally never created from Original inspiration.

2.1 Pre-Time Events are taken/drawn from tradition, culture, heritage, legend, storytelling, and myth. Such Events are featured and referred to in holy books and guides with the express intention to help offer guidance to an individual/group/culture/civilisation and function as a Weltanschauung or World View of Order amid what is invariably referred to as an approximate of the Chaos and Confusion of the World.

2.2 Pre-Time Events are always based on a pre-nirvana or pre-paradise [I.e., Atlantis] that is enshrined in a “Golden Age” from which Humanity as a whole has fallen from and must attempt to return to by living a certain way and upholding certain values.

2.3 Some of these Events prefigure a race of Gods that existed before Men. As a man of ‘modern’ consciousness I do not doubt that Men interpreted Gods from what they saw. As a magician I do not doubt that there were Gods. A large majority of these Gods were atavistic/animalistic/monster type entities. Only when proto humanity became more aware of its own humanoid form did such Gods begin to take on an appearance more like men.

2.4 It is inevitably a previous Form that is lived by an Individual and previous forms on which they base their way of living. Partly due to the communal system of peers, parents, authorities or state for instance, the individual builds a strong relationship with Forms tied to and rooted in the Past – especially, Pre-Time Events. Although at the time these Forms are learnt, they may seem to be rooted in the Present from the individual’s point of view.

3. The Origin of Narrative appears to have arisen of its own accord – yet we may deduce that it occurred between the inception of Original Chaos – and the faculties of Interpretation that led to the rudiments of the early Matrix that led to symbols/idols and group worship of a Form.

3.1 The current personal embodiment of the Magian wishes the ability for these kinds of observations to be forgotten so they may maintain their Status Quo in stasis.

3.2 The Sinister wish these observations to be considered with the full gravity they deserve as they speak of the undercurrents of what is really there before our eyes, viz. Geometry, and reduces the overwhelming diversity and glamour of the world into the context of Forms. This reduction divests the Magian of the protection of an impossibly complex network of things to be considered in any contemplation and places them in a simple context of biological/cerebral evolution, effectively stripping semantics down to the bone and removing the labyrinth of magical mystique that hides their own Origin in much the same way a magic trick is revealed to the magician’s audience.

3.3 From the evidence of the manner in which we can observe today: that the fetus forms in the womb, the brains and synapses knit together, the bones solidify and the teeth, nails and hair begin to sprout, and the passage of an infant from a helpless baby into a wobbly toddler with stilted speech into a relatively articulate adult human being THEM believe that there is strong evidence for man's foundation in a system of biological evolution. Yet makes no assumptions as to the state of Life or existence of non-human entities prior to the Original Act of Staring into the Abyss.

3.4 The behaviour of certain men is what has come to be defined as the Magian, from all the evidence of biology/anthropology afforded to us today, arose, after, the Original Chaos. It is unlikely that the concept of 'Magi' on which many modern-day practitioners gleefully project their Shadow – were born with a malevolent streak to control. The Magian utility of Form to control could not have eventuated at least until Physical Violence was discovered: Chance let a being perform some unique display that engendered the awe/fear of others: or some means of communication was devised and made more sophisticated over time to share Interpretation.: and enjoyment was derived from the Abuse of these. The early Sinisterion logically evolved side by side with what would become the Magian and probably differed from them only in their opinion as regarded the direction of the Narrative gleaned from this abuse.

4. THEM hold – the Essence of the condition understood as “the Sinister” existed before men.

4.1 THEM hold – the Essence of what is understood as “Satan” / that current of Original Chaos of which “Satan” is only a recent extension, existed before Form and prior to Men as an antediluvian Sacred Geometry.

4.2 The Abyss came First. Second, the Sinister. Third, the Magian. I.e., Shock and Awe and the Staring into the Abyss. The development of a human being and its interaction with the world. The interpretation of the world.

4.3 The rudimentary forms of the Magian and the Sinister co-evolved late in the Interpretations of Humanity in a continuous struggle to Express. What is Expressed changed then and changes endlessly as it does today for Man is not conscious of what he is trying to Express and relies on the convenience of the Matrix and its catalogue of Pre-Time Events to define that Expression. And to re-define the Expression. And helplessly, in all efforts to re-define the Expression, ad infinitum.

4.4 Without knowing Why, Man Expresses. These Expressions are bound up in available Forms, in politics, in religion, in pre-time events and traditions that preceded that person. Any source of the origin of the need that incites the need for Expression remains an esoteric enigma – buried under hundreds of thousands of years of forgetting the Original Chaos via the constraints of that Chaos in an artificial Matrix of interpretations.

5. ‘Satanism’, as practiced by the ONA, hosts a deliberate system of erosion of fundamental ‘dogmas’ that thrive in the Matrix and hold together many of its structures. THEM believe that this species of Satanism in particular is key to Remembering. The Sinister Tradition records adversarial memes that do not seek to act within and with the permission of the Matrix, but from outside looking in on the Matrix. Their systematic study of the formation of the forms in the Matrix and the Acausal as a means of placing thousands of these forms into one simple time-based context of an Aeon, triggers a ghostly Remembrance of the Original Chaos beneath the Illusion.

5.1 The atavistic/primal Memory of the Original Chaos and thus the Condition of Man and the questions that should be asked to get closer to it separate the Sinister from the Magian. The Sinister/Satan could be better understood if a thorough curiosity were extended into the development of man using the existing evidence and working backwards, without going so far as to contemplate any unobservable events such as the Big Bang Theory or the magical mystical point-blank of Creationism but to contemplate the proper Event in Time that logically suggests Us.

5.2 The Magian does not seek to reduce the clutter of the Matrix but to add to it – they are a species characteristically ruled by Fear. They strive to Forget.

5.3 The Sinisterion strives to Remember. To understand what is being Expressed both by and beneath the Illusions in which they find themselves surrounded.

5.4 The Magian are “The Closers” – the Sinisterion are “The Openers”.

6. What is culturally/aeonically/cosmically etc ‘correct’ is at its Essence a matter of personal contemplation and a will to re-power Pre-Time Events. What is culturally/aeonically/cosmically ‘correct’ etc is at its Appearance a matter of Pre-Time Events.

6.1 The truths revealed in the Abyss are impossible to reconcile with the truths adhered to below it.

6.2 It is both right and madness to ‘Remember’.

6.3 Remember.

MAH-WIM-AYE-DAY-UM THE ACTION PLAN

1. One of the main actions of the Temple of THEM, as detailed in 2008's release of issue #28 of Oto Anorha, was to set in place a new system.

2. Against us, are massive odds. These odds include existing systems, traditional behaviours and ways of doing things, changing things and repeating old patterns in the mistaken belief one is changing things.
3. These odds also include resistance to new methods by other forces, minor and major including forces that do not appear to be escapable (hubris/entropy), forces/forms that stand to lose ground from what we say (other groups and persons whose vested interest is in sustaining traditional methods), or alchemical forces such as person(s) or events whose existence clashes with ours or who have a legitimate or illegitimate opposition to us.
4. In attempting not to repeat these traditional methods, we have had to develop experimental unorthodox treatments.
5. We have had to ask some unusual questions. Such as 'Can you unite people without a hierarchy, shared beliefs, common goals, losing individuality, power games, infighting, hubris, dissent, proximity, identity, symbolism, cosmology, ideology?
6. THEM desires the best of both worlds and seeks to find ways to dissolve contradiction between any two or more given forms. Since between two forms is where dichotomy breeds and good vs evil spawn. Good vs evil gives rise to an 'Enemata', (A phantom suggestion of an Other) - this is how humanity has been for an age, can we overcome it?
7. To give absolutisms creates tyranny – to allow free reign creates anarchy. Both are necessary even as they are contradictory. How does one draw an outline without a drawing implement? How does one create solidarity without others knowing against what they assemble?
8. How to speak to people using a movement without creating a new dogma? How to make the boundaries of our presence known without controlling others? How to move beyond dichotomy when language is built to create it?
9. Externally, THEM is given voice by its method of pluralisation in which its members are referred to as WE and the impression given that all members of THEM agree to the same terms and conditions, maxims and mottoes laid out by a single speaker. Internally, members may not necessarily be in agreement or regard themselves as subject to or of maxims expressed by the speaker.
10. THEM believe that long ago, at crucial stages in human development, a mind war took place, and was lost against humans using superior forces and forms that enslaved others using ancient forms of magic.

11. This crucial period was inaugurated with the invention of Christ who amalgamated all previous pagan stories of life into one ultimate ideation that identifies itself as monotheism. This ideation would alter and instil, through force and ferocity the concept of singularity and a single apex that governed the known and unknown universe. It spread out across the world creating shadows of itself such as a Single book (the Bible), a Single Mythos (Judaico-Christianity), a Single Language. (Latin).

12. When Nietzsche declared God to be dead, he exalted his singular concept of nihilism as the only answer – others would continue a monotheistic legacy with or without God – exalting some other single purpose, answer or philosophy as the meaning of all things, and like countless devotees of monotheism before them, fight ferociously to protect their one law – their Insynsia. God is not dead; the presence of his particular person is simply no longer necessary. But the great and lasting legacy of monotheism continues, creating death and destruction, pain and suffering, through the inability of humanity to entertain several or limitless ideation at once. What is foreign to a singular paradigm becomes the enemy of that paradigm;- this fact is implicit in all known paradigms. When singularity is challenged, it reacts badly because it seeks to defend its singularity. This is why religion is dangerous and why the ego is dangerous.

13. Such humans developed and mastered particular and insidious manipulations of the senses and social processes allowing them and other men to seize power over others using old magic. These magic's included politics, stratification, economics, violence, illusion, coercion, collusion, primary needs, rewards and punishment, pride and prejudice, forces and forms. They still do.

14. THEM believe that revolution changes power's hands it does not change humanity. Humans will with regularity repeat the game of master and slave.

15. The Temple of THEM exists to eradicate the footprints of God. And in this holocaust are included the footprints of Satan.

16. THEM must find ways to defeat both of these abstracts and their baggage.

17. Therefore it further exists to eradicate utterly the inheritances of monotheism, Insynsian (transferring the oneness of God to another idol), dualism (meaning dichotomy of good vs. evil).

18. And change the brain through adoption and use of novel methods so that it can be trained to entertain multiple paradigms at all times without traditional conflict of singularity.

19. THEM does not merely identify problems, more importantly it creates and implements, solutions.
20. THEM is a term with multiple meanings but essentially implies that any one thing does not exist in isolation and is always accompanied by a honeycomb of others.
21. In eradicating God and religious ideation we do not require the destruction of its idols, its ideas, its architects and architecture – we require to identify what makes God, God and undermine it.
22. The Planet speaks with forces that treat us with indifference – it has a life of its own, a time cycle of its own that dwarfs us and our sentimental constructs, existing as it does through Aeons. Yet we mimic its every move, copy its essence, because we are fractals of the same Creatrix. As the Earth has Tsunamis and Earthquakes that devastate the land and sea, so do humans have personal equivalents that flood us with emotion or subconscious contents bringing with it waves of destructive debris, and just as earthquakes tear apart the ground creating deep chasms and levelling buildings, so too can the human experience a ‘shock to the system’ strong enough to level the concepts and beliefs, faith or trust we have built in our minds, or have our solid foundations shattered in the wake of deep psychological tremors. Both forces, Phorm and Form, are types of THEM – Dark Gods – terrific forces that bring us to our knees. It is these that we identify, worship and seek to understand.
23. Natural Disasters, and among these should be counted those internal esoteric equivalents all of us have that can corrupt, change or destroy our present frame of mind or carefully tended personalities – decrease hubris. They remind us of our Place, though we hate to be reminded of it. They remind us of our lack of Purpose, though we hate to be reminded we don't know it. They remind us of our mortality, and how everything we think so important can be swept clean in the super-destructive forces of the Earth's natural cycles – and we hate that too.
24. But we've been trained to hate, we've been indoctrinated to forget. We've inherited and continued, without question, the building blocks upon which our consciousness is based, and we continue to remain ignorant of the connexion between us and Earth, Earth and us.
25. This new system sees mankind change themselves internally by altering their concept of time, space, matter, and most importantly, traditional behaviour.
26. It involves the ceasing of the need to have an enemy, either real or imagined.
27. It involves the dissolution of the dichotomy of Light vs. Dark symbolised time immemorial by the sun and an evolution beyond with pathways of a new neurology.

28. It involves understanding that we are trapped within a story we did not write and cannot change through traditional methods.

29. It involves de-constructing forms so we can learn how they control us, coerce us, trick us.

30. It involves understanding patterns, cycles, reactions and reflexion, through a modus such as alchemy.

31. It involves knowing intimately, the functions and processes of our selves and the peculiarities of our own organism and brains.

32. It involves changing the landscape of the occult to focus on what still lies hidden.

33. Essentially, THEM wants to make a type of thinking process more prevalent and a key tool in people's belts, through its occult stages-how. (The occult occupies a flexible threshold where people will be open to accepting new and fringe ideas and have more chance of adopting or practising them.)

34. This type of thinking process (either Neuromancy or Quantum Philosophy) is a deconstruction of forms that hinder or hurt a person so as to change their orientation psychically and if possible, perceptually to limit that hindrance or harm. It also strips forms of their projected importance.

The processes to apply pressure/change to the above 34 points involve development of some of the following faculties:

- Selective powers of belief (the ability to switch belief in something on or off at will).
- A deep understanding of the influence of our role in and on Force and Form (Phorce and Phorm) and the extreme power its has over us, in aid of learning how we can reorient perception to lessen that power.
- To identify weaknesses in a form so as to de-construct it as one defuses a bomb or prop or strengthen a form to sustain it using our perception, physicality and skill in manipulating forms.
- To lessen the tradition of singular thinking or the Apex-complex known as Insynsian where language and behaviour are given in absolutes or any one type of thinking takes precedence before multiple-angles are explored.
- To use our brain's differently to inspire and invent new techniques for using them to achieve given levels of prowess in heuristics or examination.
- To establish a tradition of people who each examine the fundamental assumptions of the world for themselves.

- To establish a tradition of people capable of switching from human-centred to life-centred people.
- To offer an alternative No-Hand Path to the extremes of LHP and RHP.
- To inspire through our efforts a new wave of de-constructionists to further present and future insights and forms created through exploration of the Phorm.
- To provide tools and a philosophy that are flexible and non-dogmatic.
- To establish a tradition that teaches and guides through sharing experiences and is added to by its members.
- To excite wonder in the world around us and all its phenomenon.
- To dull the habit of Reaction to certain Forms as programmed.
- To more effectively manage personal and others suffering.
- To focus on and explore Synchronicity, Ethics, Phorm and Phorce in depth.
- To self-study and create a library of insight into the human brain, dreaming, human behaviour.
- To unite with others who share our goals.

WHAT DO WE WANT TO BE DOING?

- Producing an annual publication with many voices sharing alchemical experiences (esoteric and exoteric).
- Maintaining a public presence to speak with others freely.
- Distributing any gains of influence or power among members.
- Operating a website with informative articles and up-to-date revisions, manifestos and links to materials and like-minded parties.
- Working together to establish a network of people with common goals, assisting others with similar goals.
- Managing to cohere without establishing a rigid system of beliefs or worship, rules or laws.
- Managing to resolve conflict amongst each other.
- Releasing books and publications that detail our insight and understanding of forms in formats and e-books.
- Adopting other forms of media to explore form and force, such as music, maths, art, speech, presentations.
- To accumulate in one accessible place, the collected works of THEM and maintain or keep together an up-to-date website, WordPress and e-zine in a central location online.
- To expand numbers by synchronicity.
- To close the Temple of THEM in January, 2036.
- To create a close-knit community of Empaths who can present their ideas and discoveries with one another with minimum conflict.
- To cause changes to the operations of the ego.
- To communicate with and invite other organisations with similar goals to work toward a common goal.

- To understand and appreciate the role of various forms including the darker and darkest aspects of alchemy as formative destruction and not react to attempt to eliminate them but see them as equal partners in the circle of life.
- To continually review and revise these notches

A MEASURE OF SUCCESS: HOW WILL WE KNOW WHEN WE HAVE REACHED OUR GOAL?

This is difficult to determine, but it may be indicated by the way people associated with us or influenced by us, treat one another and more importantly act/ behave and process information on a fundamental level. If there is a growth in the types of written word and presentations that directly focus on key words or concepts such as we have coined, and advancements made in those media in a significant number we may consider that a ball has been started rolling that may result in a culture of heuristic self-explorers who will continue research and application of Phorce and Phorm. It is at the time of writing, 2015 and there are still 21 years to go by which time I will be nearing 60 and have given the majority of my life to a commitment to magical geometry. This is what I consider enough length of time for fulfilling purpose to my life. I hope that THEM will continue to offer purpose and fulfilment to the lives of others too. As time goes by THEM will try to determine what other's goals are on a small and large scale and try to facilitate the joining of like-minds to like-minds, i.e. writers to publishers, upcoming bands to music sites, people with specific interests to others with experience in those interests as part of its aim to create a new world-wide community and eventually, Illuminati.

THEM, PLURALITY AND ARCHAEOLOGY

What is the secret of THEM? What is the purpose of a Mythos? Why do we call ourselves what we do?

Firstly – History, and any study that relies on using it to prove or disprove theories, truths or facts is as any experience in historical research and discussion with academics, specialists, archaeologists, an entirely messy and explosively disagreed on collection of woven tales whose authenticity can rarely be ascertained universally, whose motives for producing such works can never be satisfactorily defined, and whose dates, events, characters are at best hearsay with only the remotest outlines of what actually happened and whenever being close to certain – and never at all certain.

There can be no more holding of one single truth above another – this is the historical origin of the Magi and those who would seek to undermine that entity must not therefore seek to replicate it by simply exchanging one universal truth with another.

This is why THEM are different and why it is so very difficult to be one of us – we are conditioned to Insynsian – to expend all our efforts raising an apex by striving for a unified point – that is a false endeavour. When we look at the facts, we can often see what people are doing as opposed to what they say they are doing – all it takes is a little self-honesty and a lot of integrity. When we read about Christianity, Judaism, Gnosticism, Zoroastrianism we make an immediate set of leaps that we seldom notice. First, We accept on face value these terms are real and not just constructs, Second, We accept that they in some way define a very singular set of beliefs appropriate to a caste of culture of people, Third, We very rarely if ever attack the use of these terms and go looking for ourselves. We must learn to do that.

For instance, take Christianity. Some research reveals that the ignorance of this topic is high. Few know that Christ was once symbolised standing in front of the cross, or that early Christians worshipped the Sun just as the so-called “Pagans” did. THEM has already warned about the nature of grouping things in grand generalisations and the danger it leads to of building a false matrix – see An Analysis of Form.

The idea that the Christians appeared and suddenly swept across the world wiping everyone out is also too general. It is harder for us to understand millions of different actions working in unison by all manner of different people s that contributed to these things that we cite as points in time under simplified terms like Crusade or Inquisition. So much harder not to perceive such vast hives of activity of the human race at work collectively to bring short and prejudiced remembering of Events that mattered. All too often it was the hands we didn't see, names we didn't know, people who were not figureheads who caused History. People rely too much on forms – almost entirely on forms and this the greatest danger the Sinister face. They believe in demons and demonization and when they come for you some day – the men that will hunt you will believe in their gods and their way and that you are the devil and a heretic. And that is all. The public will scream for your head because of the way you are painted and portrayed, and the truth of history will become painfully crystal clear to you – it is remembered by the Victors. By those who used the most force, were willing to be the most cruel, who had the biggest most destructive weapons and merciless courts. Victors are successful killers, ruthless controllers.

Modern research claims Jesus was a swarthy dark-skinned man and that makes sense – but even those that mock Jesus in Anti-Christianity depict Jesus as a blonde, bearded, white-skinned mystic. The problem with human beings is their laziness – we have been conditioned to simplify things that are greatly complex leading to all manner of stupidities. There is intense hatred for the Jews on account of their creation or Usury [lending money and charging interest] – and yet it was the Christians who imprisoned them and denied them the right to trade [and forced them to find ways to survive] and treated them as second citizens. Almost certainly the Christians were in turn badly treated by another people, and those people by another. The Blame Game is one of the Magian's greatest weapons – it has enabled bloody wars and suffering for aeons – but you know what – it is simple ignorance of the personal and collective Shadow that has been at the heart of it. A simple ignorance of our own biological prejudice, dispositions and functions.

What was Christianity called before Christ was around to give his name to it? Were there clean precise separations between beliefs that became discoloured as other beliefs came to dominate them? Were the Sumer who lived a magical, pure, mystical Aryan philosophical way in pure empathy with the land, and stars and gods suddenly invaded and ruined by a tribe of Semites? No. Semites made up a large portion of Sumerian citizens – they were there from the beginning working together. What separates or separated them into Non-Semite and Semite? Blood? Origin? Belief? Language? Intent? None of these things. The Sumer were people, the Semites were people and as people they like all others laboured under the biological functions the human being's organism is possessed of. They too labelled things, they had enemies, they ruined the land, they mistreated and tortured people, they wiped out neighbouring tribes with cruelty and they were no less prone to corrupting other cultures than any other. It is the biological imperative of our species to do these things to survive, spread, populate, adapt, conquer. No-one knows either the origins of the Sumer or Semite people's and as always, there is at best only guesswork and speculation.

There is some evidence that the two languages of the Sumer and Semites were different indicating ancient differences of origin. There is some evidence that the way the Sumer saw the role of Man in relation to the Gods was very different to the later developments of a train of cultures who would see them differently, then see one, and change everything about how we did things, saw things, and why. But we must be careful of two things. Not to believe our own hype – this is the most important – and to remember THEM – the huge threads of other possibilities, missing information, lies from which we are drawing, misinformation, the sheer antiquity of studies passed from hand to hand to hand where Chinese whispers had a hand in changing any facts to post-facts.

People are very simple creatures. To understand, to motivate and to rule. They want few things. They want to be happy and healthy and live without suffering. All these forms layered and layered and layered over aeons upon our every move, motion and behaviour has caused THEM to write walls and walls of text just to get through that thick outer skin. We have been kept so busy doing that for the last six years and even before we formed the Temple that we have not had time to concern ourselves with concentrating on teaching what lies beneath that skin – our work is thus only half done and this problem of removing the outer skin is extremely difficult work with many years maybe decades of saying what thousands of others have been saying – only to be silenced with our deaths or drowned out under the tirade of superstitions, forms, prisons and lies that Magi after magi thickly slap back on after every cut we make. The lack of knowledge we have about our history, origin, biological weaknesses, psychological nature, abilities for powers, reality of magic, our doubts and fears, addictions and need for escapism – our pressure points – these are all KNOWN by the System that feeds us, these are all KNOWN by the vast team of marketers, advertisers, politicians, religious leaders, bankers, criminals and so on that control us on every level.

It is our job to reclaim this lost knowledge, to Remember what came before it, to remember the whole of it and not make the terrible mistake as others have of morphing into it, feeding it, mimicking it. This will be extremely difficult for anyone because it involves using more brain than we are used to – open doorways and perception to a multitude in all things and to change a psyche that has been trained for aeons to seek an apex – a single God. We stand on vastly uneven ground – we cannot call them our Captors because we captor ourselves and this is the truth of it.

The desire that has often been encouraged in us to smash them to the ground, to erase them, to eradicate them and start anew – is a naive and dangerous sentiment grounded in a total dis-reality. The desire to become Superman and Living Gods, to live immortally as Dark Gods – this too is a naive and dangerous sentiment grounded in a total dis-reality. There is no Superman – there is no healthy psyche without serious problems, someone will always suffer for someone else to get ahead, and to dream of being something we can never be is to deny what we CAN be as human beings who understand and utilise their existing functions better or perhaps a little differently than we are accustomed. We have been taught to hate ourselves, to deny what is wonderful about being human because our functions have been used against us and we have unconsciously grown ashamed of these weaknesses by which we are exploited and so we seek to become something other than human. I say to you – there is nothing wrong with who we are, and there is no reason why we cannot re-think, re-formulate and change what it means to be human – to set an example for others to follow – because without examples, without new choices – there is only obedience to the norm, and available choices.

Behind all the great inventions, ideas and events in History there is a backdrop almost completely ignored. Dreams. Dreams are the guiding compass of our communion not with the Divine but something more – the very things from which we come from for we are nature ourselves and we forget it. Dreams are the keys to genius – and we must remember them.

What is the purpose of Mythos? Abstract development of thinking teaches that several things can occupy one place simultaneously and all be true or valid. Last week I gave 14 different answers to someone who asked me a question to illustrate how one person could come at the question from many different ways, positive, negative, neutral, to affirm specific points or downplay others, to act in their interest or in mine, and so on. When we dig up the past and begin to build a picture of what happened – we have to accept our limitations and be wary of our prejudices. We want to prove the existence of a Magi – so we set about placing a selection of facts from a huge array of sources in a specific order that will lead to the conclusion that they existed. At no point has THEM denied that the Magi exist – we have unearthed many points of information regarding them, careful not to speculate beyond the facts or blanket term Christianity as the Magi – we isolated the term to the Medes of Persia, as did Herodotus who was one of the few writers to write about them.

But what IS the Magi? It's certainly not just people – and it is certainly not some trait that is foreign to the so-called Sinister. Indeed, even a brief study of Religion, Philosophy and Psychology cannot help but reveal the defect if there is any in the human race that deserves special mention is one that lies with all of us*. It has however said on numerous occasions that the Magi are within all of us and that should hint loudly at what we believe that term to mean. ONA's vague mystical ramblings of 'hubrati' are antique scaremongering, political myths in the making with no grounding and that, rather than create Adepts who see, create fools who gather their Shadow against a ghost.

There are layers of belief and you as one of THEM must accustom yourself to that reality. You cannot hold a singular truth up above all others, rely on neat little terms like Christianity to define or set the boundaries of where one belief began, and another ended – it is above all else in our research apparent that History is a mystical dreamland where the 23 Syndrome reigns supreme. We know that there have been no other written scripts discovered prior to Sumeria [Ki En Gi r] and so it seems a good place to stick our shovels. Emphasis on script -there are other sets of symbols – but we have taken the advice and issues of world experts whose speciality is language into consideration more and more as time goes by. Archaeology is rife with corruption – it is not a simple case of someone finding something and presenting it to some team who run tests to see if its authentic. Scholars, academics and archeos fabricate, change or omit claims every day. Artefacts are stolen, tombs robbed, new scripts faked.

Governments that don't want their history changed – particularly Middle East, Chinese and other religious or communist countries will openly suppress findings or threaten the life or careers of those who would try to bring new evidence that challenges the status quo to light. Under such enormous pressure or threat of death many capitulate and present what the Government attaches demand. Mythos does not necessarily reflect fact. Its purpose is to capitalise on those who are still in thrall to form – that is what Mythos is for.

So, we build a picture using the facts and treat it on one level as an accurate depiction of the past – why? – because that is what people need to believe. They need a beginning, a middle, and to believe in an end. People want stories – they very rarely want to write their own – especially so when it comes to something as vast and messy as history. They like simple things, facts, singular truths, easy to handle ideas. They don't like thinking that by dividing people into two groups such as Sinister and Mundane they are in fact being mundane by repeating the same practice of the Mundane – for that is what the Mundane do.

THEM – think plurally, all the time, aware of the shifting nature of so-called facts, the dubiousness of truths, the human motivations for power, greed, recognition, misinformation, allegiance to a form that colour the findings of history. We know that all forms rest on shifting sands. When we have built a reasonable picture grounded in facts, we will present it as a new history that has a beginning, explains how various things came to be, and fills others with the confidence we know what we are talking about. Of course, very few of them will actually know what we are talking about or why.

We believe that others believe. What we ourselves as a group and individually believe will be challenged greatly by THEM as it already has been and has yet to settle. Many clouds of dust have been stirred up with our persistent enquiries and cynicism into the state of accepted facts. We wait with bated breath to see what comes of this study – what it will ultimately mean for each of us and the beliefs we hold dear.

Scholars insist that there is no way the Dark Ones could be pre-Sumerian or that any kind of black magic or sinister lore was preserved in Sumer since only the priests wrote. We know only of a type of sorcery the Sumer feared because of the wards against it by the equivalent of a clergy. Only specialists wrote and no script with an encoded language exists prior to Sumer. The idea that there was a sudden split in a pagan way to a monotheist way is ignorance pedalled and believed by those who do not understand history, the length of time these things take, or the functions of their own species. It took thousands of messy years, hundreds of inventions, millions of minds and hands, and countless things to happen for things to change the way they did. And neither the origin nor certainty of any of them exists beyond speculation.

We see things not in terms of Forms that present themselves to us and say this is what is – but as Forces, of human agenda, motivation, habit, tradition, emotion, ignorance or laziness – as powered by human functions with needs, wants, desires to achieve something by putting those forms there. It is that which we look at and draw our information from – not from the mirages in the desert.

People will often nod along if you say something vaguely similar to what they are saying. If you condemn the same enemy, they do and share their shadow – you become their ally. Do things and people react a certain way – do them differently and they react a different way – but the ways in which they react are very limited because of the limitations and traditional habits of human biological function.

The Temple of THEM presents a difficult proposition. It requires far more of people than many are willing or able to give – because it does not suffer laziness of the psyche. We load upon ourselves far more than most are willing to in our desire to really Know -and a large part of knowing is that others don't know. We refuse to be lazy or to accept the world as it is – this means we must rebuild it and that is a monumental task. We also enlighten our burden at the same time by shrugging off forms – that colossal weight of the world with all its pretence and sham – we see through the endless sea of forms shoved in our faces to convince us of an illusion – and to the forces underneath that proffer them with frightened pale hands.

Past a certain point – you will come to understand that my words too are forms that must be discarded. I only hope you walk with me far enough that I may teach what I know and then allow you to make your own decision on who to be and how to be it. I hold no illusions that we will reach our 30-year marker with a fairy-tale ending. The very nature of the work requires that most of you will not be with the Temple or even allies of it in years to come – for you will inevitably go your own way as you come to truly understand the esoteric nature of the Temple of THEM and my work.

The forces that cause Change are greatly misunderstood – the Great Work is not a list of ingredients mixed together in measured doses to produce a magical elixir. The Great Work and service to your fellow humans requires extremely harsh alchemy, personal sacrifice, inner struggle, conflict, the event of traitors, schisms, dissension, internal war, hurt feelings, betrayal, pain, suffering and despair. Loyalties will be torn because that is what humans do, must do, to find autonomy – to truly be One of THEM there can ultimately be no loyalty to anything. We hold forms in front of our faces like torches to illuminate the darkness ahead – but as soon as we emerge into light, we discard them. We believe what we must believe for the duration the magic requires. You all took an Oath but how can you honour it when it binds you to a form.

Sooner or later as to struggle to throw them all off – you will come to these ones and be faced a dilemma. How do I throw these off? And my answer to you? You just do.

We don't own you – never did. We don't control you – never did. Everything we've done has been different to the way others do it because we gave you back to yourself. Sure, in the beginning we lead you, put a maze on front of you you had to follow a certain way to get there – and when you got there? You were made responsible for you. You were taught how to see through Forms – and once you bite through that chain, Nothing can hold you. We tore down those temporary walls, broke any chains and set you free. And that's as simple as it gets. That is how things change. By example. We don't need you to stay loyal to us or bind yourself to a form you can only ultimately outgrow or outshine. We don't want to drag out the decade pretending we have secrets you didn't get, dangling carrots in front of you to keep you hungry or make you follow us to the end. You came because you wanted something we had. We gave it to you and now you must decide what to do with it.

The World will change and gravitate toward this outcome of evolved consciousness one way or the other – it is our nature, and no man, not even the greatest Magi can stop nature from doing what it wants – for they too, are her Bitches. This war for the Aeon is really only about one thing – people fighting to speed up the inevitable, people fighting to slow down the inevitable and people affected by the inevitable. The Temple of THEM seeks to speed up the inevitable and aid its transition. There will always be a place for those who worked with us to keep working with us – but when it is your time to go, certain wheels will turn in motion. and that parting cannot naively be expected to be amicable or pleasant but the snapping of any tentacles you believe bind you to us or us to you.

It might be violent and prolonged, or you might just slip away into the Night. Both these things are alchemy too – it is just the way things are, just the way certain energies express themselves or multiply into new forms – by pushing off another existing form with all its might, using that other form as a springboard for new ideas, often in direct opposition – but hopefully outside of both. This is what forms are for – this is why we created them. The Temple has been attacked, betrayed, slandered, before. It has housed many travellers who learned from us and then went their own way – largely because that is what we teach.

It is the lack of knowledge on how forms change, mutate and grow that causes such heartache for people on both sides. There is of course the possibility that those who come to learn, stay as have the key six of us stayed together since the beginning. The Temple of THEM will cease 24 years from now – which may seem a long time but not for what we have set about to do. Change, is very, very slow. For every insight that frees an individual there are a million ready to swamp them. One person says history is A, another that history is B, and another that is it C, and yet just by the insistence of A,B,C we can see that history is also X and Y. Everything is always X.

X is Undefined – especially in the case of those things that seem defined. And we must forever ask Y whilst temporarily using belief in A, B or C to achieve X. The less certain people are – the less hold form has over them. But only certain people can shrug off form. For most it is a blissful nightmare from which they will never awaken unless the wake up emerges as a trend. It is our job to set that trend in motion, to teach abstract and plural perception, and find and work with the few others around the Planet on whom the Magi's spells are also wearing off and that are starting to Remember. THEM has always stressed the necessity of understanding how to accept and use a form and at the same time treat it as temporary, a form of language that we use to communicate or apply pressure or affect something by inducing its reaction to the form. The Temple of THEM has no boundaries, it is not a physical place that can be burned to the ground or attacked – it is the rise of an inevitable expansion of consciousness that has grown tired of the deceptions plastered onto its nature. The Temple is not a structure, a location or a thing – it is the majesty of destruction of single-minded Insynsian. Of being able to think Plurally – of seeing not one truth but all of Them, thinking not from one part of the mind but all of Them, accepting not one explanation but understanding the common force behind all of Them, it is inside, outside and beyond us – the force that motivates humans to better themselves. And it this that we Remember.

We remember that there was not always one way, that forces speak louder than forms, that humans have limitations, that we have forgotten them while others exploit them, that facts are rarely stable, that different times believed different things and will again, that we can change things if we only know where to start and what to do, that the human race is not a forsaken embarrassment and all it takes is an example that is followed, echoed, copied to set in motion a new type of human being. A life-centred being that understands his frailty and the fears of others, who sees beyond the defences thrown up at life's frightening visage and faces them, afraid or unafraid, because they are One of THEM and THEM of One.

FORM 101: [Transcript]

In the interest of giving a more immediate entertaining introduction to my fascination with forms and the complex role they occupy in our lives.

I created this presentation/film. In the event the link should fail, a transcript has been provided.

Form 101 Video [See Chapter 11]

A scientifically indeterminate time ago ...

The planet we call Earth came to be.

We give names to things, to understand them.

Here we see a crude set of shapes, but we interpret it as mountains, a lake, a forest, grassy land and a blue sky.

The ability to simplify complex stimulus into simple shapes is a core aspect of our interpretation procedure.

An adult will view this rudimentary landscape with archetypal familiarity, but will also note the naive simplicity of the drawing and details, attributing it to a child-like understanding of the subject matter.

Yet what is essentially a set of random set of shapes takes on significance as a landscape because of trained associations.

We recognise the triangles resting on a horizon, our name for a division between a mass of green and a mass of blue, and coloured grey like rock – they must be mountains.

However, your ability to separate what we view into geometric shapes is an artificially developed convenience.

It is far more difficult to make this separation when presented with the boggling complexity of immediate nature, where outlines and shapes are extremely difficult to determine – if not be entirely proved a figment of imagination all together.

Or if the colours are swapped around?

Or the traditional relationship between object and colour is broken. ..

Or the traditional relationship is broken between object and perspective?

The scene seizes to be organised , categorised and its meaning becomes less familiar to us. Some viewers may suddenly feel anxious at this, and even feel a need for the proper associative colours and orientation to be returned.

This anxiety tends to occur because humans, as a rule, hate the unfamiliar.

We may call this image ugly, annoying, or even art.

But only when the grass is green, the sky is up and the browns stalks meet that dark green splodge...

Will we recognise this as a landscape.

Or as a familiar object.

When the rules of the relationship we have built our associations with are significantly altered.

We loose our orientation, and find it much harder to triangulate what something is.
So we search for clues.

Or rather, our subconscious and automatic processes of interpretation do this for us.

It breaks down the subject matter into smaller parts. It looks for relationships, and there can only be relationships if there are things that relate to one another.

We look at the shapes, the colours, and search for associations made and stored in our memory, and our subconscious scans its vast collection of archetypal residual collective too.

Failing to find any association to double red triangles surrounded by yellow , we may search for meaning in where we found the image , who it was made by , or perhaps why it might have been made.

Because if we cant fin meaning to something , then we ignore it, dismiss it and forget it.

-OR FEAR IT –

But it is very rare that the human does not find some way to catalogue everything – perhaps even unheard of.

Whenever we are presented with a stimulus, we name it.

Whenever we experience a phenomenon, we name it.

To communicate, to warn, to inform, to describe, to control, to direct, to survive it – we name it.

Or someone names it for us.

Or already has a name for it.

And if its new, then they simply make up a new name for it.

If there are no suitable cues, then the image becomes freed from organised form and catalogues and open to interpretation.

Rorschach's ink blot tests are one example of this, where any vacuum of meaning is filled with the projections of the subconscious.

The forest may now appear to be a motorcycle and side-car, a flying space pig or virtually anything else the human being can conceive of in a valiant effort to project meaning on to it.

The natural and conditioned inclination of the human mind is to find meaning in things. It wonders for instance, whether things have intrinsic meaning, an absolute definition – but it seldom realises that its own mental prejudices have created the concept of things, to begin with.

The human being struggles so hard to project meaning onto things even if there maybe no meaning – as a result of Original Chaos, and the overwhelming fear of the experience of non-being into Being.

Nothing has changed since our inception in regards to our fear of the unknown. We seek familiarity, recognition, consistency as part of our natural inclinations as a creature of nature, and as part of our heritage which bid us to creating forms to cope with and reduce the enormity of life.

The SYMBOL is perhaps the best example of such a reduction.

Electricity is an incredible concept believed to be created by the discharge of ions at an atomic level.

Electricity names a force with no distinct shape, that we reduce to sparks, forks of lightening, invisible charge, current, voltage, amps, and so on.

Lightning strikes upward from the ground, it does not strike down, as our eye and literature would have us believe.

Electricity is as dangerous as it is necessary to our lives, it is created with turbines, water, wind, solar power, batteries; found in some eels and fish, can leap across gaps, and is really only noticeable when a light goes out, appliances don't work, or the power bill comes in.

This is just a tiny example of its diversity...

Electrical charges also power the synapses in our brain.

The cessation of with is a by-product of death.

This extremely complex phenomena are reduced by human beings into a single symbol. A lightning bolt.

But when we try to look any closer at the intrinsic content of the universe, current efforts indicate there is no end to it – at least not that our technology has been able to detect.

Rather more disturbing is the inability of science to pinpoint the building blocks of the universe. When they tried to observe light for instance, they discovered that it was both a wave and a point, but it could not be pinpointed in both time and space. It was one, or the other.

What this suggests – is that our obsession with Singularity, isolated objects, divisions of time and space...

May be preventing us from seeing the Universe how it actually is, or rather, not how it is, but preventing the many ways we may potentially possess the capability to perceive.

The importance of this potential – lies in the ability to perceive objects, events, even singularities as a loop or multitude, a kind of quantum thinking.

Without this self-conscious awareness and acceptance that our human perception has particular limitations, flaws and is prone to performing the way it does largely out of conditioned habit – our apathy towards perception allows others to control us by controlling the contents and meaning of our life.

Our physical limitations, an emotional attachment, gullibility, self- deception, arrogance, egoism, naivety, belief in forms, trust in face-value, the power of words, ideology, religions, politics, propaganda, what people say, symbolism, and even our prejudices of space and time – set up certain conditions.

And through manipulation and abuse of these frailties and levers of our biology certain conditions can be set up.

Without being conscious of any of the functions and tricks our body , mind and senses play and play on us – we lapse into a pre-determined idyll of reality in part created for us and in part maintained by us – i.e. Ignorance.

Optical illusions, shortcuts our brain takes, inverting of images by our eyes, tricks of light, the blinding speed of our computations, our cataloguing of contents, memory, dreams, emotional injections and associations we develop, forms, fears and more define our reality.

Just as optical illusions cause us to react, often involuntarily, other forms play other tricks on us too.

Although an independent study of the eye would take us too far from the subject at hand, it is worth including a few details to illustrate what we take for granted is seldom what is occurring.

The way we perceive light differently at night, through cones and rods, for instance, was taken into account when the police and emergency services designed their lights . They use red and blue so that the colours are more easily noticed.

Without being aware of these tricks and particular ways we process things, we are at the mercy of those who do.

Those who understand sex sells, tap into our insecurities, our urge to procreate, be loved and our fear to be unloved, alone, ugly, etc. can tailor forms that deliberately prey on our common fears in order to sell something at our expense.

Those who know human beings experience anxiety, tailor special methods to induce our anxiety – by preying on the things we all feel, worry, happiness, sadness, grief, love, hunger, want, acquisitiveness, greed, insecurity, pain, fear...

They can make it unpopular to be a true individual, an outcast, singled out or alone – and can tailor a culture that pressures us to conform, belong or join a group.

Those who understand how easily we are distracted by humour, can cover up or distract us from the greatest atrocities, direct our attention away from the serious nature of a topic or event, cause us to laugh rather than act.

Visual stimulus is not alone in being used in manipulation.

The secret world of Sound, Taste, Smell, Sight, Touch, are all BIG business.

Subliminal message tapes are for sale to be used in shopping malls underlain with messages to the consumer not to steal.

Music encourages and induces unconscious emotions. Quiet muzak, black metal, techno/rave music for instance, all have discernible effects on the heart and physiology.

MSG, additives, preservatives, genetically modified flavours and foods are painstakingly developed in laboratories and chemical vats to reproduce flavours using cut-price and even dangerous ingredients – specifically to appeal to our taste buds. Fast Food restaurants spend millions funding research into smells effective shapes, colours, packaging, slogans all to directly appeal to the customer – and millions more hiding this side of their business from them under brightly coloured campaigns, dumbed down catch-phrases, misdirection and Spin to avoid legality of telling lies.

Having personally worked for companies whose directive is to ‘aggregate data’ I am all too aware that large buildings filled with monitoring equipment, both Federal and Private, do exist and are collecting our data. Few people know that to delete an email is to delegate it ‘rubbish’ and therefore, public property, up for grabs.

Having also investigated the position of Secret Shopper I have seen the lengths Businesses go to secretly spy on their staff and that of other companies; including instructions to the shopper on how not to draw attention, how to lure certain questions from staff, what to wear, say and do, right down to minute details concerning body language.

Having engaged in various marketing avenues I am aware of the deceptions of the trade that go into wringing the dollar from the customer and the vast scientific array of disciplines quietly dedicated to finding the natural weaknesses of the human being and taking advantage of them.

Moreover, I have witnessed the cut-throat razor blade intellect and ruthlessness of those who assemble the creative side of marketing and found it as fearfully frightening as it is morbidly fascinating to watch grand manipulation at work.

So, is naming something, creating a form?

Yes and no.

Forms exist, whether we name them, or not. They are geometric intricacies that nature provides courtesy of her own unknown chthonic laws .

We are one of those geometric intricacies.

But imagine this is a scene of Earth well before Humans came to give it that name. Billions of years ago, when its surface had yet to cool and was still a molten inferno. Before there were people to call it lava, magma – what was it called? And if there was no-one to call it anything – what was it?

Before there were humans to name things, there were no names for things. There were no associations for colours, no connection between green and grass, blue and sky.

Without humans, there were no names, and with no names, no meanings, no projections – everything still was and existed by its own unknown law – but it was not our concept of order that gave it structure.

Neither was there anyone to distinguish a triangle, a horizon, trees, shadows, shapes, or for that matter, heat, time, space, or anything else. And that includes our perspective, which is a prejudice we rely on to neatly frame images with a rectangle to indicate height and length.

But without even people to name them, nature persisted. Though she is far more intricate than we could ever hope to encompass or understand – and so human beings simplify, by imposing patterns, shapes and associations onto Her.

Although when we take the time to look closely, no two objects are exactly the same, we group them as though they were.

And we group things because we believe them to be singular objects, placed together. We sum up the total Being and capability, of all human beings with a name, their name.

Because without a name, they need a number, an associate, something – anything – to relate them to in order to tell someone else who/what they are.

Because it drives us crazy when we are interested in something, to have no information about it.

We ask for their name, who they are, what they like, what they are into, to build a picture. We ask how much, how long, how far, until when, does it come in other colours – because we are interested and because we want more information. It is perhaps a survival trait.

“There is a brown fawn coloured, fawn on its chest, more chocolate-colour than caramel around the paws, and with green eyes that twinkle, bear of the genus x-x, with a foaming snout and moving at around twenty paces with its shadow stretching out long beside it and its weight cracking the branches as it approaches, coming up behind you... “

“BEAR! FUCK! RUN!”

The ability to communicate danger with short sharp phrases or even a sound is vital to all human beings.

It has rightly, enabled us to take command of an alien condition of being born into a hostile planet, and thrive and survive the harshest of conditions for aeons – to develop great cultures and civilisations whose legacies have shaped and changed the world – covering it with human beings and their architecture from the hottest desert to the coldest ice.

BUT...

Although I can never hope to touch on more than a few rudimentary points in the great seas of science regarding how the human brain, eyes, ears, nervous system, intellect, physiology, heart, mouth, organs, skin, hair, opposable thumbs, etc etc etc work to enable the human being to perceive what it perceives...

An awareness that what we perceive and how we perceive it is subject to many complex processes that are amazing in their depth, scope and complexity is crucial to understanding and accepting the limitations of the human.

We treat the sea, the sand, the sky as separate forms, believing that where the water meets the sand there is a distinct division. But is there? Perhaps from our point of view, and habitual reference, there seems to be - but at the micro level this meeting is meshed as molecular structure.

A single cell of water or H₂O presented as a molecule.
Water, as a mass, depicted on the molecular level.

We view the waters edge as separate from the sand, yet at some level we have yet to reach with our current technology , it may some day be accepted that there is no separation and what we perceive as two discrete phenomena are an interconnected mesh on an unknown as yet invisible plane or ether.

Our size, directly prejudices our perspective. We reduce whole worlds with single names, grouping staggering complexity for simplicity and convenience. This shower of millions of individual drops of water is dismissively reduced to 'Rain'.

Rumoured that no two are the same – though me may wonder how they checked them all – we reduce the incredible geometry of each snow flake, unseen by the natural eye, to one amorphous mass.

Snow.

Our size and general perception handicaps our ability to perceive these other worlds. From our own vantage point many of these vistas are rendered completely invisible. The result of which has led to many timely and untimely reminders from Nature that these worlds exist irrespective of us noticing them.

Our ignorance of the micro-world of Bacteria ...

...Led to the Bubonic or Black Plague in Europe in the 1600s.

Diseases from lack of hygiene carried by rats, resulted in the death of more than a million people.

At that time it equated at one third of the entire global population.

More than 400 years later, the bodies of Black Plague victims remain entombed under Europe's subways and sewers because it is considered far too dangerous to unearth the bodies and risk releasing the Bubonic strain.

Viruses

Diseases and Bio-toxins.

Gases.

Radiation.

Ultra Violet Rays.

Few have taken more advantage of the expectations of humans, and doing the unexpected, than those engaged in warfare and the military. Camouflage breaks the typical form of the human being and we instinctively recognise by the shape of the head and the shoulders, concealing shine, shape, surface, shadow and silhouette.

Examples....

The habit of humans being used to having complex things reduced for them into a simple phrase or promise is abuse in the extreme by marketing.

Fine Print, hidden away in an inaccessible location and/or breathtakingly ambiguous catches out every day.

The world of the human being is a balancing act carefully juggled by an insane and confused array of optical illusions, learned conditioning, and reliance on forms.

Only Heurisy – a determined effort to research and find out how things work for yourself – could ever uncover or inform you of just how complicated the world really is, and how many shortcuts we have developed to try and process its staggering intricacy.

Or, Control it.

Imagine that you are in the Dark.

The most honest way to experience the world is without seeing it.

I have drawn a room and placed 6 objects in it.

But because I have coloured it black, there are no cues to tell you what they are. No associations, and no relationships.

You can feel for them though. And by feeling them you may be able to determine what they are, by eliminating what they are not.

The first one I hand you is furry, 4 legged, and purring.

It would not be unreasonable to guess that I handed you a cat.

But what are the other five objects?

I suppose you could guess.

But you would be guessing for two reasons...

The first reason is because you have no cues, no clues, no colours, description, no sensation of the object, no information to go on about what those objects might be.

But the main reason you might try and guess – is because I told you there were 5 more objects.

Since this is a flat screen, and we are only pretending to be in the dark, this darkness could in fact be anywhere. Your context, which is provided, is that it is a room.

But is it?

Without familiar cues, how can you ever know either way?

YOU CAN'T

If you wake in the pitch black, and a voice tells you there are pits in the floor. What will you think?

Apart from crawling around on the floor touching things and risking falling into one of these pits, the voice is your only cue.

The question is ... do you trust the voice?

Most people would make a judgement based on the gender,, tone, inflection, pause, pitch, and presentation of the voice.

Some my believe that there are now pits on the floor, and some may not.

Either choice is irrelevant in this scenario – what matters is that the voice has filled the room with contents that cannot be verified.

In other words – the pits may or may not exist – but merely by suggesting them to be in the room – is enough to make them exist for some people.

Without more information – we cannot make a reasoned judgement of our own and may rely on an external voice to tell us what is going on, or what something is.

And we may well crawl on all fours in terror that we are about to plunge headlong into a pit just because we don't recognise our own garage in the dark.

If we crawl around enough, we may in fact convince ourselves that there are no pits and question the voice.

But if you woke up in the dark, with no idea where you were, what was going on, or how you got there...

Why wouldn't you listen to the voice?

Every baby, born into the world, communicates at first with gurgles, crying and screaming.

Positive and negative stimulus teaches the baby that crying a certain way will variously bring it food, nappies, attention, its mothers scent or entertainment.

It will also bring it safety, warmth, comfort.

And a 'voice' to keep it company, explain the world, tend it, comfort and soothe it, take away its confusion and provide a context for the condition of life it will some day be able to try and find words, purpose and meaning for, itself.

The baby has no words, no names, and cries in terror, in curiosity, in alarm, in fascination, in joy, and knows not what it does.

It will know what it does as it gets older, as it learns, absorbs, copies, mimics, repeats, experiments, explores, and is given context after context.

In this painful harrowing journey it will be challenged and face the summation of a nightmare daily as it struggles to come to grips with itself, others and the shapes, colours, objects, people, places, actions, it has not words for and a very limited understanding of.

It will know something by smell, sound, name, the time it appears – itself, mother, food, comfort, the dog. Gradually it will come to recognise basic shapes, learn how to walk, speak, and communicate. Later it will learn how to run, play fair, sit still, behave, navigate the house, danger, fun, cat.

Later still it will be challenged excessively as it comes to grips with who it is, laws, ethics, personality, history, social mores, culture, authority, religion, god, death, birth, sex, responsibility... and purpose.

The human being will start as a baby, forming concepts, and associations.

And at first, these associations will be vague and unconnected. Lines, sounds, a word, a sensation, here and there.

But these associations will increase exponentially, growing in number and complexity until there comes a point...

That connections are made, and one concept can be related to another. Relationships between oneself and ones actions and consequences or occurrences that are associated with one another begin to develop at a rapid rate.

However, as reality and conditioning, culture etc intrude and provide context, learning, punishment and reward for these associations – the confusion becomes more formed. Dimensions are added, time and space begin to dominate the context of all associations.

The organisation of forms begin to dominate and imprison a persons perception within a specific context...

They begin flexible, the associations loose and fluid...

The context of organisation fluctuates, changing shape and emphasis on different associations...

But as the human ego intensifies, it begins to build a layer of shields, or associations that it now refuses to remove or flex.

Religions views, personal beliefs, cultural traditions, practices, convictions, political leanings, likes/dislikes, prejudices, etc...

Connections made, meshed together and reinforced one another, giving rise to impenetrable shields, beliefs, ideas...

Previously elastic, the mind becomes rigid and regimented, one protective shield in the armour supports another...

New ideas, alternative reason, are shut down, and can no longer enter through the fierce layers of mental assertion...

Until the psyche is completely encased in artificial forms, beliefs and hardened plates. The self no longer plays a part.

And one day the human being completely encloses itself within a self-perpetuating shield of geometry.

What was a flexible, free-thinking organism, becomes a slave to its own ego – encrusted with forms the self is enclosed by a baleful gem that takes over, making decisions, determining emotional response and degree, throwing the human back and forth as it reacts automatically in accordance with its adopted beliefs and forms.

In thrall to forms, the organism acts automatically to defend or decry those things it has taken on board as its own – and elicits programmed responses to the forms that inhabit/infect it.

Just as the different eras and style of art tell a story of mental and spiritual development, with emphasis placed on different aspects of reality or its concepts – throughout history it appears the relationship between form and formlessness has never been far from the conscious mind.

The sacred geometry of the Platonic Solids was serviceable, but the struggle between solid form and mutable essence has been an ongoing human dilemma.

For millennia, human beings have sought the essence of things, the prime materia, or first cause. They have struggled to understand the world around them by taking it apart.

We endlessly struggle between faith in a fixed matrix and the idea that the universe has building blocks, a framework, liquids, gases, atoms, quarks, mesons, dark matter...

Sacred geometry, the footprints of God, the inner workings of matter, of metals, alchemical and thermodynamic forces...

We have wondered what our world is composed of, and how. We have tried to learn nature's secrets by observing her.

But for every secret she gives up, two more present themselves. And as far as we try to go, inward, or outward, we reach our event horizon, an impasse.

Our technologies continue to inch closer inward, closer outward, at the atomic or galactic level – giving us a glimpse into the maddening intricacy and indefatigable scope of everything around us.

But like a fractal – the closer we get, the further away we realise we are from ever knowing what the Mysteries are. She just repeats Herself on a new scale.

Some cultures, enlightened as to our struggle, appear to have made peace with it – reflecting the perpetual loop in meditative devices such as the Mandala – neither form nor formless, but a dance between and beyond.

The perfection and golden means of the Renaissance, whose struggle for mathematical certainty gave rise to precision, perspective and absolute worship to Aestheticism, -highlighted a battle of forms vs the formless. Artists like Dali and Picasso, and the artistic movements of such disciplines as Surrealism and Cubism would continually arise to the fore of human expression – repeating some deep internal dissatisfaction of the collective soul or spirit with the material world and the emphasis placed on aesthetics, shapes, and form. For them, life was not straight lines and simple.

It was a sublime interplay where it was arrogance to assume where something ended and another began.

That the figure of man had to look like a man to be a man was understood to be a ridiculous gesture to pursue – man knew nothing about himself but his own projections.

These intrepid insights into the nature of things and of mans own perception brought man ever closer to knowing his own farce than ever before – what seemed to be a chaos was truth.

But man is not ready to know his face, nor accept it, and so the whispers continue, and the battle to reveal the truth about the illusions of form rages on.

While we live in our own limited world, obsessed with the material, the physical, and the mundane reactions our architecture presses on us..

Mother Nature often reminds us how little and powerless we really are.

It is as if she has designs to keep our arrogance in check and to keep us watchful and humble.

FORM 102: METAMORPHOLOGY

Sorcerer, why is Self-Awareness important to your evolution? Because of its relationship to forms.

Form can be likened to a crystal. It can be diffuse and presented as numberless shards; or resolute and rigid, a hardened template with distinct edges, height and structure.

Imagine you stand in a cluster of floating shards as far as the eye can see. The shards of different size, length, colour, distance. Imagine that each shard's position represents a direction in which we may travel, a unique location or star we may visit, and a boundless sea of choices as to which shard we navigate toward. This is a metaphor for knowledge – an analogy for books, travel, experience, variation, diversity. We can see that a diffuse crystal offers the full wonders of the world and access and opportunity to explore all of its mysteries both wicked and wondrous. In such a state, anything is possible for the observer – there is no inside or outside, no restriction on movement, and we are free to roam among the crystalline realm.

Now envision the crystals coming together like an inverse explosion to merge into a singular piece with a well-defined, toughened exterior that gleams from its pointed terminations. No shards float in the spaces around it, all are absorbed into the singular construct. The previous freedom of direction is minimised, the locations of unique objects has greatly reduced, and choices have been compacted. From the crystal's point of view, it is all there is. All around it is a vacuum, it is the only thing in existence, and outside of itself lies only empty space.

Both of these states have value.

In the first, there is Breadth. A coalescence of unlimited scope with no known boundary. This can be likened to Receptiveness, Open-Mind, Curiosity, the Infinite, the Unknown and actively Seeking new information, knowledge, experience.

Overwhelmed by the vast beauty and number of shards we are likely to float and explore the vast sea of shards without spending too much time with any one of them; distracted from the beauty of one by the scintillating promise of another, the next and the many beyond that. In fascination we seek the brightest, shiniest, prettiest shard on which to place our attention, and we may go on seeking forever, for there is always yet one more that holds greater intrigue.

In the second, there is Depth. A compaction of all into one that requires no choice, no direction, and only offers one location. This can be equated to Conviction, Surety, Certainty, Assertion, The Finite, the Known and the belief that what one knows, is, has, does is superior to any other possibility. One has accumulated, condensed, hardened their options into a singular structure which clearly demarcates itself from the empty space outside of it. There is no need to explore, no other shard to compete for our interest, nothing else to know.

Now, generate in your mind an explosion of this crystal into the billions of floating shards that made an endless sea in the first example. Now, condense it again with an inverse explosion to form a singular crystalline tower. Now detonate it again. This, is the process by which we reflexively change shape and change shapes. It is of value to widen our realm to open ourselves to new ideas, practices, views, perceptions – but it is also of importance to focus in on and block out distractions to closely examine one particular shard.

It is like pneuma, Breath. Breathing in compacts the air into our body, breathing it out frees it to dissipate. And, like breathing, it is a cyclical process, in, out, in, out; our entire lifetime, from our first until our last. So it is with form – sometimes, the process becomes stagnated when the Sorcerer forgets to breathe in, or breathe out. This often happens, when preoccupation with finding or having found a given shard (or idea) amongst the sea, so fascinates the sorcerer that they become transfixed by it. When this happens, they reject all other shards, for the one they have found is seen as of such immense value that no other can compare. An example is (1) a belief, which takes on (2) a name, which imparts (3) an identity. For example: There are forces greater than us, They are known as THEM, I am One of THEM. Or, the moon and its tides rule my body, the moon is a Goddess named Hecate/Demeter, I am a worshipper of the moon, I am a witch. Or, the world is defined by good and evil, I am not evil, therefore I am good. Through defining our belief with a label we create an identity of relationship: I am One of THEM, a witch, a good person. etc.

In creating such an identity we create an immediate boundary of what constitutes ‘One of THEM’, a ‘witch’, a ‘good person’ – and the only way to determine this is to conjure perceived opposites, without which there is no meaning. We then determine what ‘is’ by what is not – i.e. Man makes no sense without Woman to compare. This tension of opposites is represented by the singular crystal vs the empty void. Valid content is the crystal, invalid content is the void. Every identity or form can only be constructed by mentally limiting what distinguishes it from being all other things. The process is often unconscious, however. And frequently dominates us without our awareness of what we are doing or the power of the boundary we are setting, and because it is a constructive process that gives us a feeling of control, it engages the Ego which loves nothing more than to assert a static reality that is safe, known and allows us to fully assert our being by knowing its relationship and context to the universe that surrounds it.

With the Ego involved, it feels so right, so clear, so justifiable that we gleefully adopt it as representative of our values, our identity, who we are and what we believe, what we stand for and what we fight against. We are absolutely sure we are living the truth, that we are fully appraised of every experience, and that reality holds no surprises. Each crystal shard has its own particulars, a dizzyingly complex labyrinth of factors that we enforce with our belief to be true. This is analogous to our Understanding.

But, the danger exists that enamourment with a given shard (i.e. a religious or political fixation) causes us to forget there were so many Other shards. Because we see no other options (having condensed them all) there are no challenges to our fixation, and if there are, we absorb them into the dynamic of our belief. In effect, we forget to breathe out again. Dominated by our unwavering conviction, and desire to possess only our crystal, we fiercely keep it compacted to endlessly explore the totality of its depth. Sacrificing breadth.

Under such a spell we create the inside/outside, the friend/foe, the shadow/light where what does not accord with our shard is cast outside of our shard. This same process is echoed in the creation of the Nation State, which sets up a territorial boundary. This immediately creates insiders that become 'civilians', and outsiders who become 'foreigners'. So it is, with knowledge too. If we ascribe to Stoicism, we might reject Libertinism; if we embrace Communism we may detest Capitalism. Our identity limits our possibility.

Remaining diffuse as a sea of shards, or solidifying into a singular structure are both useful in their own right. Often, the Forces of the world play their own part in forcing an explosion of the singular (i.e. a loss of faith for the religious) or condensing of the infinite (such as a person becoming a citizen of a country and therefore an 'Italian', or 'Australian' under legal jurisdiction of their nation).

Equally, being open to new experiences and ideas allows one to open and pass through any of the countless gateways available to human experience – from learning a new language, to becoming rich/homeless, to finding some new way to fold clothes, performing a task by watching or learning from other human beings, or being challenged to re-evaluate their views and practices, as examples.

Being closed off lets one block out challenging, change-bringing, disruptive questions and invalidations and allows the total unified consciousness to be directed toward the worship, practice, observance of narrow field of form. This is easier on the Ego, the path of least resistance as described by the law of thermodynamics and therefore favoured because it requires greatly less energy because within its bounds there is no new information to process. All is presumed known and needs only to be repeated ad infinitum. The addiction to this low-expenditure form of being means one need not think for oneself but merely follow a pattern, fully certain that it is the truth. The most energy expended in such stasis is in aggressive defence of the form, against any who would try to upset the neat encapsulation. I.e. the defence response of Scientology to detractors. This is the mainstay of cults, religion, politics, group think, nationalism, but also dominates isms, ologies and 'fields' and 'disciplines' etc. Essentially, the process is a reduction of Being to a low harmonic, often with others in a low harmonic, creating a powerful energy field. Each being reinforces the other by vibrating at the same frequency and controlling the frequency band through behavioural control which prevents deviance from the new established norm. This makes breaking out of the frequency band difficult if not impossible, hence the majority of the world is religious, meaning it expresses an irrational belief in faith, the divine, and reinforces itself daily through ceremony and ritual.

This process of condensing allows great exploration of a single form to take place – to learn in detail about the form in which one is imprisoned/encased (when unconscious) or embracing/exploring (when conscious). This process is a necessary aspect of developing and honing occult power. To lose oneself in, and to, a form so as to Become a specific identity, vibrating at a specific frequency, brings with it unique qualities, experiences, energies, insight, particularly as one makes contact with others vibrating on the same frequency. For instance, those obsessed with Cryptocurrency, or Cross-fit, or Gnosticism have their own cultures, norms, taboos, practices, language and identities. Often, hierarchical. Thus, one Becomes for instance, ‘a Satanist’ and can noticeably adjudge the presence of the above by telling others. Others will react in various ways to this claim of identity, which they may accept, but will also project their own definitions of ‘a satanist’ outward and onto the individual, with unexpected results. This is an interesting experiment to undertake when one is not in fact what one says, but can readily see how quickly identity offered is identity accepted: i.e. the juxtaposition and contradiction of appearance and essence. This is how people become transformed into ‘terrorists’, ‘communists’, ‘criminals’, ‘judges’, ‘children’, ‘evil’ etc.

But care must be taken. Losing yourself in a form, however beautiful, enticing, or perfect eliminates the desire to breathe. The Sorcerer can become trapped in belief systems that permanently limit their exploration, cut them off from being open to both old or new ideas, from speaking with or engaging with perceived enemies, or from learning in an evolutionary fashion by walling themselves off from those they hate, distrust, fear. Especially, when others convince them who their enemies are; this can limit what the Sorcerer reads, says, thinks, does, seeks and finds.

Beyond the control of the sorcerer, it is often only a matter of time before a form explodes of its own accord resulting in a devastating reevaluation and realisation that one tricked themselves or was tricked into believing one thing or another. This happens with relationships, friendships, alliances, agreements, faith and so on, and is usually a detonation caused by contradiction which destabilises the vibrational field. The pressure is also often too great from the maelstrom of the interplay of forces for any form to sustain itself indefinitely in one piece; it will eventually splinter into other forms, as likenesses or even rejections. Though forms have trouble remaining fixed, some sorcerers can be held indefinitely in a form if they are hypnotised in place, even their entire life.

So, Remember, to breathe in, and to breathe out, and to repeat. Collapse and condense, collapse and condense. For therein, lies the secret to Embrace, Exhaust, Evolve; the danger and the promise of forms and ‘Metamorphology’.

PHORM 361 DEGREES

Theoretically there are 360+ degrees in the art of Knowing Form. We may in the future exchange the term “Form’ with our ‘Phorm’ to relate what we mean – not what others mean or meant by this word. For now, we’ll leave it as it is.

THE SOURCE CODE

Knowing all there is to know about something is impossible unless you are the source of that form. If the form belongs to you, then you know all there is to know because you know it first. I.e. Anton Long and the ONA, Aquino and the Temple of Set, Myself and the Temple of THEM.

INSIDE OUT

The process of knowing everything there is to know about something includes knowing everything that has nothing to do with that form. The art of elimination is already a requisite in most minds as it uses its detection of absence to determine what is missing from its vaults. If you are a LaVeyan Satanist and your knowledge of Satanism consists of knowing the SB back to front then the moment you meet with the term ONA or book, NAOS, your mind will recognise that you do not recognise it. It is the hole in the cloud that is found by the cloud surrounding the hole.

THE REALIZATION OF ILLUSION

Insight Roles teach that you are just as capable of being something you think you are not – or living as a different person altogether, as you are, the one you presently believe yourself to be. And then, that you can be both, either or neither depending on what a situation requires. Going to extremes such as being a prostitute for a year and then becoming an abstinent monk pushes the boundaries of the persona a great deal further out from where they would normally be – which is often an immovable sense of how things should be to keep equilibrium with one’s ego and sense of I. But when you see that you can in fact be everything you hate or become someone else in a different life – the realisation dawns that the personality is as flimsy as it is incredibly resilient. What you learn in fact is how to regain control over it. Seeing how easy it is to become someone else, and how drastically that affects how people see you, treat you, usually marks the alchemical change where -I- is a temporal invention that can be changed merely by consciously willing new experiences. It also generates an understanding that people are in thrall to what they see, what they perceive and load onto a form or appearance to make it slot neatly into their perception. To them – if you act as something – you are that something. Yet you know inwardly that it is only an Act, and so you begin to see how easily people are fooled by appearances, by forms and by illusions – since they very rarely can discern the difference. One learns then and there that changing the form, changes reactions and can tailor a form to achieve a specific one. Suddenly, one is controlling forms, and learning how to no longer be controlled by them.

THE DARK SIDE OF THE MOON

The Temple of THEM will do whatever it takes to Know. We represent THEM, and the forces of THEM as they Are, incarnate. Thus, for us, Chaos means something very different than it does to those who drop its name but carefully protect their own forms and forums from being subject to it. Chaos is an all-eating destruction, an anathema to Forms, whatever they may be. Even the long vaunted IOT, (Illuminates of Thanateros) who claim to specialise in Chaos Magic, take great care not to actually introduce or allow others to introduce this force loose among it. Its name is thrown about like it were a harmless ball – but those that claim to use its force are often the strongest proponents of Order. Chaos is feared, and always has been feared since the Beginning, or at least as far back as humans were able to begin forming artificial concepts to keep it Out and Away from them. This is evident in the fierce loyalty to Order and existing forms shown by any individual or group when attempting to dismantle their grip on Form and actualise chaos amongst them. So, if even the Chaos Magicians refuse to allow Chaos to be presenced in its full force – how does one know more than half, or any more than the Magicians will allow you to see? They may explain themselves and their reluctance in a myriad of ways – but what it comes down to, is that Chaos is anathema to form – and thus, unconscious hypocrisy and fear. THEM know that Chaos unleashed can destroy any container holding it – even LHP containers. But we don't care – I suppose we're the mad scientists of the magic world doing experiments where the damage to the form is irrelevant. We're not interested in holding together the containers. We want to Know. Only then can we make an informed judgement about Chaos – or any other thing. All too often self-honesty leads to ugly truths that must be swallowed if progress is to be made in really understanding the esoteric currents of magic. But you either want to Know – or you want to live in Happy-land under the deceitful occult ego. Pride is a small sacrifice when you know what it's really worth.

We've learned that Chaos is even feared by us – something which this experiment has revealed as evident by our continuous flow of writing with great care taken to make it lucid and accessible lest they be forgotten or unsaid. Our forums, WordPress and society rely on Order being kept for the Temple of THEM to flourish. And this only lends to the authentic truth that the modern usage of Chaos as a force is largely a myth, watered down into an impotent unpredictability people pretend to us – yet we Remember it, we were Scarred by it, to the extent that we will do everything in our power to prevent it from presencing itself – the entire conscious function of the human being seems especially designed as a Gate against it – whatever the Magicians may say. If you doubt this – then be LHP and test it for yourself. The extreme fragility of forms can be highlighted merely by acting a little strange and uncharacteristically, let alone actively sabotaging the structures that sustain any form and bring wrath against you.

FLIPSIDE

Duality is a bitch and it's a liar. Let's say you want to know Robin Hood – the famous outlaw of English legend. You join him and his band of merry men and live happily amongst the tress of Sherwood, robbing the rich to give to the poor. Occasionally you might see him lose his temper as people do in life – but never in legend. There are no accounts of Robin having a hissy fit over who ate the last pan-fried cake or stretched his green tights – but if you know anything about people – you can be pretty sure, it happened. Maybe he didn't lose his temper often – but it happened, it had to have.

Likewise, we never hear of Robin using the toilet, crying, farting or complaining of sore feet. We only hear, Mythos – the best of characteristics and virtues to emphasise the Heroism of Robin – with all the rest of life's little wonders stripped from the record. In our heads we build or have built for us a notion or ideal of Robin that relates his Legend – but not his reality. What for instance, was it like to be an enemy of Robin Hood? If you only know him as a friend, do you know him at all? No. you know his public face, his friend-sphere face with all the benefits that confers. But what if you were his enemy? How would he treat you, would he be so benevolent, polite, forgiving, a gentleman? Or if you angered him? Or tried to kill him? You could observe his reactions to others should these attempts be made on him – but you still don't know, what it's like. You don't have the vantage point or the equipment to experience being an enemy of Robin unless you are an enemy of Robin. You can guess, perhaps quite accurately – but you can't Know. And THEM want to Know – for themselves – what is what. I, RA, know a great deal about the ONA through synthesising what I have read, learned, observed, and practiced. I've been a great friend of the ONA for a long time for instance, and I have successfully educated many of its enemies – but for a temporary time – I have also been its enemy.

I have therefore learned first-hand how the ONA reacts to its enemies from a direct vantage point and what it feels like to be the enemy. I have been at the sword point of its tactics, strategies and experienced the feeling of being closed out of its ranks. I have seen its degrees of vindictiveness, its anger at betrayal and observed how it moves when it is angered against specific assaults or challenges and deals with conflict.

Now knowing this – I have an even rounder, fuller, and perhaps unique understanding of the ONA, risky though it may have been – I have learned more from being on both sides of the fence than anyone can learn from being on either one. Yet I have also rejoined the ONA despite this campaign against it and the vitriol generated by both sides has acted as an acid for the stage of putrefaction and a new distillation. It is evident then, that this drive for 360+ degrees of form is understood and even anticipated by the Order, despite the hassle it causes for temporal forms.

Knowing both “sides” of the ONA, combines those “sides” into a realisation that they are exactly the same – I.e. that there are no sides just the traditional illusion of them. Unified the forms previously separate by projection become the new prime materia or single form to which a new opposite must be sought – and so the alchemical transformation goes beyond 360 degrees.

THEM, NUMBERS, FORM AND THE MAGI THE INEXORABLE MARCH OF TINY STEPS TOWARD INSYNSIAN

Literary Concepts and faith in those concepts form the backbone of the Magian Matrix. But the tendency to write about the structure of language and communication tends to lend the idea that only words have this ingrained duality about them – but it is perhaps more so with the subtle but omnipresent phenomena of numbers [perhaps because the majority of the world are right-handed] that the machinations of monotheism and God may indeed lie. Perhaps it is not with the usual suspects of the occult that the distortion of the matrix lies but in the ability of the Magian mindset to capitalise off clever inventions – inventions which were often created in daily life where Christianity was the practiced and enforced norm – and hence Insynsian had a huge impact as a backdrop behind most mentalities.

Immortality and the desire to be remembered impregnates many innovations – as does the desire to be rich, famous and revered. Behind these mundane concerns of the individuals living in their moments there is a chain of such innovations that could be said to have been considerable contributing factors in the way our brains developed a unilateral preference for a 23 Syndrome rather than a bi-, tri- or multi-partmental set of perspectives or syndrome[s].

Numbers, mathematics play a huge part in our story as human beings and as the backdrop to the increasing lean toward shaping our minds a particular way over another, at least culturally. The author assumes the reader has prior knowledge of theoretical mathematics.

One of the interesting facts about numbers is that most numbers cannot even be drawn or defined with there being an infinite amount of numbers between integers 1 and 2 – these being irrational and wholly impossible to write down since they just keep going. There are numerous examples of simple looking equations giving esoteric and unexpected answers. Rather than accept these fundamental “problems” with mathematics – which many claim to be precise instruments with which to explain the world – a great deal of the phenomena of numbers is esoteric and magical – even logic cannot explain nor derive answers for certain equations. Again and again, these uncomfortable anomalies and imperfections have been glossed over so as to enable the use of ‘perfect’ numbers – to create the sense of a seamless method of enquiry.

Algebra was instrumental in providing a means where numbers that could not be written down, could still be used – but this ignoring of the Actual nature of numbers is typical and traditional to the Magi – we can see this convenient glossing over of such imperfections in systems echoed everywhere for the sake of making them work. One example being in Courts where what actually happened is never what is reviewed and there is a pressing need for someone’s actions to be quantified into a box, for a case to be either guilty or not guilty, endless arrays of either/or and it is not about facts, but demonization of each party and who has the better more convincing Lawyer who can cast the right spells by phrasing words the right way.

But numbers have a grey area just as words do – between the concept of the God and the Devil there are also infinite concepts – but most of these prove too difficult to grasp so people gravitate toward the lazier option, the easier option, the option that traditionally humans have gone for. Dualism. Because humans do not like the irrational – that’s why we shorten things, take short-cuts, call one well-known irrational number pi rather than try to write it down;- it’s beyond us to do – and we need clear chunky hand-holds and things that are perfect and do not leave room for doubt, we need for us and others to have Faith in any system deployed – but both mathematics and words are wholly irrational products which have been altered to suit – suit what? Insynsian.

What is fundamental about THEM is its emphasis on a plurality in all degrees – we have seen again and again what inventions the mind throws up under the mindset of Insynsian – we need to break that cycle to get a range of minds functioning on a new level to disrupt the Magi – not merely to highlight its problems but to actively offer solutions. What has essentially been the process of the Magi is to omit those things in Nature it finds offensive or that do not match the Ego’s function for absolute clarity.

More often than not we have achieved only agreement on a settle point where difficult concepts that do truly speak of Nature’s matrix are ironed out, rounded off and re-packaged in a human-centred format, not a life-centred format.

History – is the perfect example. This Logical approach is of course the result of a tradition of fitting facts into human schema – not the other way around. It is this rounding off of facts that enables the Matrix to evolve by simplifying things into basic building blocks rather than continually grasping for them every time we want to use them. But it is the same rounding off that has led to the common ignorance toward the true state of things because they were too difficult for the human being to grasp in their raw state and needed to be abstracted into simpler but distorted forms. This prejudice has coloured and still does All spheres of human enquiry.

Now was Individuation's natural course coloured/alterd by the pressures of monotheistic Christianity, the mind's natural processes distorted by this impression of monotheism as a strive for the Absolute or was Individuation a product of it or before it? Early Christians believed that 2 was representative of the Devil because it created division [an alternative to Insynsian]. Zoroastrianism believed that 2 represented an eternal battle evenly balanced. Though it cannot be related here or perhaps anywhere with any clarity and completeness the concept of numbers slowly developed [not continuously – various insights were lost and found again – others lost forever] over thousands of years to a point where several inventions brought us closer to Binary or Dualism as an Industrial Cog.

In 1646 CE Gottfried Leibnitz born in Germany[Saxony] developed the philosophy behind Binary numbers. He believed the universe could be represented more elegantly through binary and its conflicting yes/no, on/off nature such as male-female, light-dark, right-wrong. Towards the end of his life, he began to believe that binary numbers represented Creation, with 1 symbolising God, and 0 depicting the Void. This was noticed by Joseph Jacquard born in Lyons, France 1752 – who developed an automated Loom that used binary punch-cards to make the correct stitching. This made him a wealthy man and by 1812 there were 11,000 such looms in use in France. His machine was the first to use binary numbers to store memory. Charles Babbage would arrive on the scene shortly after and create the Difference Engine which produced tables of numbers by calculating and adding differences to the previous numbers. He is credited as the father of the computer. George Boole [from Boolean] predicated a new system of logic with three values he believed could describe any logical statement; these were known as the Boolean operators, AND, OR and NOT. Gradually the world was becoming more logical and less natural. Less complicated and more controlled.

It was perhaps Einstein's theories that seemed to blow apart this gradual immersion into more rigid logic and more exact measurement with the special and general theories of relativity. Now discussions of Quantum emerged, of infinity or constants such as c [the speed of light] against which all manner of previously held candles of idea were extinguished overnight. But this leap forward in science has not had the effect of challenging the Church and its monotheistic beliefs – but of becoming the Church itself in a new vein. Science was born of the rigidity of the Church – and appears to have little in common with it – but it has everything to do with it – even today science quests after a Universal theory to explain everything – some special theory of All – with the identical absolutism of the Magi, believing itself to be removed from such antiquated notions as God – it is merely another stage/phase or face of Insynsian.

Where did Mathematics/Science meet with the Divine? It appears to have taken root in the concept of Infinity. The concept of infinity was considered by a Greek named Zeno, furthered by Aristotle but never really gained ground as a reality merely as a potential. In the 13th century the writings of theologian Thomas Aquino bound Aristotelian philosophy [which presently shaped the world] into an intricate link with religion. It was there that God entered the world as an infinite subject and the notion of an ever-lasting infinite soul became integrated too.

A fellow named Tertullian (c. 160 – c. 225 AD) was instrumental in setting a hedge around Scriptures by insisting that there are limits to Jesus's injunction to seek and find. He was just one of hundreds of thousands of people who put in place devices that lead to causal outcomes that strengthened the power of the Church and its forms immeasurably – but which Church has never achieved Unification [as good as though, really].

Tertullian's edicts were adopted by the Romans and thus a huge number of splintered groups of Christians who at the time read the Scriptures differently and thus got very different things from it suddenly became split into the more forceful Orthodox believers with sanctioned backing and the rest, who were labelled Heretics. His efforts would lead to the demand that Scripture be authorised to be understood by a very select group of people, the same way for all Christians [a closed canon]. This was but one act of intent [who can say what the intent contained] that was responsible for shaping the way Christianity affected the world and the way it did so.

We listed others above in the inventions of mathematicians that opened the gates to the industrial age and the machine age – are they too Magian?

Any serious examination of history leaves one with not only the sense that the linear continuum is a farcical notion to entertain but also that it was not some over-arching plan by a group of super-powerful wizards in a magical tower with magical genius that created Christianity or caused it to be sustained but the common will of people taken bit by bit in the same directions via new directions. Christianity, whilst oppressive is not the cause of human suffering. It was the acts of hundreds of thousands of ordinary people in positions of power, and millions more who have not survived in historical memory who little by little made small changes over thousands of years that lead to the way things are now. Not because these changes proceeded in an orderly arrangement, implemented one after the other without argument – but largely, because when you demand that everyone do something, there will always be groups that defy that order, leading to new kinds of forms, counter-forms, counter-culture whose ideals have their own agenda. As they grow, they too schism, split, divide, disagree and form new kinds of forms too. We are but a virus dividing itself – in thrall to powers far beyond us that rule us blindly.

There is an occult expression called the Cosmic Egg. It is the supposed shape of the human body performing all possible extensions and poses of its biology to the limits of its reach at once forming an egg about itself. How many of these do you think you could perform?

There is another occult expression called the Sinister Grotesque. But in a lesser form between smiling and frowning how many other facial motions do you go through? We treat vastly complicated things as simple for so long that we take them for granted, the next generation inherits them as facts. When we think about it, we describe two motions. I was smiling and then I frowned. Our human biology and traditional knowledge system drastically limits our ability to grasp the thousands of milli, nano, fermi seconds during which the muscles, sinews, electronic signals, and show to us the thousands of faces in between each “set” of emotions we recognise.

How many colours can we recognise? Approximately several thousand – and yet we have supposedly millions of colours presented to us. What is the point if we cannot tell the difference? Moreover, how many colours do you actively recognise? Seven? Twelve? Maybe two dozen? On a regular basis. But probably not many more than that. The Magi are known as Closers – they close things off with words and numbers and other tools from the true Chaos that it is. This is a service to mankind for which they are never consciously thanked – but, it went past a point where it should have – this is where the distortion began to become apparent in hindsight.

The entire world is built on an artificial construct of not-quites, good-enough’s, and fair estimates. I had often believed mathematics to be a science built on absolutes but its not – hence we have Phi, once of the most well-known of the irrational numbers stemming from the Fibonacci sequence, which number we cannot even write down. The corner-cutting in the worlds progressive development has allowed society and mankind to rise up amidst a paradise that fits its own image. Or rather, an image that has striven for ever since the possible alternatives were hunted, extinguished, murdered or erased from history as the Magi swept across the planet in a monotheist fervour. How many times was the truth written down only to be burned, extinguished, buried, changed, discredited, hidden, forgotten? What comes down to us is minimal and yet it forms the backbone of the majority of human thought – few things have changed since Euclid gave us the principles of Math, Newton the principles of physics, the Greeks the principles of drama and philosophy.

These inventions are all that survived to us in the present day – but imagine what we might have been able to do or become had we had more of these missing discoveries, inventions, thoughts, radical innovations and ideas.

But they have been erased, forgotten or deliberately destroyed somewhere along the way because of Insynsian – the desire for One truth, one God, one Law, one Way, one, one, one. And what is one? It is Indivisible. It is God. And it is our insidious biological imperatives twisted up in this development of something Divine that have brought the world to its present state. Why is the world so easy to control for so few? Because extraordinarily complex questions have been answered in simple terms of yes and no. You are either doing the right thing and with God – or you are not and turned over to the Devil. This is not some moral judgement limited to religious zealots – it is everywhere, parroted by everyone. Us/Them. Wrong/Right. You're In/You're Out.

If you can imagine that the whole world has been trained to use tools a certain way for thousands of years – you can imagine just how difficult it is to try to use them differently – and the absurdity that it requires an 'occult' school of renegade thinkers to try to re-examine this messy chiselled sculpture of the Matrix and envisage what it looked like when it was still a part of the stone.

But now we come to the most difficult part of the Temple of THEM and the requisite necessity for humans to adopt in order to evolve and to come closer to the truth of the matters at heart and for many members of THEM, it is hard to stomach. But it IS the reality. It is here, time to discard the Mythos so carefully built up around you and here the greatest danger that you will no longer understand the purpose of the Temple of THEM.

This is where the concept of Mundanes vs. Sinister breaks down – this is where we take a step further into the darkness despite enjoying the light of believed lies which provided a tension, a struggle, a purpose to our Work. The idea that we were up against a monstrous entity of conspiracy that has carefully retained power throughout thousands of years or that one side is evil the other good. When we play these games – we do nothing more than act like the so-called enemy, why? Because WE are the enemy – the enemy comes from us, from the ideas we hold and the way we hold them – WE, are the MAGI, the SINISTER, the OTHERS, US and THEM. Any depth of research shows many things, chief of which is the absolute difficulty even amongst academics, occultists, specialists, experts of agreement on any set of particular facts or circumstances.

The truth of any Distortion will forever lay buried. The trail is ice cold and inhumanly vast. What connections we can make to join one causal phenomenon to another are in vain because our sources are largely modern, largely corrupted, and always have or had an agenda. We have a fraction of the available information and of that fraction we only process or can process a far smaller fraction – we'd like to think we can understand History – but only so long as facts are definite, definitions are absolute, and vast elements of the equation are culled out beforehand, and we concentrate our efforts to PROVE something to suit our agenda – [which alone should ring alarm bells since that is what History IS not just for us, but for all the others who wrote about it] – can we wrap our hand around this leviathan of the deep in which only the crown of the head is visible and the rest forever submerged. Disappointing as it may be – this is the reality.

The idea of a Magian Lodge whose members conspired throughout the aeons to bring us to where we are now is an approach at best used by polemicists – those that seek to equally divide normative orthodoxy and heresy against it. It is almost demanded that there BE an enemy outside of us, someone or some group whose ideals clash with our own, who threatens to dominate the stage with false ideals, outlandish theories, damaging rhetoric. We believe ourselves engaged in an occult war because it provides the impetus to put into practice the Ethos of our people as Conquerors. How to be a conqueror if there is nothing to conquer? So, we construe for ourselves, a narrow, limited-vision, idea of the past so that we can decide the future. But the one thing many people fail to take into account is the corruption of the information that is RIFE. The majority of people do not KNOW how to read. They accept facts and information at face value, and even the Sinister uses a majority of Christian sources, written by Christians, to prove its agenda. Facts become weapons – based on faith in the very idea of facts.

Agenda is everywhere – it is human to have an agenda – its why we seek to become Dark Ones, or overthrow the Magian, or get together at all as isolated people across the planet, or in close-proximity groups – we have an agenda. We think we understand the very nuts and bolts of what is “WRONG” with the world or our culture and we seek to “RIGHT” it – we believe ONLY our movement can do so, because ONLY our movement understands what has been broken and how to fix it. And, its why we support others we think support us – because their agenda, helps our agenda. And, its why we war against those who we think don’t support our agenda, because it makes our agenda harder to attain. This is an approach that humans have taken for hundreds of thousands of years. Tribal difference correlates directly to the forms that possess us.

The truth is exceedingly simple, Human beings, who don’t enjoy their condition, want someone or something to blame. Sometimes, there IS someone to blame, who is deliberately making life hard or unfair.

But to lay the blame of the worlds condition at the feet of a mythical Illuminati is insane. It is not just insane – but easier. The frightful problem with humans is that we do not live long – and even if we spend our whole lives working to understand History – we cannot achieve more than a cursory understanding – our lives are simply too short and our capacities too limited – otherwise we should realise that everything is far too complicated to have conclusions. The very concept of conclusions is to give up, believing one has exhausted the material from which they draw facts and points to the point where an agenda has been sufficiently proved. All of the sources drawn from had writers who also had agendas – tipping facts one way or another. When a writer encountered something he didn't like, his peers wouldn't like, or something that went against his agenda – what did he do? He didn't accept it and change himself – he changed the writing, edited it, omitted it, or altered it, instead.

We must be HONEST with ourselves, our EGO must learn to be HONEST too. The problems that plague humanity are not driven by some amorphous description that seems bound to a definite area of people when we say Christianity. What is a Christian? Someone that believes in God? Someone that goes to Church? Someone that tells other's they are going to Hell? Someone that follows the teachings of Christ?

The term is as nebulous as any other, including Magi. We can cut corners and treat these notions as facts, as given terms for observable phenomena, build a view on them using their stones for our masonry – but the Adept knows that's all it is. Sometimes that's all that is needed – trading one story for another is often the best humanity can hope for – and such trading can work, where new stories promote new expressions, new reactions, new forms until they too solidify and become the new orthodoxy.

If you do not see the enormous egoism and human-centred perception at play across the board in taking this stance, or that this is the very stance millions of people take – then you cannot evolve into what lays beyond this primitive perceptive tradition. The Temple asks a question that is quintessential of psychic evolution – DO, we have to have an enemy to provide impetus to our motion?

What does it mean to be as Nietzsche once said: Beyond Good and Evil?

It means, Whatever you can say about what it is to be Sinister – I can equate with being no different from those things that define the Magi. The Magi are lazy, incompetent, foolish? The mundanes are sub-human, incompetent, ignorant?

The Empires that rule the world have never been Satanic, incompetence would not reduce resistance to nil or take the acts against it in its stride, as for foolish – only a fool underestimates their limitations to comprehend the mind-boggling scope of what Christianity has achieved. Fools focus on what it has not achieved and cite from sources of its achievement – philosophers, artists, inventors, warriors, sorcerers. The sheer staggering expertise of Christianity has required truly serious head-scratching to provide a counter form.

ONA sought to be it – but is nothing more than an arm of it. It matches, action for action, the same polemic attitude demonised as being a trait of the Magian. Vindex is a thinly disguised Jesus, Baphomet a sexist icon that oppresses Women, it's understanding of History as blind as any other – nowhere does it accept or acknowledge the limitations of the human to understand, because it is unable to come to terms with the reality it never will.

There are more books in any library than we will ever be able to read. There are more experiences on the planet than we will ever be able to enjoy/endure. There is more wrong with our worldview than we will ever want to admit.

We can flesh out a reasonable utility of understanding, enough to provide context and purpose, but we can never truly know, and this is a devastating thing the Ego must accept because it believes it can do anything – and it is this trait that makes humans so persistent, motivated and determined to overcome. But like all the other groups peer to it, it seeks a superman to hide its shame – it wants to overcome but it is already overcome – our memories are not secure, our lifespan is short, our ability to comprehend in more than a handful of dimensions is finite, our eyes form most of the judgement, we have only a small wedge of consciousness opposed to the vast gulf of the rest of the psyche, we are biased, prejudiced, and loaded with an agenda. We are possessed of a 23 syndrome and see demons and angels wherever we look – they just take on different guises. We understand only through brief approximations, we know neither the secret of nature or the universe, and we struggle at the best of times just to be ourselves. We are fraught with complexes, neuroses, psychic disturbance, pathology, compensations – the need to drink, eat, stay warm, breathe, excrete all regularly – our bodies are mostly helpless against colds, viruses, internal malfunction, cancers, death.

We seek to be superman because we cannot be super enough to accept ourselves as we are – we need to be Gods, Overmen, Super-Beings, Immortals, to go live with Aliens, to believe in Crop Circles, Pyramid Power, Annunaki – all to save ourselves from our condition as flimsy frail human beings. We hear of stem cell research, nanotechnology, bio-mechanics, genetics and other things going on around the planet to prolong human life, slow down human deterioration, engineer better, stronger, parts and pieces – and this belief, or rather, dis-belief at what we are – is the power core of the Magi. Of the “Magian” worldview and motivator to worship God, explain the Devil, or deny both.

It is not enough to be human we want to be inhuman. And if we were inhuman – we’d probably want something else. And this is the job of the Ego – to decide what we are and what we want to be. And it looks at what we are and what we want to be and concentrates on closing the distance between reality and fantasy. But we fall short most times frustrating the ego immeasurably. Because that is its function – to struggle toward an ideal of us. And if we should achieve it – to struggle toward an ideal of others, and a widening scope of the world around it.

It is not a dirty word to be human. We shouldn’t go so far to say we’re proud to be one – we simply have no choice. And we share the planet with billions of other ones.

It is our lot. Our condition. Some luckier than others, some much luckier than others. Born into wealth, or a peaceful location. Some whose backdrop in life is death, suffering and war. Some whose backdrop is security, fine foods and fast cars.

We must divest these things of our emotional attachment for it clouds our judgement. Satanism could never have been so strong a form if Christianity had not been so oppressive – every action has an opposite an equal reaction – if Christianity had been flimsy or simple it should have created a shadow of Satanism that was the same. If you set up a polemic between two forces, then the one will be as strong as the other you push off against. Because its all in the mind. The Magi, the very instrument of calling them a Magi are parts of a ceaseless equation we must not believe but understand. No-one wants to acknowledge the validity of the forms they hate that they push off against to make their own stand, to reject something in order to build their own something – but why? Such pitiful ignorance even after thousands of years of how forms work, of what is required, of the nasty, brutish, ugly aspects of interaction involving events and persons is as equally a part of form as any pleasant aspects of it. The Traitor may be hated, feared, despised but alchemically he or she is the catalyst for change, the tumbling of the house of cards, the loss of control we pretend doesn't exist only to be sorely reminded that we have very little – even as we might think we understand people and their motives to a critical degree – there is always a surprise, a knife, a shadow – as there has always been. Someone to be reviled and blamed – as if we are destined to perform the same gormless dance forever without ever gaining any understanding of the importance of the SINISTER.

The Sinister practice life-affirming things whilst the Magi practice a worship of Death? Nonsense. The division between the two is a convenience at best – there is no division – you are as Magian as you are Sinister, as right as you are wrong, as black as you are white. If we take a polemic outside of our own, and look at two nations warring, or two tribes, or even a couple arguing – we can clearly see there are “two sides to every story” and that “both are as bad as one another” – it is there shortsightedness and ongoing involvement with each other that keeps the conflict going, the actions and cheeky slights, aggressive pushes, cutting remarks that keep it fuelled. Keep them at each other throats without ever stopping to reconsider if the whole thing was not just absurd. This applies to the Magi and Sinister too.

But the disadvantage of accepting this is that it seems to not be true – that you are more one than the other – why? Because the Ego doesn't know how to motivate itself without an enemy. The conflict continues even when you understand this – because others don't understand it. Let the Aeon Grind On...

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE ARTE OF DECEPTION

Please note that due to the complexity of this MSS other Works focusing on particular aspects of the Greater Whole by THEM may need to be consulted throughout. As an infiltrator (I prefer Wanderer) of many groups by many means to obtain the necessary information for me to piece together my puzzle – I have learned a formidable deal about the Arte of Deception (AOD).

Herein I present a few of my Insights regarding the AOD.

It should be understood by now that members of THEM each have differing opinions as to the techniques and the definition of the LHP and Black Magic – just as we do with Shape-Shifting. Just as members do not have a unitary agreement (But rather allow a convenient representation to present itself) of the nature of the Dark Ones, for instance, each of us expressing their own views – in Sinister Solidarity. Our interests in shape-shifting range from the mythology and magicology of the ancient practices of the Werewolf, invocation of the Dark Gods and the presencing of their energies via the human medium, physical metamorphosis via mastery over the cosmic egg, and the diffusion of consciousness into the acausal via a variety of advanced techniques, just to name a few.

However, this Introduction will deal with nomenclature concerning some basic techniques of glamour, deception, misdirection, and protection vital to add to any foundation of fundamental skills in the development of the Arte of Deception as it relates to and concerns a specific nexion of the Temple of THEM.

The hidden/occult/esoteric side of the Grand ‘Science’ of what is conveniently referred to as “Shape-Shifting” is generally misunderstood and greatly underestimated regarding the intricacy and complexity of its execution due to the actual underlying nature of deception (of which there are many esoteric secrets) – for if it is not “misunderstood or greatly underestimated” then it is a glamour incomplete.

That is to say – if the seams of the geometry do not show – then how are they (the audience) to know there is a Deception at all? Sometimes it is best to act entirely invisibly – however, in presencing a form (or formulae, to be more accurate) such as there is something of a crucial arte in the Visible.

Some Preliminary Notes: One way to think of form is the following. Imagine a dark room containing people who are standing still. A voice suggests to them that the room contains deep pits in the floor. It is thus predictable that for some of those people – the belief in pits will come into existence (as forms) and influence their behaviour accordingly. Whether or not the content is there is irrelevant. The illusion of authority (a Deceptor) and the power of suggestion are enough to make the pits real for some. Pending of course on the relationship of the voice of authority to the people in the dark room, an outcome can be predicted. But those variables are discussed in another MS. The Deceptor aims to gain the trust of those he wishes to deceive in order to deceive them more thoroughly and more easily, by understanding form and the tremendous influence its temporal nature has on humanity.

In general – a ‘form’ as apprehended by THEM is a causal temporal interstice, which is perceived to have specific, general and abstract properties by the human nexion pending their degree of consciousness.*/

For us, a ‘form’ is a convenient way of referring to any invention of human perception that results from the validated understanding or binding/restricting definition of interpretation within parameters of description, content, or value of the content of one’s perception. But a form is not merely a convenient way to describe objects considered physical or real. A form can be intangible too – it can be an Ideology, a Religion, A set of beliefs. A form can also be chemical, mathematical, geometrical, lyrical, literal, or musical. Forms arise from the stimulus received by the five senses or the rich tapestry of experience they saturate us with leaving us to ‘make sense’ of their presence; these may be considered raw forms exhibited by the cosmos and its being. But when these forms are subsequently interpreted by the human being causally such dimensional bias disables the means to see these exhibitions as they Are. Any instance in which a conclusion is made of ones perception by restricting stimulus into a manageable frame of reference so as to control or understand it (thus wilfully extracting meaning and mentally separating it from its acausal component as a connexion to everything else) is to presence a form.

From an Acausal viewpoint all Forms are considered perceptually limited/separated from their acausal component. And while essence remains imbued with the Acausal, appearance can only be experienced and seen causally, that is, from a limited, causal perception. In the context of the Adept who perceives the Acausal and the Causal, (as well as their own Nexion and Co-Nexion to both of these ‘dimensions’) all forms as manifested by human-beings regardless of their Time, Technology, Culture or Civilisation (thus far) are artificial imprisonments of the acausal, a wishful projection by the current consciousness onto what THEM have called the ‘Black Clay’. (Qv. MSS In Sinister Solidarity.) And are representative of the markers that characterise the geometry of an Epoch.

Essentially the Black Clay is that world we perceive via our consciousness either as an Adept or Non-Adept in its pure state – that is, the moment of crystallisation that provokes the consciousness to exit/extrude its body and diffuse itself in the greater being when the human nexion becomes acutely aware of two pure instances of consciousness (there are more than two – but this divisive/unifying experience is one of the earliest of an Adept). One being the irresistible pull of what was hitherto felt as an isolated location of the consciousness inside the skull (human-centred geometry) – the other being awareness that there exists a unified collective ‘something’ external/ulterior to one’s pure point of consciousness – but of which it too, is a part. (life-centred geometry) (Qv. The Simultaneous Pulse, Mvim III). Suddenly, convenient abstractions to terminize a duality in space, i.e. an assertion of one’s position and the position of one’s emanations in relation to other phenomena – “Inside/Outside”, “Esoteric/Exoteric”, “Black/White” begins to quaver, then ominously vibrate, and shatter. Consciousness of one’s Co-Nexion with the Acausal, achieved.

The Black Clay is an analogy for a blank slate onto which humanity draws conclusions – thus re-naming part of that blank slate with a temporal name, and thus form. The Black Clay is a unified connexion and experience of the Acausal and Causal that is broken down by causal consciousness into separate, abstract chunks of manageable context (a process made necessary for any human being without acausal awareness) and referred to both generally and specifically i.e. as time/space, or chemical, atomic, sub-atomic ‘matter’ that we can physically see, hear, touch, taste and smell. But as the experiments of Scientific analysis have thus far shown – the universe and its content cannot be separated into one set of singular/unified components on Any level – in fact it is a pointed comment to say that the very concept of Singular may very well be a causal-inspired myth. ‘It’ has proven to be multiple, even at the smallest level of causal perceptual isolation. Thus, the Black Clay represents a raw undefined state of perception, prior to human projection warping it from its complete context into bifurcations on the causal plane that are ‘understood’ ‘known’ or ‘made sense of’.

It is this acausal purity that concerns THEM: however it be approached or its context sought to be made clear in causal terms and systems; from Physical-Based Sorcery, Seven-Fold Way Satanism, Form and Chaos, Buddhism, Asceticism, by members of whatever particular mode of thought and apprehension: the process has thus far seemed to be similar for all, indeed is a phenomena dangerously close to being called ‘Objective’. Such a process is what might be called a hyper-cubic inversion/expulsion of one’s own being: since one must effectively (and the following are simplistic abbreviations for caustic and complex systems of practice) “turn ones being inside out”, “die to oneself”, “expel the Self” and “dissolve the possession of Own”, to exhibit (co-join) with its Acausal source. But what has not yet been mentioned by the ONA – is whether the consciousness, diffused into the Acausal – can re-manifest/re-assemble itself – or, come back from the Abyss. This, I am inclined to believe is theoretically possible. But should such a Dark God return – it is impossible to know how to quantify it – all we can do thus far is speak of things outside of their duality, turn to new concepts of De-Abstracted Perception which is to place one’s perception of the world in an Acausal context – to be a student of Cliology.

Much of what has been revealed via the ONA and attempted by its proteges has not yet had the time to mature, moreover, the distortion of magic has not decreased, if anything it has multiplied, with the magical sector still expecting magic to be physical – to be perceived by the five senses available to them. That is to say, that the abandonment of certain causal habits has not yet occurred and until it does, the means of Acausal Perception will not come.

When anything is generalised in this bifurcation of the Black Clay – it becomes something and is perceived by the human consciousness as a temporal form borne of necessity and convenience. On the superficial level generalisation is a convenient way to communicate – but it quickly becomes extremely uncomfortable and highly unstable if any serious analysis or depth is undertaken into it. People are aware of this even if on an unconscious level – but to make communication possible, this lazy standardisation is accepted. Only specialists and sadomasochists concern themselves with the sticky philosophical problems of analysis of what the sky actually is, and in what context, and from whose point of view, on whose authority, and so on ad infinitum.

Of course a convenient lack of depth requires that other generalisations are made – “grass” “green” “sky” “blue” all a natural part of human living. But, a downside to this laziness is that slowly one can begin to enmesh themselves in an artificial geometric prism of pre-supplied interpretations and meanings. This prism is segmented and catalogued and revised and relied upon – until one day one becomes completely trapped in a self-sufficient web of interpretation and can no longer perceive beyond the interpretation.

Now, as far as THEM are concerned, this is where Form, as a self-sufficient and already explained library of catalogued phenomena that controls interpretation of reality via a pre-made set of labels and projections, opens up the wonderful world of counter-projections or ‘opposites’, that is to say a dynamic tension between points. Such counter-projections are as much an illusion as the projections in the first place – but are nevertheless powerfully vulnerable to exploitation by those with the awareness of the context of the enmeshment of beings trapping themselves in one, causal, plane.

In the active sense: One can either work to un-mesh such beings – or enmesh them further. It is thus that the idea of geometry and the superimposition of it over the Matrix is useful for perceiving the world as a matrix containing all manner of shapes made of, say, light, which light is not real to the Acausal Perceptor and whose shape divests it secrets by revealing its inner structure, while the same shape is cloaked with projections, its essence hidden and covered with the ‘real’ by the Causal Perceptor. It might be useful to reveal here that THEM are in some sense still ‘Against Time’. This Resistance makes itself clear in the unconscious reference to such things as a ‘Sinister Matrix’ – which is a re-building of the context of the world to survive the causal effects of the psychic waste pooling in our Time. One simple contemporary example of this is the disturbing nature of advertisements and the enervating vibrations they deliver: one might even be convinced that the word of the aeon was in fact, “NOW”. Certainly, the word of the past and coming few decades.

The content of the Temple MSS “UAE” may be useful to understand the limiting effects of causal perception and the following extract from Mvimaedivm II may on one level, be of use here to explain how dimensionally restricted perception limits an object’s essence: When one forms a view of an object one immediately limits its reality. Its reality is confined by these limitations, the object becomes slave to our perception and subsequently restricted in terms of what it is and isn’t, can and cannot be or do by a precise mode or model of laws and rules. While this doesn’t actually change the object, it changes everything else. When one sets in stone the conditions for an object’s existence, the object is interpreted thusly by those conditions – yet these conditions are finite, not infinite, and use only a small section of the possibilities open to the object, by classifying it capable of only one or a few modes of existence according to a base of conceptions one has proceeded from.

One projects error upon an object, because of relativity. Note however, that the writings of THEM are an approximate for the Essence: they can bring some closer to perceiving these energies we speak of as they are, but they cannot convey that energy itself. While the MSS of Liber 13/13 in particular those sections dealing with Life and Human-Centred Geometry and the MSS Universes Parallel further explain in detail the other components that come together as separate studies focused on forces and magical understanding to bring this complex issue into a unifying force.

Detection/Critical Assessment of forms, their structure, and their essence are generally turned over in the mind and weighed against a plethora of past experiences, predicted outcome, inconsistencies, potential for projection, the underlying motivations for projecting the form, expectations past and present, memory and so on, plus a healthy dose of human analysis balanced somewhere between Optimism, and Cynicism.

Because where there is a Deceptor (And all human beings are scorpions) there is a Detector. Experience/Experiment shows that since Form is an abstract that resides solely in the Causal experience, and because the Acausal component implicit therein cannot be utilised to analyse the essence of an acausal presentation by a Deceptor on the causal plane. I.e. causal beings, are blind to it. Analysis of a Deceptor will inevitably operate from a human-centred/self-centred fixation by the would-be Detector – wherein, consciousness operating from the mindset characteristic of a resident imprisoned in the human body is enmeshed in the physical form and indeed the Physical. The Causal. And thus, Forms.

All this is a detailed way of explaining that someone attempting to see through a Form – will naturally use other forms to determine their progress. Without acausal perception – without the diffusion of consciousness, they cannot help it, since it is form that characterises and restricts the causal perception in a 3d plane and it is the immature development of acausal perception but nonetheless imbueing of it in the human nexion that leads to “contradiction” and seemingly irreconcilable differences ‘between’ forms: an illusion held up by the nexion itself. It’s not strange that the Scientific community should be labelling into existence so many multi-verses, alternate dimensions, and so on and yet not simply include the Acausal in their calculations, something that would make sense of much of their confusion – a) the Scientific community has as the ONA say, lost sight of science and become a bevy of theoreticians. b) We hold that the Acausal cannot be perceived from a Causal perspective. That is part of the hypothesis being tested by the presence of the Temple of THEM. Another part being the energetic grid to hi-jack and subvert cyberspace, the other a physical energetic grid to hi-jack and subvert Australia to serve as a nexion for Vindex. Other parts of course, to be revealed as various stages are arrived at.

But with this notion of form and acausal perception in mind, let us now turn to some of the more mundane causal forms that make up this extraordinary experiment. The Spear One of the secrets guarded until now is the true extent of infiltration by members of THEM into other groups via close association with key figures to crystallise a secret intelligence network – another, the sharpness of our perception. Due to the inability of a causal-mired nexion to see beyond form: it is not difficult to use that reliance on form to create a powerful mental glamour. One such glamour is called the Spear.

Note some key points in Shape-Shifting:

1. One must adopt a shape.
2. One’s shape must be seen to make mistakes.
3. One’s shape must be seen.
4. One must have visible faces and forms – while being an invisible face of form.
5. The target must only ever see what you want them to see.
6. The arte of Deception involves the art of Distraction.
7. Being an excellent shape-shifter naturally leads people to distrust you.

1 To interact on the causal plane requires a shape, a presentation, a shell or human guise. We know this.

2-6 THE SPEAR:

To presence Acausal forms requires an involved weaving of thousands of illusions often over a lengthy period of time. For it is in the summary/overall experience of this weaving, that is to say between the forms, that the gap of the Acausal reveals and illuminates. For example: in each personal interaction, these usually being one-to-one or face-to-face, one decides which attribute to emphasise in order to build a picture of one's "persona" in the target's perception. One replies in a manner according to what one wishes to emphasise at any given point. Should mystery be emphasised, Should certain attributes or emotions be emphasised, Should power or connections be emphasised? What, and how are tentative tenuous decisions that correlate to the Experiment and what is called for at any given time to extend a tendril. But what is not generally made known is that to be effective in shape-shifting – it is necessary not only to have your real persona operating a front persona – but for your front persona to be operating its own front too, a deeper glamour I call a "spear".

It is through the spear(s) that one of THEM is known by everyone outside of one's inner Sinisterion. And then, even inside, members of THEM are largely unknown (that is, information falls into an abyss) even to each other.

The spear is the amiable cheerful face of the Deceptor. A Deceptor naturally meaning, one who deceives. The Spear has a name by which others will know it and an array of attributes that appeal to the most general population. It is the name(s) by which one signs things, says things, is seen, heard and witnessed. Most people have an alternate persona – but they do not have a spear. Nor strangely, do they understand the necessity for one, especially in this dangerous work. A fact lamented by not a few of the Sinisterion careless enough to let their vigilance lapse.

The spear, of which there can be more than one representation, represents the first line of Satanic defence. The average person is so caught up in oneself that they are careless about the information they exchange with others. (THEM are surgical.) Naturally, to discern the motivations of someone a person will read between the lines. During the friendly banter exchanged a wise magician remains vigilant that they are being studied.

What this means – is that, due to human caprice, the Detector (the person studying 'you') will be aiming to fill in some rather large gaps in his picture of you – esp. if you are one of those mysterious, anonymous types.

Thus, it is that the Spear fills the role of supplying those details to feed the hunger of the curious. It is the "casual unwitting mistake-maker" – the 'you' "careless" enough to give occasional innocuous "personal details" during pleasant information exchanges to secretly assist someone in building up a picture of you to decrease their immediate curiosity (native to all inquisitive brains). And it is prior to assuming a major form, such as ours, that the smart shape-shifter sits down and literally creates a completely set of fictional personas complete with fixed attributes with which to dangle as a carrot on a stick. (This involves some tricky manipulation of postal loopholes, address exchange, identification flaws, library archives, dangerous associates, and ID stealing – covered in the section on Camouflaging the Chameleon. Trade secrets of Espionage and Intelligence and Satanic Tradition.)

It is the spear that will exchange sensitive information, the spear that will send and receive mail, the spear that will act as an administrator/inductor, the spear that will meet and greet and introduce and mingle, the spear that will mislead and misdirect both its friends and thus its potential enemies as to its actual nature and the spear that will serve as a decoy to hostile forces. Making a pseudonym is usually done by anyone using the computer – though haphazardly without the psychological arsenal of one of THEM and without a clear conception of deception. Most people can be persuaded to give sensitive personal information merely with a suitable Spear by appealing to their personality type and vices. Trust – places a person in a precarious position in our line of work.

The spear, though cheerful, personable, likeable, must also be seen to be secretive. This immediately places an increase of weight on any detail a Detector CAN extract from the spear directly or indirectly. Name, Age, Gender, Location, Outward Connections, Consistent Responses and Philosophies, Interests, Known Associates and Motivations are all top of the list. One by one some or all of these are ‘leaked’ via the spear (this itself an Art!) or are presented, supplied, gathered what have you from available information distributed by the Spear – incidentally, a glamour so named because the Detector literally impales himself unknowingly upon its point. With this information, some of the things presented to some of the members of the Sinisterion may now make further sense.

Now, from experience, it is Between the Spear and the Perception of the ‘you’ behind the spear where the Detector will look for You, the Deceptor. Now it is understood why an extra line of defence is required, rather than simply an alter-ego. If, a Detector looks for ‘you’ between a fake persona and another fake persona – what can be found of ‘you’? If a Detector looks for ‘you’ between You and your fake persona – anything they extract may prove highly detrimental.

The Acausal shape-shifter is in a somewhat precipitous position. Their form must be seen from a variety of strange and difficult to explain angles. And I say difficult, because one can no longer simply use the terminology of the causal dimension – but must employ quantifiers for both. I was asked why I did not simply speak from a purely Acausal point of view – to which the reply is – there is no known language for the Acausal save for that of Dreaming. Continuing – it is not enough that a teacher of shape-shifting take on ONE visible layer of form in order to demonstrate his skills and techniques (Qv. RA/Tnepres/ThoTh/f/CV/J/Eddas/E/Edward Laden and so on) whose wraith has shown a prolonged visible countenance of a shape-shifter with distinct features and identification traits (and Works) as moving from one phase to another physically, magically, mentally to occupy various roles. Now here it gets intricate. It is not enough because it represents only a superficial level of shifting. A vital attribute of any visible form is a certain degree of deficiency. Without that figurehead of calculated clumsiness, the shifter lacks the very element that renders them invisible.

While Legion keeps the punters busy, focused, occupied, distracted – the absence of sound – the vacuum created by the pressures of the actual shifter goes unnoticed. Thus one of THEM can sidle right up to you and you not even know it. Because the Spear of the Shifter is seen out in the open – the punters focus on the wrong fellow. Note ONA's bizarre crusade against one 'Alex F'.

They consider themselves astute, watchful, aware of the possibility of misdirection and deception by this strange fellow who teaches shape-shifting and admits to being deceptive and infiltrating various organisations – but, what's this, he's not as good as he thinks he is, he's left clues... heh... Have we now? So then, astute ones, how many of US are there? One? Two? Six? Or a Dozen? What are our names? What defines US that reveals US – Symbolism? Terminology? Beliefs? Age? Location? Energy? Which groups do we watch from the inside, IOT? ONA? ToB? OAA? MLO? TOS? FCOS? SOS? OTO, yours? Where did you get your information on THEM – from US? Or from the Spear? And we are Australian, right?

It is questions like these that beg for the mercy afforded by critical thinking. ONA – masters of chameleonization created a very similarly layered labyrinth using the above techniques. Try, for instance, reading the ONA's MSS with this in mind. Where some of the insights such as those garnered by the MSS – “A Contemplation of DWM” may arise. We know the Acausal Deceptor cannot be seen – we know this because that form of magic has no form or physical identification – it is not causally detectable. If it was, THEM should not have moved into advanced stages of its first aim without detection and without difficulty.

Some of our detractors (of whom we watch carefully) underestimate the value of extreme patience and subtlety. One gate took three years to open, another five, another eight. Not a problem – we're not going anywhere, and we have nothing better to do than achieve our aims. One of those aims is to teach our black magical principles from the Australian Nexion and reveal the theory and techniques that comprise them. It would generally be considered counter-productive to the formation of any group trying to attain personal power over its members to reveal such layers and operations: for if no longer focused on Legion, where might they look? Into the “Dark Soul of the Night”? Quite. Now if only they used that awareness when perceiving Magian forms...

However, the 'You' (i.e. causal vessel) that subsists beneath the glamour of the Spear, being bound by form, will, and does, exhibit information allowing further profiling of your identity and character. And Here, a very pointed analogy can be drawn between the survival of the physical human being/nexion in order to achieve the Great Work – and the romantic view of a Dark God clawing at the veil between the Worlds seeking intrusion. On one level – they are one and the same. Until the physical body is completely diffused, that is, an entirely acausal, there is a paradoxical dance with death whereby the Satanist endangers themselves, lives on the edge etc – and yet undertakes the training, steps and measures to ensure the highest level of protection for survival from the entropy of the mundane world.

See ‘An Analysis of Frequency L13/13’ for further instances. Following these it can be a difficult game to conceal one’s closer (habitual) attributes simply because of the tell-tale trail of the geometry of information.

Things sometimes beyond control when using form are one’s method or manner of communication – one’s terminology, or even a consistent focus on certain concepts. Thus, it is that some shape-shifters (one in particular whose spear is infamous) have left trails that show certain persons are and have been among us whilst cultivating glamour of a very special sort – practising a variety of ‘habitually disruptive’ roles to keep themselves randomised, and yet remain virtually undetected by those without the eyes to see. But it’s not for us to reveal them. We enjoy the ‘game’ as much as they do. Beneath the ‘You’ is the diffusion of consciousness characteristic of the Adept – the core of a Dark Sol. But remember it is in the rays of the sun that most of the ‘Work’ is done. From day one – carry a spear. We have.

Unfortunately, or rather as a result of, diffused consciousness that interferes with one’s causal ability to maintain a solid form to others; being known as a shape-shifter of some skill and of course, revealing the disarming secrets of one’s trade, carries with it the burden of implicit suspicious mistrust. Members have reported side-effects of our ‘Grand Science’ with members of their inner Sinisterion due to able demonstrations of chameleonization openly – thus revealing how adept they are at controlling what people see and witness of them. This has led to issues of instability, esp. in magical relationships, where one may say the illusions of the causal are experienced withdrawn and the frightening (from their point of view) essence beyond projection revealed.

Thus, Emily no longer sees John, but a sinister grinning trickster, a dark, mysterious and cunning master of illusion who sends her projections back to her. This has the effect of causing people to be perpetually unsure whether a shifter is sincere or merely playing another role: An unavoidable Sinister Aspect of THEM’s Work and this Work in general. One of the disarming scenarios concerning the ONA was one (disturbingly argued) suggestion that the Order could in fact be the work of one Super-Jew who decided to prove the merit of the Jewish faith by manipulating its enemies perfectly and unknowingly into adhering to the wisdom of a Sacred Jewish Holy Order under the guise of Satanism/NS/Islam and so on. Unfortunately, there is a sinister correlation between the deceptive potential and the invisible ultimate aim of the shape-shifter.

When one becomes as adept at shape-shifting as DWM the possibilities increase frighteningly – past the Abyss it becomes correspondingly difficult to shake one’s head definitively at anything manifesting on the causal plane. Pending the more advanced results of the Seven-Fold Way – a better judgement can be made. On that – it is somewhat limiting that the Seven-Fold Way disdains the study of Kabbalah and Jewish Magic – for then one may preclude a study of the enemy for greater comparison that can be considered vital for a more rounded self-discernment.

To summarise before we move on: the essential point being made is that creating a thing like THEM is only possible via a tandem of invisible (and visible) infiltration of key players known or in any way associated or trying to associate with THEM – and some very special rules of Satanism that aren’t known to many, some that we have borrowed, some that we have created.

The ONA’s Shrencing MSS, I believe, danced on the outside of these techniques. THUS: Let them think they know where/who/what you are – while you Know where/who/what they are. This is a practice quite similar to the blackmail operations set up to entrap riches and power via the cameras for compromise within a Temple.

The Temple, being an enticing forbidden environment where the lure of dark magic and unbridled sex holds fascination for many who are thus left (that is, not informed) to invest it with their projections as a place of romance and intrigue, a literal temple to Satan and doorway to exciting taboos all shag pile carpets and mahogany altars as it were – is seldom understood by the eager for the menacing role it plays in surveillance, tactical espionage, and entrapment. They seldom understand or are meant to understand, the extent to which the Temple watches them. This type of thing is very much the case with many Satanic Industries: though it bears repeating that THEM have emerged to help a few out of the occult labyrinth, hence our revelations of our Satanic techniques for the few who deserve to learn them.

The Tempel ov Blood (Qv. Liber 333) emphasise Infiltration of Organisations, as do the Order of Nine Angles, of which we are a Nexion. To them, these techniques are probably already known – but to those who wish to become one of THEM, these notes may prove a disturbing sobriquet. MEHR SEINS ALS SCHEIN...

*Briefly: In terms of causal perception – general refers to the common convenient name for interpreted content, i.e. a “ball” or “sky”. Specific refers to a definition of an abstract in a layer of further segmented abstraction. “A shiny, red, ball with spots” or “Stratosphere, Atmosphere, Oxygen/Nitrogen/Carbon Dioxide” while an abstract is essentially the end result of interpretation of any content using further abstracts to do it. These faculties are employed in this manner due to the size and position of our human-centred consciousness which finds itself enmeshed by the physical body and whose concerns are directly related to its feelings of inferiority and superiority relative to it.

 In terms of acausal perception – none of these differentiations exist. An abstract in the causal is not the same as an abstract in the acausal. An abstract in the causal (Qv. The Star Game: adv. Asstd. Essays) can be defined as anything isolated in perception by giving it a name. Until it has a name or parts of it are named by projection, the ‘Black Clay’ to some extent is experienced as it is – i.e. formless. Abstract Perception is a mutually inclusive consciousness of being the acausal within the causal. See Appendix.

The Reason for creating new words is not only to define new esoteric experiences – it also has another undertone: because of the uniqueness of such words, it makes it easier to track the growth and path of their forms online.

FORM, RELATIVITY AND REALITY

In one diagram explaining why Special Relativity dislikes Non-Locality, two people facing each other are unable to agree which direction is forward, backward, left or right because from their individual perspectives – they are each seeing the correct view. The problem arises though because there are no such thing as directions – they are a result of our 3 dimensional bias, neither of them are right, there is only relative perception brought about by our 3 dimensional body.

The concept of directions is old and has been a cornerstone of human navigation for time. But if you set up such models you constrain yourself to the view that our view has meaning. People disagree about time and space – this is the essential crux of special relativity. It seems so obvious that its hard to understand how this took such a long time to be developed and accepted. What magic and quantum physics have in common are an essential optimism that abandons the hopelessness of a Singularity or Insynsic world view where everything can be explained neatly with the bias that what works for one works for all.

Logical positivism (“If it's not verifiable by experiment, it's meaningless”), Instrumentalism (“if the predictions work, why worry about what brings them about?”) and philosophical relativism (“statements can't be objectively true or false, only legitimised or illegitimized by a particular culture”); working with Phorms has brought about all three of these mindsets as conclusions. Magic in particular suffers from the stigma of non-repeatable results. The very basis of the medieval grimoire was based on the impressions that by doing A it resulted in B. And that anyone who followed the same steps could reproduce identical or at least similar results. ☐ failure of this to be true for all who employed a grimoire has led to cynicism regarding their vehicle as unnecessary and a product of imagination, wishful thinking or charlatantry.

Not being able to replicate the results of grimoires, incantations, or those modern guides that use similar principles - self-help books – or indeed make true for oneself what others promise to be attainable by following such steps – a Phorm which is used in nationalism, religion, politics, societies, and generally anyone who wishes to sell an idea – does tend to result in a period of logical positivism wherein one grows tired of metaphysics, speculations, guidance and suggestions of the nature of reality for a more centred perception of what reality is from one's own standpoint – in extremis – this leads to scorn for all manner of subjective realms such as dreaming, imagination, prophesy, divination, and other occult practices, as well as unverifiable hearsay, reports, journalism, the claims of others, particularly non-popular areas such as the supernatural.

Useful as this vantage is, it is only one of many. The experience of knowing one has experienced something, sharing it with another, and having the other outright refute the existence of the event despite one knowing it happened is a catalyst that often leads one to re-question logical positivism. The common denial of the event of rape is one instance where this is a common event. Despite the intense trauma endured that leaves scars and pain in the victim which can be like the result of extreme torture – the physical injuries often fade; the emotional scarring is superficially invisible and all that is left is the testimony or silence of the victim. If something I endured leaves no marks, no physical traces to prove it existed, it is very hard to prove it happened at all. This is enshrined as a universal practice of humanity to conceal its deeds.

Torture victims and political prisoners are often kept detained without knowledge of their whereabouts – sometimes to kill them – but also often to allow the visible signs of mistreatment such as bruising, bleeding, burns to heal or subside so that when they get to court or released it is difficult to prove mistreatment. The requirement for proof works greatly to the advantage of many humans and many professions. The noble art of proving truth as envisioned by the Greeks is often denigrated to a war between lawyers and who spins the best story. It is quite incredible the extent to which such vantages or 23 syndromes can interlock with the mind of a person and reorient their entire reality based on such a narrow wedge of available perceptions.

It is impressive how greatly an idea can have the effect of controlling the way a person does things to match the motto of a simple idea to the point that it delimits their reality and reason;- to the point where the very facts of the existence of an irrational state and skewed perceptions that also operates in the mind daily due to the over-bearing self-assurance of the ego are completely ignored or painted over.

Splitting into realist and unrealist camps limits what can be learned from refusing to explore the other. It seems to be that some human beings do not like to sit on the fence of things but to firmly know one way or another a single set of truths to be self-evident. Others enjoy the nebulousness of the inability to pin down the mechanistic causality of the universe. We occupy a strange mid-ground between these two in pursuit of the 361 degrees of Phorm;- a desire to super-saturate ourselves with the Phorm in order to weaken its tissues and punch a hole right through the other side;- or said another way to exhaustively explore it until it gives up its essential principles and the secrets of its Phorm.

Here is something that can be learned from any Phorm; -and this is where and how One of THEM differentiates from those who believe either one or the other to be representative of the truth- but at all times it is to walk a tightrope; -trusting the ego to navigate without sacrificing its self-identity- whilst in all ways adorning itself in the armour of an idea.

BLOOD SWEAT FORMS AND YEARS

I speak a lot about Forms – and the majority of my writing on them has been the personal means to objectify them so as to be able to explore and understand them. For me, writing is a type of trance or meditation through which I conduct a self-based alchemy. How does one use forms personally – i.e., when not setting them up to effect change on others, how does one incorporate Forms as useful things?

I can only provide my own answer. There is a well-known practice of evocation that exists in many systems of Magic whereupon the Sorcerer summons an entity and merges with it – lets it take over in order to receive its wisdom, i.e., the equivalent of letting the entity take over one's consciousness, more loosely termed as Demonic possession. The Ego is pushed aside as the consciousness of the God takes control. This is I believe largely an extroverted approach where Demons manifest outwardly as objects imbued with power – and I have also experienced this earlier in my life when I was a marked extrovert via my copious consumption of alcohol that inhibited my introversion – whilst for the introvert Demons are manifest inside the Psyche, appearing as nightmares, fears, doubts, dreams that invoke genius and madness which give inhuman advice, solutions or wisdom beyond what the conscious ego can put together by its own agency.

However – the few times I have tried to invoke the Devil – I have been possessed of the unwelcome feeling of being terribly overwhelmed – of the immediate sensation of losing control and wanting to kill my friends or family in terrible ways.

When I read a book on a subject I do as the evoker does – I give my consciousness over to the author and experience what they experience, believe what they believe, and lose control of my consciousness to understand a political regime, a religious fiction, a historical figure or a living one. From this submission to the authors crafted spell of concepts and text I am afforded a supra-personal insight beyond what I could achieve if I were to treat the book as an object with contents external to me to which my Will and that of the author constantly questioned each other. I believe the term temporary suspension of disbelief applies here. Naturally of course, there arise passages where there is a definite clash – where disbelief cannot be suspended, and it is those passages that cause my conscious mind to fire back up and reach for a notepad to record a sudden flash of insight. In this way do I absorb a form whether it be an occult book, a philosophical treatise or a reference on guns and ammunition.

However, Jung's writing, objectifies the very thing I am perceiving objects with. He writes about the functions of the very tool I am using to read his work as it performs its functions. There is the odd sense that one is looking into a carnival mirror which twists and distorts the sense of identity into grotesque shapes. For me, Jung's work is the equivalent of the Necronomicon itself – for it summons the very nature of evil to the fore in unmistakable incarnations.

We can call a Dark God in the forest and leave it where we found it by pushing it back into the dark realms from whence we suppose we called it and mark a boundary with a protective circle – not so with the matter of the psyche and the entities that live within it. Wherever we go we take them with us and our only magical circle against them is a limitation of consciousness which conceals the majority of our personal being from us – but which others often see despite our best efforts. There is no banishing ritual against the unconscious and therefore the contents that rise up from it when we lose control of our Ego can be more devastating than anything called into the world externally, for it sets in motion an evolution of consciousness from which we cannot go back but which makes more and more demands on the psyche to individuate – to address shortcomings – re-examine motives and actions and conduct – chastise our fantastic image of ourselves or cruelly teach us a lesson about the real state of things.

The Necronomicon has the nature of an indistinct dream, the writing swims about and makes no sense to the conscious, the symbols are not numinous but manufactured from imagination, the creatures merely theoretical and vague. Psychoanalysis is the extreme opposite. The writing is all too close to home, and we immediately recognise ourselves as doing exactly what the rituals dictate, we are. We find ourselves rapidly losing control over what we thought was us as a surge of other activities are made apparent to us, that we are engaging in without any consciousness. The symbols are numinously charged per excellence where dreams have the power to completely devastate us, wake us up screaming, crying, sweating or cause us to perform a 180 in the midst of some behaviour, action or goal. We do not always understand their meaning, but we are slave to their effects.

The creatures of the psyche are also all too real, defined with knife-edges we sense their tremendous power and see them plain as day in our own being – we recognise the Shadow, prejudice, bigotry, shame, guilt, hypocrisy, inflation of the ego, unrealistic expectations we hold and so on – and they haunt us unmercifully – if not consciously then in the depths of the unconscious where they shove us about like puppets against our best intentions and conscious will.

Because we are unconscious of the majority of our psyche we cannot exorcise our demons – our shortcomings, our projections, our weaknesses, blame shifting, egoism are ghosts who refuse to be silenced – when they are pointed out to us the ego is crushed or rages at the pointee because it does not accept that evaluation – it clashes with our identity of who we are and how we are conducting ourselves. We are doomed to a very narrow field of vision however for to let more of the unconscious into the ego is to invite disaster – a disaster I have been inviting for a long time. My face wears a mask that rarely moves making it impossible for people to tell what I am thinking or feeling, my emotions are dull and my mood changes quickly – a black surge of exhaustion or fatigue overtakes me and I need to be alone without any way to communicate what is happening because I do not have the words to say my unconscious is erupting in polite company. These are the effects that assail the introvert but which he can often say nothing of because they are too markedly at odds with the established language and customs of the world.

It is the same reason, despite dividing your psyche internally into different you's – you will still say 'I' for convenience and to avoid conflict with the assault this seems to have on others who often take the view that one is insane. The enormous annoyance in doing any work on the psyche is that society does not reward, recognise or appreciate it – if anything it shuns, punishes and ostracises those who would improve themselves [Their Selves] because Very few can actually do it or try to do it – and the result of doing it is very often an inflated ego or air of genius that elevates itself above the mediocrity of the common man and makes them feel seen as inferior, superfluous or sub-human. This is the archetype of the Hero, where I would refer readers to the peerless study of the Hero by Connell Monette to understand the archetype of the Hero – and the Hero always invites the wrath of the Gods, often carried out by their own hubris.

The difficulty of working on the psyche is that there exists no Insynsian – there is only realism of standing on the Threshold between the two worlds never crossing over into it – for we can only be conscious of so much at a time, and always in the darkness thrives the other side of that consciousness in the unconscious.

Humans have problems and will always have problems. And here is where the truth beings to be told – for THEM do not appeal to that age-honoured ridiculousness of the struggle to become a God-like being – when merely a little less stupid, will do.

We cannot be supermen. We cannot create a super-consciousness by somehow melding the two. We cannot be Gods. We cannot even be close. And it is this acceptance that is required by modern man. The struggle to create or be the perfect man, the Urbmensch is the Shadow of our unconscious imperfection – the Urbmensch is the massive over-compensation of a psyche in serious trouble. The problem of course being that when our unconscious is healthy and functioning as it should – we are often consciously terribly troubled, sad or depressed. Other seek to console, cheer us up and to oblige them we repress those feelings causing unrest in the unconscious again. There is a constant war for what is acceptable to the unconscious is entirely unacceptable to the conscious world in which we live. We are not allowed to be sad or depressed – we must be cheered up, made to feel better and thus our psyche can rarely express itself naturally but is yoked to an artificial tradition.

We need to set our heights lower – to actually achieve something in the real rather than constantly pushing an impossible bar out of reach so that we can console ourselves with never being able to reach it. We then say, ‘Oh well no-one could reach that impossible height, so I do not feel bad for trying and failing – since I know I can never reach it, I will not try.’ But we do try – we repress that intent, and it becomes the goal of the unconscious to try to reach it. The Psyche is a terrible see-saw, when we apply pressure in one place, it appears elsewhere. When we try to contain some habit of ours or drive it underground – it gathers exceptional strength or mutates and explodes somewhere else. The Psyche appears to have a complex fail safe that keeps it in relative stasis and makes it very difficult to in any permanent way change it. The quest to destroy the Ego is in reality a quest to make it absurdly stronger – this is the key to the Magi’s practice of outwardly driving others to extinguish it all the while knowing such efforts only strengthen it. In this way do simple appeals to our Ego have all the more power and control over people is made all the easier. The quest to find the Self does not require the extinguishing of the Ego – that is again a way of making it terrifyingly stronger and therefore more amenable to basic manipulations.

The quest to find the Self such as it is, involves only simple things. For abstinence is merely another form of indulgence that ultimately makes something stronger – hence the repression of sex, the erotic, intimacy, touch erupts in the Church in the form of rampant paedophilia. We just need to listen that bit more, try to understand the contents of our psyche have their own rules, make conscious the function and behaviour of these functions, and to be patient with ourselves.

Dreams speak to us sometimes but not all times – the unconscious has input into our consciousness, but it is not always to be taken as given, it throws up junk, fantasy and mystery even as it transmits archetypal imagery or guides of our stage toward individuation. We have developed a consciousness for a reason – it is not to be reprimanded, punished and mistreated as it has been, demonised because we cannot control it, understand it or change it – or culturally divorced from them by way of bad-tempered children and legions of people who never took the time to work with it but merely parroted popular notions and misguided ones at that that the ego was the source of all our troubles and evils. We need it to be strong and tough as well as flexible and resilient to believe we can undertake this kind of work, to withstand the attacks or honest raw truths that arise from communications with the unconscious, to sort and use or discard what it has to say into piles – only rarely can we entirely trust the unconscious as a guide that will keep us safe or show us the way – it takes two to do that, the conscious Ego and the subconscious Abyss.

We need to treat both with care, and respect, or be able to push them back or ignore them when we feel we know better. We need to understand that to do this, to stand constantly on the Threshold is a Lot more work – and where most humans are happy to take the path of the least energy – this one requires extra effort. This is a constant struggle with endless steps up and down, of being assailed with a dozen valid views or answers every time a question is asked, or an answer given. For all of the functions want to speak their piece from their point of view – and if one is not careful in the development of this vessel no longer of I but of THEM – one can go incurably insane.

I do not hear voices I have impulses that sometimes cripple my ability to give a reply to a question where the questioner, question, and answer are all essayed at once from different points of view and it is impossible to choose the right answer because there are so many. The expansion of consciousness brings unique problems of its own because while it expands, the consciousness of others does not – there is therefore, a tendency toward becoming an eccentric Hermit or pushed deep into Isolation from which one cannot climb out.

Since the Ego is no longer in charge, and one's perspective is no longer singular, no longer myopic and channelled solely through the lens of the Ego – it becomes exceptionally difficult to take a stance, one can see an argument from both sides, above it, below it, beyond it, alternate arguments that would be better, finds fault with the question, has to ask whether the matter is objective, subjective, what lens the argumenters hold, can they see outside of themselves, are they extrovert, introvert, should one interfere, can one interfere, is it right to give an answer, should they find the answer for themselves – and so on – and with no immediate prejudice, no immediate decisive single belief in what one Is, and should Say, from whatever Platform their ego occupies and represents – there is only the Babble of multiple impulses, arising from the thoughts like the Dread voices of the Dark Ones that drove the Mad Arab Alhazred of the Necronomicon, mad.

The other thing of course of importance is that in becoming a THEM – in accessing the Threshold, that one must often choose one of two worlds to excel in. One can rarely manage both successfully. I have poured a Lot into the Temple of THEM and as a result my family and friends have suffered. Whilst I solve the riddles of the minds of strangers or establish myself as a known figure through my writing and images – my wife is often pushed away and neglected, or my kids yelled at by an irritable man for not taking out the rubbish or some other small thing – because my libido is concentrated in the unconscious or collective personality as Ryan Anschauung.

If you seek to become what I have become – you must know the sacrifice, the dark and ugly side of any Genius to be had from standing at the Threshold of greater consciousness – the Gods do not give up their fire easily, and when they do, is it always at Great cost. To educate thousands over the decade on how to alter the Aeon, achieve psychic stability, to give guidance I have had to endure a less than ideal alter-ego who has caused a lot of tears, fights and anger, guilt, sadness and loneliness. And for that reason, I endure – because it cannot all be for nothing. And truth be told – it was for my gain, my greed, my desire to attain it.

I therefore hope that people appreciate my Work for it comes at great personal cost to me and those around me. I do not want to paint a picture of either/or – some of the time it is possible to balance the two worlds of the exoteric and the esoteric and feel like you're King of the world – but those times when either world is invested in too heavily reaps a severe penalty. This is the living analogy of the battle between the conscious and unconscious for dominion and like many things of the Sinister Path when all the sugary words and wrappings are torn off it – it is ugly even as it is beautiful. This work, to be one of THEM, requires genuine Blood, fragments of your Soul. Weigh it up carefully. Consider what is required – and if you decide to join us, try to remember to be fair with your time with those around you – I have poured far too much of myself into the Temple to make it the splendour it is, most of my life in fact– and perhaps now others won't have to since the foundations are laid and the Temple built.

But yes, only the foundations and the lighthouse as a beacon to others have been built – all that I have done so far is but the prelude to much harder less forgiving work, I know how to be One of THEM – their forces speak to me in a wordless language all their own – to push beyond the Threshold is the goal now, to push and yet to survive. I know the Way but to travel it places even greater demands on one and calls for even greater sacrifice and I do not know if I am willing to give it. For now, I will show others my way and how I got here – and when they get to where I am let them decide whether I was wrong to flinch from the Abyss – that is, if I am still here and did not leap blindly into it...

HOLLOWMEN

Life requires learning. It requires experiences to learn from. It requires many experiences to distil knowledge. And a great deal of knowledge to approach wisdom. Wisdom requires knowing that this process cycle exists, knowing that it matters and knowing that it doesn't matter.

Where THEM differs from other occult groups, is in its desire to instil indifference in an individual to all forms and destroy their dominating effects on us – for it is this effect that drives human beings and responsible for their excruciating slowness to evolve.

In every case where the Ego gets possessed by some form or another it believes itself to be an envoy, a representative of that form, it restricts itself and changes shape and colour (camouflage) in such a way as to become obedient to its rules, its laws, its culture and expectations and the person (vessel) becomes as an extension of that Form, their behaviour, words, actions, channelled and influenced by the rigours and strictures of that form or forms. In the case of extremism – Insynsian par excellence – the dominating Form is very narrow, slim and may be as simple as worship of a deity, a country, a race or some other symbolic singularity – which is often all that Ego can manage. A person possessed by a Form identifies with the Form and as an extension into which they subsume the culture of that Form, will defend it, fight for it, lie for it, sacrifice for it, give money, services, goods, connections to it, champion it, as if it was them very selves that the Form represented – not a hollow baseless abstract borne of loneliness and the enduring need to be constantly celebrate that the ego is too stupid to recognise but trips into again, and again, and again and again.

For the Ego is our lazy part, it is a vice that crushes and squeezes all incoming stimuli into narrow, readable, relatable, acceptable, channels – it doesn't like to and is incapable of working harder, of processing complex nuances and this is reflected in the dualism, binary, moral certitude of the Judaeo-Christian influence on Western Culture which often battles with the myriad and vast troves of behaviour, culture and philosophy inherited and enshrined by the Greeks. It is the reason Quantum took so long to become mainstream, the reason non-binary sexuality enrages so many, that the introduction of many cultures, practices, civilisations meshing creates fear and panic and a natural inclination to cower together under the shade of some supremacist umbrella holding each other's hands and lamenting about the erosion of traditional values and social mores: the blaming of races, genders and other ideologies for the state of decay, the decline of modernism, the disintegration of the West.

It is during times of great unrest that the ego is at its most ridiculous, huddling into groups for numbers because it is too weak to stand alone or represent anything of its own device, anything of its own power, anything of its own originality – and simply gravitates toward the nearest bomb shelter as a mindless minion, a cockroach scuttling under the fridge where it feels safe and continues to bathe and be bathed by the puerile worst of human behaviour and inheritance. Here the ego gets the attention it craves, it gets weakened with praise and congratulatory status and conferred imaginary but emotional awards for joining with the rest of the weak because that is what gives them the appearance, of being strong. But they are not strong – none of them are strong – or they would not stand together under a made-up nonsense that causes them to flow down a specific river of thought and action, they would not need the constant reinforcement of words, slogans, colours, flags, tattoos, and other tribal identifications that supposedly join them as one – all the while disintegrating slowly because such formations are in essence entirely artificial: there is no real bonding, no brotherhood, no kinship – just the sad standing together of shadows dominated by a Form and pushed together by transitory make-believe.

We can see for ourselves in virtually every instance where such child-men are brought low – in every country, at every age, from every race the same shameful mantra repeated ad nauseam ad infinitum – “I didn’t do it. I’m innocent”. This is the chant of the ego – and the worst trait of human beings and here is why. When the ego experiences the Absolute Fear of disintegration – it causes the ego to create an invincible shell around itself – dissociation, denial, regression, catatonia, forgetfulness, lack of remorse are all symptoms of this shell. This shell, we refer to as the ‘Angel’ is truly the hardest substance known to man, even under the greatest privations, suffering and punishments there are instances where it cannot be broken.

The Angel insulates the ego from all things but its own narrow visage and self-assurance and once activated it cannot be torn down because it indicates the Death of the Self and without the Self, the ego must survive alone. It has nothing to open its shell to, nowhere to go, nothing to lean on but its own delusions and psychosis – and Nothing can change it because the crucial elements required to change a person are stripped and removed. The regressive childishness of such a mantra indicates only that such a being never grew beyond the punishment/reward infantile paradigm of babyhood and youth but carried it onward into adulthood (though gaining in age does not guarantee this stage) where its avoidance strategy for approaching life quickly transforms them into a perfect victim when their hand is slapped for stealing a cookie. We see those who are supposed to be the strongest, meanest, fastest, most brutal, most feared – all proclaim their innocence and repeat the mantra that they weren’t there, they didn’t do it, they know nothing. This is the power of a Form and the babyishness of ego – to cripple individual response and deny involvement to escape retribution, it is the cowards cry and loser’s lament.

These are the shameful figures that THEM does not recognise, celebrate, endorse or try to recreate by providing another form – we seek to smash trust in all forms and take humanity to the step it should have reached long long ago but which stage is continually pushed out of reach by the saboteur of our ego. Unlike all of our predecessors, there is a fervent desire in presenting these thoughts to invite an evolution beyond such sewerage in which so many wade – and impart piercing understanding in you to see all of the shallow tropes that gather humans together for what they are: an immortal shared weakness built into our very state of being that is the crutch for the slow and the insufferable. There is time to be a dope and a dupe, such pathways are a necessity, a requisite, a perennial unavailability – that is what will determine our place in the occult – but how long we remain so, how much we understand of what is hidden – will decide if we learn to escape a cycle or whether we are destined to repeat a loop.

We must ask ourselves why is it that human beings make and made slaves of others – ? A short answer is to lessen the personal or societal workload to complete hard, punishing or deadly work without having to do it oneself. The Pyramids, Great Wall of China are widely considered an incredible feat and almost flippantly it is mentioned they were ‘built by slaves’ – but rather than represent this dark, crushing, brutal, bloody, painful, oppressed, suffering those forced to build it endured – there is emphasis on the grandeur, on the spectacle, on the magnificence of their construction and false attribution to a pharaoh as the constructor. This alone tells us a great deal about the petty nature of human beings to enslave others to do work for them they simply are incapable of doing themselves: that through slaves is the only way such pathetic beings can accomplish what they accomplish.

This is not accomplishment. Humans make slaves of others because humans are shameless, imitators. We copy our government, our authorities, our human patterns – what they do filters down to us and we replicate it like good monkeys. Forms, make slaves of humans because Forms are pure imitation. They are Beings, living energies, that feed on us and speak to us in a language only our ancient ego understands, they prey on humans’ susceptibility and desires and channel themselves with no morality and no control through our vessels leaving nothing but the same wastelands aeon after aeon. Forms are the dimensional gap, the interconnected distortion that occurs when the ego which has very limited capacity and function – meets the Chaos of the world – and relies on the ego (not the Self) to categorise, make sense of, control and in doing so, minimise the fear we dread of anything unknown.

In essence, THEM is designed to speed up and accelerate past the all-too-human slowness of these many stages that ‘experience’ affords the ego for its own sake, its own purpose, its own downfall. Almost every form the ego adopts will eventually be dropped in the favour of another – after five years, ten, maybe fifteen – but the adage ‘people change’ is half-true, the Form that dominates them may change, but their likelihood of being dominated by Forms, does not. Most fanatics do not remain fanatics, they dwell somewhere on a spectrum of dabbling to belong (shallow infection) and dying for their belief (lethal infection). These latter few are rare ultra-patriots who kill themselves in the name of an ideal. In this instance we can say that Forms truly have the power to kill, to deceive, and, they are the far superior, dominant life-form that supersedes human beings.

None of the war, suffering, struggle, nonsense that humans have engaged in and continue to – has changed the planet or this process one fraction. And due to our very short lifespan and inability to absorb more than a few books with warnings or what we might find useful to know in our fleeting time here on the planet – most never get anywhere close to evolution beyond these tired repetitive patterns. And all of the new humans produced from rape, love and lust no priming to evolve by the idiots that preceded them – but left to their own devices, the egos devices, to be preyed upon by forms and stagger through life burdened by one belief after another, never knowing more about life or their potential as a unique organism of the cosmos than the yolk with which they are saddled or saddle themselves. These are the hollow-men. They are in great, great abundance and dominate this planet – and sadly, I was unlucky enough to be born on it with them.

I watch new broken shards fit themselves together into cracked mirrors on a daily basis, shine a temporary flash of false light from their apiecement and then crumble and fall back into even smaller shards to repeat the process anew, growing more and more tarnished with every effort to satisfy their hunger to be a worthwhile entity. And you, will see it too. Only too often will you hear stories of regret, lament and see individuals perform a 180 later in life because their old way of life no longer represents their views, their values: but in decades to come you will come to know individuals that skip that tiring boring tread of the ego, that hackneyed apology for past deeds and reported arrival at redemption all of which is the mark of a Hollowchrist, the stamp of monotheistic Insynsian and the draining, exhausting ego sharing its path because such a path seems so important to impart – and you will find individuals Learning, Before, they make mistakes, not from them. We have learned enough; it is time to teach – and properly teach. It is to THEM, I write.

HOWL OF THE INTROVERT

As the founder of the Temple of THEM my Work colours the nature of its expressions. It is of necessity [and the result of the practice of alchemy, psychological analysis, sorcery, experience] that I be acutely self-aware. I therefore am enabled some perception into my own prejudices and biases when it comes to those expressions – wise to the biological and psychological limitations under which my work labours and presences itself. Firstly, unlike many people on the Left Hand Path – I am left-handed – this greatly colours my perceptions and the way I express them as an artist and a thinker. The world is not orientated toward the left-hand crowd since it is right-handlers that predominate – this is only visible to those of a left-handed nature who have to persevere with the unnatural geometry of mechanical devices, layout of keyboards or controllers and so on.

Secondly, I am an extreme Introvert; my attitude toward the world is one of abstraction as evident by my emphasis and intensity on deconstruction, on withdrawing my libido from objects, breaking them down – thus I seek to withdraw projections, harness wayward energetic exchanges such as might occur through unconscious activity or to rob objects of any intrinsic power to return it to myself. Due to my extreme introversion and left-handedness which affords me a particular insight into things – I therefore have a highly aggressive extrovert mask to compensate. My natural disposition is therefore at odds with how Extroverts see the world – hence my immutable differences of opinion with figures such as Anton Long, Crowley, or even other members of THEM are predicated on these limitations. In your dealings with other members of THEM – it is wise to keep in the back of your mind the factor of these different arrangements of perception and to understand that depending on who you are talking to you will require a different approach. Naturally – because my work reflects the majority of the Temple's exterior it naturally attracts like – i.e. it naturally attracts, Introverts. This should also be kept in mind – since with such an attraction comes a natural aversion by others toward the expressions of the Temple – leading to a concentration of like-minded people or introverted personalities which limits our ability to explore or apprehend the extroverted attitude toward the Dark Ones – which is, diametrically opposed with an equal depth of unique insights all of its own.

To me therefore, the Dark Gods, and all things, appear a specific way and cannot help but appear that way owing to my psychic prejudices and blueprint. In other words, it is I suspect impossible for me to see the Dark Gods as other than my nature allows me to. The downside of this is that a group wholly focused on an introverted understanding of the Dark Gods or in fact any subject matter, is missing an exploration of the other half of the possibilities unless there are extroverted personalities among us. Further detail on the relationship between the Dark Gods and the Psyche are given below in Into the Mouth of Madness. Knowing the intimate details of your own psyche, actions and being able to do what is largely impossible – seeing yourself as others see you, or at least trying – is essential to learning about how to avoid or incite conflict. This in turn leads to a superior understanding of what drives, characterises and can strengthen or weaken form. With serious introspection of your self comes, if sincere and determined, a greater understanding of others through understanding yourself. Age is often a strong determinant of psychic maturity because age affords retrospect – the ability to look back on a larger and larger range of experience. Though labels are shunned they are like many forms necessary and useful if only to grease the path of social lubrication so that actual study research and work can be done with the basics satisfied.

Though there are billions of individuals we share a unified collective subconscious and similar biology – these are the core aspects of a person around which are tacked on smaller less important incidentals. Knowing someone’s dreams for instance can afford massive insight into their unconscious orientation toward the world. Knowing how someone views their parents can reveal how they see the world. Observing the concepts that people use such as accepting time or space without challenge or alteration, whether focused on politics or religion, introversion or extroversion can deconstruct a personality into its constituent parts and where one desires to move an individual in a certain direction or cause them to perform a certain action – appealing to these constituent parts so as not to cause friction with the incipient will and its particular drives can mean the difference between success as a Sorcerer and failure.

We have observed that the first task of the Trial is of little conflict with most people since going outside and performing tactile tasks of self-initiation in one’s own desire fashion is neither extrovert or introvert prejudiced – however, the next task of meditating on the Tarot cards to withdraw energy trapped in unconscious archetypes is most definitely an introverted task – and as a result we find a rough split in initiates of those who gravitate toward the task and seek to complete it and those who are thrown off by it and renounce their application. There is often the typical query at such a junction as to the possibility of fitness or physical tasks with extroverts seeking a suitable equivalent of what they see as an awful task.

This division often markedly separates those who would approach the Sinister through the systems of THEM and ONA into two camps – the Warriors tend to select the ONA, and the Sorcerers tend to select the Temple of THEM. What is a Warrior? A Warrior is an extrovert who trains to become insensitive to the world – who pushes through pain, becomes hardened and stoic, amasses muscular ego-armour and the attitude to match. They revel in the idea of the hunting challenge, the External and Internal Adept challenges of living in the wilderness among the trees and animals and weather, of cycling massive distance, climbing mountains as per the Black Pilgrimage within a certain amount of time or pushing themselves to their limit and then seeking to increase it. They become insensitive to violence and can take a lot of pain. When it comes to the tasks of creating and meditating on the Tarot, learning the Star Game, Insight Roles, learning the esoteric side of the occult they shun and dread it however – for these are the strengths of the Introvert. We know that most ONA recruits pick and choose their respective strengths accordingly due to these two innate characteristics.

What is a Sorcerer? A Sorcerer is an introvert who trains to become super-sensitive to the world – to be able to feel its places of power, sense power through images, symbols, or nature to feel and draw on the subtle currents of magic by being able to sense them, to see spirits and demons and beyond the veils of the ordinary thing. The Sorcerer though does not shun physical challenges – they merely approach them a different way – the Sorcerer aims to keep fit, to build strength, flexibility and also increase their limits but balances this with the need to retain that super-sensitivity without being weak or crushed. i.e. to be in a position to both sense the currents underlying things, including an unconscious command to Warriors that the Sorcerer could destroy them with a glance, but without amassing ego-armour that blocks these currents from being detected through insensitivity to them.

Therefore, there is a certain attitude toward performing super-human tasks or demands of physicality which is not to strain and overdo them – but find clever ways to do them or have others do them for us. The Temple of THEM trains Sorcerers, presently, from an introverted point of view due to my own innate orientation. Therefore, an inward focus will be evident with a marked emphasis on aspects drawing from Carl Jung's psychoanalysis, [in particular the Libido] Alchemy, Dreams and a withdrawal of energies from objects to restore it to the self. This should be kept in mind when considering the Temple's writings particularly my own since I cannot alter this innate bias. If like me you have ever experienced a poltergeist, psychokinesis, or the power of a nightmare then you know the extraordinary power that lays inside our psyche. Are the Dark Ones a product of the psyche, external to it, or somewhere in between? I and most of THEM believe that the truth is somewhere in between. But for now, the Temple is coloured by an introverted analysis of this possibility and will be until an extrovert takes my place as the Temple's Representative.

The Temple has experienced the same biases when a membership of males or females has predominated with emphasis on various factors due to biological predisposition excluding others. An awareness of this limitation therefore offers us a chance to look for or create opportunities to balance it. However, there are potentially great benefits to be had from this approach that the extrovert cannot attain. Magic relies on the Will – often it is the unconscious that blocks the power of the conscious will. This is why a wish encoded in Sigil or Rune magic is disfigured until it is unrecognisable as a symbol to the conscious mind viz. to prevent the unconscious from interfering.

It is the aim of this Temple to study and make conscious what we call the Bridge which is an effort to listen to one's dreams, learn to identify and read the messages of the unconscious, and allow a communication between the two to take place. In this fashion – the repressed contents and the conscious contents can actively be manipulated. This can be observed in the nature of synchronicity which grows and intensifies as an individual correctly interprets their Wyrð or decreases and causes problems and obstacles when an individual Crosses their Wyrð. Psychosis is however a very real danger when the natural tension or spring of the mind is stretched or used in such a way genetics and heredity did not intend. The Will is powered by repressing certain contents depriving them of power [Libido] driving down those contents at the same time causing other contents to rise up and be empowered by power [Libido]. The conscious is like a laser, we point it at things with a specific aim and wishful thinking – it is the unconscious that makes the decision whether something works or not.

Unconscious contents can be made known through listening to and interpret Dreams, through recognising one's own behaviours, habits, patterns. With a variety of techniques, most of which involve difficult challenging alchemical formulas and a desire to evolve that causes serious internal conflict, the energy invested in manifesting Dark Gods or demons externally can be withdrawn – with a corresponding rise in consciousness, self-awareness and control of the psyche [including immense stores of libido] that projects them as parts of our unintegrated psychic content or leaks of unconscious activity.

Here though I must make something clear – the aim of THEM is not to strive for some perfect human being with a fully integrated consciousness – that is a pipe-dream, the sonic lie of many other groups that strive after the destruction of the Ego thinking they are going to become supermen. The psyche just doesn't work like that – it requires the tension in the spring to function and if that spring was somehow snapped the effects would be devastating as often happens in the case of the insane where the unconscious dominates. NO – we do not strive a superman or something that is simply unattainable – we wish to create the Undividual – a being that re-considers his place and is at least far more aware of the full range of his psychic functions and his own short-comings, limitations and biological biases than most. The outcome of tinkering with these phenomena is unknown and therefore as potentially dangerous as it is rewarding – extremes of both Genius and Madness are to be found within the Psyche but the result of one's tinkering may not be the result of another's.

What need be understood is that there is not or any way to prove an objective proof – I am certain most of you have experienced a supernatural phenomenon, seen a demon, ghost or apparition, been touched by a force or experienced a poltergeist. What is of interest to us here can only be conducted under rigorous self-scrutiny and brutal self-honesty to reveal what is figment, imagination, wishfulness, psychic leaks or genuine entities. Yet aside from trying to determine how much of the Dark Gods appearance, nature, etc is a product of us – the power that can be extracted from a more complete understanding, integration and operation of our psychic faculties is of considerable interest too. This Temple has however been home to extroverted individuals and their works will or may be further made accessible to you as you progress through the ranks or contribute to the Mvimaedivm Black Project.

The Temple also houses and welcomes new strains of Sinister definition and systems and we encourage you to share your own thoughts and experiences with it, to express your own currents as offshoots of the main vein. The Temple has definite goals such as isolating the context origin and evolution of concepts such as the number Seven, or ascertaining whether there really are archaeological remains of elongated heads to weigh up the evidence for Annunaki in relation to understanding why they were depicted the way they were – [the answer is yes and there are existing examples] – or merely speaking to experts or doing private research of large bodies of texts to find out how an ancient people lived, approached the world, the type of magic they had etc. Underlying these roots is the trunk of our work which is to discover the evolutionary path of concepts and people's that led to the distortion of the Aeonian Imperium and identify the path and weaknesses of the Magi – as well as the evolutionary path of what is called the Sinister and the Dark Ones.

EXOTERIC FORMATIONS

AUSTRALIA, MAGIC AND THE SINISTER

The following comments were taken from a discussion in another forum on Australia and Black Magic with Michael Aquino from the Temple of Set several years ago, comments that we consider interesting and informative enough to present here as it provides several in-depth insights into the Australian culture from someone who lives here and has the necessary understanding to implement Sinister strategies carefully conceived to achieve maximum mimesis within its particular Ethos.

“...Hello Michael, Thanks for your interesting article on Australia – you should visit – like all things, they must be experienced for knowledge to have depth. The interest in Australia (also called Arnhem Land in the past) and creating a “Sinister History” for it – ties up with our work re: the Order of Nine Angles – a group you are no doubt aware of, and which has been my guiding light for approximately ten years now. I first heard of your work in 1997 when researching the CoS and subsequently got a more panoramic view of your work in relation to the ONA via the “Letters to Stephen Brown”. It is nice to finally put a ‘face’ to the name. I was born in Australia but spent half my life here, half my life somewhere else (Aeotearoa). The landscape of Australia is, in a word, hostile.

Of the ten most poisonous snakes in the world, we host eight. We have many varieties of dangerous Ants, Wasps, Spiders, Snakes, Scorpions, Crocodiles, the list goes on – and even some of the Birds can be dangerous. We’ve a large wild bird called the Cassowary that can kick a man to death. The fabled Kangaroo so cutely captured in the world’s imagination also comes in a “Red” variety, standing 7 feet tall and with huge back legs it can (and does) ruin many a 4wd when they smash into it at dusk, or again kill a man with one kick. While the “grey” is more docile, it too can cause serious damage if the unwary should try to pat or approach it. The fauna of Australia is as varied as it is strange, inhabited with a massive variety of queer native animals.

Though much of the coastline of Australia is inhabited, the majority (about 90%) is desert; where it is not, it is breathtakingly beautiful, but very big, and rather empty so it is a bad idea to take off bush on your own. We have a large variety of terrain here – tropical bush, rain forest, old forest, tundra, desert, mountain, swamp, bush – some of it accessible by land, some of it only accessible via helicopter. In those places by helicopter – there are still new species being found – one of the recent was new and very large spiders in the Kimberley's. No matter where you are though – Australia is largely an inhospitable place when you leave the coastal settlements and head inward about 3-400 km when you begin to enter the “Outback”. Mostly barren, the Outback is where the ‘cutesy’ tourist idyll of Australia quickly fades. Esp. if you’re out there to perform ritual. Not only do you have to watch out for the terrain as weather can change very quickly here causing floods, torrential rains, mudslides, cave-ins or what have you – and the fauna which can cut you if you walk on it, touch it, and poison you – or dodge deadly and openly hostile arachnids, snakes, ants, wasps and so on – watch out for wombats; small bears that are quite vicious, as are koalas whom sport very long claws, both of whom will eat your food, avoid Wild pigs, dingoes, and so on... You also have to keep an eye on the locals – who, as buttoned-down farmers of the land, take a dim view of anything that looks like ‘magic’.

Luckily, the land is big enough to lose yourself in – but you have to be very careful you find yourself again. The Heat alone kills a lot of unprepared visitors. The Aboriginals, or Koori people are believed to have lived in Australia for some 40, 000 years prior to settlement. The fascinating aspects of their magic should not be ignored – since, they are quintessentially all that comprises the magical history of Australia. There are no white equivalents, except perhaps for the permeation of the church, no magical Caucasian characters that have any association to Australian magical history.

The Aboriginals speak of a Dreamtime, which very closely parallels the A-causal as spoken of by AL – and is a complex set of stories that not only relate the lore of the Koori – but actually provide MAPS of the Australian Landscape. A large majority of the songs that the Koori teach are not just arbitrary – they contain references to Australian landmarks, as Australia is (like New Zealand) broken up into many tribal areas, quoted in the songs. Thus, by singing a remembered song – an aboriginal can find their way, even way out “Beyond the Black Stump” (Middle of Nowhere for a white man). This ability has led to the legendary status of their ability as “Trackers” whom police often use to find lost people or those who might be hiding from them.

They are also extremely proficient in living off the land, finding food and water where white man finds only death. Like some native Indian tribes, the elders and clans in the outback live in their own perception of time – of which their knack for disappearing or “going walkabout” for as long as ten years, then returning as if they had left only yesterday – puzzles and annoys the consistent-loving white man. This is just a very basic outline of some of the magic that does exist here, none of it in the last 200 years. However, white man has all but wiped out the Ways of the Koori – and they survive only in the outback by an ever-diminishing group of Elders. Alcoholism and Substance abuse, particularly petrol has all but finished off the Tradition of the Koori, now treated with tokenism by a PC wary govt – but originally pursued in waves of Genocide by the British.

On the topic of Satanism though – that form is very recent here. Unlike older countries such as the UK or USA, there is very little Sinister history here. Some witch scares and some minor belief in the Devil – but there is at the present time only an estimated 30,000 practising Satanists in a population of 18-19 million people. Most of these have received their instruction on Satanism from the Satanic Bible, You, (ToS), or a mixture of internet-based agencies following 1997. Prior to which the number of Satanists was believed to be less than half of the above quoted number.

The 70's held a few reactionary satanic rises in worship – though none of these made any significant mention and are only mentioned in history as a collective appearance. A few Australian serial killers have named Satan as their inspiration – but that kind of thing is prevalent everywhere. None of these killers have ever matched the status of Ramirez or Manson however for the occult link. In terms of the HQ of THEM: Australia was chosen deliberately. Since I live here, am proud of my heritage, both Irish and Australia (I'm descended from Kings on one side, Convicts on the other, a nice nuance) and have some considerable ambition due to my Wyrd – it was decided that Australia would become host to a new nexion of the ONA and act as a psychic and/or physical fulcrum for the rest of the Sinisterion.

To this end, we hope to challenge the status quo of satanic instruction here and infuse the ONA-type Satanism in a country that has not yet been saturated by the ToS/CoS mentality to the degree of other countries. Though the eradication of religion and not dealing with the reactionaries to religion is one of our primary concerns. Australia has only been settled by the white man for around 200 years and has had no real impact on the Occult – aside of course, from the magnificent practices and way of living of the Koori whose way is now side-lined, ignored, and pushed further toward destruction; there has been no Sinister Characters or Contribution to Satanism from this Continent (some argue, Island) and THEM arose to change that.

So, while interesting to hear someone else's take on Australia based on its cultural history – its magical one is something else altogether, and we believe yet to be written. There is much potential for Australia to serve as the new nexion, indeed even as an HQ for Falcifer, not just for its ominous and beautiful landscapes, hostility, alieness, or the fact that almost any act of open ritual is seen as 'black mass' thus a catharsis would generate a significant amount of energy to be dispersed (for more info see Oto Anorha #30) into its red earth, unlike the jaded USA or UK where such things are just viewed as fringe activities of nut jobs, or quietly tolerated, magic Here involves risk. Esp. when it utilises the manner in which we are using it to make significant changes to Australian History by giving it a Sinister one. This will take time of course – but then that is part of the magic taught within ONA's methodology.

Oh – PS – I was re-reading your findings on Australia and realised I'd forgotten to address a particular point I had intended to. viz, the use of "Oz". You quoted: ""Oz", oddly enough, is the name some Australians attach to their country. It is here that the band flees, to a settlement deep in the blisteringly hot Australian Outback. Over fifteen hundred people have formed a settlement that is nearly totally self-sufficient. Weather control, lakes, forests, mountains, underground agriculture, and huge machines all serve to support this community." Perhaps owing to the illiteracy of the earliest convicts from England, a vernacular developed among the imprisoned that was short and sweet, gruff and particular to the penal communities.

Historically/Linguistically – I really couldn't say – but what I do know is that Australia, prior to the huge influx of foreigners and the rise in political correctness which has been a great challenge to the way Australians speak, act and tell it like it is; expresses itself in a unique way which some have termed 'lazy' and others 'down-to-earth'. Life here in the 1800's was extremely tough. Enough said.

There wasn't time for dressing up one's language nor much opportunity to learn it for those who colonised this Great Southern Land. As a result, the alpha-male who could get things done, (aka the 'Battler' against the Establishment Ned Kelly, for instance, an archetype that emerged in reaction to the oppressive imperialism of the British Rule) with a minimum of fuss (or "airy-fairy") was the thing to be – and represented a schism between Convict and Jailer that still stews today. The discovery of Gold was probably what bought the largest infusion of cross-culture Australia had yet seen and allowed the Chinese to flourish alongside the Irish. This influx on the gold fields exacerbated already fierce rivalry between the cultures – a rivalry which was somewhat captured by the Nation's later obsession for sport but which was also partly responsible for the esoteric development of Australian colloquialism. As I already said, a huge alpha-male meme was required to tame Australia; the men who first arrived here built the roads, carved out the hillsides, lay miles of track, cut down forests, hewed rock faces; were a breed of their own, Tough Buggers by any stretch.

The worship and necessity of such an archetype has been watered down somewhat with the relaxation of British imperialism – and the bullshit of PC, but has led to the survival of an ideology that the ability to down incredible amounts of beer, endure the toughest conditions, support one's own, stand up for what's right, support Sport and the National Obsession with Football, violence and domestic/tribal patriarchal rule (That the Convicts got to play the British guard at football/cricket has had a huge influence in the way things are 'settled' here.)- among many other traits unique to Australian culture – being the dominant characteristics of Its people. The hero worship of nobodies who became/become somebodies remains one of the defining features of Australian culture – but woe betide that someone should 'forget where they came from.'

Because of the tribalism that existed in the colonies and gold fields – and that includes with the Koori – it was considered great fun by the colonists to make sport with new arrivals who were often told all sorts of tall tales about Australia at the expense of the hapless visitor shaking their head in amazement. Many Americans still think the ‘platypus’ is such a tall tale. But it exists. One fossil was recently found that showed a former species had teeth. On that – it is also believed that during the Gondwanaland period that many of the species native to Australia crossed into New Zealand – thus the kiwi is believed to be Australian by some circles. Not something I can substantiate; I just have a good memory for recalling what people say. To some extent, it has been surmised that this habit of ‘talking smack’ to visitors gave rise to legends of Australia in other countries as a wonderland – and thus an “Oz” – but this is probably not really the only explanation, esp. given that Australia was colonised well before Frank Baum's 1900 writing of the Wizard of Oz. A more likely culprit for this -is that although they can work extremely hard – Australians still prefer their lazy chipped English to the prim and proper ‘pommy’ and have a love of shortening everything that might be too fancy for the alpha-male, to as short a phrase as possible.

Speaking like this is one of the tribal characteristics that identifies tourists from locals – as is the strange rhyming slang used to codify everyday objects names and places. Thus you, Michael, would be known as ‘Mick’, here. Patrick/Patto, Service Station/Servo, and it gets even more obscure; the Brisbane Cricket Grounds for instance, is called the “Gabba”. Figure that one out. Of the efficiency in everything physical – there was also a quiet appreciation for the poet or artist who offered escapism (however mild) from the harshness of living off the land, esp. when that poet effectively captured the hard life of the colonists. Qv. Henry Lawson. Many people assume the obscure sayings that comprise much of the Aussie vernacular (though generally only in the Working Class) exist because of a simple peculiarity of the Australian culture – or just assume the Australians enjoyed ‘taking the piss’. But the Australian language (now in danger of extinction due to PC) stems from the alienation of the early convicts, the challenges they faced in settlement and colonisation of this very tough land, the persecution they endured under British imperialism, and the threat they felt after finally colonising the land and finding gold to make their fortunes – from the rising influx of immigrants.

None of these things, these vital currents that form the Australian Ethos have changed; there is still alienation because the convicts estrangement from their homeland never went away; although having gotten softer in the coastal cities the average Australian worker esp. in the outback is gruff, tough and cold as steel to outsiders, warm and affable to his mates and still casts a suspicious eye at anyone remotely in Authority, inc the foreman, boss, policeman or anyone who is brave/stupid enough to try and climb the ladder by stabbing his mates in the back or ‘putting on airs’. And despite the nonsense of having to disguise racism openly and instead channel it into underground resentment (What would Jung say about repressing this facet?) to meet the demands of political correctness in the face of a series of Govt's trying to make Australia a cultural melting pot for everyone; hatred seethes within many white Australians toward this increasing wave of newcomers.

And tribalism, taking root because of reaction to this hostility has led to entire enclaves being populated by just one race, Springvale in Victoria for instance, is mainly (95%) inhabited by Koreans, Chinese, and other Oriental Races, the wealthy Toorak township in Vic is saturated mostly by Jews, Frankston in Vic by WASPS, other areas particularly by the Lebanese, Sri Lankans, Indians, Greeks etc. A situation which would require its own separate reply. For all the efforts of the Govt and media to promote the illusion of equality and foster some magical idyll of the world's cultures living in harmony together – Australia is sitting on a cultural time bomb which will take only a few careless (or careful) matches to set off. Literally – a cricket match or football match can quickly shed the pretext of racialism and expose the fierce alienation felt by different tribes that assembles them. So, in many ways – understanding the Australian populace, whether as a politician or a Satanist, requires in-depth exposure to its culture – which traditional culture of the WASP, was/is designed to tribalize the white Australian, marginalise anyone else, and protect his/her very tenacious views which survive from the onset of his arrival here. Hence Sport – as a racial current – is taken very seriously here. In fact, it is the dominating Religion.

THE FORMATION OF THEM [I]

Prior to 2000 I was a diabolist and devil worshipper proper – having received my impressions of Satanism via the Bible and presently available media and stereotypes including occult and para-psychological books.

In 1997 the internet became available to me and by 2000 I was looking into the COS after being disappointed by the Satanic Bible and at the TOS for more information after having been introduced to the Crystal Tablet of Set by a member. Neither of the approaches taken by the groups appealed to me.

I became aware of the ONA in 2001 after several documents on the totse search engine caught my eye.

Through a small group deliberately created to gather more information on the secretive Order entitled 'The Collection Plate' – I was directed to Nasz Dom – a short-lived and trouble-plagued website hosted by Thornian of ONA.

I accumulated enough new information by the way of manuscripts and conversations from Nasz Dom that it took me two years to process what I had found. Many of the Mss puzzled me as I had not had such intense exposure to anything like it before and it required me to find and read about Hitler, Jung, Spengler, Aristotle, Myatt and many others in order to make sense of the mss.

In 2002 a second attempt to find more information about the ONA via 'the collection plate mark II' yielded information about an ONA forum operating in yahoo which I promptly joined.

Around 2003 as 'DWR' I joined in conversations with other members of the forum and grew exponentially – developing fanatical loyalty to the ideas of the ONA. Noting the limitations on file storage in the group and continued difficulties others were having finding ONA material, inc. myself, I opened a 2nd yahoo group called the ONA Database. This was to hold all the overflow of mss and materials that would no longer fit into the original group.

OD was successful – but even then the difficult moral question of whether to increase the availability of mss or decrease it was a hot topic among forum members – a haunting question that saw the foreclosure of OD after approximately six months. At its height OD attracted hundreds of members and held the largest collection of ONA mss anywhere then online. It was during the formation of OD that I made contact with many of the people who would continue to support my endeavours.

After OD closed due to a decision by myself – it was replaced by Caput Mortuum's (Algol) site Sitra Ahra which superseded the OD with its content. Sitra Ahra suffered the same fate as many other ONA hosters though which tended to be moral uncertainty or lousy web servers and was shut down after only a short time of operation.

During this time, I had begun working with the ONA mss; undertaking an insight role as a skinhead, working on a replacement tarot, attempting chant, to find this and that, and continuing to read and look for further ONA mss inc. Naos.

Ansuz Transmissions in NZ were able to provide me with Naos before they closed, along with many other rare ONA mss still housed in Mvimaedivm group. Shortly after doing so, they ceased contact leaving many others who had not received what they had sent money for, angry in the wake. AT was one more victim of the uncertainty that goes with making ONA mss available.

As my involvement of the ONA Way in my life deepened, I felt the need to split off and form my own group.

The first of these attempts was the Temple of the Tangent or 'ttt'. The ttt was basically like OD except that it aimed to gather any and all 'acausal-based art forms' to share and distribute amongst members of the Way. Although again attracting a significant amount of members, I was largely the only poster and after only a short while I became disenchanted with what I was doing and closed the group.

The vampiric Tempel of Blood surfaced around the same time, and I took great interest in learning about their practices – for they seemed very ONA-like, and I saw it as a means to get closer. I worked briefly with the TOB and was given many materials, some ONA and some TOB all of which are housed in Mvimaedivm.

The Emanations of Urania was instrumental in my grasping of Aeonic Theory – and gave me a strong impetus to be more patient as concerned my life efforts.

My life taken over by the Way, I had continued to do whatever I could to serve the Order, filling in gaps, providing information, or fixing what I thought was broken. Being methodical and meticulous in my approach to the world I had in fact copy and pasted the entire ONA Archive into a separate file in case the day should ever come when the group would be destroyed or shut down; in which case the information contained therein would be preserved. It was to prove a useful gesture as during an argument between two members one of them threatened to lay a complaint with the FBI and have the forum shut down. This was met with cries of protest and anger from other members – and relief when I smugly announced that it made no difference due to the back-up of the archives that I had made. This action made me a few new friends.

Following continued disruption by the member in question who went on to kill ONA forum completely with his trolling; I conceived the idea of creating a more protected forum that would allow moderation – as the current forum had long been abandoned by its creator to the chagrin of many. This gave rise to the short-lived 'AeONA' group where I learned useful lessons about the folly of trying to control dialectic. Shortly after its creation I shut this group down too.

Upon attempting the Naos Tarot I came into contact with the ONA who offered guidance, encouragement, and support for the project. Much of this is detailed in the second diary of the DOAD. Around the same time, I also came into contact with a woman who had also been drawn to the ONA after going renegade with a much larger magical organisation but had some heavy reservations regarding the practice and approach of both. I would come to know her as the Sorceress.

The dual instruction received by ONA and the S. tempered my fanaticism of the ONA and gave way to a more mature outlook – an esoteric expansion – that made me consider the benefits of following the Way to the written letter.

Although my loyalties lay with the ONA I continued to communicate with the Sorceress and add to my knowledge about magic and the occult and myself. Feeling that something had to be done to bridge the gap between what she knew, I knew, and ONA knew we devised the concept of a group that would not be restricted to using the Septenary Way in expressing the Sinister. Several of our friends joined us in forming a group on one hand strongly influenced by the great IOT, and the other the great ONA – yet with several significant twists.

It was about this time that I realised my perceptions had changed so much that I would need to discard the alter-ego of Tnepres Ra (aka Ryan Anschauung) whose loyalty and fierce devotion to the ONA was blinding me. I reacted with passion.

In a heated split from the original ONA forum I formed ‘Mvimaedivm’ group with five others, inc. the Sorceress where we continued to build our synthesis of IOT/ONA. Growing quietly in the shadows my studies had taken a deeper focus on forms, symbolism, and the roles of each. The Sorceress had raised many important points regarding the ONA’s practice, as well as that of Crowley, IOT, TOB, and other groups. – and I attempted to tackle each of them with my intellect and logic, formulating in the process several dozen theories to synthesise or bridge the problems raised with solutions.

One of the problems was fore knowledge that any form created to manifest our insights was an illusion. Knowledge that many forms rose up, sank under, and failed to do what they set out to do – which was usually pander to the ego of its creator. We had to be different, and yet somehow allow the ONA, IOT, my studies, their studies, all of our Lhp studies to be recognised as legitimate paths and experiences of a collective whole – but how to make a square Satan fit a round hole? Or a round Satan a square one?

The genius of Carl Jung provided much of the groundwork for the connection to be made between us all in the form of archetypes, whilst ONA’s emphasis on essence and forms and shape-shifting had given us the necessary understanding of change to unite a sea of differences without watering down the individual tsunami.

What was once contradictory would be reconciled – and reconciled in such an honest fashion about the nature, role and powers of the occult that it would prove extremely difficult to refute. The answer to quell previous conflict between members and their different paths whilst still maintaining a serious and active dialectic would prove as natural a development as the name of the new group – the Temple of THEM.

Rather than continue to expound how the individual Adept is created – THEM accepted the ONA had given a sterling and lasting example of the process – and set about teaching the next stage of development after the keys to personal development had been grasped, explored and understood enabling a permanent striving for increase to occur of itself based on these fundamental principles.

THEM attempts to show what is behind, beneath, and beyond form; how Mythos and Cultures are created/influenced by a group of individuals and the power of manipulating form using its model of apprehensions, and often, itself as an example.

We believe our existence to be a natural progression emerging from the influence of the collective unconscious for an increased consciousness and the particular geometry of the world in which we find ourselves and which sets our particular challenges.

Whether our separate or collective insights into our existence are literal, figurative, or imagined we cannot be certain; THEM simply embody an experimental synchronicity device to increase consciousness and raise awareness of the self, others, the matrix, and the vehicles and roles by which we ourselves perceive the world and the above.

Thus far it appears to be working.

THE FORMATION OF THEM [II]

This was posted on our forum, Mvimaedivm, titled ‘Stepping Outside the ONA’ in response to someone’s question. It might prove interesting and informative as regards THEM’s relation to the ONA, the Sinister, and Satanism.

“Ah, well here you come to the reason THEM arose. ONA’s mystical, silent, tight-lipped approach is designed to develop critical thinking in its adherents, to enable them, force them, to work things out for themselves.

So, to short-cut having to endlessly define and research ONA’s exhaustive glossary of forms, some of us cheated and saw ONA as the expression of a human being whose human behaviour was quantifiable even if for the most part, and at certain stages of ONA’s life, his forms/emanations were not.

This removed us from being trapped in the Mythos and Forms of the ONA and allowed us to look at the ONA as a formula or structure designed to elicit certain changes in behaviour on others: such changes being physical, mental, practical etc. and see the reason behind deployment of such forms was an experimental means to essentially to build a Mythos, that would become a culture when enough people were involved, and eventually a reality, when enough people invested their energy in it and tried to earth it.

This allowed us (THEM) to place ONA in the context of being a form expressed by some human being – (thus to some extent predictable) and thus because we know AL is Myatt, to research Myatt and see/understand that he has written a great many manuscripts using other forms such as NS, Islam, etc but that underlying it all there was a common thread – viz. a desire to colonise space. Thus, all the exhortations of the ONA toward this or that, and its beautiful aesthetics such as yf dating, Aeonics, dark gods, Naos, etc etc, can all be understood as part of a plan (that changed over the years) to get to this point: and thus certain methodology of ONA understood: (while still functioning on its other levels also) But also that this creation of Myatt, for all its span and scope, was still a contained expression of Form emanating from a human being.

If a person does not see the ONA in this context, and a great many don't, (I didn't for a long time) then the ONA can very well become a labyrinth of occult madness that overwhelms with its complexity and sheer volume of factors in its Mythos.

THEM were responsible for providing this context and its unique analysis and understanding of the ONA in such a way: and that is why we are definitively a Nexion loyal to the ONA, but also something else besides.

Our collective understanding has now changed the face of the ONA for a great many people with the emergence and proliferation of such a context, allowing a collective going beyond the Seven-Fold Way's extensive/exhaustive analysis of the personal sphere, and a new focus on the cultural and supra-personal aspect of said ONA cultures' growth: i.e. concerning what comes after the ONA's emphasis on the personal.

But, more importantly to FREE many from what has been described as the 'madness' of the ONA's labyrinth (Which labyrinths exist whenever a large volume of forms presents themselves) and free them prematurely, in order to increase the number of people who understand the same things about ONA that THEM do. Not because we are an authority, but because being stuck in the labyrinth is not very enjoyable. And because my personal view is that some should be given the opportunity to escape it – (others in THEM differ on this matter) we let synchronicity and a certain level of determinedness designate to us who was going to receive that context. Because of this context – which has the potential to allow people to dismiss the aspects of ONA regarding its Mythos, which aspects are essential to a revolution over the Magian, in my personal point of view, THEM did not share their comments widely and publicly with most who follow the ONA, but only a select few.

Those who are here now, are not here by chance – or, likewise, they are.”

THE FORMATION OF THEM [III]

Feb 9th 2006.

“Well, one aim was to prove through conclusive evidence that certain theories of mine were possible. What many of those theories are, shouldn’t be revealed at this stage but one such aim was to prove for myself that single-handedly, a mythos could be created and sustained. THEM has managed to do that. The surface of these forms continues to be misunderstood – and while that occurs, I will continue to teach people what lies beneath – as that is the true course of my existence, to help or as DM puts it so nicely, to stop the suffering. This, by changing the cycles that usually dominate unconsciously by showing how humans evolve. Whether using Satanism to do this has or hasn’t been effective is not really a concern – I believe my work has brought life to Satanism and holds its own against any proponents of its different systems because of the raw self-honesty, willingness to expose my own stupidity, misunderstanding, arrogance, ignorance etc without the need for having to be seen as a superhuman masculine male who must always be right lest his ego be challenged. I am as supremely arrogant as I am humble – though I should point out that the arrogance arrives from living Satanically, that is to say, bounded within that form and the parameters an Ism creates. To continue my work, it may be necessary to leave Satanism altogether as the last and final form of my interest, behind, and begin anew in a different direction or fashion.

The books – so called Six and Seven are in fact viewed as real books – though to acknowledge their contents now would be to divulge too much. Obviously, this won’t be released for another two years at least, so I can tell you that ‘book six’ is another experimental black magical practice [though black magic and its context in relation to its author should be understood before making assumptions] viewed as the organic Now; that is, as a living narrative taking place in the present time in the interactions fostered by this group and its members as an experiment designed to test a number of the above hinted at theories and to see how difficult it is to implement changes to existing forms or give rise to a new one altogether. That of course by setting some handicaps such as not relying on the usual channels that bring a form together, notoriety, or popularity.

Book Seven I am told is a reference to some distant record that might perhaps be made of THEM's involvement and influence with the Sinister that someone somewhere might write concerning any changes that THEM to manage to invoke via its short-lived [but life-long for its author] manifestation. Thus, book six is happening Now with its authors, characters and story line determined by the actions, motions and concepts brought forth by THEM and its interaction with others in the hopes that it can indeed presence a new Archetype. While Book Seven is what might be written about THEM should it manage to do it and prove the worth of its 'Science'.

I think that this is something that will not be understood; and might even be foolhardy to prematurely expose or inform people of – what is essentially non-satanic takes aboard those most likely to have passion and a malleability that can be affected through the form of Satanism and changes them in accordance with that archetype which some have termed the Thinking Warrior. And it has always been invisible but the author of THEM has about as much idea about what he is doing than the rest of the forms out there; this is a highly experimental concept that no-one else has attempted to do – to cheat the Ethos proscribed by our Time and try to move as many people forward out of the constraints of that Time as can be afforded given the 'technology' and insight available to that sorcerer – esp. at such a young age. [Mr FL is either 28 or 29 at the time of writing.] is an ambitious endeavour no matter what way you choose to look at it. To actually set up and emulate a group like the ONA for oneself and prove that it can be done is no easy feat; look how many ONA groups last without degenerating. It's also a comment on the tenacity of living a way through in order to provide oneself with the truest possible experiences to provide answers to one's questions – a good example that could be copied by many.

As I say again – the forms used by someone my age are pretty advanced – only because that awareness that there is a fighting against my natural youthful aggression and a desire to implement a greater maturity are at constant friction with one another. It is not therefore, impossible for someone at my age to have found the same insights that I have through a thorough search of form – nor too late to abandon them in favour of changes caused by evolution. I hold to optimism that when my forms my quest my concepts and the way of Mvimaedivm are really understood that life may very well change through a few who may then carry that maturity born of blood sweat and tears through to the next generation.

But until I'm old and grey, there probably won't be a time to express the fullness of my intentions regarding Satanism, such things as the ONA, or such things as THEM. So, the illusions must continue yet.'

THE INFINITE FRACTAL

“THEM has many meanings, it is not just indicative of a group of people, it also means Them, the Dark Gods, and their voice that issues through when the vein of the subconscious is tapped and directs the psyche beyond ego impulses and contrivances. It is the state that is experienced when Self and Ego become active as two powers that can direct one and embodies the loss of identity that allows one to become a shape shifter – this separates US, from them. It is also a term to denote someone who has truly built their own self-image devoid of others’ expectations that shrugs off the world’s and societies roles with friends, family etc., as projections that aim to force a person into a role and play by the laws of the matrix.

A being that can smash all intellectual chains into dust, possessed of a determination of the will that others stand in awe and fear of. Furthermore, the word THEM is an appropriation of a Magian fear meme. When people quote an unknowable source in relating a scientific or religious fact, they generalise and thus create an illusory authoritarian figure, “they” i.e. “they say that...” or “that’s what they say” that builds on the fear felt by all in thrall to the matrix, that gives psychological and magical credence to one’s claims. We have stolen that “They...” and it has become “THEM” People – as a rule – tend not to believe in the sinking of the fabled continent of Atlantis. They question many of the tenets associated with that particular fable including the suggestion of superior and advanced weaponry and technology supposedly being available to the Atlanteans, including flying ships and/or discs.

They question the particular location where Atlantis was supposed to occupy and find fault with maps, verification or accounts that mentioned it. Or they struggle to accept that Gods exist, (many find it easier to believe in just one), and that the Gods occasionally might object to the way humans are treating each other and the world and choose to intervene.

Yet, Carl Jung, famously related in his many books on many occasions following some 70 years of experience with direct contact of psychological patients, that their dreams, swelling up from the subconscious, had the power to hint at the possibility or certitude of impending or imminent death. The symbology that arose could warn them, that the course they had set was about to destroy them, and like currents from the darkest ocean some part of them let loose waves of realisation crashing on the shores of their conscious mind.

These powers from within that override the bovine functioning of the oblivious conscious human being are among those chthonic, alien forces that we equate with THEM, but there are many others. We believe that on all levels of life, there IS a force or forces that object to our behaviour/existence and give us warnings – but it is not a moral force telling us to do good or bad. It is an immoral force that exists ‘side by side’ / within/without us, mimicking what we do as we mimic it, but it does so with far more power and strength because of its different type of life-form and scale.

In today’s worlds where dreams are greatly undervalued, shunned and ignored at tremendous but sanctimoniously sanctioned peril – some psyches, seems to act on behalf of these unconscious forces, collectively manifesting the same type of warnings for an individual or group of individuals or even a corporation in an attempt to bring great imbalance to the conscious attention of the parties involved.

Even the greatest form, the Empire, ceases to be eventually because such forms are incredibly difficult to sustain, and cracks appear. They ask too much for too long and a reaction of equal strength builds inside the vacuum. For as the mythology of countless eras, epochs and empires attests – people cannot push against something too long, without tipping it over. In the eyes of Gods, reaching beyond your reach, stealing fire, setting yourself too high, amounts to Hubris. And if there is one thing shared by Gods, it’s that they hate Hubris. For Every Action there is an Equal and Opposite Reaction.

If a person overreaches themselves by indulging in destructive or excessive behaviour – they may be warned about their path by their psyche. If their psyche is ignored, that warning of behaviour is passed to people, who are affected by the behaviour through that person’s actions. If the people are ignored, the warning passes to the System. The System is where we exit the process and human involvement is superseded by forces of reaction. If the System ignores the warnings from the people, who ignore warnings from the person, who ignores warnings from the psyche – the Planet, our people, our psyche – all speak at once. Because we are all derived from, echoes of, the same macrocosm/microcosm of Dark Gods and the powers that buffet us like paper in the wind.

The Planet speaks with forces that treat us with indifference – it has a life of its own, a time cycle of its own that dwarfs us and our sentimental constructs, existing as it does through Aeons. Yet we mimic its every move, copy its essence, because we are fractals of the same Creatrix. As the Earth has tsunamis and earthquakes that devastate the land and sea, so do humans have personal equivalents that flood us with emotion or subconscious contents bringing with it waves of destructive debris, and just as earthquakes tear apart the ground creating deep chasms and levelling buildings, so to can the human experience a ‘shock to the system’ strong enough to level the concepts and beliefs, faith or trust we have built in our minds, or have our solid foundations shattered in the wake of deep psychological tremors. The ‘psychological’ effect that media often cite after a natural disaster is often believed to be a separate outcome from the event, but it’s not – it is part of the event, a strong evidence of our connexion to these forces, as a minor manifestation of these forces, whatever their origin may be.

Some say Earth is a dead rock, others a sentient being. The convenient simplification of asking if something is dead or alive does not apply here – if a person is completely unaware of their unconscious and ruled by forces they cannot fathom – run behind the scenes by invisible hands and currents – can they say that they are alive? If we use 10% of our brains, who or what uses the rest?

The definition of Life meets strict biophysical criterion, yet it has been shown that Cities – share the same functions as the human being and fit the description of life – the only thing that stands in the way of Cities being accepted as living beings is our size, our self-importance and our arrogance that we know what Life is.

We hear so often that human beings are having an enormous impact on the Earth, whatever sources cite that impact as being, it is our Ignorance that does the most damage. Media gives the impression that things go away. Our attention seems unable to focus on more than one or two things at any given time.

Recently, the largest oil spill in history caused by BP ceased to exist and was removed from the public eye as a newsworthy story – because it's not news anymore, its old. The implications of that spill are tremendous. Recently, a special neutron-accelerator was built to fire light speed particles into light speed particles with some physicians admitting they had no idea of the consequences, and it could even cause a black hole. Recently, a missile packed with explosives was fired into the moon. Recently, a process called 'Fracking' came to my attention whereupon a giant hole is drilled in the Earth using millions of tons of fresh, not salt, fresh water and incredible amounts of explosives used to blow the hole wider to obtain oil deep beneath the ocean seabed. Recently, the US announced yet another insane speech about the 'enemies we face' and swore to uphold truth and justice, and it continues on its merry way as the most evil entity and attitude that ever possessed the Physis of man, laying waste to the planet, its people and its future.

Natural Disasters, and among these should be counted those internal esoteric equivalents all of us have that can corrupt, change or destroy our present frame of mind or carefully tended personalities – decrease hubris. They remind us of our Place, though we hate to be reminded of it. They remind us of our lack of Purpose, though we hate to be reminded we don't know it. They remind us of our mortality, and how everything we think so important can be swept clean in the super-destructive forces of the Earth's natural cycles – and we hate that too.

But we've been trained to hate, we've been indoctrinated to forget. We've inherited and continued, without question, the building blocks upon which our consciousness is based, and we continue to remain ignorant of the connexion between us and Earth, Earth and us.

But we will Remember.

All of it.

...Soon.

Tellus Uber Alles.

FALCIFER: AIMS AND INTENTS

+O+ Finance-wise it is my intention to become self-sufficient through writing, art and other mediums by making the Temple in some regards a house-hold name of the occult. What naturally happens then is that it popularly rides a wave until something else replaces it at which time it begins to decline – this is part of the reason the Temple has a 30-year charter because I realise nothing lasts forever and it's a fool's errand to expect it to. The plan is to get into people's lives/heads, do as MUCH damage to the underlying structures that prop up the Magian power structure as possible, and get out as the next stage takes root of its own accord. By tapping into the subconscious needs and unlocking powers of the People [by smashing forms that sap their energy] and the thrill that comes with various insights being revealed there is an addictive meta-psychological high in the Temple's writings. A narrative drug if you like but one that provides its own cure. Because ONA sabotaged its own growth and has a copy-left policy it is next to impossible to make money from it – let alone any sort of living, so this new tarot which I hope will be powerful and “pretty” enough to replace other Tarots and will hopefully be able to sell for a much lower price – could saturate the tarot market with maybe a thousand decks full of new or unappreciated sinister archetypes such as Gods re-joined with their Female counterparts, and other such heresies. Threshold was a good start and a milestone I've been trying to achieve for a while – i.e., independent publishing but the money made did not go far.

However, now somewhat hooked after reading threshold, people may want to read more and more of our texts – many of which are unavailable and many of which can be written to satisfy the demand such as Oto Anorha #34... The major problem faced is that because of the nature of our work there is likely to be no funding coming through from people terrified to actually say what we say – Threshold had many things taken out for fear they might offend – and so for a long-time self-publication has been the only way to get those actual comments through into books we write. I have bought some canvases and may do some paintings to see how they sell too – as it is, I have already established my own currency which is Tarot cards. In five years' time I would like to see the Temple populated with self-sufficient members each driven to help research and unearth the secrets of the past as well as a strong selection of sinister currents working in co-operation to help re-wire the human brain and behavioural ethos by making alchemical changes – the Temple should be able to make its own money through its writings, art, workshops even – but the danger of sliding too far forward into a money-making business is ever present, the danger of expanding the Temple and it becoming something it wasn't supposed to become is also ever present, and if either of those things happen, the Temple loses its credibility, integrity and has successfully been sabotaged, destroyed, rendered impotent by using the System and becoming the System it is trying to stop.

So, if we are to finance the Temple outside the System which is very difficult – we need to decide whether we are working toward re-instituting barter, our own currency, or using the Systems money system on a day-to-day basis which only helps support it all the more. What I propose then is reform and not revolution [at least in our lifetime as a Temple – let us take it most of the way and others do the rest when the time is ripe] and to use the existing system to some extent symbiotically, at least enough to fund what we do, and change the way people use the system by changing people. A study of Marxism / Capitalism / Communism would potentially help find an alternative current outside of the major 3 that can provide an answer to providing for us without using the present System .+O+

+O+ Education-wise – I feel, that only now, having reached 30-33 and I really in any sort of position to understand a lot of what I have absorbed and read – and only now have the maturity and hindsight to implement any of it without falling prey to a host of past mistakes. I see the Temple's role as teaching the means by which to learn – not teaching some doctrine of content to be learned. Much of the Seven-fold Way is supposed to be done on one's own – having public nexions where it is easy to access advice and guidance makes people lazy, ask careless questions, and waste a lot of our time – Time is the most valuable commodity because life does not persist, we have massive goals to attain, and we cannot afford to waste it answering every little question that can easily be answered itself. Self-sufficiency is requisite otherwise the students will always turn to look for the Teachers and what happens when the Teachers aren't there? The students go looking for another teacher instead of taking responsibility and power for themselves – they thus just trade one system for another ending up in the same bullshit cycle.

We need education on how to break cycles by explaining how they function. MB is an excellent research facility, and we still need to uncover a great deal of information about the origin of seven, different kinds of magic, what went wrong, who and how the Magi took control, how the human being developed various ideas, concepts and functions that now rule our perception, biophysical traits that result in various biases and so on... We need non-dualist pagan systems to flourish – but this is an extremely difficult ask because people do not know how to abandon their matrix – and this is where the alchemy comes in – it may also prove to be a useful substitute for language where images and processes of alchemical terms can be used to secretly convey answers to questions on a matter, how to deal with a problem, obstacle or individual etc... We should continue finding the origins of all the Dark Gods and the concepts that created them and brought them to life. +O+

+O+ Sex-wise I think since the Temple has no interest in controlling its students there is no real need to explore – but I think Sorcerers need to be androgynous and not necessarily physically or sexually but mentally they need to have both the masculine and feminine traits developed and honed. Sex is however a very powerful force, and the Temple should have a program to teach why – which is largely the use of abstaining or indulging which has a massive effect on a country's populace and its mindset. Consider the Catholic Church and its proclivities are so prevalent because of the Churches fierce hatred of the body and the flesh. Tantra, Kundalini, and other techniques should be adopted and utilised as well as emphasis on the Magi's eradication of Touch and Intimacy over time in an effort to break Solidarity and Empathy between people. +O+

+O+ Current-wise the current has two public prongs – it has the Mythos that I write for it in the way of speaking collectively about who THEM are and what THEY want and do. This often does not represent those behind the veil – but it need be understood that without knowing what people wanted, or people not speaking up earlier – this was Necessary. I think I agree that ultimately this Is my Temple and my current so long as I continue to write, do the art, communicate the insights, and am Ryan Anschauung – it is thus understandable that saying the Temple is a shared democratic institution is a contradiction in terms and more or less bullshit – I have been steering the ship and really only I know or knew where I wanted it to go.

Behind this public facade there are [or were] however the individual currents of each person involved. This acceptance of many strains of Sinister is what Sath referred to as an 'amorphous' disunity and who wanted the Temple to codify and solidify some concrete current all of us follow... What Sath never understood is that this is precisely the same process as ALL Forms take shortly before they become fixed and enter the natural life cycle of formation, plateau, disintegration and plateau. Until it was desired to make THEM channel One decided on current [and when can a group of people Ever be happy with a conglomerate current?] and where no-one would agree on what that was – the Temple functioned with no significant problems because it did Not take any specific form, thus was malleable enough to absorb many people who practiced different currents without conflict and support many without conflict.

When Leo came in and was accused of using Magian currents problems immediately arose as to what constitutes a Magian – and I felt this was a premature question since Mvimaedivm Blacks whole premise was to unearth the history of and identify precisely that. Thus, Sath jumped the gun to achieve her agenda and found out the hard way THEM is not a democracy. It is easy in almost any other form to decide clearly what something IS, something ISN'T, what is ACCEPTABLE, and what is therefore UNACCEPTABLE, what is RIGHT, WRONG... but not with THEM. The premise of THEM is not to set itself up as another Church that tells people what to do – but to encourage them to tell themselves with the best and most informed background we can unearth that gives them the greatest insight into what their choices mean, where they arise from, and what they ultimately do. So, research on the Magi and the Distortion must also continue.

Now the problem arises is that if we restrict people to performing and living only our current that we are effectively becoming a Church – telling people who to be, how to live, and thus committing the same sins we are trying to stamp out. What I therefore propose is that we create a system for THEM – and refuse to admit any openly Magian persons – but NOT insist that it be the only current a person use. A person should be free to explore every means [but because of the nature of having a form, THEM must preclude some things to define itself – it therefore precludes Magian usage] however, in precluding Magian usage we run the risk of becoming ignorant and blind to the Enemy's system, tactics, methods and magic. This is one of the fatal mistakes the ONA made.

So, while a rabid hatred of the Magian fuels fanaticism and intensity on a surface level – it does not educate the audience on any practical level. This preclusion goes against the natural esoteric growth of the LHP – and THIS is the fundamental problem with having a form because every form can only define itself by exclusion of other forms... thus limiting the total field from which the Adept can grow and understand... This is the common function of all groups – but if it continues with us, the cycle continues and nothing changes. When THEM dies, the audience merely moves onto the next group – rather than understanding that this is precisely what they have been doing and will do again... I know it seems like a wonderful idea to have an army of same-minded matching individuals bearing our name and banners right around the world – but the reality is it's never going to happen unless we employ the SAME restrictive religious indoctrination as the enemy does – and if we do, how are we any different?

Liber ISS and the alchemical texts are a good start – as is all the research in Mvimaedivm Black, as is the sorcery presently used by the Temple relating to reading Synchronicity in the events of the world as signs of Wyrđ, developing Empathy through the grades of Tarot, EA and so on, Developing Sinister Solidarity. You have already seen the speed with which Sath, Anca and Noc abandoned the current we thought they were sworn to in terms of leaving the Temple – but that was merely a matter of changing Proximity – it does not mean they are not still in Sinister Solidarity with Sinister forces and energies or THEM in their own way. And without any need for the Temple. And being without a need for the Temple IS ultimately, the aim I intend and I see as requisite for creating the Undividual.

Because of the nature of Form it is easy to forget the real nature of what these forces do when adopted and channelled – it is easy to garner the idea that we will all be together in one place as an Illuminati, happily joined in brotherhood until the end on good terms with one another and somehow able to all have our Wyrds synchronously joined together. The reality is that by adopting these highly sinister and destructive and fiercely unique unfolding flowering individual Wyrds our destinies will sharply veer off from one another and proximity, empathy, solidarity and any kind of restriction or form – be torn apart without mercy or gratitude.

These, are DARK GODS and dark forces that will shred such human fancies in a heartbeat as we have seen first-hand with the loss of 3 maybe 4 members due to trying to impose certain rules and restrictions on the Sinister. There is the world of words and what is said from human understanding and wishful thinking and self-made illusion – then there is the underlying nature of these forces which operate independently of our ability to constrain or channel them neatly or nicely. And THAT is the true Temple of THEM – not people joined in human ideals of proximity and brotherhood – but fiercely independent knights of the Sinister who enter the Temple, unlock their Wyrds, and fuck off back out into the world as a force to be reckoned with. No form should or could ever hold the Sinister – and that is why I have set up and maintained the Temple as it has always been – amorphous, largely unstructured, and nothing like a Church. +O+

+O+ Project-wise the Tarot is a multi-tool for teaching, sending a message, fighting the Kabbalah, enhancing reputation and power, hypnotising, financing and other such things by its creation. Project-wise Mvimaedivm Black must again be taken up and our studies continued to find the source of Seven, of THEM, of the Magi, of Mans conceptual beginnings and so on. Project-wise we must continue to speak and teach others how to break forms – but once they do – we must be prepared to let them go.

We cannot hold the Sinister and woe betide anyone who dreams they can. We can only enhance it, unlock potential, smash forms and free people from chains – but once unchained – there is nothing more for us to do – and that is where most go wrong – in trying to teach and then control their students, or should that be, Own their students. We are conduits that change a specific matrix, we smash forms, belief in forms, and instil an understanding of what they are, how to use them to advantage, how they have been used against us – yet if you see more we can do or should view ourselves as being – by all means I welcome you to share the weight on your mind.

You are a brilliant man and mind and together we can take this Temple far but there are restrictions in dealing with Sinister forces lest we become what we hate. I hope to have illustrated at least some of them and the reasons why the Temple is the way it is.
+O+

+O+ Growth-wise we cannot expect to attain huge numbers under a roof – because being one of THEM is antithetical to being controlled or governed by forms... we would be a paradox if not for the understanding I have of our limited role in the alchemical change we attempt to induce and the cut-off point where it is no longer our jurisdiction. What must also be understood is that this Temple, unlike almost any other, directly confronts the ego by using methods the ego does not understand or appreciate. We cannot expect our Work to make people happy or for them to thank us for what we do – it is a necessary evil that our alchemical transformations operate on many levels which benefits may never be realised or noticed by those who come to us.

Breaking the ego, speaking directly or without sugar-coating, these make enemies – but they may Also make people think if the spear is sharp and accurate. ONA did NOT appreciate me showing them the error of promoting Chaos and Anarchy by being Chaotic and Anarchic with their own current and against them – thus in my eyes, they do not understand these forces they preach – and that is a most disappointing, highly arrogant insight, but anyone that searches their feelings knows it to be true. The ONA preached destruction of this and that, but woe betide you try and destroy them – and when I did try this and ONA reacted the way it did, this showed to me the innate fragility of form at its essential core and the hypocrisy innate to all such Mythos preached by LHP, anti-cosmic and blah blah blah groups...

The FORCE they spoke about would happily devour the carrier, the messenger, and they feared it – they tried to show they didn't – but they did – and eventually their actions came to speak volumes about precisely that. People all too often never think about what they are saying or writing. In five years, I see the Temple as a household legend with many people holding our books, reading what we have to say, using our tarot, our ideas, breaking forms, and asking NEW questions that make the Magi and its system really uncomfortable. I may not be able to see those questions because of the Time I am in and my mindset squarely poised and frozen in this time to do what I do, think what I think and let what is in my head unravel as it will – but others can and may springboard from THEM some day in the future, take our writings further, expand and rework, rephrase, restore and remember things We forgot...

When that happens, we will the satisfaction of knowing we have put in place the foundation for that new form to arise, the next stage, the next generation, just as THEM partly arose from the ONA and all powered by what we said but inspired to take it so much further – further than we could – just as THEM have taken a lot of what ONA said, further, in fact so far it became destructive and disturbing to the ONA. That is genuine growth – the Temple will close in 24 years and I will cease to add my energies to it. If others have built their own forms, temples, shrines, ideas to manifest it – so be it – but my role will be done and I will leave and leave it to others, it is my job merely to germinate some powerful seeds that will grow into plants that choke the life out of the Magi. I hope to see the Harvest but it is unlikely – Aeonian magic takes a long time to take place and I am only 33, what do I know of long amounts of time? Lol. +O+

+O+ Presence-wise I don't ever see myself as revealing who is behind my phantom Ryan – there is no need. I don't desire fame; I don't desire recognition. Or rather that should be, my ego desires fame, my ego desires recognition – but my Self and my magical egregore understands that this Work, this Great Work, is not about me – it is about using Ryan as an anchor, a gravitational pull, to cause the form to germinate – and that is all. Presence-wise for the Temple – I see us as being more influential than the ONA in ten years' time with thousands of people or more quoting us or referring to our work. Even if in criticism – for that is how some people strive to do better.

I see us as sitting on the shelves of thousands of bookshelves being read by children and their children's children and a sudden tear in the illusion tearing its way across their mind as they read and question and Question the Question... Whether in company or alone, the Temple will continue until it has reached its 30-year duration – it is my Wyrd to ensure its survival. What happens after that point – who knows – who can dream – who can predict. But I vowed to make my mark on this earth and on the Magi's control – and I will – and it need never be known who was behind it all – it matters only that it happens and unfolds, spilling the Dark Ones into the world in shapes and ferocity the Magi never dreamed... to make Everyone Remember. +O+

DIRECTIVES OF THE TEMPLE OF THEM

Directive A-66

Why don't we Kill?

Directive A-65

Incidentalism [Redacted].

Directive A-53

Crush the enemies of THEM underfoot using every power at your disposal.

Directive A-52

Remember and Embrace the Force of Anonymity. In the shadows you are without form – to reveal it is as to reveal your true name and give others power over you, to limit your shapelessness. Our work does not require a human face.

Directive A-51

Carefully choose your allies and your enemies in life. Life is long enough for enemies and friends to change places repeatedly.

Directive A-50

The Undividual is Sovereign above and beyond all Forms.

Directive A-49

Stoke a fire with enough fuel and it will burn indefinitely. Even, out of control.

Directive A-48

Remember the force of Ethos. Learn your countries ancient folktales, myths, legends, gods.

Directive A-47

Remember the force of Obscurity. It does not matter who speaks the sinister voice, only that it is spoken.

Directive A-46

Remember the force of Chronobet. Words, numbers, communications are laden with designs to enshrine a very specific spatial-temporality or time-space perception. Change clocks, remove batteries, sabotage computer dates, fudge figures, delay others, study the history and changing principles of Time by humanity and seek to disrupt it however you can.

Directive A-45

Remember the force of Progress. Every smooth transition from one social event to the next, every flawless transaction of industry and economics, every unfailing schedule on time, every box ticked, 'i' dotted, is oiling the Machine. Kill the Machine.

Directive A-44

Remember the force of Aeonics. Simple things line the paths of Kings. Every generation is forced to endure its own inexorable steps toward the Closing of the Gates with tiny outrages forcing Us [Those who hear the voice of THEM] closer to the edge of oblivion. The generation after you will treat those steps as the normal way of things, they will forget the cruel longevity and patience of the enemy who can plan in detail generations in advance. Learn to do the same.

Directive A-43

Remember the force of the Mind and who owns yours. There was a war in past aeons. We lost it. We are fighting a new war. We must remember what we lost in the last one – if we are to survive this one.

Directive A-42

Remember the force of Sorcery. Magic is not dead, merely wounded. The world around us is a neutrality splitting at the seams with weapons that pulse with violent rage, to be used either by or against whoever is first and last to use them. Identify and draw from those violent pulsing places and spaces that emanate with it.

Directive A-41

Memory. Remember, all that our enemies have done and remind them, remind others. Never let it be forgotten. Remember our power, what we can do, what we have lost. Remember it all.

Directive A-40

Remember the force of Absurdity. It is the true face of things when the skin is ripped off. Life can be long enough for friends and enemies to trade places repeatedly. Do not take anything too seriously. When the Wheel spins fast enough and the fragile sticks propping up forms collapse: It is all revealed as Madness.

Directive A-39

Remember the force of Mortality. Do not take life for granted. Move swiftly and with determination toward your goals. Stalk Death and watch for it wherever you go. It will be stalking you too.

Directive A-38

Remember the pivotal importance of the Human Brain. Keep informed of findings, discoveries, neuroscience, correlations and experiments, cybernetics, bio-feedback and changes in collective knowledge and advancements.

Directive A-37

The Machine is not the System. The Machine is the vast inequality between what THEM know about Form and They know about Form.

Directive A-36

Remember and embrace the force of Evolution and the notion that we can evolve beyond what we are by seeding Change in what we are. It is a matter of available choices.

Directive A-35

Remember and disrupt the notions of Time and Space, wherever you can. At present it is under the Magi's command.

Directive A-34

Remember and embrace the omnipotence of Natural Forces for they are THEM. Learn all you can about Fire, Earth, Wind and Water from the Ancients to the Moderns: From Alchemy to edge-tech Meteorology: From scientific principles and dynamics to Engineering and State infrastructural procedures for dealing with disaster.

Directive A-33

Remember and embrace the force of Satan as One of THEM. And a fragment of forces much larger.

Directive A-32

Remember and embrace the force of Chaos. Very little is required to cause it. Be creative.

Directive A-31

Remember and resist the force of Insynsian: the feigned death of God and his transference into newer apexes no less zealous and monotheistic. Resist Singularity.

Directive A-30

Remember and embrace THEM: in all their guises and masks. All Gods are better than One God.

Directive A-29

Remember and embrace the Being of More Than You Appear. MEHR SEIN ALS SCHEIN. One of THEM should be able to sidle up to its prey without the prey any the wiser. Learn ALL shapes that you may use them to achieve anything.

Directive A-28

Remember and embrace the force of Form. Those wicked shapes that seize us and allow us to seize others. Study them and develop your ability with them. All forms have both obvious and ingenious uses. Forms are the key to shaping the coming Aeon.

Directive A-27

Remember and embrace the force of the Undividual. It is not enough to individuate, entire tracts of traditional inheritance from the Magi must be identified, confronted and erased. Set a new example of what a human can do and be for others to follow.

Directive A-26

Never let anyone see the true face of the monster inside you.

Directive A-25

Remember and embrace the force of Solidarity. The Sinisterion are the emergent voices of a new design, scattered through time and space. Our Vyrds may cross when the stars are right and the voice of THEM speaks. We can stand alone, but we can also stand alone together: In Supra Solidarity.

Directive A-24

Remember and embrace the force of Synchronicity. When you are on the right Vyrd you will see signs and connections. Bridges will present themselves and spaces split to allow doorways to open. When you are crossing your Vyrd you will be thwarted by chance. Misfortune will trail you like a savage dog. Opportunities will become mirages. You can only be who you are. Don't fight it.

Directive A-23

THERE WAS A WAR: A WAR WE LOST IF WE ARE TO SURVIVE: WE MUST REMEMBER.

Directive A-22

Remember and embrace the force of Entropy. All Things have their own life cycles and destinies. Including you. Expect nothing to last and everything to eventually leave you.

Directive A-21

Remember and embrace the force of Self-Honesty. There can be no ultimate loyalty to any form. Only temporary tolerance and alliance. All things pass.

Directive A-20

Human's have a thousand masks. Learn to imitate as many as you can.

Directive A-19

Do not judge by appearance. Nothing is known by appearance except appearance.

Directive A-18

If you have morals, keep them to yourself.

Directive A-17

THEM is a No Hand Path. Believe, in whatever suits, when it suits.

Directive A-16

Insert Corporate Icons & Spread them.

Directive A-15

A Triangle Squared. A Triplicate Process. Of Thesis, Antithesis, and Finally, Synthesis. Combining the Division of Two Forms Into a New Understanding Complimented By Another. The cycles of growth are not always pleasant and involve caustic, toxic and deathly shades of ingredient. These elements, pungent to order, form, and the human sphere must be considered as integral in the formation of specific archetypal recipes. Some forms must be allowed to gestate in order to cause a future reaction.

Directive A-14

No Human Being Knows the Way to the Silent Desert Better Than You. Accept Guidance But Question the Guidance. Be Strong and Make Your Own Way Forward With The Patience of an Aeon.

Directive A-13

Absolutes are Egoistic. All is Temporary. All Shapes Shift. Use Them While They Exist but Do Not Rely on Permanence. All Life Moves On So Flow With Its Current.

Directive A-10

Stalk Death by Day. All Things Die. Be Aware of Its Hand. Learn Its Face. Carpe Diem. Tempus Fugit. Understand Your Time on Earth is Limited.

Directive A-3

TERATO – HARUSPEX – ENGRAM – MALEFICIA Look deep inside the entrails of the Monster – Remember – and Become One of THEM.

Directive A-2

Australia, does not have a significant sinister history. Being little more than 200 years old it has yet to bring forth a significant Satanic contribution to the world. THEM aim to change that.

Directive A-1

Unfortunately, or rather as a result of, diffused consciousness that interferes with one's causal ability to maintain a solid form to others; being known as a shape-shifter of some skill and of course, revealing the disarming secrets of one's trade, carries with it the burden of implicit suspicious mistrust. Members have reported side-effects of our 'Grand Science' with members of their inner Sinisterion due to able demonstrations of chameleonization openly – thus revealing how adept they are at controlling what people see and witness of them. This has lead to issues of instability, esp in magical relationships, where one may say the illusions of the causal are experienced withdrawn and the frightening (from their point of view) essence beyond projection revealed. Thus, in Hel "Michelle" no longer sees "Evan", but a sinister grinning trickster, a dark, mysterious and cunning master of illusion who sends her projections back to her. This has the effect of causing people to be perpetually unsure whether a shifter is sincere or merely playing another role: An unavoidable Sinister Aspect of THEM's Work.

GRAND BLACK MAGICK AND AN INTERNATIONAL SATANIC ARMY

"THEM and in particular my own bearing takes from classical Satan(-ism) the traits of Ruthlessness, Vision and Dissent."

The Temple of THEM arose from a natural cataclysm of forces as a conduit to enable some forms to arise and prevent others from arising. THEM's current acts to prevent the proliferation of a multitude of forms including:

- The sexist divide between men and women enshrined into our societal framework.
- The fervent belief in monotheism or one god (Insynsian) in any way shape or form to the exclusion of other forms.

- The habit of apexing a form and making of it a god without pluralistic balance.
- The culture of ego-worship and/or belief in/slavish adherence to a guru or any one system to provide all ones needs.
- The continuation of certain inherited traits society rewards, to our detriment as autonomous beings.
- The compression of complex data into over-simplistic but easily manageable systems for convenience not authentic insight.
- The ignorance or discrepancy of forms and forces and the over-arching advantage of those who use forms to enslave or otherwise control human beings.
- The belief that the Ego can or must be destroyed.
- The belief that destroying the Ego results in the Self or some other esoteric/spiritual advancement.
- The rise of future groups that claim sovereignty over any form whatsoever (Insynsia).
- The archetype of the Alpha-male.
- The belief that for something to be right, its opposite has to be wrong. The Temple of THEM was founded in 2006 and describes itself as Relativist, Magical Socialist or Quantum Philosophic. It is an experimental project of invisible currents made visible via a selection and exhibition of certain forms and has a set life-cycle of 30 years (2006-2036).

This 30-year phase is broken into 3 distinct phases of approximately ten years duration each.

- (1) Crystallisation: The first phase has been met earlier than anticipated and that was to build a platform to overcome the growing monotheism of the Sinister. With reputation and power, we can and have allowed others to speak through us. Our legacy must be set before moving onward from this phase (that is, passing on our techniques and methods in formats such as a Manifesto, enduring Imagery and Icons, and a current with its own tendrils irrespective of the original sowers, that will outlive the present members causal lives) - for (2) and (3) can happen without a helmsmen but (1) Crystallisation requires the unique vision and guidance of its founders.
- (2) Harbinger: The second phase of the Temple is to give Australia a sinister history and foster across it a new National Satanic identity. This aim is being achieved through present tendrils and inert stations online spreading the influence of THEM and off-line via the A.S.O.V and other groups working with or alongside us by training people to run specific types of organisation and earth their own - imparting the techniques and Individualosophy and code of In Supra Solidarity unique to THEM.
- (3) Invitrofertiliation: The third phase, is a combination of the first two, plus awaiting/encouraging the rise of the synthesis (A co-joinment of reigning opposing forms that bypasses their inherent contradiction*) and Synthesizers who will combine the Thesis and Antithesis in a new way, continuing our work. When this stage begins to presence itself we will prepare the final step away with grace from what will likely bear no resemblance to our original Temple but an evolution. For we believe the success of any Esoteric School or Current is to teach others how to surpass the Teacher/Master - AND for the Teacher/Master to understand this surpassing as part of the life of form. Thus does the Ego understand its temporal role in the Great Life of the Temple of THEM. * The Mastery of Paradox.

On Jan 1st 2036, the founders of THEM will withdraw their energy and efforts to shape, direct or otherwise control the Temple - irrespective of what form it has taken or what precipice/potential it occupies - and step away to let be what will be. This will not dismantle nor destroy the Temple of THEM which will have its own life (if it survives) in the forms of new tendrils and shapes with their own goals and aims. Nor will it signify a severance of the Temple's legacy which goes far beyond our brief presence however intense in its temporal time. It simply means, anticipating the necessary amount of time and energy to reasonably achieve certain aims a sustained presence is required to watch over, mould and direct the Temple from its founder's personage.

Like a wild animal tended to health and released into the wild to fend for itself. We are but one of Nature's expressions toward evolution and therefore will be swept away should we fail to successfully express Nature's desire, and also too, if we succeed and Nature requires an evolution of our obsolete variant. This built-in resignation of the founders derives from our understanding of Forms, Aeonics and what is required to successfully achieve our aims, given the forces we can expect to encounter.

WITHIN THE TEMPLE: GETTING STARTED

WITHIN THE TEMPLE: GETTING STARTED An Esoteric Riddle & Hypothesis for anyone interested in the Temple of THEM. THE JUNGLE BOX Imagine the following scenario: You are an explorer. You are wading through a thick jungle and happen upon a stone dwelling built by some unknown culture. The stone dwelling is square, approx 18ft high and wide but has no accessible windows, no discernible doors or entry points. How do you get in? When this riddle was posed in one of our forums dozens of people offered suggestions. They came across a structure built by an unknown culture that was difficult to gain access to, but did they stand there and do nothing? No, their natural inclination was to do SOMETHING.

Variously they dug a hole, broke a window, climbed it with gear, made a hole in the roof and tried to access the dwelling. Let me rephrase the Riddle so the analogy reflects what each element represents. You are an explorer. You are wading through a sea of ideas as you go through this life and come across one that is difficult to penetrate. It is comprised of the weird and Wyrld ideas and insights of the Temple of THEM. You can't see a door. Or a window. Or just don't recognise the doors and windows for what they are. You have no map. But the same attitude in trying to enter the stone dwelling is the same approach that should be employed with the Temple of THEM.

So, what tools do you have at your disposal? Look for our name on a search engine. When it comes up, click on a link and read. Take note of unusually spelled words or phrases such as Mvimaedivm, Undividual, Insynsian, Radia Sol, Oto Anorha, "Terato Haruspex Engram Maleficia" or 'Australian Satanism' and enter these into a search engine too. Our words have unusual spellings for two reasons: (1) They describe certain concepts in terminology specific to THEM that attempt to not have unwanted existing associations attached to alternate existing phrases / concepts that might be used and (2) They make finding our work among the millions of possible Satanic/Sinister/Alchemical/Metaphysical currents of the Occult, easy. Now you should have a reasonably large list of forums we have frequented and engaged in discussion in at considerable length, posting various articles and essays as we go, or answering questions by others about our current and its various aspects. It is easy to spot a THEM thread because it often dwarfs the visitation ratio of surrounding threads by thousands of views. In part perhaps due to the ongoing friction between the Temple and the O9A, in part perhaps because of our novel approach and innovative expansions within a large variety of fields, and perhaps in part because we represent an expression of nature's desire for evolution and our work flows with and sometimes ahead of the changing occult milieu. Like everything else that is up to you to decide.

The next step is acquisition of what THEM write. The key books to locate are: CRUX (An Australian Themed and Modified version of Naos), Threshold (An anthology of 200 pages spanning many of our key texts and concepts), Oto Anorha (Our strategic magazine/e-zine which has charted our progress the last nine years and includes many relevant time-stamps and expansive articles on our current.) Abyssal (A hefty collection of anonymized correspondence between members of THEM and hundreds of other individuals and/or groups regarding the Sinister, Satanism, the History of THEM etc.) The Diaries of a Devil-worshipper (The personal journey of one of the Temple's founders in a raw and honest explanation told over the course of three books, each one dedicated to a specific archetype embodied roughly every seven years.) . 'Sinister Dialogues - An Archaeology of the Sinister' in which seven of them and two members of the satanic underground responded to a questionnaire designed to probe the apprehensions of THEM toward certain topics. 'Form 101' a short movie that details a basic introduction to several key aspects THEM hold of the concept of Form and its relationship with the Ego. Liber 13/13 A Liber dedicated to broaching key issues that concern the Temple's studies. 'The Sorcery of THEM'. A comprehensive treatise of the Sorcery of THEM by the other co-founder detailing the magical socialism of the Sorcerer, Warrior, Farmer and how this Triad relates to overthrowing Abrahamism. And last but not least, Liber Tentaculum, LT in particular is a handbook dedicated toward the practical methodology of the social dissenter or activist.

Following this: locate and read any of our other Libers which contain dozens and dozens of essays, rites and philosophic stances. (Consult Bathysphere for a comprehensive listing). Therein our other works over thousands of pages we have detailed at length practical ways to achieve various solutions and work within our current. We have created lists of activities you can undertake to spread the Wyrd of THEM, or magical rites you can employ to confront and integrate certain aspects of yourself. In addition our thousands of pages of texts cover virtually hundreds of topics, from Conspiracy to Genetically Modified Food, to the Sex Industry and Prostitution, to Nietzsche's erroneous claim that God is Dead, to Myth, Magic, Quantum Physics, Relativity, Gnosticism, the power of Language, Symbolism, our personal experiences with the Dark Gods of THEM and much much more through Fiction, Non-Fiction, Poetry, Plays, Translations, Novels, Media Presentations, Correspondence, Interviews, Forums, Images and Music.

We have explained what our magic is across a broad range of disciplines, and different members of THEM have shared their own manifestos of what our current means. We have offered examples of it for you to use, we have shared our aims and hundreds of ways for you to aid us in our work through activism, support, donation - in short there has been a deluge of content by which an understanding and personal affinity working with the Temple of THEM can be approached. But the Temple of THEM is not the kind of organisation that many will find easy. We expect a certain level of pro-active self-initiative from an individual to explore what we have shared on one's own and to solve the majority of questions that arise by one's own sustained effort.

In all honesty, we do not take kindly to questions like 'where can I find CRUX' or 'How do I use this forum' or 'Where should I start' not because we scorn curiosity but because to answer such questions for people over and over is antithetical to the type of sorcerer THEM has set out to encourage. If you envy our understanding and insight, it is because we fought very hard for it. It would be easy to tell someone where to find X, or patiently explain how to use a forum that differs from no other forum in any fundamental way but to their and our detriment. Tempus Fugit: 'Time is Fleeting' for all persons but especially the Sorcerer and it must be very carefully managed lest one be drowned amid the cries for help.

I cite here The Universal Formula (TUF) to knowledge: 1. Enter a forum/open a book 2. Read everything 3. Take time to digest 4. Combine practical experience with theory 5. Creatively synthesise the information into a practical methodology. As for 'where should I start' - we refer to the jungle box - if you do not know where to start, then you need to overcome your inability to make use of the nearest branch of any given tree. It is not with hostility that we discourage such questions - though in some cases, when an answer is just literal centimetres, a button click or an internet search away from being answered such ineptness is seen as lazy and it can be enervating to answer such questions over and over on a regular basis for more than a decade - yet it is with Love that you will sometimes be met with silence.

Asking these questions of another instead of working out how to answer them oneself and especially before taking any considerable time to do so is draining to answer nor does it allow for the self-resourcefulness of the individual to emerge as expected. Some individuals simply do not have such resourcefulness and we do not see it as our duty to instil it. We encourage potential and reward hard work. Because those who are of THEM, who become One of THEM do not let such obstacles slow them down, learn from their mistakes and devise clever ways to get around anything in their way - it is this essential, innate and perhaps unteachable attitude and will to power that paradoxically means the majority of those we would term One of THEM, do not need our Temple at all.

By being a visible force, we more or less are offering a hand out of what we have described in Crux as a Labyrinth, and act as a beacon for those with the potential to be more than they are: an approach enshrined in one of the Temple's German mottoes: Mehr Sein Als Schein. (Google among other sites offer excellent translations.) The heart of our approach is Tough-love. If we tell you everything, teach you how to do everything, we teach you to rely on the ideas of another, to become dependant on external authorities - not your own ingenuity and development of nous to solve problems and devise creative solutions, including creating entirely innovative approaches or forms to do your bidding.

We have spent a great deal of our time and lives discerning this for ourselves but it holds true. Part of the Temple of THEM's self-description as Australian Satanism is embodied in its ruthlessness - we are not here to help nor save everyone. Satanism is also embodied in our Vision and Dissent. Some of our books can be found online as free PDF, or bought from outlets. However, the best way to obtain them is to get the attention of THEM (who are always watchful) by contributing to our current. It might just be spreading our manuscripts to others or other locations, translating our work into another language, sending us images/variations of your personal experience with the Thrasz, sharing our work from your website, mentioning us in passing in your music, art or written work, but helping us is a valid way to encourage us to help you and a good way to get noticed. I've lost track of how many stunned enthusiasts over the years have thanked me for dropping a hard to get set of manuscripts into their lap without asking for payment or any obligation merely because I felt they deserved it.

Our work requires that we fund ourselves through some sales, but for the most part THEM and its related Tendrils are an Esoteric School that teach others to surpass us by passing on relevant material freely and liberally to those seen working hard and sincerely. The Temple has a unique Solidarity - and an attitude that extends its power and reputation to all its members. What we have we share, and where we can, if we have the opportunity, we look after our members in any way that becomes available to us. The members of THEM all rise together. But being a member of THEM is not a necessary requisite for us to offer assistance; THEM often assist individuals who are not members of the Temple too. The reasons for why and the instances when are numerous, simply put we think some people deserve a hand and exist to offer it. So much then for accessing our Temple's knowledge.

The second step in getting involved is to undertake some practical tests of your own, try our rituals for yourself, wait until the skies darken with the portent of a downpour and attempt our Rain magick. Get yourself a notepad and some strong liquor or enrage yourself with symbols of things you hate or read material that makes your blood boil, isolate yourself for the evening and perform the Rite of Regurgitating Choronzon. Get hold of Threshold and see what we have to say about the power of the Chronobet, or 23 Syndrome, and research it for yourself. Host a Meet and try to get some individuals out into the real world together to perform a group ritual. What do you learn from it? Did what we say help or hinder? Could we have been more specific, were we too comprehensive? Did we miss things?

Answering such questions, and knowing which questions to address, comes from direct experience and the only way to get it - is to have it. So, spend some time researching and testing our material, opinions and insights THEN compare what we say with your experience and THEN make a judgement. So, you have a group of friends who cynically say they could do better, could easily organise a group and a complex ritual, could implement long-lasting changes to the psyche or even history of their country - well, call them on it. And if they won't then you know what their opinions are worth. Don't tolerate grand-standing, value achievement. We have done and are doing what we have set out to do. We have developed our system from experience at our rate on our terms. We have taken actual steps to get something going rather than just talk about it. We have an understanding of things borne from practical action and experiment - ask yourself, have you, have they?

Many people offer their opinion, for example, on drug use or smoking without any personal experience of either. This will not stand - test our opinions if you want to know what they are worth. If you can get something from them, great! If you find them lacking, then use them as examples of what not to do, build or develop your own system or methods - but standing by and telling others what they Should do and what You'd do are not the same as action. Such is the meaning of a Tradition: things change, including methods and people - and Forms must adapt or be adapted accordingly.

If after taking these two steps seriously - you then find that our current(s) are resonant with you then consider Self-Initiation and enter into a sympathy with THEM to honour the greater forces of this world that dwarf us: from the unwanted impulses of the subconscious to the uncontrollable juggernaut of events beyond our control, to the inevitable decline of the human body and any edifices it built in its lifetime, to the monstrous power of the tsunami or storm, gravity or time.

ON WHAT MAKES AN AMATEUR SORCERER

– Temple of THEM 2015 – WR

What makes a would-be Sorcerer, or Beginner, an amateur Sorcerer?

With 20 years + of occult and work experience it my opinion that it can be reduced to three things: (i) Lack of Confidence, (ii) Lack of Knowledge, (iii) Lack of Intent.

(i) A robust ego will aid in weathering the storms that erupt when creating something new but bring perils of its own. Lack of Confidence comes from fear of doing things wrong, from doing things badly, from doing things that are new, novel or with which there is a learning curve. Lack of confidence is anathema to a Sorcerer. It stops them in their tracks waiting for someone to come along and tell them how to move, what to do, when to do it and requires an external force to continually motivate that person. This is exhausting to perform for one person let alone hundreds or even thousands over the decades. Not everyone can, or should, be a Sorcerer. It is not an elite art, but it does require a certain attitude and bravery to plunge into the unknown without anyone holding your hand to achieve results. If your hand is held too long, there is no confidence developed, just the appearance of it. The very next thing out of someone's mouth who has been lead for too long – is invariably, “OK, what do I do next?” To be a Sorcerer, or even a successful organiser of an occult group, movement, either large or small requires you to take the reins, however scary, and learn, learn, learn. Don't fear your mistakes but endeavour not to repeat them and learn learn learn from them. An amateur lacks Confidence because they believe too much in authorities' power to tell them the right way to go about starting, beginning, doing basic steps instead of taking those steps for themselves. The fear of failure, of others' opinions, of pressure to get it right – if listened to, will amount the Sorcerer to nothing. If confidence is a problem, then so too will any sort of result in the occult be. Remember that all forms especially successful ones will receive torrents of scathing criticism as change is forced by the Sorcerers Will. You will require this confidence to face dragons within and without.

(ii) Trying something even if it's wrong is always better than showing up with nothing. Lack of Knowledge is often not from having insurmountable obstacles placed in one's way but (a) laziness and the inability to perform basic functions such as searching for documents or persons, and (b) a lack of ingenuity and inability to devise solutions to problems. There is little difference between being a Sorcerer and being employed or running a business. You get out what you put in. A lazy Sorcerer achieves minor goals. A hard-working Sorcerer can achieve much larger goals. But just because you do not have information on how to do something – doesn't mean you can't try it anyway. If the information is there, maybe not obvious, or maybe requiring you to do a little digging, and you come to an organisation and ask questions like where is this file – and the file is right in front of you – what impression does that send? It shows you (a) did not bother to search (b) were unable to perform an appropriate diligent search (c) that you have little perseverance and give up easily (This is a dead-end trait for a Sorcerer) (d) that even basic functions and requirements are beyond your ability (e) that your problem solving skills are minimal (f) that any organisation taking you on as a member would have to spend a lot of time trying to drag you to a standard you are simply not able to attain and thus waste a lot of time, resources trying.

(iii) Don't Suffer Fools. Lack of Intent. What does it indicate if a person is not confident enough to make mistakes or risk making mistakes in trying to figure things out for themselves, or improvise where they cannot? What does it indicate if a person cannot locate a file clearly marked in an easily accessible location? What does it indicate if an organisation is filled with such individuals because they prefer numbers over quality, self-assured, competent individuals with their own fire and who deserve the time and attention of an organisation over someone who wishes to be spoon-fed, have ultimate basics explained to them within minutes of making contact, or turns up to the interview with no understanding of the organisation, has done no research, cares only for incentives, and yet wishes to become a member of that organisation? The FIRE, the Burning Intent, the Power to smash through obstacles and equip oneself with the SWORDS one needs to wrought change comes from

-Confidence: Or Fearlessness of 'Failing'.

-Knowledge: Wherein mastering the BASICS is infinitely more important than and a prelude to mastering Special Effects.

-Intent: Whereby Synchronicity chooses who is and is not and never will be a member of the Temple of THEM.

The Vital Mistakes that Indicate an Amateur are:

- Spouting advanced knowledge but fumbling the very basics.
- Not doing enough of their own research on a topic or person before asking questions of them.
- Asking questions that are very easily answered through a proper application of time and observation of available material.
- Aggravating those they wish to impress by running forward with claimed intent but indicating a clear lack of knowledge about the organisation or its operations.
- Not thinking harder, longer, deeper about the matters they wish to be involved in.
- Giving up when the going gets tough.
- Wasting their Energy unwisely by engaging in pointless exercises or discussions instead of focusing on the goal.

INSYNSIAN – THE SUBJECTIVITY OF OBJECTIVITY

November 27, 2013 by Krist Hollow

A Scientific or “Factual Basis” is ideal for the foundation of a Form. Such a foundation is a conventionally reliable measure by which others can solidify and share their understanding and relatedness to the world around them in an ‘objective’ and systematic fashion of certainty which is secured by an extant authority such as the scientific community. However, there are a number of reasons for not backing down, retracting a statement or changing a Form that has been put forth by the Temple either to suit or meet the criticism levelled at it by any particular individual who cares to attack the Form for its suppositions: The most obvious being that the Temple of THEM is an Occult Establishment and not a Scientific one.

The essays that are written are written by magicians with a high level of self-reliance, self-honesty and self-discovery. Such magicians are Sinister and more often than not alone in their journey; separated from the current or temporal manifestations occurring in the relative Time and Space of the Matrix by which others judge their efforts or compare the validity of their journey against. For example when it was accepted by Science that atoms were no longer the cornerstone of existence many attempted to place their theories related to existence inside the prevailing trends of quantum physics or theory of relativity in order that their theories were more readily accepted, that credibility be attained and so that the new idea didn’t undermine previous facts stated by highly esteemed colleagues. This may be fine for Theoretical Science – But not for the Occult.

The Occult is not, and never will be, an acceptable, provable, fact-based system of analysis and practice. It is a private madness grounded in the rational, the irrational and the Abyss and is experienced in a unique manner by each magician.

No Originality ever came from following the expected protocols and trends of the masses or from taking the established 'facts' of science so seriously that they were held to be impregnable and remain unchallenged. Science may be a better way of researching the world by breaking it into manageable constituent chunks using mathematical/symbolic abstracts than the earlier practice of communing with God through a Church to understand the Mysteries – but it is no less immune to corruption, bureaucracy and the painful crawl of Time that it takes for an idea to be accepted [usually long after the “Idealer” has been ridiculed, disbarred, humiliated and/or sent to the stake] than the Church was.

If I may borrow some classic Scientific Terminology, the “fact” is, that owing to the complexity of life, Science and Religion deal with facets of it in a way no different to that of the isolated Sorcerer, i.e. by sorting out for oneself which aspects of life are important and thus apprehending the world in a specific manner that idolises some parts of it by building a world-view based upon those shining principles and shunning or ignoring the rest. What is written by our members illustrates part of a private path and personal breaking through. It is not expected to mean anything to an outsider. Indeed, many outsiders are so entrenched in the Matrix they're unable to be interesting enough to have their own path. They attach themselves to others' paths as sycophants or vampires to fawn over them, ridicule them, tear them down or to criticise and make fetid pronouncements and denouncements as a vulgar occult parasite or parrot with no understanding of their own and no originality: characterised by a lack of magical maturity and the need to destroy.

No Scientific or Religious or Psychological edict held to be true is necessarily true to Us. Perhaps in the Matrix it is true and evident but outside of that temporal box the only truth is our own sense of Validity as magicians moving through the world encountering obstacles, decisions, beliefs, tests, “truths” for ourselves, often without recourse to the convenient labels of the Matrix. Although sometimes we resort to meeting the Magian halfway by attempting to ride the waves of logic or reason in a manner that suits our critics or speak the language that is expected by our critics, it is only a temporary alight on their own terms. The subsequent mindset we arrive at based on our self-discovery is more highly esteemed as proof/fact/or truth than any of the writings, opinions [and even experiences] of others – for the wanderings of a magician cannot help but ‘prove’ that there is no objectivity, that there are no facts, that the written word differs greatly from esoteric experience, and that while many are crucified by their own Forms, there exists an ever-present quality of Chaos that supersedes what is known and practiced in magic by those still trapped in the Matrix of Form: which is generally only the noisy exhalations of the ego.

It has been said before that there is communication below the Abyss and communication above the Abyss and never the twain shall meet. We have spoken of the Black Clay [Qv. In Sinister Solidarity] and the art of stripping away the fixation on names, labels and ideas that are mere projections upon the texture of the world around us to reveal the essence – but we have not yet spoken of the mass Ethos of humanity's failure to deal with the Death of God.

The actions of many exhibit the meme/ethos of failure to deal with the Death of the monotheistic Arch-Emperor whose Priests interpreted the world for the masses and provided a kit-set belief system that made it easy for humanity to be lazy in their decision making and lax in their own independent magical journey. The power of Christianity consisted of a fervent Faith in a singular, all-powerful Entity: A One. One: meant that there was an unmistakable difference in following the One Way of God and in straying from it. Either you did it 100% right or 100% wrong. It was a way that had no loopholes, no deviations from the established route, no alternate route or short-cuts and no thinking for oneself lest one think oneself higher than the Will of the Almighty Creator.

Moreover, one began with the disadvantage of Original Sin. In short, the way of God meant Humility. Humility before the gold-gilded altars laden with ecclesiastical paraphernalia heavily encrusted with gems and precious metals, held by Priests dressed in the finest silk vestments, housed in mighty ornate edifices of mahogany, teak, marble and stone [incensed with the finest imported spices] that modern architecture stands irrevocably in the shadow of. These tremendous idols to the Glory of God are a testament to the power of a Form that is Singular in nature.

To strive toward One Point, One Goal, One God: is to lay all efforts and aspirations, all riches bodily and monetary, all prayers, all hopes and fears, all questions and answers, in a perfectly straight road toward one immutable Apex. When this Apex began to crumble when Science began to erode the Perfect Word with its heresies and discoveries: God did not die as Nietzsche believed. God and the idea of a single perfect form had been ingrained into a large majority of the world's influential peoples – and remembering that the global population was significantly smaller in Ancient Times – the fanatical trend of the Singular spread far and wide for thousands of years killing and persecuting those who would not accept it. To live: many did.

THEM believe that the belief in a Singular Way survived over pantheistic religions because of: a) the brutality with which the Singular Way was promulgated, b) there was less uncertainty about things with the Alpha to the Omega covered and a far greater concealment of the haunting memory of the Original Chaos with everything from Life to Afterlife taken out of people's hands and conveniently dealt with by external authorities. And c) Pantheistic Religions had no real impetus to attempt to annihilate other Religions in a holocaust of thought, whilst the drive behind a monotheistic deity was to aggressively pursue all who would not see or hear the Singular Truth.

But I digress. God did not die. He was, and still is, simply transferred. He, God, is nothing more than the recent belief by humanity in one perfect way; and the search, the certainty, the arrogance which encompasses the worldview of each and every individual still unconsciously pining for God in his old form continues unabated today with the individual projecting the notion of God onto/into other facets of the Matrix. Individuals put their faith in Science, in the Wisdom of others, in the idea of “Progress”, “Truth“, or “Facts“, “Democracy“, “Peace” or “the Future” and strive to arrange the world just so in a unique and individual schemata that is collectively united by humanities mass desire for a replica of the singular perfection of the God that was.

Because of this reasoning that humanity is unconsciously mourning the loss of the reign of God as a totalitarian dictator that told them exactly what to do, when to do it and why and is trying to replace that Apex by projecting that same singular will [and it is irrelevant whether the new form is so-called “adversarial” or “rebellious” against God / this means nothing.] onto things – the criticisms/‘corrections’ levelled at any Form displayed by THEM are treated in this greater context as the trivial concerns by another human being to arrange the world according to their unconscious ethos of the Singular psychosis.

Even if those concerns are Valid in terms of being Scientifically/Psychologically “correct” – few magicians have the insight and the wisdom to understand that what is being dealt with is not the little details that are entirely dependent on the artificiality of the Matrix but the greater and encompassing currents that drive humanity to do what it does, when it does, and why. It is the Intent behind the ‘Pentagram’ that is of import, not the temporal form of the ‘Pentagram’ itself. It was by no mistake that We chose to take the form of a Satanic Temple and manifest the Form of Satan whose word is CHAOS.

Manipulating these greater currents does not happen overnight with the publication of a few manuscripts. Considering the length of time for previous attempts by the Sinister Tradition to manipulate esoteric currents and our awareness of the excruciating slowness of the growth of genuine black magical insight – it requires at least thirty years and the prime plateau of many powerful combined wills fulfilling their Wyrð to employ significant changes. Hence there is a division between what is important to our esoteric order and what is important to our exoteric order. Our esoteric order cares nothing for approval of our essays by the majority and anticipates with good humour the temporary nature of criticism of the contents to issue forth as some individual seizes upon the Forms and finds ‘fault’ with them.

We naturally expect others to attempt to assert their personal will, their way, their truth, over our exoteric structures. It is not a contest of ego for us: we have no doubt that any quibbles over the location/definition in the Matrix of names, labels and forms singled out by a magician to use as ‘separated’ examples of ‘thing’ from the insoluble Black Clay that are laid down in a formulaic hypothesis with the tools of the Matrix so a few can approach an understanding [if those forms last the distance] would continue to cause bickering long after each of the founding members of this Temple are dead. We don’t care about the opinions of others on our work or rely on praise or acceptance or understanding in our private practices from the majority or even from each other. Understanding Form is the art of understanding layers.

All attempts by us to share our current are minimal efforts made to make our Form intelligible within the Matrix via our “Temple“. We are Arrogant and Self-Possessed. Our essays represent a snapshot of each magician’s wanderings, not from books or hearsay of experience but from harsh and prolonged relatedness to the world. The Temple of THEM have Original Ideas that are founded by combining the ideas of others from working knowledge and practice of these ideas, I.e., Synchronicity, the Acausal Voice, Remote Solidarity, the Mind War, our Ritual Magic etc. Few Magical Systems can claim to be Original with a straight face; even less their followers and it is vastly harder to build something than it is to tear it down. Anyone can tear something down: after all a Form’s greatest weakness is that it is a Form. We smile wryly at the attempts of others to scratch our surface: because those who attempt do it: think it’s their right.

It’s been hinted at by many groups with metaphors and inferences made: let THEM say it clearly without mystification: Our War, Our Form, Our Temple to the Dark Gods is not built with the precious fragile building blocks inspired by the Matrix and the ideas that bind the world to the magic of the Magian: but the Sinister Solidarity of real black magicians tempered in the Abyss and united in a singular supra-personal goal to presence THEM. We are the Opening Night that will set the stage for an Opera of Horror and Madness.

Many get pierced by the tip of THEM: by an initial contact with our grimoires and remain fixated with that layer of surface tension: weighing up our notions and comparing them with the known, the accepted, the acceptable – challenging the words, the ideas, the paperwork; only able to concern themselves with the personal spheres of semantics and righteousness. Few go beyond this level: those that do are the serious and the dangerous: either our Enemies or our Allies.

Once a Form has been arranged in the Matrix it takes on a set of attributes balanced between two extremes and a sliding scale of indefinite degrees. Eroding the foundation on which any Form stands is as simple as recognising the geometry of the Form and analysing the structure it is built upon; viz. identifying the key stones that must first be supposed valid for the Form to be slotted neatly into the Matrix with its brethren. Science depends upon observable repeatable facts, for instance, yet for all the weight behind science it remains theoretical: it cannot be said that Science knows or has proved what existence is, for it too is a search for a Singular Perfection that can't find the kernel at the core of its foundation. Moreover, for me and for many others: particular Scientific assertions remain unconvincing. Science's major downfall, like Religion before it, is in its Singular-orientated drive to be Objective. Philosophy grounds itself in being Subjective, but nevertheless suffers from the same weakness of being a Form: Philosophy is mere speculation that is there to be believed or not believed as one sees fit. If we combine aspects of the two: although it is Scientifically true enough that if one steps out in front of a fast-moving car one will get badly damaged: why: how: and what: are dependent on Philosophical suppositions held self-evident. Self-evidence is a great thing; a Philosophers Stone; right up until one enters the Abyss.

When one cannot even hold oneself evident then all other suppositions lose their grounding and begin to float unsecured and unorganised in chaos that can only be understood if it is organised: but the nature of the chaos before it is organised remains a mystery because so many fear it. We have no doubt that there are holes and problems in our suppositions: that is the nature of Form; and it is the nature of humanity to see those weaknesses and pounce on them.

But what of it? The World and its Matrix will Change, and we will be out of date, of out touch, living in the past as 'dinosaurs' sooner or later. That we are exploring it with the knowledge that it Changes makes a big difference to what is sought after compared with those who explore the world thinking it can be made static. Our essays are not the point: they are 'a' point. They are exoteric scriptures that represent the sum total of a magicians understanding in a particular frame of reference at that particular time, no less and no more absurd than the rambling scriptures of any other human being. The necessity of humans to bicker and tear each other down owes much to the Magian Influence and the level of rudimentary teaching available to school a person on Form and its role in black magic.

What we see as important is the demonstration of many essays with original ideas making the key notions of Magian Magic: I.e., "Form", apparent and transparent and thus Changing the perspective of some by giving an insightful context to the now long stale [and largely mediocre] art of magic whilst sharing the joke of the egos of its practitioners.

Ultimately, THEM will be replaced or crumble as a result of its own [yet unforeseen] particular Form. Nothing is immune to Entropy: and we hope that at the very least we raise the bar exceptionally high for others to follow in the Sinister Tradition when our time is past and our mission fulfilled. But unless there comes an individual with a Creative plan to rival or succeed ours none will stand in our way until our plan is implemented. This is OUR Time, our Current, our Combined Will.

One hundred years from now the Matrix, its inhabitants, its forms and its currents will probably look vastly different than they do now: fashions will change, ideas will change, notions will be proven wrong and amended, space travel may revolutionise transport and trade and our manuscripts will be long, long forgotten. What difference does it make then – if someone disagrees with what we say now, if a minor point of contention from another individual seeking to realise his singular will arises – need we defend it? Need we argue the validity of our Form? We do not because we know we need not. The world is enthralled to its desire to re-sculpt the perfection the hole an all-powerful singular God left behind. This ethos will remain intact for a very long time and Changing it will be an extremely slow task. So, it is not the little things that THEM are concerned with: but with the art of Change itself.

While most spend their time arguing over petty semantics, we the Syndicate THEM see the nature and the vagaries of Form. We saw how Communism rose in Russia, National Socialism in Germany and we will see Mvimaedivm rise in Australia. Over the next twenty-eight years THEM will lay the seeds of a New Aeon within Australia both in our example and our heresies. We may or may not be around for the harvest. In light of this: the few days during which an 'argument' takes place regarding some trivial aspect or another of our manuscripts is a nothing to us: it is dealt with by our dismissive regard for things below the Abyss or things in the Matrix: as a concern only in a personal way where a particular answer or reply to criticism is designed to impede or aid a specific strategy at a particular moment in Time.

A Form may be weakened/altered to appease its critics and silence them to entice their support or favour or the Form may be strengthened to discredit or drop out of the argument altogether; but even if some interest is taken in its survival, only a few people realise how incredibly manipulative Form can be. For example: it is important, even when it is 'wrong', that a Form be made as solid as possible to elicit a dense and strong reaction to give rise to an equally solid counter-form. I.e., ONA gave rise to THEM via a basic Aeonic principle. But, whatever. We don't expect our methods to be understood. We do expect, over time, that Australian Satanists will come to implement a greater maturity in their Satanic Practice, be at the forefront of a Satanic "Renaissance" and cease to indulge in the farce the Magian is attempting to pull.

In Summary: No Form has a perfect validity. All Forms are a species of Temporary Paradigm to be utilised by the Adept. This is one of the fundamental principles of the Temple of THEM and its coven of Shape-Shifters.

INSYNSIAN, MENTAL FALLIBILITY AND AEONICS

+O+ Yes exactly. The rabbit hole is deep. And circular. You can go down down down for eternity, but you'll only come back around on yourself. But way down under the coal of the usual structures, the gems are far more valuable. You may never get beyond the darkness, but you can return to the surface of things with diamonds that cut through anything...

Any view, whatsoever is fallible to discreditation if you use the right weapons to undermine the struts that support its literal suppositions. In other words, you can kick the legs out from the validity of any concept – or you can strengthen them. As has been illustrated elsewhere it is possible for one person to give someone else up to 20 different replies to a question – all equally valid, whether negative, positive or neutral, favouring various aspects and weakening others;- see [Paradox of Opinion]. The individual who resorts to using morality and division in this critical engagement we call a War is calling on the power of Insynsian – of ‘authenticity, purity, authority’ of an apex of power toward one ultimate way, one ultimate view, and a return to the mire of good and evil – same tautology with different terminology.

If the individual views are all valid – they are all equally invalid – Logic no longer dictates what is Right, and dislodging the Ego is the cause of this multiplicity of valid views to occur the epitome of being able to stand in many others shoes all at once – to view an event, person or situation from multiple angles simultaneously. When this happens – the individual view loses its grip, the rose-tinted glasses shatter – there can no longer be a driving will of the ego to fulfil its stasis, to ensure the world is as it wants it to be – it's no longer possible to drive forward with one overarching idea about how things should be – this is often felt as Anomie or a state of resignation/depression equivalent to the doldrums with no wind.

This is the result of withdrawing the Libido from the world – by smashing all trust or faith in Insynsian – in the egos identity of a singular truth. All truths then become relevant – and what then is assessed is not the idea right or wrong – but How does it move people, how do people react to it, and can a raft of forms from it be chained to their respective reactions to achieve a goal, the will of the directing magician whose forms are able to dominate the forms of others. [Though in this case – relying on Synchronicity to instruct us and stay true to our Word/Wyrd – instructs us, it is not the individual will but the collective.]

What is missing that makes this complex is the notion of tiers – there are people who will treat the forms as they are and react accordingly – there are people who will see through the forms and not react accordingly – there are people who will stand by and let the forms do as they wilt – and there are people who will try to change the forms in play – all of these types are needed. Some, wish to be ONA Adepts and follow the way accordingly – some wish to be THEM and scrutinise the very essence that the Way is built on – some will follow forms laid down, some will create new ones – and many more types besides. Thus, for some, speaking in the old language old aeon conceptualisation of Good and Evil, creating simple divisions that feed the Ego rather than challenge it – works to create Warriors, fanatics. And largely this is all the particular mode of the ONA does – to create Sorcerers requires a different approach. Together ONA and THEM create both Warriors and Sorcerers.

The necessity of a Grand Master is what solidifies the whole Empire of the ONA. Without a vision to craft and mould these nebulous nothings into ghostly shapes that take on solid form and walls that form a labyrinth that one can follow – there is only deep confusion. AL/CB's Wills were what stopped all possible validities disintegrating the forms necessary for people to be communicated with.

People, understand in forms – even beyond the Abyss you cannot hope to speak esoteric secrets if you do not use abstracts, metaphors, forms, examples, words, pictures. This is going to change – more and more – but AL's reversion to polemics was in our view a devastating mistake more so because it was done by a Grand Master whose influence over the many is vast. It was a grave error of judgement to re-employ as was the inculcation of the idea of mundanes; – not only does this re-enshrine the shadow many who passed through the Moon Sphere fought to extract and integrate and re-invigorate the egos sense of propriety in projecting its darkness onto others – it absolves the responsibility of lax understanding and power over forms [Thrall] by the Sinister Agent many of whom have now adopted the view that the Enemy lays solely outside of them. And it does not. Like many things Sinister – there is only so much that people can take in without self-destructing violently trying to grasp the forces involved and the complex interactions they possess. Made complicated only through the superimposition of the Magian's structures and programming through which many construct and view their Matrix.

However – this is why both ONA's strategy and ours are valid – theirs serves some, ours serves others. Comparing the two reveals markedly different ideas about the nature of the Sinister, the Aeonie desire, the Methodology and so on – ONA trains Adepts, and we train Adepts for what comes after.

What you say about having multiple valid views of forms, of people, of things – is the spark that kindles Genius. Or Madness. To shrug off traditional habits of perception is highly difficult, some say impossible – but as avatars of alchemical change we firmly disagree. People can Change – but that statement itself does not imply what is usually implied.

Change is not a new process – it is a re-shuffling of latent and conscious ones. We can trick, force or coax other aspects into consciousness; this is a volatile and experimental evolutionary gamble with many unknown and now known side-effects from messing with such things – but it is entirely possible. It is best done through archetypal and narrative magic. The nuances you hint at are many – and eventually the gulf becomes so wide between what we used to Know as Right, and what is appropriate to entice change aeonically – can both be viewed in context, allowing far-reaching foresight into our interactions with others...

Now for those who argue that hurling Molotov cocktails through windows of banks is a far more appropriate Sinister gesture and praxis – or those who agree that THEM have devised a more solid solution of changing people internally and providing them a formula to change others – or that neither Traditional Form of ONA or THEM is required to contribute positively to the Sinister Tradition – there is no debate. The War must be fought on many fronts – internally as well as externally.

Finally,

– this is an excerpt taken from a far longer post in Mvimaedivm Black.

” we need a clear Aeonie vision of exactly what an Aeon is... I regard the Aeon as a vast stretch of time in which certain power-forms grow, predominate, conquer and eventually wane, and die.

Each Aeon and I am inclined to trust the ONA’s interp. based on Spengler's notions with some adjustments to some of the periods – has a spiritual challenge indicated by a change in mentality that seeks to escape the mode enshrined that keeps the architecture and infrastructure and power figures of that Aeon intact by shared will or dominated will. The present Aeon could collapse into a reactionary shadow of the Empire that stands, wherein the dark one Absu has taken hold, and can be expected to last for at least another thirty years or generation there may be a sudden reversal into ultra-logic and serious re-discovery.

That would probably be the time when writings of the nature of THEM come into vogue with the masses searching then for what went wrong collectively – because as we have predicted way back before he entered, the nature of Absurdity is to outdo itself – the Alpha-Cynic may free the traditional roles of women but what comes after may be far worse. If the faith in Insynsian remains – then the next structures can be expected to remain Magian, monotheist, “monopraxis”, “monological”. The repetition of just one ultimate way to strive toward – not a multiplicity, not a pantheon, not a differentiated consciousness – wherein the failure to escape Insynsian will merely rebuild the same Temple of ONE in any manner of guises – appearing revolutionary but destined to repeat the same archaic modes evolution seeks to eschew..

If there is a loss of faith in Insynsian – if humans develop the means to think in strata, in plural, as THEM – then we can expect an evolution of the mind, and therefore the hand, and therefore the surrounds of the black clay. Otherwise, we face only a replacement – and this is why the notion of Heresy, of Us and THEM is so dangerous to entertain – it takes us backwards not forwards. Any abstract we can conceive we must begin to acknowledge that it stems from our own projections, it is a part of us. For something to be present in the forthright consciousness, something Else must be repressed. Yet at all times, both of these aspects and all the strata between them, live and thrive in the underground and larger share of sentience that governs the subconscious.

This is why THEM has arisen Chthonically, as a natural result of an equation of forces, that exists to encourage these changes toward plurality and destroy Insynsian. This is a key battle in the war to change the Aeon and influence what comes after. If enough minds are freed the meme lives of its own accord – but THEM cannot be the only hope – we cannot encourage others to throw their lot behind us for if we fail, if we are destroyed internally or externally by human weaknesses – there must be in place a thermonuclear explosion of fire from all quarters – not when we are done, but Now, we cannot do THIS alone. The next twenty years will be crucial in our charter – and we do not have a lot a time. Change takes a very very long time with huge reserves of energy and effort poured into others’ souls rather than kept back for oneself. We all Know this well. It is again why we have only a 30-year charter – for nothing is more draining than breaking the spells of the Magi.”

PLACES OF POWER

The thinking process of the ancient magickians was far slower than ours nowadays. Their minds reflected their surroundings in a less neurotic way than ours. Our inner dialogue or monologue should slow down and stop so that we may perceive the subtler realities around us. A process that takes time. Living in the wilderness for a longer period would enable one to learn certain things. Fasting during that period could prove the best way to allow one's awareness to perceive the greater world around us and have the aimed feedback from the acausal entities.

As regards working outdoors, I think the organism needs some time to adapt and relax in its new surroundings, especially when in the wilderness. In fact, one needs several days just to get fully acclimatised to the wilderness.

It may sound cynical but one of the best ways to find a site of power in the wilderness is when feeling a signal for defecation and the urge to find a proper place where one can satisfy that natural need. The signal for defecation itself is a sign that the organism has become relaxed enough to afford itself such a pleasure and the chosen place itself is always a secure place for one's body.

Of course, there are different sites of power in the wilderness. There are some sites wherein one feels sexually aroused. One might be possessed to have sex with trees, with stones, with pools etc, to expose the naked body to the severe caresses of one's wild surroundings.

There are sites of power which do not allow one to stay long there – these are the most powerful ones. Such are usually the mountain peaks. There is generally too much power for a human being to endure safely there. One may feel as if they're on drugs via the euphoria of such a place and perform some fatal folly – such as pretending to fly or falling from a rock and smashing one's head.

There are places that make one feel sleepy. These could be the most dangerous kind. One might never awake if they fall asleep in such a place. Yet too, there are places which may induce some prophetic dreams or to reveal some past events that happened therein.

As regards the fauna in the wilderness, each encounter could be regarded as a magickal sign or omen for the magickian. One's anima/animus may stalk one in its most appropriate animal form...

One is to invoke plants of power to learn more.

REQUISITES

The essential quality THEM look for in would-be initiates is an ability to continue to Change. I.e., to grow in as many ways as possible and explore one's world and being to its infinite potential. Since it's not always easy to know how to grow beyond one's situation and mode of being, THEM assist individuals in singular cases to work with them in finding ways to overcome limitations that they have in order that they not stop and rest permanently on any particular ideology, idea, or concrete notion of their being and their world; so that they may become like a shape-shifter who can adopt endless modes as suits that being. Some of the ways we attempt to help is by using our own magickal experience to identify blockages, weaknesses, psychological and physiological, in others. This may take the form of inducing a person to change in some way that compliments or contradicts them; perhaps to alter their perspective in conversation or via a task of some kind to help them look at other ways of thinking about things, dealing with problems, apprehending magic, and so on.

Sometimes introspection is considered useful for an individual and we ask them to work with us by recording a set number of dreams for a period to assuage what their psyche is telling them, as per an Analytical/Jungian approach. Or we simply discuss their ideas and try to introduce new tangents... The essential factor is individually determined on a case-by-case basis; but the prime quality we look for is the ability to continually change, grow and overcome oneself. THEM become them, by selecting themselves as their Master; however, while it is Satanic to walk one's own way – it is not always easy to know ones being as intimately or the direction we might take as we would like; the ego prevents a person from being able to see what others see sometimes; and that is why each member of THEM helps others to grow, which in turn helps the member to grow. In your case: you seem quite capable of asking new questions of others and yourself, and this is considered by us a desirable quality.

A member of THEM, is ambiguous about guidance. On one hand they don't want others to tell them what is valid and so really, we ask no questions to others; but that is a mindset, if you will, that is upheld in a different realm or mode of being; and that mode is at odds with my being, Here, writing replies and prompting others to change by taking the approach of the existence of real objective concepts that can be shared as valid for many people, not just the subjective experience of an individual.

Happiness: is something you understand on an intricately complex level with your own interpretation for many situations where you might believe you encounter it and can make judgements as to its validity, for others and for yourself. It's a word, a sound, a notion, and idea, an abstract, a goal, an emotion, a vibration... and takes countless other shapes and names. What should be avoided, in my opinion, is a mode of specialisation by a person, that limits interpretation of the thing “Happiness” and sets its suggestion in stone or if not as a singular definition, then an array of parameters that it might be defined under for a person. Even once you think you know Happiness; you should not stop trying to analyse it different ways, perhaps explore its basic opposite or varying degrees of shade. Or perhaps you are focusing on emotion altogether too much and need to explore the physical side of your being... these tangents, or options to go further in examining the world, ourselves, and others, are the forte of THEM.

It is hoped that individuals grow in some way from interaction with us, and we hope to be able to identify some way in which to prompt that growth for an individual using our experience and knowledge of magickal methods. I have not addressed your post personally; there is a lot in it about your thoughts on things that has not been commented on above, or if so, as fully as it could be – which, is naturally because there are no easy limits to put on dialect. If you have questions; ask them; and we will offer our thoughts and with luck, give you some walls to bounce off...

PLANET CARAVAN

Some Notes in regard to ‘Nexion’: [Initial name of the ASOV]

+O+

Having been involved in a Green group in the late 90’s that campaigned against Nuclear Armament, Logging, War, and Rights for Refugee’s in large protests (often in the CBD of Melbourne City or Marysville) I experienced extended periods of travelling to and from locations in convoys of cars, and time in their home re-made into the equivalent of a commune. Activities at this commune in the outer suburbs of Melbourne included parties to celebrate every full moon, fire twirling, congregating in a massive tee-pee, a lot of dope smoking, alcohol consumption, spa baths and on occasion promiscuous sex.

Some of the parties occasionally got out of hand and there was one occasion where I was asked to eject a trouble-maker who had punched our resident Native American in the face. Which I did. I also attended a festival twice called “ConFest” that is still run but has become increasingly commercial over the years. Meat was once banned, rec. drugs were rife, and commercial venues refused entry. Now a Coke van sells refreshments.

What I have learned from these and some other experiences prior to this, is that groups like this, such as hippies, who put on the relaxed face of effortless peace and mungbeans, much like Christians, are not immune to the bitter squabbling and internal politics that arise when almost any group of people assemble under the banner of an ideology.

There were some great people at the commune, some of which I enjoyed personal relationships with or found friendly, down-to-earth and not full of bullshit. But the entire camp was underpinned by a lot of hostility – mostly by some patrons towards others, a virile grapevine of gossip, and all manner of idiocy bandied around as sound solutions to the problems of the world.

My Alchemist friend Luci once informed me that he'd been speaking with a lady in the garden who wanted to meet a real Satanist. When I went down to talk with her, I noted she was in her 30's. When I began to inform her of my views ala ONA, she lost her arrogant Wiccan demeanour, and left the party.

The commune was also split into different factions internally, some who wanted to go back to the way things were when it was just the main attendees, some who thought more could or should be done for the Cause, some who felt that there was too much bullshit going on, and some who wanted to do their own thing and screw everyone else. With the high degree of traffic that came in and out there was a plethora of different and sometimes explosive personalities at the full moon parties. Luci and I were some of them. The point is: I know first-hand what elements the organisation of people together brings and am also very familiar with the Rites of the ONA.

I have taken these into consideration in my suggestion regarding a mobile blitzkrieg. Firstly, let me emphasise – I don't picture Nexion romantically as some sort of social group that gets together after magic to chat and spend time, possibly bitching, together. Rather I envision a cold calculating group of professional Satanists that arrive at a certain point ready and prepared for the ritual, draw down the acausal into the landscape and other members, get back in their cars, and leave. I think it is far more sinister for a group to descend upon a location with a pre-determined purpose and to perform a powerful rite using their own energies to participate professionally and coldly without so much as a word exchanged than it is to have a tea-party under the illusion that we're somehow all meant to get along.

The requirements of the Rite of 9a in ONA's magic demands a vow of silence of 7 days prior to Performance – this alone will exclude a lot of people without the proper resolve and personal conduct to maintain such severe measures of discipline, from Nexion.

Anonymity can be maintained by masks and silence. Renting cars for the purpose is also a good idea – and some standard satanic security measures put in place, however since I'd rather people not be paranoid about being tailed or followed, it would be necessary that each member be able to fight well enough to be able to knock someone out in the case of unwanted interruptions or aftermath. Initiates would need to be tested to see if they have the skills to defend themselves. Obviously, some experience with camping and bush-craft would be useful as would mechanical and geographical knowledge in the case of finding spots to perform the rites, and making sure everyone arrives and everyone leaves without breaking down.

A mastery of Chant and memorisation of the Rite's performed is an absolute requisite – but it hasn't been decided yet which of the Rites would be performed aside from the 9a one, which requires a lot of work, preparation and solidarity to achieve. In that, I've had a semi-active role in acting, and I am sure the Sorceress can provide useful instructions on its performance for a group as she has performed the 9a repeatedly and has a great working knowledge of the Dramatic Arts.

In some cases, it may be useful to alter the text of the ONA's Rites or to perform a completely different rite unique to THEM. All this will be discussed by myself and other members of THEM and members of Mvimaedivm are welcome to offer up their suggestions or put in for a charter.

PS. [The name of this Mss is taken from the name of a song by Metal Band, Pantera. The name Planet Caravan is used in the hope that the idea of a cold mobile convoy of people working blitzkriegs of acausal magic around the world might take off as a suitable alternative to an immobile nexion where internal politics of people not familiar with one another or exposed to high traffic volume tend to gather and wreak havoc on a form.

As we have said, the idea of issuing Charters for others to raise their own Temple to THEM (A Tendril of THEM) is under consideration.]

EYES: ASOV INAUGURAL

17th August 2014.

4:30 pm.

A convoy of cars arrive at a predetermined location. 4 women. 5 men. Friendly greet and meet are exchanged – the aura is of excitement, of expectancy, of caution, of the unknown. The palpable sense that something is about to happen is in the air. Incense is produced, carefully constructed aforethought for the particular celestial event for which this night has been chosen. The congregation dressed in black make their way down to the location to see where they will be spending the next twelve hours at the first inaugural meet of the 2-month-old Australian Satanic Organisation Victoria. A beautiful location meets the eyes of all: both practical and mystical; hidden from the roadside, a large dirt clearing bound by tall trees and a flowing river snaking one side with high hills obscuring overlookers and a literal crossroads. Met with approval – the long-wondered question of the dynamic and cohesion of all these different people is answered almost immediately. The next thirty minutes are spent ferrying our camp and ritual supplies, firewood and food down via a chain of laughing, enthusiastic and determined individuals. No one slacks, no one shirks, there are hands offering help at every turn. It is a wonderful sight to see.

Our supplies set up, tents are next and without ado the fire pit, 3 and a half foot across and a foot deep is dug. The flurry of brothers getting involved hacking the hard rocky dirt with axes to soften it for the spade only reinforces the notion that all of the right people are present for the right reasons. The fitness test we had planned proves unnecessary. Potatoes are wrapped in foil ready for the feast, beer is produced. The first vehicle check takes place and two individuals randomly chosen are sent off on the pretext of checking the cars – giving them in fact ten minutes alone with one another away from the main group to talk and get to know each other, breaking down any of the uncomfortable matter of some in a group not talking to others for whatever reason. The fire is kindled, another flurry of hands and it is lit and blazing – the forest is filled with conversations taking place in all quarters with bursts of laughter cutting the air. Mimicking the fire there is a blaze of personal warmth all about.

Those present chat openly with one another as dark begins to fall. So far so good. The first ASOV group photo is then prepared according to the loose itinerary of the night's events – masks, balaclavas, and mouth coverings of various sorts are suddenly produced in silence with grim determination and suddenly the clearing transforms from a casual group of campers into something altogether more sinister. Holding our 2014 inaugural plaque we capture a moment in Australian satanic history. [Given the photo later by a brother the clearly visible symbol of a hand thrust upward from the fire is only a surer sign of our sorcery and the culmination of dozens of uncanny and unlikely synchronicities between us all leading up to the Inaugural]. A brief speech on the success of the solidification of a dream conspired months ago and now manifest with a heartfelt thank you to all who have made the effort leading up to and during the first hours of the event to make it happen is offered as we stand around the fire.

Brief instructions on what is to take place next are issued. In the last of the dying light, we take our stolen, lifted holy books in hand and declare our new names within the ASOV to all – renouncing the three religions of Abraham: Christianity, Islam, and Judaism – and throwing them into the flames one by one as a sign of our Intent and a step toward our personal evolution. When the last book falls among the flames the inaugural ASOV 2014 is declared officially open amid the cries of “hail!”.

Left again to their devices before the main event people mingle with one another, discussing all manner of topics freely and without restraint in the darkness of this beautiful place laden with personal memories – at the foot of the hills. Potatoes and sausages are eaten, water and beer liberally drunk. Coals are raked into the keyhole pocket off from the main fire to grill the sausages, carefully tended automatically without anyone needing to ask for volunteers – the vibe is intense and close. Various discussions take place now, people moving in and around beside the fire or out to the woods, in conversation or simply just enjoying the fresh air and stunning scenery. Away from the electronic eye much is put forth.

It must be near ten that we gather once more around the fire using sparklers to draw sigils and signs of personal strength around it. Twenty minutes later we stand, clutching our constructed crucifix in preparation for the Aeon of Fire Rite. A history of the rite, both its method and purpose are laid out for participants who are instructed to use the rite to kill something within themselves, rather than the traditional use of destroying external enemies. Together some of us chant the Diabolus in harmony. The air grows thick with energies, people concentrating and summoning the killing energy, the death energy in their emotional memory, and that which they wish to kill transferred into the crosses – whose silhouettes are back-lit by the blazing inferno of the fire. The rehearsal done, the rite is begun – incense specially prepared by a brother is ignited, and through the stillness a booming voice filled with focus and intent cuts through the night as the rite is performed with accompanied motions.

As the congregation perform the difficult sorcery of culling within, filling those hateful relics with their pain, grief, anger and emotion, they cast the crosses into the fire – and followed by the mournful chant of Agios O Asoth. The command issued ‘now we simply walk away – they have taken enough of our time and energy’ is given – a sombre, solemn mood seizes the group who retreat to various corners to reflect, recover, let the powerful nature of the rite sink in and their own sensibilities process the event in silence.

I retreat to the riverside alone to think on the night’s events and the energies of those present – chanting Diabolus in my own tempo to the river, and that of Agios O Baphomet. Rain falls softly – but for the most part the weather is exactly what we had hoped, and the small amount of rain only brings atmosphere, and the sky’s cloud periodically part to allow unobstructed views of the stars. It is no more than 30 minutes before the group is reinvigorated however, recovered enough to talk with one another, reflect on what they killed and share their secrets with one another. In a similar vein does the night, a night filled with discussions of sorcery, of tactics, of stars and constellations, traditional satanism, our own experiences, successes and failures – much talk of the Future.

Lead by another brother, a satanic meditation opening gates inward through trance is conducted. For us the night is a triumph; the seed this simple ice breaker we have now together planted in our first act of coming together, away from the internet, to be amongst one another in the cradle of nature, face to face without fear or prejudice – that will Become – is sown deep into the Australian landscape. Some of us fall asleep in our tents, some of sit by the fire right through until the early morning – walking about the forest and talking or sharing war-stories.

We seek the planets chosen to preside over this inauguration – but the skyline is obscured by trees, the heavens by clouds – Jupiter and Venus are nowhere to be seen, yet in a very real sense, they have risen amongst us, the group emanates both love and wisdom and has unfolded our solidarity as hoped and expected.

By 5 am it is still dark, but the camp is packed. Everything has as a collective been assembled, packed up, all rubbish, cans, traces of our presence are picked up and taken back with us, the fire is filled in, tents vanish, and we leave the ground in the pristine condition we arrived. Only a Thrasz drawn by a brother about the circumference of the fire remains as a sign we were ever there.

The night has been a humble yet great success. There has been both serious talk and abandoned laughter. We have much to do to prepare for the next meet but the first and most crucial steps have been taken. A spark has been lit...

ASOV: NOTES FOR ASPIRANTS

It may be of some use to comment on a few pointers regarding the future delivery and intent of the rituals performed at the ASOV Inaugural for future aspirants who take the lead and run a meet. The first is that I did not have written notes. Over the course of a few days, I wrote and rewrote the rite, and committed it to memory. I also accompanied the rite with physical actions which helped serve as a reminder of what came next. Having enjoyed several beers to join in the celebration and relax I was nevertheless very wary of my alcohol intake in order that I did not forget the appropriate actions or words.

What I said, came from my heart and was delivered with a loud, confident and fearless voice. It is understandable that on a first meet there are doubts and fears of what others may think should we choose to shout or let free our emotion – and breaking that reluctance to be at one, to freely contribute without fear of how one is going to appear or be judged, is tantamount, absolutely vital to any performance of group sorcery.

I am for instance quite at ease wearing glasses and silly hats, joking about my own foibles and not afraid to strip naked, direct a group of people in sorcery, or speak to groups of people. I am extremely confident in what I do and am – and this inspires others. It creates an atmosphere of power, and trust, and freedom. It is advised that anyone running a meet develop the same confidence for speaking in front of others, delivering a powerful intonation and/or chant, and being very well versed in one's material to the point that it is automatically remembered and thus spoken from the heart.

As I have said on a few occasions, Intent is what matters. Not the tools. The Thurifer we intended to bring whereupon Anorha would walk around the circle and incense the area, was forgotten. The bells we noted Sanguinary brought, were not around for the AOF – but we made do. No-one was any the wiser that the ritual went other than the way it was planned. A Sorcerer must always be resourceful and work with what they have – plans fall down, chaos changes things, but there must always be flexibility and readiness to adapt and continue. That we were an hour and a half late to the meet changed a few things, but by and large the loose itinerary was still used to give a sense of structure and timing to the unfolding of the night's activities. What was important, more important than following the itinerary to the letter – was observing and feeling, watching and enjoying the unfolding dynamic between the people present: it was necessary to note that if people were speaking excitedly and meeting others they hadn't to let that develop of its own accord, to note the rise in chatter and the fall when people had exhausted the present amount of conversation – and Then, to draw them back to the itinerary to give them something to do so they were not standing around bored or listless.

Had I simply insisted everyone be present at a certain time I should have simply been trying to plaster a strict doctrine of to-do's over an organic meeting of new minds and faces: this is very important, and a skill that must be honed. A plan is useful, but it's the people that matter. Interrupting conversations to do something on a list helps no-one – far better that the Master observe the rise and fall of people's doings and base their timing on that – with respect to the roughly itemised itinerary. We must always expect things to go wrong, people to be late, some key item to be forgotten, some “inconvenience” by weather or other fortune – and just adapt and go with the flow.

Trying to adhere slavishly to a list of things will only clash horribly with the organic energies of the natural dynamic of a group unfolding itself to one another – and at the end of the day, THIS dynamic is far more important than all the rituals on a list. That it simply took its own course was amazing. I have come to trust synchronicity and my judgement of character, but this meet was truly amazing to observe.

It should be noted that everyone was treated as equals: there was no gender typing, the women were not left to talk amongst themselves nor to cook or mind the fire; the men were not charged to gather firewood or put up tents: the single most important thing about any group like this, I think, is to simply get into it, get ones hands dirty, do what needs to be done, without complaint, without hesitation, and others will follow. It's of no use waiting for others to do something – one should always just do it themselves, allow others to step in and take over or assist, and then move onto the next thing. I did what I wanted to do, what needed to be done – if others weren't willing to do it that didn't matter I was going to do it anyway as it turned out, I was among capable, admirable, determined spirits who did not need to be asked, or told, and just did – we worked together like a well-oiled machine, an almost military precision and that was Very impressive. For this same reason of dynamic – people were sent randomly in twos to 'check on the cars'.

Giving two people who might not ordinarily speak to one another time to talk alone without the pressure of a group helped lubricate friendship and trust – just ten minutes alone with one another was enough time to have a talk, share a smoke, and get to know each other – whilst having a 'purpose' to complete gave the social interaction, meaning and direction. Done with a few couples, it was not long before everyone was talking to everyone with ease. [See, Keeping the Bastard Together] We learned a few things along the way also: to cook corn in the shallow pit off from the fire pit not the centre, to bring some different foods – pumpkin perhaps, and more sugars. A kettle. I will definitely make damper next time.

We were not able to do the nunchuku, knife or chant training – but the mere fact that we were able to sit down and get to know each other more than made up for this in terms of constructive team spirit. The camaraderie of a group is what makes or break its – and it's what made ours a resounding success, a powerful springboard for future gatherings. The confidence, leadership, structuring, delivery and organisation of a meet is important to get right so that people are not left feeling alienated from what is going on, yet not told what to do. Because of the informal dynamic of the group, with people chatting comfortably and at ease with one another, I did not deliver various lectures in lengthy sermons, but keep it informal, short and to the point. This meant flowing with the dynamic around me, not challenging or disrupting it.

Thus, the whole night was passed with ease by all – time flew, because we were having fun and it seemed like one continuous event.

A rough estimate of the cost of the meet is about $400.

The sheer amount of information to remember about even a short rite like the AOF requires some work. I anticipated some nervousness, or drunkenness on my part at the meet might cause me to forget the words or actions. I therefore broke the rite down into simple mnemonics. Instead of trying to remember all the words to Diabolus as well as all the words to the AOF, I simply wrote the first letter of each line of the chant, so I only had to remember a string of seven letters, prompting my memory to fill in the rest. I also broke the rite into letters, I, I, T, C, etc the first line of each delivery to remind me what came next. I developed physical actions to accompany the rite not only to help me remember the procession but also to involve more than a voice, to involve the Physis of the body, to create mystical movements that reflected the forces and forms spoken of and intrigue and add an element of motion and interest to the Rite.

Sorcery is like Dance – you must simply let yourself go in order to produce the required magic. To stand stiffly, uncomfortably, unmoving, and read from a sheet... well you get the idea. It sends the entirely wrong message, it smacks of disorganisation, insincerity and lack of confidence. Your actions and words need to inspire others to relax – so you too must relax. Sometimes things do go wrong – and its OK to laugh – and then proceed.

Laughter is by far the most dangerous of all forces – even the Devil fears it. Learn to laugh at yourself harder than anyone else can so when you fuck up, it's alright, just part of the show, and keep going. Know your role so well it seems effortless – even if it isn't. The importance of getting a ritual right, is practice. To fuck it up in the middle by forgetting the words or actions and pausing longer than necessary or stopping completely is not the end of the world – but it is disastrous for a Sorcerer and all the participants involved. Rituals require an organic flow, a natural unfolding delivered with confidence that engenders trust in the Master to guide and add structure to what would otherwise be chaos. Thus, it was vital to explain in brief, the nature of the rites performed and the actions required by the participants beforehand.

Ordinarily I'd have given it longer between rehearsal and performance – but adapted to the feeling around me, deleting it almost altogether to meet the expectant anticipation and need to DO that was emanating from the group.

Beyond this: everything else in the way of organisation and implementation of a meet should have been demonstrated by the inaugural and come (and evolve) naturally.

Respect those around you – not everyone will want to perform or participate in a given rite. Offer the choice but never demand it of anyone. At any rate, if you have to perform it solo – perform it solo. A Master needs no-one else to get things done. If the energy is not there, create it, move through all obstacles and act as if you are the only one there.

Addendum: Aeon of Fire

It was suggested by Anorha that participants kill something inside themselves rather than the traditional use of the rite against an external enemy -say, the Pope. Because we could not locate the Temple's acausal pentagram mat (appears in OA 28) to highlight it with glow in the dark spray-paint – we used the fire itself. Which exquisitely reflected a living acausal pentagram and the moving geometry in the starry abyss. People gathered around the fire and held crucifix. They were explained the nature of the rite and how it works. Everyone was told to think of a time when they killed or were in a position to kill/felt like killing and to revoke that memory so as to relive it and all the emotion they felt. They were instructed to think of something they hated inside them and to kill it, to pull it out of themselves and pour it into the cross – to imagine red glowing tendrils coming from themselves and taking the killing energy with them wrapping around the cross, causing it to glow brightly red.

While they did this three of us chanted Diabolus. Then the words of the AOF were delivered, loud and confidently to all and the night. Black magic is no time for shyness or being frightened of a ferocious booming intonation. It is not for those who get easily embarrassed but for those who exult life and the forces it represents. There could have been more time between rehearsal and performance – but I felt there was a great need to finally perform an act of sorcery together after waiting so long that it need not wait. This sorcery, has grave and solemn consequences, it is very intimate and private, very powerful and often painful – it is advised to check on others briefly who have performed it, one needn't say anything but just sit beside them, to passively remind them they are not alone, there is support and silent understanding – and then just leave them until they return of their own accord to the group.

Laughter is very powerful – and we all made use of it. That is how you know you are amongst dangerous people. But the Master must also balance this freedom and mirth with a seriousness and respect: too much of either can tip the dynamic too far one way causing those who desire a certain solemnity for some matters feel it is being taken too lightly – while taking things too seriously can be a depressing dead weight on those who would otherwise feel relaxed.

Balancing these requires practice and experience working within groups and being able to read people. Body language, where feet are pointing, whether arms are crossed, tone and pitch of voice, power play, space between people, amount of eye contact, who talks to who, the amount of laughter, the amount of conversation, etc are important to observe. For you can use these cues to evoke changes, get some to work together who might not otherwise do so, or read the “ley of the land” to enhance the group dynamic if you can identify what is ailing it and where.

Unless on those rare occasions you simply get the right people at the right time and place. Which we did. And whilst ‘right’ body language is interesting to observe – when the dynamic simply goes like clockwork, you feel it, and when you know what it is supposed to feel like – you no longer have to watch it. For then it is an act of magic.

ASOV FLAG: ESOTERIC MEANING

Although it looks simple enough, a great deal of information can be invested in and as such withdrawn from our flag.

Colours: The Black Standard is rectangular and martial in stature as per a Samurai banner representing the Saturnian Earthiness of a Black Cube elongated to encompass more than us rather than Sovereignty/control over an area. It represents discipline and empathy – the understanding of our temporal occupation of a location is only temporal and by no means grants us any special ownership and the empathy with the land that demands we look after it and remove as much of our presence as possible, save for a Thrasz, behind.

The cube is one of the five Pythagorean solids. the most basic form of the cube; the square represented solidarity: a perfection that is static, earthly, and material. It suggests dependability, honesty, shelter, safety. As the most frequent shape in Hindu symbology, the mandala with gates stands for order in the universe and the balance of opposites. It is considered the building block of nature because the ancient Greeks believed that the element of Earth was comprised of cube shaped particles; given their stability of the shape. The Modern World has inherited much of the Greeks worldview and many of these suppositions, present in general knowledge, remain preserved.

The Green & Yellow Represent our Australian Heritage and Belonging, a patriotic nod. The Green Thrasz further represents the wild and lush Australian Landscape, whilst the Yellow Sun represents the harsh, inhospitable arid deserts, sand and burning sun. The white stars and moon are contrasted with the black flag to indicate a grasp and willingness to employ both extremes of any given form and to symbolise our astrological/astronomical focus.

The Black 'A' in the shadow of the Sun depicts the Monogram for the ASOV (A) and is stylised to show a figure both exalting the sky and kneeling on the earth. It represents a greater union with the forces above and below and a vow to go inside and outside to find, meet and learn from these forces by which we are shadowed by virtue of their intensity. It also warns of incineration by these forces should we forget their power.

Symbolism:

The Moon represents our Blitzkrieg Approach to Magic and that our organisation and our alchemical development is often hidden from view. The Thrasz itself is a stylised Saturn, easily seen if we imagine Saturn's planet as the Yellow interior (Ammonia) and the spiralling Green Thrasz as its rings.

The midst of which is a baleful eye – the eye of Becoming or Evolved Intelligence. A Crux or Southern Cross of stars counterpoints the Moon adopting this symbol famous across the Southern Hemisphere for our flag and a sign that presides over our rituals and meets as a natural compass.

The Moon, Saturn and the Sun are depicted on the ASOV's flag – a throwback to the Temple of THEM's roots in Traditional Satanism and the spiral path of the planets in the Tree of Wyrð. The moon in the far distance, Saturn in the mid ground and the sun in the foreground. The Moon is shown in danger of being occulted by Saturn – that is to say, Saturn obscures the sphere of the Moon. In Psychological terms this equates to the 23 Syndrome and fixing of the Ego with the individual believing they have discovered all there is that lays hidden in their psyche, lived and extracted all the terror and occult knowledge there is inside or outside. We must never forget that our Ego functions to fix our perspective with a narrow-minded view to more easily make sense of things – and this narrowing is an illusion caused by the Egos lens that may cause us to constrict our perspectives without conscious control.

The EYE of the Thrasz is a stern reminder that we must remain awake and vigilant of our Ego's particular habits if we are to retain conscious control of who we are. The cyclic path of Becoming and Evolving that starts in the Sphere of the Moon, travels in a spiral (the Thrasz) upward through the other planetary energies and ends in Saturn. However, the endless pursuit of this cycle is represented by the Awakened Dragon or Eye of the Thrasz wherein this process of Becoming is eternally repeated but never the same outwardly, only inwardly. This process represents a cosmos of receptive knowledge which we are not closed off to and the repetitive cyclic attainment of Becoming in effect represents the Philosophers Stone.

The ability to turn lead of any kind into gold of any kind requires an understanding of transformation and how one thing can become another through the application of processes. If we come to know thousands of processes instead of a few hundred it significantly improves our ability to perform alchemy by coupling a form with, or depriving a form of, another form or forms to produce a specific result.

If you look again at the 'A' on the flag you will see it is comprised of two letters, A and U, the Alchemical Symbol for Gold while the Lead aspect is symbolised by the black colour of the A and the human figure. The planets of the flag both dwarf and surround the human figure pointing at the enormity of alchemical tasks and implementation of change and the necessity for supra human efforts to achieve them. The Saturnian aspect of the Thrasz is covered in detail within the complex meanings of the Aeurekanequeo yet it is worth noting that the Isa Rune of the Thrasz Eye, of stillness and Ice, is counterbalanced by the Double Sowelu Runes, or Sunwheel, spelling ISS which equates to In Supra Solidarity.

The Sun is at the foreground because of its prominence in Australian climate and landscape. It further represents the shining beacons of illumination and wisdom which are not to be confused with knowledge. Wisdom is a result of less being more. A compaction of the categorical knowledge of the Dexter into a wordless sympathy of knowing with forces previously unknown. It is intensity and persistence that makes changes, both internally and externally just as sun and storm year after year, aeon after aeon scorched the Australian landscape dry from its once verdant lushness into the arid continent we know today, the time frame and heat required for such changes are allegories for magical works, including forbidden alchemy. To burn as a star does requires great dedication. The Black Flame is caused by Black Lightning. Thus just as there are forces of opposition, conjunction and even contradiction shown in our flag by the various forces depicted – so too are we ourselves representative of the balance of what is shown and beyond. This flag serves as a reminder of our duties to the land to each other and to ourselves.

Suitably entranced and joined with the meaning of this flag now it falls to us to employ a radical practice common to the philosophy of the Temple of THEM. Despite its symbolic beauty and harmony this flag must never become sacred. It must not be as other flags a sign of sovereignty over land or the intention to create a utopian rule, nor must it be representative more than arbitrarily of the ASOv.

We may use it liberally but must remember that if we imbue it with power or special significance we are playing a game. We should perhaps at the proposed event of the yearly Grand Fire, burn such a flag to release any attachment to it. Creating a new one each year at the first Meet. It is easy to build such relics and artefacts and become attached to them, easier still to speak words that attach someone to them as I have done here: this is how knowledge is accepted, venerated and made sacred. But this is the root of religion, of worship, of material abstractions of forms, not an appreciation of forces. We may perhaps use it irreverently to wipe our dishes and utensils but not go so far as to deliberately scorn or demean the flag – merely keep it in context and its place. It is just cloth to which we have attached meaning, after all. When it becomes more than that, the Sorcerer has lost control of his or her forms. You may recall the myths of Frankenstein, or the story of the Golem, or even Mickey's Brooms of which he created and lost control. Symbols have a nasty habit of becoming more than they are – so these practices will help you as a sorcerer to understand both the trap they create and the means to overcome it. And that is invaluable.

There is another aspect to this flag that may not be immediately visible. One of the traditional crafts of Satanic practice as taught by us is that of mimesis. Just as we mimicked a Mass with the Nameless Rite, our ASOV flag stands in opposition to Abrahamism. It not only features the black cube (sacred symbol of Abrahamism and the greatest of Angels 'El' who was represented by a black cube – under which banner we are attempting to dismantle their control over us and our habits) but the three planets rumoured to have been the roots from which the name of Israel is derived: being the Egyptian worship of the Moon (Isis), the Sun, (Ra), and Saturn (Elohim), hence IsRaEl. Therefore, our treatment and use of the symbolism of a flag and the flag itself is not the ordinary use, but a seditious undermining of traditional forms on multiple levels.

THE STAR TALK [Workshop Example]

During the ASOV, each member was tasked with running a ritual or workshop: one of these was the Star Talk. I gave this talk at the 2nd Meet in Victoria, which my compatriots will remember coincided with the ground where we were standing being lit up from the flash of a brilliant meteorite or shooting star.

During the 3rd Meet, I gave this talk again only to discover my audience completely transfixed by the heavens above where a meteor shower was taking place. I had them spin their seats or lie down and watch the show while I continued the talk. Synchronicity is an extremely powerful force that makes the impossible, possible.

Here is that talk:

Understanding Directions in the Sky.

The Sun rises in the East and sets in the West. So, do the Stars rise in the east and set in the west overnight. This is because the Earth spins from West to East.

Everything comes into view as we spin toward it, and retreats as we spin away from it. If anyone is having trouble understanding this – stand here and three of us will stand in front of you in an arc. Slowly turn to your left as if you were the Earth. See how we come into your view in a certain order, appearing to be turning in the opposite direction to you. So it is with the stars, the moon, sun, and planets.

In Astronomy the sky is halved down the middle by an imaginary line between the North Celestial Pole and the South Celestial Pole called the Meridian. Looking straight up wherever you are at the centre point between North and South Meridian is called the Zenith. If you've heard of the Nadir – and its not often used – that's simply the point opposite the Zenith on the other side of the Earth. Zenith should not be confused as the point around which stars rotate which are the North and South Celestial Poles – Zenith is generally only used to find specific stars from your specific location.

South/North Celestial Poles are the spots in the sky that lie directly above the South and North Poles. As if a skewer were passed through a slightly flattened globe and carried on outward into space in both North and South directions indefinitely. What this means is that Meridian and Zenith are relative positions relating to you – not absolute positions such as the South and North Celestial Poles. Two more terms of interest to star gazing and astronomy are Altitude and Azimuth. The altitude of a celestial body (star, planet, etc.) is the angle, measured in degrees, above the nearest horizon. Think of altitude as the vertical angle for an object. Azimuth is the horizontal direction or bearing of an object in the sky.

It sets the line along which the altitude is measured. So for instance, A star on your horizon has an altitude of zero degrees (0°) A star at your zenith has an altitude of 90 degrees (90°) . Think of each star as a plane on a runway taking off, it starts on the ground but climbs higher and higher by degrees as it takes off which is its Azimuth, and Altitude measures how far above the Horizon it is and where it is in relation to your Zenith.

You can see any stars with altitudes between 0 to 90.

A star with an altitude of less than 0 degrees is a star below the horizon and it cannot be seen (at your location at that time).

A star with an altitude of more than 90 degrees is actually past your zenith on the other side of the sky and its real altitude should be measured from that (opposite) horizon. Altitude and Azimuth are used to locate, measure and track the movement of specific stars and planets. Also used are the terms Declination and Right Ascension, co-ordinates given as two sets of numbers which represent imaginary lines, like latitude and longitude on the earth's surface projected out into space for even more precision.

A Brief Note on Longitude and Latitude

A name that will come up a lot in Astronomy, and this talk, is Hipparchus. As chief librarian at the great library in Alexandria (dedicated to the Nine Muses), Egypt, (destroyed by several fires in the course of 300 years) he undoubtedly had access to huge troves of the world's ancient knowledge. Longitude and Latitude are a system designed by Hipparchus to measure the absolute location of something. Longitude runs from North to South, and Latitude from East to West. Hipparchus also invented a scale for measuring the magnitude of the star's brightness, as well as discovered the Precession of the Equinoxes – both of which I will mention in a bit.

Lets start with some basics. What can we see from Earth? Planets. Stars. Comets. Meteors. Some Nebulae. Constellations. Signs of the Zodiac.

The word Planet is derived from a Greek term meaning Wandering Stars. The Greeks named each planet mainly according to its brightness and colour, the name given to them being mostly associated with heat and light. Hence Venus' brilliant white colouration earned it the name Phosphoros ("the light-bearing one") and Mars' orange-red colour was associated with fire, so it was given the name Pyroeis ("the fiery one") and so on.

In the fourth century BC, the Greek philosopher Aristotle converted these descriptive names into the names of Greek gods (and one goddess), each planet's attributes roughly matching those of its chosen god. The Romans later acquired these Greek names and translated them into their own equivalent gods, and these are the names that we still use today; hence the Greek goddess Aphrodite became the Roman goddess Venus and the Greek god Ares became the Roman god Mars, etc. The five brightest planets – Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn – have been known since ancient times and can easily be seen with the naked eye if one knows when and where to look. They are visible for much of the year, except for short periods of time when they are too close to the Sun to observe.

The location of a planet (or any other celestial body) in your local night sky depends upon several factors: the constellation in which it is positioned, your geographical latitude and longitude, the local season and the date and time at which you observe. You can only see 6 planets from Earth with the naked eye – 5 are easy, the 6th requires exceptional eyesight. The one that is hardest to see is Uranus, and that's not because you're sitting on it but because it's a very long way away. Trying to find planets in a vast sky studded with shiny things is not easy. To find these suckers it helps to know about the Ecliptic.

The Ecliptic

Planets are easy to find in the night sky if you know what the Ecliptic is. Imagine you're lying on the ground. Now imagine the sun coming up in the East in the morning, travelling up and into the sky, reaching its zenith and then sinking down into the West. Trace an imaginary arc linking the two. You can do the same with the Moon. The closer you are to the Equator the higher this Arc will be – but this Arc is the Ecliptic. If we imagined a protractor resting on the horizon and marking the degrees of Arc from 0-90 we get a better idea of Azimuth which was mentioned before.

The Sun seems to move against the background stars as seen from the orbiting Earth. The ecliptic is the path the Sun appears to trace through the stars.

This apparent movement of the Sun though this is an illusion caused by our point of view from a rotating sphere – the Sun does not orbit around the Earth but the Earth orbits the Sun as Copernicus, Galileo, Kepler, Brahe, and others proved in what is known as Heliocentric Theory – an idea that history first credits Aristotle having and an idea that was met with fierce resistance by the Catholic Church when Galileo built and used his own telescopes to observe the planets, see craters on the moon, and made calculations that flew in the face of accepted Doctrine to prove that the Sun was orbited by the Earth not the other way around. The Catholic Church, known for its stubborn ignorance, did not accept this fact until 350 years later.

The Ecliptic is useful because the 6 planets, moon, sun and stars, closely follow it. If you know the path of the Moon then you can often find the planets somewhere along it. Kind of like a hula hoop rotating around the Earth's waist on an angle with spheres dangling off it. They will never be too far from the Ecliptic. We can't see the Path of the Sun because the Earth rotates taking us with it but we can observe its path as the Rising and Setting of the Sun and Moon.

Just Quickly: How to determine a satellite from a star or planet.

Generally only stars twinkle. Stars and planets won't move relative to each other on any given night, they will move across the sky collectively because of earth's rotation. Satellites move steadily across the sky. You will only usually see them the first couple of hours after sunset or the last couple of hours before sunrise. A satellite is usually only visible for about 30 seconds – 3 minutes, before it's orbit takes it to a location to where it cannot reflect sunlight to a stationary observer.

How to determine a star from a planet.

Stars are so distant that they appear as points of light in the night sky, and they appear to twinkle (or scintillate) because of turbulence in the Earth's atmosphere.

The planets can be distinguished from the stars because their position changes slightly against the background stars from one night to the next, and their brightness varies in a regular cycle over a period of time. Even in earths most powerful telescopes a star appears as little more than a point. The naked eye planets, on the other hand, are close enough to the Earth to form a sizeable (but nonetheless tiny) disk in the night sky and consequently, when they are well above the horizon, the planets shine with a more steady light than the stars.

Also note that stars generate their own light via internal nuclear fusion while planets do not, shining because they reflect a portion of sunlight back into space.

So what do the planets look like from earth?

Venus is by far the easiest planet to see with the naked eye. It shines with a brilliant white light. At its most brilliant it can even cast faint shadows on the ground.

Jupiter appears bright white and is a very obvious sight in the night sky. Like Venus, it can be seen in twilight, and it always shines brighter than the brightest star in the night sky – but even though it is many times bigger, it is always outshone by Venus. Jupiter can also cast faint shadows at its brightest.

Mars is easily recognised since it has the most distinctive coloration of all the naked eye planets. Although it is popularly called ‘The Red Planet’, it rarely appears red to the naked eye; in fact, it varies from pale orange-yellow to orange-red, depending upon its distance from the Earth and therefore, its brightness.

Mercury is generally more difficult to spot than the other bright planets, appears white or pinkish in colour. It rises low in the sky so for the same reason we get red sky at sunsets we get a pink mercury.

Saturn appears pale yellow to the naked eye. Although never appearing as bright as the other naked eye planets, it is nonetheless obvious when its position is known. At its brightest, Saturn outshines all of the stars except Sirius.

Uranus is just visible to the naked eye when at its brightest, but only when seen from dark, non-light polluted skies; observers in city or town locations will probably have difficulty seeing it without optical aid. It is the most distant planet visible to the naked eye.

Moving onto the stars in general and in particular Constellations.

Hipparchus the Greek came up with a system for measuring the brightness of a star. He gave the brightest stars the factor of 1. and the dimmest stars the factor of 6. each factor was 2.5 times brighter or dimmer than the star before or after – meaning factor 1 stars were 100,000 times brighter than factor 6 stars. As science and technology caught up we discovered there were billions of stars and this category grew longer in both directions with far dimmer stars and far brighter. Minus and plus were added, with minus meaning brighter and plus meaning dimmer. Sirius – the Dog Star has a factor of -2.5 which is the brightest non-local star visible from earth, while the moon has -12 and the sun -26. Yes the system would probably make more sense to modern sensibilities if it were back to front.

Constellations.

There are 88 constellations agreed upon for convenience.

Constellations are formed of bright stars which appear close to each other on the sky, but are really far apart in space. The shapes you see all depend on your point of view. Many societies saw patterns among the stars with gods and goddesses or stories from their culture.

Most of the constellations with which we are familiar come from ancient Greece. But other civilisations created their own patterns in the sky based on stories and people that were important to them.

For example:

In ancient Turkey, dated to around 12,000 BC, archaeologists have uncovered a site with massive stone pillars carved with various animals. Known as Gobekli Tepe – it pre-dates the oldest known civilisation of Sumerian by some 8,000 years. Astro-archaeologists have identified the animals on these pillars, such as Vultures, Scorpions, Foxes, Boars, Snakes, Birds, as having shapes that fit ancient constellations and their collective grouping on the stones can be matched quite distinctly with a map of the stars in the sky. Our own Thrasz symbol is most closely associated with the Sun, and is a symbol like that of the Swastika that has been drawn for tens of thousands of years – not unlike the hypnotic fascination the ancient world had with the seven stars of the Pleiades which appears in virtually every culture as far back as neolithic man.

Among the ancient people of Europe, (Nordic) the night sky was a mysterious realm sometimes viewed as a magnificent World Tree that stretched across the sky, where the stars were fruit upon its spreading branches, and the Milky Way was its massive roots that extended down to the Earth. This comprised their universe and their understanding of its powers.

Aboriginal people of Australia have been viewing the skies for 40-50,000 years with their own star constellations and meanings for each tribe. Many involve the Milky Way.

Dark sky features such as dark nebulae — clouds of interstellar dust from stars that exploded long ago that obscure light from the stars behind them — are also more prominent in the Southern Hemisphere. The darkest of the dark nebulae is a feature called the Coalsack. Tucked in near the Southern Cross, the Coalsack forms the head of our best known Indigenous constellation, the Emu in the Sky.

The Milky Way

The Milky Way is the galaxy that contains our Solar System. Its name ‘milky’ is derived from its appearance as a dim glowing band arching across the night sky in which the naked eye cannot distinguish individual stars. Milky Way is a translation of the Latin via lactea from the Greek galaxias kyklos “milky circle”. It appears as a band because its disk-shape is viewed from within it from Earth. Our mate Galileo discovered it was made up of separate stars in 1610 and up until the 1920s most astronomers thought all the stars in the universe were contained in the Milky Way. It took Edwin Hubble (of Hubble Telescope fame) to show that the Milky Way is just one of billions of galaxies.

The 12 Signs of the Zodiac

Like the sun and the planets, the zodiac constellations all lie in the ecliptic, so they're visible from every place on Earth where you can see the sun rise and set. This explains why they feature so prominently in ancient cultures.

Going round the Ecliptic will be the twelve fixed star constellations of Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces. — the ones we're all familiar with from astrology.

If you look up on a dark night, you should be able to see at least four zodiac constellations at any one time, lying across the ecliptic.

The zodiac constellations span the entire sky (i.e. as a ring around the earth), so we never face all 12 of them at once. During the night, as the earth spins, each of these constellations will sink in the western sky, while others will rise in the east. All up, if you were to watch the sky for an entire night, you'd see up to ten of the twelve zodiac constellations. The few that you can't see are in the area of the sky blocked out by the sun.

Cultures throughout the world believed and believe that constellations, stars, planets and other celestial objects such as the sun and moon had the power to influence human beings and events.

Grimoires and Almanacs

This is where the grimoire comes in – probably developing parallel to the Almanac
ALMANAC

An almanac is an annual publication that includes information such as weather forecasts, farmers' planting dates, tide tables, and tabular information often arranged according to the calendar. Astronomical data and various statistics are found in almanacs, such as the times of the rising and setting of the sun and moon, eclipses, hours of full tide, church festivals, and so on.

GRIMOIRES

A grimoire /grim'war/ is a textbook of magic. From the French Gramairre meaning a book written in Latin late in the 18th century the word came to mean exclusively magical books.

Such books typically include instructions on how to create magical objects like talismans and amulets, how to perform magical spells, charms and divination and also how to summon or invoke supernatural entities such as angels, spirits, and demons.^[1] In many cases, the books themselves are also believed to be imbued with magical powers, though in many cultures, other sacred texts that are not grimoires, such as the Bible, have also been believed to have supernatural properties intrinsically; in this manner while all books on magic could be thought of as grimoires, not all magical books should.^[2]

While the term grimoire is originally European and many Europeans throughout history, particularly ceremonial magicians and cunning folk, have made use of grimoires, the historian Owen Davies noted that similar books can be found all across the world, ranging from Jamaica to Sumatra,^[3] and he also noted that the first grimoires could be found not only in Europe but in the Ancient Near East

Astrology Based Grimoires

PICATRIX

A huge number of books have been written on the subject, one of the most famous is the Picatrix, an Arabic manuscript dealing with occult magic and astrology sometime in the 10-11th century. It has an Arabic name Ghayat al Hakim which translates to Aim of the Sage – or Goal of the Wise. Picatrix was compiled from some 200 other sources and explains not only how to create and ensoul magical statues and talismans, but even speaks of whole cities constructed using the principles of astrological magic. Book IV chapter 2 for instance relates How the vigour of the spirit of the Moon is drawn into things here below, and by which the seven planets ought to be invoked. Chapter 6. How incenses of the stars ought to be made, and certain compounds needed in this science.

AGRIPPA

It was influential on later magicians such as Agrippa and his Three Books of the Occult. In the 15th century the famous magician Agrippa wrote that the celestial spheres and the stars had specific impact and influence at certain times, and that they cast down rays of influence (similar to light beams) that engaged with plants animals, stones and the elements. And that upon cutting open such objects, there would be displayed a sigil representative of the star or planetary energy from which it was derived – this is how many of the classical symbols of alchemy and occult magic particularly those dealing with demons and angels – came about. The seals of Solomon popularised by medieval Arabic scholars in the 17th century for instance were influenced by Agrippa's work in the 1500's – such symbolism often inferring a command over entities through the use of sacred energies from stars, planets and indeed those contained in certain plants, stones, elements etc.

It is a vast understatement to say that the history of the stars and magic spans hundreds of thousands of books through thousands of cultures and like many other subjects on magic is near infinite in scope.

Now lets discuss a bit about our most famous constellation in Australia, CRUX: Crux is the smallest of the 88 constellations and was until the 16th century grouped as part of Centaurus.

Crux was once visible in the Northern Hemisphere, but around the time of Christ disappeared into the Southern Hemisphere.

Gamma forms the top of the cross. On the left arm is Beta. Opposite arm is Delta. The bottom of the cross is Acrux or Alpha Crucis. Between Delta and Alpha you can make out a fifth star called Epsilon Crucis (what our mate was referring to with his nick name Penny M Ess Cru Alpha Crucis (Acrux) is the principal star and a splendid binary. The combined visual magnitude of both stars results in a magnitude of 0.72. The stars are 320 light years away, and each is approximately one and a half to twice the size of our Sun.

Beta Crucis (Mimosa) is the brightest star of the group, a blue-white giant (nearly five times the Sun's size) with a visual magnitude of 1.25. The star is an estimated 580 light years away, and has a luminosity of nearly 8000. The star is a variable

Gamma Crucis (Gacrux) forms the top of the cross. The reported distance may be erroneous; it's been calculated from the visual and absolute magnitudes. The resulting parallax is so large that it should be measurable.

Delta Crucis is the western arm, very similar in size and distance to alpha Crucis, and part of the star cluster mentioned above. The star is a beta-CMa type variable. Finding South with Southern Cross – stand so pointer stars (Alpha Centauri /Beta Centauri) are on your left hand side, that is, to the left of Crux. The top of the cross and bottom form a line. Follow that line 4 and a half times the length of Crux downward from the bottom of the cross. That is very close to the south celestial pole.

You can use the point between Alpha Centauri and Beta Centauri to make another line downward that intersects the line made by Crux. Straight down to the ground from that point is very close to South. The South pole is marked by a dim star called Sigma Octantis which because it is so close to Australia is sometimes called Polaris Australis. It usually too dim to see on its own but can be located within a small trapezoid of stars. The North Star at this time is Polaris. The Sun rises in the East sets in the West, as does the Moon, thereby it easy to discern at night, using the Moon and Crux, the cardinal directions that you can use to locate your bearings.

Precession of the Equinoxes

Our mate Hipparchus is again credited with the discovery of the Precession of the Equinox – the phenomena that determines which ‘Age’ we are in – I’m sure you’ve heard the occult references to being in the Age of Capricorn or the Age of Aquarius. Lets break it down.

EQUINOX

Equinox – The word itself has several related definitions. The oldest meaning is the day when daytime and night are of approximately equal duration – In Australia – Vernal Equinox (September) Autumnal Equinox (March)

PRECESSION

When he was first compiling his famous star catalogue in the year 129 BCE the Greek astronomer Hipparchus noticed that the positions of the stars did not match up with the Babylonian measurements that he was consulting. According to these Chaldean records, the stars had shifted in a rather systematic way, which indicated to Hipparchus that it was not the stars themselves that had moved but the frame of reference – i.e. the Earth itself. He’d noticed the earths wobble. It wobbles because it is pulled between the gravitational pulls of the moon and the sun causing it to bulge in the middle and wobble. Slowly changing which stars we see.

Such a motion is called precession and consists of a cyclic wobbling in the orientation of Earth’s axis of rotation. Currently, this annual motion is about 1 degree every 71.6 years. The process is slow, but cumulative, and takes roughly 26,000 years for a full precession to occur.

What does this mean? It means if you could see the North Celestial Pole sticking out of the top of the Earth you would see that pole trace a cone shape in space as the rotation of the Earth is not perfect – and as earths orientation changes, this over time is what moves different stars into the position of North Star, which Polaris presently occupies in the North Hemisphere and Sigma Octanti presently occupies in the Southern Hemisphere.

The star next in line to become the North Star is Gamma Cephei – also known as Errai around 4000 AD. At the moment the brightness of the South Star is too piss weak for it to be any use which is why Crux is used to determine the South Celestial Pole. However, over the next 8000 years the South Star will get brighter and brighter entering Carine and Vela and Puppis better known as the hull, deck and sail of Jason's ship the Argo – Naos also known as Zeta Puppis is a star in the Puppis constellation. Around 9000 AD the South Star will be aligned with Delta Carrine which will shine far brighter than Polaris ever has.

In about 13,000 years ‘Vega’ in the Lyra constellation will be the new North Star. 13,000 years later it will return to Polaris. This wobble has historically been referred to as the Precession of the Equinoxes.

Thus, while today the star Polaris lies approximately at the north celestial pole, this will change over time, and other stars will become the “north star”. Secondly, the position of the Earth in its orbit around the Sun during the solstices, equinoxes, or other seasonal times slowly changes.

Age of Equinoxes.

Roughly every 2,150 years, the sun’s position at the time of the March, or vernal, equinox moves in front of a new Zodiac constellation. Let me explain. The earth rotates around the sun taking around 365 days per cycle. But The sun and the earth both revolve around in a bigger cycle too – and every 2150 years the Sun, which moves in a much slower cycle, is in line with one of the 12 constellations of the Zodiac that surround us. That is, it is directly opposite it, or in the House of Pisces as it presently is. Let me demonstrate. Form a ring. Okay now I will slowly walk around the inside edge of the ring, while you, walk around me. You are the Earth; I am the Sun and each of these people represent one of the Zodiac constellations. It is very similar to an analog clock with the shorthand marking hours turning around the face much slower than the minute hand.

Each Age is said to last for roughly 2150 years.

In the occult – Each Great Age is associated with a major evolutionary and cultural advancement of the species. –

ENLIGHTENMENT AND PERSONAL FREEDOM

[The end of the Age of Pisces and the dawn of the Age of Aquarius remain in dispute. The Age of Aquarius should begin approximately 2150 AD. This concerns Aeonics, for which there are many models from many occultists.]

The goal of God/The Universe is to create a perfect human being through our evolution of consciousness. At the beginning of each new age, the tendencies from history are reset and replayed. These tendencies are reintroduced with the values of the new Astrological or Great Age in a continuous cycle.

These precession cycles will continue till the goal of the divine is achieved. There are negative as well as positive traits to each Astrological sign and Mayan Great Age. It's up to us to figure out which we choose to live by...the positive or the negative. What we choose will be our experience.

ON BUILDING A PHYSICAL COMPOUND

[This was my response to the question posed by XE / OA22 on the benefits of building a physical Temple to THEM within Australia on 4th July 2007. As this issue has re-arisen I have re-affirmed my opinion on this matter with amendments where necessary.]

REASONS FOR BUILDING A COMPOUND: OTHERS

Many groups and cults have sought to isolate themselves from the world by building a commune or compound to achieve the task of solitude. Isolation is sought for many reasons but most common of which is control.

How do so many perceive the world around them? Some, very rare individuals and groups remain blissfully ignorant of the daily onslaught of propaganda – but most people, and especially those THEM can expect to deal with – are influenced to a considerable degree through media. Newspapers, TV, Emails, the Internet, Books, Pamphlets, Advertising, Billboards, Signs, Shop fronts, Logos, Symbols, T-Shirts, CD's, Food Products all carry messages; alternate messages to what most cults, whose dialectic and purpose is often extremely narrow-minded (due to being an operation of and for an ego) want their members to see, hear, or be influenced by.

This reaction to screen media by isolating a person from the full quantity of concepts/sensations to be processed and available to immediate perception is never a humanitarian drive to save people from unsavoury influences – never an unselfish act to protect people from harmful influences – but a reaction that stems largely from an individuals (usually the ego doing the enshrining via a cult following) desperation to save themselves, or more accurately, to preserve both the particular geometry that makes-up, and the geometry that is important to – the ego in charge of the operation. As members of THEM you are all highly fluent in the machinations of building maintaining and operating a cult or temple. But my concern is not to re-relate these machinations but to itemise some of them to make a point. I will be extremely brief in going over the processes to familiarise you with key points for the summary of this essay.

The inherent weakness of the ego is in its narrow-mindedness and its extreme fragility. Many gurus seek to separate people from influences that would interfere in the brain-washing (literally washing the brain with the same waves/frequency/habits/repetitions aurally/sonically/physically/psychically etc. day after day) they inculcate upon them which would lessen the chance of complete acceptance by the person of the cult and its values – and thus weaken total control over that person. This fear of lack of control is among one of the characteristics of an operation by the ego. The cultist ruled by ego is unable to face the prospect of their desire to impose control being challenged by other influences, by the totality of the world and its currents also each seeking control in a fashion over a person, and so seeks to squirrel away its members in an isolated place where they can be kept and tended to like livestock without being challenged.

The loss of new and divergent media gradually breaks a person's resistance to programming down, creates restrictions that limit action and word to the detriment of self-preservation, and may even make them completely obedient to the cult. Books, and the deep devotion people spend absorbing their contents work on a similar albeit minor type of level – whereupon if one book grabs you, it is a short step to purchasing the entire available collection to immerse yourself further. We all know how this is done so we will require no details, nor further details from this form. You may skip to the next section unless my thoughts on cultism interest you. A cult's cosmology or philosophy if you like is often as fragile in logic as the ego controlling its emission.

That is the very reason why the form arises: as a carrier. The ego is simple, idiotically so, in its aim – which is always control. Control being related to power. But control shares a ratio with hard work if you don't start the process with any power. The ego wants to go from A to A. But it can't usually do that – suffering from an inferiority complex is the reason many egos create a cult – as an exoteric monument to their inner exasperation and madness. Getting from A to B to C, to D is all hard work that will be resented because the ego only wants to get to A. But to build a cult some kind of form is needed to carry the essential tools of the cult – one set being narrative, the other set being those related to persuasion. You also need a standard set of accoutrements that go along with creating a form to entice others toward you; you need a catchy name, a catchy purpose, laws and regulations or a code of conduct, a place to gather, and the innate ability to make others feel special/unique.

For the temperament of a follower the energy required for these lengthy processes of manipulation is out of bounds – but this level of energy is all too easy for a charismatic leader ruled by the thermonuclear energy of the ego.

Once you have everyone feeling special and unique – and this is important – devoted to the leader who feeds their ego what it wants to hear – you have successfully plied the collective ego of the cult with enough delusion to act freely without the necessity of yourself having to maintain and sustain the facade of whatever form you built. The form will then stand alone and requires no further decoration or construction – it is a finished monument of automatic worship. One can then largely abandon the speeches, songs, and celebratory projection of the Coming, or stories of the Great UFO Journey, or the Age of Aquarius to your followers – who will happily carry on the delusion (without batteries required) in your name, for your name, while you snort cocaine off the wet fucked buttocks of the latest male or female conquest to join your group. With a practical carte blanche to act as you please, the cult is a success.

Congratulations – you’ve built yet another stale mediocre shrine to the carnal immaturity and lack of imagination so common of the ego and created the greatest most seductive trap of many a would-be satanic magician. A dead end. This creation is the epitome of selfishness at the cycle of expense of other human beings; a form that has filtered down in stunted maturity to parody the practices of the Church ingrained in so many. A form so much a part of us we are rarely conscious it exists – but act as parrots of the Church in repeating this process ad infinitum in nearly everything we do.

THE REASONS FOR BUILDING A COMPOUND: OURS

The original plan (c.2003) was to make enough money via infiltrating the good books of publishing houses with our works, and to pool our funds from our respective ‘jobs’ to purchase land and a house somewhere isolated and near the bush in Australia to begin ‘re-enacting’ the literary cult of the ONA. Some speculative persons have perceived this reaction to ONA to be the point of the ONA, all along. As time has gone by, and we have discussed, this would be an action that would not just set us and THEM back considerably, but the Sinister itself.

In creating a physical representation of the Order’s cultus – wherein we train others to chant, perform group rituals, induct others into the Sinister, and congregate to wear black cloaks under a moonless night, not only are we creating a self-contained and limited expression of Life but we are once again, like so many of our peers, enshrining Human-Centered Geometry and setting up the conditions for failure. Enacting once again, the schema of the Church and its hierarchical madness of degrees, and laws, and rules and restrictions – when as we all know, Form is not restricted to this myopic use. To live the literary cultus would be both foolhardy and dangerous.

Firstly, because as I have said it would reaffirm the use of forms by the Magian as a Sinister practice, i.e. reaffirm that the Magian have dictated how this war is going to play out, that the Sinister are defeated in their ingenuity to get around these entrapments, and as a final insult let the Sinister design their traps for them! MAGIC must be freed from its imprisonment in form – the magician must remember what came before crystallisation.

The idyll of such a cult sounds great on paper – but we each know the difference between paper and projection. If not a Satanic Compound we should become an Esoteric School and what can come of that practice and focus of infinitesimal little forms and practices endlessly divided into categories, concepts and constructs, all packaged tightly and neatly into colours, shapes and sizes – but a dire regression to the Occult? Wherein do passwords, secret meetings, identification, security cameras and systems, patrolling dogs, armed watchers, spies, informants, drugs, sex, paranoia, suspicion, squabbling, bitching, boasting, worshipping acolytes; a cycle of repetition and living trapped within the crystals, within the Narrative created for us, to explain us and charitably provided for us to explain ourselves to them, by the Magian, work for US? At one time, in one form or another, perhaps. But now?

Moreover, to seek to isolate people within one or even a handful of forms is to repeat the Magian program. We do not want people to run from the world, nor hide from the world dressed in black cloaks exalting the Dark Gods through thinly-disguised prayer!

But to face it in all its terrifying glory. On all its wonderful levels. Ours is not a group that fears the challenge of the Magian's presses or its media – let others read what they will, let them be influenced, just let them see influence. We ask only that they read also our studies on the context of such presses, their design, purpose and relativity.

We will never achieve disconnected consciousness while we trot out the same tired cliches the Magian has been pinning us under for years. In such uniforms, with such footsteps, repeating those words, we resemble only our enemy's fantasy and enact our enemies sympathetic magic over which their grasp of the form of Satanism is extreme. We're not dolls XE; we don't dance to the puppet-masters tunes. We faced the Abyss together and saw what/that it lies beneath. We have a duty to preserve that terror and beauty, honestly and accurately. And what is accurate is beyond the clumsy and sloppy measurements the world fumbles with for its current interpretations, especially where language and passage are concerned. What is accurate is beyond the walls of any Temple or Order however grand its oak-panels and altars – beyond the rudimentary inverting of what they lay before us.

From altering perception to releasing consciousness from the skull; dissolving forms in acid and vitriol and seeing the connexion between the universes parallel; how the macrocosm is the microcosm is the macrocosm is the other and the same; how the stars above are the cells within in one hideous-for-now loop; perceiving and understanding the extent and danger of the Magian, knowing how to destroy them once and for all.

These things cannot be taught by enshrining ourselves within walls, or by limiting the world for others through the re-enactment of a cultus – however pagan. What we do and what we know cannot be bound by walls or captured in ritual; especially the rituals of others; it is living and lives beneath, behind, and beyond. It is a drawing down of something yet to be familiar to our time, but which will one day be. The best way to see it is to SEE it. And isolation from the fullness of the world and from the fullness of perception to pursue an idyllic satanic fantasy will render the chance of genuine perception null. All factors, all facets, all dragons of the Magian must be accessible; those within, those without and those between. The enemy and its movements/monuments must be studied; not hidden from sight and mind. Meditated upon, embraced and dissected, not mediated through indirect experience and hearsay.

The Sinisterion must remain aware and cogent of the factors streaming from the Magian Wyrd, see and recognise the outer forms of the tools being used and the esoteric context and motive behind them, and if not the factors from the Magian then from the rivers that run beneath synchronicity. The Sinisterion should be able to see freely what is influencing others, what they are reading, seeing, hearing, observe the media they are being controlled with and identify how and by whom, break down the concepts being introduced and played out; so, they may, if necessary, formulate appropriate “counter”-measures. Wherein “counter” does not mean to respond in kind inversely – but to attack and weaken both the effectiveness of the original measure, countermeasure and any kind of measure.

But you cannot hope to Gather while Solidarity remains in tatters. That is why the Temple of THEM operates the way it does; it works outside of the Magian's magic, outside of their illusions, whilst using their technology against them. It doesn't repeat the same tired cycle of giving someone a spell-book and new cosmology to study and work through, filling their heads with mountains of semantic and categorical information perchance that with enough of it they can become some awesome occult mage with supernatural powers – because the powers described are usually non-existent, fantasy, or described in Magian forms using Magian language – the wet dream of failures who dared not return without something to show for all the time they spent on demonic worship. You can dabble with your incense and say whatever you like during ritual after ritual – while the Magian's forms bear down upon the world relentlessly and religiously despite your best efforts.

So many just waste their time muttering incantations and worry about burning the right coloured candles – in painful ignorance of the true scope of the enemy of Satanism.

Meanwhile the world grinds them down into dust; they get older and get treated the way the Magian wants people of our age to be treated; predetermining the trends and attitudes toward the various sectors and stages they artificially dictate with arbitrary fashions and fads where once tradition and initiation lead the wise way. Their poisonous deafening cacophony of sickening magic controls our destiny by controlling perception, and our chance to break ourselves and others free of it. The short and sweet of it is this: teenagers (quite a new marketing-based term, 200 years ago childhood didn't exist) are the most likely demographic you will encounter looking into Satanism. If they're dissatisfied, and they usually are, they're going to look for the "darkest" books, the most "satanic" groups to join, and they're all going to be missing the entire fucking point (and weapons being used) of this War.

What's the first thing people do when an animal at the zoo is born? They give it a name. They give Everything names – once the name is attached, culture takes over. We all know the difference between the named and the nameless, wordless, ecstasy. Wherein magic has no name and no form – no causality. It is an operation with laws unto itself as is the supernatural wherein what occurs usually occurs without a known or knowable name. Once it has a name, then its controllable – attachable – alterable – arguable... a form, with counter-forms, that slots neatly into pre-prepared categories for forms which are already given their moral context by other categories, oversimplification, arrogance, and the basic and ever-limiting restrictions of the human language to define/refine something.

Thus, Lucifer has changed so many times over the centuries because of his naming, a victim of endless subsequent attachments and become an ineffectual idol thrown to the anti-Christians to paw at who perform the Churches work anyway. Then of course we can witness those glimmers of US – in those who tried to move away from the stereotypical Satan and Lucifer but who failed nonetheless because they underestimated the scope of the problem – which is that most just fall right back into another form with all the right words in all the right places so harmoniously that they become seamless conspirators with the Magian empire.

THEM cannot do that. Nor can we seek to buy castles like the IOT to practice sorcery and repeat the performance of past magical acolytes. Nor can we bind together under a symbol or word or flag or standard or banner. Nothing causal fits, nothing symbolic works, but the concept of a numinous symbol beyond representation to represent potential – and which in the causal is void. We are causally separated in time and space and yet unified under the same concepts – a collective growth of consciousness appearing in a large concentration at a time when perception is mature enough to begin consciously embracing it. This is a phenomenon happening beyond the confines of a Church or any two-bit resemblance to one, beyond any one culture or set of beliefs, and despite the best efforts of the Magian to contain it.

A curious elixir of cynicism and optimism in just the right doses and just the right places is re-invigorating the War and those fighting it. Our works are making their way into hardcover and thus lasting impressions via books right across the world. Thousands of people are reading, watching, relying on us because we are different, because we are unique, and because we say we are the voice of THEM that issues forth beyond the contrivances of the ego and in the inhuman utteral pitch and frequency of the Dark Gods.

Our Temple is in the acausal, in the potential; it is magic – it cannot be contained in physicality by us because it does not come from us, or just for us – and it cannot be torn down – it comes from a different place, a place where there are no buildings, no bombs, no way to erase its architecture or its persistent voice. It is the same collective impulse toward human solidarity that has always struggled for emergence but been denied its freedom to thrive. Whether fault lies in the ego, lack of context, or the clever machinations of the Magian designed and re-designed to counter such threats to its dominion – I won't speculate on in detail. But now this impulse has come to us – six magical self's – at a time of remarkable collective synchronicity and has possibly been given its greatest chance yet.

We continue to influence, instruct and impart knowledge and insight that saves time, shatters illusions, and causes others to Remember; to look deeper, further and more carefully into the worlds around them and the worlds between them. Any person can see for themselves what can be achieved when humans act together – see what is held together by an endless stream of cars every morning and night – and as our voices grow in unison the external architecture of THEM will make itself visible. As the prophetic ONA intuited – an individual has become individuals – individuals a group – a group many groups – and now we, the Sinisterion are very close to becoming a culture. Let's not damage our good work, our collective work by regressing to using forms in the manner allowed, manner proscribed, manner dictated by the Magian; nor to giving them everything they desire in defeat on a platter via convention and entrapment in their crystallizations by catering to classical human-centred geometries of worship – but to continue dissolving the illusions above 'the great citadel' that lies beneath.

Great patience is required now: we are only a few years in but with so much appearing to have been accomplished remember that we still have more than twenty-five years of our charter to go. As was once told me: "Recognise the narrative in which you find yourself and which influences us to make mistakes. Nurture awareness of the world ethos and act accordingly."

This reply to a query by another member of THEM at that time were written in 2007 and published in OA31. It's now 2013 and we are now 7 years hence from THEM's creation/Inception in 2006 – which Temple's Aeonic Strategy to lay the foundation for a Sinister Illuminati will expire in 2036.

Our ideas have spread far and wide and united many. We have members across the world, across a very broad geographic and demographic base. True to our original premise we have attained reputation power and influence and most importantly, shared it. THEM's various forums, websites and publishing house are no longer centralised under myself but owned and run by other individuals. One in the USA. One in Germany. One in Italy. This has been achieved by doing exactly what you insist is a sickness of social atomization (I.S.S, our sign-off = In Sinister Solidarity) with something of a twist. Whilst stripping others of culture, tradition etc and just leaving them there would lead to nihilism, despair and rich pickings for opportunists willing to fill the gaps – we have made a clan/culture out of deconstructing all of these things to the point where nothing stands, – is therefore equal – and we may therefore implement, enjoy and accept the Forms that we choose to treat as valid as a dynamic sorcery using the will, the ego and the self with equilibrium and understanding of the function of each with the full understanding that all forms are is means, and only ever temporary truths.

A SINISTER BARTER SYSTEM

Imagine you want to trade your large amethyst crystal for a handful of owl feathers and a bag of lesser gemstones to carve runes. They live down the street so it's not a problem, you make the trade easily.

What if it was with someone in another state or country? Now problems arise. Let's say you don't want to use money – or don't have the money to buy the gems and feathers to make the transaction but agree to trade your items with the other party. You package the amethyst with assurances from the other party that they have or will send their items as agreed and wait for the mail. Surprise! it comes, and you and the other party are very happy not to have been ripped off by each other – (opportunism) and trust each another enough to continue trading. You have to use money to buy the packaging, insurance, tracking and to post the items – but you feel a little cleaner knowing you didn't have to exchange money with the other party, just the third party of the post office.

But what if it didn't come? What then? You email and email "Trusty64" (the other party) but no response. Days go by. Weeks. Shit. You've been ripped. For a barter system, two people trade items with no insurance but word alone. This means one party can send an item but has no guarantee that the other party will. Parties don't have assurance that posting is simultaneous either. So, one stands to get ripped off and the other gets both items.

Money's role in transactions of trade is therefore acting as security. If you send a payment via PayPal, you can claim your money back if the item doesn't arrive. If the other person doesn't want PayPal breathing down their neck or locking their account while it sorts things out they have incentive to trade fairly. And somewhere along the line, a third party is involved in distance-based trade, and so is the agency of money. Almost every way I look at it, it seems like money, is inevitable. Is there usefulness in developing a trade system between members of the Sinisterion to minimise reliance on cash transaction? Is it possible to create such a system – or must we rely on money? If we can create such a system, how to structure it? Such a system implies trust but is itself fraught with other difficulties.

Proposed below is a hypothetical system of trade between two parties using a third. But it seems to gain self-sufficiency from the system we might as well advance ideas on a sub-economy. Such a system would be easy if not for the opportunism of some users to abuse the system and so the problems with barter/trade lie with assurance/insurance.

Hypothetical Sinisterion Barter System:

Basic scenario. Two people have something they want to trade. They use a third party who brokers the deal and keeps both parties honest. The third party must be trusted and impartial. The two parties do not send the physical trade items to the third party as they would have to re-post them in respective directions.

Instead, the two parties send some form of an insurance payment – each party paying to the third party via PayPal what the item is worth (agreed upon in writing by the two parties). At this point, and presently, to me, it seems unavoidable that some form of established money is used within the system- suggestions on how to overcome this?

Ignoring this for the meanwhile:

Ideally- Both parties get their item in post (May be a wait for both parties to be at this point) Once both parties are happy, they let third party know who promptly issues both insurance payments back minus what PayPal take for their cost, and who takes 2% of the net payment left. the 2% taken out is incentive for the service provider to keep providing the service and helps fund other projects by THEM.

Now bear with me, because I see obvious problems – first being this is not actually a barter system, because the model suggests a third party who is not paid in trade but in present currency. It is a trade system.

Here are some ideas and anticipated problems/solutions for the system: Items sent must use tracking post to provide evidence of good intention. tracking number send to all other parties.

If a party does not send the agreed item they forfeit their insurance payment to the third party. (This is where most of the problems arise – honesty or just chaos is hard to gauge and all manner of things can go wrong here.)

Problem: A party insists their item did not arrive.

Solution: Postal Tracking must be provided with the barter system as evidence the item has been sent.

Problem: A party's item is broken, missing pieces, not in the condition claimed.

Solution: Media Footage of the item including the days paper must be filmed and sent to the third party and first party to indicate good intentions and that the item is as described – on the day it is posted.

Problem: The barter system does not eliminate cash but sets up a parallel system run by cash instead.

Solution: The barter system over long distances is certainly problematic. The need for some incentive for neither party to default cannot be assured between two parties. A third party is needed to adjudicate the barter and act on behalf of the defaulted. It is incentive not to lose cash to ensure the barter is transacted without issue.

Problem: party gets item but then issues cash-back.

Solution: third party does not hold cash in original account but transfers immediately to another. Party is banned from service.

Problem: first party insists item is broken – second party has shown footage of it intact prior to being sent. Postal service is therefore responsible for damage.

Breakages happen but they are rare. Party is issued their payment back.

Solution: Insurance and tracking must be placed on all items sent.

Problem: Postal service loses item.

Solution: Insurance must be placed on all items sent. There are however, many assumptions made about how the trade will be transacted and each time in these statements – but can the Sinister create its own currency, or system of trade, money-less or otherwise? Is there benefit to doing so? Would it enable an underground economy or does any form of currency necessitate these pitfalls whether using bitcoin or rocks? Is it a romantic fantasy that trusts naively in people to do the right thing without the agency of security to back itself up when things go wrong? Is it better to simply accept and find ways to funnel existing channels and currents into desired applications?

KEEPING THE BASTARD TOGETHER

– some notes on group dynamics and leadership. (Taken from an email sent outward as advice.) “So, you ask about my core values. Let's pretend I don't have different sets for different persona's/phantoms. Let's also narrow it to discuss my personal values and not those of myself as a leader or collectively for the Temple of THEM. They're pretty simple – Solidarity, Synchronicity, Empathy. THEM. It all comes down to an expertise in building the form you wish to build. A strict, hard-line form requires a cramping of the souls of others, through this you may achieve a religion, political, or cult group. A softer, flowing, esoteric form requires few such crampings, allowing others to coalesce in their own way. An individual with a very firm idea of what they want must use violence and persuasion to create a hard form.

An individual with a firm idea of what the world wants, does not have to use violence and persuasion to channel what naturally unfolds. How to put this another way: More or less, on paper, your system is perfect. In reality, the people following it, are not. Keep that in mind at all times. Alchemical analogy is useful here. Either you want to use traditional means to create a form that entraps others in that system (however liberal it may seem) and tend it a particular way, adding specific chemicals, boiling off at certain stages, judging when and how the tincture is growing and adjusting it minute by minute as necessary – for what you are trying to stave off, is chaos, an explosion. In other words, you want to play God and decide the boundaries of these people with a form or set of forms. This is at best a temporal undertaking. Consider Directive A-55: Go outside. Choose a patch of grass. Clear it so only dirt is showing. Clear it again when the grass begins to grow. Repeat indefinitely.

What happens? Does the Grass decide not to grow? Do weeds give up? People are like grass; they will always seek to grow. So, you can put your energy into a temporary undertaking OR, you can seek to advance people esoterically; and this is where adhering slavishly to a system can have both merit and breakdown. In some ways, following a system to the letter can be very good for some people, it can teach solidarity, discipline, loyalty, honesty, striving, overcoming, perseverance, patience, duty, etc. in other ways it can be very bad; it can inculcate laziness, group-think, egotism, circular thought, indoctrination, blind obedience, hierarchy etc. (This moral duality very good/very bad is only rudimentary and refers to values I uphold.) Again, it depends on what you want, and if you are able to achieve it, using the forms you select.

But no matter which: All systems require the architect to constantly balance the system and its forms between these extremes. Essentially, whatever outward rule/belief system you overlap a group with – is always going to be separate from the dynamic of that group – because rules tend not to change while people do. You can have the best ideology, most air-tight, unambiguous, virile, powerful phrasing, both inspiration and vivifying but if the people involved in the group aren't adopting it, aren't feeling it, aren't MORE than it, then there will be problems. Why MORE than it? That is particular to my value system and marks One of THEM. It depends really on what you want the group to do, why you are involved with it; for instance, if you want to explore your sexual limits with others then you need a group. If you want to train a paramilitary, then you need a group.

If you want to teach esoteric magic or engage in ritual magic, then you need a group (or at least a partner). It also depends on why those others have joined the group and what they want to get from it. Every group dynamic is different – there will be stronger people and weaker people, people who get along and people who don't, people who change when they're emotionally affected, and people who remain steadfast while the boats being rocked. But what you must understand is that you cannot expect the group to stay together if what those others are seeking, is no longer to be found there – and, with esoteric groups, people change, and grow, through experiencing those things in the group, to the point they either, leave, schism (make their own splinter group) or stay on until the group ceases to give them what they wanted. Identifying the characters, natural hierarchy, strong points (physical prowess, creative talent, silver tongue speaker etc.) and knowing how to dissolve conflict, get people to get on with each other, maintain the right energy necessary for the Work, and have all these people work together on a project(s) together, as a team or individually is an art form. All natural leaders understand this.

More than anything written down, the ability and means to do this is Intuitive. Or should be. And general points about managing a group are not really that helpful – they do not always apply, and only the Leader, can accurately assess when and where they do, to each person in the group and to the group as a whole. What is absolutely essential above all of these points – is Trust. TRUST is everything. The leaders need to trust others to be loyal, do the right thing, work with the group, do what they can to keep harmony and settle differences for the greater good – the followers need to trust that the leader will guide them through the experience they desire safely and with good conscience, that they will not be harmed or hurt, and that the leader is looking out for them while they are being guided. Even in terrifying harsh imprinting for instance – those imprinted need to trust that they will not be killed. Or in hazing, those being assaulted need to trust that those assaulting/raping/hazing them will not kill them and that this ordeal will secure them a place on the other side.

A leader needs to be able to keep secrets, to manage people, and is generally, the fulcrum around which all followers group – and with this comes the power of personality and cult following (sex, drugs, favours) or the danger of hubris – from my point of view, merely becoming another human indulgence for its own sake, overstepping ones mark, believing the hype, and crashing hard to earth. Treat your followers with respect, share power, understand yourself as a follower too, allow others to lead, encourage those better than you, encourage those around you to better you, don't let your ego get in the way when they do – because from my point of view – that is the ultimate goal of an esoteric group and its leader – to provide the foundation and graciously allow others to surpass oneself so that the Next is brought into the world on a higher plane.

All my work is aimed at encouraging others to break free, not only of their own demons, but mine, of form, of time, of space, of form itself. I urge at all junctures others back to themselves – and I remain anonymous so that no personality cult may form around me – I also use multiple pseudonyms so that praise, may not inflate my personal I – but is filtered through a phantom – thus keeping my ego safely at the right size and not blowing up out of proportion inviting hubris and disaster. I also change it regularly – for complex reasons. My core value – is worship of the Inhuman. All forms have their uses but mean nothing to me. There is only ever temporal adoption (even when it is fanatic belief to charge a form with power and validity) of any form – as part of the process of Unfolding my Wyrd.”

IN SUPRA SOLIDARITY [ISS]

The one who appoints themselves a ‘Satanist’ will immediately run into an issue that cannot be resolved – by virtue of -being- a Satanist. And that issue is that each Satanist is trying to live the archetypal character of their patron, Satan. Satan, is an anarchic, chaotic individual – an analogy apt to represent the drive of the individualised ego to raise themselves above the collective unconscious – which to do, requires no subservience, and to walk the untrodden path of inner development and psychic exploration and self-conviction where worse things than Dark Gods dwell, and where no other can join in.

That ONA indeed any group with a leader is even possible is because society needs a magician, as much as the magician wants society to need them – it is a reciprocal event that requires some to be sub-ordinate to another’s will, and one to sub-ordinate them to that will. Thus, it is, that atazoth34, is – right -, whilst you, are -right-, and yet you are both wrong and everything else in between. From the outside one can see the Anima and Animus clashing heads needlessly, but the both of you, having been provoked, cannot. It should also be noted that while ONA and its relative nexions each apparently struggle to disown the leadership of the group – this funny to watch event – is merely and nonetheless assertion of ownership using a negative scale rather than a positive one – same story, different method.

ISS – as set down by THEM, in the mss ‘In Sinister Solidarity’ contained in our Temple Manifesto and Handbook – should not be added to or subtracted from. ISS – like the Dark Gods – does not represent a rational law – but an intuitive one. To try to pin it down by re-interpreting it is to misunderstand its function. In a very loose way it describes a moral code – but the only way ISS will ever work, is when each person sits down and studies their own selves ad infinitum, finding the ego the self the shadow the anima the animus and working to broaden their solidarity with others by genuinely tapping into means to apprehending the role of the ego, self, collective unconscious, various drives and neurosis, involving extremely harsh, dangerous, and in some cases, easily deadly, self-critical analysis and query into the unknown amount of the unknown in each of us.

Only in doing that work, to raise the human race above its present state of consciousness into something altogether superhuman in comparison to now, a work so unrewarding punishing and alchemically severe that its watered down into such dilutions that even dare approach the darkness and the abyss – as “Satanism”, does one ever follow the code of ISS. It is not so simple as a sign of recognition, though it is used as one, but as a system of evaluation of the extent such work is being done by those using it, it is hardly reliable.

As far as I have seen there will never be an authentic agreement or clanship among the LhP based on conscious understanding – only the continued illusion of it – for to agree requires that the individual – being the fierce burning fire of the Satanist – be dimmed at the expense of the collective. This means the death of that fire and the dimming of the Will. Thus, ISS proposes that in each working together – in knowledge of the illusory pact of alliance created to necessitate (trick) the ego into working toward the self – alone and isolated on ourselves can enough genuine change be generated from the journey toward the utter root core – not the journey proceeding outwards from the seat of consciousness in the projected stream of babble characteristic of the conscious mind.

(Note that the ego, from my work with it, is so powerful, that is able to set up the mirage of the ‘self’ within itself and trick itself into doing nothing but that. whereas dreaming, making conscious what is unconscious, trying to see one’s shadow, and so on are such vitalising or crippling experiences that they have unpredictable alchemical effects on the conscious psyche. Thus, it is really meant – when ONA/THEM say there is communication above the abyss and communication below the abyss – and never the twain shall meet.

THE CODE OF ISS

ISS – as set down by THEM, in the mss ‘In Sinister Solidarity’ and contained in our Temple Manifesto and Handbook – should not be added to or subtracted from. To explain it to others – rather than printing verbatim (exactly) what was written about it by the Temple is to misunderstand the point of ISS which is deliberately intended to be understood as an intuitive law not a rational one. Like the Dark Ones – ISS is for those who apprehend energies as they are...

To try to pin it down by re-interpreting it is to misunderstand its function. In a very loose way it describes a moral code – but the only way ISS will ever work, is when each person sits down and studies their own selves ad infinitum, finding the ego the self the shadow the anima the animus and working to broaden their solidarity with others by genuinely tapping into means to apprehending the role of the ego, self, collective unconscious, various drives and neurosis, involving extremely harsh, dangerous, and in some cases, easily deadly, self-critical analysis and query into the unknown amount of the unknown in each of us.

Only in doing that work, to raise the human race above its present state of consciousness into something altogether superhuman in comparison to now, a work so unrewarding punishing and alchemically severe that its watered down into such dilutions that even dare approach the darkness and the abyss – as “Satanism”, does one ever follow the code of ISS. It is not so simple as to be merely a sign of recognition, though it is used as one; and as a system of evaluation of the extent such work is being done by those using it, it is hardly reliable.

Thus, ISS proposes that in each working together – in knowledge of the illusory pact of alliance created to necessitate (trick) the ego into working toward the self – alone and isolated on ourselves can enough genuine change be generated from the journey toward the utter root core – not the journey proceeding outwards from the seat of consciousness in the projected stream of babble characteristic of the conscious mind.

THE BLACK GLYPH SOCIETY

The Black Glyph Society takes its name from the concept of a ‘Glyph’ – said to be a stone or object within which memories, information or knowledge can be indefinitely stored and held until such time the glyph is accessed; and ‘black’ owing to its left-hand path bent.

The Society was formed in 2003 by the Temple of THEM as a means to archive, preserve and share black magical lore between members of the Sinisterion by creating a tradition of inter-generational storage that would serve not just present members but those who come well after us. In November 2012, ownership of the Society passed to Typhon Draconis, who strives to maintain and expand the offerings and service those who use our services have come, rightfully, to expect.

Through various means including word-of-mouth, mail, email, website, forum and direct tutoring the Society made available numerous rare and often unpublished works by various satanic and sinister organisations whose philosophies least reflected a Nazarene/Judaic style infusion and influence. Such groups included the Order of Nine Angles, the White Order of Thule, The House Ruin Sect, Order of Saturn, Ordo Sinistra Vivendi, Order of the Left Hand Path, The Temple of THEM, the Tempel ov

Blood and various other groups who were working or had worked toward a Pan-European Resurgence. The collection of texts was kept especially for Dark Initiates who showed more than a casual interest in the Dark Arts.

Since its inception in 2003, TBGS's resources have grown exponentially as other Initiates have donated to it other works of present- and latter-day magicians but the focus on purity has kept the library relatively small in comparison to the troves of material available on the occult. This specialist material, much of it from the Order of Nine Angles and THEM is held by the Society to be of profound use to the Dark Arts and thus an effort to preserve and maintain the texts held therein has resulted in many different websites where this information has been held for others to access throughout the years.

Concentrated efforts to preserve Naos, the Black Books of Satan, the Deofel Quintet and to enhance the repertoire of the ONA/THEM via unique addition such as Liber Dabih the Collected Works of David Myatt, *C*R*U*X* an amalgamation of the older Naos texts with the Sorcery of THEM, the Star Game texts, Oto Anorha, Diaries of a Devilworshipper and the Sorcery of THEM have ensured these texts remain accessible and available in high quality hardbound print. The foremost world archive of ONA ephemera, the BGS seeks to maintain and expand the library of works available to the Sinisterion.

Access to Society manuscripts is limited and many of the works in the Glyph remain unpublished and publicly unavailable following requests by the donator's or are given only to those with a working interest in those subjects within the Temple of THEM. The aim of the Black Glyph Society is to keep alive for future initiates the strains of magic that pertain to the Sinister and have been shown to be effective and instructive. The Glyph is an unwritten pact of alliance, viz. an attitude, within the Sinister and formed of individuals associated with it in some way who preserve, share and maintain files and archives of these materials for the general Sinisterion. The Society is still quietly active, and still serving the Satanic/Sinister community.

ABOUT MVIMAEDIVM

Mvimaedivm is a guide, it does not seek to have all the answers, as I do not have all the answers – all questions being subjective. The aim of Mvimaedivm is a scale of seven degrees* that operates by gradually increasing the level of intensity and complexity of its writings from book to book (via archetypal exploration of different characters) seeding real experience from a young man regarding the world of Satanism and the world in general in the consciousness of young people such as myself. It is exactly the kind of grimoire I'd have liked to have read when I was starting out on my journey.

Taking the type of person (with potential) that exhibits pseudo-satanic mantras (that I have been) from scratch – and introducing hir to a massive variety of increasingly difficult concepts intended to awaken lasting (and hopefully permanent) alchemical changes takes time, just as it took me time. Too much, too fast and the points made go over ones head (the Emanations of Urania for example). Much must be broken down for the average person plagued with misinformation and unreal expectations of Satanism, and in ways that I see fit, it has been and will be. I say Seven, because after consideration, I have decided to embark on the writing and illustrating of two more volumes of Mvimaedivm, bringing the current total of Five, up to Seven.

ON THE SPECIAL EDITIONS:

The Appendix to Mvimaedivm has been given page numbers, and borders for convenience. Those unfamiliar with the Order of Nine Angles will find most of the mysterious terminology used in Mvimaedivm explained by a selection of ONA Manuscripts in this Appendix.

Volume I AS AZAZAEL is now fully illustrated with my artwork, includes a table of contents, page numbers, borders, additional material and extra contextual explanation. I will not be altering this version in the foreseeable future. Consider this edition complete and up to my personal standards.

Volume II THE RISE OF DEVILWORSHIPPR follows suit with borders, page numbers and a list of contents, as well as large numbers of new illustrations; yet I also felt book II lacked a GREAT deal of body and have extensively altered, re-arranged, added to, and expanded book II to meet my own standards of perfection as near as possible. I am happy with it, and consider it complete enough to present.

Volume III THE SUN AND THE SERPENT is a 240 page, 5 MB monster with new additions, revelations and illustrations: inc. rare Naos tarot imagery of the first sketches I made when setting out to design it, my works with the Tempel ov Blood, and a great deal more. As is the current trend; page numbers, borders, table of contents etc have been added for ease of read and digestion of my readers. This is by far the greatest corpus of my writings gathered together yet, but I have four additional books to come.

Volume IV LIBER TERROSA RA is a 250-page collection of emails that show the character of Tnepres Ra in his raw state; a state the reader cannot really perceive from the carefully written and structured writings of Ra, without extended coverage of his behind-the-scenes persona. In Book IV, I write about the dangers of becoming too aethereal or detached via thinking one has attained great wisdom and knowledge. Although I had found self, there were many more pitfalls that lay ahead of me, esp as regards the heights of a satanist, there being temptations to turn to zen, to god, to complete the journey and renounce Satan. Being too detached from the matrix, I drifted toward being the extreme of a Star-man; unable to get motivated, touch the matrix, and to lose my physical drive. I feel it is important for anyone reading Mvimaedivm to see the human side of Ra, and that even with self, it is easy to fall prey to one of the many psychological traps that continue to threaten progress. This Organism cannot be broken into chapters but for convenience an effort has been made to separate the volume into sections, however arbitrary the names of the sections may be. Book IV is transitional in nature, the first three having lead you through the Solar/Masculine Organic, have been but a bridge to this eldritch rainbow beneath the Moon. In Brief: Book IV is a platonic-style dialogue between Tnepres Ra and Sor Terrosa in BLACK MAGIC; discussions range from ONA, the Tempel ov Blood, Aeonics, the Sinister, our own Experiences, THEM, and an innumerable number of other topics – but mostly comprises the satanic illustrations and writings of Sor Terrosa the feminine androgyne; the startling revelations of a powerful LHP sorceress, rare for their intensity, and rare for the world to witness the writings of a truly Sinister Woman. The common dynamic between members of THEM, and indeed between Terrosa & I, is one of empathy and shared journey. I owe Terrosa a great deal for the many years we have wandered together, and Book IV is but a small tribute to this astounding woman of the Sinisterion.

Volume V is about THEM. The experimental creation and physical continuation of two realities, one in which THEM is like ONA: a proto-tradition of rumour, suggestion and mystery. The second, in which THEM is grounded as an ideal shared by a select group of people inc. myself that actively try to presence the Sinister. Volume VI will be a greater psychological summary of the first five books, putting again into even greater perspective the overall structure and geometry of the journey I have taken that others may understand there lie even more detailed and esoteric undercurrents beneath what has been written with very specific memes and energies in mind.

Volume VII will be my own grimoire, the Book of Rising Qaos, and I hope to explain many of the manipulation methods, infiltration techniques, invention of personas, glamour, practical destruction and creation in the finest detail my skills as a writer allow me. Beyond that, I have exhausted all I have to say from the first four Septenary cycles of my life.

SR,
Tnepres Ra

SECRETS OF MVIMAEDIVM

There are multiple layers to the tome Mvimaedivm, esoteric and exoteric. One layer is to view the passage in terms of Alchemical processes. Another layer is in its presentation as the format in which it appears now was not always the case.

Following the footsteps of the ONA it was decided to discard Old Aeon trappings of explanation and develop a New Aeon approach to sharing one's path via magical diaries. In regards to the layout and overall theme of Mvimaedivm, a decision was made to compromise between the Grimoire-approach by altering the name of the volumes to 'The Diary of a Devilworshipper' in order to use the tools and trappings the black magical matrix provides with the hope of ensnaring the curious on their own terms and with luck teach them something before they realised what and just how hard black magick really is and returned to their life of Satanic charades.

Some mention has been made of the Archetypal Triangle formed by the first three. Book III was the first to be written, Book II the second, and finally Book I the last. It goes without saying that the second two are vastly superior to that of Book I – As Azazel.

Partly due to the fact that this stage of magic is only that of the dabbler, little more than a brief bio of the Author is supplied to show a contrast in the depth of magical change when compared with Book II or III. Book I, II and III form a Solar/Masculine Triangle that is opposed by the Lunar/Feminine magic of The Sorceress Sor Terrosa in Book IV. This Quaternity expresses an overall Personal working toward magical androgyny – being not an end to Personal Growth but rather an esoteric recitation of the formula by which the Author has striven to Become – just one example of many on the Sinister Path.

Books V, VI and VII no longer deal with the Personal Sphere but the next stage of evolution according to the ONA's system of Aeonics. A Cult/Group – and the formation, rise and plateau of that Group [The Temple of THEM] in a similar process to that of the Personal Sphere followed by Azazel, DWR, Tnepres Ra. This process forms a triplicate of energies + the all-defining element of Chaos that leads to Change that leads back to the Triangle, and so on...

This formula comprises an experimental form and theory of 'Narrative' or 'Archetypal' magic that is rooted in a 'perceived' understanding of the ONA's Aeonics, Jung's Individuation, and the Perennial Philosophy of the Hero. Whether or not this understanding holds true will be decided over the next 28 years while the Temple of THEM attempt to implement their shared understanding in the creation of a new nexion on Australian Soil. The extensive library in the Temple of THEM owes much to the merits of the personal process laid out above which is centred on an understanding of "Shape-shifting" exalted in many key tenets of THEM including Change, Synchronicity, Form, the Matrix, the Original Chaos and other elements of our black magical repertoire.

Over the course of thirty years, [now 28] and thus the course of most of its magicians' natural lives, the Temple of THEM will continue to implement its understanding and its current of Narrative Magic to change the course of Australian Satanism toward something genuinely hideous and membranous yet to reveal itself and obliterate the soft new-age Occulture of Satanic Practice here before it can become a Tradition. Mvimaedivm is a part of this – offering our collective experience and knowledge in black magic is another.

It is hoped that this divergent attempt to catalogue the Sinister Path of an initiate whose path records transcending boundaries and obstacles of the Occult Labyrinth, with raw honesty in the telling of his failures and successes – without recourse to the classical dogma of opposites, occult/old aeon "satanic" trappings or reliance on temporal form to qualify or dictate that success – will encourage further attempts using Jungian and Self- Honest vehicles to produce further "Grimoires" of this type – enabling a cultus of the Self to diffuse the extraordinary lies and for the very few, enable the beginnings of apprehending what cannot be apprehended, only hinted at, the 'occult script within nature' as it has been called. It would be optimal for the Sinister were such approaches to replace the ignorance of the LaVeyan schools and real Insight and magical understanding to be developed.

Only time will tell whether we are successful in our endeavour [which is viz. our Wyrd] – or have wasted our lives. Thus far, we are cold and sure of our magic.

ISS,

I VS. WE

What is writing but the attempt to convince yourself of truths, the unconscious attempt to talk to yourself that gravitates toward outward expression. It seems that I must deflect these thoughts from being addressed directly to myself and not write -I- but -we-. Why is this? It's simply because of the Ego's functions. It hates being talked to – it presumes to know all these things and then to be able to instruct others – this is its sense of power, entitlement, knowledge that reinforces it. But it does not like it when it writes to itself. This resistance – which you can feel – in itself exposes a function of the Ego neatly. It is somehow uncomfortable at best, painful at worst to speak to oneself – because the Ego hates to be lectured, it only likes to lecture.

We have such a clear view of ourselves as an inside presence that is designed to speak outwardly – that we rarely stop to think, who am I kidding by writing 'we' – this letter, this lecture, essay, it's really for me by me – its thinking out loud for my own benefit. These are truths that I hold, things I need to hear, ideas that I didn't know I had inside of me. This is a conscious stream being directed outward when it should be directed inward. I am generalising by saying we – is it because I fear sounding arrogant, self-absorbed, narcissistic than I don't write -I-? Or because it seems like more people do it, agree with it, are involved in it that I write We? Am I talking/appealing to the reader when I write we? Am I trying to say, everyone else does it, you should too? When what I really mean is, I think it, so I should too. Is -We- in fact the external world or audience, or is it in fact my collective elements of consciousness that I mean by saying we? Is We in fact just I? 'We' sounds objective, I sound subjective. 'We' sounds more convincing because it does not sound like I am isolated and alone on doing it, saying it, being it. But are We all alone? And is that We, my collective yet again? Or all my readers?

We would like to think we are in control of our psyches, but we really aren't. Or, I would like to think I am in control of my psyche, but I am really not. Imagine re-reading this article – and every time I wrote we, you instead replaced it with -I- meaning, me, the author. It would take on an entirely different shape, it would be seem more vulnerable, less authoritative, less convincing. Why don't we write I? The same reason our unconscious doesn't ram the truth of our behaviour up our asses with sharp incisive blades that devastate our sense of self when we dream but dances around our delicate sensitivity with endless arrays of symbolism that slowly leads us to make the conclusions ourselves consciously. It HURTS when we are honest because we are not used to it. We're not taught to be SELF-HONEST with ourselves and we see a world full of people that are in complete denial – very, very few writers use I. We're told the world is reality, the truth, the authentic, and we believe it because it's impossible to be self-honest in a world where everyone else is in denial.

And this again, takes on a different meaning when 'everyone else' is taken to mean not you, your friends and the rest of the population, but my psychic population as a writer. Books are possible, because we are not self-honest. You think I wrote this book for you, and on some level, I think I wrote this book for you – but maybe, I wrote it for me. And if everyone wrote books for themselves – there'd be no need to publish them. Books are possible because we are not directly self-honest – we take a round-about way of being so, the equivalent of dancing around the dreamer using ever more symbolism because for some reason, we fear using the word -I- instead of -we-. I closes you off – we lets you in. When I write we, it allows you to share my thoughts, to be part of the audience who will either agree with me or disagree with me – but you can do so because you think I am speaking to you and others, inviting comment, inviting participation. You cannot question what I think, because I think it, it is mine and it is subjective – it will have been thought and be thought regardless of what other think because it is my thoughts.

But if I open the door to say these are our thoughts, this is what we think – then that involves you. I am then telling you what you think – and if you agree you'll praise me or nod your head, and if you disagree then you'll dismiss and rebuke me and shake your head. If it makes no impression, it really doesn't matter what you do – because the point of writing books is to ideally curry favour or disfavour, because an author doesn't care if the book makes no impression – for they've no way of knowing, only when it makes some impression do they care, or know.

When I tell you what “we” think you're then in a position to comment because I am involving the public – and you will feel one way or the other about being grouped in with any generalisations I make [particularly your Ego will] that therefore involve you and your consent. But when I speak my private thoughts, I am not asking for you to be involved and books that do not involve the reader – are awkward to read because we feel we are intruding or not being spoken to. There is no participation – and that, is the key to books being popular, participation. We, not I. But all books, are written to the self.

THE POWER OF WORD

Lat. verbum = the word of the German << wort >> stands in its meaning for the simplest self-important part of a language. It comes from the mittelhochdeutsch wort (word, name), the althochdeutsch wort (word, speech, statement, report, bid, contract, reputation, work) the Germanic Wurd, wurdam, the Indo-Germanic uerdho, urdho, where the Indo-Germanic Uer means as much as: to say, speak.

„In principio erat verbum et verbum erat apud deum et deus erat verbum.“

There lies a creative force and power in the spoken word, as we not only see in the Christian faith i.e. John's Gospel, but also in the eastern traditions (in Tibetan Buddhism), in Indian tribes of North and South America (Hopi Indians), or the aborigines of Australia and the Egyptians (Mysteries of Memphis) are traditions which indicate that the world was created by the word, meaning 'tone' or 'sound'. I think we humans have – as the divine beings that we are – learned to cause effect through language (words and music). The current practice of various belief systems still proves this today. In Bon for example, a shamanistic religion in Tibet that predates Buddhism and still exists today, the deceased is during his/her Bardo guided by certain chants from the Tibetan book of Death.

The effect of the language includes the power of creation, but also houses the potential for destruction. In Huna for example, an ancient shamanic nature religion of the Hawaiians, exist – according to the reports by Max Freedom Long – techniques of praying someone to death, similar to the Totbeten in medieval Europe or the Aboriginal Bone Pointing.

But even the everyday person uses this power of the word and sound, the magic of Thoth. Words are tools of our intentions. They are sometimes a weapon and I think this is how you should just deal with it – carefully and with caution.

The Word As Information Carrier

Through the word, or rather, the language, we are able to hand down information / knowledge and preserve it. Through writing it became possible to keep and spread knowledge well beyond the life of the people who possessed to a much wider audience than is possible in the transmission from mouth to ear.

By preserving the words the diversity of perception and thoughts manifested in the Scriptures. Development requires diversity and even contradictions, so that we can experience ourselves through these and can orientate ourselves by the 'others'. The invention of printing then further accelerated the development of humanity extremely. Through the reduced production-costs Book-knowledge was made available more cheaply and faster and hereby accessible to a wider audience. The computer age and the global networking led to a veritable flood of information. That this 'progress' turned to be both a blessing and a curse, not only demonstrates the phenomenon of Writing Culture. It makes in my eyes clear, how important it is to get to the bottom of something and to question so-called 'authorities'.

Even the knowledge of the importance and impact of language helps sometimes to a more harmonious and therefore more energetic exchange – be it private or professional life. The plea of the lawyer is a prime example of the power of words. Energy follows attention, respectively intention. Language/tone is a tool to control this energy exchange. It is therefore important and rewarding to develop a kind of language hygiene and -care.

By language hygiene I refer to both the quality and quantity of the spoken word, in the sense of 'less is more'. It is the focus on the essentials with which we achieve by less effort often more effect.

In the beginning of each communication, it is important to first define ones meaning of terms/words for everyone involved. Thus, we prevent misunderstandings by ensuring beforehand that everyone is talking about the same. To integrate this practice into everyday life will help benefit but is often underestimated. It's amazing how many misunderstandings can occur every day, just because people failed to provide a common basis.

Language is life force. If we speak only inattentive for the speech's sake – the French have a word for this (tchatcher) – we are not masters of our energies and exhaust or let us been exhausted by others very quickly. Because there are people who in this way, consciously and unconsciously tap into the energies of the interlocutor. I experienced this myself with a woman I used to call my friend. She called me often and involved me into a conversation where she made foremost negative comments or reported mostly negative experiences. Her rather destructive talk disturbed me and I did not like to listen – and became inattentive. Instead of pointing this out to her clearly and stop the conversation, I kept silent, out of politeness, which I nowadays consider being a sort of laziness. I pretended being listening with interest when I was with my mind far away.

It surprised me to find myself exhausted and tired after those conversations. Through the remark of my sister who is a very sharp mind and watcher I found out that I was unconsciously giving away my energy to this woman. Consciously or unconsciously she obviously belonged to the species of energetic vampires. Only our own concentrated awareness spares us such losses and enables progress. It is important to speak the right words clearly at the right time.

Words of Power

Say what you mean and you get what you want.

In the word lies power. With speech we shape like creators our own reality. I say our as there exist great differences in the languages and successively in the reality of the respective people. Language does not only create, but first and foremost separates (just like the sword cuts the air – or at times the head from the torso) because language can hinder us to see things as they are. I experienced in a sort of ‚Gnosis‘ during my work with the spirit of Belladonna. Most clear was nonexistence of the seeming constants Time and Space.

I could transport the experiences from my altered state of consciousness emotionally and mentally – but could not ‘translate them’ into any language I know. (not into one I know like English, German, French). There were no words existing for these feelings and in parts my perceptions contradicted vehemently the laws of the languages at my disposal. It stroked me that the term, ‘Time’ in those languages was created to condition the people growing up in this language, and herewith limited their perception. This is only one of many examples and I was very angry when I became aware of this. And from the anger raised the question: Why?

From a Linguistic point of view, it is the characteristic of the German language that it creates abstracts and stiffness by strong substantiating. In the example of the word Time, we see how by using this certain word form (subject) time is something fix, star and by this becomes measurable. It is different in the language of the Hopi (north American native tribe) where there such word like ‘the time’ does not exists but rather a verb for it like ‘it times’. This makes clear how language creates subjective reality and conditions us. We see that our perception is strongly depending on the possibilities of the language we grow up with. We only perceive what we know what we can compare and resonate with, just as the natives of South America did not ‘see’ the Spanish Armada at the horizon.

I believe that such development is encouraged by unawareness, by the fact that people are not critical. Since perception as such is loaded with projections of the unconscious and hereby rarely objective many things, such as a ‘constant’ Time, is pretended to them as being real. The trick here is that it goes unnoticed. A lot of things enter people’s consciousness unnoticed and hereby create their reality, which again conditions, limits and even hinders them in their development and perception of what there truly is. Maybe such thing, that we call time, is not constant but changing... just as our reality may be only a subjective projection, even a mere illusion...?

It is important to be aware and vigilant to such conditioning through the language. Only then can we use language and tone for our intentions and influence a development, or intentionally bring about a wanted result.

“TEMPLE” VS “TEMPLE”

Imagine that I have two forms to work with, the Church of Satan, and the Temple of Set – is either one of them right, or one of them more correct than the other? ~ ~ ~ Questions like ‘Is either one of them right or more correct than the other’ may be a well-meaning division that seeks to simplify the subject matter so as to delineate the choices, but this question, by virtue of even being asked, cannot help but pose further problems. These problems always eventuate in the instant that just One form or ideal is held up as a mode of heurisy – that is to say, as a means or model used as the base or ground from which one proceeds.

No ideal and no form is ever or can ever be singular in nature but exists as a multiplicity, – its very presence divides space – which is to say that any supposed singularity possesses attachments that come with it whether one likes it, or accepts it, or not. If we say No, then we automatically posit the existence of Yes. Without Yes, No cannot be understood because it has no context against which to be compared – no tension of opposites as it were. White, gives us the tension of Black, but then also Grey. If we say Right, then we automatically posit Wrong, but we also posit Left which in turn posits Up, Down and direction in general – which cannot be without supposing Space in which to move in said directions – which then supposes the absence of space, non-movement, and so on. One could liken this to the advent (possibly invent?) of numbers. One comes into being. It is only natural that with nothing but one to imagine, it is imagined against itself. And supposes two. Two and One supposes Three... A process like this “inherent multiplicity” is suggested to be at the heart of the Big Bang Theory. These may seem like simplistic examples – but so many times have I not taken them into consideration despite ‘knowing’ the power of my own mind to set up 23 currents in my way of thinking that I think it useful to re-iterate them.

The powerful logic of the Greeks sadly falls all too often into disuse in favour of absurdity. The moment we posit something, we immediately bring into being an entire army of alternate and connected aspects that go along with it. A metaphor for this “inherent multiplicity” is to be found in an old story that goes when John the Baptist held up his hand in the sign of the Benediction – on the wall behind him his shadow correspondingly made a sign called the Malediction. Forms behave very similarly to this. Forms however are multiplied exponentially each time they are subject to interpretation, they do not have just a shadow, but possess a mirror image, a reflection, a refraction, a description, analogy, simile, relative spaces in time, and an undetermined number of aspects limited only by human imagination.

Largely these multiple aspects are conjured forth when form is evoked or expressed through language— language cannot help but create attachments to any form brought into being and then proceeds to add attachments even to the attachments until the form is layered under a thick crust of illusions. Were we able to strip away every element of this crust we would find, in a sense, empty space denoting the original formlessness from which interpretation drew the particular form forth. For in any act of interpretation, say when one looks at a tree, one subjectively isolates only part of the space and visible contents of the world’s totality (the Black Clay) and moulds it with shapes, names, area, description and other values that break the whole into manageable chunks – i.e., one harnesses a particular and partial idea and pulls it out of the greater whole – then treats that partial aspect pulled out as a whole itself. I think this is because everything we bring into being is grounded in morality.

Morality is an inescapable filter kept in place in part due to the language we use and the way it behaves. Latin, being the root of English, was a language developed by the Church. It was cobbled together from many other languages and was designed to be a universal language that would breed out the languages of the pagans. Because of the intent inlaid within it – it expresses a particular ethos, viz. the ancient ethos of Christianity, and this ethos is grounded in the Either/Or mode definitive of morality. What the world was like before morality I should love to know – but at this time, Morality is a prison that binds language to express itself in time and space and through a tension of opposites. Most people don’t appear to think too hard about what our language is and does or how it operates at this level – at its prime magical base. However, I do. For example: when we posit anything, i.e., “Timmy’s hat is green” we use ‘Is’ to isolate and exclude Timmy’s hat from being other colours, from being any other type of clothing, or from being anyone else’s hat. “Is” is itself a moral certitude and a positivism. As I have said above, in affirming a positive form or set of forms, we instantly set up a set of negative forms and vice versa. But this is not out of ignorance per se but because we really cannot help it – there is a duplicity (2) and multiplicity (more than 2) inherent in the very essence of language that sets off the forms we create against their negative and at the same time summons unwanted attachments.

For instance, we assume Timmy is a person, that the person who made the statement knows what green is, that it is in fact a voiced statement not perhaps some written sign, that Timmy is a person's name, and that there is a hat at all. We make vague logical conclusions because these words and their combination into this sentence bring with their existence, certain attachments – and these steps are the foundation of communication. Yet as we discern sentences from words, the same process applies to words from letters. While the word Timmy contains the isolated letters of T, I, M, M, and Y – which mean little by themselves, their combination brings mental assumptions forth. I.e., we immediately picture the combination of these letters as a name, viz. Timmy – and assume that Timmy is a person. We get a sense of a physical body, perhaps a boy, wearing a hat. A green hat no less, but what colour green do we picture? Dark green, olive, verdant, lime, bright, blue-green, emerald? We would likely all differ in interpretation of that detail because the sentence does not instruct us as to which green. That information is missing.

Yet, while our mind is processing which green the hat might be, it has probably already jumped to the conclusion that Timmy is a person, not perhaps a dog, or a manikin, or even a girl – and already built up a certain picture, a certain prejudice about Timmy and the green hat. For the purpose of this exercise, it really doesn't matter what colour Timmy's hat is – (dark green) but serves as an example that we often process information in a certain manner without questioning important parts of that information or indeed our own information processor.

My point here, however, is that while we may all make different assumptions – we will nonetheless all be forced to use the same vehicle to do it, flaws and all, viz. language – and are thus each unconsciously constrained in our available modes for interpretation. While numerous studies into linguistics and communication have time and again eventuated in the understanding that we cannot really ever understand one another – because we are not aware of this particular prison there is very little opportunity to develop alternate means by which to communicate. One of the infuriating problems with form is that they are impossible to grasp without using more form – owing to the fact that no form can ever exist singularly. If instead of asking 'which organisation is right' we were to ask, 'right for who or for what' – we might think it possible to arrive at a more definitive answer – to question the question and assess whether it is the right one to ask. But as you can see from the ontology created by trying to define right by defining right, we only promote the creation (and negatives) of many more forms. Y to the power of infinity. We end up more deluged than before in information and forms with the x amount of shadows, reflections, opposites and attachments they cannot help but bring with them. The idea of something being 'Right' in itself – as if there were some one true meaning – is to mistake (or deliberately ignore – Christianity, I'm looking at you!) the abstracts used to define another abstract as every bit as objective as the primary abstract one seeks to define. In other words, we invent things (T), to validate something else we have invented (I), and if we manage to convince ourselves with enough words that this thing we have invented actually exists (X) we tend to mistake our tools and our inventions as real too.

For instance, to make my point, it is necessary to believe in or summon up the concept of Reality itself couched in a whole host of others concepts in order to convey the concept I am trying to convey. This labyrinth of logic that characterises conceptual thought works marvellously where humans are concerned – so long as it's never looked at too closely. When it is – it all falls down. Here is another example that uses the Temple of THEM. The Temple of THEM (an abstract) was characterised as being based on faith in Synchronicity (further abstract) for example. So, one abstract was used to validate (prop up) the other which then created a base of abstracts that supported one another and to which all manner of other abstracts could then be attached – including the validation of the process of its creators connecting abstracts to begin with.

Each abstract brings with it an illusion of solidarity (of form) but also visible and hidden duties and boundaries – which boundaries are often not detected until certain conflicts occur due to the increasing complexity of one's belief system. What one effectively does when they ask 'Which group is right for me?' Is to narrow down the infinitesimal possibility of choices available from the infinite collective. Perhaps this is because to grasp the scope of the world with all its complexity would overwhelm the senses – or perhaps it is precisely because the world has been broken into so many chunks from its original simplicity, with names, ology's, onomy's, ism's and so on that it seems much more complicated than it is – that a process of mental mapping takes place filling spaces with thousands of names for objects and items and people and their combinations so as to make space seem extremely crowded. – especially when the human automatically itemised the contents of this space.

Consider some of the many alternate options their question has closed off to them – they could have chosen from a wider set of groups instead of just the two; they could have flipped a coin to decide their choice; but they have already locked themselves into giving a particular answer just by asking a particularly phrased question. They have even imposed upon themselves a duty to answer their question. They have asked 'Which' – this choice of words has locked them into an inevitable 'one form or the other' based decision limited by the content they have selected to focus their decision on. They have said 'group' – narrowing down their answer even more – since the question now precludes individuals and possibly even selecting oneself. Moreover, they have themed their choices, choosing between two satanic based groups.

They have said 'Is' – denoting a positive affirmation (thus creating its corresponding negative – which group ISN'T right for me?) of one of the groups. They seek something to Be and have locked out the option to not Be that something. They have said ‘Right’ – imposing a moral value judgement upon the question which will further limit the answer based on the strictures of their statutes of morality. They have said ‘for’ indicating an unconscious belief that the object in question is something they can take from or believe is meant for them. Thus, they have made value judgements already about the groups that will affect their final decision. And they have also said ‘me’ – and here is where it gets tricky.

What is a ‘me’? Well, what will decide which group is right? Will it be me? Or will it be you? Will it come down to a comparative list of their benefits and the common-sense of their movements? If so then what will you base that comparison on – what do you consider beneficial? So many variables... I have a way to simplify them all. If you say to me that the Temple of Set is more superior to the Cos – it is irrelevant what I think unless I am seeking to impose my will upon you. What if I am not? I am only compelled by your opinion to believe that you have an opinion. But the content of your opinion is beside the point unless again I am seeking to impose my will on you. If I disagree with your opinion? Do I, like so many do, then set up logical arguments, moral based judgements, and opinions of my own, in a careful arrangement to weaken your statements, and perhaps even your personal character – thus showing how the form I follow is better than the form you follow, and attempt to prove that I am a better judge of things than you?

Typically, yes. This is precisely what I would do, return comment with an argument, response, or discussion – whatever you want to call it. Though whether I answer nicely or aggressively put forth a reply makes no difference overall in what I would be doing at a primal level – which would be attempting to exercise my will upon you or others who can exercise their will upon you by seeking control, of you, of events, of the singular space the ego can occupy, because only one ego can dominate a given space at any time. But in the end – when opinions clash – can anyone win? Sometimes, someone will back down – accede to someone else’s point of view, perhaps diplomatically so as to keep their own view by widening it enough to fit in the view of their opponent.

But more often than not, when neither party will accede, comments turn away from the subject matter and toward the personal judgement and character of each person involved. I believe this shows the true struggle going on beneath the illusory battle to ‘be right’ – which is not primarily to prove one’s opinion or forms against someone else’s per se, but to vie for the limited room allowed to prove will to power. Conversations, however tame or meek, are a direct attack by one ego on another that sometimes use indirect or rather, ‘incidental’, means such as a labyrinth of forms and concepts that the ego believes in and upholds, purely to start fights by having something to defend. The only way to win – is to never play the game.

But there is a vital piece of the puzzle missing at this point and it is this: The only way to make any judgement at all is to first have some kind, any kind, of belief – which belief (sans form) immediately shapes our blank slate – into a particular geometric shape. This shape will attract other shapes and build a total shape that by will by virtue of its nature fit with/in/against some shapes but exclude others. That is to say, its own geometry, its own nature, will preclude certain types of other geometry and certain natures from ever interacting with it, just as if a wall was built or a line drawn in the mental sand that says to various forms and ideals ‘you can come in because you fit my ideal’, but ‘you must stay out there because you don’t’. This notion is best captured in the popular and eternal ideology created by humanity that voices itself as the ‘us’ and ‘them’ division.

Naturally this division tends to find a voice in the most basic differences of geometry – political concepts that have developed such as ‘Race’, religious concepts that have developed such as ‘True Believer’, or scientific concepts that have developed such as ‘Facts’. Unfortunately, though I see some interesting connections – a discussion of this process in relation to the mind with its habit of repression, the unconscious, the self and so on would take me too far from the subject matter at hand – but I expect the reader may have already drawn their own conclusions about the relationship of these matters to their and others psyche.

If I can return to the matter of attachments for a moment. All indications are that the total number and nature of attachments (being suffuse) that accompany forms cannot with any sagacity be predicted, expected or even consciously recognised in any sort of entirety. At best we have vague semblances of what we believe in that we solidify with an armour of abstracts (such as words). These attachments can make life difficult when they drive our will without our will knowing it. Consider the person who joins an Aryan group because he agrees with the noble sentiments espoused by the Nazi’s of fatherland, unity, brotherhood – but correspondingly becomes tarred with the attachments of that form without his consent – i.e. tarred with the brush of the swastika, antisemitism, the holocaust, Gestapo cruelty, and all manner of associations that have attached or been attached to this form and its signs. Whether they want them or not, our Aryan has just become a race-hating Nazi in the eyes of many. In effect, his ‘me’ has been changed by the forms with which he associates. It matters little how eloquently he tries to explain his interest is only with those aspects of the philosophy he admires – because he is enmeshed in a sticky web of forms and their attachments both unpleasant and pleasant, the Benefaction and the Malediction, and, so are the many others that will condemn him. Those that might condemn him do so because they too are enmeshed in their own webs of form; perhaps their forms are centred around Semitic pride and hate for Neo-Nazis and the different associations they make to a holocaust or Hitler.

Ideologically speaking they may be at opposite ends of the political spectrum. Yet they are both unified, involved in the same process of being controlled by forms to which they attach/detach or are attached/detached by whatever cause, mired in moral judgement. Before I finish up, I will take the opportunity to quickly duck off into the tricky and dangerous ground of ‘immorality’ and ethics where such a paring down of these respective modes in effect suggests that both are equal; that killing a baby with a sledgehammer is equivalent to patting a kitten on the head. In other words, that everyone is as guilty or blameless as the other because they have no control over the forms that drive them. If I can imagine for a moment that it is possible at all to escape morality; this is exactly what I believe to be the case. Without imposing some kind of morality on our judgements – no thought or deed, event or person, can be judged one way or the other. They cannot be judged at all – for judgement rests on the supposition of morality.

What constitutes/validates morality is both individually and socially determined by the combination of 23 current held by each person and by the total collective. Responsibility for morality rests with the individual who is held to have free will and the wherewithal to make moral decisions, but laws denote an expectation to follow a certain decree of the masses. The threat of punishment stops most of us spiralling out of control to serve self-interest.* But whether morality is another human construct that we have acquired, or is something innate, who can say. It is a moral judgement for me just to say having this type of judgement is as good as it is bad. Yet it is also moral for someone to insist that they are immoral – since morality contains within its form the tension opposite – viz. the very option of immorality is innate/implicit in morality, so it is a tautology to try to create morality’s opposite. Nothing can be immoral.

Whatever the ethics involved, whatever we choose to consider to take into account in making our decision – is generally up to the forms we uphold. Some of us will filter our decisions to compliment various forms or group consensus or some ideological premise believing it with all our heart to be our choice. The problem with ethics and coming to some conclusion about what is definitively right or wrong is a problem of having to resort to subjective morality and subjective values, the result of which can be seen in the constant warfare and bloodshed humanity shows when forms clash. I believe there are no objective rights, or wrongs, or values. I therefore cannot fairly say with any authority what is right for you, or for anyone else, but only what is right for me insofar as my freedom/prison allows me. The more forms I attach to myself, the more I imprison myself. And that is why I believe conversation, however selfless it paints itself, seeks at all times to be or become an exertion of will by both parties.

Assuming the reader has taken any of these points into some sort of consideration – and I ask again what you think to be ‘you’ – what is right for you – I can presume that enough natural habit has been challenged and conscious reflection brought to the fore to give you cause to reconsider what we really say with each word we use, what we do with each word we use, and the spiderweb that results when we use them in any combination.

At the start of my talk I wrote “So now we have two forms to work with, the Church of Satan, and the Temple of Set – is either one of them right, or one of them more correct than the other?” I explained that I believed this to be a channel or mode by which I limit the available possibilities and close in on one particular aspect or group of aspects by creating a wall, a boundary, an obstacle, a statement, a form – to define how I will proceed or react and in what direction. But in asking the question I don’t actually have two forms to work with, but three, because I created another form by which to decide between two others. This one here has been created as a fourth to explain this trilogy. So, while the question seems to be about two distinct choices, it’s really more than that. Unfortunately to try and explain these processes I have outlined above only sinks me further and further into the geometric mire of form.

On the surface of things, we appear to try to escape forms (using more and more of them to do so believing that we are able to narrow things down, be specific) – and on one level, it is accepted that we do, but on another level, a more piercing analysis, we cannot escape the hidden traps simply because there is nowhere to escape to. There exists as a distant option the voiceless realm of Art – where form is used to communicate without the trappings inherent in language – but the idea of completely foregoing language altogether rallies billions of egos – who are part of language itself – collectively against the idea. Assuming we could ever have a blank slate when we approach forms – the statements others make in their writing on behalf of various forms, (say Anton LaVey for the Church of Satan), that seek to appeal to our identity; the pride, emotions, sentiments, memories, etc of our ego; cultural norms or counter-cultural values; philosophical merit; current affairs; archetypal notions and memes; etcetera – that ask for our agreement, our chorus of applause, our time and patience, our money, blood, sweat or tears: can all be said to be appeals to our morality.

If our morality is at the whim of the forms that inhabit us: we will choose to be in agreement or disagreement despite ourselves and according to the forms which choose for us. In Summary. What is right for you may not be right for me – because of the intricate attachments form brings when it is communicated through language, or through various mental filters. What is right for you depends on your moral code and the particular geometric (some might say synaptic) arrangement of the 23 syndrome that drives your brain to uphold certain forms that causes a counter-reaction to shun others. What is right for you is entirely at your discretion assuming human beings can ever manually determine their ‘I’ within the myriad of elements that act on our behalf and influence/prejudice/bias our decisions with attachments and shadows.

If we recognised we all wear 23-type blinkers in regard to our decisions – we might be able to make more informed decisions. (note that the very concept of informed decisions literally refers to form within decisions.) I tried to keep this treatise linear and orderly, unfortunately, there is no clear distinction where forms or morality start and end – these concepts are all deeply suffused within one another, swimming through one another and biting each other's tails so as to swallow and become each other pending on how they are handled and by which mode perceived. This has always been a discernible problem when I attempt to outline notions to do with perception.

Every form raised up creates a loophole, a shadow and the means to turn a form around on itself. I have written so much here that there are any number of holes by which my essay can be countered or attacked. But these are my own ruminations and even as I finish typing this I am certain that my mind moves to undermine its own creation and escape the prison it has built itself... ah see, there it goes. No state of perfection exists on shifting sands or ever will. I can only answer to my own forms just as I expect you will answer to yours. Most people require other people to hack their own arguments to pieces or validate/invalidate them. But I do just fine on my own. Heurisy is as Heurisy does. ~ ~ ~

Let me leave you with a final scenario – where, like Timmy's green hat, certain information has been taken for granted in the haste to define Satan and Satanism – or possibly ignored, to justify man's own notions as befit his ambitions. Given all that I have said in relation to individuality so far in 101 about the sacrifice one must make of it to belong to or subsist within a group mentality – consider how different things might have turned out historically for Earth if Satan had not satisfied the requisite sacrifice necessary to assemble an army of angels around himself to help overthrow heaven, but had indeed been the archetype of the individual he is so often claimed to represent. *See Australia of late (2007-2010) for instance, its present escalation of knife violence is influenced by four things, 1) for several years the government forced mothers to work and thus leave their children in day-care depriving them of vital maternal aspects that are usually imparted from mothers to their sons. 2) the diminishing of humans touching one another in any fashion has left many blind to the damage they do when they overcompensate in seeking touch and injure others. 3) poor law reforms due to the softness of political correctness and the over-stated empathy of everyone being a victim has led to few or no punishments being meted out resulting in a get-away-with murder mentality 4) no serious attempt to change social structures is considered to get to the genuine root of these problems, which are symptomatic reflections of the forms upheld at any given time and the creation of their shadows and attachments – wherein corporations and multi-nationals flood the world with certain messages that are reinforced daily by the very institutions that claim to be fighting them. Since the ethos of teenagers is to define counterculture by rebelling against culture campaigns like Don't Drink and Drive, or No Hooning, provide the very tools for people to define and enter counterculture. Media is highly irresponsible in this regard – in that, it washes its hands of all responsibility for the messages it sends. All indications are that it knows people are idiots, treats people accordingly, but acts indignant and claims the moral high ground when called out. When selling to us it relies on and plays up to our stupidity as a collective to buy into the advertised material – but when challenged it insists we are each capable of making our own choices. It switches between treating us collectively and treating us individually – manipulating us masterfully.

THE PEN VS. THE SWORD: ACTION VS. THOUGHT

Thoughts shape actions – and are every bit as important as physical assaults. Action can be shaped and controlled through perception – perception can be given via propaganda, essays, books, and other media that compel someone toward specific or themed action directly or indirectly. The Bible, Mein Kampf, The Satanic Bible, The Criminals Handbook, could all be said to have incited action – but were instrumental in how that action took place and on what principles it was enacted and enacted for. Without thought (read: philosophy) to inspire, excite, enrage, and otherwise stum emotions, sentiments, ethos, empathy, enmity – action is arguably less effective and sporadic – it usually requires a doctrine to support action, to define it. Without thought driving action – many of the most memorable actions should not have existed. There would have been no desire to act.

Actions in turn, give real world results, they are the product of imagination earthed into symbol and architecture – physical based changes to events and persons that create or destroy idols and edifices that present the reigning perception and enable power to change hands. Actions such as fighting, resistance, warfare, forming a militia, creating a physical place of worship, striking an authority, assassinating a figurehead;- actions can be seen moulded in the worldly, in the immediate, they are capable of changing history, or political power, or personal power, or change what perception will be and who controls it. Actions emphasise changing landscapes but do not tell us why.

The old argument that actions speak louder than words may be true, but the same can be argued for words being responsible for action.

What is Action – to you?

What is Thought – to you?

Do you value one above the other? – Why?

Do you believe the two are separate entities – or entwined?

Which do you use more often?

Why do you think this argument continues to arise?

If someone is inclined toward a certain behaviour or direction it does not often take much to tip them into acting it out. Ordinarily, they are already going to do it – they just need a voice that says yes. (or no). But THEM is not designed to lead people up the garden path and join a cult – every step of the way we try to give power back to others by encouragement, praise, showing them they can do it, empowering them. This is why most of those who have travelled with us have left, gone on to the next part of their lives. Some of these members have their own groups who are part of paramilitary circles such as Order of Saturn, or eminent members of other magical groups, Sathana who wrote Sorcery of THEM, or other cults and groupings that have their own physical temples, meetings and offline actions. What most of these are we have no ultimate way of knowing but through developed trust over long periods of time we give many of these people the benefit of the doubt that what they say they do, they do.

Personally, I have had many reports of culling victims, animal sacrifices, violent alchemical ordeals mentioned to me by a fair amount (let's say 50) of people over the years, – no proof for any of it, I might add. THEM was involved with the OTO in Brazil for a while when word came of a member of it called Rex setting up a child trafficking ring to fund money to us. After this came to our attention we were more careful about what message we were sending by being tied up in the ONA;- and told the other members to get rid of Rex and shut down any operation he might have had.

Beginning from nothing, we built up the Black Glyph and created and sold some rather unique projects such as the mini star game, advanced star game, convinced CB to allow Emanations to be printed, thousands of people reading Black Glyph material notwithstanding – this has allowed tens of thousands of dollars to pass through our hands. Through careful engineering, THEM also has its own currency – its books. Virtually anything written by us sells to private collectors for silly amounts of money – and this has allowed us to do some rather special things. Primarily, it is poured back into funding for other Sinister projects, these include sending small-large donations to various groups anonymously within Australia such as feminist leagues, donating to satanic forums such as MySatan, 600 Club, SIN – Stormfront in America, a number of small NS groups in Australia, and lending money to various individuals associated with or members of, THEM. It allows funding for photo-bucket and rapid-share accounts for Mvimaedivm Black, martial art training fees, the purchase of sinister books and publications such as the Ixaxaar collection of ONA material to cite the most recent to be passed more cheaply into the hands of the many.

This and thousands more examples many outcomes of our chats not likely known (but see ABYSSAL for more) have come from our words, our thoughts. Which are in themselves, actions. That set a ball rolling that may have not been there before or keep existing ones rolling. Our action of writing our material and sharing it, has caused people to commit crimes, atone for crimes, change their life, save their life, take a life, without anything else required. Personally, I write based on the experience of my actions – which I am rather private about, admittedly – but THEM being just one – I am confident that who we are and what we do is more than it appears. This is just a few examples, but I think they are good ones. We fund others to be able to act, prompt others to act, and act ourselves. It is a symbiosis that favours neither action nor thought over the other but exists as a behind the scenes distribution of entrepreneurial resource management to fund and assist others who share our aims.

HERE BE DRAGONS

The quiet solitude of the upstairs study was broken by the sound of a ringing telephone.

Ryan, sitting at his desk and staring at the computer screen in front of him, grabbed absent-mindedly for the receiver.

“Hello?”

When he recognised the voice on the other end, Ryan grinned.

“Ah. How are ya mate? Been a long time since I heard anything from you – shit, must be a year now? Good to hear from ya, man. What’s been happening in your world?”

A frown crinkled his brow.

“Oh yeah? – sounds like you’re doing well for yourself – mm, yeah doin’ alright – hey you got that other tattoo yet? Mm, yeah well you gotta take your time and look around – make sure you don’t get fucked over and end up some scratcher’s orange.”

“Hah, yeah, good, look if you need any help with your design let me know. I’ve been drawing a fair bit lately – probably not the sort of shit you’re after for your arm, but I’m pretty sure I can finish that tat. Make it match the other one at least.”

Ryan stretched out his hand and picked up a jellybean that had fallen from a nearby bowl and idled too close to the keyboard. He popped it into his mouth and leaned back on his chair.

“Not quite, no. Lot’s been happening – you in front of a computer?”

He chewed on the –lemonade?- bean and gazed thoughtfully at ‘The Witches’.

According to his uncle – a lot of Australian occult art had not survived the 1970’s. Apparently a narrow minded police force had sought to destroy any that they found. This painting, a set of three he was told, was probably quite rare. He wondered if his uncle would give him the third one to complete the set the next time there was an occasion to be celebrated.

“Yeah mate, I’m here – yeah. Go to WWW, dot, WordPress, yeah one word, dot com, backslash, temple of them – yep one word.”

A questioning murmur issued from the mouthpiece, followed by a confident tone of confirmation.

“Yes, mate that’s it. What you’re looking at is about 60 manuscripts –“

“No, I know, there’s a hell of a lot more. The rest are either contained in various works or – you remember I was writing Mvimaedivm last time we spoke? Yeah, well – pause Well it’s supposed to be called Mvimaedivm; I only called it the Diary of a Devilworshipper to make it more commercially appealing when I started selling ‘em. Yeah, good mate, I’ve actually finished seven volumes and ... no, I cut out a lot of stuff.”

“No – well I haven’t published all of them yet – as I say, a lot of shit’s happened.”

Ryan raised his eyebrows slightly.

“Yeah, the Order of Saturn – awesome stuff – this guy really knows his shit ... no not like, not regurgitating occult lore, I mean he comprehends behaviour, habit, method, change, alchemy, the lot. Yeah, remember that book I told you about? The one on Cybernetics? – Ah shit, Maxwell ... something ... I can’t remember. Yeah, well I really like his work – we had a bit of a chat about some of the concepts he uses vs. those that THEM use – was very interesting.”

“Yep. Yep. Okay, well go get yourself a coffee or something and I’ll tell you what’s going on alright.”

Ryan sat forward, cradling the receiver against his ear with his shoulder and typed seven letters into his search engine. A few maps of a woodland area in south-eastern Victoria popped up. He browsed the listed contents and clicked on one. He sat and studied the maps quietly.

A voice came from the phone.

“Hey man. Got yourself one? OK. Let’s start from the top. Remember when you came over that time and we got crownies and sat in the garage? Yeah? Then do you remember we were talking about the powers of the Vatican and Vatican City? Yeah? Well apparently, the Vatican has officially issued a private order to form a group of about 100 specialists to fight the rise in the occult.”

“Yeah, I can’t remember the name of their organisation, but it’s called something like the Sworn Brothers of the Sword against Magic and the Occult works of Satan, or some fancy ass title like that, and it’s been put together by that fucker Ratzinger – yeah the pope – yeah he did, visited earlier last year and shut Sydney city down so no-one could even protest their presence – anyway, this action is quite a frightening proposition because it’s like a modern form of the Inquisition is being sanctioned by the Powers that Be. Well apparently he has ties to the descendants of the Inquisitors. Mm, well it’s interesting to keep an eye on these things.”

“Yeah, well the scary thing is that these crazy cunts are still as mad as hatters, nothing’s really changed since medieval times in the way of attitude – just the forms. You’ve seen Guantanamo Bay? – Guat, no wait ... I forgot, they changed the name to Camp X-ray, that’s right. Yeah laughter not much more comforting eh? Here you have a country whose propaganda machine has been raging for the last what – 60 years? – about the abominations of Nazi Concentration Camps, but who has almost a third of their fucking population incarcerated in prison.”

“I don’t care what they blame it on – the American system is fucked – and they’re the acting hand of scary cunts like the Vatican – so you know what’ll happen if they ever get their way. Yeah – but that economic slump was almost certainly manufactured – it makes a lot of sense for it to happen now. The whole 911 thing – and then this – could not create more perfect conditions for them. America bombing their own people sent the entire world into an iron-grip police state that perfectly suits the clearly stated American- Magian goals of total global domination. Freemasons? I really don’t know – who does? But thanks to America you can’t get on a plane with toothpaste anymore for fuck sake and the mass given reason is because someone might die.”

“laughs yeah well that’s exactly right man, people are dying every day – because of America. America’s quick to jump on soft targets accusing them of harbouring WMDs or abusing human rights – but you don’t see them charging into China. No – and it’s interesting that they’ve targeted Iraq, Afghanistan, Iran, North Korea and Georgia – because these countries all form a ring around China. I guess if you know you’ve got fuck all chance of invading a kick-ass empire like China – one of the oldest living dynasties in the world – the best thing you can do is keep cats at its feet. But from a military point of view, it looks as if the American military has been trying to set up a perimeter around China for a very long time, at least since the cold war, and a lot of the countries fit the criteria for what are referred to as choke points.”

“Mm, so you’ve got all these signs going on right? And all these noble sentiments of propaganda expressing the opposite that don’t match those signs. It’s like the protocols of Zion said: judge the merit of a conspiracy by what you can see happening. The Jews? Shit of course, but it goes beyond any racial war – and just because a few who happen to be Jewish are involved doesn’t mean they all are. What’s more likely is that millions of people lack the spirit or solidarity to argue with what’s laid down, hundreds of thousands help enforce it, thousands of leaders and players the world over are following the lead of a hundred, a hundred are colluding together with twenty, twenty a few, and though it can be generalised the details of the world are just too fucking big and busy to really get any kind of handle on what’s really going on on the personal level – you have to guess via the forms that arise, the forms that are trying to arise, the collective changes that occur. Meanwhile, wild cards keep everyone guessing. No – I do believe in a Magian conspiracy, partly because it’s probable simply because people love to conspire. And partly because there do appear to be clear signs of a master plan unfolding on the chessboard.”

“What kind of signs? Well, if you had access to a million cameras all showing you shady goings-on and you had to explain what was being done, how it was illegal, track the personal details of each person involved, and then go through court proceedings to get a conviction – where would you ever possibly start? There are so many things going on, on so many levels that it's impossible to process it in any sort of entirety with any depth, proof, or clarity.”

“Well, that's right it's not about feeling like your hands are tied because you can't do anything – it's the feeling that you can't do anything that ties your hands. That's the Magian's magic, billions and billions of forms that all act to tire you, make you afraid, feel overwhelmed – moreover the system also manages to cater for so many powerful influential people that not a lot of those people want anything to change or change too much. Doing something all starts with the development of a self-conviction to make choices.”

“Yeah, well some of the signs are obvious and some aren't. O and Sath brought a lot of these to my attention such as the death of touch in society, like intimacy is being made into a taboo. Well fear of paedophilia is rife, like an old-fashioned witch-hunt, and I have no love for those sick fucks but on one hand the government says kids need to be protected, and at the same time it makes all these absurd demands on mothers to put their kids in daycare, leave them with strangers and spend so much time at work they hardly ever see their kids. What the fuck is that about if not a direct attempt to send already over-worked people mad trying to obey two completely divergent attitudes to life? It's like that whole fucking slap in the face with smoking where almost every media company brain-washed people into smoking, going so far as to use it as a sexual euphemism, tap right into human fundamentals, get all the big names doing it for like 50 years. But now some cunts have the absolute cheek to decide smoking is no longer profitable/publicly acceptable, and rather than apologise for nationally and globally pushing this shit onto others, to turn around and blame smoking addiction on the supposed weakness of the individual smoker. Eh? Course there's proof check out magazines and advertising from 1900 onwards – shameless! The funny thing is the whole campaign to stop smoking is just another repeat of the original campaign probably by a lot of the same players to start smoking! And people are buying it. You can't have a smoke anywhere now – it's like people self-policing for the State with every hypocritical fuck who tut tuts not having a clue that they're just being brainwashed again to ark up about smokers. Retards. And what absolute cunts trying to make people feel dirty for doing something they told them for so long it was in every way right and safe to do! And you know recently it got so ridiculous regarding touching people that there was a big hullabaloo in the papers about how swimming instructors were going to be expected to teach children but without being allowed to touch them. laughter yeah that's right, how the fuck are you supposed to teach children to swim without the instructor ever touching them? Your child's drowning? Oh sorry, I'm not allowed to help save them because I'll get sued. Maybe you could jump in an – no? Didn't learn how to swim properly either huh? Too bad for little jimmy. laughter Innocent handling and human touch and warmth is totally being made taboo – even my friend's who work in the prostitution business say so. They reckon the internet has totally fucked the sex industry, not only because most men think they have to copy the aggressive behaviour in porno's to be a man or get off – but because most of them are guys who work their ass off for a lifeless corporation, really only want simple human contact and affection. Yeah, 14 years she's been doing it. Never used to be like that apparently. Between them, 911 and the net really fucked everything.”

“Sweet, right, where was I? Oh, Yeah, anyway you got other signs like the tightening grip on oil, water, narcotics, medicine, the ownership of almost all the worlds companies and subsidiaries by a handful of people, increasing strain on resources, etc – but any event that even slightly changes the availability of something is quickly and completely blown out of proportion and given a media spin that makes each and every one of these human race collectively owned resources seem like the private property of some company or another and extremely scarce. And it's ongoing – day after day in the media, in the papers, in the TV, a whole slew, and I mean a non-stop fucking current since they got the idea from the Nazis, of fear-based propaganda saying this and that is running out, so people will stay afraid, believe the world is as they want it to appear, accept the greedy mark-up in prices, get squeezed dry for the benefit of capitalist cunts to widen the gap between rich and poor, and so affect people that that's all they'll talk about, trying to drown their sorrows in alcohol and braving the daily grind together. All the while feeding Orgasmatron. I've worked at bakeries and supermarkets – do you know how much food they dump? And what about water, the national statistics company indicates between 70-90% of water used is used by industry, yet they blame the working proletariat and even doubled water/gas/electricity prices overnight! I'd also add the horrific saturation of rap music, once the most hated of forms by America, now allowed to openly pollute everything with nasty reptilian messages. No – it's the tunes that do it, not the lyrics. If you did any of those lyrics a capella they'd all just sound like shit – and exactly the same. It's musical engineers that inject the shite with trance not the two-bit actors that front the shop. Yeah I hate rap – it's an insidious state sanctioned poison – insidious, I mean you can't say fuck for fear of offending someone, but you can talk about bitch-niggaz beating raping women on a pg video game or popularise the gangsta culture in kid's movies. Which I should add in all fairness was another form of resistance absorbed and bastardised by the Magian media. Yeah, yeah transformers had mongrelized negro robots talking Ebonics, and in transporter 3, in fact a lot of movies, anytime they want to make the movie fit in and be accepted by its audience they use contemporary music to make it fluid, so they use some ugly fucking rap track, thus continuing the cycle. laughter yeah well that or the horseshit pop bubblegum and love music that passes for music these days. I actually find a large number of people agreeing with me about my article on the frequency of the Magian being so fucking enervating that it hurts their ears and brains just to be near it. Yep those fuckers have done extremely well to create such a powerful sonic weapon. Mate, people severely underestimate the role of music and movies in all of this.”

“Eh? Orgasmatron – never heard the term? Song by ... Motorhead, well Sepultura do a version too but I don’t know if it’s the original – anyway, basically – Orgasmatron is the personification of the Churches Lust for Power and Armageddon. Find the lyrics online, you’ll see what I mean.”

“laughter Yeah well like America says – In God We Trust.”

“Yeah right – so as I was saying, the Vatican put together this group to seek out and destroy the rise in the occult – cough I mean, disobedience. And with all these other signs popping up of a singular control over everything it’s looking like this will be one hell of an interesting century. But the Christians are up against something new this time.”

“No – and I knew you’d ask that. I’ve explained why forming a Para-military group or promoting extremism won’t work against the Magian – at least not yet. What the fuck are you going to do against a powerfully trained unit of state-sanctioned S.W.A.T.? Or when the System gets hold of you and drags you through the courts, through the legal system – launching a one-sided argument to justify your arrest, your treatment, using all its media against you, and you end up in a cell fucked over after someone pays the cops or screws to ice you – or the cops or screws use the inmates desperation to nail your coffin shut? What? Call yourself a political prisoner? You end up just another David Koresh or David Hicks – making maybe a loud bang at first with your individuality, but which day by day under a torrent of propaganda and damage control from the Machine silences it – demonises it – or worse: uses what you did against you by making you a martyr for the opposite cause. Take September 11 2001, even if in some distant planetary dimensions terrorists actually did blow up the twin towers and I’ve seen too much evidence to believe that – a couple of thousand people get hurt in arguably justifiable payback for what America is doing to those countries their people and the world in general, and suddenly its OK for Americans to bomb the absolute shit out of Afghanistan. They do that shit in war – they do everything and anything they have to – and we’re at war.

If you take a careful look at the Christ/Satan myth embedded in nearly all movies where there’s two clearly demarcated sides, yeah again transformers classic example, you see that after 2001 the message of such fights changes. Suddenly war is allowed to be won at any cost once the enemy has been identified. Yeah well a lot of movies show popular monuments and world-historic sites being smashed to dust in the name of American justice – and even cop shows are giving fantastic justifications for treating ‘perps’ any old way the cops desire – collectively sanctioning and condoning torture and assault of anyone whose deemed a criminal. We're at war with something old archaic and massive – and to take down a two-thousand-year-old mongrel dragon you need pretty spectacular weapons.”

“What’s that? No, I still get it, I’m always meeting people who want to get together and form some sort of “Satanic Army” with a cache of weapons and secret hideouts – fuck man, a lot of people still treat the work like its cops and robbers. Well let me put it this way – if you’ve ever done martial arts you realise how extremely fragile the human body is even as it can be super-strong. You get in a fight and you might learn the same thing. You get one chance to take on something as huge as the Dragon if indeed you’re even able to live such a life in the first place that you become aware of it before it subsumes you – and you can’t go throwing that life away on some doomed crusade your carefully manufactured ego wants you to go on – that’s falling prey to narrative magic. Especially, especially when there’s still no solidarity among people. That was the first thing to go. Um yeah, what’s his name, Henry Ford introduced the production line and everything just kind of snowballed from there into consumerism, capitalism and the era of automated machines. Do you know at my local supermarket they no longer employ people at night? They only provide a self-service machine that fucks people out of jobs.”

“Yeah, but I mean a lot of people are still being trapped by the same shit – doing the same things despite the obvious precautions the Church has taken to meet various actions with various results. You wave a weapon, you’re gonna get fucking shot. And you’re gonna get shot by professionals or tasered now, the cops are being given tasers here in Oz. And say you blow yourself up on a tram – yeah you might start something, Australia has never had anything like that happen, and it’d start a wave that’d turn oz into a police state – but why would that help? And what kind of weak assfuck thinks blowing up civilians is okay? It’s not okay – it’s a lazy easy way out of actually tackling the huge and insidious problems that face humanity as a whole. Most of these bombers are young – easy to control, easy to convince, easy to replace. The bombs don’t ever seem to get anyone of importance, or anyone who has actually been causing the shit. It’s just an endless blood feud fuelling itself- just the way the Magian likes it.”

“Well any of those poor tortured motherfuckers who did those school shootings are symptoms of the geometry America forces its inhabitants to endure. But I’d love to believe that’s finally starting to change – that people are starting to understand that there is a life beyond form and thus choices beyond what the Magian offers us. The plan to implement Magical Solidarity is – pause yeah, laugh but it’s very different to National Socialism for a variety of reasons – name one? OK, well it hasn’t failed yet.”

“No. well I can’t explain that to many people – I can’t give reasons for various actions because people need to learn how to think like that for themselves – if I tell them what I’m doing they’ll just get lazy, add the info to the pile of downloads, and never get around to understanding digesting or integrating what was actually being done – instead they’ll try to find a shortcut with some other group who’ll bury them up to their ass in weird and ridiculous practices ... yes and that’s right, you can give away all the secrets of the Tradition in plain view but that doesn’t mean they’ll be appreciated or even understood. Like, nobody ever thanks the guy that takes the fall, do they? laugh precisely. Understanding is still at a pretty shitty level – people still don’t understand let alone appreciate the supreme subtlety of how they and things work – like how having a common enemy can join two allies together in hatred firmer than cement. It’s not always fun having to play the enemy – it’s not my idea of fun anyway – and it’s a shitty job laugh but it works, and someone has to do it, just like it’s always been done. You’ve no idea how many groups or key people we’ve brought together by making them hate us as a team, well me really because I stick my head out as the so-called representative. Well, what they think is me anyway – I’m just a fuckin’ phantom really. Hell, I don’t know “who” I am half the time. Eh? Yeah well fuck ‘em it’s way too early for people to even come close to that kind of perception. Softly, softly, catchy monkey.”

“Well, we had to start somewhere – all these other places are stigmatised, so any place we tried to deconstruct the Magian would have had, shit, at least a few hundred years of sediment, in some cases like Britain, maybe a few thousand. We’d have had to spend a lot of time eroding too many thick layers of convictions and traditions before getting heard or even to the point. New Zealand would have been good, but Bolton has that, and I don’t live there anymore. And so Australia was the perfect platform to launch Magical Socialism. Eh? Yeah – met quite a few interesting people over the years – most of them are still working with me toward this. Yeah, the ONA too.”

“Mm, well that’s helped fuckin’ heaps – but you can’t tell people that sort of shit – if you tell everyone you’re this or that – it changes perception – better to remain quiet on the extent of one’s achievements, for one reason people can doubt my ‘credentials’ and ‘training’ all they want ... raucous laughter yeah! It’s from the Simpsons. Anyway, what was I saying? The proof is in the pudding. Say what you like THEM is undeniably influential. And secondly, I’m avoiding being seen as an authority. Why?”

Well people would treat our work differently; just go along with it because we have some vested authority – when really they should go along with it because it makes sense to them. Well yeah that’s why when we published a number of our books we deliberately didn’t give them exciting pictures – I mean I could have easily used one of my pictures or drawn something to make them look cool and satanic – but what the hell would that do? It’s very easy to wrap something up in pretty pictures to sell it. Man, I’ve wasted a lot of good money buying shit just because it looked good only to get it home and read it. I went through all that shit when I was DWR, god, as a teenager. I want our work to sell, to spread, to influence, whether it’s wrapped nicely or not – after all, this fascination people have with valuing something based on its outer appearance needs to be balanced out. I’m testing synchronicity and I’m trying to reverse some of the lean on marketing that people use to qualify something’s content. Heh, yeah, I read a lot what can I say? Mm, well ONA officially recognised us publicly as a Traditional Nexion not so long ago. Well yeah but we’ve been that privately for a long time – being announced publicly really only serves to elevate people’s notice – people are trained early on to seek authorities. As a perceived authority we command respect – with respect, time, and with time – attention. Attention’s important. Because once we have it – and they’re not flitting about from form to form but paying close attention to what we’re saying/doing – then we can point out how the whole process that brought them to us worked. Well yep, the idea is that it will make them immune to any further attempts by others to use form to entice them away from their own will and to serve in the will and forms of others. Well yeah, I realised the paradox in telling people to think for themselves – but I can’t make them think for themselves. I can simply do the best I can, with the others, to present what we have diluted from our own paths.”

“Yes, well a mixture of long-term and short-term strategists as far as Satanism is concerned is important – you can’t be too careful with generalising things out of habit because then you cut your options short. But THEM has – yeah THEM, that’s the name of the new Temple – changed the game for a lot of people. As I speak, in just four months there’s been almost 4000 people visit the site you’re looking at. Right 4, 059. Well, that’s true, in fact someone made a point of telling me some other as-sclown got twice as many hits and he did fuck all with his life. But the point here is that 4000 people taking the time to read serious methodology and insights into the problems and solutions and strategy of a vehicle like Satanism – and not even Satanism but just life – is a fucking good start. Because they’re not taking an interest in the same old tired bullshit trotted out year after year, century after century that encapsulates them in commercial forms – but frees them from them. With enough influence that could snowball rapidly into a giant fist that fucks the Magian completely. Yeah that is quite an image. Sorry.”

“Um, sales are steady and I’ve sold several dozen copies of each volume of Mvimaedivm now – and that was despite stripping all the bullshit that goes with so many occultists from the very start. laugh well that's right and that's because being occult isn't the point. But occultists are the most likely place to find minds free of certain prejudices, more open to change, who will try things in spite of the seeming impossibilities of them. Well actually – Oh guess what? My publisher sent me an email the other day that let me know one of my books had been chosen to sell on Amazon – and without me doing a damn thing except writing it. Again, a small start – but a dozen or more small starts in the right place are every bit as good as the proverbial good one. Saturation is one of the keys – but flooding people with books would just repeat what so many others have done – that doesn't help anyone – but you know about my other work.”

“laugh yeah, must be my winning personality, eh?”

“Well – Mvimaedivm is the name of the forum we run. Yeah and the name of the books. Well I'm sure you can figure out why they both share the same name ... That's right mate, they're the same thing. Anyway the forum Mvimaedivm has been extremely successful – remember when everyone just fucking argued because they wanted to be right? Because of the domination of the ego? Well we found a way to satisfactorily explain to the collective ego how everyone can be right, while everyone can be wrong, and yet everyone work together, In Sinister Solidarity. There's now 21 separate nexions that I know of and counting, working together while each working in isolation.”

“Mate, there's no way to explain it over the phone without it sounding confusing – you'd have to see it for yourself, be a part of it to get it – its magic. I'll send you some of the dossiers we put together so you can see for yourself. It's only the first finger to the enemy though – the first fuck you as it were. Well a) the Vatican can't tackle the occult if the occult doesn't seem occult. b) The Magian have a powerful knack of absorbing everything into the machine and making it harmless, we've just shared the blueprints for that machine with the world and because it was so popular, that machine is all the Magian ever built. They don't have time to build another one.”

Ryan made a face and dropped the wet blue jellybean he'd taken out of his mouth into the nearby rubbish bin.

“Look I don't mean to sound like I'm blowing my own trumpet, but fuck mate I'm blowing my own trumpet. See look at it this way. The Christians haven't really evolved in technique – yeah their enforcers have, and technology has given them an edge, but numbers don't mean shit if you have a superb strategy that gets the masses involved. See they still teach the same intolerance they taught way back when in the same way. They still have a cyclopean definition of Satan and Satanists, and Satanism too for that matter. But instead of having discussions restricted to forms and thus peoples thought processes being effectively controlled via a restriction of choice of thoughts – people around me are now beginning to look much harder at form – examine the motive for their presence – see the fragility in them and understand the layers of each – not just as individual geometry, but as a powerful context to be used in casual intellectual examination. With the bones of the magic of the Magian laid bare – people are slowly stripping away the “cumbersome wreckage” that being trapped within the stricture of forms has left behind as a legacy for our generation and which has profound influence on everything we do by ourselves, in a group, or as a species.”

“No way. There’s way too much work to be done to dismantle that terrifying machine than I could ever hope to do in a hundred years of writing. Because there are all these probably infinite angles that need work, study, perfection, alignment to replace the artificial machine with organic life-centred geometry. That’s why it’s so incredible to see all these different groups rising up as one each with its own personality, goal and engine driving it – yet, all working toward the same thing, the destruction of the Magian thought process – not just to tear down their transient outer architecture or personnel but a collective internal alchemical eradication of their function. I mean obviously there are groups doing all sorts of different functions – but it’s like they’re working as one creature to bring about the same aim. We’re not just changing the flag here – we’re actually changing consciousness insofar as we are influencing what people choose to take notice of, care about, and with luck permanently affecting people’s perception in such a way as to revolutionise perception itself. Once something’s broken man, it doesn’t get unbroken. Perception is like that.”

“Yeah. Nah. Actually that’s a good point. Try thinking about it like this: what does the Magian really have – really have – except our Trust?”

In a nearby room the shrill cry of a mobile phone rang out.

“With power comes responsibility – especially when you’re trying to help change the world in so drastic a way. And with so many handicaps! Like, we’re not wealthy, we have to work anonymously, we don’t have the luxury of cheap and wide-spread media or advertising, we’re trying to presence something that is completely outside the box so far as the occult is concerned, we’re trying to expand consciousness for fuck sake, and we're only three years old as a Temple. I have to believe it can be done – otherwise who else is there? Shit phones ringing hold on a sec?"

"Fucking telemarketers. Okay, I'm back, sorry about that mate. Where was I? You get one life, seventy or so years, and then you're fucking dead. In that time, at least as a Satanist – you have to break down all the bullshit lumped onto your brain and cultural program to see something lies beyond it – you have to try escaping that program a number of very disheartening times in order to identify what lies beyond it – you have to sum up all the knowledge left to you by others by using only the merest portion of it – and you have to learn how to learn. In that time you must also accomplish any number of extremely tricky tasks, including individuation, finding the self, accepting the ego, dealing with the concept of God, the concept of godlessness, dealing with the concept of concepts, get disappointed by any number of idols and gods, not go mad doing all this, not lose interest pursuing such goals, and not give in to being a part of the furniture in the Time in which you find yourself. You must fight death, doubt, failure, and chance, and even beyond all that – you must be able to write, draw, or otherwise communicate what no-one wants to hear without being drowned out, ignored, or laughed at. That is, assuming you align in the first place with the forces of the Sinister and not the status quo. Now I'm going out on a limb here and I'm saying to you that no-one, not a soul, can do or does what I do. That's why I write so much and talk so much because I've never met or encountered anyone like me, and I have something to say about the world and my place in it, I have something to say about all that I have encountered in the people around me as a result of its history and its domination by the Church. I'm not going to sit around and waste my life, quietly biding my time and tapping my fingers waiting for someone else to come along and say what I am saying, or do what I am doing. I'm just giving it one hell of a good go to try and smash these cunts or leave behind the means for others to do it, like I promised to myself I would do when I was twelve. What's that? Mate, the army will come – one thing I've learned is that there are many ways to fight a war, and many ways should be used to fight a war."

Ryan's coffee had gone cold. And he pushed it away.

"Yeah – well if we can just reach a critical mass then shit could really change in a big way. Yeah? We'll I'm not a megalomaniac – no – I'm not – one of the most important things I teach from the Temple is not to trade one authority for another. Instead of just repeating the same hypnotic trick but with me as the new puppet master I try and show people how it's done and hopefully how to shut that shit down. Because replacing a Magian authority with a satanic one isn't the name of the game either man, it's all so much more complex than that and yet so blindingly simple – depends which side of the fence you're looking at it from. People need to split their perception and dual view of yes/no a little bit further to work with us, so they have all shades of understanding operating at once. Yeah it is asking a lot – but look at what we’re trying to do – and that includes your work too – it’s huge, insane, and fucking impossible – but hey shit, it’s being done anyway.”

“Slowly? laugh mate, where I stand that term means nothing anymore.”

“Exactly. But you know how super subtle the power of forms can be – and how people’s brains tend to work – for instance, form is so powerful, the reader may have unconsciously assumed that –I- don’t like blue jellybeans.

TSP (THE SATANIC PANIC)

So, to begin... again.

What does it mean to change what should call the ‘Old World Story’? Of, as we have said previously, the Hero – the Redeemer and the endless knot that keeps archetypal energies (and results) in a fixed stasis?

Embedded in the imagery and devices we crafted are countless subtle and overt references, symbols, processes and phrases of the temple including an escalating presence of the Thrasz, subtly seeding the subconscious with familiarity and later acceptance of mysterious principles that may in the Present, present as mere characteristic artistic eccentricity. There are several unveiled statements in the imagery: openly depicting a burned/burning church, the Thrasz desecrating a cathedral – and the world lore of the greater device we have crafted by way of an entirely new game has for its back-story the essence of Insynsian, relating the excesses of monotheism for taking away some of the industries most favoured elements and whose agency forms the game worlds past wherein the blame falls squarely on Abrahamic forces – and many more elements besides but our symbolism coupled with the narrative eventually joined forces within the form. What we are doing is riding several popular waves of technology and entertainment-based psychodrama and introducing new archetypes, new behaviours of those archetypes, new energies and supplying an entirely different narrative in an attempt to influence users and create a new living story to compete with the dominance of the OWS. A working example of Directive-A16 in practice is itself a valuable by-product but our intention is to deliver our current en masse to the mainstream and to those most actively capable of distributing our work in a living psychodrama. When this secondary narrative is eventually coupled with actual knowledge of the occult corpus of the Temple of THEM reality and fantasy will drastically trade places as two spheres carefully nurtured in isolation and never meant to touch are brought together.

Even if now recognised, it would be difficult to dislodge these shards which have been embedded deeply in the industry psyche. Primarily due to the event of the ‘Satanic Panic’ of the 1980’s that saw all manner of accusations levelled at entertainment industries for allegedly possessing secret intention to indoctrinate listeners or users with messages from the devil. Wherein such accusations are now laughed at and seen as a time the world went a bit mad, this is 1980 for fuck’s sake, a shade shy of 2000 years, TWO THOUSAND YEARS after Christianity rose to power. How – can humanity be so cripplingly slow to learn from the past or evolve beyond its suppression and the gravity of Judaeo yolks? Only by the extent of the mental damage evident. I digress. Such accusations of messages would find pressed against it – for one – its own embarrassing previous hysteria as people would scarcely believe such claims a second time. What unassailable proof?

Moreover, these shards have already gone to their new homes – influencing the subconscious of hundreds of thousands of people over the course of five intense years. Directive-A16 is in full force here, A) subjugating and subverting a primarily Christian-based and Abrahamic-derived corporate vehicle that is the largest in the world B) sprawling across a large number of outlets and networks including pirated catalogues and collections seeding these tendrils further every day C) repeated by the world’s largest set of story-tellers themselves, who may be changing their narrative to represent the devices presented and sharing the world we created, where even the smallest divergence from the OWS is a ripple against a narrative withstanding aeons – telling and selling a new story with a new moral code and breaking down existing power-types by doing so D) seeding the messages of Them far and wide to outlast us – in an audacious experiment of Oromancy E) making a subtle and increasingly overt connection between the devices, imagery and the prime mover, this temple so that the two forces eventually touch, merge and become inseparable. With five years head start – we now have enough breathing room and the maturation of the form so as to speak about the new form THEM has been implementing.

What then – when the two forms finally fuse and it becomes apparent that the imagery of the secondary form does indeed contain ‘satanic’ references, ethos and keywords, messages and influence of a real occult organisation and refers back to the temple and its vast body of alchemical work? What then of the gamers who know only of my secondary forms (WTG), or of the occultists who know only of my primary forms (THEM) – such volatility is hard to predict in a unique experiment that may – when it reaches its full alchemical maturity – re-instigate a second satanic panic – or – simply silently brood, seeping into the minds and hearts of those whom the forms encounter. Who really knows what playing with exploits in a system can do.

In the recently released ‘Gates of Avernus’ even here, Christian apologists make special mention that ‘evil should have its ass kicked’ . It is useful to know that D&D grew from Christian roots – and is therefore saturated with praise for the prehistoric ego with a blind lust to kill and an enervating morality that sees the ethos of the Inquisition, or Knights Crusaders, or Salem Witch-hunters enshrined in ‘Heroes’ whose deeds of murder and immorality are almost always deemed just, rarely punished by the game – and in every way, sanctioned within the fantasy genre as part of doing business. Coupled with all manner of human-centric archetypes, including the Cleric, Priest, Paladin who repel the Undead, necromancers and any monsters that happen to get in the way – the overall narrative of D&D is the muscular colonising Christian which through RPG posits a simulacrum of bravely fighting evil where-ever it may go – which in itself is the core problematic corruption of the World Story of humanity by reinforcing these damaging beliefs of egoistic superiority, moral righteousness and tribal brutality – training and re-training in the bearing of Abrahamic thought and action.

Only when the game contains a certain number and type of characters will the players make any progress – it is designed that way to promote co-operation. These shortcomings aside it is a robust vehicle to allow the safe exploration of psychodrama and the sheer power of story, the omnipotence of thrall, and the voice of THEM, not just the ‘player’ to present. This freedom to express themselves as another being (also themselves) has a healing and therapeutic effect for many players, inviting greater steps to individuation as Jung called it, and in exploring repressed and latent archetypes and persona’s inherent within the subconscious to gradually build a more rounded personality – at least in theory, the ego-enshrinement, hero archetype and conqueror ethos generally undermines any qualities such heuristic exploration might impart as the system continually repeats and reinforces its underlying mantras. Under other names I have written at length about the psychodrama involved within RPG which more often than not accidentally touches on the same sinister aspects that Theatre deeply involves itself and deliberately evokes – but even that expertise cannot handle the danger of opening Pandora's box and letting the subconscious off its primal leash – what hope do the games industry who see it all as entertainment have?

The Ziggurat containing our various mechanisms designed to fall one after the other like a chain of domino’s has been built and populated, all that is required now is to carelessly drop the map to it. Herein though comes a few poignant questions taken from different vantages.

The Question of Vindication: – if the Temple of THEM actually legitimises the unsubstantiated Christian paranoia of the 80’s (ad infinitum) does this weaken or strengthen their matrix? If there are in fact, ‘satanic’ messages, symbols, and/or a direct attempt to undermine and disrupt their forms – and this current can be tied to the temple which operates in the free sphere of Saturn treating forms as social engineering – something to coldly dissect all devoid of emotional loading and which temple exhibits open and (escalating) hostility toward Christianity and Abrahamism – what then? What can we expect? A shut down of all the secondary forms by its distributors? A boycott of secondary forms by informed users? Can you shut down a game within a game within a game? Could it involve making an example short-term but whose long-term effect is to incite others to greater creativity and deeper penetration into forms with the relentless sorcery displayed here? Could it be the tipping point for a whole new wave of directed attacks against the Hydra in ways it has no protection against?

Advocate Vantages:

A) The introduction of our narrative may serve only to vindicate the Christian's fear of being subverted by satanic forces via the temples actions bringing the prophecy to life.

– Yes, probably.

B) Hypocrisy – viz. mimicking a crusade to rout out and vanquish the ‘evil of the Christians’ in effect copies the Christian's numerous crusades against perceived enemies whether, women, witches, blacks, communists, terrorists or satanists.

– Yes, probably.

C) Defenders rush to protect the carrier forms accusing the temple and its agents of attempting to destroy a platform with which form lies powerful sentiment through beloved entertainment subsequently exposing the temples work en masses to a litany of ridicule, speculation, dissection, litigation.

– Yes, probably.

D) The rich and prolific private fantasy of one insane individual

– Yes, probably.

E) A calculated attempt to use a collection of specific forms to implement the will of the Temple to change the way some humans think and therefore, act.

– Yes, probably.

F) A game within a game within a game.

– Yes, probably.

– It doesn't ‘matter’ what is happening here, it doesn't matter how its explained or who notices or how it might be later understood or painted if it can even be understood – this isn't logic, it's magic.

Is it possible that amid the volatile aftermath of this experiment – exposure of this method has the effect of seeding the concept/drive of Directive-A16 as a far larger widespread practice to infiltrate and subjugate corporate and core forms? Subjugate and subvert are of course loaded words – we are offering competing archetypes in a playing field where the same archetype has been dominant for an eternity – and we believe – has and is causing a great distortion in the capacity of humanity to evolve. We are offended spiritually by the lack of alternatives – this is a Mind War.

The temple is not stereo-typically ‘satanic’ – and does not propound satanism, but certainly an anti-Abrahamic vitriol. It is alien and Lovecraftian, sinister and Illuminati seeking to control and change the Apex narrative of Judaeo-Christian sentiment toward some ‘Other’ – toward THEM, toward plurality. But in the end perhaps my life’s work so far is a tragic-comic waste of decades, amounting simply to death-wishian chaos-magic and self-destruction – the equivalent of dropping a loaded grenade down a well just to hear the bang but not throwing it far enough and blowing myself to pieces in the process. Time will tell. In the near future, Conjunction III.

TSP [II]

Embedded in the imagery and devices are numerous references and symbols/phrases of the temple, including the Thrasz, subtly seeding the subconscious with acceptance of these mysterious principles. The imagery openly depicts a burned/burning Christian church, the Thrasz desecrating a cathedral, and the world lore of the greater device has for its backstory the downfall of Insynsian and the past on whose shoulders the blame falls squarely on Abrahamic forces. Harboured within D&D, even if recognised, it would be desperately difficult to dislodge these shards – primarily due to the event of the ‘Satanic Panic’ which happened some decades ago – wherein now laughed at, such accusations would find pressed against it, its own hysteria as people would surely not believe such claims a second time.

Moreover, these shards have already gone to their new homes – infecting the subconscious of hundreds of thousands exposed to them. Directive-A16 is in full force here, subjugating and subverting A) a primarily Christian-based and Abrahamic derived corporate vehicle that is the largest in the world B) sprawls across a large number of outlets, seeding these tendrils further every day C) infects story-tellers themselves, who will be changing not just their narrative to represent the devices and the world, but the narrative of aeons, of more than 2000 years – telling a new story with a new moral code and breaking down existing power types by doing so D) seeding the messages of Them far and wide E) making a subtle and increasingly overt connection between the devices, imagery and the prime mover, this temple so that the two forces eventually touch, merge and become inseparable.

What then may happen then when the two forms fuse and it becomes apparent that indeed the imagery does contain satanic references, ethos and keywords and refers back to the temple and its vast body of anti-Abrahamic work? What then of the gamers who know only of my secondary forms, or of the occultists who know only of my primary forms – such volatility is hard to predict in a unique experiment that may re-instigate a second satanic panic – or simply silently brood, seeping into the minds and hearts of those whom the forms encounter. In the recently released ‘Gates of Avernus' even here, Christian apologists make special mention that 'evil should have its ass kicked' – remembering of course, that D&D grew from Christian roots it is saturated with praise for the prehistoric ego with a blind lust to kill and an enervating morality that sees the ethos of the Inquisition, or Knights Crusaders, or Salem Witch-hunters enshrined in 'Heroes' whose deeds of murder and immorality are almost always deemed just, rarely punished by the game – and in every way, sanctioned within the fantasy genre as part of doing business.

The box containing our servitors have been built and cast, all that is required now is to carelessly drop the keys.

Herein though comes the question – if the temple actually legitimises the unsubstantiated Christian paranoia of the 80's (ad infinitum) does this weaken or strengthen them? If there are in fact, satanic messages, symbols, and a direct attempt to undermine and disrupt their forms, embedded in a game shadowed with accusatory witch-hunt – and this current can be tied to the temple, which exhibits open and (escalating) hostility toward Christianity and Abrahamism – what then? Firstly it's entirely possible that the backlash destroys the secondary form and its tendrils – with proponents claiming one of two things: A) the servitor has only replicated the Christian's fear by the temples actions mimicking a crusade to rout out and vanquish the 'evil of the Christians' – B) defenders rush to protect the 'rpg' accusing the temple of attempting to destroy a platform that has given said protectors some of its fondest memories and with which form lies powerful sentiment subsequently exposing the temples work en masses to a litany of ridicule. Are these machinations in play – hypocritical?

Is it possible that beyond the volatile aftermath of this stage – such exposure however, seeds the concept/drive of Directive-A16 as a far larger widespread practice to infiltrate and subjugate corporate forms? The temple is not stereo-typically 'satanic' – and does not propound satanism, but certainly an anti-Abrahamic vitriol. It is alien and Lovecraftian, sinister and Illuminati seeking to control and change the Apex narrative of Judaeo-Christian sentiment toward some 'Other' – toward THEM, toward plurality. But in the end perhaps my life's work so far is a tragic-comic waste of decades, amounting simply to death-wishian chaos-magic and self-destruction – the equivalent of dropping a loaded grenade down a well just to hear the bang but not throwing it far enough and blowing myself to pieces in the process. My curiosity to Know is damning and a curse.

THE POWER OF THE WILL TO SHAPE REALITY

E = Environment / e = ego

`E' – representing environment – is that factor referred to as matter, although current understanding of this material or 'black clay' from which everything physical is moulded is yet to be understood in its greater relation to the other elements of the Acausal and its type of Time.

`E' can be seen when walking down the road – it is the essence of the shapes and the geometry of the world. If, for instance, a road is laid, that road is there because of 'e', because of ego, that is, because of someone (some Will) willing that thing to be there and that shape to have taken form from the elements of `E'.

The Grass, the Trees and Plants represent the wild, untamed expression of E – of 'Environment/Nature'.

Left alone these forces would quickly claim back the carefully manicured lawns, garden rows, and neat hedge lines. They would crack the carefully willed concrete driveways and smother the property lines defined by the humble fence.

They would grow over the windows, through the floorboards and carpet the walls in mould. Our cars left unwashed and cleaned would become dirty lumps of mud covered in bird shit and rotten leaves. Their engines would atrophy from disuse, the parts seize and rust without oil or weather protection. We, too, would die if we did not eat, drink, or practice sanitary living.

A tree is a dynamic counterpart inherently and implicitly expressive of the essence of `E' – a tree is part of the natural expression of the E engine – it is the substance of `E' itself given unique form by `E' and not `e'. It is when the `E' meets resistance from the Will or driving force of `e', I.e. the human will to change `E' to suits its needs or desire, that `E' is defined to some extent by `e'.

But until that resistance occurs, the `E' is a raw, primal and alien expression of the Cosmic Being. It is from observations of this natural expression, I.e. Nature, unsullied by the intrusion of man's `e', that Nature can divulge the natural pattern of things, I.e. the Sacred Geometry of the Universe.

Even when `E' has been 'tamed' to suit the `e' of Man, it retains its essentially primal chthonic quality – there must be continued pressure or resistance against the expression of 'E' by man's `e' to keep it serviceable as such, I.e. in one mundane example, we mow the lawns and trim the tree branches when they show signs of interfering with power lines on our streets lest the grass become 'overgrown' or the tree branches 'disruptive' to our Will to Power, `e'. This constant struggle to 'mould the black clay' to mould the primal matter of `E' and the contents generated by its Engine by the contents of `e' – is a struggle to maintain a stasis of Artificial Forms over Natural Ones.

It is a process that can not favour one engine over the other, the E and the e are not divisive when we look at the greater process but joined in a cyclic dance. However, when the Will of `e` tries to force `E` to conform to its Will there can be dire consequences.

Consider the Atomic and Hydrogen Bomb. Man's Will to harness the elements of `E` amplify the opposing Will of `E` and the detonation that results when that `E/e` is released is incredible.

If we see a road sign as we drive by it – we can, with developed powers of empathy and psychic/occult skills come to sense the Will that binds that sign to be there. We know a worker probably placed the sign there by order of the Council for which they work. In turn the Transport Authority issued orders to the Council. Someone in the Transport Authority decided to Will that sign to be there, whether it was a political decision to placate or bribe voters, or a decision based on common-sense to reduce speed – whatever the motive, it is the Will of `e` that conceived of its implementation. The road sign is thus held there by many combined forces of Will, by the worker who wants to have done a good job by doing what he was asked to do and completing the task of setting up the sign, the Council who have ensured the sign was placed there in order to answer to their responsibilities and obligations as part of a bureaucratic transport administration, and the individual in the TA who decided that it would be a good idea to erect a road sign in the first place – owing to pressure from other Wills or `e`s and external/internal forces.

It is due to these Wills, that you are seeing a road sign where it is and why the rest of the power lines, roads, houses, letterboxes etc appear the way they are and have been placed in such a way to give rise to your spatial and visual interpretation of the `black clay` or matter of the `E` that defines your perception of the clay within a specifically shaped geometry.

But, if another Will wishes to smash the sign or remove it – it may do so, altering and disrupting the will of all those other Wills for that sign to be there. In much the same way on a grander scale, the US Government can smash the Iraqi Way of Living, altering and disrupting the will of all those other Wills for that Way of Life to exist.

Why is it so easy for one will to break/disrupt a form created by many wills?

The answer lies in the subtle illusion of Form and the subsequent projection upon these types of mental/physical phantasm by man's `e` that mistakenly adheres to a belief in a permanent state of things called Reality. The `Black Clay` of `E` cannot be permanently fixed in place – even with the strongest Will – for example the Willpower that intended the Pyramids to be built with such precision and mastery that they should stand for ever, or at least the five thousand years or more that they have stood – will still be subject to the law of Iron Will. That Law states that a Form can only remain solid or Iron, so long as sufficient Will from `e` is maintained -and even then the eroding powers of Nature, Time, and other `e` Wills will affect any Form that is Willed into being because the nature of resistance of the two engines takes place in the connexion between the two engines, the “Mirror-zone”.

The Mirror-Zone is the place where content from E and e meet together in an ineffable dynamic. This Zone is at this Time perceived through a third-dimensional prism – but occult faculties or entheogenic drug use can awaken the necessary sight to perceive the Zone by other types of prism, or beyond the Zone without a prism. But regardless of the shape of the Prism – all possible Knowledge is limited to and constituted by the singular point of resistance where the two types of content from each engine meet and touch. Everything outside of this contact is unknowable and constitutes the Abyss.

When the sign is being placed, the will directed at putting it up can be quite tremendous – with many Wills answering to the Will of another, a sort of combined effort to will that sign in place is achieved. However, once the sign is placed – the Will of the one who conceived of it has been achieved by resistance against the ‘E’ (I.e. chopping down trees to make roads, making sand into pouring concrete to hold the sign etc). In such a case, once the sign is up, the Will of the ‘e’ that placed it there will no longer be focused upon the act of resisting the particular elements of ‘E’ in that region specific. The ‘e’ may even forget all about it and move on to performing some other act of Will. The sign will thus have the power of will withdrawn from it – it will no longer be strongly powered by ‘e’ – instead it will revert to its original inertness in the service of Man’s Will and be left to be claimed by ‘E’. Divested of its protection, the sign will easily succumb to the Will of another, whose single will to re-shape the sign’s ‘E’ may prove stronger than the power of the original combined wills, now that the power from those combined wills has been withdrawn and the sign, left for ‘dead’.

The contra can be demonstrated as an active force in Military Installations – in which tremendous ‘e’ Will, and Sustained Will at that, keeps the ‘E’ of these types of Installations, firmly in the service of Man’s ‘e’. That is to say, someone wants the Installations there and makes sure they stay there, makes sure they are carefully guarded, secure and private. Unlike the sign, ‘e’ is not withdrawn from this type of ‘E’. If the sign in the first example had guards posted all about it to ensure it stayed upright – a similar sustained Will would be likely to keep the ‘E’ of the sign firmly in Man’s service. But the Will of any man cannot go on forever and it is severely limited by its lifespan. And so, Traditions, Customs, Religions, and other inventions of Obligation and Homage to another Will are required to keep the sustained force of someone’s Will present on a particular ‘e’ even after causal Death.

But all is Illusion. The ‘e’ of the Military Installation may be strong (the Great Wall of China for instance) but it is at all times being resisted by the ‘E’ and other beings expressive of ‘e’ – and these two engines generate infinite content without pause – only a trickle of which can be known to Us – causing Change, Entropy and Disruption of all Forms, endlessly.

Sooner or later, the resistance of ‘e’ to ‘E’ will fail and the Form or shape made from willing the black clay/E, will be left for dead and thus subject to another’s Will. One must wonder what that means with regard to the Death of God. With God’s Great Will removed from Earth – Earth is left for dead. The Earth is thus at the mercy of the subjugation of human will.

MAGIC, PERCEPTION AND DIMENSION

Are the Temple of THEM, Satanic?

Are the Members of THEM, Satanic?

It’s been said with authenticity by many on the occult path throughout recorded time that the destruction of the concept of Individual Human Spirit has doomed mankind to its sensorial-prison in the third dimension.

A separation from God and a severing of man’s knowledge of The Divine and the Plan, has been stated to be the aim of Luciferic Forces by countless black magical adepts. And in tandem with Lucifer/Satan’s efforts to blind us to the Cosmic Christ, another Evil Spirit named Ahriman is said to work at trapping man forever in the third-dimension ruled by the senses of weight, mass, and measure so that man may never again regain consciousness of the Individual Spirit.

If, Lucifer and Ahriman truly are perceived correctly both in their etheric nature by the powerful adepts who have sought or been enslaved by them, then what is one to make now, of the designs of the Magian?

Is it not the ‘Magian’ who have sought to obscure the occult with a deluge of misinformation and distortion, a far-reaching conspiracy of Magi to control the World by entrapping man in a material Matrix?

Is it not the ‘Magian’ who have sought to reduce the world to a consumerist society using the economic powers of usury and the humble bar-code?

Or is it not?

I think there are a lot of people seeking the type of Ritual I am about to print. I think there are a lot of people unaware of the subtlety of the Occult, wise to the illusion of taking sides, or who perceive correctly the demons behind the scenes that haunt its corridors.

The following ritual is taken from Liber Synystyron, {or Liber SS}.

THE NIGHTMARE RITUAL OF IMAGINATION

Summoning NAHEERZGOTH

Twenty One Instructions were given to the Black Prophet under Mescaline/LSD induced trances. Twenty-One lesser demons, each a hideous nightmare, conjured and lured forth by twenty-one of the horrific sadistic sexual perversions of the High Black Arts that bring them close to the plane of Man, spat forth the unspeakably cruel acts of the forbidden ritual of summoning NAHEERZGOTH.

The Instruction of OZOTMCH

A black plane of stone must be laid measuring eighteen cubit by twenty- three cubit. The wheeling path of Saturn, Mars, Mercury and Sol must be chartered across its surface – where the paths cross the plane there is to be a raising of the plane into triangular apex. The sacrifices are to be bound upon the plane, and their bodies forced to follow the contours by the breaking of bones to create an utterance of agony directed toward the planets aforesaid to awaken them from their slumber.

The Instruction of POHZERP

The Evil Spirit must have its voice. The tongues of Thirty-Three human and animal sacrifice must be removed through the back of the skull -for the utterances of NAHEERZGOTH cannot abide in the forward translation of sound.

The Instruction of AZMIU

The Evil Spirit must have its body. The skin of living human sacrifices must be peeled from the bones. It must be sufficient in measure to cover the diameter of a three cubit black sphere of lead. The skin must be seared to the ball using smoking pokers.

The Instruction of GAMAHA

The Evil Spirit must have its eyes. Seventy-Two eyes that have paid witness to the unspeakable are to be put out of living human skulls and placed in a brass vessel. The brass vessel must be placed in the Angle of MURMIDI.

The Instruction of ENUDERHZ

The Evil Spirit must have its name. A beautiful man and a beautiful woman are to bear witness to the Rites to summon NAHEERZGOTH. They are to be nailed to the Sign of RNEMM to act as a vessel for the outpouring of ichor and filth from the portal to RNEMM. They are to have their lower jaws cut away and bowls of brass are to be attached to their faces whereupon their utterances during witness to the abominable are to be sealed in bowls with the stopper of a human heart.

The Instruction of DAEDUU

The Evil Spirit must have its throne. A Ziggurat is to be forced skyward using the bones and flesh removed from male virgins having hung in the moonlight by their own entrails from the sign of RNEMM. The throne must exceed nineteen cubits in length and is to behold the sign of RNEMM. This is the portal through which the Watcher will enter.

The Instruction of UUDUAK

The Evil Spirit must have its Kingdom. The bodies of a woman and a man are to be staked whilst they are in the act of copulating. Whilst the live victims writhe, they are to be beheaded. The bodies must be laid before the throne. They are the vessels for the Unholy Priests of NAHEERZGOTH. Their Spirits will animate the bodies when HE has come.

The Instruction of XCHTC..

This type of Ritual condemns its user to the Third Dimension. It is, in the definition of Satanic given above, a Satanic/Luciferic Ritual. For it entraps a man in the device known to THEM as the Matrix of sense and form and illusion. Yet, it is paradoxically the most alluring of scents to many would-be black magicians. While the Church of Satan, for instance, seeks to and often succeeds in entrapping its members wholeheartedly in the Material Plane, possessed entirely by their Ego and thus achieving the aims of both Lucifer and Ahriman... the ONA and THEM both begin by transcending this magical imprisonment and taking man toward the stars. By breaking down the myths of Time, of Space, of Matrix, etc. By freeing the Individual Spirit... by working beyond the entrapment of the third dimension toward the Acausal Realms, toward the Aeonic Realm that opens up the third eye to the enormity and the superior perception of Time. This type of work, even if it claims association to Satan, has always been associated with the work of Holy Men, the Holy Grail and the Alchemy of the Philosophers Stone. Such works include almost all of the Order of Nine Angles works on Alchemy, on Aryanism, on smashing the simplistic concepts of Good and Evil of going to extremes in both, On Insight Roles, and more. On THEM's Radia Sol and work with psychology to approach a modern day medium to channel its occult knowledge in a receptive manner. Or the following steps to apprehend the prejudice of ones unconscious third dimensional prism of perception and open the sense world beyond the five and to enter the sixth, not intellectually but in practical terms of immediate experience. Continuing on from the post on Will...

Let us consider the ramifications of this Withdrawal in relation to the Death of God. Without God's great will to protect the Earth – Earth is unprotected – its plains and mountains, trees and living creatures, its resources and its destiny left for dead, abandoned by the will of God. Earth then, is subject to, and at the mercy of, subjugation by the human will.

NOTES:

Time and the content of the two Engines are Fractal in nature. The unique content of the two engines and their interaction together forms the unique conditions present at any moment in Time. There are, however, other forces involved that impinge on what arises on the plateau, such as the formative, disintegrative and flux elements of Aeonics, the unknown effect of Acausal elements, and those elements that are beyond third dimensional perception.

On the Fifth Dimension

...Let us consider the ramifications of this Withdrawal in relation to the Death of God. Without God's great will to protect the Earth – Earth is unprotected – its plains and mountains, trees and living creatures, its resources and its destiny left for dead, abandoned by the will of God. Earth then, is subject to, and at the mercy of, subjugation by the human will.

NOTES ON THE THIRD DIMENSION:

A Square has often been used to designate the right-angle nature of the three dimensions x, y and z. I.e. Depth, Length, and Width.

Everything in the 3rd dimension is considered to have a face (or front) an opposite face (or back) and possess a quality of reduction into the ether, that constitutes `space' between the two faces. A person is perceived to spatially have a face and a back of the head. A chest and a back. A knee and a calf. A car is perceived to spatially have a front, a back, a front bumper and a rear bumper. A book, a cup, even a ball (which is round and has no defined "face" as opposed to its "back") are said to have a front and a back. This is because of the restrictions of the 3rd dimensional perception. What might we look like if we able to perceive in five dimensions? Would human beings look different? Would everything look different?

Is it the faculty of sight that perceives dimension? In order to approach an answer it is necessary that a third D perception be escaped. In caveman times, the paintings of hunts on the walls lacked any kind of disciplined depth perception. The figure of a hunter surrounded by animals of all shapes and sizes did not process the concepts of near and far. To the caveman the world may well have been 2 D, or even 1 D and thus it was depicted as such. It seems confusing to our consciousness because we understand near and far, and that things seem to change shape (shape constancy) as they get further away or draw closer, but also understand (shape relativity) and that a cow is not smaller (in mass) just because it is far away.

But what is a dimension? Is it a plane? Is it a direction? Is it the perception of geometry in an abstract form of cognition? If I asked someone what shape the painting on the easel is from where I am sitting, which looks like an askew oblong to me, they would almost certainly say it is a rectangle. "Which is it" – is a cop-out. Both projections are abstract, the thing which I have created by projecting a name and localisation in space over E – is not a shape. "What is it" is thus useless too.

What of a hollow object? Say a square box. It has an outside? An inside? As well as a front and back. It has that quality of depth that we'd call "sides". But if we were inside it, would not each side itself constitute `a new' front and back, or are we to think of the container holistically; that there is nothing `new' inside the box that was not part of the original perception of quality between the Face and the Back? Is an extra dimension to be found hidden from sight in the original quality of depth? Must we begin our perception anew once inside the box? An Inside the box requires the supposition of an Outside – and are we not making a very clear demarcation of dimensions when we walk inside our house or leave it to go outside?

When we are Inside the box, is the concept `Outside' determined by its quality of depth away from the perceiver? Does the side we are facing become the new `front' and the outside face of that side, the `back'? If it depends on which way the perception proceeds from – I.e. if we are outside looking at the front of the box, or inside looking at an equally justified front of the box – which is the front, and which is the back?

Is it not the object that is three-dimensional but our own perception – which must continually change its mind to determine the front of a box by projecting those dimensions upon it? Does the front of the box change from being the front of the box when we look at it from the back? Does the back then become the front? If it does, then it is shown that it is not the object that is three-dimensional but our perception – which is like a glass box we place over the E and label it accordingly to limit it to what we see. If the front of the box changes, and the old front of the box becomes the new back of the box – what has occurred? Firstly – there never was any ‘front’ of the object. There never is any ‘front’ of the object. There is a moving of our third dimensional perception onto a particular part of E and an interpretation of that E via our prejudiced prism.

The ‘front of the box’, does not magically move from one place to another – it does not somehow become ‘outside’ after being ‘inside’ – because it does not exist at all. It is a construct of human thought onto an object, to will that object to be serviceable and – to be an object. If our perception is a construct, and a product of human thought – could the human being construct a four or five dimensional prism through which to perceive? To answer this, we need to define what it is that gives rise to the qualities of the third dimension that are perceived. Is it the biological construction of the eyes? Is it the bending of light? Is it the type of consciousness we possess? What is it?

TIME, has been said to represent the 4th Dimension. Time has been believed linear. If I walk across a room, I am making a straight line forward from some point or other – and that point will forever be the past in that line. A to B to C. Some use a helix to represent a cyclic version of Time whose contents of the Past are in some way inimical and known to the contents of the progressions beyond that past point – or to put it another way, the past is implicit in the future. But what is a helix but a curved straight line? Time is beyond Depth, Length and Width – how it joins, if it joins, its use as a measure of Change (by inherently creating ‘Change’) but it is an abstract used to measure something that is observed – but without labels, remains a mystery. Am I moving through Time as I write this, or is Time moving through me. Am I inert or is Time inert?

We must also wonder, if we project three-dimensions onto all other objects, why should our observation of anything else be different – why should our perception not be prejudiced of Time too? If Time is the 4th dimension, then the qualities of E and e can be said to represent the 5th dimension. The union of these engines is invisible to all means of three-dimensional prism perception yet it can be intuitively grasped as easily as it is physically apprehended under the guise of Reality. There is no length, no width, no depth in the joining of Ego and Environment, no way to measure it with Time, Change or any other abstract to quantify the nature of this profound connexion – the result from the union of the two engines is at best, supremely complex, and at worst, unquantifiable. The two engines do not join at right-angles, they do not fit into one another like a key and lock, and they are more than likely a singular process that is so vast it is perceived as two. Yet the brain, the I, the sense of sentience that knows itself to be valid: that acts as the inquisitor of the content externally and internally related to it – experiences this ‘invisible’ fifth dimension as Life, and its presence in all the interactions/elements that result from that Living.

The Body is ‘E’.

The Brain is ‘E’.

It, consciousness, is an exponent of ‘E’, called ‘e’.

‘e’ is the Individual Spirit.

‘e’ can Will ‘E’ into its service.

‘e’ can Will ‘e’ into its service.

‘e’ as an exponent of ‘E’ is subject to ‘E’ and finite in its Will.

The fifth dimension then, is accessed intuitively but its presence can be perceived as grounded in all things even through a third dimensional prism. That is, the connexion/joining of Ego and Environment is everywhere – but despite its connexion being present in the stitching of all things – perception of the world through a third dimensional prism will restrict lucid perception of the fifth and the fifth will remain ‘invisible’ under such restricted conditions even though its presence is plain as day. Thus the fifth dimension is an Occult/Esoteric dimension. The question put to Initiates of this Temple and of Magic in general, is do you understand where you stand?

Exercises related to the E/e

Without several occult keys/insights to help withdraw various levels of projection that cause the third dimension to imprison one in a world of Sense, or first being able to switch off the Matrix and perceive the illusions correctly as per the “Sinister Matrix of the Black Clay” mentioned in our essay “In Sinister Solidarity” these exercises may prove difficult or impossible, but for the initiate advanced in the Septenary Way or particularly skilful in Visualisation/Psychic Isolation, they may open doors previously closed. The exercises are very simple but may cause great discomfort. This is partly because of the awkward and previously un-experienced sensations evoked, and partly because they confront the self.

1) The first exercise involves trying very hard to focus all your awareness on various parts of your body. I.e. your right knuckle of your thumb – and trying to ‘wake’ it up to the sensations around it rather than utilising the stream-lined passage of censoring awareness that we usually use in every-day life so that sensorium do not overwhelm us. In this case we are going to try to become conscious of the sensation of that knuckle to such a degree that we can feel the air moving on its surface, feel the follicles of hair growing out of the pores, and feel the skin, blood and bone inside it. When you have done this warm-up exercise it is time to turn this focus toward feeling the Brain. One must try to become aware of the pressure inside one’s head of the brain against the skull, of the surface of the brain cerebellum, of the synapses and blood – i.e. one is trying to awaken the sensation of being bodily aware of one’s own brain in the same way we are aware of our hand. We are also trying to reduce our holistic awareness such as we have of our whole body, to the tiny cramped quarters of the cranium. This exercise may prove extremely uncomfortable – for the brain is not usually felt consciously, except perhaps as a weight, and this weight is again mostly unconscious and forms part of the heavy feeling that accompanies any conscious thoughts of sentience. That is, that when we chance to think of what it is that looks out of our eyes, behind our faces that gives us animation and allows us to do things, we are aware to some extent of the ‘I’... but without a brain and the subsequent weight it contributes; Consciousness, would in fact, feel like a light type of force rather than a solid density of being behind the eyes.

When you can feel your brain, when you are able to imagine/sense/perceive the contours of the cerebrum, feel the division of the hemispheres, i.e. focus total awareness on your brain’s sensations and body – try next to isolate where you think ‘you’ are coming from in the brain.

We call each other by name so often the process takes becomes entrapment whereby we come to perceive ourselves incorrectly as a ‘personality of its own accord’.

Where do you originate from? Where is the source of you situated in your brain? is it at the very back? the very front? somewhere in the middle? Can you pin-point it? If you can, then you have found the entry point into the causal of the engine of “your” [more correctly, the] ‘e’.

Everything external to that point, is the ‘E’.

The fifth dimension is the experience of the total being and the resistance to total being.

ECONOMICS, MONEY, MAGIC AND THE SINISTER: PART 1-4

My interest in the psyche, prime causality, original chaos, human behaviour, materialism, form and ultimately a heuristic search for wisdom as to the architecture of the world has often lead me toward the topic of economics. As they say “money makes the world go round” and anything that makes the world go round is what I am interested in. I have suspected that economics is more intrinsically related to and complimentary of my interest in Forms and the Sinister than I have yet been able to explore. The final chapter of Book III of my DOAD series originally contained essays on Usury (long since removed) because I felt a basic understanding of money was an essential tool to understanding the world. I have come to see just how deeply the concept of money affects and connects things and it has prompted me to give this subject more serious attention.

I initially felt it would be too challenging to grasp the mathematical formulas employed within this field (and too boring) but it has not been essential to apply these formulas. I tend not to enjoy being lumbered with nomenclature and prefer to extract an understanding of forces and pressures at work in a form, so I have settled for just recognising that there are formulas with a basic understanding of what they are for. To this end I’ve been trying to develop a wholistic understanding of how economics affects everything and everyone. This research has enabled me to widen the scope of my work with a rich and rewarding vein of new insights though a Master of Economics I am not.

The most prominent of my insights is that economics and its development and institution can effortlessly be called Magic or Black Magic. There is virtually nothing an unlimited amount of money cannot achieve (since what is worth achieving is often decided by how much money it can make.) Money brings with it prestige, status, security and more and the way in which money came to be so powerful and omnipresent is simply amazing.

I am cynical of many aspects that are associated with magic I have often seen two sides to the occult the tricks that people play with Ouija boards, tarot cards, each other – and have generally been more interested in what psychology/sociology has to say about these practices and what it says about people rather than the otherworld. My approach to magic however is not outright scepticism. It is more about resisting self-delusion and not encouraging the self-deluded in order to really discover for myself if it exists outside of imagination. I still don’t know.

I have experienced enough to force acceptance of the supernatural, but few of my experiences have been what I expected or thought to expect as if when it happens, the occult is indeed other-worldly and leaves you wondering just what the hell is really out there. Those experiences with seeing demons and God and yet catching people performing tricks such as moving the glass on Ouija opened up a curious abyss into which my questions have been falling ever since. On one hand, I believe that, in the sense of being able to enact power over events objects and people through using ritual/altar magic, magic words, symbols etc and/or simply wishing it success is extremely rare but it can be done. And yet, on the other hand, despite the nonsense that can be associated with magic, in another sense I see that it is a daily occurrence enacted on all levels of society from politics to religion to marketing to advertising to movies to music to media – and that many things that are by my definition magical go unnoticed.

I have since moved on from ghost-busting, demon summoning, voodoo dolls and angst over which coloured candles to burn seeing what humanity can do has ruined my awe of demons, not even seeing a ghost but feeling it sit on my bed left me with a horrible chill that there are some things we share the world with that all my logic simply cannot control or would ever want to see, and psychology has shown me more weak spots and how to apply them to people than a voodoo doll ever did. Alchemy, Insight Roles, Martial Arts, Satanism and more all provided rich insight into how I work, others work, things work or don't work.

My interest, now that I am 32, is where all the interests I have ever had, about the world I have found myself in, meet: The meta-science of forms; the deliberate deception through their control and execution; and the common-day casting of illusions by all human beings in incredible ingenious endless varieties that lead to real results, whether its creating an avatar online to change others perception of us, or using propaganda to convince a nation it's a good idea to go to war. It's not conspiracy, science, religion, magic, the occult, psychology, sociology, humanism or philosophy these approaches all have their strength and weakness but a mix of anything I can get my hands on to understand; its Mvimaedivm Know now my way.

Economics though is more powerful and more effective than any occult system I have seen demonstrated or witnessed at work. And though it may seem odd to refer to economics as black magic or cite it as an occult topic some may remember the comparison I made of a Bank Manager with a Fortune Teller in the Book of ABSU:

If I asked who is more likely to be deemed crazy, a Bank Manager or a Tarot Reader; you are probably likely to say Bank Manager because the phrasing of the question seems like a trick and you are resisting the lure. However, "common-sense" will tell us that we are more likely to believe a Tarot Reader will be perceived as crazy over a Bank Manager. But why? If it is because Tarot Reading involves occult elements, is less than scientific and offers spurious satisfaction to the desperate or gullible: why does it seem less crazy for Bank managers to involve themselves with Usury (the magical creation of new paper or electronic money out of thin air by Banks that leads people into debt) Economics or working with numbers? The handling of money is quintessentially far more occult than Tarot. Bank Managers seem professional, normal, even essential members of our society but very few people actually know the true hideous power of economic theory, realise it is far more destructive than Christianity has ever been, or even remember how to question the status quo of what is crazy. And I say `remember' tongue-in-cheek, because you cannot remember if you are not taught, and teaching the actual applications of the world is not what Schools or Educational Institutions do. A Bank Manager really only differs from the Tarot Reader in their presentation of occult mystique, and because they tend to give us something more tangible and with our loss of faith in the spiritual, the solid takes on a greater meaning in our lives.

Consider the process of a Tarot Reading or Bank Appointment. You come in and are impressed by the setting; it seems professional and mysterious (or "professional and legitimate" in bank terms) and you sit down to discuss what you want. The Reader/Manager does a reading for you and tells you that you may encounter some hardships in the next few months but your future will be financially secure and you may even be rich. They then ask you for a fee for performing the reading and because you feel secure and happy being told ambiguities you pay them. With the Tarot Reading, the fee ends when you leave the room. But with the Bank Manager you take a small fee with you called `interest' and it grows and grows every day until you pay it back at huge extra expense, sometimes multiple times what you originally borrowed. Or you succumb to debt and lose everything: like magic.

I've always taken the word occult to mean hidden. And my work with forms and deconstructing them has revealed to me that a great deal of the things in this world that are hidden, or occult, hide in plain sight. And all the while thinking as a teenager that there were ley lines, energy grids, spirits and other magical forces that guided the world on unseen esoteric tracks I handled and spent money without being any the wiser that my seemingly innocuous actions with money were what really ruled humanity.

There is probably very little incentive for the average occultist to take time to think deeply about the history or science or miracle of money when it is far more tantalising (and self-indulgent) to obsess over how to set up a kick-ass altar to best worship the devil – but now that I have come to realise my place in the world and know more about how it works. I see better what motivates many of the things I see around me and gave rise to the way things are or predicts how they will be; the actions of nations and individuals, the search for spirituality or wealth often comes back to money not necessarily theirs, and not all the time, but somewhere money has usually been involved and controlled available choices.

Personally, I think I worshipped the devil because I rejected the world and my feelings of powerlessness in it. I sought power over it, power of myself, power over knowing my place in it. Doing what I do now is probably a magnified, just more dignified, method of seeking that power. While I realise understanding these two very different subjects appeal at different ages ultimately, they are more or less the same. The devil is in the details.

The Devil is in the Details

Before I continue, I should warn you that I won't be explaining every term I use below, or assume some knowledge of economics already by the reader. I have also presumed that when presented with a topic you know next to nothing about, you, like me, remedies this by educating oneself about it. If you are significantly interested/motivated – a number of excellent (at least, I think so) key articles relating to Usury, the origin of Money and the nefarious deeds and practices of Banks are available from Sinister 101 group.

Insights I have reached through Economics involve enlightenment into an intricate subject developed by others for centuries whose premise is a methodology/system that desires to know what motivates human decisions, reactions and rationale – and a rich history of the fervent striving to find a method to measure, predict and influence them. The premise of black magic is remarkably similar.

I have had my eyes opened to the theory and concept of collective liquidity behind economic balance ruled by the marketplace and market forces. I have a better understanding of market forces that govern people on state, federal, national and global scales and how (i.e. the processes involved) decisions, media and forms affect individual choices and everything from food to wages to recessions. I have a better understanding into the role of govt on an economic and not a previously myopic political level. Insight into the invention and unavoidable institution of capitalism as a reflexion (conscious) and a reaction (unconscious) to innate human behaviour, acquisitiveness and ingeniousness. Insight into world events, world decisions and the complex theory of pressures that the rational mind reacts to and/or is believed to react to – enabling economists to predict human behavioural outcomes. The control myths, stories and archetypes have over people is still very powerful despite the air of pre-possessed autonomy society tells us we have as the consumer, for instance, and our ability to choose consciously is often undermined by ancient unconscious archetypes that possess us. I will give an example.

One recent example involves the interesting effects on part of society from the death of a character in a popular TV soap-opera/drama show Packed to the Rafters. Despite having spent millions in campaigns to get the message through to people about the dangers of being distracted while driving with mobile phones the message was only carried through to the public on a large scale via the death of Zoe, who is hit by an oncoming car as she crosses an intersection reading a message from her boyfriend. dramatic make-believe archetype.

If it weren't so dangerously ridiculous the presence of Absu it would be funny. The character's death reportedly drew 3 million viewers setting a record. It was promptly given an encore (repeat) showing. It was actually reported as news on several channels – with some mourners going so far as to send in photos of themselves dressed in funeral garb for the occasion (except one mourner who dressed in pink citing it was what the character would have wanted). It was also considered front page magazine material but front-page newspaper headline too? With all that was going on in the world the death of a fictional character nabbed prime spot. Whilst one could forgive the idiocy/credulity of the media and some readers/viewers in overreacting to this outpour the Government's Transport Accident Commission even went so far as to feature an ad about driving with a mobile phone that said tonight you will experience first-hand the effects of the death of a loved one on the family referring to the repeat showing of the episode.

The death of this character created a national wave of grief and sympathy and far more of a reaction than many tragic events have ever received or ever receive even when they involve real people. What is interesting is A) it's not a real person we are talking about here but an actress who did not die, and B) that in this instance the incidental show death and large-scale archetypal resonance lay with soap-opera characters and was more powerful than any amount of emotionally-based psychologically deliberate ads containing equal scenes of trauma and loss in countless campaigns for people to get off their phones while driving. It really is worth asking is it necessary for a person to exist in order to be real?

A significant part of this nation (over)reacted to this fictitious event rationally and irrationally though we tend to laugh collectively at the stupid Americans who believe in angels or can't find Canada on a map. I wonder what the revelation of Christ's second coming or an official announcement that aliens are among us by the govt would bring (OA32).

Anyway, this reaction to a form is a single example of how greatly people can be moved by simple pressures and the presentation of forms money can also be treated as a soap opera that people watch and grieve over, to the point of killing themselves, if a character dies (stocks fall, companies go bust, writs are filed etc). Consider how greatly the Global Financial Crisis, Great Depression or Wall St Crash affected people and you may be able to see the parallel between the reaction to a TV show and the reaction (world-wide) to a fiscal drama. The way money sets up and controls our choices is simply remarkable and If you haven't already read it, I recommend taking a look at the article in Sinister 101 by Gustave Le Bon on choice and how it is narrowed for us.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MAGIC AND ECONOMICS

The occult-science of money and its apparent indispensability to societies has long been of interest to my work because of its omnipresence and omnipotence; its relationship to materialism and human obsession with form(s); its living example of a conceptual/ethereal idea enforced as physical reality and the scope of the resulting matrix of power it sustains affecting everything and everyone in a controlled and uncontrolled manner. Taking time to look into economics has allowed me to make many new connections, some ignorances to dissolve (and no doubt new ones arise) and gain a better intuitive grasp of the motivations of people on an economic scale providing further considerations to draw on when writing about what I observe in life. I've played Hasbro's Monopoly game many times, but I never really understood its context in the real world before or appreciated why some monopolies are important to have. It is as if my automatic cultural programming over-rode my consciousness of caring how I was involved.

The way I see it, the history of money is an occult (hidden) history and a magical sequence of events arising out of necessity to protect property and control the world (see Sinister 101: Economics folder). Understanding the importance of property and the necessity to preserve and protect property rights of individuals and groups is an ingenious and intricately complex system that has been with humanity a considerable length of its life and shapes our societies.

Once based on notes/chits that could be exchanged for goods/gold, for most of the West, money is now almost solely an electronic medium with banks and the govt able to create money without requiring the capital to back it up in gold, oil or other resources. This means an unlimited amount of thin air or credit money can be lent, despite there being only a finite amount of hard currency in circulation that can be returned. When debt cannot be repaid, the banks foreclose on mortgages and loans and people lose everything. This is how banks became and stay rich.

I used to hear people says that something was more secure than Fort Knox referring to the United States-based reservoir where they keep stockpiled gold in ingots to back floated currency. But I don't hear that any more. Now banks simply perform a magic trick and pull endless money from thin air by issuing electronic credit. This magic trick is not free however, its over-performance has hidden costs and effects, and careless use of usury can be seen through fiscal phenomena such as recessions, inflations, boom, national debt and budget surplus/deficit that sometimes drastically affect human standards of living.

*Gold has been of particular interest to somebody in Australia the past year years and a spate of companies have been buying up old unused mobile phones (which contain gold and copper among other metals) and a new company trading under the name Gold Buyers Australia has been doing the rounds buying back gold at low prices. Seems like someone is trying to buy up national supply in order to increase the worth of hard bullion as in economics, the shorter the supply, the more the demand. The more demand, the more something is worth. This tactic often occurs in the antiques trade where people buy up as many available items of a certain set as possible in order to decrease supply and availability of that item and thus make it more valuable.

Magic has been referred to as a means of directing the will to control events and people and quintessentially this is what money does or can do.

The system of economics viz. Money, is primarily used to avoid barter or the trade of goods with other goods – and to create a universal currency or standard of worth that can be exchanged for good and services, instead of paying with goods and services.

It measures its success by the increases in standards of living its system fosters through patents, technology and property rights which encourages people to make money by sharing inventions and increase the standard – and measures its failure by the durations and degree of human suffering bad fiscal policy inflicts.

A good example of how economic policy can affect human lives was seen in the Great Depression where a policy of having prices fixed (sticky) for things caused untold hardship for entire nations because the economy could not naturally adjust to match changing market forces. For all the suffering the poor endure without access to money and the lamentable abuse and evils of capitalism. Economics is an application of market forces/trade that ultimately claims to trend toward the greatest good. Contrary to what I believed previously, viz. that selfish corporations were ruining lives, the success of economics to improve lives strangely enough involves, in fact depends on companies and individuals being motivated by ruthless self-interest. But since economics so widely affects people's lives it is certainly something that should be taken into account in Aeonics or how forms affect people. Since it is concerned with the decrease of human suffering it opens up the possibility of deliberate abuse of the system for profit and increased suffering and is intrinsically connected to the im/moral definition of Sinister as a force that directly/indirectly controls us.

Economics measures its success in maximising utility or human happiness where being economic means doing the best one can to make limited resources and time stretch as far as they can to get the most from them. In the case of resources, some things can be owned outright, and some things cannot. Among those that can be owned are land, vehicles, goods, holidays, electronic goods, services such as electricity or phone line, assets and capital. An example of things that cannot be owned are electromagnetic wavelengths because there is a very definite limit to its spectrum for the thousands of radio stations worldwide the waves must be shared and portioned as best as can be but no-one owns or can own the spectrum because there is no way to stop others from using the resource (light) for free.

Like all forms, economics involves complex and time-consuming minutiae when broken down into its network of concepts and applications however it has occurred to me that its behaviour and concept can be likened to and explained well by, driving on the highway.

Economics is largely self-regulating. Which is to say, if left to its own devices, the market tends to sort itself out. Strangely enough even (or especially) chronic self-interest is ultimately necessary to serve the greater good. A company (let's call it AA) can have a monopoly on something, iphone5 (a future model) for instance and charge a fortune for people to buy it. Because people can't get it anywhere else, it is exclusive, hard to get, and increases demand – but this only applies for 20 years while their patent lasts. After that 20-year protection, the invention or technology is considered fair game for anyone who wants to replicate it. When replicators (BB and CC) enter the market with their new versions of the iphone5 – extremely keen to make as much money as company AA has been, AA suddenly loses the monopoly on the technology and the market. With AA, BB and CC all offering iphone5s, each corporation has to undercut the other to make their product more attractive to the consumer i.e., cheaper. Suddenly the iphone5 is so cheap, it's no longer profitable and so it stops getting made. The new iphone6 has made them obsolete anyway and the whole cycle begins again because there is the promise of secured profits to be made by patenting new technology for another 20 years. Capitalism continues perpetually in this way by creating a new commodity every time the last is no longer in demand.

The essential thing I have found to be fascinating about economics is that changing any one thing in economic policy has resounding effects on everything else. If the price of things rises too high, market forces act to bring them down. If the price of things falls too low, market forces act to bring them up – the fluctuation of sales, discounts, wage increases/decreases, interest rates, inflation, recession and more are all regulated naturally as a product of the rational mind. The rational mind is affected by the trends it predicts are coming, makes its decisions based on those predictions and acts accordingly. This is exactly how the stock market works and why crashes occur. If everyone working for company AA sees an important bulletin on the news about mobile phones being proved to cause cancer* consumer confidence falls, they stop buying phones and stocks plummet. World events, that once seemed so far away and irrelevant to me as I viewed them on the news, suddenly fall into place as effects from a butterfly's wing with potentially devastating unseen results. People's decisions have consequences, and when large numbers of people make the same decision, that pressure influences fiscal and social policies in the directions they take.

*7 Dec, I just heard the news announce a scientific study that claims to have proved a link between mobile phones used by children and resulting disruptive behaviour. How unusually lucky to have a hypothetical form come into being that I can now study the effects of.

I have noted however, that several Multi-National Corporations appear to have taken ingenious steps to avoid many of the typical and naturally occurring market re-balances that occur to stop profiteering indefinitely. While by no means versed in the subtleties of economics, I am seeing how some (Australian, for instance) corporations have insulated themselves indefinitely from slumps in market forces and decrease in demand by securing a range of diverse commodities instead of specialising. Also, that instead of competition that pushes prices down Wesfarmers, Australia's largest corporation owns and operates a chain of logistics for mining, freight, food, office supplies, hardware, and more. These companies each support one another, ruthlessly undercut and under-supply competition and have a monopoly on building, business and food. To one of Americas most terrifying monopolies at work I recommend the excellent documentary Food Inc. that deals with the US Multi-National Monsanto and its aggressive tactics that have all but ruined natural crops in America, and replaced them all forcibly with unlabelled Genetically Modified alternatives.

The following are some notes from Food Inc regarding the collusion between Monsanto and key players in the Bush Administration who govern Regulatory and Judicial offices and have passed laws to completely destroy any farmer that uses natural seed. Natural seed, is not modified and re-seeds, allowing farmers to re-use that seed for next year's crop. Monsanto have passed statutes that prohibit natural seed, so that farmers are forced to buy new seed from Monsanto every year destroying agricultural independence for any farmer.

The following are some of the key Monsanto people that made the decisions affecting food practices. Note that each of them had close ties to the Bush administration or Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Clarence Thomas – Monsanto

Attorney 1976-1979

Supreme Court Justice 1991-present

presided over the one court case that decided the Seed-Saving issue. He wrote the majority of the details to prevent farmers from saving their own seed.

Donald Rumsfeld Searle CEO 1977-1985
Searle Pharmaceutical (bought by Monsanto)

John Ashcroft Missouri Senator 1995-2001
Received record donations from Monsanto

Monsanto also had close ties to the Clinton admin.

Mickey Kantor
Board of directors 2000-2002
Monsanto

Robert Shapiro Monsanto CEO 1995-2000
President Clinton's Advisory Board
Monsanto

Political power has prevented political debate over the rapid change to our food supply and practices.

Wendell Murphy
North Carolina state senator 1989-1993
Smithfield Board of directors 2000-present

Margaret Miller
Chemical lab supervisor 1985-1989
FDA Branch Chief 1989-present
Monsanto

Linda Fisher
Vice president government & public affairs 1995-2000 – Monsanto
EPA deputy administrator 2001-2003

Michael Taylor
King & spaulding lawyer 1984-1991 – Client of Monsanto
Advised Monsanto on genetically modified food labelling.
Deputy commissioner for policy 1991-1994 FDA
Oversaw FDA's decision no to label genetically modified foods.
Vice president for public policy 1998-2000 – Monsanto

California law put forth a statute that all cloned animal food products particular to SB-63, should be labelled. It passed the State legislature, but was vetoed by then, Governor Schwarzenegger.

The food companies have fought against telling you anything about food. They fought not to have the Nutrition/Calorie information on food available. Meat industry fought not to have company of origin labelled on food. They fought against Transfats. They fought against GMO and now 70% (closer to 90%) has some form of GMO inside it.

These are invariably labelled from 951 to 1145, modified starch, modified corn, natural flavour, and so on. (Please see GMO for more information on the meaning of these numbers.)

Monsanto legally and literally owns Corn and Soy. They control the seed supply of both and sue any farmer into the black if they choose not to use their seed. If GMO seed crops are found to have contaminated a farmer's natural crop- It is by law up to the farmer to prove they did not steal Monsanto's patented seed. Even if Monsanto grows GMO crops further up the road. Monsanto has a team of 75 investigators who prosecute and perform random spot checks on farmers to make sure they don't save their seed. Anyone who does, is prosecuted. Thousands of farmers have lost their livelihood merely for refusing to use GMO seed in their crops.

The food industry has different protections than any other industry. Oprah Winfrey was sued by Texas cattlemen for what she said about meat after finding out what was in it faeces, guts, blood and it took 6 years and $1 m in fees to overturn the decision on her favour.

The Farm Bill sets the policy for the entire food produce industry. Its focused on crops that can be stored especially corn. Why corn? Larry Johnson from the Centre for crops utilisation research Iowa state university says we are now Engineering our food, not growing it. We bring all the pieces we manufacture together to engineer new foods. The biggest advance in recent years was High Fructose Corn Syrup. He says up to 90% of foods contain a soy or corn ingredient (he's right). And most the time contain both.

Corn products:

Ketchup

Cheese

Twinkies

Batteries

Peanut butter

Cheez-its

Salad dressing

Coke

Jelly
Sweet&low Syrup Juice
Kool-aid
Charcoal
Diapers
Motrin
Meat
Fastfood

High Fructose Corn Syrup is an amazing product from it you can make Cellulose, Calcium Stearate, Ethyl Lactate, Maltodextrin, Saccharin, Xanthan Gum, Gluten, Sucrose, Sorbital, Ethel acetate, Ascorbic Acid, Baking Powder, Vanilla Extract, Sorbic Acid, Di-Glycerides, Citric Acid, Citrus Cloud, Emulsion, Alpha Tocopherol, polydextrose, semolina, starch, fibersol-2, xylitol, white vinegar, tumarac acid, inositol, margarine, zein. It's also used as feed for animals, cows, pigs chickens and even fish cows/fish don't naturally eat corn so Monsanto are teaching them how. There are factory's where there are open funnels inserted through the cow's side to access their first stomach (see Food Ink documentary)

By monopolising corn, and teaching animals to eat it instead of grain, cheap grain allowed meat prices to plummet in America. Meat is very cheap in America, but very expensive here. We do not have GMO labelling laws here, but I assure you thousands of products contain modified starch, hi-maize, natural flavour and other terms in their contents that legally announce GMO without informing the consumer. Monsanto recently announced on its website that it is moving its operations into Australia (2010).

I must admit it was nice to be blissfully ignorant of these facts once. Mind you, there is very little that is not Sinister or as close to evil as I will admit, about Monsanto's success and tactics to destroy natural seed it also fits the typical depiction of a ruthless psychopathic corporation where profits and power are secondary to human happiness and integrity. Though please note that there are many examples of companies with monopolies that are not so dire – many of them governmental – The patents office for example which ensures people are motivated to share their inventions by being guaranteed protection to make money from them at least for a while. Otherwise, people would just steal their ideas and out of paranoia for sharing anything with anyone nothing new would be invented. For all their complexity, economics has a way of reducing humans to their most simplistic behaviours.

An intrinsic aspect of the Sinister involves the ominous extent to which something else is going on beneath a rosy facade specifically designed to deceive and placate. Visit their website. Monsanto fit that criterion nicely.

ECONOMICS, MAGIC, MONEY AND THE SINISTER: PT 3

The idea that being selfish can somehow benefit the greater good took a lot of convincing for me to consider plausible. But it rings true. McDonalds, for all its evils, waste, poor pay, environmental impact etc is inspired to spend money on hospitals for children, fundraisers, sports gear and so on in order to offset the negative impact it has. Without the evils of McDonalds, there wouldn't be any Ronald McDonald house so out of self-interest, McDonalds has to do something nice for its corporate image, even if we don't think it is a sincere gesture or enough to make up for the bad things it brings we realise that we need one to have the other.

Something else that is very interesting to me is the Prisoners Dilemma which predicts the overwhelming temptation to cheat is always the the best move a business can make. Because of this temptation, companies that could form a monopoly and stranglehold on a resource, such as OPEC on oil cheat on agreements to get ahead. This prompts other countries in OPEC to drop prices or raise them accordingly, ensuring profits are sabotaged for everyone. Despite this, if everyone else is doing the same thing, and charging a high price for petrol the temptation to charge a low price and make huge amounts of money is enormous.

I was thinking about it on my way to work and figured that a good way to describe how a lot of economic forces interact all at once is to relate them to driving on the freeway. Driving involves an ever-changing dynamic of give and take. In order to pursue your self-interest of getting to where you want to be, at various intervals you must slow down, wait at lights, let people in, indicate your direction and be continually watchful of other drivers' movements.

You must do these things because the actions of other drivers in front of you affect you and everyone else too they tend to naturally force you to stop, or slow, so that you don't hit them and damage your/their car. The freeway works because everyone tends to do the same thing with regularity but also because it can adjust quickly to changing conditions. If there is a crash up ahead, it can stop the flow of traffic completely until an outside force (in economic terms: the Government, in driving terms: the Police) intervene to get the flow of traffic started again. However, if cars continue to go the same speed despite a crash up ahead then inevitably there is a massive collision.

Collective Self-interest not only makes us work toward the greater good even as we aim to increase our self-interest – but it even acts as a force against those who choose to speed or drive dangerously because of the potential risk of injury or fines involved. This analogy is apt for explaining how greedy corporations are eventually forced by market forces to lower their prices or to strive for the greater good in the course of striving to pursue self-interest. You may think it's in your self-interest to speed while everyone else is driving at the posted speed and you may get away with it but eventually outside forces will intervene to regulate you, just as they do in the market and return you to a safe speed, or no speed. You might lose your car, your license or you might lose control and suffer a fatal end. In economic terms a competitor enters your market, removes your monopoly, and makes it less profitable to continue producing your product.

I have learned that while market forces eventually return to normal over time as rational minds react in collective succession to outcomes the speed at which it returns is important because of the amount of human suffering that occurs in the interim.

I have also learned that although often demonised the Govts involvement in economics exists to artificially speed up/slow down various transitions of market forces (i.e. inflation or recession) to return the economy to normal and try to minimise human suffering (stabilise the economy). They basically do this by acting to break up or protect monopolies, by imposing tariffs on trade, or by increasing/decreasing the money supply. This sort of intervention has been very difficult for Australia to enforce because it no longer owns the majority of its resources (see below). But this type of intervention is not restricted to single companies but exists for nations as well.

In a landmark case, the European Union moved to stop a merger by General Electrics and Honeywell, a military corporation in the US because of the huge amount of control the unified company would have over the market, enabling collusion or price-fixing to generate massive profits at huge social expense. Australia is however somewhat unique in its economic policies – because the govt now own so very little it has nothing to use as leverage and ostensibly no legal standing to tell a private company how to use/manage its resources.

Fairfax Media headed by James Packer (heir to Kerry Packers billion dollar empire) owns a huge portion of Australian media, last estimated at 50-60% despite the conflict of interest this control exercises, qv. equating to propaganda, the govt are powerless to stop it. Likewise, Wesfarmers owns the largest and most powerful chain of corporations in Australia including Food, Imports, Mining, Steel, Stationery, Office Supplies, Hardware and more monopolising a diverse range of products and ensuring the company can make money because it is able to provide whatever is needed depending on the market.

Almost any tool that appears on tv is sponsored by Bunnings Warehouse a chain so ruthless it refused to let people raising money through selling hot dogs for local sports venues and charities sell water because it would cut into Bunnings profits. A chain so ruthless it placed a wheelbarrow of goods from its store, priced, and an identical wheelbarrow from competitors stores, priced, outside its premises, behind which were comparable catalogues. Bunnings, Officeworks, Woolworths, Safeway, etc have cornered office supplies, hardware and food supplies Australia wide and because they have such powerful logistics, presumably control the prices, having crushed most of their competition.

Something I find fascinating about economics is the ripple of its causal effects. The increase of one thing has a counter-effect on something else too much money in circulation makes it worth less and you need more of it to buy something. This has knock-on effects such as rates and bills rising. When rates/bills rise, spending decreases, stock is sold off in sales and prices are dropped to try and encourage spending. In turn this has the effect of requiring the govt to print more money to stimulate spending and get the economy going again – and on and on it goes. Too much of any one thing for too long and the economy enters a Boom or a Recession with the resulting see-saw such excesses create. According to economic theory, since the market regulates itself, the govt intervening can be a double-edged sword and since economies return to normal or the optimum level for both consumers and traders given time doing what they naturally do – interference by the govt or bad fiscal policy/understanding is considered to be the root cause of nations with poor economies. Though it is obviously the rape and advantage taken of other countries resources that are largely responsible for our status of affluent prosperity.

Australia was spared much of the fall-out from the global financial crisis that knocked Greece, America and other nations on their asses because of sound fiscal policies implemented by Kevin Rudd who has been the only Prime Minister elected who has had a degree in economics.

As the shock news of the GFC hit our shores, belts began to tighten immeasurably. In the last 10 years bills, food and basic resources have steadily gone through the roof up to 300% thanks to shoddy political policies and loss of control over private resources. But the cost of living is now so high hundreds of thousands of previously quite well-off Australians for the first-time face poverty or spiralling debt.

Headed by Jeff Kennett and the Liberal Party, during the 90s as the acting state Govt of Victoria, sold off Victoria's resources to off-shore private interests including our telecommunications, electricity companies, railroad system, mines, steel works, schools, land and most drastically our Water. This made him a lot of money very quickly and set a precedent copied by others that has left our country reeling. This precedent has enabled fierce monopolies to cripple Australians with rising costs, rates and fees because there is no competition to keep prices low and lax legislation has reduced the Govt to a toothless laughingstock unable to control our rogue markets.

But the doom and gloom continues. Banks recently raised their interest rates well above govt recommendations placing terrible new burdens and threatening mass foreclosures (study usury and see how banks periodically do this to increase assets). Selling off our resources took on a new and much more sinister angle however with the sale of our state water supply, now run by South-East Water because quite obviously, without water, people die.

Due to these monopolies and loss of govt owned resources our economy has slid closer and closer to recession and almost experienced a depression (when prices skyrocket out of control) when the GFC hit, prevented only by the fiscal policy of Kevin Rudd, now foreign affairs minister of Australia after being ousted in a political coup by now Prime Minister, Julia Gillard. During the impending GFC, Rudd gave Australians two stimulus packages about 6 months apart of $1000 each. This had the effect of stimulating spending and getting the economy going again. However, Australia is now once again headed by a PM without the advantage of economic theory.

The origin of economics, and indeed money, can be directly related to the particular geometry of human behaviour a result of the rational mind. It is a product that we affect just as much as it affects us intrinsically as psychological as much as it is financial. It is amazing how susceptible to the suggestive elements of forms nations can be quite unconsciously – and merely out of the natural inclination to pursue self-interest.

For example, to prevent a recession govts often raise rates to slow spending this is supposed to quietly decrease traders profit margins and restore the economy. But, if the traders get wind of this rate rise before it happens, they may collectively decide to lower prices to get rid of excess stock before they are unable to do so at the present price that is, they react rationally to what they are hearing/seeing and react accordingly such a reaction has the effect of sabotaging the government's attempts to stabilise the economy making the time to return to a normal economy, longer. All this before the Govt has even made the change and only suggested it as a possible course of action in passing conversation.

Taking the example of the temptation to speed while everyone else does the speed limit, the same can be said of economics and the greed of corporations or ruthless oligarchies wherein consequently a few can spoil it for everyone.

This is a truism for the human race. Although there appear to be many theories on the origin of money, it seems that overall, in order to protect solid goods from theft solid gold and silver etc were replaced with receipts that could be exchanged for the worth of that gold or silver. Because of the natural demon of acquisitiveness inherent in the human experience to steal, to survive, to prosper – money was as they say a necessary and unavoidable consequence, read evil.

I am fairly certain now, after what I have seen of life – that come what may of the human race and its future – no matter how many humans survive, what they must endure or what horrible collective experience they may share or even if they somehow create a utopian paradise – there will always be those among us (if not all of us) who are the same as they have always been; selfish, self-interested and willing to cheat to get ahead. Thus, the cycle of human suffering will always continue. For someone to win, someone else must lose.

Unsure as I am about the historical activities of the Jews, it is nonetheless interesting to note that Interest (paying back a debt plus a little extra) came about when the Jews were banned from buying or selling. As a result of pressuring them one way a natural inclination came to them as a solution. Just as water will shape itself to fit any channel and seep out through the smallest crack to once again become a river. All too often people concentrate on moral aspects of history such as who did what it is however not the blame-game that is of interest to me, rather it is the forces involved that are of import to the Sinister. I have been guilty myself of naming and shaming root causes for various systems and calamities that have befallen the world seeking to identify a singular culprit in a moral occult bound war.

Causal forms are the result of applied force. Force was applied to the Jews, and they responded in kind as is the ingenious nature of humans to do so. The force they responded with when they utilised their very limited available resources for maximum gain (debt) in turn gave rise to new forces and market pressures in the guise of wars, economics, technologies, politics and so on, shifting from one shape to another as the causal rebound dictates a quid pro quo relationship always ensues from forces, i.e. if you do that, you cause me to do this.

Since economics deals with the maximisation of utility or happiness it correspondingly deals with the reduction of human suffering. Because it deals with human suffering it is intrinsically related to the Sinister especially where the application of morality and immorality is concerned. The ability to conjure money out of thin air and circulate it in the economy is quintessentially a magical power particularly if taken as given that the art of magic involves the ability to control or influence people and events. Ethically, Usury as it is known, can be considered to be black magic – because credit always requires a sacrifice, someone must always give blood and suffer for someone else to prosper and the suffering is prolonged.

It is easy to forget this because of the psychological distance between withdrawing money from the ATM. I seldom spare the bank a thought, let alone dwell on the system of debt involved in getting money into the ATM and the poor bastards who owed the bank money, which the bank takes off them (with heavy interest) to continue lending, that fills the ATM. Much the same way bombers in WWII were able to drop bombs on civilians below because of the psychological distance between their actions and the misery it caused unseen below was so great; money, even small amounts is a see-saw. A distinct link has been consistently proved to exist by sociology, psychology, the military and other fields wherein a person will be more inclined to inflict grievous suffering on another – if they cannot see the outcome of their actions.

Money is the currency and accountant of human misery. If money is God, credit is the Devil.

GENOME PATENTING

This news article kindled my interest as part of my Aeon Watch. Normally I would have thought of this as an almost purely ethical debate, but the development of technology always concerns a whole range of economic issues, not just how much money it involves, that affects all of us. Here is the article:

Ruling on human gene patents looms
AAP November 14, 2010, 9:02 pm

The US legal system is now considering the issue of patents which cover human genes and its decision will have “worldwide ramifications”, the Royal College of Pathologists Australasia (RCPA) has said. The US government filed a “friend of the court” brief with the US Federal Court early this month, ahead of an anticipated appeal by a biotech firm which is seeking to assert its patent over human genes. The RCPA’s genetics advisory committee chairman, Graeme Suthers, says the government’s brief signals a major shift in US policy on the controversial issue. The eventual court ruling may invalidate tens of thousands of patents now applying to human genes, while there are also ramifications for research and the conduct of labs undertaking genetic testing across the globe, he says. “The US government’s stance regarding genomic DNA has changed dramatically because it now regards genomic DNA as unpatentable,” Dr Suthers said in a statement. He said the US government had drawn a new distinction between two different forms of DNA that occur naturally – the raw unprocessed genetic code or genomic DNA, and the processed DNA of a gene that is called cDNA.

It continued to hold the view that “cDNA is potentially patentable” although the court would ultimately come to a decision on this issue.

Australia’s senate inquiry into the broader issue of human gene patenting is due to report within weeks.

There has been a long-standing debate, mostly within the academic community, about whether patents should be applied to human genes.

The issue came to a head in March, when a US District Court ruled that patents should not have been granted over the BRCA1 and 2 genes which are known to increase a woman’s risk of breast cancer.

The biotech industry argues it needs the patents to protect their intellectual property and attract investment that allows vital research and development work to continue. Opponents argue the patents should apply to human inventions only and not genetic code at the core of nature.

Holders of gene patents can potentially restrict pathologists from using the same gene sequence in a genetic test.

“Efforts to commercialise this information should be focused on developing products and applications, rather than restricting use of the genetic information,” Dr Suthers said.

“This isn’t something that only medical researchers need to be aware of – it has important consequences for everyone who provides or uses healthcare.”

The patent on human genomes has world-wide economic and social ramifications. It also offers up a dangerous looming precedent of allowing aspects of nature to be defined as intellectual property via an economic based argument that can hinge on its technology being owned via a claim that exclusivity of nature is necessary for funding, research and development. Economics would argue that in order to secure investment and intellectual property (the only way to support such fringe technology) it is necessary for a monopoly or patent to be applied to DNA and/or aspects of it. This argument is the usual suspect of industry when it comes to inventions, new technologies and so on as exclusivity of technology prompts others to invest time and resources in the pay-offs that come with holding a 20 year monopoly on such breakthrough science. But it could be argued, that like Monsanto attempting to copyright the animal the Pig, if this justification for profit/technology and the financial welfare it creates is applied as grounds to own natural instances, universal attributes and characteristics of our very genetic make-up – there is incredible new dangers and unseen problems bound to arise.

The world is plagued with problems – but while many of them seem in constant see-saw, and mostly beyond our power to control or eradicate, at the very least we know what they are. The introduction of patents on biological nature would almost certainly throw up a challenge to humanity the likes of which it has never seen – particularly, since those pursuing the legalisation or banning of genetics or genetic patenting are pursuing their own or company interests – and very rarely does anyone who actually has any full understanding of the ramifications of such policies adopted on the wider world community exist. Where there is money to be made there is a double-edged sword, because as soon as genetics becomes profitable when such laws are institutionalised and this future technology will open a new kind of crime to the criminal element of society and unethical marketeers.

Those that stand to make a fortune are very hard to persuade otherwise that there are outstanding reasons why such patents should not be pursued. Along with the propensity for genetics to develop DNA-based weaponized toxins/mutations, unlimited soldiers/slaves/meat, for instance, genetic patenting throws open the doors to huge problems, most of which cannot be foreseen. But some of which we can guess at given the way humanity already treats intellectual properties in other fields and commodities:

What happens if patents become commonplace and companies begin patenting as a business. What if a patented gene turns up in somebody by accident, is injected without consent on purpose, is found in somebody whose DNA contains it, or who deliberately uses it as say a drug (in the case of a super gene or biological additive to improve/enhance). How does one control or even regulate the -content- of DNA – or define patented and natural DNA? If someone is found to be in illegal possession of such genes such as happens with stolen goods, piracy files, are they to be removed? How?

If the genes that are patented cause trouble – i.e. mutations, abnormalities, super-sicknesses, who is responsible? Science or Nature? The scientists who mixed the genes, or nature whose extraordinary ability to introduce chaos is legendary?

What about genetic contagion – is that possible? through food, contact, sex, chemicals – and if so, who is going to be held responsible for it: nature or the genetic patenters? More importantly – who is going to want to be held responsible if it all goes wrong? No-one ever wants to take responsibility when disasters strike – innumerable examples of corporations dodging blame are rife, everyone from McDonalds to the bush admin, to the banks and oil vendors do everything in their power to pass the blame for grievous environmental/ethical tragedies to others or tie them up in knots for decades through trials, lawyers, intimidation and reprisal.

We can do nothing about things after they have happened – especially changes to our very genetic make-up. We are already ingesting dangerous or risky unknown variables through large quantities of engineered GMO foods and chemicals no doubt that will come back to haunt us as have cigarettes, and no doubt those who pushed for it will dodge blame. Science has gotten things wrong so many times, greed has stamped its approval, and many make no apologies. The farcical understanding of all things demonstrated by humanity is more than enough evidence to indicate no safety net and no safeguards will or can be employed when tampering with the insanely complicated phenomena that is integral to life force.

The genomes patent also brings up the ethical and legal considerations of Capital – where it is commonly argued that the means of production – Capital- can be owned – one wonders where contamination of genes might lead. If a genomic person mates with a non-genomic person, who owns the resulting genes? Can a person grown by patent genes be owned, as a slave or if used as a worker, deemed to be Capital? The hybrid archetype that fuses our grand fear of machines, and the horror of a technology that can replicate human beings has been with us for quite some time and shows no signs of changing. Super soldiers are one such fear, unlimited workers, slaves, or even humans as an edible meat supply are among some of the feared outcomes of letting these two phenomena be fused I have always thought zombies were a way of expressing our unconscious acceptance that when shit hits the fan we will have to eat each other. My belief is that environment plays a huge part in psyche – and a machine based cold alien environment that re-institutes robots/slavery would breed a new type of psychopathic ethos with new horrors executed with new technology.

To take one last example closer to home of how economic forces and the rational mind can affect them I will use the Black Glyph Society as the subject.

Occasionally, people have written to me asking if I have any more manuscripts that haven't been published or as is more often – asking for assorted writings for free.

The Black Glyph Society was a business primarily set up to assist the Sinisterion (Sinister community) to get hold of hard copies of assorted books, novels and so on. It managed to supply thousands of free downloads, books, CDs etc for several years successfully. I was however, unable to expand the concept beyond Lulu vanity press and was limited greatly by the exorbitant fees and margin cuts taken by Lulu.

In an attempt to decrease those costs to the consumer and generate more profit to myself I briefly flirted with the notion of printing up the books myself. This was a spectacular flop the materials + the postage required did little to offset an already expensive process. In the end, I abandoned the project and closed the Black Glyph. There was more to it than that though.

Economics has enabled me to see what went wrong. The premise for creating an online bookstore was to generate enough money to live off in order that I could create free time for myself to continue my occult and mundane research and thus not have to return to work. The kicker was that although I wished to make enough money to be able to live, I often gave my work away. This had the effect of decreasing demand and enabling large numbers of people to get my work for free or be able to get it. This has always been a bit of a paradox for me since I both want my writing to support me but feel it important to get it out there too.

When it comes to people most people prefer to get something for nothing. The problem I created was that with free copies available through pirated or private sources, people preferred to get it for free most of the time. In other words, I lost the monopoly that made my work valuable this problem was then compounded by a new supplier of ONA materials emerging in the market providing a competitor who could supply the same things and undercut the Glyph's prices, pushing prices down even further until one ran on Love alone. In economic terms, this meant little to no financial incentive left for me to continue writing. If no one is willing to pay for it, then business-wise it is time to shut up shop or get into another trade because without some level of money coming in it was impossible to support my past-time or research projects into various forms. As it turned out, I eventually returned to full-time work which leaves very little time or inclination left to write anything.

GRAND BLACK MAGIC: AIMS OF EXPERIMENT A Brief:

In 1776, in an attempt to foster progressive ideas within a conservative Bavaria, Adam Weishaupt and a few of his friends formed the foundation of the Bavarian Illuminati. To quote author John Greer “Weishaupt believed in the essential goodness of human nature, arguing that only the burdens of religious obscurantism and fossilised tradition stood in the way of universal human enlightenment; he originally planned to call his order the Perfectibilists, because of its focus on the possibility of human perfection, but settled on Illuminati as a reference to the enlightened attitudes he hoped to foster.”

“Illuminati novices thus started their studies with classical writers such as Aristotle and Cato, and then went on to contemporary philosophers such as Holbach and Helvetius. A process of self-examination, guided by written questionnaires and the close supervision of a senior initiate, helped direct the novice toward the goal of this strenuous program – the creation of an elite of enlightened initiates who would insinuate themselves into influential positions in Bavarian society and transform the kingdom into a Utopia. Illuminati recruitment focused on the socially prominent, the wealthy, and the talented from the very beginning. By 1784 the order had spread through much of central Europe, with active colonies in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Bohemia (Czech Republic), Hungary, and northern Italy, and the total number of Illuminati who had received the Illuminatus Minor degree (the basic working degree of the order) had topped 650.”

The Order was to later fall apart as its heavy secrecy was compromised – bringing it to the attention of conservatives looking for a scapegoat – and so disbanded. Three years later the French Revolution was to break out whereupon the name of the Illuminati was mentioned in anti-Masonic propaganda. But it was the publication of a book by an individual named De Barruel who argued that an inner circle of Masons had deliberately started the Revolution as part of a sinister crusade against monarchy and Christianity, that elevated the Illuminatus from obscurity into the role of a Worldwide Masonic conspiracy. Another author, John Robison, helped to fan the flames of narrative and between them they managed to tangle the Knights Templar and Illuminati together so successfully that their (often dubious) claims and mythos were taken up by and wildly speculated on by the media. Throughout the 1800’s belief in a sinister Illuminati was popular with many conservatives.

It was again in the publication of the famous Protocols of Zion – alleged to be the master plans of a global Jewish conspiracy – that the fuel for further speculation on a secret ruling elite was taken up eagerly by the West and has remained every philosopher’s stone since. It is of great consequence that the mythos of the Illuminatus has been identified as a creation of Narrative Magic. We may cite endless other examples of powerful organisations whose legend sprung from the same excited chatter of the human imagination – among these the infamous Order of Nine Angles of which I have been an avid proponent of in the expansion and power of its Mythos; and in time we may cite Ourselves among these.

While certain changes in methodology and organisation by THEM differ from those the Illuminati utilised, such as intense instruction mentored closely by senior members, a chartered procession through a geometric tablet of reading to lay the foundation for enlightenment – viz. the “Tablets of Set” via Aquino’s Temple of Set -, and an intense myriad of secret signs, passwords, and codes, not forgetting our two organisations are separated by 300 years’ time; we are nonetheless identical in our humble intent.

The Temple of THEM and its expanding syndicate of nexions contain all of the elements necessary to create a Sinister Illuminatus. Elements such as the coherence of its members independence yet also their collectivity via Sinister Solidarity, a curriculum that imparts great Empathy, teaches such skills as critical analysis via the development of Cynicism/Optimism, continues to forge global Connections via far firmer alliances than many other groups have managed to engender, and exists synchronously to gather those together with a shared desire to raise consciousness individually and globally – neatly complimented by the expertise and experience of a growing number of individuals well-versed in a variety of the world's largest and most influential secret societies and occult orders of which each of THEM hold or have held prominent positions.

With the increase and crystallisation in Solidarity and Personal Honour (via ISS), has been born the simple foundation necessary for a well-connected world-wide syndicate of great influence to arise. Some may now understand why the Magian seek to splinter us apart from one another – but the voice of the Dark Gods is the eternal condition of humanity and will never be silenced. The following dossier forms part of an original ‘master plan’ conceived in 2004-2005 by those behind THEM, to implement on behalf of Satanism, a hostile aeonic takeover to cause the world to remember/recall the potential inherent in Darkness beneath the increasingly bastardised and commercialised emphasis mainstream media has made of its tools and philosophy – a bitter source of disagreement among Satanists that has kept solidarity at bay or an ineffective private pastime for self-indulgence that insulates the Magian against any real threat of challenge to its rule. Although somewhat outdated, this dossier may satisfy some of the intense curiosity others have of the formation that is THEM and its ultimate geometry.

Since a number of the concepts have already been introduced, taken seed and produced (or are producing) the desired changes, such information is no longer as sensitive as it used to be. Many of the concepts are only referred to briefly and in a bullet-point format but various mss have been circulated from the Black Glyph Society tendril, WordPress tendril and Mvimaedivm tendril – including assorted Temple manifestos – that detail the ways and means by which we are attempting (or have already succeeded in achieving) to achieve these goals. Soon we shall pass through the stage of external laughter that comes with any strong expression of the will to Dare – the ensuing scorn that characterises the currents of significant change. People are generally cowards, cynics, afraid to dream, and they will make fun of those who struggle beyond mediocrity until the day they are forcefully proved wrong.

Remember among them who had faith in the beginning – who was with you when times were hard – forget those who profess faith when our task becomes easy.

“Those who were laughing then are no longer laughing now. And those who are laughing now ... will not be laughing much longer.” – Adolf Hitler.

THEM, UNSANITY AND THE YOUNG ILLUMINATI

Begun in 2006, with a coherent string of predictions and prophecies which we have carefully implemented one by one and caused to pass. Now 2019 and I have been called everything under the Sun as the Temple's mad schemes have unfolded amid a cacophony of prisms in time.

Yet here we stand, as I said we would – a young, Illuminati that has had its hands in hundreds of groups, influenced dozens of new strains of the Sinister, and had its tendrils in the minds, hearts and hands of hundreds of thousands of people for 13 years – some of whom still bear our works and Wyrð among their deeds, both wicked and wondrous. We've accumulated some 20,000 pages of writing from direct experience, produced a sinister novel, written new fiction, created our own and encouraged forth several tarots and influenced, befriended or danced in some way, direct and indirect with some of the occult's most diabolic contemporaries straddling the twilight of the 20th century and the dawn of the 21st. We've been mentioned in academic papers, published around the world, formed a strange global cultus centred around Lovecraftian octopoids, forms and forces, broken new ground in dozens of subjects, been first on many frontiers, have touched on a vast array of occult topics than any single magical group has ever attempted before, not only confused but instructed and evolved a hell of a lot of people, will continue to do so for the next decade and foreseeable future and cemented ourselves as the pioneers of a constructive wave of Australian Satanism detonating like a thermonuclear explosion to give this country a Sinister History – that in the near future, it (and time and space) will eventually catch up to when the shock-wave finally hits. We are unique, we are original, we are The Temple of THEM. And we are not yet halfway through our 30 year charter.

As the living embodiment of Lovecraft's Mad Arab Alhazred, in my defence I can only say, don't blame me, I'm just the vessel for all of this madness – it's not me but THEM, Cryptic glyphic and enigmatic that owe you translation, explanation, illumination.

THEY brought us forth and it is THEIR Will we enact.

KNIVING -TO OUR CRITICS

April 16th 2009

After consideration – this will be the last comment I make to my critics – of which there have been as many as there are opinions to be had. Were I to repeat the mistakes of the past and answer them all – I should be guilty of wasting more time better spent. So I address this to all the stupid and the dead in one go.

As Revolutionaries and Subversionists fighting against the established System, against the status quo – there are considerable obstacles in place to prevent a group of individuals from making changes to that status quo – provisions in every way placed against the rise of individual thought and expression. Since our Aim is Life-Centred Geometry not the Human-Centred Geometry and impossible nonsense (when followed through to its logical conclusion) taught by many of our Satanic contemporaries – and because our aim is neither to enslave the mind and repeat the program of the enemy nor to pipe-dream of razing the Earth to ashes and promulgate anarchy – (if such a thing exists) – but to Serve the Sinister, as it is and as it changes – and to work with what already exists – our aims are much harder than both of those examples. The first cannot work so can never really fail – the second is often as much our enemy as the enemy proper.

One of aims of THEM is to Initiate permanent changes; not just the pathetic band-aids society tends to patch itself and its problems up with – no, THEM do not pander and never will pander to superficial answers – what we do is not nearly as simple as others would like it to be just so they can write it off. What we Do involves demonic commitment and to some extent genius – it is being done, because no-one else has shown the ability to do it, only us. The answers to many problems lie in people taking self-responsibility – not in blaming whatever happens to be before one's eyes. In self-understanding how they process knowledge and information; not just what they process. Our work does not involve us simply running someone down a tried and tested occult track, giving them a bunch of manuscripts and making them some sort of instant master. Our work involves a commitment that is first human and can tolerate every and all of the weathers the human being can throw out whilst they are growing. And for those who think they're doing a good job because they can weather the nicer ones – we laugh – it is more often than not a great challenge to alter and confront the ego of a person and only too easy to get on when things are going well. THEM often do the ugly work, see the vile, disturbing and childish impulses that spew forth when working with the ego. Such displays when it is questioned include everything from tantrums, hatred, suspicion, ignorance, arrogance, jealousy, envy, spite, destruction, violence, sabotage, betrayal, and so on...

There is no depth the human being cannot sink to when the ego is mishandled or feels threatened. What we do involves helping someone despite all of these – to persevere beyond the tantrums, through the tears, threats, and slander – through whatever forms they take, stances they assume, or mistakes they commit. We do it with tenacity, diplomacy, empathy to give people back to themselves. Who else can lay claim to that? To understand how change occurs is to understand that the ability to drive one's own change can take a very long time to take root. It also means knowing how much bullshit has covered the Lhp that makes it seem so complex when really it is So Very Simple. It means many other things besides...

It takes certain conditions to allow us to devote that time and patience to the well-being of others even as we do it for ourselves. To those who have dared accuse of us of simply making a buck – you know nothing so let me educate you – we teach thousands freely. The Glyph is to some extent useful when it does make some money – but to suggest it is the sole reason for THEM is ludicrous. Yet Again – because you don't see the work we do, you presume, judge, pronounce... fucking useless lot... so mired in your forms, in what your limited perceptions give you; join the fray, join the hundreds of others with weak arguments, criticism, and acid... go look for them, their nonsense and arrogance lies in tatters on a dozen forums. You among You, Invite Knives.

I usually reserve my anger in quiet dignity but let's trot out a classic. More than six years after a fully finished Tarot attempt by myself – there is yet to be another produced that rivals it, or even replaces it – despite the tidal wave of comments and criticism – there has been No effort to rival my own. Such as it is, even then as it was put together as a young man the Naos Deck is still the only complete tarot (and this is just one of a dozen examples) – why? because of the inherent weakness, pathetic spine, and destructive hypocrisy so rife among the Internet, among the dross with nothing of their Own but claws and poison. Who parrot, and parade, and talk only shit. My god the shit I've had to wade through created by others...

Where is the Tarot promised by so many? Nowhere. Where's the experience in the Path so many claim to have? Whom did you get so many of the ONA materials from? None of this would ever have been if not for individuals like myself who actually did something with their lives, who did what they said they would do – who fought through the complacency of the mass, and fed them their own pig-ignorant words. And mark my words, as I cross off my to-do list, THEM will complete its charter, too. Because I'm a rare thing – I'm a man of my Word/Wyrd.

If making a buck was the motivation for our work– we should be just like Ford or the many others out there flogging the same tired shite and adding to the considerable problems facing the occult, which has now been hung on the hooks of form and form alone for millions. Of course, the ignorant among the critics know nothing, nor bother to enquire before making their judgements – that is what makes them useless opinionated and symptomatic proofs of the miserable state of the human race. As it is, the Black Glyph is only one tendril of THEM – and is only possible through the vehicle of Lulu – if possible at all. What should be better, living off welfare and sucking the efforts of others while I'm not working? Or using any talents and gifts such as I do have to make it my own way – support myself? Were it possible to do for ourselves what lulu do – then the Sinister would have achieved something drastic that it is struggling for: recognition and the means to SPEAK its VOLUME. But those channels – they don't exist. But – anything that does, is quieted, side-lined or simply erased/suppressed/prevented by the Status quo and its engines that produce media. Or – it produces yet more regurgitations of forms, re-shaped, repackaged – with the same old shite attitude toward production that kills the life from such creations, separating the artist and the producer with the lifeless drone of the $$$ factor.

THEM offer something original – but because you don't see it, how many we help, how we help – how we even coax those who would perhaps kill you because they're so enamoured with culling etc – away from such masochistic displays – you criticise. But we've done our work quietly, efficiently – without asking for a reward. You'd be surprised how rare that is. We were. When we began the Glyph, lulu was expensive. Now, it is very expensive – so prohibitively so that we are prevented from creating certain items, or even buying them for ourselves. From an $80 book, we get $18. First, lulu charges to make the book. Then they take a cut of the profits. Then they slug the consumer a breath-taking amount for the postage...

So, we price our books accordingly for two reasons: a) we don't know when we're going to make another sale, this is a very up and down business, sometimes we net a few hundred a month, sometimes nothing b) to support my life (and sometimes others), which is very sparing of material possession but involves a number of projects inimical to my own growth and progress in the Sinister – inc. martial arts. It is thus necessary to subsidise my ability to sit down and write my ideas for others with some form of income. It is sheer idiocy to assume that everything should or ever can be free – the barter system is utilised where possible by THEM (i.e. we exchange assistance on the proviso people will change) because like anyone else – members of THEM are required to satisfy their basic needs before they can sit down and write – and help others by doing so to avoid so many of the horseshit mistakes others seem to blindly stumble into again and again. And anyone who gets in the way of that compassion is an enemy.

But – What have you critics done for the Sinister lately? Nothing? Then Sit down and shut the Fuck up. Lulu do an amazing job with their books – and the Black Glyph is proud to work within their organisation – but regrettably, but unavoidably – they are very expensive. That causes us to push up our prices accordingly. There is nowhere else to publish our materials any cheaper – and until there is, we are forced to rely on others to assist us in spreading them. But those who buy the stuff we present on lulu, aiding THEM in the process, fall into two categories 1) those who enjoy reading from hardcovers or prefer tangible touchable media – and 2) those who follow the Sinister from afar or are too lazy to undertake the initiation to attain all of these materials and more, freely. People make their choices, and we cater for that split.

Where our productions are concerned: People need to keep in mind – that we're not Sony, nor Penguin: we don't have teams of writers, editors, artists – we do IT ALL OURSELVES. And as Subversionists and revolutionaries we don't necessarily have access to the sound equipment or technical staff to properly produce our Sinister creations – that is why this sort of thing (Sinister music) is so hard to find and so rare; that the chants even came out at all is because I managed to finally get them onto disc (thanks to Mr. Black) after storing them in a cupboard on a tape for almost three or four years after Lyceus obtained them from CB and kept them for who knows how long. The quality is not the best, but that is all that exists. We do the best we can and try to improve as time goes by for the next creation. And while others bemoan that process, hinder our progress, they slow it down for everyone. THEM is the only group to have come along in the last twenty years that aimed to teach but not to control. We believe in what we're doing, how we're doing it, as a group, and expect criticism. But now you have to expect repercussions for giving it.

But of free stuff? Wow – we've given away thousands, maybe hundreds of thousands of stuff free. and still do. Obtaining most of this was hard. ONA Database, contained around 600 MSS. Most of these were paid for or earned via building a long rapport with other people. Aeona and TTT group contained even more. All found, begged, or paid for. Naos was extremely difficult to track down – as were the dozens of extremely rare mss hosted in Mvimaedivm (some of which are inc. in our Glyph SS discs) esp. when more often than not what was paid for never arrived. I spent at least three years making a tarot, and have spent at least a decade making the intense layers of the ONA understandable to the idiot and genius alike. I have spent easily at least $30,000 dollars on finding mss, equipment, assisting others, learning, growing, undertaking the Sinister Path either as it was laid out or with my bare hands and not much else. I've weathered as much criticism as anyone should need to – and can only say as loudly as possible to any future or past critics – I appreciate to some extent that cynicism inherent in people that makes changes difficult (this helps make progress on the Magian's part slow too) but as loudly as I can as if I were standing beside you: Fuck You.

It is still not enough for some people that Naos, Hostia, the Chants (3500 downloads so far from the Glyph, both when they were free and priced), the Music, and the mammoth library of ONA texts were preserved so carefully, accumulated so completely or are now a dime a dozen on the internet due to the efforts of myself and others of the Sinisterion for more time than most of them probably ever devoted to anything to get them on there; no, they whine and complain about obstacles placed before them illustrating they completely misunderstand the genuine LhP; whine about having to pay to support the Sinisterion who have already done an astronomical amount with great grace to serve the Sinister Path they now tread so freely – where that opportunity is offered – but not expected; and continue to mouth off about our intentions, motivations, and administrations.

Some people will never be happy – and some people never should be. In fact, some people deserve only terrific wrath. So again, once more for ALL the people in the cheap seats, the back seats, who sat on their seats – whom sat/sit on their asses and didn't help us with ANY OF IT – but pointed fingers, whispered behind our backs, sabotaged and slowed us... and there's just so many of you... past, present and future. Fuck you. Hide. Because we're not like the Others. I am a man of my Word/Wyrd.

Kiss my ISS,
One of THEM

IMPERIUM: THE FORCE OF ESCALATION

In the following documentary, an excellent modern example of Escalation is given that serves to illustrate the Ethos or Force that dominates and characterises the rise of Imperium. More commonly, we would cite the Arms Race example as in Physis of the Sinister, but this one hits closer to home because of its personal and esoteric connexion to the force of Escalation.

[Video] LOCKDOWN – NORTH BRANCH CORRECTIONAL FACILITY (1/4)
North Branch Correctional Institute has taken great pains to eliminate design flaws and weaknesses that can be, or have in the past, been exploited by Inmates. It has taken away bars, access, privacy, automated systems, and reduced the number of Inmates housed together. It has learned from previous mistakes and increased the strength of its structure, the panorama of its all-seeing eye and placed 6 lines of defence between any inmate and the outside world at any given time.

Or, in other words, it has created an atmosphere alien to previous prisons where kinks were common and given the inmates an entirely new set of problems to solve. The Greeks believed that central to the art of wisdom, anything could be understood if it were contemplated long enough. In that sense, Inmates serving life sentences have a profoundly distinct advantage in putting that maxim to the test.

Given the propensity of human ingenuity, that continues to escalate to this day, people after all are still surprised by things people do, i.e. the features of the iPad 2, a you tube clip, or a Govt. announcement, for instance, what is likely to happen is that while old problems may have been ironed out, news one will simply arise. The guards still interact with the inmates, the inmates still interact with one another and the outside world. One documentary shows how the danger of guards just talking must be avoided because prisoners have become adept at reading lips. In such an environment, the changes to the human being are remarkable – but they adapt. We manage to live in Arctic ice, 50-degree deserts, mountainous inaccessibility, high rise apartments, or wherever else we find ourselves. The ability to adapt is one of our defining features as the human race.

When the inmates find themselves presented with a new playground, they will find the weaknesses. If an inmate manages to find, and they will, weaknesses within a complex like North Branch – the knock-on effect of a culture of inmates learning how to exploit or escape from facilities like this has ramifications for the skills passed to the outside or through the inside. Imagine trying to lock up someone in an ordinary police cell after they have escaped from North Branch or lock up someone who has been passed the skills to escape from somewhere like North Branch. Eventually – the criminal world as a whole will get smarter, savvier and adapt to learn from, this new challenge. What happens then is that all across the board, State security must be increased to again match the skill set of the inmates. And so, it goes on and on – until the inmates are somehow reduced to complete immobility or manage to escape.

Not only is Imprisonment and Building Prisons one of the fastest-growing economic boom industries of the USA, but it is also indicative of the Ethos of America. It applies pressure and more pressure on something, until that something is forced to adapt. Consider Vietnam where endless Napalm, Bombs, Rockets and a formidable arsenal of state-of-the-art weaponry was unable to defeat the simply armed and much less numerous, Vietcong. Or the double-edge of 911; where if it's true America did not crash the plane into their own buildings to create the situation to increase its justification of force globally – despite their best attempts to prevent their enemies from counterattacking, they did not see the plane coming. Or, if they did see the plane coming, now their actions have forced the EU to seek to cut the US off from its military economy by destabilising its currency. Now America and its allied forces move very slowly through Iraq suspicious of everyone and everything that could be equipped with an IED (bomb).

For all their best efforts, Vietnam won the war, Iraq is winning the war or causing stalemate, and Prisons despite their number and popularity have done nothing to deter the growing number of people Doing What Thou Wilt. This is the escalation of force – every reaction brings with it an equal and opposite reaction – and sometimes, a mind-blowing overreaction like the retaliation of Pearl Harbour with two Atomic Bombs on Japan that made the US a “superpower”.

Or the most diabolical inhuman murderers, equivalent to an inmate stabbing someone 3000 times, on the Planet, depending how you see things. People act like steam. When you trap them, they build up enormous pressure until they explode/implode, often destroying the infrastructure and everything holding it up. The ramifications of this in relation to Imperium are that the signature keys THEM has isolated as being responsible for keeping the system in place, i.e., duality, morality, notions of time, space, I, language, present perception, linear logic, lack of solidarity, cronyism, 23 syndrome etc. etc. have not lived their full causal cycles of life and persist despite any amount of occult intervention. For even the Occult relies on all of these tools to ply its wares – thus itself sustaining the system in place.

The System at its present stage is inwardly a super maximum-security prison like North Branch – we cannot escape from its walls without losing our ability to be Social thereby condemning our chances of survival by cancelling all the benefits Society brings with it. Outwardly, the system is, I would have to say, for most people somewhere between minimum and maximum security. We are watched, punished, rewarded, controlled by external eyes in the sky and the hands of the Man but we are still mostly free because many of us do not pose a recognisable threat to the State or System. I say recognised because the most dangerous people are probably in fact those in power.

Yet, as more pressure is put upon us by economy, finance, rates, interest rises, technology, resource shortage, housing slumps, and so on – the world inches toward an inevitable state of climax where monitoring, invasion/erosion of privacy, surveillance, by the State will be less and less welcome, less and less tolerated. Enough pressure has to be applied, like a several million-tonne volcanic plate crushing coal, for a diamond to be created, before anything can be done about the present System. Or in other words, the State needs to apply far more pressure before any kind of uprising can take place.

The problem here, is that the US and its allies have learned of the problems of applying too much pressure to fast and the knee-jerk reaction it causes (again, Vietnam was stopped by mass protests) and are loathe to allow Westerners to make the connection between the force they are applying elsewhere, and upon us. Hence only minor, fleeting and partial coverage of any military incursion/invasion is shown – with news quickly switching back to celebrities and fluffy kittens. We are kept in a fishbowl of ignorance regarding the movements of the US, its partners who silence, torture and kill, threaten, extort. We seem to realise this and the need to connect ourselves to the world and each other in a greater degree – hence the Internet, and almost certainly, the Bio-net, almost certainly Internet's purely but yet-to-be conceived mental brother.

But the forces in our way, the walls of semantics, meaning, emotive loading of concepts and the misdirection from the shadows to make us look in all the wrong places for the switch to turn it all off and really See – is preventing us from making these connexions.

[Proponents of Good/Evil have yet to define a definition of either that does not satisfy the definition of the other. Therefore, the questions remain – Does resisting Imperium mean slowing it down or speeding it up? Does aiding Imperium mean slowing it down, or speeding it up? Or does Imperium, a noble and austere concept on one hand, highlight the very crux of the problem with words and their interchangeable semantic meanings, which effectively cancel each other out?]

THE ALPHA-CYNIC VS THE ALPHA-MALE

Part I

[Dedicated to my Brother & the few Good Men who influenced my Life. +O+]

Following on from the essays in the Book of ABSU regarding the increase of absurdity and the faith one can place in the laws of escalation – we are now witnessing an exoteric/outward/physical/social change in pathos in the collective human consciousness regarding the validation of superiority, strength, aggression, and excess testosterone as the key elements to leadership; elements generally assigned to the characteristics of the ‘Alpha-Male’.

Although glimmers of this approach have been appearing for a long time, increasing or decreasing as they wax and wane – often in the context of parodies; the attack on the alpha-male has now come to dominate the perceptive consciousness of the collective. A re-occurring sign that spans the generations is what precipitates or illustrates a change in collective consciousness is taking place. (Qv. Notes on Signs). When a famous Australian footballer attacked his fiance recently (2008) causing serious injury – his bravado, a factor that would have once stood him in good stead and aligned all his buddies behind him – has noticeably failed to protect him from the scorn and derision of his peers.

The comments and aloofness, toughness, or bravado usually demonstrated by the footy player to shift responsibility for their aggression and big-man syndrome from themselves onto others for expecting it/nurturing it as part of the game, part of the role of a sports personality – was not considered an acceptable excuse by the footballers peers – who have largely ostracised him from their ranks – sending a clear message that this behaviour is not acceptable – and creating a considerable landmark in the potential for a change in maturity and empathy in the average male Australian.*
*Domestic violence – although not as popular a topic as terrorism or global warming is probably the most frequent crime and frequently tolerated crime in Australia. For the younger generation – changes are also afoot. Just as science-fiction has shown some connexion to the development of technology and future focus to the scientific sphere – I believe movies, when viewed as emerging patterns of concept, tend to illustrate changes (esp. since they tend to initiate them) in the collective consciousness.

In the recent movie ‘Aliens vs. Monsters’ – a couple are making out in the classic scenario of a jock at kiss-point with a girl. However – the roles are reversed – the girl is ready to make out, insistent even – while the jock just wants to go home. He is frightened of the UFO that flies overhead and is the one that twists his ankle when the two of them make a run for it. The sophomore – who is well ahead – slumps her shoulders at the fallen jock that is simpering and is heard to comment ‘this is the worst date ever’. She then goes back for him and is seen carrying him in her arms at the next scene. (Appropriately – both sexes scream in terror when the UFO attacks them.)

In humour – in making someone laugh – pointing fun at – using satire to show the reflexion, the absurdity of something – in animated cartoons and even the rugged masculine aggressive world of Australian Football – the Alpha-cynic predicted to emerge by THEM in the Book of Absu is now manifesting as a collective archetype infecting the consciousness of the presently established male clique and the younger generations influenced by them.

These and other indications are a sign that the Alpha-cynic, as an unconscious archetype is a reflexion being seeded in both the young and the established male communities.

The world has begun to laugh at the Alpha-Male – and if not a raucous laughter yet, be assured the seeds these numinous memes plant in the young ones will grow fast.

It is not ridiculous to surmise the popular adoption of wearing pink by men (ala the ‘metro sexual’ phase of fashion) was in some small way a step toward males finally collectively adopting/releasing some of the latent feminine characteristics present but repressed in their psyches – as it only takes one person brave enough to set the example, for others to follow – and for a new norm to be set. Just one of these feminine characteristics is tenderness, like that which many hard men show to their children and wives – which tenderness quickly disappears when dealing with others and esp. other men. And another of those characteristics is the ability to unite (without ego) as one voice in order to protect someone or demonstrate the unified impression that someone has overstepped the line.

Whereas such strength has in the past been the standard for men to aspire to – ala the Greeks – this emphasis on physique as the stature of manliness appears to be changing – or at least at a point where, with sufficient pressure and acceptance, it can begin to change the previously validated philosophy of an ego-oriented, muscle-bound drive for men to get big, and stay big – with all that this implies in the way of ‘big-man syndrome’ owing to the excess testosterone.

The collapse of the world economy has precipitated (as it generally does when the physical world is shown to be fragile despite its appearance) a move toward more spiritual nourishment – perhaps in seeing even the great Alpha-male’s dominion – those supposed to be above such injurious and humiliating experiences come crashing down – a certain disdain for their position, for being unable to live up to the expectations of supermen has collectively come forth. A new superman, a stronger more flexible superman who cannot be taken down by something as intangible as money, is needed.

What is the Alpha-male? I was an Alpha-male prior to developing/evolving into the Alpha-cynic.

The Alpha-male is at the top of the pecking order. What puts him there are perhaps neatly expressed as two things – an ability to talk to all echelons of others in the pecking order – and his aggressiveness (and success) in the things his Ethos expect of a man. Gym junkies, body builders, wrestlers, martial artists, athletes, executives, and others who work on increasing muscle mass and strength (or even amassing egotism and power) correspondingly release enormous amounts of testosterone – and in doing so, build what the Sorceress has aptly named ‘ego-armour’.

But so much testosterone causes imbalance – and those affected – lose the capacity for temperance in their Weltanschauung, in the way they deal with people, problems or the world. In thinking strength and muscle are the keys to resolution they the aggression that they have attained in the way of training as the key tools to resolving issues that face them. As a result – the not altogether unfair stereotype that footballers are ‘dumb’ has arisen because of this imbalance of mind and body. In such a capacity – the focus of big muscles becomes the fixed role and characteristic of a man – limiting or even locking out the potential for others.

The discrepancy of imbalance is analogous to many gym junkies training only the top half of their bodies; going for the showy Pecs, abs, biceps and triceps, lats, and trapezius muscles groups – but ignoring the less visibly appreciated muscles in the ankles, legs, calves etc that should be included to properly hold and support the incoming upper body mass. Many gym users are top heavy – and many are slow even if they are powerful. A tendency to make fun of Alpha-masculine characteristics – esp. where those with a powerful and calculating sense of humour are concerned (mimicking one of the powers exercised by the Magian to make changes) and who can cleverly cut down such giants to size, verbally – is emerging.

The Alpha-male, who struts and preens, who goes to excess to prove his muscles and aggression is now beginning to be seen as a laughingstock and to some extent an embarrassment of the male community. The Alpha-male who gathers his troops around him when he is being a ‘big-man’ is being seen as weak for needing so many cohorts to back him up, for needing so much additional help to sort out the childish impulse of picking fights he can’t finish alone – and where, if the pack attack is successful he then congratulates himself for being a superhero.

Arrogant, ignorant, vain, pretentious, full of false bravado and pride – such men are silently viewed by their cohorts as an embarrassment – as a jerk. As a time old tradition – other young men gather around them – because they want to be the Alpha-male or at least in his favour/shadow. Because, generally, they lack other male role models to show them how to be men – and copy the nearest and loudest one to them. But the Alpha-cynic is an entirely new breed. Coming in all shapes and sizes, alone or in groups, the alpha cynic scorns a person who must surround himself with a dozen others as a shield – scorns a person who only ever picks on the smaller, weaker, persons as prey – proving to be more of a weak parasite or predator than any kind of sterling example of masculine pride.

When does the Alpha-male ever pick a fight with a larger man, or insult a group when he's by himself? That's right. Never. Like the harmless animal in nature that makes itself look more fearsome to scare away the real predators – they puff themselves up with numbers, bravado, aggression, and arrogance. As a stronger consciousness of our implicit connexion comes to dominate the thoughts of people globally – where, the alpha-cynic wonders – is their real power? Where in this sad morass of pretence is the real man, the man who can change a nappy or fix a car, who can stick up for his friends or console his girlfriend, comfort his kids or take down an armed aggressor by himself? Who is so strong he can tame his ego?

Where is the real man who is so strong as to be secure in himself, his penis size, his muscle groups, his place in the world – that he need not resort to picking on the weak, on the out-numbered, on copying the vicious pathetic bully boy tactics of the state and its Magian ethos that rules them? When they're by themselves they keep their eyes down, look away, and keep silent even in the face of "mortal enemies". When push comes to shove, they're more often than not cowards, they beg for their life when threatened by death or after receiving serious injury, and then, even then – instead of fighting that tremendous hold the ego has on them, accepting they were being a complete tool and growing beyond the rock-solid stagnation of their total psyche – they continue to talk shit, mouth off, threaten reprisal, strike when one is weak and never when one is strong.

(A sterling example of the typical formation of an Alpha-Male is given in a horror movie entitled 'Eden lake' – which movie also raises another vital point of contention between THEM and the Magian – and that is the ridiculous notion that monsters are anything but human. In such distortions lays the refusal to take responsibility for what the human is capable of, in both the positive and negative, this distortion is what prompts THEM to re-define what it is to be human, i.e. First Human. A topic to be covered in the second part of this treatise.]

When will this man walk down the street holding his head up high because he was kind to a stranger, helped protect someone in trouble, used his real strength to break free of the bullshit roles to which society/media/ignorance binds us and makes us live out by providing only broken examples of men – only one side of the multi-faceted glory that man can be? When will this man stand up and choose how to be a man, inside, outside and on all sides?

And in the face of such growing cynical distaste at what many men have become – even dissatisfaction in the idols that are often the only example of a strong man, successful man, real man – many are beginning to develop the strength to say no. No to the examples, no to our fathers, no to our brothers, no to our perception of the future, and set our own examples of what a real man should be. What it is to first be human – and not repeat and regurgitate the cycles of violence, ignorance, arrogance, misery, pain and suffering to which our species has been prone – proud of – praised for. Fuck them. Fuck that.

The Alpha-Cynic will replace the Alpha-Male because they see straight through the camouflage of such men.

On Signs:

Just as Terrorism or Communism have always existed but only came to the fore of perception when they were suddenly reported en masse by the media – and which forms now or once exercised a considerable chunk of people's basic perceptions of the state of the world and its forms in play – largely accepting the story spun about a world at war with terrorists/communists – the alpha male is now under similar collective (popular) scrutiny.

The idea that the world was suddenly under attack by terrorists – as if it had somehow been in a peaceful slumber only to be rudely awakened by armed extremists one day is nonsense – “Terrorism” – the name itself being a political abstract, and pending on whose side you're on 'Activism' or 'Freedom Fighting' – has always been going on – and always will go on so long as Governments, States and Countries, Political/Religious Regimes or even Individuals seek to oppress their people thus forcing the conditions that lead to revolution.

Only once it is mentioned as an issue and portrayed as epidemic around the world (naturally to ready a populace for war and set the stage for manipulation) by the media – when millions suddenly converge on the same propaganda in newspapers, television, and the media limits (and controls) what is shown again and again as terrorism, does it suddenly become a hot topic that permeates/affects the lives of billions.

But in an Analysis of Frequency we destroyed the idea that the media was a reasonable or rational way to see the world or attain an even remotely fair assessment of world events. The news does not have depth; it does not have comprehensive dialectic nor seek to answer the important questions of the why and how of the events it reports – esp. if those why and how indict someone or some political party to whom the news is connected. If you put a million people in a box with pink walls. They're going to see pink.

Since the war on Terror has finally been accepted to be a farce by most, and using fear tactics such as “Weapons of Mass Destruction” that did not actually or ever existed – or the promise for it to be over before Xmas when it's been almost a decade now since the US invaded the Middle East did not eventuate – the propaganda has lost many of its teeth.

So, as is always the case, it's time to trade up and swap one fear maker for another. The ‘Global Warming’ issue and the “water shortage” scare (at least here in Australia) has developed as a similar tactic to frighten and maintain the fear factor that holds an uncertain, confused populace in its grip thus making them easier to manipulate.

And it is necessary to make a pointed, very pointed comment here, that Water was once joked about only ten-fifteen years ago as one day being sold in bottles – as an absolute outside chance that it could ever happen. Believe me when I say Oxygen will be next – and some form of “Alien Invasion” will take the place of Bin Laden. Now that THEM have noticed the unconscious thrall emerging of disdain for the Alpha-Male it is the right time to seize the bull by the horns and make this issue more widely conscious.

THE ALPHA-CYNIC [2]

Following on from the essay “In Absurdum” – there are some disturbing trends that require further examination relating to the developing nature of Magian assemblies in Australia. It was stated before that where I live, groups of up to 500 youths gather together to drink and cause trouble. The banal use of the word trouble belies, if we are to for one moment believe the media [newspapers and TV headlines] reports, the increasingly vicious nature of violent offences and their steadily rising frequency – using knives, weapons, unprovoked gang assaults – often leading to death or serious injury.

It has been almost 15 years since I saw a real man. Sometime in the late 80's in fact. Past this point, aggressors I have encountered in my plethora of fight experiences have either been groups or drunken older men. The last real man I saw had his faults – but he was hard. He was hard because he knew how to be soft. Because being able to be soft made you ten times harder. Those days are in remission/hibernation; I don't reminisce because those days are not gone; honour can be restored, men can be courageous, and the balls to stand on their own two feet can be regained.

Of the hundreds of youths and adults that pass me every day as I walk through my city – I observe in any single person that is not surrounded by friends or a group of peers; that on their breath or that mean little bully face that tells you they're harbouring a secret grudge that characterises what's inched them off their grand pedestal, and unable to act or be without some convenient custom or cue, without some safe connection to a role and all the signs of terror. People avoid looking at anyone, avoid smiling, they stare straight ahead or out of the window, silent, alone, separated from their role and the comfort of their personal flocks to guide them. They are terrified by the absence of any social situation for them to define 'themselves', express 'themselves' and continue on their way with the tunnel-vision that characterises their lives. But witness the change that arises when a friend approaches, a colleague from work, a group of mates; the transformation is often a complete reversal of this solemn state; of the fear of the abyss and the horror at the endurance of silence and thought and contemplation on the real questions of life.

Loud, boisterous, rude, macho, pathetic... ruled by their roles, these empty shells cower in the hundreds, forming 'gangs' not because of a war-torn history of bloodshed, not because poverty demands solidarity and an over-riding urge to eat or starve to death, and not because of famine, or because the streets are filled with crack dealers and guns or soldiers and tanks – no, Australia has and never has had, any of these worries, any of these social pressures, any of these calamities that occur in other nations. They form them because they are afraid to stand alone – not one of them has any real power, or any concept of power. Not one of them has faced the Abyss or been isolated from their roles or dared to challenge their soft lazy convenient imprisonment in Time. And not real men; not the kind of man who can walk the streets by himself; not the kind of man who can stand up to others on his own; not the kind of man who can stand up to himself; but the kind of men that strut about with misplaced arrogance, stolen arrogance, afraid of the truth, afraid to be alone, afraid to be a man.

You will never see these so-called 'men' [how dare they appropriate this term reserved for the brave] attack or assault on their own; you'll never see them striding confidently down the road by themselves; and if you do then you can be sure it's not the walk of a man – it's still the walk of a coward, staring down and hard at everyone, making himself a threat, a presence to be feared, a bully and a baby; no real man demands that his own folk fear him. No real man needs to frighten children or other men. So, I say, the real man is in hibernation – for all that walk the streets today are the weak, the pathetic, the afraid – the loudmouths, the cowards, and the scum that comes from a society built on Magian values.

“In packs they come at night; snarling, spitting, foaming at the mouth like rabid dogs; By day they skulk the streets, mangy and flea-bitten, their tails between their legs; Lest they should encounter Justice when their fellow hounds are at bay.” This is the legacy of cowardly scum. Only when enough alcohol has been consumed to push their little egos over the edge of reason, only when their massive fear of the Abyss, of consequences, of being held responsible, of being a man, has been forced drunk do they succumb to their petty wills, their pointless destructive little wills – and flagellate, orgiastic and insane, slaves to their revelling; until the wine is gone and the sun is anew; and they slink away to talk big, to gloat on their cowardice, to rally their troops into bovine worship of the ego and its smallness.

This is the legacy of a Magian generation. Of a loss of Tradition, and strong ways of life, of steady guidance and leadership, of a lack of idols to look up to and follow, of a lack of real man to copy by example, a degeneration of values, of strength, of honour and courage. And thus, we see a generation of adult children and childish adults. But look at them, any one of them when they are alone; in the streets or wherever you see them; and see what I see; cowards, weakness, boys instead of men, afraid of the world, afraid of themselves, and deathly afraid to let anyone really see them for what they are – Nothing. Australia is full of these miserable little shadows, drunk on their own self-importance [though they deserve not a whisper] bragging [and we can hardly call it fighting, can we?] about their manhood and yet when it comes down to it, they are but scared little boys terrified to take responsibility for their actions or words, or to lead by example, or to say no to cowardice. Soft boys, no not even boys, spoilt children, mental infants... seething in their own impotence. And lacking the strength and the courage — to be a man.

You will never see them mouth off and pick fights unless the target is smaller or they have their dogs with them. You will never see them push or start a fight without whisky on their breath or that mean little bully face that tells you they're harbouring a secret grudge from some slight that's inched them off their grand pedestal. And that overblown estimation of their own worth – of their manhood/name/reputation? That ridiculous bluster and provocation at those smaller than them or the boring tirades to some chap outnumbered? The threatening looks and gestures, the stand-over tactics and name-calling/teasing you thought was left behind in kindergarten? That increasingly brutal undercurrent coming through in the attacks reported by the media? It all comes from a desperation to conceal their little selves; to protect their precious fragile egos from real harm, from real challenges, from a REAL fight.

Show me a man that fights himself — that man is a Satanist. That man — is a REAL man.

CRIPS, BLOODS AND AUSTRALIA

In South Central Los Angeles, surrounded on all sides by prosperous, rich and influential areas, inc. Orange County, Beverly Hills, and Rodeo Drive – is the poverty stricken, war-zone known as the ‘Hood. In this area, the rival gangs, the Crips and the Bloods – destroy one another to survive. When the Black Panthers rose up to defend one another against the brutality and prejudice of zealous white cops it was a different game. After being treated like shit, ignored, hustled, and told daily on every level that the Black Man was no good, was worth nothing, was less than a white man, had less rights, less right to have what so many white Americans had, or join in seamlessly in American society – because of the colour of their skin – they came together to defend one another against their oppressors. This oppression was subsequently labelled by the media as Riots, Gangs, Violent Resistance – and a gullible, often equally prejudiced America – bought the version of events spun by the powers that be.

Sometime in the 70’s the original groups of individuals who had come together to fight oppression had reached a stage where much of their solidarity had been broken up by the assassination of many leaders – and the roots of resistance damaged or destroyed by the imprisonment or killing of influential persons.

Records of the history of the Crips and Bloods indicate that at some point, a Crip killed a Blood, or a Blood killed a Crip – (today neither group knows why or who started the war) – but the personal hurt and tragedy that this first killing caused for one of these young men, has over the course of decades escalated into an all-out blood-feud and ongoing war that has by some estimates caused more than 15, 000 deaths.

In the 70’s – rap had a very different message. If one compares the messages of rapper Ice-T, who used to stand on street corners rapping about the same calls for solidarity, freedom from oppression, and police brutality his peers of the Black Panther era had – with the impenetrable shield of hatred, promise and glorification of violence, cold emotionless veneer or presentation of modern rap, i.e. D12 – one observes a marked change in attitude – a literal ‘snapping’ of the black American psyche in those areas particular to South Central that has undermined the previous struggle for united solidarity against oppression , with a poisoned self-hatred and hostility toward one another. Moreover, whereas unity brings people together – even at the point of combat wherein fists are exchanged, bodies touch, a human element is present – the psychic snap brought forth a new distance between young men, and even fists were abandoned in favour of the impersonal and cold killing power of guns.

When one sees the staggering number of fire-arms of all description inc. AK47’s, comes to understand that blocks of land, landmarks, even shops, streets and alleys are each 'policed' and divided as the property of rival gangs – and where one wrong step can get you killed for trespassing – one should be shocked, outraged, amazed that this level of violence, destruction, is not just ignored – but sold off as a media, as entertainment – largely by the untouched areas of super-rich Hollywood – that surround South Central.

In order to survive – each of these young people – adopt the mantra 'kill or be killed'. In an atmosphere where you can be shot to death at any time of any day whether you be 6 years old or 60; patrolling the streets with your own posse or out riding your bike – only the hard man survives. In this atmosphere it is genuinely a case of kill or be killed – and will always be that way – until something happens to disrupt the cycle of forms – or mend the psychic snap.

It would simply be arrogance to think such a deep-seated campaign of hatred, brutality and oppression against the black American and many other minorities could ever be mended in any less amount of time than the original time it took to get to this point. And as more people witness and are born into the atmosphere, the way of life for the 'Hood – the cycle grows and the war continues.

One can see just why it is imperative, for the white man, for the powers that be, to keep these young people hopelessly engaged in fighting against one another. Were such heavily armed and organised gangs to unite and wage war against the people who put/keep them there – the American police and public would face an extremely well-trained army.

In the promulgation of gang rivalry, in the sanction of music that sends messages about doing just that, and how to do it, and how that is all you should do, in the common dismissal of the history of the struggle endured just to attain basic civil rights, in the writing off of the pain, suffering, and emotions of these young people who live a life where they have nothing to lose, who are born into a cycle of despair and hopelessness as 'Gangstas' – the white man shrugs his shoulders and relieves himself of the duty of acknowledging the deep psychic hurt the collective actions of those who do nothing – has caused and continues to cause.

These hard-faced, steely-eyed, bandanna wearing men and women, do not choose this life. They are born into it. And either they adapt to it quickly – or its unwritten laws kill them. It is not a case of defying the odds, of making for oneself a life of prosperity, of going to school, of studying hard, of trying to 'get outta the Hood'. The entire area is saturated with people who enforce the gangsta code. Whether at school, at home, trying to do the right thing, get a job, help an old lady across the street, the altruism of trying to show a different code of conduct has little hope; what prevails above all and every best intention is the grip of fear. Fear – that trying to do something different, will get you shot. Fear – that showing any kind of adherence or lapse in the code, will get you shot. Fear – that being relaxed, showing emotion, being kind or caring, trying to make a difference, turning your back on the code, will get you shot. What counts on the street, is fear. Fear that is code named ‘respect’. Yet – by all human accounts – everyone – the kindest and most humanitarian of humans – the darkest and most vicious of humans – at some time in their life; has a friend or friends, a group with whom they let down their guard, joke with, laugh with, share worries, fears, and have deep discussions on matters of life with. From whom they seek advice, or comfort. This capacity to enjoy and engage in such behaviour is a human constant. The atmosphere is so tense in South Central LA, that this freedom to express emotion, happiness, softness, must be carefully guarded.

Only in the most trusted company is this freedom enjoyed – anywhere else, will get you shot. What difference is there then, between the atmosphere and rules of South Central LA and that of prison. What was once an atmosphere of standing up to the Man together, is now a severely tense atmosphere of self-policed emotions and actions.

Here I mention the fusion of this atmosphere with the ONA and the strange hybrid it has gestated – whereby I say strange I mean new. The founder of WSA352 is believed to be a Chinese female and resident of Orange County – a stone’s throw from Disneyland. The adoption of ONA’s memes by the founder in such an environment has been unusual to say the least.

‘Satanism’ has by and large been considered a white man’s providence, a European-owned archetype. In the last 60 years, from LaVey to Aquino to Long – a succession of white men have utilised the symbolism of Satan and its implied racial heritage. Nazism has in the past fused effortlessly with Satanism because of a perception that both currents and their forms belonged to the Western or Aryan psyche – i.e., were the direct psychical heritage of the White Protestant Anglo-Saxon. Whether this propensity for white folk to gravitate toward Satan is founded in a traditional racial heritage is questionable – owing to the question mark hanging over the racial origins (and by proxy the skin tone) of the so-called Aryan. Many scientific and anthropological studies for instance have put forth objections to the prevailing Anglo-Saxon imagery used in the depiction of Jesus – claiming that it is highly doubtful he was white, had golden or light brown hair or such refined roman features. But the mythos of this image persists – and is undoubtedly as valuable a brand-mark to Christianity – as the dynamic ribbon device is to Coca-Cola, both priceless marketing tools.

But where Satan or his archetype appears in other cultures, his name – appearance – and attributes – change markedly from those depictions given to him by Europeans and Caucasians. This change seems to appear only where Christian influence is absent – such as distant tribes or derivative cultures that have blended the Anglo-Saxon Christ (and sometimes Mary, and sometimes Satan) into their own cultural roots and traditions. Just as the archetypal image of Christ seems fixed for many black-Americans (even as Christ is portrayed as an Aryan and symbol of their oppressor), so it seems fixed for the archetypal image of Satan.

Yet the number of black-Americans who worship Jesus, would seem to far outweigh the number of black-Americans who worship Satan. In ten years, and where I could identify the nationality of an individual – I've seen only a handful of black American Satanists – as if something in the white Anglo-Saxon Satan pushed them away, whilst something in the Anglo-Saxon Christ drew them in.

The WSA352 arose from a fusion between the ONA's portrayal of the white race's claim to the archetype of Satan, and the perception of life and the necessary skills to survive as viewed by a Chinese woman nine miles east of South Central. WSA352's appearance and this particular fusion seem to indicate the spread of a deeply ingrained racial problem spanning hundreds of years and one that is now showing more urgent symptoms within Australia.

In the Melbourne CBD – more and more over the last decade, and more pointedly and recently in the last four years – the way of life characterised by South Central has been copied – or attempted to be copied as stylised by various media. Although many of the people who have immigrated to Australia have done so to escape genuine poverty, warfare, riots, bloodshed, persecution, death, or torture; such groups including Serbians, Somalians, Ugandans – where there are real social crises and bullets and bombs, rogue armies and fronts, corrupt police and officials that threaten the very liberties of their lives; the large majority of emulators are wealthy white kids whose very social status and penchant for playing at being a 'gangsta' – makes a complete mockery of historical and present struggles. The average white Australian knows nothing of warfare, of having their family and home bombed to bits, of troops of armed soldiers looting and raping at will, of having guns put to their and their families, babies' heads, of being beaten and tortured and threatened with military violence or violence from political coups.

The average white Australian watches TV, uses a computer, owns a mobile phone, and many of them – though in the top 5% of the world's wealthy – complain about how hard life is, or go out of their way to pretend to be oppressed. This is evident in the myth of the Magian as created by the ONA – for nowhere else except under the Government or via Christianity – can the average white person come close to feeling oppressed or seek to justify some sense of oppression.

The recent spates of violence in the Melbourne CBD and their persistence and escalation are the representation of something far more sinister than people not being able to hold their alcohol. These attacks are not going to go away with band-aids – for they are the result of putting band-aids on serious social issues. They are symptomatic of a great psychic sickness that cannot be made to go away whether people lay the blame at parents, liquor licensing laws, lack of police, curfews, video games, violent TV or other such nonsense. These are contributing factors – but they are not the root cause of such disturbances – the propensity for band-aids to be administered to such severe social issues as South Central – are. In most cases, it is a neat division between violence on Melbourne’s streets being perpetrated by spoilt and wealthy children who seldom have to worry about the consequences of their actions / and the tension and subsequent defensive reaction of immigrants who experience racial vilification and persecution from other nationalities in an already over-crowded metropolis.

What is odd however is that it is seldom Aboriginal or Koori gangs that are reported for violence in Melbourne or indeed other National cities – but nationalities such as the Lebanese, Chinese and Greeks. Strangely – the culture that has every right to be angry after the holocaust of their peoples by the early Europeans and unite together as per the Black Panthers of LA against the ongoing prejudice against them that has led almost to the death of their culture and tradition is mostly absent in the CBD. The influence of South Central has instead been centred in the remote outback of the Northern Territory and other rural areas of Australia – and the same self-loathing and hatred for one another of the Cripps and Bloods – carried out in the petrol binging, alcohol drinking and violence against one another except without the same easy access to firearms.

There is no difference in the herding of Koori by past (and some say present) Australian Governments into the remoter areas of the land where they fight amongst one another instead of against the oppressor and the corralling of black-Americans into the small area of South Central where an endless spate of suffering continues unabated. The arrest rate of black-Americans is extremely high. Many are arrested over such minimal charges as possession of a small amount of marijuana. It is estimated that almost 70% of the population of American jails are black-Americans. In Australia, the arrest rate and death in custody of Koori people is also extremely high. Many are arrested over trivial matters, or for being drunk – and it is estimated some 45-60% of Australian jails population is made up of Koori.

The signs of graffiti here, along the train lines, on buildings, in alleys, on fences, etc are largely echo – an emulation and unintentional mockery of the real conditions endured by those who are and were genuinely oppressed. Here, they are called tags and used as a sense of identity, to feel significant. Here they do not yet act as warning markers that mean you will get shot to death if you go near them. The shops such as ‘the Cribb’ in Frankston, VIC that actually cater to the gangsta culture, make huge amounts of money promoting a twisted view of a part of the world inhabited by a poverty stricken and racially oppressed people. They line their pockets and sleep comfortably, well away from bullets, well away from crack and PCP on the street corners, well away from the real misery and looming day of death that at least 15,000 young men and women have been victims of. The Cribb and other such shops sell such clothes as if they were souvenirs from the war-zone itself. Only in Australia the most untouched country left, where there's never been a bomb, a missile fall, a plague, a famine, a dictator coup, could a clear conscience be kept in the matter of making money while people needlessly die.

In shops that stock rap records, thousands and even millions of dollars change hands via a corporate market born and capitalising from the efforts of black-Americans to speak out about the brutality, injustice and racism facing them at every turn for the last four centuries into a popular disposable disc you can choose or choose not to buy – such is your luxury – again to line the pockets of rich corporate businessmen who never have to apologise, be held accountable, or acknowledge that they are trading money for blood.

Some labels do in fact support artists from LA, and are run by those who need it most, but the majority, as Eminem says, is for spoilt rich white kids by spoilt rich white kids. The white Australian can safely don a cap, baggy pants, and some coloured rag and mince about the street trying to be street; because there's no genuine oppression. For a start – they're white – white skin is a badge of its own – its shared by most of the influential members of society. A white Australian doesn't actually have anything to fear, or anything to face – they're not going to be moved on the same way as a black American – they're not going to get shot in the face – and they're not going to have their family gunned down. They can go home to their comfortable lives, walk the streets without being followed and gunned down, and don't need to fear the police because the police are by and large the same colour.

The white Australian is in fact, so un-oppressed, that the only way they can emulate the gangs of South Central is to deliberately manufacture an enemy, purposefully concoct the sentiment that their liberties are at stake, arrogantly decide that they too are at some kind of war. Or in our lingo – stir up shit, pick on someone or some race until they get a reaction and can justify their make-believe. It would be funny if not for the tragedy and mockery they make of real social problems.

If – such individuals – were to by chance be dropped into South Central – I have every confidence they would more than likely be coldly shot for imitating and mocking the life these people who live here have to live. What is most enervating about this identification with the black-American's struggle – is the lack of historical understanding – and the support of this tragic circumstance by buying into and buying from the media that capitalises from the death and continued racial vilification of America against its people.

The tendency for a group to attack unarmed or lone individuals in Melbourne has been escalating well before WSA352 announced its own changes to the honourable field of culling. 'Culling' is in my mind actually a ridiculous concept – since people are culled every day whether they deserve it or not – what difference does killing someone intentionally make? In the past I attributed this cowardly show of force to a number of things, the first was that people were copying the Corporations that receive the worship formerly reserved for the Church; the second was a cultural milieu based on racial heritage and tradition; and the third was a collective psychic decrease in the choices made by the individual self at the expense of the collectively and socially sanctioned mob ego.

What would stop violence in the Melbourne CBD? Some say Vigilantism might. Large and organised groups of youths ready to defend old-fashioned values could keep order – but with any large group is the problem of weak moral fibre and the ease with which power corrupts some. Retaliation only leads to escalation. Carrying salt to blind, a machete for defence, only leads to home-made pepper spray and cowards attacking more quickly with even less warning than before to lessen the chance of defending oneself. This is a tragic state of affairs. The poor-me approach of many young people actually illustrates a lament of the fact that they live in a mostly quiet, gunless, ordered society. It marks the epitome of human selfishness, ignorance, and arrogance. It is no wonder that so many terrorist groups have tried to put a bomb under Australia's ass to wake it up from its reverie – to make it realise just how good we've got it here. To punish us for being so aloof, so arrogant, so ignorant and ungrateful for the conditions we enjoy.

In Brazil homeless people are rounded up daily to be raped and exterminated by the local police. Yet we hear nothing about that except years later in some obscure documentary late at night. We hear virtually nothing about other countries – about the poverty and governmental neglect and corruption in Nigeria for instance, which leads desperate people to scam by comparison wealthy Australians – and when we do – the stories inevitably lack depth, discussion. Foreign Correspondent and Nightline are about the only news media programs to provide depth to the material they present. What we do hear, 4-5 times a day is about Sport. About Celebrities. About a kitten trapped in a well. We are largely isolated from actual world events and our connection to other countries by a flippant and strongly entertainment-based media – and a national legacy of blind ignorance. We neither have to be involved or endure the violence being done to people in South Central – but have the luxury of hearing about it, dreaming about it, fantasising about it, from the media's push of rap Cd's and wealthy designer clothes shops.

But how many of the gangstas of Australia would stand up so fearlessly to having a gun pointed in their face? How many would enjoy having their baby daughter or son gunned down from a moving car? How many would enjoy their sister being raped as she walked to school? Would they enjoy being addicted to crack and selling their bodies, sucking the penises of passers-by to get the few dollars needed to satisfy a desperate hit? Would Mothers and Fathers enjoy seeing their little ones, just babies, out of their minds on cocaine and face down in the gutters too smashed to move? How many of these rich kids even understand what oppression is? How could they? In soft little Australia?

The bloods and the Crips – they are born into a legacy that stems from black oppression that has had all solidarity amongst its peoples against the powers that be mongrelized and stripped from them, their struggle has been turned into chronic self-loathing and hateful destruction of one another rather than against the society that such blood tributes belong to. But the pretenders, who dress like something, talk like something, act like something, from the hood – who have the childish nerve to try to pass off oppression and make a mockery of such suffering – they, and the fact that we do nothing about them, are what make us a target for terrorists, cause violence in the CBD, are the start of a nation of spoilt children making fun of those all over the world who have no choice but to really live this way.

The pushing of boundaries where weapons and group attacks have occurred is bound up in the modus operandi of many overseas gangs – such as the Triads, the Tong, various Lebanese, Macedonian, and other groups have introduced. Knives, Glasses, Bats, Machetes, Screwdrivers, Hammers, and other means of personal extension are being adopted by what used to be a hands-on Australia – but the underlying motive for this carrying of weapons is Guilt and the need to create circumstances that justify such mockeries to continue. To act as though one were at war, when one is surrounded by nothing but comfort when one goes home – to push toward the start of something that doesn't exist, has never existed here – a justification to act as if there were an oppression even remotely similar to the horrors the black American has endured for centuries for the average Australian white.

The choice to pretend the conditions of oppression are remotely the same or have even the slightest resemblance to those that created the situation in South Central is individual – the choice to make out like what is happening there, is happening here is individual. Ignorance for Australians is a choice. We have access to books, to the web, to libraries – we can learn relatively safely without fear of being shot in the face – about the other parts of the world, about their history, and how they affect us – and how we and what has happened where we live, had affected others. If we decide to stay lazy, uninformed, and deaf to our connections to others – then it is the height of gall to complain about the conditions we create by doing nothing.

What could mend the psychic snap of South Central? Now? Probably nothing. In 1992, shortly after the Los Angeles riots, the American government promised to rebuild the ghettos using the “RLA” or Rebuild Los Angeles program. With this promise, many sets of Cripps and Bloods came together as brothers – united in optimism for their future. But a year later, RLA had done nothing to repair the ghetto, provide jobs, or sort out the mess earlier and centuries of persecution had created. Fifteen years on the war rages and shows no sign of stopping. The blood-feud is symptomatic of a perpetually fuelling legacy of revenge, bitter hatred, and suffering. The gangstas would have to lay down their guns, forgive the murders beatings rapes and wrongs done by each side to the other, let the whole bloody mess go down the drain and start again anew.

But all these humans, indeed all humans, are often in the midst of something – whether raising a child, working to pay off a loan, running drugs: they're all in the midst of stories/actions/life tasks that are playing themselves out – and must play themselves out. Even if one gang-banger decides one day that he's going to stop the killing – that he's had enough, done enough, seen enough to pay the blood debt owed him; who says another gangbanger's going to suddenly feel the same? They are inextricably locked in battle, trying to right done wrongs, keep having to get revenge, keep having to kill or be killed. No-ones ready to stop because there's no way for the pain to go away – no way for all the gangbanger's to simultaneously settle the scores they owe one another – no way left for a man to back down, turn away, stop the violence, without being seen as weak, instead of strong, and shot dead in the street for it.

Here in Australia, PCP, Ice, Crack, and Coke are on the rise. Imported weapons such as mobile phone guns, handmade guns, tazers, shotguns, are on the rise. Gangs and gang violence is on the rise. But more importantly – while there is in fact only some small increase in these areas – the media publicity of them has considerably intensified – feeding the mythos – fuelling the romance.

But it's not too late to mend the psyche here in Australia. What could mend the psychic echo of black American oppression here in spoilt rich kid Australia? Certainly, one could start by abandoning once and for all the simplistic wishful thinking and plain ignorance that this is a problem that can be solved with more police, harsher laws, licensing changes, curfews, or other such nonsense. This – is not a problem – a problem is fully revealed in its entirety – this is in fact a mere symptom. And a symptom doesn't stem from without inward – but deep from within outward.

While the media, the television, the radio, the movies, the music empires continue to peddle the souvenirs of the thousands of dead who have died and continue to die horribly brutally every day in South Central and hundreds of other places the world over – this mentality will not only continue, but it will take root, and grow.

It is ridiculous to suggest that parents can control their children in the way of policing violent video games, and movies that glorify violence – when we live in a society whose leaders and rich maintain a national ethos that condones the pack rape of women by footballers, romantically glorifies such icons as Ned Kelly or the criminal underground, or happily patches up serious psychic disturbance with band-aids and blame. The blame for the violence in the CBD falls squarely on the shoulders of us all equally. While oppression of the Koori is allowed to go on, while violence is promoted, sanctioned and offered daily in every shape and form from cartoons to early news programs, and while ignorance is allowed to continue with all manner of short-sighted suggestions for social reform being treated as valid commentary – the deep and dark issue of racial guilt and racial factors bears down upon us.

The psychic snap could be prevented by more discussion of the racial factors involved in Australia – by being honest with ourselves and making conscious our prejudices – not burying them under more absurd placations of blame on alcohol, TV, and so on. This is a problem of hereditary guilt. The adoption of this black American plight by farce is not without reason. In a society fabled for being – down-to-earth (read, Stupid) with a fanatical fear of most Australians for demonstrating intelligence, aptitude or independent individuality; dumbing down even the brightest of us; Suicide among Australians should not be unexpected. The stubbornness of the Australian populace to appropriately identify and talk about the root causes of the many growing problems in this country, and not just the country but the collective and hereditary human psyche – is responsible for many suicides. Where intelligence cannot breathe – stupid will smother.

When the simplistic and nave codes of behaviour and social mores fail to embrace the full totality of life; hem in optimism and hope by a stifling and energy draining atmosphere of pretence of being ‘blokey’ or ‘ocker’, of forcing a liking for cars and football, being terrified of gay people (read, one’s own homosexuality) and hiding any serious trace of individuality, uniqueness, or differences from the stale beer soaked norm; the suicide rate can only be expected to sky-rocket. Australia is; by and by; killing itself by living in an archaic and antiquated romance. Those who think the obsession with football/cricket is stupid, are ostracised; those who think football is thinly disguised tribalism and religious affiliation – are considered too smart for their own good, singled out for persecution and face acts of violence no different than that resulting from opposing any extremist cult anywhere else in the world.

What fits in here, and all that fits in here, is a very narrow set of beliefs. People from other countries are mostly tolerated – not accepted. When they are accepted, it’s generally as an exhibit, a novelty, something to show off.

Almost all other people from countries outside Australia not only speak their native language – but that of English. Whereas most people from Australia are self-centred – they can speak only one language – English, and think the world revolves around them. Ask almost any destination outside of Australia what they think of Australian tourists – they’ll tell you we’re loud, ignorant and rude. Most white Australians live in a bubble of arrogance and spend their time spitting racial slurs and mumbling about the stupidity of immigrants and outsiders ruining the economy. It is doubtful that many Australians will ever be encouraged to learn French, German, Russian, Greek, Italian, Chinese, Mandarin, Korean, Slavic, etc in order to break down the communication barriers that have led to so much racial hostility – for Australians are condemned, ridiculed and shunned for being smart, for being independent, or for trying to escape the backward atmosphere of ignorance that characterises the white race and the average Australian.

That this code of conduct is almost a national treasure or pastime has been the contributing factor of a loss of National Identity – especially now that the Identity of Australia has changed so drastically with the competing influx of hundreds of new cultures. This has left Australia deprived of its original National soul, a hollow shell afraid to repeat its past liberties of making fun of foreigners, of swearing openly, of acting without a care in the world. Instead, and in the face of increasing immigration throughout the 70's- to present day, Australia has the temporary and dubious honour of being shaped by politicians unable to stem the tide as 'the multi-cultural country of the world' – in itself the more perverse kind of reverse racism. Especially when it tries to be politically correct – the white race expresses its ingrained racism.

If Australia chooses to pursue glorifying football which is thinly disguised tribalism and religious affiliation; to haze and tread down the brightest among them to compensate their deep heritage of mental inferiority; to let media glorify beer, football, violence as its national symbols: then it does as every other white nation – and ignores the issues of racial guilt about to erupt the globe over.

The problems it faces will not go away, but correspondingly escalate at a terrifying rate. Until the suffering of each community in the world is faced, acknowledged, wept for, helped to rebuild, supported to unite – this pattern will continue to spread in frequency and intensity. Until one day an explosion rocks the foundations of Flinders Street Station, the music hall above crumbles with a terrific clatter down upon itself crushing the people below into bloody pulp. A haze of black smoke will obscure the streets as if it were London in the 1800's, screams, sirens, and stampedes of people trying to get out of the way, away from the fires, away from the sight of mangled bodies, away from the result of ignoring the outer messages of our deepest inner psyche – meets us. What is one bomb, will become many more. Until our national peace is shattered for ever more, and the guns that plague South Central will be copied here with plastic explosives that snuff out the guilty and the innocent alike. Wearing chains and silly hats will be shocked out of being by the reality that the city is on fire, your family and friends are dead, and the careful insulation that Australian enjoys from world events – has finally collapsed.

Will it take this for Australia to wake up? Or when it happens, and it will, will Australia throw blame on the 'terrorists' – on 'Islam' – on 'beer'? The white man has a lot to answer for. The black man has a lot to answer for. But everyone has a lot to answer for.

Let's start talking.

And we can start by having a GOOD talk with ourselves.

SOVEREIGNTY, LEGACY AND HYPOCRISY

Disheartening as the failures of academia and academics are to mindlessly repeat what is construed as fact in the same initial extrapolative exaggeration used to springboard claims deployed by the media – the Temple of THEM, and I, are not National-Socialist, nor support National-Socialism (NatSoc).

However, curiously on cue, the situation unfolding in the Middle East between Israel and Hamas does inspire some commentary.

On Sovereignty.

It is hard to imagine who NatSoc's might be throwing their support behind, if anyone, given that the conflict involves all key Abrahamic actors and (yet another) religious bloodbath (taking steps toward a racial holy war or RAHOWA) between Christian, Jew and Muslim faiths, which, ferments other energies in the process. Significant decimation on all sides and all forces weakens states and provides the fertile soil for populist uprisings with claims to heal the damage with shallow but impressionable policies, allowing Blood and Iron-type Nationalist groups to take root. Especially, if the Western Hegemony of the United States is drawn into a destructive conflict that prevents it from adequately addressing the expansion of China and Russia, both of whom are draining the USA's military resources keeping them contained.

The conflict that has erupted (09/10/2023) occurs at an interesting time in human history when International Relations (IR) is compromised by multilateral organisations such as the United Nations (UN) which extends liberal control mechanisms over states to force them to show restraint, with specific emphasis on humanitarianism. Traditionally, Nation States since the Peace of Westphalia (1648) have been grounded in Realist doctrine of State Sovereignty, which means within their territory a government can do what it likes, and respects other Governments in other Nations to do the same. This Peace has prevented intervention in historical genocides in order to respect sovereignty – but rising international systems like the UN, and critical security studies have challenged whether sovereignty means a government can treat its people how it likes. Globalisation has also broken down traditional technological borders so that the atrocities of States are no longer hidden but visible to the whole world, inviting action not just from actors (other States) but Non-Governmental Organisation's including the global citizenry.

For the past 350 years, Realism and the idea that States inhabit an anarchic environment where no higher power will come to their aid, has dominated. Therefore, States have held the view they must be self-sufficient to survive. Attacking another state means impinging on its sovereignty and often leads to war. For the State, its survival is everything, and as a possessor of the monopoly of violence which gives it its extraordinary power to police the citizenry, with police, military, bureaucracy and legitimacy -it will do whatever is necessary to ameliorate threats. The posture of Realism that tends to drive IR bids that Israel does not show mercy or weakness, lest it be seen as weak by revisionist states that seek to challenge the status quo (existing order) and seize upon its weakness to destabilise or destroy it.

This is the rationale behind why you may hear Governments of states such as Australia, the United States, who are allies of Israel, openly throw their support behind Israel and its right to retaliate. This is the nature of Sovereignty. But there is a unique element to this conflict between Israel and Hamas that affects the magical fabric of the present matrix.

On Legacy.

Israel has a unique legacy. Following their experiences of extermination during the holocaust in World War II, Israel has been uniquely vocal in influencing political, legal and cultural limitations and controls in their favour. This has included hunting down Nazi's, ensuring no-one forget the Nazi's, concentrating on the Nazi's to the extent other horrors have been drowned out, banning the Swastika, and particularly vocal about 'antisemitism'. It is interesting that no other race tends to have an anti-ism, there is for instance no anti-Caucasianism, and if there is, we never hear it. The Jews also seem to get more than a fair share of 'apologies' – for 'antisemitism' as fear of their power seems to facilitate this obeisance, given their grip on the key institutions of the world. The focus on NatSoc and its counterpart Antisemitism has dominated media, drawing focus away from other bad actors whose atrocities were equal in scope and greater in breadth, and paying special attention to perceived persecution by the Jewish people. With understandable emphasis. Adolf Hitler was a terrifying dictator, with a cohort of men possessing near-ultimate state power, architects of unimaginable causes of human suffering, death, depravity, cruelty, and inhuman methodology, that no NatSoc supporters have ever been on the end of – hence their unbridled enthusiasm.

But this narrative has dominated the post-war years – under the protective parable that the Jewish people wish for history never to repeat. This thematic mantra has shaped the past 80 years by those in power, particularly in the media industry, by directing focus into a specific ideology that pathologically demonises the Nazi's every chance it gets. But now there is a problem – the State, which often govern with their sheen of politics including upholding their moral story and national image very well to float a facade of reality that promotes all kinds of liberality, freedom, justice and so on – are forced to show their true colours when war erupts. And the true colours of a state – are absolute violence.

On Hypocrisy.

A magickal narrative that has bound much of Western doctrine and therefore how we live and what we perceive, particularly in relation to our moral compass since the end of the Second World War, is about to break. For, despite their prolonged campaign to delegitimize the tactics ascribed as exceptionalism to the German-National Socialist regime, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is now engaging in a siege of the Gaza Strip depriving Palestinians of food, water, electricity, security, escape, and threatening genocide. Netanyahu has claimed Israel's response to an assault by Hamas will be to 'remake the Middle East' and turn Gaza into a 'deserted island' (Al Jazeera, 2023). As it amasses hundreds of thousands of soldiers in preparation for an incursion into the prison construct of Gaza Strip to slaughter 5000 Hamas hidden among 2.3 million Palestinians – Israel is on the precipice of committing a holocaust. This may prove extremely challenging for the White Lodge.

Update: Various stories accusing Israel of war crimes and a fall from grace (Al Jazeera 17 October 2023).

In making itself an impregnable tyrant – Israel's intelligence agencies, such as Mossad, have invited a short-sightedness borne of a belief of invulnerability because of one's security system. This has merely inspired an analysis of obstacles and the creative means specifically to circumvent existing installations intended to protect a state from the consequences of its policies. Akin to the use of Boeing jets flown into the World Trade towers and Pentagon in September 11, 2001.

In its rage, Israel is delegitimising its presumed and vaunted moral superiority and disrupting the legitimacy of its claims that National Socialism must be challenged because of its exceptionalism, i.e., that it is so different to all other political forces. Israel ranks as the 18th most powerful army in the world according to Global Firepower (2023) – and is preparing to engage captive non-combatant civilians trapped in the 365sq km area of Gaza Strip, violating multiple humanitarian codes and international laws to which it is beholden. Additionally, Israel has begun shelling Lebanon, drawing in Hezbollah, and Syria, and in coming days, there is little doubt Iran will become a target as the alleged benefactors of Hamas – drawing in Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Australia and potentially a vortex that could, lead to an even wider conflict as other countries are forced to show allegiance, possibly leading into a Third World War. There are few things more unhinged, than religious extremists with nuclear weapons. Israel is sheltered by Christian Superpower, the USA, who believe they can 'deter' other actors from entering the conflict, and Australia is in an alliance with the US and Israel. A wider conflict will mean Australia will be obligated to go to war against Iran or risk abandonment should it need its militant allies in future.

Backed by the world superpower, Israel is picking fights with anyone and everyone believing USA firepower will be its saving grace.

It is highly likely a prideful and enraged Israel under Netanyahu will demand the destruction of Iran, as the fount of Hamas, Hezbollah (Al Qaeda, The Taliban, and ISIS are significant actors in the region too). It is likely Israel will be further incensed at global criticism when its human atrocities mount in coming days and weeks (adding to its already acute persecution complex). Moreover, such wars have a global contagion – where it becomes increasingly difficult to stand back and remain neutral.

Australia has already recognised this in its dilemma over Israel-Palestinian support and refusing to display symbols of one or the other, wary not to side with one over the other and risk increasing tensions. But favouritism is in the eye of the beholder, and such moderation has been condemned by both sides for not legitimising their viewpoint. Clearly Australia recognises that when it admits diaspora from other countries who are of other faiths that religious intolerance and the danger of diaspora fanning the flames of war by ‘showing solidarity’ is a significant risk whenever the status quo is challenged globally. Such is the irrational hatred of Religion and Nationalism, especially when one’s people are being slaughtered in War. War changes things. Global War changes everything.

Structural violence is built into Palestine’s persecution of Israel, Israel’s persecution of Palestine; each side will argue that the weightier onus is due their opponent’s moves and actions but remain blind to their own engagement, involvement, complicity of their state’s machinations to anger, torture, torment others until resistance erupts. Moderates on the individual and state scale risk becoming enemies of different states or groups by not taking a stand and persecuted for daring to stand back and try to retain empathy and relativist detachment. State Alliances can be damaged and cause unforeseen swaps with devastating consequences. Key players in the BRICS (China, Russia, India) are firm allies of Iran and a new conflict in the region will weaken Ukrainian coverage and support, intensify China’s opportunity to engage Taiwan, and draw at least 5 of the 9 countries into conflict that possess nuclear weapons (ICAN, 2023).

Ultimately, the three branches of Abrahamic belief; Muslims, Christians, Jews have once again raised their blood-soaked banners of war in their righteous indignation, motivated by the reigning system of state sovereignty and identity-politics of nationalism. But... this is the way of things. Violence is absolute in human society. Instituted top-down from the sovereignty of the State to the birth-imprisoned status of the national citizen. Repetitively inflamed by Leaders shaped by the political process and attitude required to get into and maintain power, we are continually asked to identify an agreed enemy and march to the tune of war and the madness it begets. This is standard fare for what life on Earth involves.

Reactionaries have declared with a straight face that all religions should be banned from practice in Australia. That all rallies in Australia inflaming religious tensions should be illegal, arrests made, and be grounds for deportation. That we are dragged into yet another War by religious powers and the wrath of the righteous whose fervour commands fire and hell and polarised by diaspora bringing the war inside the gates. All too often, it is National Socialists that inflame this chime to suit their interests, seizing upon instability, fear of conflict by the public, and calling for and offering the assurance of security to frightened/defensive populaces that will enable them to remain insulated from the wider world's woes. And Israel, has just broken the very spell that kept them at bay.

It is worth remembering, that the only method to stop World War II, and frighten the Japanese into surrender, were two atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, catapulting the USA to its status of a superpower as the only nation to ever use nuclear weapons on another country. It is worth asking – how will they stop a Third World War?

WHO OR WHAT IS DANGEROUS?

This comment has been prompted by an unusual number of people contacting me about some of the organisations 101 has covered during the week asking me if it's true that these organisations are truly as dangerous as their reputation – the Tempel ov Blood, in particular. I usually answer these queries without a second thought, but being asked repeatedly has made me think about what people are thinking and doing by asking. There is a particularly frightening test that has been conducted for almost 40 years with invariable results to demonstrate the suggestive power of authority and the obedience of people to it. The test involves a fake scientific experiment where the subjects are asked to give electrical shocks that increase in voltage to another subject (secretly in on the test) when they get questions wrong in a given series. At a certain point in the test, the subject being electrocuted (out of sight and in a room next to the subject doing the electrocuting) begins to yell out indicating that he is experiencing pain.

At this point, the people giving the shocks look concerned and immediately express discomfort at the test but straight away look to the man in the coat (the authority), who simply says 'the experiment requires that you continue'. Although almost all of the people giving the shocks experienced discomfort and second thoughts, looking more and more distressed at the thought of causing pain to another person as time went by and the voltage increased: Consistently, more than 90% of people continue to give shocks up to the 400 volt mark which they had been told would give severe pain to the person in the room merely because the authority figure said, note, did not demand or insist, merely said, to them to continue. The diffusion of personal responsibility was suggested to be the key element that allowed them to continue despite the conflict of doing horrible things to other people – but more disturbing than that, the people most likely to give shocks and longer shocks when an answer was wrong at any point in the tests, were quiet and shy people who were suddenly given a bit of power. More than any other demographic the average person without outward signs of aggression could become the most formidable and cruel tormentor simply from the sense of power they got from doing their job. This is what is meant by the banality of evil – and the diffusion of power where no-one is willing to accept responsibility for what they have done, blaming others, especially authority, for making them do it.

Nazi Germany did not start out with people afraid to refuse a command – it was a gradual process where people became splintered and highly mistrustful of one another over a period of time by precisely this diffusion of responsibility. It is believed that this diffusion of personal responsibility was the same cause that allowed those in say, Dachau or Auschwitz to commit terrible crimes by over-riding natural instincts to stop what they were doing merely because an authority insisted they continue.

Having done six years of particularly hands-on martial arts that didn't fuck about with fancy kicks or unnecessary flair – teaching us to attack at the same time as we blocked, a mixture between kickboxing and wing chun – I have learned many ways to kill a person quickly if it has to come to that. Nerve strikes, chokes, hammer fists to the heart, a solid uppercut to the chin, a downward fist on a full bladder, for example, have shown me that it is ridiculously easy to injure or kill a person. In fact, in the beginning I set about to learn these arts to more appropriately perform a certain act of 'culling'. It only takes 5-10 seconds to apply a blood-choke and a person is down. It takes half a second to block and step past someone and thump them hard in the heart or throat correctly with a blade-hand as you pass and its lights out.

And it is this knowledge of the nuance of living, of how fragile even as it is highly resilient, the human body can be, that keeps most people who know martial arts from getting into avoidable fights where death or serious injury is certain. In Nature, one invariably finds that those animals with the least protection or aggression develop bright colours, spikes, puff themselves up, show feathers with extra pairs of eyes, and so on to keep away natural predators. It has been suggested to me, and I am inclined to agree, that those who make the biggest show of being evil, dangerous, or who seek to be feared are often among the least dangerous. If someone across a bar covered in tattoos or looking at me is making a big show of his masculinity then he is basically foretelling me that he could or intends to be a threat – I can see him coming a mile away, and that is what he wants.

But if I were to be that stupid to think that only tattooed bikers were going to cause me trouble, I'd not survive very long. I quietly keep my eyes on everybody, because as I have always maintained – all human beings are scorpions. You never know what a person will do under duress or given the right circumstances – people, despite what you may think, can be unpredictable. So treating those who fit the description of trouble as trouble is as naive as it is likely to get you killed or blindsided by the little bloke in the suit standing off to the side. Humans learn to LIE early on for a very good reason – first survival, and second, to hunt. And they don't just lie orally – they can lie in every way you can imagine.

And it is precisely the process of thinking that the most dangerous people can be identified by their leopard spots that relegated Satanism to the status of infamy in the first place – by a very clever Church who snapped up the better position of pure virtuous and good – versus what was left in the titles of evil, wickedness and base desire. Threats can come from anywhere, the US, who are facing women and children strapped with explosives in Afghanistan, are nicely equipped with the terrifying truth of human ingenuity to take advantage of people looking for obvious terrorists' threats and thus bypassing those who don't fit the stereotypical description of one. Serial killers blend in seamlessly for instance, quiet, invisible types dressed casually or even nerdily that don't make a big song and dance about how evil they are or how dangerous, but who'll do unspeakable things to a person when they get you where they want you. You don't tend to see them coming because they're expert chameleons.

And, most people are killed by someone they know. So, whilst a huge, tattooed biker, with a patched jacket and a mean look on his face may be the nicest bloke in the world so long as you're not a dickhead and give him cause not to be – you should be just as careful about those who don't attract attention to themselves. There is another social experiment that shows how authority works to divide and conquer even the best of mates.

There was a great book was called the Wave I read at school – where a schoolteacher aimed to show how Nazi Germany worked against the Jews. (yes they get a slamming don't they? You'd think that no other country had done the same or worse with all the propaganda about) Anyway, he divided the class into two groups, those with blue eyes and those with brown eyes. Those with blue eyes were given extra privileges and rewards and were able to give limited instructions to those with brown eyes, whose conditions were poorer and whose rewards were naught. Gradually and then markedly, the system spilled out of the class and into the school where the blue-eyes became fiercely against the brown-eyes much like the Gestapo. The experiment worked too well and was not confined to school – and the blue-eyes sincerely began to believe they were better than the brown-eyes leading to increased hostility and death threats. This sort of thing is precisely how conflicts between people start and get out of control.

Another similar experiment that is conducted, but now under very strict conditions following terrifying results – is the prisoner-jailer scenario – where some people are made prisoners and others made jailers. This experiment takes ‘ordinary’ people divides them and shows a frightening consistency for people to abuse their power as jailers and believe the roles they have been asked to play. All of these experiments tap into certain knowledge in the hands of powers and authority regarding the human ego, behaviour, and propensity to believe authority. They play on deep-seated weaknesses and universal traits in human beings to behave a certain way under certain conditions – and you better believe that others take advantage of them, everyone from multi-national corporations to your mum knows ways to get you to kill other people in war or clean your room. But it really does depend on what a person means by dangerous.

If you mean will they be likely to cause your death, then yes, there is the possibility of that, they ask you to engage in some pretty stupid things – but if you want to do them, then you’ve only yourself to blame if things go wrong. But hey, you may also be just as easily killed crossing the road. Steve Irwin spent his life wrestling huge alligators, thousands of them, big fuckers with mean tempers usually – you know how he died? A stingray barb accidentally got him in the chest. Engaging in activities you don’t normally engage in may increase the risk of personal injury or death from one point of view, but it’s not guaranteed – some people live death-defying lives, risking them every second in war or as stuntmen or whatever and die getting hit by a bus, or choking on a piece of chicken, or in their sleep. Death is indiscriminate, stalking us all, and tends to pop up and take us from the world when we least expect it.

It is certain that we are all going to die, we just don’t know how or when. You can live a quiet, spartan life, eating all your vegetables, taking care of stray animals, and being a humanitarian for all people – but that does not decrease your chances* of getting killed violently. So, let’s put it another way, do these groups then, increase the chance of your death? The answer is again, yes, there is the possibility they may, but so does an electrical storm striking your house and taking you out while you’re reading this. Another question then, do they, the ONA/ToB intend to kill you in some ritual or other? No, probably not. But you never know your luck. ToB are into some heavy stuff, and ONA is likely to be able convince you to risk your life unless you want to be called a puss-weed. But then again, these are fringe examples. If you think it is a good idea to get involved with People of any description then you introduce yourself to risk – because it’s not the forms that are dangerous – alone they are inert ideologies and useless until they are picked up and worn like masks by duh-duh duh... PEOPLE.

If you want my opinion? Scientology is far more dangerous than either group – with a large number of influential and wealthy people who act irrationally like spoilt children to get what they want, through lawyers, or physical intimidation – you’re staring up a shit tunnel if you think you’re getting out of there without a world of pain. If you want dangerous, join these fellows and then try to leave. Watch what happens. It’s also my belief that Christianity is far more dangerous than Satanism – it invented for instance, everything that Satanism now uses to make its little points – the language of English derived from Latin – the moral side of the coin on which it rests was determined by Christianity – the infamy and ridicule it attracts derives from the extraordinary power of a form that has built its own country and city in the name of the Church – the Vatican, and is a gargantuan power that commands millions of zealous and very powerful and wealthy followers. Neither of these may be the smartest of most logical religion – but since when has that mattered to people?

Most people just want to belong – and are willing to do whatever it takes to belong – because they’re not strong enough to stand alone. Christianity has always controlled Satanism – the latter will never control the former because the latter uses the table-scrap the way Christianity wants it to. We become scapegoats when we conform to certain things pre-set for us to use as rebellion – and, the very idea that we should all dress in black, wear pentagrams, and openly supply the observer with various badges and signs of our ‘faith’ only contributes to the already won game. It’s worth pointing out that blue-collar crime is processed in court far often than white collar crime precisely because the legal system is weighted in the favour of the rich and powerful – not, what happened. Moreover, blue-collar crime such as drugs, murder, or assault is viewed as more heinous than fraud, embezzlement, or usury. Look where that attitude got the USA.

Alright, then, maybe this should be put another way – are the ONA/ToB and their ilk dangerous to your health, or your mind? Well sure, they can be, if you lose your autonomy and your way, and aren’t ready to have certain views challenged or ruined for you, believing in something, anything can be dangerous to your health. Maybe believing what you believe already is dangerous to your health? The observer can quite clearly see that both the groups involve and distribute propaganda which like all writing and presentations by human beings religiously or politically motivated, aims to mislead in order to coerce your co-operation. It can’t simply come out and say, give me all your money, kill in my name, and fear me because I am better than you – it has to be subtler than that. But the very minute people group together – it decentralises personal responsibility for collective actions or inactions. You can then justify your actions as worth doing to perform or complete some cause or other and lay the blame for it at other’ feet when shit hits the fan.

But Satanism is not at all as dangerous as its said to be, some of the people involved in it are, sure – but as a form? Most people worry that others don’t have the judgement to avoid being brain-washed – which is true enough – but it is my experience that there are far more dangerous groups and forms to get involved with than the fringe groups that pepper Satanism. If those who asked the questions are here then consider how much authority you have given me to give you an answer about what is dangerous, what is my opinion for you to base your judgement on. What if I am working for the groups in question – might I not be in the perfect position to mislead you into a trap by giving you a careful answer? From my point of view, you are drawn to these groups by urges of your ego, for power and control, a sense of belonging to something, identity, curiosity and perhaps for a different perspective on life. And these sorts of things, WILL aim to change your perspective. Usually, to suit theirs. If changing/controlling your perspective is dangerous, then how dangerous am I?

My work is able to unravel trust in and even change people's faith in time, space, words, language, their autonomy, their purpose, their self-control and identity – and if you're game enough to get under my skin in real life, I know a lot of ways to hurt a person very quickly. The main problem I have is eroticism – by empowering myself and others I can't help but attract trust with the warm glow such realisations can have on a person – that's how cults work, with charm and charisma – I will just say that it's just very lucky for others that I don't choose to abuse that trust or take advantage of the positions of authority given to me, because I'd have gone a very different route with these organisations and probably be responsible for a lot of people getting very hurt if I believed the hype others bestow. I guess really, since you can't see the reality behind the words until you get there – you never know who is really dangerous, until it is too late.

Choosing a group can seem a matter of careful consideration (and I'm not telling people to not do it) but the way I see it, and that's really all it is, the way I see it, is that your choices really only tell you what you feel you lack and reveal what you are prepared to do or condone to fill that space in yourself. And it's easy to fall prey to predators if you feel they can give you something you don't have – this is after all the internet, where anyone can say anything and there is no way to (in)substantiate it online – and it all comes down to whose words ring the truest, or who shouts their words the loudest – it is the land of lies and half-truths twisted into megalopolies of deceit and misdirection. The Tempel ov Blood seeks to make slaves and sells an image of itself – just as K-Mart or McDonalds show me a super-clean restaurant with happy smiling waitresses doling out perfect burgers – til I go there see all the trash their company has created that litters the streets, am presented with a smooshed burger that looks like it was kicked shut, dropped on the counter by a grumpy $6 an hour and desperate child trying to make a living; yeah, the reality is always different to the packaging because the reality and the packaging are, of course, TWO very different things.

Why do we package things? To make them look expensive? To hide their contents?

To protect the fragile contents? Caveat Emptor – (Buyer Beware). I like to believe I am too smart to believe the presentations humans give up to other humans – heh, we all do – but it still happens that you get sucked in because you have to have faith that McDonalds will live up to the promise of supplying you with a burger or you go hungry (or elsewhere) – and if it wasn't that way, society wouldn't exist. Mind you, a lot of greedy fuckers take hideous advantage of basic human gullibility and even their honest decent inclination to trust what is said or shown to them – it's that sort of thing (beginning a long time ago with Christianity) that has made me so angry that I have been writing for almost twenty years. Lol. It also got me joining up with people who I thought could make a difference in it all – help me expose the tricks and deceit for what they were – of course like the Americans who just copied Nazi methods, it seemed that when the struggle was over all they actually wanted was to do the same, but just to be on top. Imagine my surprise. Seems I was in many ways mistaken – and yes, that's how I learned all the things I know and share, and truly I appear to be the only person I can actually trust not to get corrupted or silly with a bit of power. And hey, you have to give up a bit of yourself to everyone every day for things to go on working – but jumping into cults that want to control you, well, that is a bit different don't you think? If anything means giving up my autonomy – then it is for me, something I consider dangerous.

But, see, there is a common bond in all these things. That's right, it's –you-, people. It's you who makes the choice to give away or keep your autonomy – to join a group that practices harmful things or to avoid them – to get involved and diffuse your personal responsibility or to keep it and stand alone – to jump in with someone else's ideas or to have your own. It is –you- who is dangerous, who has the physical capacity to perform attacks or actions/inactions that cause harm and kill, -you- who opt to do something with serious risks of being killed or imprisoned, or opt to do nothing, to stay silent even when you don't agree with something, like others picking on someone, because you fear the response from others, fear not being liked or whatever, being outcast or becoming a victim yourself – you and every other human being who gives themselves over to forms and lets other people control them and think for them, and you who does not recognise their own inherent heart of darkness or their own power.

Me, I don't think groups are tough – I've seen a lot of them – been in a lot of them – been a bully – been a victim – I know some things. We all know that a friend can act very differently when certain people suddenly join them – it's like they're two different people. That's the effect of a group right there. You get most people from a group on their own and those people aren't tough, they all succumb to a choke or a decent punch, they lose all their bravado and cower if you threaten them, drop all their mouthiness in exchange for apologies, all their courage if they think you are going to bash the living shit out of them. Its why homeboys carry guns instead of fighting hand to hand – cause its Hard fighting hand to hand, you want 'respect' you try to bring out someone's fear of dying by pointing a gun at them. And its why people gather into groups to pick on a lesser number; FEAR; how often do you see one guy jump on six? Or one guy pick on a bigger guy? Eh? Yes that's right. Hardly ever. And see, there's every chance you'll get shot by the gun, it's a gun after all, and the guy holding it, he doesn't think he's weak, he thinks he's strong – but that's the great tragedy of the human race isn't it. It's terrified of everything and over-reacts.

There is truth in the saying that we are each our worst enemy. Huge empires exist precisely because humans work this way, some people got wise to it, and didn't have the scruples not to abuse that knowledge at the expense of the rest of us shrug Sure, some people don't have a choice between living and surviving – but most of us here, middle or working class people with a computer and an education aren't facing that choice, it's not a life or death situation with us, its fear of standing alone or up for someone else because we're not strong enough to be the victim. Is there a solution? Not really – people are too shit scared to deal with their faults and problems and insecurities most of the time – and they throw it onto others to make themselves feel better.

That movie, Kick-Ass, was cool – and I'm kind of torn between saying that's what people should do, and realising that most people don't have the physical prowess or mental smarts or confidence to stand up to a large and ruthless group of bullies. You can bash the shit out of the leader if you get him alone – but that doesn't guarantee that you will win or that they won't double their efforts. Cause fear does terrible things to people – especially when they have a fragile ego that is easily shattered – and when you piss of the ego, you're always going to get trouble.

Without advocating retaliatory violence, I believe the only way to change things – is through awareness of fear. Though cowards will do anything to avoid facing themselves, and therein lies the trouble. There are all too many people in the world ready to take your power from you and use it in their schemes if you don't want it, if you can't handle it, if you prefer not to have self-responsibility for your actions and be someone's puppet... Of course, humans aren't so stupid to divide the line for you right away. The way I got into various groups and sucked into their propaganda was very gradually, until one day I realised I was somehow waist-deep in others shit. Fair enough that the forms people put up are kick-ass inviting and tempting to fall headlong into without a second-opinion, but by putting your trust in me to give it you're already asking for trouble. The Tempel ov Blood already mentions that it does some freaky shit, the sort of shit that might drive you a bit mad, and even boasts of raping a 14-year-old boy or some shit – they also profess to be doing it in the name of Dark Gods, hello, doesn't someone that says that sort of thing sound dangerous?

Doesn't the name, or the very fact that they are writing in such a way as to get you to write to them, (most people don't seem aware of what is actually occurring to them when they read) ring even a small bell in your alarm factory? True – them saying they do these things isn't always a good indicator. But that is beside the point. Just like asking me questions on the Tempel and investing me with authority to help you make up your mind is the very diffusion of personal responsibility and autonomy that I am talking about that is behind all banal evils and personal hell. If you have to value my authority – then take my advice and make up your Own mind based on common-sense. You might make some mistakes figuring shit out yourself, sure, but consider this – for all the satanic groups and psychos, death-threats and life-risks that I've been involved with so far, including a very active personal real life full of them over the course of 31 years – for all the enemies I've made or fights I've been in including knife, group, nunchuku, or having a gun pulled on me, all the tough guys reputations and their numbers – well fuck, I'M Still Here aren't I. In one very intense piece.

Summary? Human beings, wherever they are, whoever they are, each have the power to hurt or kill you and if you're only looking for the ones who advertise it, then your chances of survival are 50/50. Our self-deception, not the forms we invest it into, are the real danger to us. *Chance is a funny little fucker – another little fear factor methinks. So are Statistics Odds and percentages. I worked for a corporation that specialises in them – but the way I see it all these percentages and chances and all that bullshit is very simple. Think of it like this, if there is a 200,000 to 1 chance that you will get dealt a royal flush in poker – it's still always 50/50. the 200,000 embodies 50%, the 1, the other 50%. No matter what the odds may be – it's either going to happen or it's not.

ON TOUCHINESS, UTILITY AND THE LHP

April 11 November 2004

“Satan uses us all, Ryan – we are all to use each other in some way and there is nothing bad in this provided we are conscious about it. I don't believe in disinterested relationships and that's quite natural. On the other hand, the true comrades on the LHP have no need of each other – another paradox. We are still learning, and if we survive beyond the Abyss we will still learn, I think. So, don't be touchy, even when I say not to be touchy. Touchiness is a syndrome we on the LHP suffer often by being over-sensitive and over-intellectual. Believe me, I have had bitter experiences with people and have seen how touchiness destroys very useful relationships between very valuable individuals. People are usually very suspicious that they are being used yet they are not conscious they are doing the same thing to others – remaining unconscious that their relationships are formed via utility. I think we should all know we meet each other on the LHP to do something with each other – in brief, to exchange energies and we should do it consciously, with an open mind and with full attention to act precisely.

You will probably agree with me that the subconscious relationship between many LHP individuals could be reduced to a tension between flattery and touchiness. However cynical it may sound that's a fact. Yet I think we should accept this fact and try to feel at ease with it. But the most important thing we should all know is that the self-knowledge (the only real Satan's testament) is not by necessity... a pleasant matter.

VANTAGES: TOWARD A NEW LEXICON

It occurred to me as I was rising in the air looking out of the small, sealed window of the airplane watching the houses and cars recede into the far distance – that at some point the cars cease to be visible. I know they are there; I've been in one travelling the road below in a taxi not a few hours before and yet they are invisible as I ascend. The clouds begin to roll in as we rise above them too and form what I first thought looked like cotton wool – then I realise as we gain altitude that it is not wool but the resemblance of our skin when under a microscope, - the Earth's skin, - at this Vantage – has gaping holes in it, it might be raining or sunny below in the various parts of the country but I will never know because we are above the weather. Though the world below seems so small, I know the size of those mountains and hills that look like patchwork – how much bigger and detailed it all is, and how distances telescope when we land and I am on the earth the size of a human being – yet another Vantage – and all the buildings and landscapes dwarf me – and inside them – individual rooms and halls, and in each room more things, each with their own increasing layer of vantages and mini-worlds from the microscopic to light to the quarks and leptons of quantum physics... An enormous rainbow arcs across the curvature of the worlds edge, a brilliant light-show of the visible spectrum met in the middle by a similar display of a midnight blue hue that appears to fight for domination of the sky-space.

And as I review the day it dawns on me that this is the perfect name for the interlaced telescoping/micro-scoping simultaneities: Vantages. And these cars becoming invisible via relative ascent is the apt metaphor for the ability of our reach to observe. The most difficult part of Forms and trying to explain them is the sheer magnitude of Types of FORM are so vast and varied that they do not easily allow a definition since they may be imagined or conceptual or geometric mass or a single word or complex network of ideas or many other things besides.

To this end I have set out to apply loose working definitions to demarcate aspects of these phenomena.

Vantage/Pterrace: A level of analysis a certain distance inward or outward on or in which perception is bounded within specialist or stratified limits (i.e. Riemannian, Euclidean, or Relativist space and apprehension) i.e. topology examines a certain size object such as fits the size of mountains, ranges, valleys, hills, plains, seas – but does not include Pterraces above such as whole planets nor Pterraces below such as atomic level structure but land-sized features – this is to Pterrace Phorm (or, terraform, (pterraPhorm – to mentally dictate groupings in order to treat the Phorm in size-equivalent groupings). It treats the Phorm with contracted amplitudo wherein the grouping of objects related to one another is decided by the Pterrace of size. Vantages are often exhibited by the I-go or perceptual apparatus of the human organism as an Apex, or all-consuming hierarchy of forms with a single god-like appreciation for One at the top. Religion, Science, Politics, Biology, Age, Beliefs, Values, Opinions, A Favourite Sports Team, or other singularly important foci are all examples of Vantage, which often exhibit themselves through the 23 Syndrome to the exclusion of all others.

Phormation: A collective total of vantages that cover all perceptual viewpoints of what one's own being is – electrical, chemical, biological, animal, physical, natural, mind, body, thought, generative, accident, chaos, purposeful, life cycle, mental, spiritual +).

Phorm: The official spelling of THEM's concept of forms. The 'P' indicates an element of the Psyche's interference or involvement in the phenomena of creating or perceiving form as opposed to a solely matter-based or physical object separate from us.

Form: Often used interchangeably, Form is considered to be a natural state of the Phorm, Matter, World and its contents a priori to perception, interpretation, categorisation. Boundaries between Form and Phorm are considered impossible to define and this is represented by the Mirror Zone where one can neither be sure one is seeing 'pure' is-NESS or 'corrupted' (interpreted/filtered) form.

The Law of Phorms: All forms, are temporary. This is the one constant they share. Even though some forms last longer than others – they all decay and are perpetually changing or seen to be changing owing to our relativity as observers and our own change. This applies to all political and religious forms. Like chromosomes they multiply, divide and multiply. Schisms are inevitable.

The Law of Phorces: The Phorm is comprised of Forms and Forces. Some forces are temporary while others are enduring. Death, Change, Gravity, Entropy are subject to change of interpretation/perception or change of Observer but are enduring - and characteristic by being far more powerful and sweeping than the human being individually and often collectively. The earth has its own cycles, the Ice Age for instance, or Tectonic Plate Shift, or the extinction of a species, or the rising of Temperatures, or the wobble that causes the Precession of the Equinox: these are forces that dwarf us and whose interactions give rise to various Forms not man-made

- but there are anomalies. Economy or Markets are man-made, but the forces within them are complex and obey rules of their own, beyond the control and often comprehension of humans.

Interpretative Shell: All forms are interpreted upon contact with them by the mind as a genetically developed instinct of survival, safety and control. This allows us to use our Simultaneity log to identify the form as a threat or utility, assess its uses, facets, meaning, composed material, spatial relevance, proximity to other forms, other combinations with other forms and general purpose. i.e. a Chair. This interpretive shell is unique to each individual by relativity and may contain elements of analysis that are not present in other individuals schemata- i.e. using the chair for S&M bondage, firewood, or escape;- pending the environment and event in which the chair is interpreted. An expert in furniture may see different aspects than an amateur and be able to date it, identify its maker or place of manufacture, assess structural weakness or strength in relation to other chairs or assess it with a more extensive catalogue of comparisons.

Pseal: Points of reference for perceptual reality. (1) A metaphysical location in space where interpretation and the forms of the Phyrn meet (2) and the physical container of the human skin.

Holding Consensus: Many forms have a shared consensus that holds true across the majority of, if not universally, the mind. Many people use chairs to sit on. It is a device that elevates one off the ground - for which reason it may be assumed that the floor be dirty or unclean to eat from but is a practice that hails back aeons. The chair is of extreme antiquity and simplicity, although for many centuries and indeed for thousands of years it was an article of state and dignity rather than an article of ordinary use. It was not, in fact, until the 16th century that it became common anywhere. The chest, the bench and the stool were until then the ordinary seats used in everyday living, and the number of chairs which have survived from an earlier date is exceedingly limited. Holding consensus is a prevailing interpretation of a form.

The Ostensible Crucible: the simultaneity of locations in which information about form(s) are held and the subjective arguments for appropriate repositories. i.e. one person may insist that forms are products of the mind, others of matter, some a combination of the two. Whether in the head via neurophysiological processes, the hippocampus, the mind, or memory, the crucible indicates storage processes inside the skull, the ocular, as well as innate layers of crucible to the form itself. When we see a star we in fact see light from the star, when we see anything we are seeing the reflection of light.

Anomalic Embrace: A child may invariably find the uses of the chair differ because of their size in relation to it. Whereas the adult is likely only to sit - the chairs may form a bridge, a cubby house with a blanket draped over it, be tipped over, be imaginarily encased and used as a vehicle;- an artist may transfigure the chair by altering its material or structure and by adding to or subtracting various elements from it. They may see some anomalous use for the legs or the seat;- and in both of these cases, the form of the chair is under review or investigation by the anomalous embrace which breaks the holding consensus of the article down to allow the chair to be re-assessed or re-assigned.

Psychometry: Psychological Geometry or Psychometry can be either Intended or Chance. Functional Geometry should not be confused with Geometric shapes specifically built with an intent to manipulate or elicit certain responses, emotions or reactions. Many forms have a direct correlation between the Geometry of the Human Form and the Form itself and the Psychological integration that fits the Form with specific pressures to manipulate specific Human Emotions. Again, we may cite the not-so-humble chair. Intended Psychological Geometry is imbued by the forms architect to induce a certain emotional state whether it be comfort or discomfort in degrees or extremes. Many torture devices have precisely this characteristic Psychometry because they induce a sense of restriction or complete immobility and powerlessness. Whilst these may appear to be ancient devices, they and many more sophisticated, horrific and ingeniously cruel devices capable of inflicting atrocious agony have been employed by Governments and Military, Police and Paramilitary, Regimes and Reactionaries, right across the world since ancient times and today (See Amnesty International). What is darkly fascinating about them is the shapes in which they have been crafted have been moulded to fit (or not fit) the geometry of the human body – as a reaction to its shape. They each use knowledge of the physics of the human body to cause intense suffering and are shaped precisely to do so. Further knowledge of human anatomy influences the shapes of them as well – i.e. as well as knowing that the socket of an elbow joint cannot be bent backwards without excruciating pain a torturer tends to know or learn how much pressure must be applied to make it do so and the amount of pressure that will cause it to break or dislocate and correspondingly the geometric design of machinery that can perform the desired function. Bone is extraordinarily strong — ounce for ounce, bone is stronger than steel, since a bar of steel of comparable size would weigh four or five times as much. A cubic inch of bone can in principle bear a load of 19,000 lbs. (8,626 kg) or more — roughly the weight of five standard pick-up trucks — making it about four times as strong as concrete.

Still, whether or not bone actually withstands such loads depends heavily on how quickly force is delivered. When you perform CPR, you can give chest compressions and not break any ribs, but if you apply the same amount of force quickly instead of slowly, and you can end up having rib fractures. When it comes to unleashing force quickly, boxers can generate up to 5,000 newtons of force with a punch, more than that exerted down by a half-ton on Earth's surface. When it comes to kicks they can obviously generate more force, since there's more body mass behind it. After looking at kicks from several different fighting styles, martial experts were found to generate up to 9,000 newtons with some kicks, equal to roughly a ton of force. A quick, sharp blow that delivers some 3,300 newtons of force has a 25 percent chance of cracking an average person's rib. It takes more force to fracture the femur — maybe some 4,000 newtons — since that long thigh-bone is meant to support the body.

The amount of damage a blow inflicts also varies due to factors such as the amount of muscle or fat covering a bone and the angle at which the blow lands, as well as the age and health of a person, which can affect bone strength. The knowledge of these limits may be imbued in the design of a machine or device which will correspondingly require a special geometric shape capable of performing the required physics. A baton for instance fits into the hand, is capable of being moved at rapid speed, can be made of hardwood or steel and can with repeated beatings eventually fracture and break bones. The tools we create to do our job depend on our understanding of Forms and Forces. The shape of some devices is not deliberate but a necessity to perform a certain task – i.e. a torture rack. To fit the human body onto it – it must be a certain height and length to match the average human body. But with the psychology of torture these principles of design can often be reversed such as the cages in which victims are forced to not quite stand or not quite sit. The level of understanding of this principle of design will determine whether the tool created for the task is of an elegant design, or a hulking machine – though physics will create its own thresholds which cannot be exceeded or gotten around. Nowhere I think is Psychometry more widely prevalent and reaches it depths more soundly than in the field of architecture and the construction of buildings.

It is small wonder that the Stone masons were so revered or that the psychology inherent in the soul of cities is altered by the inclusion or subtraction of various monuments, statues, infrastructure and buildings and the deliberate or accidental arrangements in which they are placed within that city that either compliment or contradict a space – lending aura and personality to it, deadening or livening it, with intended and unintended effects both short term and long-term. Chance Psychometry are forms that happen to take on relevance as if intelligently designed to perform the function we have assigned to it. Chance occurrences of psychological geometry can be seen in forms that we interpret as specific shapes such as markings on the Shroud of Turin or natural formations that take on determined shapes such as the Horse-head Nebula.

Phyrm / Black Clay: There are two convenient ways to discern forms. The first is that they are composed either by nature, man, or accident of the raw elements chemicals and compounds of matter. What we term these forms is a convenience, even as it is an integral function – it is nonetheless the interpretative shell. If we touch a wall we can feel it – that is, we can feel resistance, temperature, solidity, texture. If we push it, it may not move and we sense its mass. By touch alone we can determine the raw nature of Black Clay in its endless variations of sensory feel as it actually is – but to describe it we must superimpose over it an interpretative shell. For it is the nature of the Dexter to categorise what it senses in order to make sense of it and apply meaning and utility. If we hold an apple its feel is Black Clay, calling it an Apple is Interpretative Shell. This Clay is the material of which matter is composed existing in a raw unnamed state in staggering complexity and also effortless simplicity. The effortless simplicity because whatever it is, it simply is – it exists through its own flux with nature. The complexity because of the relativity we apply from all our different vantage points perhaps as an American, a Sudanese, a specific American, a specific Sudanese, a biologist, a fruit grower, a chemist, a naturopath, a fruit picker and so on. The holding consensus makes it an apple for many but not for all. It may be shunned in some cultures and embraced in others, shunned by some individuals and embraced by others for any number of reasons. But if humans did not exist to name it – it or something like it, would still grow, without any knowledge that it is supposed to be known as an Apple but just exist as it is, whatever it is. The Black Clay has many anomalous compositions as humans continue to discover – such as new species, giant crystals underground, water on Mars and persists of its own accord with or without us. We have some influence over it and that is where the second kind of form comes in.

Architectural Sympathy: The second way to discern forms is that some have Intent or are STRUCTURED CLAY. People say certain things to influence others to think certain things. People frame situations in various light to achieve an agenda whether it be telling a white lie, confessing to being abducted by aliens, or blaming someone for eating the last piece of cheesecake. We do certain things, perform given actions to achieve some result or reaction. We place our will into things as if animating a Golem or automaton, robot even, to do what we want them to do. But in many cases, perhaps almost all, imbuing Intent is rarely a Singular intent but a chaotic collaboration of Collective Will. It is often characterised by consensus agreement where additions and alterations occur to meet various standards, whether they be approval of superiors, fashion of the times, political or religious pressure, technology and materials available, skill and training of executors, cultural aesthetics and difficulties and challenges imposed by other forms and forces.

The architect(s) of the United States Capitol for instance wanted the building to reflect the function that was to be performed within it but lacked the imagination and artistic skill to accurately execute this task single-handed. Only through intense collaboration (and slave labour) was it achieved, and a mishmash of individual ideas and skills required to birth what no single individual actually wanted or could have achieved on their own. Another way to talk about form being imbued with Intent is through its Symbolic Gesture. For instance, when we take a brief look at some of the ways in which certain features were laid out in the Capitol we become aware of the Purposefulness and Intent with which it took on the shape it did to cause certain connections, experiences and responses to occur by those who used or visited it: Under the Rotunda there is an area known as the Crypt. It was designed to look down on the final resting place of George Washington in the tomb below. A star inlaid in the floor marks the point at which Washington, D.C. is divided into its four quadrants; however, the exact centre of the city lies near the White House.

A steep, metal staircase, totalling 365 steps, leads from the basement to an outdoor walkway on top of the Capitol's dome. The number of steps represents each day of the year. The Sympathy of architecture symbolically represents a holistic category of its subject matters respective features and ethos (in this case all of the key factors of the history, purpose and power of Congress); it reflects important numbers, dates and events, and places emphasis on various factors such as achievements, scope, purpose through sympathetic symbolism by matching the geometry of its material and shape to reflect concepts and ideas. How many visitors could know this unless told? Would you feel or notice such Intent in architecture – perhaps wonder why there were so many pillars, or equate the star on the floor with the greater concept of the quadrants – or would you feel merely displaced by the unusual design? How conscious we are of these inlaid secret meanings architects have imbued the forms with is an exceptionally interesting subject;- marketing, packaging, advertising, are some of the most powerful human forces there are for controlling choice, technology, public awareness, interpretative shell, consensus holding and second perhaps only to violence as a force of coercion.

It is doubtful that anything can ever be designed by one architect since they are rarely allowed free-reign and must consult with others whom have contracted them to build something to achieve a specific purpose – and to achieve such things requires many hands and many minds all of whom influence or want to influence the final design;- as well as natural or imposed limitations that prevent, cause change, or force alteration to a design;- the architect themselves must draw on what has been created before by similar principles of collectivism.

Nyw Wyrms: As a unified collective, Forms may be said to be composed of a substance that is capable of taking any shape, material or concept. Rather it is those elements identified in the periodic table of which they are chiefly composed and the dizzying interactions they perform when exposed to one another (Fusion), in isolation overtime (Decay) etc. On a molecular level these interactions are of great fascination as they surely occupy a grand seat in the operations that forms perform that the human eye cannot naturally see or only see with special equipment. As you read this article, or receive any new stimulus or information you are assessing it. If you are actively learning from the information you may mentally begin to adjust your understanding of the subject matter by dismantling existing notions to be replaced with updated or improved ones. This may involve trimming an unwanted fact or myth from your knowledge about the subject matter and re-forming a new idea or set of ideas about it. When you are in the mental process of breaking the existing form down and replacing it – this is Nyw Wyrms. The analogy being that new ideas worm their way into your existing schemata of the subject matter causing a geometric realignment and new shape to be created. This is not to say that your concept of 'Prawn Farming' is round or triangular but that the set and sub-sets of your knowledge of prawn farming have specific inclusions that are relevant and exclusions that are irrelevant lending a certain 'shape' to your ideas as a key fits to a lock. The more you know about Prawn Farming, the more intricate the key and more demanding the lock. Nyw Wyrms (New Worms) has an odd spelling like other terms used because they are meta-concepts;- it is only an analogy that something swims around or burrows like a worm into something else and causes it to decay or become something else;- an artistic metaphor.

This convenient inaccuracy has been acceptable from our platform of working within the occult and will always be a temptation where knowledge peters off into darkness of the unknown - but it is not acceptable working from a platform of psycho-social studies. If we put a frozen pizza in the microwave we can heat it. If we put it in for an hour we can reduce it to black carbon. If our ideas are tested we may alter them. If our ideas are put under great pressure and stress we may completely transform them or have them transformed for us. The analogy suggests that there is a common invisible creature in the trillions that acts as a building block for the composition of forms;- in the case of Black Clay this is the chemical make-up of various forms of matter. In the case of mental ideas an infestation of creatures into the core of an idea that multiply with one another and the old idea, kill off or force to leave Oldyr Wyrms (Older Worms) and cause the original form to change into some other new form.

Worms are appropriate because they burrow into the ground, can be cut in half and still live, have many individual segments and work together as a whole. They digest nutrients from the dirt and expel waste. They leave castings. We often feel that something new has gotten into our brains when we are excited by a new idea. We can think about the advantage of accepting the new idea in parts or whole whilst still retaining the existing view we have of its subject matter. Our thoughts are impossibly complex when broken down into segments, but we must break them down into segments to make use of their full potential and attain subtlety and complex variations. We take what we think is useful and discard the rest. But we always retain echoes and memories of previous ideas even if only as a comparison of a new ideas superiority, similar to old castings or skins – and may even revert back to using these old castings or skins as part of or a whole whenever there is call for it or we psychologically regress.

Applied Vertice: The points of description used to define or pull an object out of quantum/space. “Red”, “Round”, “Ball”, “Mine”, “Here”, etc. Micro-Vertice: The esoteric belief that each applied vertice consists of smaller units indicated as thus: R.E.D.R.O.U.N.D.B.A.L.L.M.I.N.E.T.H.E.R.E—that each letter or sound has its own particular secret geometry that causes it to be combined with another letter but not others. Why for instance do we refer to ourselves as I and not J or Z?

Surbit: Infinity is lazy. Contraction of surplus and unit or bit. Replaces unprovable concept of 'infinity' with a finite amount but one with a surplus of units that is undefined but not endless. i.e. a surbit of stars. Surbition: to deny the concept of infinity and use finite if uncounted units in one's terms. Infinity – unprovable, and no examples exist. A common example given of infinity is being unable to write down the largest number because you can always add one. In theory you can. In practice, you can't. The theory of infinity is confused with the existence of infinity. There is nothing infinite. Even if a person lived their whole life writing down a number and adding one, eventually they die. Even if they passed the tradition on to the next person, they too eventually die. The tradition of this might go on a few more generations but it has to stop because other forces prevent the practice. We can say what if other forces did not prevent the practice, but then enter back into theory, because other forces DO prevent the practice and thus no example of infinity can be given. No proof supplied.

Let us consider a tradition that has been in longer existence, the culture of China. Some 5,000 years. If we represented each year by a jellybean, it would be enough to fill a large paint can twice. Christianity would fill it once. Is this infinity? What about the stars or the grains of sand – are these infinite? No. So why do we refer to them as infinite? Because we cannot count them. (more...). The universe does therefore possess objectivity because it does not have infinity. Nothing goes on forever because we have no concept of forever, either. We use it like we do, but we don't. Forever relating to a human lifetime of 70 years, at best. The task of the Temple of THEM over the next five years will be to learn share and analyse existing theories of neurology, physics, and noetics to sharpen the detail on what are as yet fuzzy approximations relating to the neural processes that contribute to form. Without foreknowledge of what has been explored and which processes share similarity with concepts put forward by THEM we cannot know if we have double up and given a new name to an already existing form that may be better explained by specialists. As time progresses we will update relevant sections.

DIRECTIVES: AN INITIATE'S REFLECTIONS

THEM Directives Analysis: An initiate's reflection and rationalisation on the value and future outcome possible through implementation of the Directives.

As a very short introduction, as precursor to my views or interpretations on a select few THEM Directives chosen; I must say that being initiated in THEM proved to be time consuming but valuable. I was hinted to pay close attention to the layout of the site, and it's content. Upon slowly saving the website word press, page after page; before the downgrade in October 2014, I stumbled upon hidden knowledge. My opinion generally is that Left Hand Path occultist, such as myself and many readers of OTO Anorha, crave sinister knowledge, hidden phrases, symbols or actions that may give higher levels of consciousness as well as connectivity with powerful dark entities; or visualise being able to do so. Why do I buy occult magazines? As well as expensive Black Magic Occult books or Grimoires? Why do I buy certain key ritual items in order to have a greater connection with the dark recesses of my mind? I always had a lust for learning and reading sinister books or writings, tales and legends. It is understood that occult knowledge is earned not handed freely.

Upon taking generous time at a later date, the content of the Directives gave me new goals and objectives with a renewed oriented mindset towards the sinister dialectic. The following monologue is a personal review of my selected favourites, out of the 55 THEM known Directives; accompanied with my commentary on their value for myself or each individual reading this, who is part of the active satanic/sinister community.

Stoke a fire with enough fuel and it will burn indefinitely. Even, out of control.

The fire is a symbol of power, a regenerating destroying force. Prometheus as we are told, in tales of old, gave it to humans to harvest in exchange for his freedom. I must take this in consideration and make sinister use of it, to incinerate and re-create such as a Phoenix. No matter where you are, and what you have to your disposal, if push comes to shove we all possess or have the ability to harvest our inner fire. This energy within, this inner flame, as seen throughout history, can cause humans with determination to overcome seemingly insurmountable odds. We have seen this in modern times with guerilla groups, bands of mercenaries or rebels in any geographical area overrunning with violence and murder the system that rules them.

As any true woodsman knows, a fire is always hottest when kept steadily active for an extended period of time. You do not have to overload wood in a furnace, or pit, to keep a high steady degree of heat; much like constant pressure from a small band of armed revolutionaries. I strongly believe Directive 49 to be something for anyone like-minded to believe in; but only the true will adhere to it, because heat never comes without a price. This concept applies to all humans, this causal force of nature called fire. That no matter what, Fire kills any living thing, flesh and skin disintegrate as well as bones char. Fire can make a very good blockade or create a time lapse for a much needed diversion. Be creative, Fire will protect your back and vanquish thou enemies, but do not keep your guard down or act foolishly, for you shall suffer its burn.

Much like fire that rises steadily, think about being pushed in the corner, where there is no chance for flight but only to fight. The sinister flame will emerge out of me, gushing up burning my being. This flame, powering this iron will to live, no matter what the odds. Instinct for survival fuels this flame, total opposition overcoming by extreme force. Not purely animal, however this animalistic aspect of fight or die, fuels what one could call, Lycanthropy. It's in between the sane and insane yet a sinister force above the Ethereal and the infernal. Roast your enemies alive with hells fire by Molotov cocktails, steady street vigilance will always win.

Remember the force of Progress. Every smooth transition from one social event to the next, every flawless transaction of industry and economics, every unflinching schedule on time, every box ticked, 'i' dotted, is oiling the Machine. Kill the Machine.

This is a very real and necessary directive, although not totally complete. Industrial and Commercial progress in any society or nation is what the banks and the machine feeds on. This is an evolving systematic ZOG oriented machine feeding on the people's lives through their long hours of labour. Like the above mentioned anything helping advancing the corporate, private or public sphere, in any nation, is part of the problem and funding the machine. We have been conditioned from childhood to follow the system, to help the government, to assist the authorities, to do community work, to pay our taxes, to give tithes to the church, to assist the less fortunate, to pity the weak third world scum... As soon as an individual awakens the black flame inside himself, his sinister force gushes out of him. He may begin systematically find flaws which in turn will directly damage the machine gradually bit by bit. Politics and the Economy are the grease and oil of the machine's motor, throw fire to burn it down by consciously creating obstacles. The machine and it's operators do not for-see the powerful effect of a dedicated and conditioned group of rebels with a sinister agenda. For many of us this mentality, of naturally helping the sinister dialectic, comes with our life style. Many support the machine without seeing the long term effect of aiding the hubriati's unchallenged authority. Do not only kill the machine, Disassemble it entirely forever.

Remember the force of Sorcery. Magic is not dead, merely wounded. The world around us is a neutrality splitting at the seams with weapons that pulse with violent rage, to be used either by or against whoever is first and last to use them. Identify and draw from those violent pulsing places and spaces that emanate with it.

I remind myself that there has always been sorcery in humankind's history. Tales and Myths of unseen unknown powers deriving of unknown acausal openings on our planet, or strange visitors at isolated locations. This acausal energy flowing through mankind, through physical portals, is taking causal shape and form. From pre-historic drawings in caves, hieroglyphs in pyramids, statues and symbols across all languages and cultures, the world is filled with fragments of sorcery for us to connect to as well as use.

I sit and thank the Dark Gods, for their mercy in allowing me to be saved by sinister insight, and true Magic. I remember that during the early period of history was only understood by a select few, an inner circle of academics and philosophers. Sadly, much like today, real magic practiced by authentic people is very rare, wounding the progression of the esoteric arts. As described in this Directive our world is full of violence, rage, hatred and malice. I, as we all, must focus on the sinister dark energies channelling through causal space and time. The pulsating places or things that emanate sinister acausal energy, I must greedily drink myself into oblivion with these energies for whatever uses they may have through the use of my mind and my human body. A crypt, An old Cemetery, an abandoned house, a murder or violent crime scene, old battle sites, old grave sites, even a deep glade far into the forest; all these examples and many more, have the potential to be a Nexion spot for acausal energy to seep in our world. These places give inspiration and power.

We can put ourselves in the situation of people who have suffered before us. I shall connect with their everlasting presence by feeding on past forged memories as well as emotions.

Remember the force of Absurdity. It is the true face of things when the skin is ripped off. Life can be long enough for friends and enemies to trade places repeatedly. Do not take anything too seriously. When the Wheel spins fast enough and the fragile sticks propping up forms collapse: It is all revealed as Madness.

Absurdity sometimes makes the most sense, some may say. Some of the craziest ideas in history, such as bank heist , drug cartel operations, military invasions, tactical operations were all successfully processed by unrealistic absurd means. Speaking for myself, I was conditioned most of my life to adhere to the Judaeo-Christian dogma and all its zealous goals. I was placed a mask of fear and oppression that kept me scarred and obeying the Demiurge. With time and hours of research, combined with personal sacrifice, I came to my own conclusions; that the sinister Left Hand Path which was misunderstood and condemned for centuries was absurdly truthful and enlightening.

I have experienced much in my life time, living a life of organised crime for a period of 4 years, and serving jail time because of it. This absurdity set me free and fuelled me to be an extremist and risk taker for the rest of my existence. Although I have suffered because of some bad choices, especially greed, every action we have will give out a specific reaction in return.

This in my opinion is sinister insight and should never be discarded as a mistake or waste of life. MY insight role gave me a reputation and experiences to cultivate and deepen my inner self. That there is a certain unpredictability to everything we do, and certain forces working behind us motivating and energising us. The mask or face of human reality are representations of the ways the machine and system plays games with all of us, by brainwashing or controlling the legal options we all have. Criminal Records and Background checks, determine who you are and what you can become. I will always be looked at as a criminal, however I can now live absurdity to the fullest. Absurdity is our way forward, breaking the roles played by mundane men covering truth with lies, deceit and secrets; such are games of the weak, real men wear their deeds proudly.

Living the life I chose, with the LHP as my guiding torch, I see that many of so called friends and family left me behind for fear of having the same label as I. I am reviled and criticised as most of us know, losing people I believed to be kindred and fellow brethren who have vanished. I have seen good friends rob me, loyal friends snitch on me, fellow comrades take advantage of my trust and respect, and so I stand alone with THEM.

For this reason I trust no one, and I take nothing too seriously. In prison we had a saying, believe nothing of what you hear and only believe half of what you see. I have seen rich men fall poor within few years, good looking women fall to desolation and addiction, loyal people turn traitor and selling out everyone they knew. The moral of this Directive is that behind all these forms and abstractions of humanity, all this money and materialistic sewer faeces, there are ugly truths to be discovered through the mounds of manure. As much as people try to make themselves seem living rich and happy, all of it can be torn away by black skies with ski mask, or raped out of their grasp. Anyone at anytime can ruin the life of a much deserving asshole. I have learned however that you must only do absurd acts when desperate needy times arise, and you are willing to pay the price of serving time.

Remember the force of Mortality. Do not take life for granted. Move swiftly and with determination toward your goals. Stalk Death and watch for it wherever you go. It will be stalking you too.

Personally I actually really like this Directive its short and mind shattering. We all have friends and family who pass away before us, but as we remember from the 6th satanic statement in the manual Black Book Of Satan : 'Never love anything so much that you cannot see it die.' Mortality affects everyone at any given point, and no one can accurately predict the death of a mortal being. It's very important not to take life for granted, because Lord Muerte does usually lurk around and get aiming at all those uncaring or careful of the health they are given. Smoking, Drug use, Alcohol, Raw Sex all contribute to the destruction of our body, I must, as we all, should only dabble minimally in such vices to a controlled degree; or see yourself wither away like an old mushroom picked out of its roots.

Speaking exclusively of the Left Hand path, due to the immensity of the knowledge available, I must move swiftly and vigilance toward our goals or pass up the information that can free us of all doubts or fears. Health as well as fitness deteriorates quickly upon getting older, I must not falter and fail. I must flirt with death in a fatalistic zealous approach, walking the edge between life and death to understand where I stand. In some cases where I lost control, with overdose or freak accidents, and went through the abyss creeping towards Death and came back. I, as we all, must choose wisely amongst risky life choices. Everyone has a time of beginning and end, but you may help accelerate or slow down your time of departure into the crusty soil of planet earth or into the acausal realm of existence.

Remember the pivotal importance of the Human Brain. Keep informed of findings, discoveries, neuroscience, correlations and experiments, cybernetics, bio-feedback and changes in collective knowledge and advancements.

For centuries the Human Brain has been probed seriously with almost every single angle possible, but even to this day some of the most important medical professionals do not fully understand the entirety of the brain. Some would argue that the 'dormant' sections are regarded as the chamber of the soul. I have seen throughout human history that civilisations through written and oral tradition, with the use of their memory, have helped preserve discoveries and findings in order to pass down through the next generations.

Humans are on the verge of finding even more about causal matter and the way it interacts with acausal energy. We are also discovering many new things from space, such as the nature of black holes and new laws of quantum physics. As sinister comrades we must all try and do our best, not only to research as much as we can, but also learn as much as we can.

In the limited amount of time I have, with the physical and mental health I have left; I must not let my brain wander in obscurity and falter in laziness, for as in the 4th Satanic point in The Black Book of Satan you must 'Enjoy a short rest, better than a long'.

Directive A-32

Remember and embrace the force of Chaos. Very little is required to cause it. Be creative.

Primeval Cosmogony, chaos, the great void of darkness, evokes transformation and diversity. When thinking realistically about its mind blowing essence and infinite characteristics, the suffocating formless anti-matter brings sinister change by presencing the dark on our planet. I sometimes may argue that it's almost always a good thing to put yourself into a bad position by living chaotic actions and facing its aftermath. If one brings chaos, the random-less and viciousness of its nature, one takes disarray and transfers its acausal sinister energy inside their lives. I both must live joy & suffering then I can say I have truly lived. I believe it's all a equal exchange in the end. No matter what the outcomes of positive or negative feelings, emotional suffering out of all things is considered the best emotion to cause progression. Suffering is the catalyst of evolution, of change to life itself.

Anyone at any time can use chaotic actions to cause change and transformation to people or to society. Some lucky individuals will get to change history directly by ending their very own lives. Such as martyrs or terrorists, both will acquire fame through chaotic actions or the preventions of such. The life of an individual must be geared in the end to be sacrificed for the greater 'good or evil' of any worth cause, and thus bring everlasting change to the future generations of Drecc or like-minded sinister individuals.

Remember and embrace THEM: in all their guises and masks. All Gods are better than One God.

THEM believes in the appearance and emergence of acausal dark energy through vessel humans, called Balobians or Dreccs, among many titles. Yet in the end all are one, the sinister guises and masks for example being part of the numinous. All Gods are better than One God. David Myatt in his text 'Concerning the Numinous Way' explains that sacred texts, depicting Gods or Divine being's teaching's throughout history, are nothing but abstractions or forms of philosophy limited by boundaries and restrictions. Living the Numinous way is embracing all God's as ways of understanding and living experiences, spiritual or physical.

The sinister legions will focus on acausal energy, presenced through individual actions, or group nexions, bringing forth the Dark God's presence on earth. I must make sure the Demiurge and his legions of angels see our open rebellion by my actions or deeds. I shall follow Lucifer and all fallen angels to the final battle, and give my life to the LHP and sinister dialectic or regret not having done so in my final breaths. I await Vindex.

Remember and embrace the force of Form. Those wicked shapes that seize us and allow us to seize others. Study them and develop your ability with them. All forms have both obvious and ingenious uses. Forms are the key to shaping the coming Aeon.

From what I know, causal existence and its restrictions are what we understand as physical reality. With all the laws of our planet, we are stuck in this solid rigid unyielding existence. Growing up in a small community and getting in touch with criminals, I got access to a variety of hallucinogens such as LSD, Mushrooms, 2CB, Ketamine and Pcp. Throughout the past 10 years, I have broken all parts of my ego and self with the help of these temporary vivid spiritual experience enhancers. Form is everywhere, it dictates and shapes, it does not diverge from its format. Wicked shapes and forms such as sigils, symbols of evil or sinister images can most definitely get me fired up for combat or in vigilance mode. With sigils, come power. Walking in the street either with racist attire, or with a devil suit or anything anti-establishment you will cause shock and disbelief. Let progress begin by seeding chaos and letting people reap what you have sowed.

Upon using much drugs and mind altering substances I crushed forms, barriers, flushing morals and taboos away like sour milk, and I let my will take the reins forward into the deep ends of addiction and greed. I traded some sanity for some knowledge and life experiences. I then had to drop all chemicals or suffer everlasting damage to my mind and body. Taking what I have learned, I am now working sober to have full visual apparitions and astral projection of such intense magnitude that I can cry of epiphany much as a broken leg. From the flowing of acausal knowledge, causal abstractions and my seemingly meaningless existence, I use forms to scare people, to inform them, to change them, but am I missing anything? How can I cause immediate change for a long or short period of time. I Sit and Reflect, I must use forms to cause irreversible change at any cost.

26- Never let anyone see the true face of the monster inside you.

I had to add both these Directives together because they fit very well. I personally have let monsters roam freely inside my heart. I let hatred, malice, anger, vices, lust and many other powerful emotions fill my mind. I, as we all, must never let the monster free fully, or risk the unleashing of a force we cannot hold back. As a Dam holding back river waters, I to hold back sinister ideas and thoughts of criminal actions by a thin barrier. The true face of the monster inside me will cause me to go back to Jail or take away life. Only through selective outburst of might, can one keep control of his sanity and freedom.

Following this the force of entropy is not only a reality but an inevitable end for all. Much like nature and its seasons, we also have cycles. Some believe that you can reincarnate after death, and that gives them a false sense of security. I am not that positive, quite the contrary; I personally believe my life is a one shot deal, you make the destiny you forged. We have give or take 50 years to do everything we have to accomplish before dying randomly or selectively at Senor La Muerte's hands. The very last line of Directive 22 gives deep insight into life's harsh causal reality. Everything can be taken from you and don't expect anything from anyone or any help to come. I spent my whole county jail sentence with this solid quotation: 'Hope for the best but expect the worse'

In conclusion this experience of spending many hours in front of a blank page has gave me much to consider. It is one thing to say you can write an informative articulate essay, but it is quite another to pull through with the effort and dedication of a work you can be proud of. The Directives were a hidden gem in the THEM word press, that many have overlooked or not taken the time to read much less to ponder upon. There is much more to be said on each of the selected Directives I have chosen. We must all use this insightful knowledge, in order to advance the sinister dialectic. We all have a ticking clock, and will all must die. Some will have a say on their death, while others will not. I believe that my life is geared towards the greater cause, and that regardless if my life ends before its time; I will be proud of the accomplishments I have done. I have much to learn yet, but I thank the few who have helped me surmount obstacles to a new sphere of intellectual sinister existence

The Sinister Dialogues [See Chapter 11]

ESOTERIC DEVELOPMENT

PSYNAMI

Change takes time. It takes patience. It takes effort. It takes unrelenting determination to push those things into place as the world or the will allows. These minuscule steps, one by one, inexorably toward a goal are barely noticed individually – but they soon add up. One day, with enough pushing, the small trickle suddenly becomes a flood, and that flood a destructive torrent with the force of the ocean behind it. Many people don't see the subtle signs of danger when the tide rushes out, many people don't see the bigger picture when the water begins to approach from the ocean depths on the horizon.

HAMMERS OF THE WITCHES

By my own reckoning – the Intellect is a diamond that projects a laser. Pending on the adjustments made to the setting of the diamond the arc and range of the laser can be narrowed or widened. A narrow laser is able to cut through the hardest substances, whilst a widened laser is capable of projecting complex holograms of multi-dimensional representation. The magnificent prisms that are formed via the various lasers of a collective of Intellects – can, through careful tilting of the individual prisms – be concentrated into a laser of such intensity that it cuts through time and space, but especially time.

The Temple has treated each of its individual works (each mss) as a tool to make an adjustment to existing prisms in the Matrix – adding tilt to each individual diamond or collective prism in a calculated attempt to engineer the construction of a gateway. Wherein the term gateway is descriptive it is inaccurate, denoting a doorway of some sort – wherein the gateway is actually the collapse of Reality and its forms.

This premise is that the lasers in a collective diamond prism can be turned in on themselves causing a collapse of the total hologram. To do this requires that the logical functions and courses of action and reaction of each individual diamond in the collective prism be re-oriented to direct their laser either inward all at once – or toward a singular point. The concentration of the collective lasers at a singular point cancels them out – and causes the collapse of the Matrix – this collapse of the total hologram is the equivalent of opening a 'Gateway' to another world usually hidden from view by the ceaseless projection of holograms. The ceaseless projection of holograms – of collective belief – of so many minds focused on holding up the same or similar worldview, perception or (fa) fixes the image of the world in place. A collapse is the equivalent of "psychic disruption" as spoken of in ONA mss. This collapse can be made to occur on a cultural as well as an individual level.

Although this theory might sound convoluted – like ‘GBM Experiment A’ (OA #31) this is a brief way to explain the work and purpose of different sets of a dozen or more manuscripts specially tailored to ‘disrupt’ “normal” thought and action processing in an individual or group by playing on weaknesses or appealing to strengths in existing forms. Form is key, and the collapse of Form even more key. Both internal and external – the collapse of Form is a means to presence the Dark Ones.

It was originally planned to include a selection of our core manuscripts within Crux to act as the foundation for the book – after all – the mss of THEM are key elements of our nexion. But we felt in the end that a) we’d be taking up valuable room for mss that are printed elsewhere if only one takes a little time to look, and b) we have no intention of annoying our reader by repeating such mss ad infinitum. However – for those either new to the Temple of THEM – who’ve read little of our work or bought Crux without knowing who we are – we designed a means to both introduce Ourselves and allow you to navigate our occult labyrinth by way of a psychic map. [The hammers are our mss – the witches – are US.]

A SUMMARY OF THE APPROACH TO BLACK MAGIC BY THE TEMPLE OF THEM

The Tree of Wyrd has a rich and flexible symbology capable of representing many of the facets of the Nine Angles, including the 21 Dark Gods, the ‘bi-furcation’ of Time into acausal and causal reflexions, the Nine Angles and the Abyss, the Sphere workings and exhaustive attributed lists of correspondences all neatly captured in the Septenary Nonagonal helix of the Tree. As an early way of working with and exploring various energies attributed in abstraction to the planets used to loosely equate the raw memes – the Tree of Wyrd is a masterpiece. It also has the ability, like the pentagram, through no intention of its own, to take someone on a specific guided journey merely via its suggestive shape and the context in which it is presented.

Why/How?

Such an enquiry requires asking some crucial questions: Why is it that human beings necessitate Abstracts? Why is it that Initiates begin their path by investing time, effort and faith in such concepts as the Star Game, Culling, Aeonics, or for that matter in Concepts in general? Why is it that ONA Initiates the world over follow and accept the guidelines given in Naos, or that Setians strive to abide by the complex religious instructions of the Setian Priesthood given in the Onyx Tablet, or that Laveyans dutifully copy and repeat the litanies, rituals and satanic points laid down in the Satanic Bible?

Moreover – how is it that words, language, symbols, reading, and visuals have become the dominant foundation, the gateway through which information is processed, interpreted, perceived, for any course of magic, and even any course of living to such an extent that such forms have the power to incite the basest or most sublime of human reparations and representations? A symbol can take on such power that its mere presence can enrage/inspire a people so greatly that the world is set to burn (The Swastika)– or can likewise be invested with such numinous power as to enrapture them to such a state they achieve rare heights of collective brilliance co-operation and genius (the Moon Landing / Mars Mission etc.). Likewise, laws and regulations, even the most absurd and unjust of them can be self-enforced via a steady stream of words alone.

Yet many of us live unequivocally with no knowledge of who we are, where we come from, or where we are going either individually or as a collective – trusting in the presence of familiar forms and stories to make sense of life’s enigmas and to guide us. How is it that Abstractions have taken on such validity, solidity, integrity to affect us the way they do? For this is precisely what they are and what they do. Our enquiry now leads us into the fundamental apprehensions of the Temple of THEM wherein a number of hammers are necessary to break through to the other side.

THE ABYSS: NOTES

Once a higher truth/understanding has become the main drive behind a person’s journey’s and decisions, there comes a point when one must face the Abyss.

It seems initially we look outwards, and to the past, to try to grasp higher meaning and forgotten Knowledge. These lessons lead us to look into ourselves, for once we understand our place within that Knowledge, a deeper Knowledge of the self is sought.

Breaking down all that has one into creating a person, all structure is analysed, all behaviours, patterns, responses, relationships, endeavours and desires are coldly dissected. Once a person has seen all these things for what they are, once cannot look back. One realises that they are utterly alone in the cosmos, and ultimately an utter stranger to ourselves; for as deep as one can go inside themselves there is still a primal instinct that is not entirely of one’s self.

Past dogma, environment, nature and education, there is an open sore inside of us that is not related to our personal experience.

Facing this unknowable emptiness, realising its power over you, beyond you, is facing the Abyss. It is the pool of understanding ingrained in all but looked upon by few. To allow the Abyss to swallow you is to become.

Initially facing this age-old void can be very overwhelming – something so huge and empty could surely swallow us whole, without impact? But this is not the case; for as we are swallowed, we become part of it, and it becomes part of us.

To accept our nothingness is to face the Abyss.

To understand one's true power in that nothingness is to know the Abyss.

To use and be used by that power is to become the Abyss.

A DEGREE OF SEPARATION

Before reaching the Abyss; Always are we one step removed from our inspiration; emulating/copying whom or what we desire but can never truly become. Always there remains a degree of separation; a magical difference in the charge of our nexion and that which creates what we desire.

A convenient model for this lies in the metaphor of a pond. There are those on the outer edge of a ripple caused by the tremors of a stone cast into the waters, and those on the inner; then there are those who cast the stones... a person on the outer ring seeks to be within the inner concentric where the nucleus of the nexion emanates from its source. While the inner concentric seek the same; they are also charged with the task of dispersing the ripple outward.

Let us suppose a room of people are having a conversation and comparing their level of proximity to the Source; The Acausal Voice.

“I designed a new Tarot for the Order” says the first.

“I've performed the External Adept Rite AND designed a new Tarot for the Order” says the second.

“I am an Internal Adept and have visited the Heartland of the Order” says the third.

“I was in the Heartland of the Order where I met with members from the Order and undertook the Black Pilgrimage”, says the fourth.

“I am in the Order and tutor others in the Septenary Way” says the fifth.

“I am the Grand Master of the Order” says the sixth, “and all of you are under my Will to Power. And only when my consciousness is passed to you, as it was passed to me, can you ever BE what you think is me. I am the carrier of the Wellspring of the Order, the host of its creator and originator; and from my nexion has come your desire to want and have my creation and original essence as your own. My inspiration is un-attributable to another person above me; I am an emulation of Him; an ancient immortal consciousness that will see its inheritor live as I have done. As you can never be my body you can only be my Will; for the only way to get within an inch of what I am is to come unto yourself and channel the source that others desire to emulate.”

Spoke then the Abyss “And He from me; I yet to be named, seen, understood or controlled by the meshes of the mind. I, whose visage is turned into the wheeling cogs of willpower; a will made possible by I alone, and impossible too.”

AD ACCUMULUM INFINITUM

The accumulation of experience is an on-going experience that can only be appreciated with the passing of time and the opportunity for retrospection. Mvimaedivm was supposed to convey three separate archetypes [co-existing beyond linear time] that embodied various stages of development that for convenience were grouped into separate stages of causal age, 12-19, 19-21, 21-28. The book itself means more to its writer than to its “audience” – acting as a catalogue for the various notions held dear at various times throughout life. The result of reading ones past follies may elicit a chuckle and if one is lucky: help evolve an understanding of life as a river of shifting miasma that carried the organism along in its current whereby the hapless being snatched in vain at the various twigs and logs from the Tree of Life floating by as they drifted toward oblivion [Qv. Sechnacht].

If you are twenty now, you can expect to change your mind about what is what for the rest of your life. Think of your experience as a life so far. As a child you grew and grew mentally stage by stage, assessing, discarding, adding etc until you were a teen. You continued to do that until now – and in your young age you will no doubt exhibit the tendency to rationalise, look for absolutes, and entrench yourself in your own self-importance. And it is natural to do so. Remember what you have written today, and remember to look back on it when you are 21, 25, 30 etc. And it will reveal to you something that you, by virtue of being in time with yourself, cannot hope to see until maturity, age and change have taken you far from where you stand in your castle of ideas, to other lands wild and fanciful – that in many ways bear no resemblance to the self-ideal you treasured at the age of twenty.

There is a danger at your age especially, of the ego trying to solidify itself and fix the world just so. Something that you may only notice when you, like me, can look back on the overall geometry of your words and writing: for therein lies a secret arcane language that despite itself and what it wants to communicate, cannot help but communicate something altogether different beneath the words to the initiated. People forget easily that they grew and grew as a child, adding, subtracting but always changing, renewing ideas re-evaluating etc. I urge aspirants: do not forget that link with your past. In your travels that are yet to come, do not let your ego solidify itself at the age of twenty and walk you around possessed with a static view of the world. I guarantee you will change your mind on your views again and again as you get older. Nothing is permanent. And will one day, look back on your places of bricks and mortar as the foundation of your pyramid of skulls.

INTO THE MOUTH OF MADNESS

What Crowley knew as Aiwaz what Jung knew as Philemon, we know as THEM. Ritual Magic is a by-product, a dance around the true fire one should be seeking but masks with their ignorance and fear of what the fire represents – the incest wish.

One removes that ignorance with the journey inward and by learning the language of the dreams. There is a correlation between the form and intensity of demons, gods and angels as external manifestations and the maturity of the psyche and its particular stage of individuation.

We perceive that there is an externality and an internality – but we do not recognise that what is External is in fact of the origin of what is Internal – and what is Internal is in fact the origin of what is External. We cannot evolve if we cannot control our projections and learn to speak again with the Gods – with THEM – those supra personal forces bastardised now beyond all recognition but always contained within the Gate that some of us are.

How did the Sumerians manage to achieve what they achieved? Through a direct connection with THEM – that Voice that guides, admonishes and is the source of all the greatest genius – the Voice that informed Sumerians how to write, Egyptians how to move impossible weights – but we have long lost, long clouded that Voice. Our libidos are mad – all manner of outward flailing saps our time and energy, distracting and diverting us from the treasure within. Where no tools are needed but patience, self-honesty, understanding and psychic integration. Where no wands, no cards, no circles, no words are required but to watch, to listen, to consciously try to bridge the gap between the consciousness and the underworld.

What is Nuit and Hadit but Jung's principle of the Libido. What is Ra-Hoor-Khuit but the fabled formula of the philosopher's stone all but Jung danced around – came so close – even spoke all the right words and grasped the right actions but Acknowledgement of the Function and Goal of the Libido? Each Sage before us has added a piece gradually making this terrible secret known in an atmosphere developed by THEM of chaos, horror, decline – the only possible environment where the taboo could be unveiled without severe shock to the conscious psyche – the only possible environment that would desensitise some to the horror and shock of such realisation – the only possible environment in which such things could be explored and reveal themselves amid a frenzy of satanic flailing in a turgid sea of occult masturbation that forced a few from the filthy waters to break through to the Source of THEM.

The HGA or High Guardian Angel is the Keeper, the Guardian of the Threshold. This Temple's Work so far as consisted not of depth from its insights – but in the daunting, unsatisfying, depressing chore of First, alone before all else, removing the layers and layers of forms and spider webbed husks of Egotism and delusion from those who would seek to join us ON it. The Threshold has many meanings and it occurs many times – but there is only one Authentic Threshold and that is the private journey inward on a raft of dreams and a prepared consciousness toward the Abyss – to venture into that place where the Conscious meets the Unconscious and Individuates.

The Tree of Life is of limited help here – The correlations often drawn between Planet and Task are damaging more than anything else – with neophytes armed with the idea that one must/needs summon a number of demons and will then reach Gnosis when they reach the final sphere Saturn, is ludicrous, a violent distraction, a mis-codification of the Way. That is not work, that is phantasy, it is not a bridge, it is a delusion. No actual work is done without the prolonged aid of the Subconscious and not just over the course of a year, or several years, but at least half a lifetime – age changes perspective and Nothing will bring that earlier than it can arise – hence Sath's comment that only those over 30 should join THEM.

That one need meet, challenge, integrate the Shadow, Manifest the Animus/A, Overcome the Imago of the Mother/Father, Withdraw Projections, Balance the Ego, Yolk or Free the Will, Adapt, Endure, Struggle, Unite Opposites, See beyond Form, Exhaust Form, Bind Contradictions, Learn, Awaken, Question and finally Know takes a long time and unrelenting effort. The Ego lies but the subconscious does not. The conscious acknowledgement of what Jung called the Libido and the Incest Wish are Key – conscious and honest communication with the Unconscious is Key – to listen to and learn to divine the meanings of ones dreams, as warnings, guides, statements, or separate them from phantasies, wishes, delusion – to control and compartmentalise the Psyche – That is what makes an Adept.

Only a genuine desire to do the Work will get someone there – the Egos of most are egg-shell fragile, lazy, or completely and utterly misguided in what is to be achieved and how. One cannot tack on the wisdom and growth someone else gives them – if they go to this place where THEY Dream unprepared – they can expect only the greatest suffering. The admonishments and devilry of the subconscious have woken many an apparently immovable physical god screaming and covered in sweat. Its power cannot be underestimated because it will not let itself be underestimated. All that is has been built on these functions, on the libido, the fuck-lens that obscures us from allotting our energy differently, freely, and the very possession of consciousness and the tendrils of the unconscious that don't care if we believe in Them. But we MUST BELIEVE in Them because they are of us and not of us – they are the gate to genius or to madness – they are the DARKENED GODS THEMSELVES.

And when we do not understand this – we see them everywhere but within, as ghosts, as demons, as apparitions, visions, spectres – and when we seem them outside, it only means something inside is missing. If we are to build a pyramid of skulls, we are to understand the needs of the Builders, to ask it what stones it needs, what we need to do on the other side of the veil in the waking world to feed it, please it, grow it, expand it – for as we do, so too does our consciousness explode outward – and as that changes, our dreams change until we stand physically, mentally, spiritually in the place, the divide that the Temple of THEM, call the Threshold.

Crowley, Long, LaVey they all brought something else, something new, a unique brick to pave the stairway to the stars but they ALL danced around the fire gradually making the flames higher to force this realisation into consciousness but Not one of them embraced it and dared to steal it, to stand and endure the heat to burn in it. JUNG, and Only Jung, Knew. One cannot read his work without being fascinated because he was Right. Because he was Honest – alone among all occult writers or those who would seek to understand and bring knowledge of what he found – only Jung spoke in plain English without standing in circles, whispering to figments of imagination or imagination manifesting as figments, without burning candles and incense and worrying about the rotation of the stars or the sign of the moon... His direct and prolonged study of the deepest, rawest, darkest aspects of the human being afforded him the greatest insight man has ever produced. He alone – KNEW and he Voiced it without veils or dance. He stood directly in the fire and burned. He was an occultist beyond measure but not recognised as such. Does this Temple know the language of the Abyss – yes. Have we seen the Threshold – the releasing of the Libido from Childhood – the divide between unconscious and conscious realms in the psyche – yes, we have experienced the symbolism.

NO CHOICE BUT THEIST: DARK GODS, BLACK MAGIC, ORGASM AND SEX

[This article was submitted to ANATHEMA PUBLISHING for their visually stunning publication PILLARS: III – The Ebon Kteis, with this edition focused on La Petit Mort, the Little Death associated with Orgasm.]

By Various Members of the Temple of THEM [Themon, Anorha, Krist Hollow]

The Dark Gods are alive in our estimation and in our experience. We know them as THEM. They are neither simple nor imaginary, and pending the Sorcerers state of mind arrive with a soul-changing coldness as manifestations that scar one with unforgettable feeling of The Other or are felt in the very fabric of the world as a pantheon of hidden operant forces. Performing Magic in THEIR Name is to seek empathy with these forces, for when Successful the Earth acts differently toward the Sorcerer(s) and Synchronicity rushes in altering Events, Offering Signs, to produce a Dream-Like Quality to Reality. Our Temple exists to worship THEM in all of Their Myriad Complexity. In aid of this we record our experiences and try to isolate the Keys that transform failed attempts to Know THEM, into terrifying ordeals that scar the memory leaving no choice but Theism; no comfortable option of intellectual speculation to deny They exist. This commentary will touch on some of those Keys and remark on the link between Dark Gods, Black Magic, Sex and the Orgasm.

Orgasm, Ego and the Little Death

The Orgasm: an extraordinary phenomenon historically, sexually, magically. An extremely pleasurable experience with an inordinate amount of sorcery-based power. Long associated with Sex and Death by the occult world there are a vast number of theories from all corners as to why. This section of the article will share our own understanding of the matter. To begin with a Wikipedia article relates:

Curiously, in French literature, the term la petite mort (the little death) is a famous euphemism for orgasm;[141] it is the representation of man who forgets himself and the world during orgasm.”

There is almost always some grounding for these ancient associations. Where what seems curious to us because we have most likely forgotten or lost the connection to the past from which we have inherited such lore is remembered or known by those who work with sex magick and/or dark arts in which the mystique is revealed through practice. Those arts that require us to Know Thyself and bring the thundering phenomenon of the sovereign Ego down to bear on the shining Self require the courage to unleash various demons by various methods of alchemy and introspection that drive home the interconnected network of our body and our mind. The necessity to understand their respective functions to become as a Temple to THEM. The orgasm has many magical utilities, whether it is by withholding it, indulging it, prolonging it, makes significant difference to magickal works.

It is highly doubtful the reader is devoid of the literally “mind-blowing” experience or definition of an Orgasm – but as it is important to the following work, here is a suitable explanation of the male orgasm.

As a man nears orgasm during stimulation of the penis, he feels an intense and highly pleasurable pulsating sensation of neuromuscular euphoria. These pulses begin with a throb of the anal sphincter and travel to the tip of the penis. They eventually increase in speed and intensity as the orgasm approaches, until a final “plateau” (the orgasmic) pleasure sustained for several seconds. The length of a man’s orgasm has been estimated at 10-5 seconds on average, though it is possible for them to last up to 30 seconds. During orgasm, a human male experiences rapid, rhythmic contractions of the anal sphincter, the prostate, and the muscles of the penis. The sperm are transmitted up the vas deferens from the testicles, into the prostate gland as well as through the seminal vesicles to produce what is known as semen. The prostate produces a secretion that forms one of the components of ejaculate. Except for in cases of a dry orgasm, contraction of the sphincter and prostate force stored semen to be expelled through the penis. The process takes from three to ten seconds and produces a pleasurable feeling. Ejaculation may continue for a few seconds after the euphoric sensation gradually tapers off. It is believed that the exact feeling of “orgasm” varies from one man to another. Normally, as a man ages, the amount of semen he ejaculates diminishes, and so does the duration of orgasms. This does not normally affect the intensity of pleasure, but merely shortens the duration. After ejaculation, a refractory period usually occurs, during which a man cannot achieve another orgasm. This can last anywhere from less than a minute to several hours or days, depending on age and other individual factors.

Here are descriptions of the sensation of orgasm from each gender.

Male – “Orgasm is difficult to describe since it does not exist purely in a single location and is neither entirely physical nor entirely mental. A tickling (not one directional) but as if a small ball whose surface is tickling outward in all directions can be felt in the area between anus and testicles, it grows in size spreading outward in a diffused ‘glow’ down my thighs and becomes warm. Simultaneously, stimulation of my cock or balls excites nerve bundles that lead to a similar tickling of heat inside them that tightens my groin muscles and buttocks, meanwhile the visuals excite the experience until the tickling begins to expand as a throbbing felt in the balls, anus, groin

(and my head which is psychologically stimulated) and that feeling slowly travels upward along the shaft of the penis to the tip, which grows very hot as if vibrated on some atomic level like tiny metal beads shaking on a metal plate but so small the metal cannot be felt – then my body writhes, my hips buck, my balls tighten, my breath becomes short and sharp, and my semen explodes outward in a stream.”

Female – “When I orgasm it grows and shudders through my entire body like a small fire that starts to glow low in my groin, then trails up to my brain, finally erupting in a fireball that engulfs my entire mind and body...and although the sensation is evoked through clit and nipple stimulation, they are not necessarily the most heightened areas during actual orgasm, when I cum i feel it through all of me, all at once....mentally and physically. Seems like men’s orgasms aren’t nearly as good... and I can have three different types of orgasm...though clitoral ones are the most intense, that deep uterian one I have spoken of seems more like a male orgasm, as it is most localised and though it teeters on the edge of engulfing the entire core of me, it’s not quite the same.”

While descriptive and interesting in themselves, knowing the intimate process of one’s own orgasm is essential to sorcery. And it is a brief moment during orgasm that la petit mort concerns. Both of these above descriptions relate sensations that grip body and the mind, working the organism into a frenzied state of excitement, resulting in ejaculation and/or orgasm. The sublime moment of orgasm, engenders a state of release, relaxation and euphoria and it is here, at the pinnacle of the orgasm that we find la petit mort – the little death.

The story of assassins executing their targets during the distracting engagement of coitus is widely known – for during sex the body is both exposed and vulnerable more so when that moment of orgasm requires the entire body and mind to give over to a brief window of ecstasy during which a person can do absolutely nothing but be rocked by its passage. In effect, their whole being is physically blinded and bound up in pleasure for just a moment, often only a few seconds, lost in the violent throes of a powerful sedative; but it is enough time and the perfect time for the assassin to strike.

Many targets, highly suspicious of assassination and surrounded by armed guards and security measures have been dispatched by falling for the charms of a beautiful assailant. Through the allure of sex, they have been led to drop their guard, dismiss their protectors, abandon their weapons, remove their clothes and walk willingly to their place of execution naked and exposed for the chance to experience the ecstasy of la petit mort. There is no question of its allure, and the following extract offers a scientific explanation as to why assassins favoured it.

“A study examined 12 healthy women using a positron emission tomography (PET) scanner while they were being stimulated by their partners. Brain changes were observed and compared between states of rest, sexual stimulation, faked orgasm, and actual orgasm. “Differences were reported on the brain changes associated with men and women during stimulation. However, the same changes in brain activity were observed in both sexes in which the brain regions associated with behavioural control, fear and anxiety shut down. Regarding these changes, Holstege said, in an interview with The Times, “What this means is that deactivation, letting go of all fear and anxiety, might be the most important thing, even necessary, to have an orgasm.” – Wikipedia: La Petit Mort

Letting go is an understatement but it is an apt lead-in. Now we must ask, why orgasm and “forgetting oneself and the world” has been associated with Death? If we can understand this then we can further understand the appellation ‘petit’ or ‘Little’. It’s obviously not the causal death of the orgasmer – that would by rights be the ‘Big Death’. So, it is a separate death from biological extinction. And why should forgetting the world even for a moment be equated with death at all? The term ‘Little’ while referring to a comparison separate from actual death, also refers to a particular duration, a small or minuscule moment in time. In Our Tradition the answer to La Petit Mort lies with the Ego.

Sigmund Freud with his psychoanalytic projects, in “The Ego and the Id” (1923), speculates that sexual satisfaction by orgasm make Eros (“life instinct”) exhausted and leaves the field open to Thanatos (“death instinct”), in other words, with orgasm Eros fulfils its mission and gives way to Thanatos.

In Our Tradition – the Ego is a powerful, unflinching, sovereign emperor of the Mind. It exists to monitor all things around it and its functional purpose is to act in ways that preserve its homeostasis, its Ideal sense of who it is; both in relation to ourselves and to the external world. It does not like its Ideal to be disturbed and does everything in its power to prevent this – particularly if a person has a large Ego, which makes it far more sensitive to having its Ideal disrupted. Such disruptions equate to challenges, assaults, slights on its sovereignty, i.e. being told that ‘we’ (being the ego that acts through us) are wrong, can motivate the ego into action very quickly, for it is always on the lookout for attacks against it even when there may be none, because these are extremely painful for it – felt as bruising in our most sensitive spot. Such bruises can quickly summon apoplectic rage in our defence. There is power and danger in an ego that is sensitive. The Sorcerer aims to make themselves as sensitive as possible to the forces and undercurrents of life governed by THEM; thus the ego is not as easily hurt but also allows for maximum seerage and empathy; though this can lead to feeling these currents very strongly even when others cannot, as if to them you are blown about by an invisible wind.

The Warrior by contrast trains to make themselves insensitive to these currents, to overcome all things by brute force and physical straining, this empathy that is also experienced as pain. They rely on raw muscle and aggression, making themselves unable to feel these currents, but correspondingly amass an armour of ego to protect their undeveloped sensitivity – which is all too easily injured and provoked to react. There is little difference between the Sorcerer and Warrior but the purpose for their muscle, the way they train and why.

The dichotomy of the muscled warrior and the feeble wizard is false. To summarise: who we are, is driven and controlled by our Ego and its unique sense of psychic equilibrium as to how things must be to remain who we are and not just from our point of view, but also in the eyes of others. The ego uses validation as a measuring stick of equilibrium. Some Egos are more flexible, resilient than others, but of those that are firm, rigid, fixed – straying too far from this ideal is much like the danger of the body temperature rising a few degrees, deadly – something our organism seeks to avoid at all costs. And whether it is gently poked, accidentally bumped, or deliberately provoked – nothing fights back like a hurt ego. It is operant at all times, watching over all things to monitor equilibrium and avoid things that will upset its careful balance.

It is a truism that we need a healthy ego to do most things we do – it gives us the sense of direction, orientation, discipline and self-belief that is required. Too much ego and we risk hubris, a massive fall from grace; too little and we are easily controlled by others, defenceless against manipulation through forms and people's wiles. This inner gyroscope of personality could also be likened to the fierce eye of Sauron from Lord of the Rings, a baleful eye that observes and controls everything we do.

It is deathly afraid of doing anything that relinquishes its control and omnipresence. So much so that when the Self is referred to, it is often the ego in disguise. The ego is our engine room and our driver, it is a crucial aspect of the tremendous survival instinct that some people have, but its absolute rule comes at the cost of myriad human follies. Such an eye remains open, staring, sensitive (and reactive) to the most minor changes lest it be forgotten and replaced. Now what if we were to close that all-seeing Eye for just a moment? Generally, this is not allowed to happen. The Ego prevents it. Like a stern master guiding us away from our own control panel. But during Orgasm that Eye does shut. Orgasm equates to the temporary dislocation of the Ego from its control seat, long enough for a moment of Self to be felt. I.e. in that tiny moment of ecstatic blissful state, we are entirely aware only of our orgasm and nothing else. There is no thinking, no distraction, no inner chatter, just bliss. One point of view would be that the Ego gives us this pleasure.

Another, and Ours, is that to get the Ego to move, to shut up, to relinquish control for even just a fraction of time, delivers us into the realm of the Self for just a brief window where we are Free of our Thoughts, our need to be who we are, the fear, anxiety, doubt, babbling of the normal mind – it is all released. This is ultimately a terrifying experience for the Ego, which hastens to rush back in immediately after, but which very brief absence, may signify why it is called the little death – for it is neither a lasting state of deactivation nor very long.

But look at what is required just to open that window and silence the Ego for even a moment. To over-ride it. While the ego does not want to relinquish control of our psyche as the main operator, it can be cajoled into doing so by the pleasures of sex and the ego-boost it derives from it. This is built to a frenzied pitch of self-adulation which erupts, silencing the ego momentarily, before it rushes back in. The excitement of our sex organs and psychological sexual organs to the point of climax can be a short or lengthy task, but it's certainly not guaranteed. Were it just a matter of coitus itself we should not have need for the stimulation of the body and mind via foreplay, petting, fellatio/cunnilingus, suggestion, BDSM, and the principles of pain, pleasure, power, required to reach the required state. For some, orgasm is very difficult or even unheard of. The orgasm as key to an altered state has been recognised as a crucial component in psychic expansion. As to have the stages either side of actual climax.

Tantric sex, which is not the same as Buddhist tantra (Vajrayana), is the ancient Indian spiritual tradition of sexual practices. It attributes a different value to orgasm than traditional cultural approaches to sexuality. Some practitioners of Tantric sex aim to eliminate orgasm from sexual intercourse by remaining for a long time in the pre-orgasmic and non-emission state. Advocates of this, such as Rajneesh, claim that it eventually causes orgasmic feelings to spread out to all of one's conscious experience.

Some seek to toy with this extraordinary release, to increase the window time, to heighten the sensation, to spiritually advance self-awareness and many other aims within variations of sexual magic. For example, it is possible not to orgasm by throwing the ego away from oneself, by disassociating one's gratification, participation and location from the pleasurable sensations of sex by seeing oneself from Outside, as an Other. Or observer.

The gratification we get from fucking pleasures the ego, which in turn excites us and make us want to come, but to last longer, leaving our body by dislodging our organism from its ego delimits the sense of being gratified in lieu of gratifying another; it shifts ones consciousness/ego which might be concentrated in their penis, outward, as if not part of the act at all; whereas during sex, consciousness/ego is usually shifted to the sex organs.

Orgasm can also be controlled by breathing differently, using the standard 1,2,3,4, technique, of breath in (count to 4), hold it (count to 4), breathe out, (count to 4), hold it, (count to 4) repeat. This simple exercise is often used in our meditation because it allows the ego to be shut down, since all that is concentrated upon is the breath control and the autonomous action of thrusting the pelvis, automatic and effortless stimuli such as hands on the breasts, tweaking nipples, kissing the back of the neck – none of these require much thought or energy. This would be a very poor guide to sex, but it hopefully serves to illustrate the involvement of other organs in occult sex such as the lungs, heart and mind.

Thus for the ego, holding itself in a tightly strained muscular centrality is like having a muscle tensed, ready to combat and confront threats to its sovereignty – fear and anxiety come from the ego, they are generated as tools to provide fuel for the autonomic nervous system the flight/fight system – with all the fear and anxiety as rippled biceps or poised for sprinting – powering its functions to protect its world view from threats. It fears being challenged, and the anxiety of unrelenting threats to self-identity justifies that fear. The ego is as a somewhat domesticated animal – it enjoys being petted above all things, being assured of its own identity, engaging in things that complement its specific individual (and collective) geometry – but rubbed the wrong way, put in a cage, or accused it will turn into a spitting snarling fury of claws and teeth.

For the ego to submit its power to another function requires an incredible deal of control to be relinquished: and it is perhaps in these very brief windows when the ego is either over-ridden by the Self or allows itself to be over-ridden that it is silent and non-active. The state of No-thinking, Zen, silent mind, Gunningap, etc all come to mind in the occult as the most sublime for the lack of internal chatter and the release of the ego through abandoning self-identity of a human-centric nature. This moment of no-mind has been variously described as bliss, euphoria, nirvana, heaven, samsara.

It is registered in account after account as timeless, being one, connected to the source, a letting go. Unless one deliberately meditates, or is caused great pain, trauma, sorrow, fright, surprise, during orgasm is the closest humans get to this state of no-mind, and for the ego, while temporary, it would be as death – for it exists to strive against all shutting down of its faculties. Thus, what dies, is its sovereignty, for just a moment, and how much it takes to wrest it from it!

And when it does, how great the relief! As if life could spring forward from the doors of a previously locked, shackled and straight-jacketed prison in the dark, brooding, gnawing chambers of the needy, anxiety ridden, neurotic, insane, ego. As if for a moment one could turn off the screaming din of being at its behest and witness, in slow motion, silent and timeless, a fraction of experience without it. For we need it, to achieve orgasm, but it departs from us ever so briefly when we do, only to return quickly, ushering in emotions, reflections, assumptions, and so on – to pick up the crown it dropped and rule again with an iron fist, taking prisoner inside it once more all the fear and anxiety it had of being dethroned, again.

Controlling orgasm as a means of sex magic is not easy – having become familiar with my own body's processes and sensations of approaching orgasm it has been possible to know the very intimate bodily and mental sensations that will be felt on the very edge of ejaculation – but stepping back from that precipice of ecstasy can be very difficult. There is a continuum where orgasm can be stopped, and a thin no-return line where it can't be. It can be very difficult to control the reception of pleasure, and this is indicative of the inability of a lot of men to be unable to withdraw in time or at will from sex before ejaculation. But to please the Dark Gods, this ability is paramount.

Having performed an ordeal that lasted three months of chronic daily masturbation but without release taught me a great deal about the agony and power of holding off – but this was not a masochistic indulgence for its own sake but related to an ancient belief in the lingering aura of sexual energy to summon the Dark Ones known as THEM and ask of them a favour. The ability to utilise sexual power does not just come from the more human-centric pleasure of releasing it through orgasm, but from the more inhuman agony of withholding it indefinitely – a form of Black Tantra.

I mention herein three stages that use orgasm as an ingredient; one and the most common which is considered human, two of which are considered by our dark tradition to be far more likely to evoke and draw dark entities near and inhuman.

The first is the staving off release, (known as 'edging' in BDSM circles) where the physical orgasm is deliberately delayed or refused. This is an inhuman sexual act – it excites the dark ones and calls them near, especially so to feast on the pre-cum that lubricates the genitals from either sex as the body is excited pre-coitus. They are drawn to the energetic intensity created by sexual tension.

The second stage is considered the human one, the one sought after by most, certainly ecstatic, but of less bargaining power in relation to the dark ones – for it is normal for them to eat these energies. Typical of them to cause them.

The third, is perhaps the most excruciating, (known as 'milking' in BDSM circles) wherein the genitals are forced to orgasm and then continually stimulated until intense pain from overload of sensation due to the increased sensitivity. This is rumoured to be a most powerful means of evoking and drawing manifestation of THEM near and is a form of sexual torture.

These arts are best employed whilst engaging in additional ritual displays of sex or death. Artist Marina Abramovic's work focuses on the obscene and the inherent power of genital displays suggestive that these are all that's required. To combine these displays with a primal connection to the earth is not difficult to imagine. Thus, anal and vaginal violations whilst gripping a tree, clawing the ground, touching water, being whipped with branches, sex and orgasm in the rain, the sea, the wind, naked – in essence, being in contact with the natural forces while having sex is the key principle, with all energies being directed into the earth and nature, or upward to the stars, or both. a bloody cunt fucked, and the blood used to make signs on the body or earth, anal gaping, rape, semen spray, drinking cum, orgy and excess are natural celebrations of THEM. Obscene toys and figures, blunted crucifix used to stuff holes with, bible/Koran pages stuffed up the cunt and ass of men and women, then removed and burned and other such blasphemies and so on.

This type of worship, however, is to celebrate THEM from a dualistic point of view – to view these things as deliberately blasphemous or provocative or somehow taboo is to see the reigning repression of sex as the measuring stick – and try to rage against it by inverting its values. THEM don't care about humans, or how we worship THEM, we are conduits, means to an end for THEM. It doesn't matter whether you kill millions or sit on your ass loving God for your entire life – they do not have favourites as everything humans do is essentially the same to them. They are indifferent to all the forms we traverse in Their name or against it. What makes any difference, is Empathy with THEM. Living in a way that recognises them, recognises our role as food for them, means for them to evolve its own kind which are not another race or species of demon or ghost but that and many things besides.

“As she pleased me, I sat forward and clasped her head between my hands, her long red hair flowing through my fingers. I summoned into my hands all that was the old Her; a red energy filling her body and began to push it toward her lower back using my hands as a gesture of release. As I did, I imagined her body filling with glowing white light. Assembled at the base of her spine the red energy was ready to be released. The cold rain fell on our naked bodies”

Thus, it should be noted that merely performing these types of worship of themselves has no real power to attract the Dark Ones. Having sex with intent to call THEM often fails too, or results in lesser shades being drawn to the site.

The real magic comes from reorienting ones entire paradigm toward THEM creating great empathy – it is our dedication to the many different forms of THEM and our wholistic embrace of them; i.e. awareness of the particular nature of gravity on our body, the weirdness of synchronicity that offers signs to indicate right path, the ferocity of natural elements such as weather that put men in their place, the drive to obtain multiplicity in the psyche and oust the Ego from control so that many functions can be used at will, the understanding of the vanity of humanity and the power that comes from the inhuman, and living in a way that champions and exalts these and many other aspects that embody the Temple of THEM: that successfully causes them to arrive. An Arrival which is ultimately Their Choice.

*“Then in a cold voice that I know very well as the voice of someone suddenly intruded upon by something unsettling to the soul – Anorha suddenly asked where I was. There was terror edging through in her voice, held back waiting for my answer, but I could hear it, feel it filling her. She was only a few feet away, holding on to a tree. I could not see her, but I knew where approximately she was from her voice. When I replied, ‘I’m here’, she said, in a dead pleading voice, ‘wave to me’. When I did, She and I both realised whatever she could see, it wasn’t me.” – Rain Magic*K and a Visitation from THEM*

April 10th ev. Ritual Extraction performed at location Lake Asoth, in Southeast Victoria, Australia.

Sightings: yes.

Messages: no.

Desc: mistress sees and describes white ‘wooden’ figures of both great and small size. And a very very old power that manifest as a white ‘woman’. Reported as very dangerous and seeking a way back into her to infest her with dark tendrils, undoing the rite just performed.

Time: After midnight. Completion of ritual at exactly 1.11am.

Effects: Sheer Terror and Subsequent Belief in THEM due to change of perception via direct experience.

The Dark Ones, whatever THEY are, however many forms THEY take, choose all things. It does not seem to matter how dark, twisted or tortured a soul is, even then they may never see the Devil. Or the forms from which the Legend of the Devil derives. You can argue all you like, but when you are standing face to face in a confrontation with One of THEM, there is no doubt and never will be.

If there is such a thing as specific principles to work with or access THEM then there are certainly a set of keys. The reality is, that if you have not had a paranormal experience and met with any of the dark forces that inhabit other planes, you have no reason to believe in them, and thusly your logical mind does not experience the crack that such visitations bring, your mind and perception of reality stay intact, and act as a shield or seal against such visitations. When you Have had such a visitation, it is impossible to deny, because being paranormal, the unsettling inability to provide logical explanation leaves you in a state of knowing there is Something more than what we know, and yet having to endure the day-to-day necessity to deny it to live in a certain world.

The difference between seeing something paranormal and being scarred by what you felt from it is vast. This line, this kind of experience is what separates the Theistic believer in Satanic forces as deities, energies, demons, devils, entities that manifest on our plane of perception through various incarnations, veils, soft spots in the world where such denizens slip through and confront us – and the believer in Satanic forces who sees the paradigm of Satanism as culturally metaphorical, as a set of values, a way of living, as an apologist, as an application of rationale and reason, logic and intelligence; a dismissal of ghosts/goblins as antiquated or tricks of the mind; other variations are virtually endless but they do not involve the change of effect from visitations. The term blood-curdling is over-used but it is very apt. To come face to face with One of THEM, and that includes satanic entities, entirely alters one's ability to discount them.

Whether you believe Satan is a real force that haunts, hunts, possesses, works evil and kills as a literal demon changes everything. I have not seen Satan. I have seen only dark forces and spectres that may or may not be part of or associated with Him; a handful of times over the course of my life; and felt the terror that curdles the blood, witnessed the suspension of physics that accompanies such visitations and passed through the aftermath of having to deal with them. It is to defend something that the majority of people have not experienced and have no reason to believe exists who have not felt what you have felt.

“She’d later say that there had been white figures in the forest all night, like the one that rushed at her at the lake gate, but it was the smallest one that gave her the overwhelming feeling of horror. What she had seen on the hill was different, very very old, a white “woman”. Perhaps for the first time she had felt the bone-chilling presence of these magical forces I know as Them.”

Why do THEY manifest? What makes THEM arrive? It seems Destiny, Wyrd and an overcoming of the human-centric perspective are requisite, a born path to know them, and understand them in the strange esoteric language they speak in Mystery and Geometry. I have been a central point in poltergeist activity, my disturbed tremendous quaking space around it to cause small explosions, repeated smashing of things, things being lost and reappearing, things falling down and others experiencing acts of or THEM themselves. I have seen Them numerous times, at first as spectres that bring a creeping frozen ice to the fire of the soul and now through my work with THEM diffused as forces into all things. Having practiced dark sex magic before, the stark lack of vividness and depth from a dearth of understanding precluded many deliberate attempts to call Demons or the Devil. Sex and/or drugs alone, even powerful sex and/or drugs, ritual sex, orgasmic sex seems not to have the effect of drawing the Dark Ones near or having them manifest. It seems that only individuals with an exceptional union, one that crackles and brings storms and impossible signs, whose sexual energy is inhuman/voracious have enough attractant – perhaps those who accord themselves with a life-centred humility in the face of the tremendous forces beyond the human is requisite. The elements of Eros and Thanatos, Sex and Death were crucial – but not exclusive. However, when you find a key to such obscure gates, you remember and you twist it. We shall proceed to examine these keys more closely.

“...I asked him to violate me. With my hands flat on the cold, muddy earth I could feel Owy clinging on, suddenly not ready to go, and I worked through to find all the pieces of her, to make her complete so I could rid myself of her. This took some time, and although my masters fingers were in both my anus and cunt, it was in no way a ‘intimate sexual experience’, but the only act powerful enough to kill Owy. As his movements became more violent, my ability to both contract myself and push Her out of me and into the earth grew.”

There is a Tradition taught to me by a Sorceress of THEM: an ancient tale regarding the power of a vow to the gods by man relating to the gift of synchronicity and the unleashing of those gods on that man of other signs of empathy guiding such individuals toward and through the Abyss to Great Power. According to this Tradition of Sorcery – the keys to summoning the Dark Ones are Sex and Death. Sex and Death, are tides of energy that if sufficiently stored up, can allow brief, or even permanent escape from the Cosmic Being, or one’s Destiny/Wyrd – allowing one to implement their own. The Cosmic Being is like a vortex that seeks to devour the energy of each human being and draw them and their energy back into its Unity. Sex and Death are its breathing pattern of inhalation/exhalation. Perceived this way, the Cosmic Being is the force that magicians must try to escape from in order to become Immortal, or Acausal.

The causal acts of Sex/Death release the stored energy of an individual back into the collective. The way to free oneself from that Unity is to abstain from sex. Or rather, to abstain from orgasm, while still generating sexual energy, either by masturbation, or sex without ejaculation. This lingering threshold of stored sexual energy tempts or lures the Cosmic Being to try to take it from us. Because of this, the magician can bargain with the Cosmic Being for certain favours to be bestowed [a vow] before they will give up that energy. In this way – the Dark Ones can be enticed to manifest in the presence of a magician by the lure of sexual energy generated before orgasm – or the co-mingling of the pre-sexual liquids of the female, and the pre-cum of the male – and kept manifest by the repeated generation of this most powerful elixir. This limpid ‘juice’ is believed to be one of the most powerful elixirs in magical practice.

The basic premise of the sorcery at hand is in the power of Word/Wyrd and using the gathering and release of sexual tension to entice the Cosmos (via the vehicle of the Dark Ones) to manifest one's actual living Anima/Animus in the flesh after enough sexual energy has been stored to cause a significant disturbance to the flow of the Cosmic tides of Sex and Death. It is for this reason I undertook the so-called Ordeal of Nine Moons and after three months manifest Anorha, the Mistress with whom I have been unified for eight years. The energy/synchronicity between us is utterly extraordinary, the air around us crackles with electricity and wyrdness embodies everything we do – and that she came to me due to the sorcery of dark magic is likely to be the difference why THEM are more attracted to our union(s). Our proximity and empathy with THEM is something we both live – an elegant dance of life's energies – that does not harbour the illusion of control.

“In the dark rain with those burning eyes watching us leave a powerful ritual she met with Them. And for it, she will never be the same. No-one is.”

Ordeal of the Ninth Moon

The Ordeal of the Ninth Moon is primarily designed for males – not out of any intended predilection or chauvinism but because the mysteries of the female aspects remain shrouded and could only be divulged by direct exploration and experiment by each Sorceress. Here the female reader is prompted to look into what Jung has to say about the Anima/Animus wherein he even proposed there being multiple Anima's within the feminine psyche. After all, what is the Anima/Animus, if not the sum of all that one lacks, the sum of all one's deficits, a non-being which paradoxically starts to have a real existence, to sharpen one's libido and define one's value system?

The Ordeal begins by the act of giving your Word before your Wyrd (or swearing a vow to the Dark Ones) that you will control your sexuality for a period of time. In this case – nine months. The vow not to indulge in any sexual activity outside the context of magick means that you will use masturbation only in a ritual context – for invocation and evocation only. If a male – one may begin by drawing a pentagram with an erect cock – the phallus being the natural wand of the male magickian it should be used accordingly. If female – one may begin by drawing a pentagram with a finger greased with the liquids of the vagina. Thus is the visualisation energised and brought to life.

“I could feel it, see it, sitting there, staring into me, trying to find a tiny point in me to capture or infest. It seemed predatory. Greedy. Small and almost wooden, and again in white like the others I had seen that night, but this one was so much more.”

One could begin with a promise to the Dark One(s) that you would sacrifice your sperm to It only when mingled with female sexual liquids – which is precisely what It wants. So, It may even be persuaded to help you in hunting your game. When evoking the Dark Ones, the phallus should be considered itself a magickal wand and the vagina the very sigil of the Dark Ones. Herein the specific method is a matter of taste but one approach is to masturbate (switch on the wand in the case of the male) whilst invoking the Dark One that one wishes to commune with –i.e. Baphomet. Try to sustain a prolonged plateau of excitement holding back the urges to ejaculate. The prolonged plateau of excitement while concentrating on the sigil assures an energy field for the Dark One to manifest. The longer that plateau – the better.

“It was foolish of me to think I could face old ones on my own ... I could still feel it’s incredibly strong force behind me, almost teasing me, trying to draw that primal part of me back to it. And I could hear others gathering in the bushes around it, to do its bidding for it. I felt so small. I felt like a small child might, wanting to run and hide under the bed.”

Ejaculation is not recommended except as an extreme form of sacrifice and only provided the One of THEM has already manifested and demanded it. Ejaculate only if the Dark One has manifested and demanded your orgasm.

Note that it is possible to experience orgasm of a dulled sort, including pleasurable and psychological variations, without spilling one’s semen – but any full ejaculation without express demand by the Dark Ones will put one back at square one, day one, of the Nine Months. If called to release – give yourself totally over to the experience and Dark One. Relax and dissolve in the vision beyond. If this ritual seems sparse, devoid of tools and lengthy invocations – it’s because such things are utterly irrelevant. What matters to THEM is your Intent – and if you think this rite is easy either physically or psychologically you are gravely mistaken. The Ninth Moon Ordeal is difficult – and may require many attempts to stay committed to the full course of such a masochistic vow. An unexpected or spontaneous orgasm some months in despite one’s best efforts is not unheard of. The strength and integrity of one’s Word/Wyrd is absolutely crucial to the Ordeal. One should beware lest the Ordeal become a Sisyphian one of pushing a rock up a hill only to have it roll down again.

“Now she has felt what I have felt, the undeniable reality of Them. Now she understands why I am hellbent on the Temple. What motivates me. These things.”

If They, being the source pool from which all variations of visitation arise, are from the recess of the psyche, there is a corresponding change in the manifestation that occurs, pending the integration of the psychic contents and the strength of the psychic bridge (the degree to which a person has gained access to and awareness of the geometry of their own subconscious).

For instance, some see Them as humanoid figures, though the bone-chilling terror they evoke comes with all their forms – but I, having seen Them numerous times, having worked toward understanding what I have seen, and having struggled my entire life to Know Thyself, don't see Them as humanoid figures, they are not centralised into a spectre, but diffused into everything around me, as chthonic forces, weather, gravity, death, synchronicity et al. No, less terrifying, no less inhuman, but certainly a different calibre of 'Devil'. i.e. the better you know thyself, the less human the visitations.

The Devil is a Human concept. THEM, however, are an Inhuman Force. Until you meet Them, the difference is impossible to reconcile. The Devil is an Abrahamic concept, a shadow of their understanding, or deceptive attempt to hide THEM beneath the dualistic formations of the Devil – there is so much that has been Forgotten.

Upon his horns are heaped all sorts of mystical bullshit and a pyramid of shattered forms a thousand years deep. It is the FEELING that THEM give you, that cannot be denied, cannot be intellectualised, that makes you believe whether you want to or not. And it is our bodies and minds, as Temples, through sex, through orgasm, through symbolism, through psyche, through humility, through empathy, through understanding their forms and forces, through living to understand the Dark Ones, to Know THEM: that comprise the gates to Their Threshold. La petit mort is just the beginning.

LOVECRAFT: THE ESSENCE OF THEM

What do the cunning trickster Loki, Batman's mirror the Joker and the stark lunacy of the Mad Hatter have in common. They all understood. Watching the taming of the archetype Lovecraft borne via Cthulhu is not easy – often, neutered and denuded of its totemic power of blinding reasonless chaos and channelled into harmless, fun. The world knows Cthulhu the same way it knows Satan – Cthulhu however, is the Devils evolution: the Devil in stark opposition was a trickster, a deceiver in his human form interacting at great length with humans to make the inevitable entrapment all the more savoury – and as a beast, he represents an omnipotent eternal darkness borne of human weakness and a punisher, a retributory agent with no restraint in his endless spite to torment. His history is a mirror of religious fear, torture, hysteria and forced obedience to a monotheistic death cult.

Cthulhu on the other hand comes to us from the mind of a literary visionary. The friendly form of what Satan represents (Chaos and the Unknowable) finds itself standing to attention in stately demonic figurines and statues made of bronze to plastic, in the lovingly executed art of comics and the pretense-of-the-pretense of madness in games, a tentacled-Gargantua towering over twisted landscapes and the ocean deep, the watcher and lord of an abyss filled with all the horrors we can pull safely from our subconscious – and of which only the minor we ever see. Cthulhu is closer to theologians God in omnipotence but his interest in the human race is only tokenship – Lovecraft’s creatures do not seek to toy with, intervene, haggle, play with human beings but pass through and annihilate them – not out of malice – but merely as a consequence of human beings being human beings, and ostensibly, in the way on the other side of their Abyss. Notably fans have lamented the inability of media, particularly movies and games to accurately capture what they loosely describe as ‘Lovecraftian essence’. The simple act of perpetually placing Cthulhu on a pedestal just beyond what we can understand and the idiom that one could go mad trying – combine to represent an entity that is by definition considered unrepresentable to be best represented and an odd fear and appellation of madness that should somehow disintegrate the fragile mind of the observer of the Mysteries.

Lovecraft’s Cthulhu is an utterly apt analogy for the subconscious – a vast unfathomable alien presence looming just beyond our safe borders, kept at bay by only the wrong stars, waiting, watching, just beyond the looking glass of the floating tip of our iceberg conscience with the cold inevitability of breaking through to devour us all – Us All – not just individually, but collectively as a human race. The emphasis of Lovecraft is a pinpoint emergence of some Other from the abyss where the spaces touch – for some few hapless fellows whose reality becomes thin, dream, then nightmare and their slow extinction hints at an impending holocaust and the opening and pouring through of untold horrors. Like Sade, the text is saturated with luxuriant verbosity in an effort to describe one concept in a thousand ways using an admirable lexicon of dizzying richness to worship the topic at hand.

But you cannot understand Chaos as a sane person. Chaos is not for sane people. For sane people, it’s a toy, a simulacrum or at best a shallow exploration. In virtue for them it bears the same name, but it’s a joke that won’t be taken far – not into the hostile deserts or deep seas that are its real home – no, for most, Cthulhu’s madness has rigid, unmistakable, fiercely-protected – boundaries. A very clearly demarcated line of play with chaos drawn by the ego between reality and fantasy, sanity and insanity.

Occult groups that practice Chaos are overwhelmed by it in its raw form – as it is antithetical to organisation, order and control. It is most antithetical, to control. Disappointingly, chaos is always a toy with humans because it has a supreme and disarming habit of being highly corrosive to forms. Forms, being our solution to witnessing the Great Chaos at the first birthday of our race to restrain the Forces. You cannot touch the spaces between without enormous amounts of drugs, psychological trauma and inestimable pressure that builds and explodes the veil and allows you to appreciate impossible geometry. So, people, flirt with chaos, they stick their foot in the shallow end of madness, they pretend to be mad to latch onto the current Cthulhu emanates and presume they're doing a good job at it.

To be a sorcerer – you must have gone mad. And – you must have then come back. That is to say – you must be forcibly departed from the world and your conviction of reality shattered through too high a dose of hallucinogenic drugs, prolonged exploration of dreams, enduring catastrophic suffering, experience supernatural agency, or be gifted bereftness of hope. Significant meditative states to induce vision quests are not violent enough departures – they are just the consciousness masturbating in the safety of shore waters. And – you must be able to go mad again. And – return, again. And just where it is that you go when you go mad? In fact, it is merely experienced as going back the other way toward sanity. When they use the word slipping or grip, they are accurate – reality is a sleeve of skin, tight, taut, and firm and a webbing that binds forms into a caged mesh, but it has tears, it can rip, it can also slough off leaving the stark bones of what is really there hung and gleaming at you from a cradle of endless oblivion.

And how – do you go mad? By tearing at the fabric until it rips – pushing the sides until it breaks, throwing yourself at forms in a frenzy until they lie bloody and broken at your feet and you catch a glimpse of the real world. Until your faith leaves you and the lustre of human things and beings and purposes that entertains them so, slinks noiselessly into a muddy gutter and you gain the cold stare of an alien. If going mad is always coming back, how can you go? It is of some distinction that the terminology for description in general terms is loaded with specific time and place references that do not apply to madness. For specificity, one does not go mad – one already is mad. One's consciousness is the price paid by the subconscious to be conscious. It is also of some distinction that the terminology for self-reference is loaded with spatial fixations such as 'I', 'you' 'me' 'is'. These pass. Of course, the sublime secret to going mad is quite simple – and that is to endeavour to 'go' as sane as possible. Magic requires the holding/viewing of forms in such a way as to dissolve all of their boundaries – when the bones are broken, we can get through the cage to dissolve 'what it's for' – 'what it does' – 'what it can do'.

Satan, and by extension Cthulhu are the resonance of archetypal recipes whose manifest shapes are shadows of our unmanifest primal origin – they are keys, vibrational echoes "From", that instruct us how to approach the Abyss. Keys, that something in us has made and continues to make, but cleverly or perhaps not so cleverly, forgets are keys, and for that matter that there are even locks – or the prison. Sorcerers, of which I am one, should – and must be – extremely dangerous to reality, yours – and mine, to Remember.

Cthulhu Fhtagn indeed.

ARTS AND THE DARK ARTS

The more time I have spent studying and practising the occult – the more I have come to seriously believe that it is in fact in other disciplines outside of the hysteria of modern magical practice that the occultist should be looking for the secrets to sorcery and the hidden powers latent in the human being. The parallels of theory and discipline required to successfully engage in Theatre; whether a classic performance or a psychodrama, far excel in practical instruction for techniques to master and tame the body and the mind for the purposes of sorcery than a great many of the occult texts available.

One inevitably finds that there is a connection between the occult and the dramatic arts because both require the human being to give their all – both disciplines share highly similar and, in some cases, identical methodology. For instance, both the occult and theatrics require a similar practice of frenzy magic to work oneself into a efficacious psychic lather; they both require going into a trance to allow possession; they both have the ability to channel entities and access gateways to other aspects and alter-egos of the practitioner; they both require the fullest possible contact with the elements of nature both within and without to absorb as much variation and experience as possible to widen their scope and repertoire of abilities; the memorisation of vast tracts of text (ritual/script), the ability to search ones memory for life experiences that stored the necessary energy or attitude* in order to play a convincing role or draw upon stored energies for the purposes of entering a specific emotional/physiological state. Etc.

For instance, after one has felt/experienced the extremes of intense heart-pounding fear and/or the euphoria that comes with orgasm, narcotic substances, or simply deep meditation – one can trick the pulse and the heart into either slowing right down or making them race simply by remembering and inducing the physiological symptoms associated with that memory. One can create artificial panic, by widening and flitting the eyes quickly in terror from side to side as if searching for an exit, and draw (without moving from one's seat or making any major movements) on the stored feeling of absolute panic from one's previous experience to trick the senses into reproducing that original and memorised state of being. By doing this, one can significantly alter the speed of the heartbeat and pulse at will. Likewise, by breathing deeply, shutting out all distractions and sound, drawing on the memory of the physiological symptoms associated with a state of extreme rest or meditation, again without moving, one can slow the pulse and heartbeat at will. A proficiency in this ability to search the memory and re-engage certain memetic memories physiologically aids the means to generate the necessary emotion required for death/destructive magic and the ability to kill magically or from a distance.

“The idea is that one should be able to intentionally physically kill somebody to destroy the same person by magick by provoking the necessary thoughts about the measures to be taken to make oneself able to kill by whatever means. The sorcerer is encouraged to explore all his life’s memory up to the present moment and find the key moments, which shall release the energy held therein – for usually that is the energy which one is short of to do the impending task. And that energy is emotional because the true memory is the affective memory. Any recapitulated experience of some life-endangering situation would stir the reptilian brain. Without the reptilian brain’s support, one will hardly reach the stars.” – Sath / Liber SsS

This type of control over the body is the hardest of a triad to master. The first being the intellect, and the easiest. The second being the psyche and notoriously difficult. The third being the body and the ability to induce actual physiological prowess and powers.

TRAINING THE BODY

Of the training of the body the great theatrical guru Jerzy Grotowski suggests two approaches. The first is to put the body into a state of obedience by taming it. In personal workings (an insight role) with the body it has become readily apparent that spending time at the gym increasing muscle mass proves counterproductive to taming the body and gaining control over it – it has the adverse effect of creating the adrenaline junkie, a slave to chemical demands and psychological addiction. Moreover, such mass slows the warrior to a crawl negatively affecting the reflexes and speed of the human body – since for every hour one spends in the gym; one must correspondingly spend three hours in reflex training to counteract the effects of bulking up. The basis of martial arts is four key components, related in order of importance: balance – technique – speed – power. Enormous power does not require enormous muscles – it requires the correct combination and training of these components to work as one in concert.

Weightlifting, by virtue of the initial psychological drive stemming from an inferiority complex and the pressure to conform to an ideal, along with the adrenaline and testosterone levels generated, create what initially starts out as a ‘work-out high’ but becomes a powerful addiction. This process cannot help but build up the ego by creating ego armour, esp. when weights become the predominant means of exercise. Moreover, weights are designed to do specific things – build mass and increase muscle. Weights are not designed to train the body in other skills the sorcerer requires in life and especially for self-protection – namely deftness of movement, i.e., dodging, jumping, rolling, climbing, running, swimming, etc. If weights do have a benefit, it is in the increasing of strength and the padding of weak spots on the body; but even on the best bodybuilders there remain spots on the body easily accessible to a correctly timed technique that cannot be protected with muscle mass. inc. the top of the head, the knees, the ribs, and the eyes.

There are of course, endless examples of correct martial techniques felling even the most determined of muscle-bound men (and women) by a smaller figured practitioner.

As far as training of the body is recommended – Martial Arts is a superior discipline to train the body overweight based regimes. Martial Arts correctly trains the body in a variety of practices that more accurately mirror what will be necessary to call upon in a violent situation – and certain skills of the Satanist can only be developed by constantly being on the verge of one's death by inviting dangerous situations to temper one's spirit.

Benefits of Martial Arts include:

- * Training the reflexes to respond with increased and sometimes terrific speed that can with proper training be accompanied by terrific power.
- * Accommodating and familiarising the layperson to his own physiological reactions to fear, threat, and pain so that he is not paralysed or overwhelmed by them when they occur but instead knows what to expect of himself in various situations.
- * Learning the importance of correct balance, weight distribution, equilibrium and the principles of gravity that will cause one to lose balance or keep it indefinitely or help adjust one's physical stature to meet force with force or go with it – as per jujitsu, i.e., using an opponent's 'superior' strength against them.
- * Engaging in realistic sparring that involves a variety of real-life fight situations likely to occur such as the fight going to ground and the necessity to grapple, nerve strikes, intimidation,
- * Familiarising oneself with one's unique body – whether it be learning one's own effective ranges in kicks, punches, elbow, or knowledge of short-range and long-range techniques and the training necessary to conserve energy by appropriate response.
- * Raising Endurance, Increasing Flexibility
- * Conservation of Energy, thus correct economy of its expenditure
- * Learning to fall properly to protect one's body from injury if thrown, tripped etc. by controlling the automatic response to throw out one's hands, land on one's elbows, etc.
- * Identify and practice striking the vital strike points on the human body that will do grave damage to an opponent(s) rather than expend precious energy launching untargeted punches/kicks to forearms, face, chest etc.
- * Disengage or reverse headlocks, arm bars, leg locks, finger grips, dislodge or cripple the grip of people grabbing or choking you.
- * In some disciplines i.e., Ninjutsu: learning Survival/basic SAS training, orientation, navigation, filtration, fire-starting, hunting, fishing, traps, and so on.

- * Attuning to the psychological factors in fighting such as making the opponents fight on your terms, (bunching your opponent's up, for instance, or backing up to a wall to limit approach from behind) looking at the collarbone instead of making direct eye contact to diffuse your view making all sudden movements by opponents stand out, being aware of the physiological correspondences in the opponent certain actions will bring about, etc. i.e. a hard block will put them on alert.
- * Take-downs, sweeps, reaps, and having some options to consider when threatened with a knife, gun or other weapon.
- * Training with make-shift or impromptu weapons.
- * Learning to defend oneself in unconventional places such as a phone booth, corner of a room, across a table, sitting in the car, against a wall, at an ATM and so on.
- * Orient one's intuitive skills, hone peripheral vision, and one's other senses in order to prevent being surrounded or knowing whom to strike first if so.
- * Personal knowledge and experiences of one's 'sphere of influence' and the ease to move around it, command it, and even expand it.
- * Using weapons/environment in unconventional ways
- * Kill a person with bare hands, or deliver devastating techniques quickly in succession to destroy multiple attackers (and one should always train to defend against multiple attackers not a single opponent).

Although only a brief list – training such as this not only trains the body and mind to be effective and deadly weapons which is essential practical common-sense for the Satanist – but is of vital importance in any relationship to the physical self.

Gymnastics, Ballet, and other rigorous arts possess the necessary physical demands and training to manipulate the body – but only Martial Arts possesses the additional discipline of self-defence. And only the Sinister possesses the context to make significant use of such skills. [For instructions on practising a Traditional Western Martial Art, see the treatise on Physis].

Grotowski's second approach is to challenge the body. "...to challenge it by giving it tasks, objectives that exceed the capabilities of the body. It is a question of inviting the body to do the "impossible" and making it discover that the "impossible" can be divided into small pieces, small elements, and made possible. In the second approach, the body becomes obedient without knowing that it should be obedient. It becomes a channel open to the energies and finds the conjunction between the rigours of the elements and the flow of life ("spontaneity"). Thus, the body does not feel like a tamed or domesticated animal, but rather like an animal wild and proud...".

The grades of the Order of Nine Angles given in Naos (and elsewhere) have been shown to work with the capacity to produce profound alchemical changes and changes in perspective – but over the years criticism has been levelled at the approach such magic employs via a brutish struggle to triumph with the will rather than gradually training the body to naturally assume prowess via a development of all one's faculties in accordance. Since it is also a matter of record that in certain situations, the will is of limited use, (i.e., if tied up or otherwise incapacitated) this approach demanded of the External/Internal Adept Rites has been described as the "warrior-hood" way of the ONA as opposed to the "warlock-hood" way of Sorcery.

In the former the sorcerer may succeed via chance and intellect in one instance but has a lesser guarantee of reproducing corresponding results in another; whilst in the latter, the body and mind are trained over a long period of time to acclimatise themselves to many tasks using the will as only a partial means of motivation thus being more apt to increase and maintain a greater balance and totality of physiological functions. This approach thus requires a lengthy –if not a lifelong– program of training with experimentation limited only by imagination. Finding ways to lift the body's own weight using the body daily, is one such practice, where, to give just one instance, one crouches down and slots ones elbows firmly against ones thighs, rests their forehead on the ground, and then tries to take one's own weight by lifting one's head and legs off the ground as if to try and stand on ones hands.

Another powerful technique – but one that requires intense discipline – is coordinated muscle isolation. Where one sits on a chair and attempts to flex core muscles of the body by exerting will-power over muscular control, i.e., one tries to isolate, feel and flex the individual sets of muscles one by one from the lower spine to the nape. A study of the muscle groups one is attempting to manipulate can be useful knowledge here for a mental conception of their position and relativity.

With such techniques as these – an individual strengthens both muscles and mental connections, without the negative attributes of weights, and instead an increase in the necessary faculties for performing successful sorcery inc. visualisation, sympathy, body control. It will be noted upon attempting this exercise that some muscles cannot be felt or flexed at all, and even in this state they have proved capable of propelling the body where it wants to go and enabled all the physical achievements demanded on them. One should imagine what can be done with the proper discipline to train each of these quieter muscles consciously. In such a manner does the sorcerer train in manipulating their own weight, their own body mass, learning to control their own proportions and reactive powers in relation to the environment around them. Another exercise is to try to feel or move the actual brain itself – a positively grotesque experience and sensation to suddenly become aware of.

By training the body using a combination of such approaches, it is possible to achieve extraordinary skills and abilities. Sports such as 'free running' or Parkour are excellent examples of the capacity for a well-trained human body to innately know itself, to integrate itself and adapt instantly to suit its environment in such a fashion as to enable incredible feats of dexterity, weightlessness, directional change, balance, evasion, and effortless traverse of all terrains and obstacles.

One further important facet of magic should be mentioned at this point. It can become habitual for the magician to yolk every single impulse and activity into the service of serving the Great Work. This is commonly seen in the workaholic approach of the business world where an individual devotes everything to his company's success. In the interests of psychic balance, it is highly suggested that a sorcerer selects one or two activities to occupy the body and mind on a different (neutral level) and set aside time to pursue as separate, unrelated interests/hobbies – simply for their own sake. Some suggested activities are Astronomy, Star-Gazing, Card Games, Sleight of Hand, Painting, Jigsaws, Photography, Soft Martial Arts such as –ba dua jin, tai chi, Physis-, Learning a new Language, Reading, Gardening, Tarot, Model/Lego Building, Kite Flying, Wood or Metal Work, Learning a musical instrument, Cooking, Archery, Fishing, Swimming, Surfing, Electronic Gaming, Paint Ball, Genealogy. Whatever one feels an urge or compulsion to choose to do/feel that they would enjoy, is a good indicator of the activity to be chosen – as the activity(s) chosen should be pleasurable to undertake, but not directly related to the occult work of the Sorcerer.

[Tarot is suggested only as a means of light, casual fortune telling, meditation not as a serious series of prolonged archetypal workings as per the Sinister Tarot.]

The theory follows that over-loading emphasis on the drive of the conscious Will to take precedence and priority – correspondingly causes a psychic imbalance that depletes the inter-relationship between the conscious and the unconscious and leads to the omission of important messages from the latter aspect getting through. That is to say, that if the conscious mind is given too much importance, then the compensatory aspects of the psyche can deliberately interfere in one's conscious workings, bringing them undone from the inside like a silent assassin.

To avoid this naturally occurring self-sabotage it is suggested that the sorcerer consider Dreaming, (observation if not interpretation) and other signs of the unconscious trying to communicate such as slips of the tongue, automatic drawing, as an integral part of their magical practice. Without maintenance of this vital balance between the conscious and unconscious – one works one side of one's psyche against the other at their peril. The unconscious is an autonomous realm of the psyche that can both be harnessed and utilised to help guide/correct the magician* or effectively destroy hir.

Destruction often follows on the back of a wave of synchronous events warning of such an imbalance, but that are ignored, either deliberately or tragically. Known also as 'hubris' – an inflation of the ego that is a psychic affectation and a very common resurgence with the Sorcerer (due to their assumed role as a 'Black Magickian') –but ignorance of the imbalance of the two aspects has led countless individuals to their destruction by a consolidation of absolute belief in their own power and righteousness – often at the expense of better (or at least, alternate, external) judgement by those who can see the situation from the outside.

Thus it is that the collective of THEM has an advantage in harbouring a certain distrust (and detachment) in their own actions and expressions and correspondingly watch over one another, ready to speak frankly and autonomously to one another about possible signs that another member has become possessed by their ego, has their head up their ass, or has shut out reason, logic, and common-sense.* This ring of psychic protection serves only a basic line of defence however – and while a constant watchful suspicion of one's own conduct is useful, as is the ability to accept criticism, sanction, and advice; it is nevertheless up to each sorcerer to work at remaining Master of their faculties in so far as it is possible to do so. This practice has been referred to as a kind of 'Stalking of the Self' in recognition of the Sorcery related by Carlos Castaneda. Carlos also speaks of other crucial practices of the Sorcerer such as that of 'Stalking Death', wherein one watches everywhere for death to thwart its early advance and building a relationship between the astral and the matrix by 'Stalking the Waking Life'.

Wherein it is highly recommended that studies be undertaken of his approach to sorcery/magic which can be utilised to a practical and deeply satisfying Sinister degree when the white-lightedness of them is given a satanic twist. Such Sorcery presents the body and the mind as one, with more importance placed on the body – rather than the attitude of reluctance to treat the body as more than a vehicle for carriage and choosing to isolate the imagination for use in a solely intellectual practice of magic and ritual given in many modern-day grimoires.

*If one is wondering why THEM place such extreme emphasis on such an approach – one need only consider the mistakes of the Fuhrer Adolf Hitler who when in power increasingly refused to listen to warnings from his associate's superior military intelligence and field experience – to his detriment. In fact, it remains a matter of interest as to whether Hitler's paranoid approach of shutting others out to ensure his position did not cause his downfall. Whilst still in its infancy – what has appeared for the last three, and will continue for at least the next five, years, is the preparation of the ground, the building of a certain alchemical foundation for Aeon Black Magick. The aim of this foundation involves taking into strategic calculation the existence and historical persistence of chaos theory and an attempt to thwart disastrous entropic decline because of any of THEM over-reaching the trust in their ego at the expense of the collective. One can consider this approach to be a type of alchemical formula that is worked on a substantial number of people and orients certain qualities in its hosts – much like a traditional alchemical formula requires certain ingredients, ours requires perfect timing, patience, self-honesty, and pure intentions to complete. If eight years should seem excessive preparation for the execution of just one act of Grand Black Magic – then one underestimates the Patience of the Devil and those who work in His name.”

This is a short essay to illuminate the current present in all Western Language and Writing of “Time” and may go some way towards explaining the role of Language as an inhibitor of the Acausal. The essence of this essay is not to bog a being down with performing the impossible of re-configuring the brain to notice these things on all levels: just some of them. The brain makes calculations as such a speed and frequency that it is rarely checked in its tracks about the assumptions it holds evident. These assumptions create suppositions which in turn lead to illusions which in turn lead to the Matrix.

Western Writings and subsequently their various cultures, exhibit an obsession with Time that is taken for granted. There is a prejudice inherent in Western communications that depends on the continued existence of the concept of solely linear time, a concept that subtly and subliminally cements power into the hands of the Magian controllers by exclusion of Acausal Time.

If we are trained to think in Linear Time, then the later introduction of Acausal Time is a difficult if not impossible concept to apprehend; and unfortunately, a dimensional bias has arisen that cannot and will not aid magical experience and understanding. Knowledge of the Acausal is crucial for all Sinisterion. However, so subtle are the tools of the Magian that they often go by unnoticed. For instance: the three dimensionality in our Language. The concept of Linear Time has so deeply permeated the West that we cannot escape it. Our Language hems us in.

In all sentences: there exists one or more of the following Time-based suppositions “Past, Present, Future”. Examine the first sentence of this essay. Start with “This”. “This” is a concept localised in the present. It is an itemisation of something in the immediate “now” that is intuitively understood – but to process it mentally demands the word be aided by a conceptual notion of linear time and space if it is to make sense and not be rejected.

“Is” is another term that localises an item to the Present. Like “This”, it also requires the learned schemata of Linear Time to be utilised to mentally process it. This process is very slow at first as per a child’s learning, but it does not take long until it is processed at an extraordinary speed automatically: the mind having built a kind of “chronological abacus” that localises all words as concepts belonging to the three modes of Linear Time. Because this prime supposition is cemented into the processing centres of the brain, by repetitive association, the brain may also pick up other untidy habits such as postulating “Space”.

As it has been pointed out in the MS “Universes Parallel” – the concept of “space” is a human-centred fixation that occurs from obsession with understanding the world from the perspective afforded to us because of our specific size. The spaces between these words beg the question – what is space? Is it empty or merely a perception of “empty”? Our size-based prejudice generalises that there is no “glass” or “paper” between these words, or a microscopic multi-verse of bacteria, electricity, electromagnetic currents, atoms etc. Though it cannot be seen it is certainly not “empty” – moreover space, in terms of a “vacuum” cannot even be proven to exist. Reality in the Matrix is fragile. And these little building blocks of faith so heavily leaned upon without justification are weak points. If you are able to stop and think about it: your brain may cease automatically processing time and space in your communications and contemplate the existential nature of both.

Other words in the first sentence are “All” which mentally encompasses Past, Present and Future. “Of” is a present term that must denote a past for something to be “of”. “A” a singular notion rooted in the present: rooted in the concept of space and a separation from something else – hence it subliminally requires the persistence of time. “To” embodies a link between two or more of the Time notions: a passage from one mode to the other – reliant on Time to make sense of this. “The” is another word with direct connotation to the Present and the supposition of space. Almost all words and concepts require Time and Space to be processed. “Another”, “With”, “Other”, “Almost” etc.

This entrapment forms the basis of 3D/causal communication: mired inexorably in a pre-conceived notion of Linear Time that, regularly used by the brain, cements its validity day after day in unquestioned calculations. The Acausal lacks exposure or even translation as a concept because of the Linear Time in Language: hence the ONA’s efforts to approximate a new symbology via the Star Game for instance that escapes this entrapment. Dreams, Experience and Esotery are also important elements in presencing a symbolic language of the Acausal mode using Acausal Time: but currently, only through Causal Time can a being express oneself. Expression of the Acausal to those below the Abyss is dependant on the flawed mode of the Matrix: and therein lies an inescapable conflict.

It is hoped that Music [Qv. Project R]: as well as the development of Signs via the continuing experiments with “Dark Angles” and continued exploration of any capacity for Astral [and other magical] modes to allow unfettered sympathetic communication between nexions will help presence a form of communication that is Acausal in nature. Meanwhile the Sinisterion can only acknowledge that there is communication above the Abyss and communication below the Abyss and never the twain shall meet. For now it is enough to analyse the flaws in Language, especially where the work of the Magician is concerned, and break some of the faith in language held unconsciously self-evident by the daily Mind.

CHRONOBET: PART II – CAUSATING THE ACAUSAL

1 December, 2010.

The theory that we cannot explain the acausal because the act of explanation is causal – as are all our tools for understanding – and that we (wrongly) impose causal perceptions on the a-causal because we have no and can have no a-causal equivalent.

It is the tradition of people to rely on the intellect, on being able to understand rationally, to limit the unknown to the known and translate perception. It is commonplace to use our intellect to explain things to others or enable things to be explained to us which we do not understand – and natural to make the effort to explain things that cannot be explained. Explanation, however, it plays out, is suitable/serviceable for many things, for things in general – but it is not difficult to demonstrate the restraint built into language as a means to communicate, or show that it involves a prejudice of time and space used as the basis for its model of understanding. This model cannot be changed or evolved to explain certain things because of its inherent duality and the present lack of understanding of the power of a duality-driven mindset – moreover the model contains within itself by virtue of its duality a self-regulating gyroscope that causes language to perpetuate duality – and itself like an unchanging fractal that falls into itself forever.

This can be illustrated quite easily by the observation that the order of words has a direct result on the reader (who perceives) – and reacts. How you react is for all intents and purposes random – but that you react is not. We can see that Ideas, as communicated by others are perhaps never simply accepted as a pure communication that passes exactly what the writer had in mind onto paper or screen – they almost always generate conflict – as if the writer is unable to capture an objective statement of truth no matter what words they choose to use, how carefully they phrase them, or however many clauses and asterisks and footnotes they may include.

Writing tends to have an automatic effect of causing a reaction rather than a reflexion. Caution at this point is advised against imposing a moral conclusion over this fact – my concern is never whether this process is “good” or “bad” but simply to illustrate and prove the existence of the process. By reaction I mean an unconscious pull by the ego to respond to the stimulus received – however it chooses to interpret it, and by reflexion I mean a contemplative state of occult and self-awareness that recognises one has reactions but does not automatically obey them as prompted by the ego.

The point of A-causal to Zen is not to provide another phenomena on which to hang ones causal hat, nor provide another point in space to speculate intellectually – however causally titillating the temptation and rewarding/gratifying the poetic associations that flow in tribute – but represents a faint light in the distance of the logos that dawns from time to time in the face of contemplation. It is borne of the struggle to escape language, morality, duality, time and those dead weights we recycle in absurdio when faced with the prospect of something we are told we cannot know. It is the Gnosis that jettisons causal spatial suppositions – spurns our doctrine of Cartesian grid unconsciously imposed that orders phenomena to be ‘from’, ‘within’, ‘next to’, ‘outside’, ‘inside’, ‘beyond’ – simplifying the vast into the discrete using tensions that imply the existence of singular autonomous points. Unfortunately, in the desire to share, experience is written down, all too often profaning the mystery because of the means by which its message is carried.

The attempt to try to Know unhinges any knowing precisely because Words – those causal prisoners and jailers – are used to denote occulture. As soon as the word a-causal presents itself it undergoes a transformation, literal and literary. Its presence creates a shadow, an order, and is forcibly slotted into various hierarchies – pushed into and out of place by the law of words that draws some together and pushes other apart – an automatic dichotomy inherent in the supposed freedom of language to express. Viz. express freely – but within the limits of freedom.

In word or form the a-causal comes under verbal law. It becomes a ‘thing’ like all other mundane things, disposable, drained of wonder, drained of authenticity. As is the doctrine of verbal law, the word/sound/form once presented causally is subject to the laws of form. Its name, used as a key to point toward a wordless door, a silent desert that rebukes understanding – is abused, misunderstood and sullied by clumsy attempts to extrapolate its purity with a barrage of associations and connective verbal tissues. It is thrown into the morass of language, sat next to words it has no sincere desire to be with, and forced to represent our will for it to be the occult secret itself. Causality supposes –this- and –that- to make separations where there are only prejudiced traditions of experiencing the world through the window of the human-centred ego. We cannot imagine what would be without our license to suppose, and it is ironic that our faith in knowledge prevents the evolution of it.

The word a-causal denotes an anti-concept, a sound for a vacuum of meaning outside the framework we conveniently apply. It does not denote a thing, a state, a term, word, or inference available to us through language – it is outside of language, indeed outside of languages ability to relate or even present – and that is precisely the words/sounds point – as a stop sign indicating the city limits of perception.

Like Zen before it, it is subjected to the same problems all words create – no matter what occult (hidden) wisdom they attempt to convey – once a word, immediately a form. Using a frame of reference built with instituted causal tools and prejudices people attach all manner of meaning and explanation to weigh down the sublime. To suppose nothing, we must suppose something. How many ways have people tried to show Nothing. When it comes to the acausal people cannot leave well enough alone. We build up a causal model of something we simply cannot fathom – precisely because we cannot fathom it. Precisely because we have a word like fathom and hate to waste it! We hate the idea that the universe could present something our lofty sentience could not control, we despise her secrets and her mysteries because they make us feel weak, small and powerless. They are anathema to the ego, laughter at our arrogance, vitriol to those proud inner voices to which we entrust our humanity.

We hate the unknown – it is a glaring truism in everything we do, in everything we name. We masturbate ourselves over daring thoughts of some untouchable void, orgasm over the fantasy that there is something forbidden, something we cannot attain, some realm or world we cannot master – some escapist dimension on which we can dream in order to forget. But the foreplay does not last – and we fuck ourselves. We pour down tributes to our ignorance and enshrine our desperate fumbles as wisdom – congratulating ourselves that we managed to fit the word A-causal/Zen into our writing next to other words – to contain it, explain it, attain it – even if only to highlight it by virtue of what we didn't say by surrounding it with causality as many times as we could. Then, we pat ourselves on the back and move on to imprison the next purity and sublime occult experience that dares to think itself above our causal verbal laws. It's what we've always done, it's what we'll always do.

Our reaction to the anti-concept of the A-causal provides deep and humiliating insight into the fragility and mentality of the collective human race and its paralysing fear of the occult – of the hidden. Of a thing that dares remain truly hidden.

AN ANALYSIS OF FREQUENCY: PART I

What do I mean when I tell clients that there is an overall geometry in the frequency of their writing that indicates something altogether different from what their strings of sentences have attempted to assemble?

Primarily it means that I believe writing is not linear, or one-directional and despite itself and what its writer intends it to convey, that there are other currents implicit in writing that are invisible, esoteric, within, that from the nature of its assembly, divulge other information about the writer on subliminal levels. That is to say that writing is layered. It has an esoteric counterpart during which a writer attempts to gain something from the audience the writing is directed at: viz. a specific attempt at the seduction of other minds is made via dressing up motives in various pleasing modes of language. And it has an exoteric mainstream that operates on shared meanings and logic.

Ego – The Source of Dialect

If we write the sentence: “I am a writer”: then we are making suppositions: we are causing things to exist: in presupposing “I” exists, we are making a statement that claims a separation: and in this case that a separation exists between a personal existence and the existence of others. In supposing “I”, we inadvertently draw a line in the philosophical sand that cannot help but suppose “You”, “Mine”, “Yours”, “Ours” etc. [Qv. Aristotle] And, there is a clear-cut motive in presupposing an “I” – will-to-power. With each word used in language to communicate, a supposition is made that cannot help but suppose other things: loosely termed, these are the inherent “opposites” that arise from the paradox of Unity. i.e., if we suppose “Space” – we must suppose something that is separate from Space – we must suppose “Matter”. And so on.

In communication, every word is a separation point: it is a supposition, a supposing of something that is separate from something else: i.e., a division. This is a useful observation, because language is the main tool of the Ego. The act of division in language is a constant element that echoes the motives of the Ego. I.e., the Ego has a vested interest in maintaining a specific geometric matrix, and wills to power deliberate separations between things to maintain its psychopathic homeostasis. We can identify the role of the Ego in language by appreciating a simple fact: all language is based on supposition. If we examine language for what it really is, in essence, each word is an existential question mark: a symbol with no inherent meaning. The prime phenomenon with an interest in separation from the whole: is the ego.

Hence it is ego that is responsible for the development of language: as a means of will to power. Thus, there appear repetitions or similar modes of separation by the act of division in writing; Separations that lead to a desired homogenisation of words [symbols] that is the aim of the ego to reduce the world to and feed it by establishing personal affirmations in what it writes. Thus, the way in which a writer attempts to control/harmonise the world and tame it with words, cannot help but reveal a reflection of the writer’s ego and expose the keys with which it feels harmony, i.e., its geometry. I should think that most people do not invest too much conscious thought in the accepted notions of language with words that tie others together: is, at, from, to, etc. these are habitual structures necessary to homogenise language so that it may be understood: -so that it may be “language”. That is to say it would be spurious and optimistic to think one could divulge anything from the placing of the word “at” or “was” – but something can certainly be ascertained from the placing [and frequency of placing] of the word “I”.

Human Centred Geometry Vs Life Centred Geometry:

Before I go any further let me make two very clear distinctions in geometry. There is the micro world of human-centred geometry and there is the macro world of life-centred geometry.

I call it a micro world because it subsists of infinitesimal degrees of separation, of breaking things into divisions using semantics and abstractions. It is made vastly complex by the sheer number of divisions made and the worship that is given to each division by acts of further dissection, followed by classification and categorisation for validity or invalidity [pending the type of psyches interacting] with the whole process treated as real, important, and self-evident; that is to say, Homocentric. It mostly takes form in communication by speech and/or writing and exists on the plane of trivial human concerns: and the creation/regurgitation of suppositions to create further trivial human concerns so that the cycle may continually repeat itself. This mode of geometry is the sustaining mode of the Matrix.

Secondly, there is the Life-Centred mode of geometry. Here, Abstractions are not treated as real except for the passage they give through the Matrix. That is, language is accepted as a necessary, if cumbersome, mode of communication in Life: but communication is not centred about the millions of divisions of abstractions: rather all those human divisions are grouped into one category as “Division”: creating the corresponding supposition, “Life” which supposes division to be artificial.

While the former tends to centre all its divisions about itself and focus on its own importance: Life-centred geometry is devoid of obsession of the human. It is a simple, direct use of language [and other means] that rejects the deification of human edifice and appropriately perceives them as merely present as one mode on a sliding scale of many. An overt lack of homo-centrism is immediately noticeable in text: and in my opinion indicates a psyche possessed of a more realistic perception of its species: a weaker domination by the ego over the total psyche due to decreased interest in self-importance. Thus, it is not only word by word that the ego is revealed geometrically, but by its specific repeating assertions of its worldview and the ideas presented and dealt with that come through in the text. A life-centred text refrains from referring to the writer at all – except perhaps when the writer wishes to demonstrate human humility and assert their unimportance as a species.

However, this is not to be mistaken with the writer that is morbidly self-obsessed with denigrating the human race and their own existence as a human being, i.e., the “Goth”. For such is still an obsession with human self-importance, albeit through rabid anti-establishment of importance. While it is fairly evident that upon reading a text, we come to form an opinion of the writer and the writing: I think THEM should only consider clients as applicable to the Temple’s teachings when client’s writings/speech exhibit a Life-centred philosophy and practice of life.

Reform and Revolution.

Another level of maturity of the psyche can be revealed by breaking down a writer’s text into categories of energy to give a Temple member a useful depth sounding of the potential of a client – almost like cutting down a tree to reveal its many rings of growth can determine its age. Sinister and Magian writing are easily recognisable as modes with different currents or frequencies. But if a person were to try to learn to intuit this difference, they might require a guide of the signs that emanate not only a sinister or Magian text, but the period of time that has elapsed since the writer separated from the Matrix. For although it can be relatively easy to create a temporary separation from the Matrix, [Qv. A successful Invoking the Tempest] it goes without saying that it is vastly harder to force a permanent one. A writer who has been closely associated with others of the Sinisterion for an extended period of time may at first glance resemble in action and speech, a genuine one of THEM. It would be convenient to have some kind of constant marker that separates the long-time sinister writer from the brief deceitfully occult ego who is experiencing a minor sinister high.

The extent to which a writer has separated from control by their ego, or the “recency” of their self-extraction from the mode of the Magian, could perhaps be determined by marked signatures of the longevity of a sinister life, i.e. by the practical and realistic applications a sinister writer uses vs the brash and immediate need for change possessed by the exuberant black magician still wound up in the role of immediate power. One correlation is that writings from long sustained sinisterion will be marked by original concepts and concepts that take a long time to implement: including demonstration of such a plan’s implementation. That is, the long-term Satanist will be gradual in energy expenditure and be concerned with “Reform” and the use of edifices already in place against themselves. The brash magician however, who has only recently or temporarily separated from the Magian current, will make use of traditional concepts and be concerned with revolution and the hasty destruction of edifices to be replaced with grand visions of satanic architecture: their plans tend to fall down however when they are unable to exercise wisdom in their implementation and lacking a clear understanding of the obstacles, refer back to the traditional rhetoric of concepts and goals that have been presented to them, i.e. “we need the creation of a new type of satanic individual”. They may cease writing out of frustration because their ideas are not being accepted as genius. A recent separation is marked by the energies of “Revolution”.

To discern and crystallise a person's intentions is beneficial in relation to our work; and one mode in which to undertake analysis is in the spirit that communication below the Abyss is mostly linguistic spell-craft and thus loaded. Frequency analysis is an especially useful avenue to pursue where writing attempts to deceive the reader as to the nature of the ego writing it – where writing may have all the hallmarks of authenticity and maturity but is in essence, a cleverly written spell. In such a case, being able to discern a life-centred mode and a human-centred mode can help unearth the truth because in the latter for instance, the ego cannot help but continually refer to itself: whereby the easiest method of determining if glamour is involved is to out-wait the glamour and make a comparison over time of many of the writer's letters [Qv. Ad Infinitum Accumulum].

Who Hears The Spheres?

Life/Human Centred Geometry is a useful major distinction. Another is the difference between Sinister and Magian energies, analogous to sound waves/emissions that resonate harmoniously or clash discordantly. Although all persons hear and appreciate music differently: the esoteric frequencies of the Sinister and Magian types are so fundamentally different and diametrically opposed: as to physically hurt the ears and brain and intellectually attack and harm the party who is subjected to listen to the others music. After separation from the Matrix: this musical/frequential difference is acute. Where the Magian hears harmony the Sinisterion will hear din. Where the Sinisterion hears the Spheres, the Magian will hear Nothing. And this is true of language too – for language is a form of magical vibration that is aesthetically suited to its species.

It is not an exoteric Hz or MHz frequency of cycles that exists to define this musical separation: although it well may be discovered some constant is present some day: the Sinister and Magian organism do not operate on different cycles of frequency in terms of physical sound. We share the same limits of our nexion as identical biological organisms. But we do use sound differently. We expend it differently. We have opposed goals and perceive separate universes. One is human centred, and one is life centred. This difference of perception causes an opposing taste in what is harmonious, and because the difference in perceptions is so vast, the Magian sound is largely noisy, self-absorbed, ugly and vulgar to us.

However, while the human-centred mode cannot encompass the life-centred one, the life-centred mode Can and does encompass the human-centred mode: that is to say, homo-centrism does not acknowledge anything but its own species: whereas a life-centred mode acknowledges the human-mode but does not extend human importance out of proportion: it is not egoistic and egoism is an element that defines the human-mode because the ego is the aspect in humanity that loves to extend things out of proportion.

Receptive Frequency: The Low Vibration of Propaganda

If one writes a poem in English, then we may expect most to be able to appreciate it and derive subjective experience from reading it. If one writes in another language not common to the majority of ones expected readers, then we can expect fewer people to be able to comprehend and appreciate it unless they are familiar with and understand the language of transcription. If a writing is penned that deliberately uses code, or obscure symbolism and wording, then the number of people who can approach an understanding or appreciation of the material from what is written, is greatly diminished. However, many grimoires are written in such a manner and although the text is indecipherable to most, remain attractive as works of art.

It is not on the textual level that the work is appreciated, but on the basis of its geometry and artistic flair. Without being able to read what is written the viewer [for he cannot be a reader if he cannot read the text] must be content to appreciate the text as an esoteric object. However, a symbol cannot replace a communication – a symbol is inert – and open to interpretation unless it has been Associated with the text/message by transference [a subject to be covered shortly] over time. So, because writing is primarily a means of communication and has an aim in being written, it consists of reciprocal translation and understanding on the textual level.

The degree of access that writing enables for its audience ranges from the lucid to the obscure. And the scale of free/restricted access to the communication by an audience between these degrees represents another type of Frequency: the “Receptive Frequency”. Like a radio transmission RF can be restricted to a certain channel or area or broadcast right across the network. A coded message is highly restricted in its RF. A public speech is not. The RF used corresponds to its numeracy: that is, its content is relative to the intended size of the audience that can understand it. The degree of RF is a signature frequency in all writings that may leave clues as to who the writer generally targets and also offers the key frequency that should be used to reply to them for the most effective communication.

There is an underlying principle in this phenomenon of corresponding universality. Propaganda, as Hitler understood, must be simple and direct if it is to influence the masses: meaning the ability to affect the many divergent types of person and psyche with all the miasma of classes, races, sex, age, education, background with a similar and unified message ... and for this to occur the wording used must be simple, direct, and universally recognisable. One of the ways to make a text universally recognisable is to use words of an Optimum Frequency. Young Children’s books for example are written using Optimum Frequency.

Optimum Frequency:
(The Way to a Man's Heart is through his Inherent Stupidity)

The majority of people have a vocabulary of approximately 44,000 words. A two-year-old may have a vocabulary of perhaps a few hundred or a few thousand. Despite the considerable numeric difference in each, in both vocabularies there will be words common to both. Yes. No. Mine. That. [This is an extreme example: I cannot generalise the use of words by a two-year-old with a corresponding comprehension of their use until much older and concept laden.]

However, both a two-year-old and a 40-year-old are likely to say 'What', 'Yes' or 'Please' far more often than they would say "Geriatric, Predispose, or Athlete". That is to say, that What, Yes and Please are far more Frequently used words in communication than the latter three. [Yes] or indication of some affirmative notion, [No] or the indication of some Negative notion are intrinsic to language. They are used far more frequently than other words and are more likely to be recognised regardless of race, sex, age, class or background. There are probably a few thousand of these key words that are used with greater Frequency than other words, and I will term these the "Optimum Frequency".

By using words from the OF range, propaganda is likely to be understood by a vast and divergent number of groups. Consider the following:

- 1) Ask not what your country can do for you: but what you can do for your country.
- 2) Economic expansion requires subservience by the people to the Nation in its time of dire need.

The first slogan operates on OF, these are words likely to be understood by a great many people for they are all simplistic and frequently used in everyday vocabulary. The second slogan is not so universal despite being a relatively similar statement, because its frequency is out of the OF range: subservience, expansion, dire are not common words or used anywhere near often as the words of the OF in the first line.

But it is not merely the OF that operates here. It is also the Optimum Frequency of Concepts too. That is to say that the concept of giving up one's individuality to serve a greater common good is also a frequently utilised concept by the majority of people. It is practiced in families, in school, at work, and in almost every other social situation where a person shows restraint over their individual desire to maintain social norms. It is relatively easy to appeal to people by using concepts they already understand and use on a very frequent basis: and, greater good, is a common concept.

In the case of the first slogan there is also a pre-existing indoctrination in the practice of Pride within the people of the American Nation to support the ideal of “Country”.

It was mentioned earlier that the packaged text of a slogan could be transferred over into a symbol by means of transference and association. The Nazis for instance were able to replace the effect elicited from the use of party slogans into an effect elicited simply by showing the party symbol: the Swastika. The swastika was invested with the meanings of conscious textual slogans by continually appearing alongside such slogans, until transference was made and people began to group the messages of the slogans with the symbol until the slogans were no longer necessary and the swastika operated alone as a subliminal symbol of Optimum Frequency. This is why Flags are used: as subliminal associations to incite Nationalism and worship of the idea of State and Nation and Country. I.e., control.

In the case of the American Nation, an appeal to Nationalism is triggered by the presence of the American Flag: The Star-Spangled banner. Recalling the experiment of Pavlov’s dogs, Pavlov demonstrated that transference could be made from the original control to an extent source. Closely allied with the American Flag; a President: a personage who transforms the esoteric into the exoteric and gives us a human link to that piece of cloth that subconsciously controls us. By the power of optimum frequency, we come to associate the President with the flag, and the flag with the President: if our associations become mixed: the two cease to retain their separate identities and we become brain washed. This is does not hold true for all Americans, however. Many Americans think their President dangerously imbecile – and brainwashing usually occurs over people with weak minds or wills or who are already conditioned to idolise Nationalism. Others see a link between “America” and “God”: and it is probably this link that operates with the lowest vibration of Optimum Frequency. As a priest can become a direct link with God, charged with special powers to pass on the divine word, so too can (and is) “America” be subliminally associated with “God”.

Other symbols used to trigger certain conditioned responses, are the Statue of Liberty, to the ideal of “Freedom”. But contra to this, an appeal to trigger “Peace” can be made by a Swastika or footage of a Nazi Rally or Hitler speaking. Forget someone mentioning the atrocities of the Americans during war, if a Swastika is shown, the context is already decided and the response automatic. Because America has taken the reins of control from Hitler and meta-morphed the ideas of his many surrounding geniuses, writers, and architects into esoteric currents that invisibly coerce rather than be actively seen: the initiated are now seeing the utilisation of many of Hitlers propaganda techniques in altered and truly magical forms. In winning the 2nd World War under their ideals of “Peace, Freedom and God”, America was able to confiscate what can only be called “Mind-Control Techniques” used by Germany for its own use and demonise the same use of such techniques by the Third Reich.

A linear conception of History emerged that forever determined the Nazis the bad guys, the Americans the good guys, reminiscent of the Catholic Church and its YHVH/Lucifer mode. People are conditioned to speak of Hitler in hushed tones, in disgust, in fear, or solemn reverence for such Evil. We are taught to hate, fear, and be mortally afraid of forgetting such a thing as the holocaust. We are reminded of the brutality, the ferocious and viciousness of the Nazi party, with documentary after documentary showing the ovens at Auschwitz. It is said: lest we forget. It is effective programming. Although the “Voice of Authority” openly treats adults as children unable to discern the world and its events for themselves, human beings gladly open themselves up to this mental conditioning accepting the basic divide of enemy/conqueror.

Subliminal Association made with the symbol of the Swastika is easily determined in all Western countries. Simply wearing one incites the conditioned response.

What has been covered so far? Text can be transformed into a symbol. A Symbol can become an effective trigger the presence of which demands obedience to an unsaid word. The next layer is Emotion: for a Symbol is used to elicit specific emotional responses.

The real operant power in Optimum Frequency is not the Swastika. It is Anxiety. And it should be noted that although it is impossible to control what emotion people will feel when presented with the trigger – the context of the trigger allows for a wide range of emotions to fall within acceptable valid responses because they all stem from the anxiety brought forth by low vibrations of Magian Frequency – that is to say, anxiety has been induced by Magian design and hence the corresponding energy arising from the human vessels is a Magian Current. [Humans are very similar to cauldrons/vessels: pour the ingredients in, mix, and let it cook. Or crystals/glyphs that can be made to chant/vibrate certain frequencies that are ‘ex-pressed’ in emotion/speech etc.

Once conditioned to react emotively upon seeing the Swastika [and by transference most German iconography of WW2] we are the unwitting victims of a mind-control technique that is very powerful and pending its transmission, long-lasting. Since the Third Reich has been demonised constantly for the last 60-70 years, we can expect that control to be ingrained within most of Western peoples.

Just briefly: when the human being becomes anxious it affects the Central Nervous System to send messages of alarm to the Automatic Nervous system and brings on our ancient fight-or-flight response which activates some responses and inhibits others. This “Sympathetic” response includes the release of adrenaline to get us pumped and mobilised. If we stayed in the Sympathetic mode, the nervous system would suffer a break-down from the stress imposed upon our organism: so, it has a built-in counter measure called the Para-sympathetic that kicks in once the emergency is over to return the body's responses to normal. Magic, Psychology, Mind-Control, or whatever you want to call it – is performed by Governmental Agencies etc by tricking/manipulating the systematic responses of the body to occur by artificial means.

Anxiety causes stress. Stress causes an imbalance in the body/psyche – which then prompts the body/psyche to activate a curative remedy. The American form of magic is, like the Nazis before them, slow hypnosis based. If you can condition the human being to react to one symbol with stress, you can also cause the human being to find relief with another. It is a simple matter of transference. (And just a side note for the aspirant: you can feel mind-control too – if you feel nothing for the holocaust while others weep and protest but feel compelled to remain quiet or join in – that compulsion to act in accordance with others, is the result of mind-control, which is effectively, body-control.)

The Fundamentals of Mind/Body Control

Now we will look at the underlying mode that is inherent in this style of Magian magic, which is to say, extract the Ethos from it and take a look at some of the methods of subliminal mind control exercised within it. If reeling in horror and disbelief at the atrocities perpetrated by the Nazis, we are vulnerable to mind control because of the anxiety it creates. Just as a child seeks the answer to $1 + ? = 2$: We instinctively seek to restore the imbalance created by counteracting that anxiety. But our natural counteraction response can be hijacked by an artificial one: forced to occur only when a specific symbol is presented. And those supplying the enemy symbol also supply the hero symbol. The hero symbol is the secondary association, the yin to the yang so typical of Magian magic. It is the rainbow from God, the promise that the Holocaust will never happen again so long as you support x. x triggers relief, comfort, it is the curative symbol to the anxiety incited by the Swastika, a programming narrative that there is something out there that will protect us from ever experiencing such horrors ourselves, some crusader that aims to put a stop to such atrocity ever happening again.

The most oft-used curative symbol is the American Flag. Whenever we see the nastiness of the Germans you can be sure footage of the Americans fighting their way through to save our souls will not be far away. Whatever symbol or regime is portrayed as the enemy, will create by its division a symbol or regime that is good. Institutions such as the Media are crucial to continuing this programming. It's been said before, but evil is banal: people will keep doing what they're doing, unaware or uncaring of the consequences just to keep their job, their ambitions, their sense of progression in life, of the matrix, intact.

Unfortunately, the media are expected to separate news into two distinct categories: which is why the Media promulgates a society paralysed with fear and saturate the world with coverage of violence, instability and supposed chaos: a society on the brink of collapse it seems, every night at seven. That is to say they depress us with fear and anxiety, consolidate us with trivium, unite us with sport [particularly in Australia] and then show us a fluffy kitten to give us a quick hit of serotonin. This formula, subliminal, and repeated several times a day, conditions the brain to develop addiction. So, what we are dealing with is not merely indoctrination on a verbal level, it is an actual current or mode of hypnosis that works by dual association and is a continuous vibration in all Magian transmissions. Tele-vision begs the question: whose/what vision? And how can we be conditioned so symmetrically when we seem divergent as a species? Are we really divergent? I look around me and I see mediocrity: the same tired re-hashing of someone else original creation: presumably it is different: but it is not: it's not even a permutation: it takes the song, art, media nowhere new. Media operates on the lowest Frequency too: OF. It's hardly rocket science to make the observation that the Magian messages are effective because of their similarity, frequency of appearance, proximity and the associations that are grouped together repetitively to make the same appeals of Peace, Freedom and God while ensuring, Control, Control, Control – on an almost deafening basis.

Are there ways to reveal this current for the lay man? Maybe the curious could try taping the news with the sound off and write down what they think the stories are about. Then re-watch the news with the sound on and see how closely they matched up. Or turn all the colour and contrast down so that they can only hear the news and write down what they think the story would be showing them visually. Restore the settings and watch the bulletin. They may notice that without the verbal or audio context to “inform” them of what is happening that their ability to discern Media is greatly diminished. The large discrepancy between what the brain expects to see and hear and the context that the media puts the stories into that could help distinguish the distortion created by framing images within context/narrative.

The “magic” of television has slowly been forgotten. For instance: there is a special make-up profession that deals with corporate food promotion. For those unfamiliar with the length of time and effort required to make an advertisement let me assure you it can be considerable. If McDonald's used actual ice-cream in their ads, by the time lighting, boom, camera, and assorted other henchmen were ready to shoot the scene: the ice-cream would have melted. The schemata that have been programmed in your head by McDonald's, of a McDonald's ice-cream is not the image of a real ice-cream dripping down the sides of the cone but a perfectly still, proud and firm frosty scoop of whipped white vanilla. In actual fact, the ad could not use a real ice-cream because it would not stay perfect, or proud, or frosty. A special food preparation artist creates the semblance of the ice-cream using glazed and painted mashed potato. Potato at room temperature sets firm, can be moulded into any shape, and does not melt. But, when the McDonald's ad comes racing across the screen, telling you about the delicious frosty vanilla ice-creams available, it places the potato in a context that tricks the mind: and the mind makes the transference between the image of an ice-cream with the schemata in the brain that describes an ice-cream. Yep, looks like an ice-cream, must be ice-cream. It is not. This "magic" is not confined to food: make-up and cosmetics for instance requires obscene amounts of advertising [context] to make it seem less like animal fat or cheap synthetic acids. But it's not tested on animals you say? Nice one. Where's your proof: that this multi-national conglomerate that makes billions out of making women feel ugly [anxiety trigger] writes it proudly on their carcinogenic bottle?

Wait.

Here I have presented my own Magian construct: I inform you of the enemy by appealing to your guilt: the enemy is the cosmetic company that has been accused of animal cruelty and atrocities to create products that paint your face. Note however, most will be happy enough to help me blame the cosmetic company as an enemy rather than acknowledge their own vanity: it's a projection and protection safety net utilised by the ego. Continuing: if you are caused sufficient anxiety by the thought that you are somehow unwittingly responsible for assisting them do unspeakable things to animals by taking part in supporting them because of your vanity, then you have made a transference from the abstract suppositions I have made, onto yourself: that is to say you are now associating/identifying yourself as involved: thus causing you to feel guilt. I then give you my programmed curative to your anxiety: the possibility of being in possession of the awful truth by acknowledging that you might have been tricked by the cosmetic companies, but if you admit it and get educated on the shadiness of the cosmetic industry you will be a "good" person again. And I should add this is a special trigger, because your anxiety is being relieved in a manner that allows you to think that you were not to blame, just an unwitting pawn. A lot of Magian vibrations aren't that kind.

For those unaware: that last paragraph: was another one.

It's all very clever. It's the simple Magian energy that mobilises the entire Matrix. It is present in the identical ploy of the Church that created a division between God and the Rest, demonising an 'enemies' tactics and will to power while simultaneously deploying similar tactics in their own means of warfare. The same young Church that rose to power using the God/Devil context to feed off the power of anxiety: The Devil is evil look what the Devil does: now be afraid, controlled and God-Fearing: is the same method used by All institutions. I remind aspirants, that all conscious human beings are scorpions. Demonising one ideal allows another to take its place. A genuinely fair and diplomatic ideal would not demonise so vehemently against its previous peer – it would have no desire to put something down in order to raise itself up. You would think that people would eventually get wise to this game, but no. Apparently not.

This major Ethos is a current that runs through all in Time. The OF and OF Concept level present in many writer's texts takes the form of an element of hero [or something championed] and a zero [or something negated] usually closely spaced or next to each other. It is hoped that by virtue of such a division the ego can elevate itself by de-elevating something else and subtract by proxy the status in the matrix that comes from feeding off the illusion of the hero. Keeping this in mind: Is the writer associated with the hero, is the writer's philosophy the hero, or is there a subliminal intent to connect power to the writer using this mode of duality? Such a current is most vulgarly apparent in the God/Satan Good/Evil schemata. Recalling that there are weaknesses in a nexion that is in Time: note that the magical current that has affected America and caused it to use this method: does so because it is In Time: does the writer embody this energy, or are they separated from that Ethos, and thus Sinister?

AN ANALYSIS OF FREQUENCY: PART II

PSYCHOLOGICA IN MUSICA

A rich tapestry of psychology, linguistics, and biology are present in all writings. Yet it also lends itself to the phenomenon of music. Writing is an expression/expulsion that like music, contains structure, and is bounded by that structure to conform to certain laws of reciprocity. This manuscript will deal with the geometry or vibration of writing as the expulsion of the acausal as a crude form of music. That is to say, viewing what is underneath writing when appreciated as an unconsciously driven piece of music.

Literally: behind all text there is a motivation: a subliminal trail of intent. That intent is often driven by ego resulting in the churning out of a great deal of rubbish or "noise" that occurs in communication prior to the Abyss. However, such noise contains among it key notions: each snugly nestled into a centre-point in the text that is couched and surrounded by supporting arguments and diatribe intended to give weight to the key point directly or indirectly. A spell if you like, that requires rhythm, pace, and to borrow from the musical world: hitting the right key during a composition.

Music is probably one of the only genuine abstractions in the world the other being geometry. Music in its raw form as sound does not depend on humanity for its existence, whereas an abstraction like mathematics does. Music existed before humanity, but mathematics was only a potential inherent in geometry. The only reason I refer to music as abstract is because it is comprehended and bounded humanly, as "music". When we read a good piece of writing we could say that it possesses us, causes us to go places the writer has determined for us to go, and some places the writer hasn't or couldn't. It might depress or enliven us, sadden us or fill us with joy or intrigue or wonder. We know instinctively when we write, when a word doesn't fit. Despite the millions of words we combine, it takes only the careless use of one to bring an otherwise masterpiece of literary finesse crashing down from the status of perfect. It is much the same with music: were a musical piece to jar suddenly after maintaining tempo and melody throughout: we should notice it for its coarse difference and be drawn to remember that jarring note as ruining the composition. In fact we might even be unable to enjoy the piece, because of that jarring note. Writing is the same.

Musical appreciation and the analysis of textual frequency will differ from member to member, but the love and recognition of sinister elements will always be a solid constant that unifies that listening. Analysis of geometry is not the hearing of a literal orchestra: it is intuitively based perception of the writer's motives and the awareness of being hypnotised by beautiful music. This beautiful music might be described as having a shape, a vibration, a frequency or a colour. Regarding colour it is the Psychic sensation of being able to imagine what colour the text would be if it were a colour, or with Shapes, the shape such text might make were it associated as being structured as square, circular, triangular etc. If in imagining that a text is green: to determine its 'essences' based on a perception of colour one might draw on personal associations of the colour of green to describe it: fresh, lush, natural, etc.

But to equate writing to music is not the same arbitrary association as colour and shape. Rather it is a true superimposition of the qualities of sound over the text to turn its logical arrangement into pitch, treble, bass, timbre and melody, tempo, and rhythm. It is a mode structured in the real that could lend hue, tint and the vibrancy of colour by means of imagination to the literature, by virtue of being a mode of perception that mirrors the skill and mastery of the musical composer. Classical music does not communicate by word, but by its intent.

Taking three examples: I.e. besides the surface platform of arguing rhetorically in politics, religion, or occultism: a writer has written a plain message (a single note) that states he does not need the Temple's help [Residual]. Another writer has gone to great lengths to be elaborate (a symphony) and wants me to see that she is smart [Active]. The last writer wants to challenge my own ideas in order to regain control of their own (a prelude) [Egoic].

~Residual: the writing presents key notions in a quiet rhythmic tempo: couched only by the bare essentials to give the prose form. It is simplistic, straight to the point, and because it requires very little mental processing and does not step out of the OF, it is soft. Because it is soft, it causes the mind to inject more contrast upon it to bring it forth: it is thus more likely to be received well, played over and over as a single note, and thought about more often after reading it than an Active writing is.

~Active: A loud, noisy couching of many key notions that seldom operates on the OF. It requires a lot of information to be processed: and pending the poetic talent in which this information is presented: can either end on a low note or a high note. With active writing it is necessary to use words that are out of the OF and this can be done tastefully if the rhythm of non-OF words is melodic and gradual. Or if persons are familiar and used to using a different OF such as the vernacular of the ONA; acausal, Aeonics, dark gods etc... the geometry of an Active letter is not affected by the departure. But if the letter is forceful and shows little grace in presenting its keys: it is as though a drum-kit has fallen down stairs. Elasticity in writing, an ability to compose lyrical music that is flexible, flowing, and able to rise and fall: to concede the merit of others music accordingly: shows a maturity of composition. "Textual Melody" is one of the essential factors to use in determining the psyche of a writer. If the writing was well put together, but lacked a convincing argument it translates musically as a low but inauthentic bass boom. If the writing had little substance but served only as a raft for the ego of the writer: it might translate musically as a high-pitched whine, scream or some irritating instrument. Most writing is active: that is, fed by a complex intent. Although that intent cannot be erased: [it is the paper on which the score is written] the writer can acknowledge its presence in a composition: and either apologise for it or justify it with an honest announcement pending poetic talent. Hence, I'm sorry, and well aware of the irony of writing about the ego.

~Egoic: Egoic writing is best equated to archetypal resonance: an Egoic writing smacks of a vulgar permutation of rehearsed classics. For that is what it is. It is more often than not a flighty composition that has a quiet opening and a loud but [sometimes understated] crescendo at the end. It can be coloured into two distinct tones of which there are various degrees. There is the persuasive ego that attempts to win the readers will under power: by appealing to emotive instruments such as the violin, cello or bass: using a similar mode of association that America employs to create anxiety and then remove that anxiety by posing as the readers saviour/crusader. And there is the aloof ego that plays beautiful music using flutes, panpipes, and other stringed instruments but like the song of the siren, requires that the listener enquire of the composing ego – for the composer deliberately separates itself from the musical score. This is so that compliments, congratulations on writing a beautiful piece are met with gruff reproach and any energy of appreciation toward the composer is turned into an ugly tentacle where the musical score is understated as rubbish and beneath the composers better attempts: this requires more interaction with the ego to soothe it, cradle it, encourage it to see its beauty and power: which it already does, but uses it to lure the unwary: a true psychic vampire.

I should add that such compositions that include a violin, are those containing emotionally charged archetypes such as overcoming an obstacle to get to the reader, the writer being prepared to sacrifice themselves on the readers behalf etc. and so the tune is often interlaced with sneaky flutes and panpipes to give a lift to the otherwise drudgery of being forced to empathise with these vampire types. Also, those of the aloof type write ideas that are never fully formed, or they may master one or two concepts beautifully.

But diversity is lacking in these types: mainly because the piece is intended as a cleverly crafted web: it is not the intention of the writer to go on and further themselves, but to receive praise endlessly on the mastery of one or two works. If praise is withheld, the writer usually does not return: there is after-all no substance to the writer and except for being fed voracious amounts of energy it has no interest in anyone else. It is for this reason that I refer to the aloof compositions as being composed of 'lilting' instruments: high notes with no bass.

Although there are several frequencies covered in this MS, some to do with time, some to do with magical alignment, others with commonplace repetition – it is this last one that is probably the most intuitive and useful.

In Summary:

Because there is a lack of originality in this mediocre human-centred phase of time, because writing must conform to various rules to appropriately conceal or reveal the writers intention if it be other than what they would indicate, and because music has gone into hibernation: and I mean the rise in stream-lined electronic factory produced banality that passes for composition these days: archetypically: most people I have encountered fall into one of these three categories. Why? Because they lack the power of personality: to be different: or to maintain or revive a link to the past and tap into genuine musical experience. The esoteric secrets of music are not lost however: they have been kept intact by the permeation of the acausal phenomenon of Music, with its noisy counterpart Language. Although I would not lean heavily on the categories given above, indeed they are just rough guides to give some semblance to the esoteric method that can be used, in tandem with other means, to determine a writers authenticity: I believe that there is beyond words and their static level of use in the matrix on a linear level: a secret esoteric harmony and frequency that remains unconscious in most: that delivers to the avid music appreciator; the Soul on a plate.

IN SHADE

There is an exercise that can quickly illustrate the region available for depth of human knowledge and understanding in mathematics. And I have already used it twice writing this. It reveals the symbolic blunt trauma that is the human instrument for capacity of knowledge and highlights both the dominance and the fragility of thought. Everything on the left side of a decimal point represents the limits of human understanding and by these numbers alone our systems run virtually everything and everything virtual, runs us. The three numbers to the right of a decimal point represent the maximum depth into dark waters we are willing to dip our toe. The numbers beyond which appear in nearly every equation – are simply ignored. What they mean – what they are telling us about the world – has never been determined with any sagacity.

In a hypothetical situation: We are on Mars (representing a closed system). I have $961 dollars in credits (representing a finite resource). The smallest denomination I can break it down into physically is 5c credits. Here is my job: I am supposed to give every person that volunteered to assist with a setting up a satellite, $1 (constant A). That is part of my job. Here on Mars $1 is much more valuable than on Earth – it can purchase many goods and services. But there's a complication: Joe, told Sam – who also shares his pod – that he was setting up a satellite and Sam also got involved and helped with the task. The other part of my job is that I must use all of the funds given to me or I may be accused of short-changing the people of Mars. Because of Sam, I now have 962 people in the room, $961 in credits and must abide by the two constants: that is my job. Instantly (logic) I know that no-one in the room can get $1, so I holograph my boss. My boss tells me that even if I cannot pay $1 to each person I still have to pay each person involved an equal share. That is not negotiable. On Mars everybody gets an identical wage which helps prevent financial division – and all funds must be distributed equally, that is the law of our Martian society.

So, for whatever reasons (representing programmed conditions) – I must now pay 962 people out of 961 credits. I already know I cannot give each person a \$1, so I turn to my calculator. According to which $961 \div 962 = 0.998960498960$. I understand this is less than a dollar and the next two digits, .99, confirm this. But the digits beyond begin to complicate matters. It looks like I can eventually give each person what is owed if I can make use of string of numbers – but I do not understand what they mean beyond breaking the \$1 into smaller and smaller pieces. I try to divide the \$961 by .99. $961 \div .99$ gives 970.7070707070. What is 970.70? 97.7 cents? Let's try dividing 961 by 970.70. This returns me to 0.990007211290.

Less than a dollar but by how much is still not clear. Even though I have enough money to distribute to everyone in the room – I cannot determine if I have enough money to pay everyone equally and the remainder of whatever I don't pay them must also be distributed equally. I try another route. I work out how many 5c coins are in \$961. There are 20x5c for every dollar. $961 \times 20 = 19,220$. So, I try to divide 19,220 5c coins among 962. The answer is 19.97920997920. My calculator is suggesting everyone gets nineteen 5c coins and .97 of one more. At this point someone in the room gets tired of me taking my time to work this out and yells just give us 95 cents each and keep the change. I type in $961 \div 0.95$ and get the answer 1,011.578947368. This number is of no practical logical use – what is it trying to tell me? How does it help me? How does it address my problem – what, can I type in to correctly distribute \$961 among 962 volunteers each of which must get the same amount and all of which \$961 must be spent. I am hitting a wall. Because even though I have enough money to pay everyone equally even if it means they will not get \$1 each – I have to distribute it all, equally, and use all available funds to me.

In a practical real world sense, the smallest coin by which I can break my money down into is a 5c coin. And while the answer lets me know it's less than a dollar – as soon as I take three steps to the right of that decimal I am in no man's land, a string of numbers that have been labelled "irrational" stretches out before me, trying to tell me something but which my clumsy money system cannot handle or compute. But why not? Often this crucial part of mathematics is ignored precisely because it cannot be understood and will not let itself be applied to our very rudimentary sketch in the sand representing the limits of understanding and calculation that becomes a fog three digits past the right of a decimal point. Let's look again at that first number: 0.998960498960 I can recognise that the reply wants me to give less than a dollar but more than 99 cents. So maybe 99 c and .89 micro cents. But what about 604498960? Why does that simply get clipped or ignored? Our physical money system once had 1's and 2's in cent coins but was clipped to 5c pieces as the lowest denomination.

Since no one understands these strings of numbers nor recognises any repeatable, recognisable pattern in them there is no guide on how to use them or what they do, mean or say – my monetary system does not let me break my coins down lower and switching to electronics to try and solve the problem just made it even more confusing. This example replicates innumerable mathematical equations – in this example we must adhere to the constants and the program, we cannot change them. We theoretically and financially have enough money to pay everyone equally, to split the money into equal parts – but we don't know how much exactly – after a point the answer eclipses our understanding and the size of our units.

We humans recognise this difficulty exists and have developed a habit of rounding up or down to a more comfortable number, a more rational number, especially when it comes to cash. But what do irrational numbers mean? We are stuck in the shallow end of this enormous wealth of information that we cannot decipher with logic, but because their purpose or significance eludes us, label them Irrational. It is a common practice to do the same with humans and deem them mad. Pi has been calculated to over a quadrillion decimal places but it is claimed – there is no pattern. Euler's number has also been calculated in a similar degree, but the string of numbers given is also said to have no pattern showing. All sources cite that no pattern has ever been found – and – this seems unusually dismissive for human intellect. Irrational numbers are the shameful secret swept under the rug of mathematics – too powerful for us to fathom, so labelled and put neatly on a shelf in the back room where no one need examine them very closely because their existence highlights that mathematics is neither pure reason nor anywhere close to a reflection of God, the Universe or an understanding of it.

If we want to compare it to the Divine – it is the grubby equivalent of peeking up an angel's skirt. Mathematics and the systems built with it – are evidently working with only a percentage of the total system – if – it is even working at all. The sum results of mathematics may be a reflection of our limited available access to the very system we suppose to have created and while seemingly impressive to us – we have no comparison of what impressive mathematics can be. Except we do – right around the world monuments impossible to recreate today laugh in the face of what is known now. In fact, the broken junked version of mathematics that does not use or understand “irrationals” must be limiting what is possible – why would we create a system we only use a small part of? Think about this. Mathematics does not fit the world, the world has been fit to mathematics. The systems we build use the veil left of the decimal point and a few numbers past it because they resemble the base 10 codex – and all systems are built in such a way using this mathematics that deliberately ignores irrationals. If you only ever see the colour red you cannot imagine a rainbow. What can you understand of a recipe if you only have 2 of the 8 ingredients? Irrationals represent a magnitude, an abyss too deep to swim in – and so it has scared all of the mathematicians out of the water. They use numbers in an incomplete way which is why we have failed to master time travel, FTL technology or perform any of the miracles of ancient builders because we have been unable to fathom the meaning of these very large strings of numbers which do not fit our simple systems. We arrogantly clip them short and cut them off – piling stumped numbers onto our edifices and grinning stupidly at our achievement as butchers of what is.

The idea that the numbers go on forever – has been proven abstractly – but it has never, been proven outside of mathematics – it is an idea made possible by a foundation of other ideas. If you are to be scientific – if you are to adhere to the laws of observation and logic, common sense and self-honesty you cannot with a straight face or capable mind conclude what you cannot observe. You may theorise it – but should not then treat your theory as fact. Infinity does not have any proof – there is simply no arrival at an expected end. We created the idea of finite and counterpoint it – the concept of infinity has been proven mathematically – but has never been proven outside of mathematics.

Infinity is quite simply a statement that because I cannot reach it with my arms it has no end – that because I cannot measure it in terms of scope, it has no end. This is not proven, it cannot be proven – it simply means your ruler, your idea of measurement, your expectation of being able to measure – were inadequate devices to do the job. That is ALL it means. But with great frequency infinity is treated as an actuality. That is not science – that is laziness for convenience. For many people, and this can be encountered heavily in almost any theoretical physicist, mathematician, philosophical paper on the size of the universe or when speaking about the scale of things – forever, infinite and even eternal are even used interchangeably as if they mean the same thing.

Partly – because English grammar leads us to believe using the same word over and over or more than once on a page is unprofessional, somehow clumsy or incorrect so these other words to replace used words creep into writing as a substitute; but this haphazard use of similes and synonyms also illustrates one of the deeper flaws of using language to assault any given problem. There is a tendency to compact ideology into existing words treated as wastebaskets (i.e. space is infinite) or eternal means the same as endless – where we will run right to the edge of the cliff of our idea but are incapable to jump off. We say it is infinite because it gives the appearance that we know – that we understand – that it is controllable: we say it to give confidence, to claim authority, to keep our degree or tenure, to agree with the lazy but numerous – but there is no such thing that we can prove. Just another thing TOO BIG for us that scares us, so we clip it smaller, make it into a stump and cannibalise it for our stretched frame of hanging skins we call Knowledge.

Because of how long we live, that we can only use tools we make inside and from systems we in limit understand, We can only continue the journey, so far – and our inability to fathom the nature of mathematics past that decimal point is indicative of the Zipf principle* of 20/80 and applicable as symbolic of the limits of our understanding in all things and how far we are capable to explore, the necessity of keeping our world stable and sensible through half-truths, before stepping over the decimal and taking a few more steps where it quickly becomes ‘irrational’ or an abyss.

*Zipf’s law was originally formulated in terms of quantitative linguistics, stating that given some corpus of natural language utterances, the frequency of any word is inversely proportional to its rank in the frequency table.

Look at this diagram. This is a section of Pi. We all know what the 3 means. We know what the .1, the .14 and the .141 mean. We might even be able to use them. But think about all of the vast knowledge you attribute to 3.141, what it required for you to understand these numbers, their meanings, their purposes and then look past them. The 4 digits you recognise are utterly dwarfed even by the early string of the irrationals. Shown here are 11 digits in the black with many more besides. But neither you, nor humanity, knows how to use them – even though they form the vast majority of this number and should by reason, being the more densely populated data set, contain the most information about this number as a logical result to tell us about the Universe.

If we have a pamphlet that tells us What a Dictionary is – vs the entire volume of books for Oxford's English Dictionary: which one contains more information about the Universe as we know it? Which one should we read to better understand a dictionary or to learn more about the world? Why not then – the same with numbers? Why read and use a single number over 1000 numbers? Infinite is said to mean: limitless or endless in space, extent, or size; impossible to measure or calculate. It refers only to space. Forever is said to mean: for all future time; for always. It refers only to time. Eternal is said to mean: lasting or existing forever; without end. It refers to time and space. Not only do these terms have agreed upon meanings – they also have disagreed meanings, alternate phrasing, alternative etymology – these words can be reduced to shapes. What these shapes 'mean' is both static and liquid. From using one word – at least a thousand possible combinations of what to use next to it spring up, subject to what can be written and obey the rules of grammar, with just as many interpretations. But words evoke in a reader a quantum split with no predictable formulated response to those words, which words they will pick out and respond to, which order their reply will be given in.

Mathematics does not struggle with this – it does not involve moral imperatives, or get lost in small talk or personal attacks, or attribute blame, or change the subject, it does not express emotion or outrage, hate or love – it is superior to language for its lack of morality, of the human need to correct a statement through branching quasi-interpretable word, it does not suffer the weight and distortion in practice of proving what is right or wrong to say in any instance. It has far fewer handholds, is less accessible to interpretation: and only if you understand mathematics can you form a reply. It is a system of symbols that express relationships without the muddy wiping of one's indignant point across it. It is superior to the spoken word – and while it can express the individuality of those who use it in how they use it – it effortlessly strips away all of the detritus that lumbers conversation. It may create such as a result – but in use, expressed as symbols it is a cleaner, elegant, non-judgemental script.

Time is a construct (developed or given), but either way accepted as a ruling power that incrementally measures – but with no human living much beyond 100 years and many much less than this, the observer's absence of observation of the experiment means there is no experiment for the observer. Let's put this another way – it is the Human, out of all of the tools involved in an experiment requiring observation and measurement of these 'dwarfing vantages' (forces we cannot measure) that fails first. Perpetual motion cannot be achieved they say because the parts wearing out (entropy) does not constitute free energy. While atoms, water, the space outlast even the Earth – humans are around for a feeble smudge of time, during which they make claims like, 'oh, I can't measure that', and conclusions like 'it must go on forever'.

But there is no proof – either, human you Are doing science as you have bothered inventing to govern your experiments – or you are Not, and in pretending in infinity, you are not. You are simply preserving your embarrassment in the face of THEM and protecting the world ego from ever seeing into the Abyss. There are so many ways to understand, interpret, define, use a single word, but there is only a pure channel to understand a 1. If you understand 1 you cannot confuse it with two at this level of dimension – deeper into quantum, you can – and beyond that we have not put our hand. Yet irrational numbers -a product of mathematics, and humanity widely believes it invented mathematics, stare at us daily, from every complex equation but are just as widely ignored. Like trying to ride a two-wheel bike that only has one wheel mathematics uses an undetermined fraction of its potential – what lies on the other side of that decimal has proved too daunting, exhausting, inexplicable for logic, mathematics, philosophy to Know: and accordingly, it is a section of our reality taped up and sealed off from our systems as irrational, infinite, or god's fingerprint.

It is highly troubling that it should be agreed this is the right approach: these numbers are staring at us and hold a deeper key to the universe, everything does and everything has that we have analysed: we have made a zeitgeist of it by exploring, being curious, inquisitive of all of things around us, and the things around, inside and as far inside as we can get into them. Why this irrational spectrum does not get attention is because it represents a limit of our understanding. It is another Threshold that marks a line in the meta-sand where humanity dares not tread. It could be the panacea that mathematics requires to solve its most taxing equations or let us compute quantum in rapid real time.

But even though they manifest with alarming frequency – these shunned post-decimal numbers made famous but no less obtuse by pi frame our world and our inadequacies. Their only use seems to be to complete an equation in which their inclusion is ignored for its own information and considered representative of very small pieces of the integer simply tacked on as a byproduct of maths and treated as a meaningless extension – or as fractions of fractions of cents invisibly shaved off transactions to accumulate and line the pockets of very clever people. The Insynsian principle (the idea of raising singular items into an object of worship, to stand in place of god, or the quest for one grail, one ring to rule them all) understands why a theorem of pure mathematics is an attractive prospect – or a 'theory of everything' madly striven by in physics – it is laziness, it is pure arrogance, it is the same dream of clipping nature's wings into horrible stunted shapes and viewing it as heaven that humans do with everything. Because we like to order things into pyramids, with, an apex at the very top. In every field of study or interest there is a driving motivation to reach a state of that form's perfection – or – there is an acknowledgement of perfection – or the acknowledgement that the field involves or can reach, a perfection.

Artificial Intelligence, Mars Colonisation, the perfect NBA line-up, a hole on one from the tee, to surf a tsunami, to prove consciousness, to speak with god, the perfect kill, the perfect date: an expectation that there is a model or example, a breakthrough into a paragon of a thing superior in every way to all other models of what we are learning, knowing or doing. It might be our ideology, political fanaticism, religious faith but in all instances, it is an unproven quest for unsurpassed elegance or inarguable dominance in nature's design.

Yet irrational numbers have been appended such a name and invite equally dismissive treatment, even as, they form the much larger part of what mathematics actually is. Those numbers are not mistakes, they are not superfluous, they are not there for no reason but to treat them as such is to render mathematics impotent, it is to limp along with a broken leg and never enter the hospital next door: nature does not provide reason-less quanta so why has this phenomenon been allocated such derision? If we invented it, why don't we understand it? Why do we only make use of some of it?

You cannot share 961 into 962 equal portions and use all of the allotted funds because the money system is too simple to make functional use of the tripost-decimal numbers. Yet the paradox is that you potentially do have enough money to pay everyone equally and use all of the money you just cannot prove it because you cannot interpret the numbers given by the calculator in relation to the overly-simplistic system that dominates to the left of the decimal point. Let us think of what the numbers we know have done for us – what we have built with what we were able to comprehend. Let us also think of numbers as layers of liquid oil and understanding as an oil drill. As we drill deeper into the core we tap more oil – as we move past integers and into the realm of decimals the drill starts to slow down and stops drilling. Eventually the drill breaks.

What if each decimal place is the equivalent of another dimension of the world? – what these numbers tell us is that there is extraordinary depth to what they represent, what if we could understand what the first 6 of them meant. What if the secret to time travel lay inside understanding and using those numbers in our world as often as we use integers. What if what is being shown in these strings is a staggering layer of different dimensions, times and spaces that exist and that we have uncovered abstractly – maybe, even knew once and forgot – just as we can penetrate an atom and find all manner of deeper subatomic particles within and, have yet, to find a place where our drill of inquiry comes to a stop on that quantum journey inward or outward for that matter, with no edge of a universe yet found – what if so many secrets stare blankly at us but labelling them irrational has effectively sealed them into a perceptual tomb, where mathematicians simply stare down at the floor as they pass these numbers in chains, whose crime was nothing more than being unintelligible and therefore an embarrassment to our collective intellect.

Can this habit be found elsewhere? Yes it can – in virtually every field where language is used. For instance, in speaking of who built historical monuments, no credit is ever given to who must have actually built it – the hundreds or thousands of people responsible for making video games or movies are almost without fail credited individually for their role in the creation of that game or movie – but historians speak of the pyramids for instance being built by Tutankhamen or Cheops, or the prevailing, reigning ruler at the time is often credited as the architect – even though in every logical way this goes against the very foundations of logic: one man or woman cannot build such monuments: every task today shows how many people it takes to get rudimentary things built or done: but out of convenience, reduction or familiarity we constantly hear of one person building some impossibly complex structure. And for those new to the planet, it is a lazy lesson.

It is just one more way in which whole swathes of complex information are cut out because they don't fit a much simpler system. We make the systems, we also cut out the complex information. These are choices. In essence, for humanity in general, close enough is good enough, round up or round down, smooth it out or shave it flush: THIS attitude is the sum of achievement, it is the pinnacle and the limit we can reach because we choose to ignore complex systems. We either don't or no longer have – the capacity to talk with God through forms because we don't deserve it. We cannot see his Works because we cover them in shade.

THE 23 SYNDROME

Foreword: The author does not wish to assert that writing is useless for means of communication: it should be clear that writing can construct magical forms of an extremely powerful nature given that so many people are involved in the shared nexion called “understanding”. It should also be clear to aspirants that writing is in itself a ‘corrupter of essence’ and should always be digested with a grain of salt. Rather, the author wishes to assert that looking for magical keys in the structure of letters is a fruitless task. One may spend a great deal of time wishing something to be there, that isn't [The 23 Syndrome] and may consequently deceive oneself successfully by aiming ones mental engine at the task of manifestation of something altogether pointless.

Writing is a bridge, an exoteric manifestation of esoteric currents. The planes, curves, and angles of the letters used to scribe the esoteric have long been thought by many occultists [Crowley included] to be invested with some greater divine secret – a secret believed to be operating behind the myriad of geometry that letters cause when they are written; an essence within each letter used in its various combinations with other letters that hides an esoteric kernel of base magical logic that pulls a superior meaning of writing together. Interest in such a matter is usually peaked after a writer comes to finally exhaust for themselves the capacity of language to explain the currents of the esoteric and is forced to apprehend the role of writing as existing on a symbolic plane [Qv. Sruusis].

During ‘Sruusis’ a writer becomes acutely aware of the fragility of communication by letters or speech* to accurately convey anything esoteric. Writing can approach a semblance, indeed a great mirror to the arcane, but it can never replace occult/world experience. Whereby we are speaking of those writers that perform written records of magical activities: Esotery a writer has experienced is a living thing for them: an ecstatic fire and knowing that burns brightly as if some sparkling neon flare in the mind coupled with a corresponding physical alchemy; the body animated just so from receiving a full epiphany resulting in change. Such a living, organic feeling and apprehension of the currents involved is always private, unique: the result of experience with the true esoteric. But if one is attempting to describe these processes in writing: they must usually be described in the context of a change. To express this change, the writer must at least be able to describe a plane of being before the experience, and the altered plane of being after the experience. [Qv. Chronobet].

Although the Esoteric Plane and the Exoteric Plane join respectively as Acausal and Causal dimensions, they are intersected by the Abyss. An element of the Abyss is as a vortex that disintegrates causal information.

Language is affected by and even part of this vortex, whereby causal information is a corrupt translation of acausal essence and is energetically fragmented upon contact with the Abyss.

Acausal modes that filter through [and compose] into the Causal are dimensionally different and thus esoteric from a Causal point of view. Synchronicity, Dreaming, the genius of the Subconscious etc are forms of communication that are alien to the Causal: they are for instance of a different species of Time and cannot be understood as cause-and-effect phenomena. It is as though these experiences speak to us in an entirely unique language: a language of Experience that cannot be translated into anything but a crude approximation here in the Causal. Our language binds us to our dimension: we have no comparison and no room in our language for these types of alien beings. And when we try to describe these ‘visitations’ – our words are as whispers on the wind: ethereal and incomplete: made impotent and destroyed by the Abyss that separates this world from theirs. But few consciously apprehend this: and many continue the struggle using Causal language, in vain, to cross the Gulf.

The problem most often encountered in such optimistic experiments of one’s verbal/literal skills – is that communication after the Abyss must meet certain criteria to be intelligible to those existing on the planes below Entry. Trying to record a static summary of “Being” by using some kind of alchemical formula to describe one’s state before a transformation is a task that has eluded even the greatest wordsmith, because words limit the magical and force esotery into infinitely complex geometries, nonetheless bounded by dimensional restraints.

More so, attempting such a thing is not a flow with the natural: it is an attempt at solitary confinement of ALL by the limited apprehension of the few planes of which the human being is humbly aware – and doomed to failure because of:- Language. Recalling this authors own struggle: putting the body [of which we ‘Matrix-ally’ understand less than 1%], the Mind [an abstract that has taken on credible tangibility, and again an itemisation of which we Matrix-ally understand less than 1%], and the infinite angles of the existential into a concrete approximation or accurate model of Being using language proved impossible.

One: Language thwarted all attempts to convey what I felt: in most cases there was no precedent, no concept, and hence no word for it.

Two: all writing is corrupted by the alien presence of the bias of Ego.

Three: Encapsulating something as staggeringly simple as Life using Causal Language is to be overwhelmed by the sheer number of divisions/planes that must be accounted for [and are generally expected to be] if trying to measure ones “Alchemy” for others.

And Four: One cannot directly transfer one’s experience to another because transmission by Language is subject to chaos via the shifting miasma of meaning inherent in language by writing or speech that consequently smears and distorts the original esoteric.

Let us not ponder too deeply on the nuts and bolts of the limitations in the human being to account for its Self: it is a moot argument.

During the frustrating realisation of literary defeat: that one cannot truly convey the esoteric with the exoteric: the apprehension of language as a limitation for esotery may arise. An appreciation of Language as a tool belonging to the Matrix may surface whereby it is understood the role of Language is limited to creating mere geometric bridges: Bridges restricted to the Matrix because the geometry created is rooted in the illusory plane of the Symbolic. Such an apprehension is similar to that of actors who come to recognise the gulf between acting a role and the role itself that can never be bridged [Qv. The Sinister Grotesque].

And such a realisation offers powerful insight into the fabric of things: for a writer who has merged with an Acausal perspective of Language will become suspicious of the face value of words and see them for what they are: as a grotesque, a sinister writhing scrawl that is to the original esoteric as music is to noise.

However: not all writers emerge from the realisation intact or appropriately empowered: while some are able to accept that language is ultimately broken shards the casual result of being forced from the realm of the dream: others without knowledge of the Acausal and the nature of the Abyss are led back to the smaller magical cone; the semantics of the Matrix, where they contemplate a secret essence believed inherent in language and words and letters themselves. Such an obsession obscures the simple and represents the absorption by a destructive angle: Wisdom substituted by a treasury of thoughts that there lies within our Language some mysterious Occult secret.

A distortion of the simple is bound to occur if the epiphany is encountered by a human-centred being. Writing/Speech is the tool of the Ego and is thus heavily invested with the energies of human self-importance – a narcissistic mentality that summarises: because it “comes” from man it is “of man” and thus by proxy “is man” – which is further broken down by the selfish nature of the will to power of all conscious beings to, “is me”. There is an ever-present danger of misdirection because of this mentality for the ego to project divine worth onto its tools. That is to say, safety precautions are taken by the ego to protect it when it suddenly experiences mystery at its inability to communicate its will to its satisfaction and it charges the exoteric script/text with power, remaining ignorant of the symbolic plane. And due to this ignorance, Gematria, Kamea and other exoteric arrangements of letters and numbers are pored over, arranged into squares and rhombuses and so forth in the hopes that such diligence will reveal a perceived secret. There will always be casualties on the LHp [which can quickly become an RHp]: i.e. those that don’t make it intact from the ‘Sruusis-type’ realisation and remain blind to the power of words and to the alien powers of their deceptive host the ego.

In Summary:

Writing is an abstract symbolic expression by the ego to express the incommunicable: or in a magical sense, the esoteric. It is motive in the guise of shape, and if its exoteric representation is mistaken as essence rather than appearance it has performed its tragically deceptive spell-craft. For the aspirant – writing should be seen as a mode of human centred perspective that is obsessed over because of its connection with the Ego: it should not be expected that dissection of symbolic characters in light of this understanding will divulge anything less than this.

THE 23 SYNDROME: NOTES AND PRACTICE

Part of the extreme emphasis and cynicism of form by THEM, of dissolving faith and reliance in the man-made architectural geometries of the physical world, is related to an attempt to try to silence the equivalent of the “inner chatter” of the mind – for the eyes.

To create uncertainty in perception offers the possibility of unhinging or relaxing the focal point of awareness of the being – with the possibility of exploring or experiencing altered states of perception that being anchored concretely to the world via the collectively shared matrix of ones thought with the general consensus does not usually allow.

Projection of concepts such as density, mass, value, name, or time onto objects via practice and habit is a powerful process that fixes many people in stasis and In Time via the sympathetic bond and repetitive cycle that is built by the assumptions made by the mind when processing the ‘E’ or Black Clay (the environment) and informing ones senses via predetermined methods of interpretation. These processes occur via many unconsciously unchecked postulates that determine a certain way of thinking, and as such then require validation. Validation comes either from others reaffirming the consensus or oneself. And in having validation, it adds gravity/solidity to one’s perception of the world through that particular mode at the expense of others.

The Society of the Dark Lily expressed a similar conception using three descriptions of a walk down the street using three completely different sets of focal awareness:

Three Alternate Views

One

Walking down the busy high street, I look at all the aliens. I seem to have landed from another planet, now I walk amidst these people who, it seems, take themselves without a thought of the possibility of a different view of one another. I pretend that I am a visitor from another planet walking amidst a world of humans and so I get a different view. Everything becomes new and unusual, especially the shape of the people.

Two

Inside the shell that is called a body, I can feel the skeleton as it reacts to my unconscious commands. I walk down the high street, my arms swinging, my feet taking steps, my legs working in unison with one another, propelling me forward. I feel the skull beneath the skin and muscle, the backbone that runs up the middle of my back, the bones that serve as the foundation for my fingers, my arms, my legs. I sense my body in a different manner and again, everything becomes new and unusual. Nothing is taken for granted.

Three

I listen to the noises: the thoughts and emotions as they pass through my mind. I am distant from them, but usually they command and I unconsciously obey. For this moment though, I observe: watch, look and listen. A thought that suggests one course of action, an emotion that threatens to sweep me away, but I remain aloof. Is this a first step to the state beyond time and space? The place where the Adept waits for millennia? Where no-one and nothing can cause harm? Where he, or she, becomes immortal?

Three different views on a world where it would seem everything is accepted at face value.

— — — Society of Dark Lily — — —

Carlos Castaneda, SATH, and many other sorcerers agree that the nature of 'second awareness' or dislodging consciousness results in an experience so far removed from fantasy, day dreaming, imagination or wishful manifestation, that it would very likely send one who was unprepared for it mad or jolt them so severely they underwent drastic alchemical change.

I relate to this contrast personally via the experiences I have had with the intellectual and the supernatural world which were so distinct that they coloured my perception and beliefs permanently. Although admittedly a cynic of many things – I firmly believe there is much more to ghosts and demons than the idea of them being mere tools useful for psychological analogy. I have witnessed things that I previously and strenuously believed were not possible or were the sort of thing other people imagined – such as the corner of my bed being pushed down heavily as if something were sitting on it while I was the only one in the room in broad daylight. These sorts of things, even as mild as a ghost sitting on the bed, leave the rational mind with an eerie uneasiness that it would sooner prefer to forget. I was 19 at the time but dared not turn around to see what persistently placed so much pressure on the bed when no-one else was in the house for honest fear that what I saw would rival the nightmares I had seen as a teen. The experience was so odd, so unnatural, that it sent a shiver up my spine that chilled me to the bone as I lay there staring at the wall. I can't forget – that – or a number of other supernatural events that have influenced my particular view of the occult and magic.

I remain a believer that while none of the currently available descriptions, explanations or theories for ghosts, the soul, afterlife, spirit worlds, alternate dimensions satisfy me or do justice to those unsettling and weird happenings – indeed seem weak and decidedly false in comparison to such supernatural events – that there is more to the world, more to ghosts and demons, more to life and to death, than our senses usually comprehend.

The realisation that there exists such distinct and unheard-of altered states that genuinely split perception into a before/after scenario is not unlike the dual perception that drugs such as LSD can bring about – resulting in a love affair with a drug (or drugs) for the heights and new worlds they allow one to reach or access otherwise locked out of perception. Such heights are as much the muse of the artist, the musician and the genius as they are the witch, witch-doctor, tribal chief, devil worshipper or shaman.

One of the naturally occurring heights analogous to an altered state that has inspired so many of the former – with countless leaps and bounds of human ingenuity just 'coming to people' – is dreaming. Yet the function and power of dreaming once historically and culturally revered, esp. as a prophetic tool or gateway to other worlds is in modern times (c.2009) a sadly neglected science and an occult art relegated to the scrapheap as something to be forgotten or treated as the mind's garbage. So much for occult faculties within easy grasp disguised in full view.

Although dreaming is not formally recognised or appreciated by my society – it may be owing to the fact that dreaming is an extremely private experience with the language and use of symbols/metaphors deeply unique to each dreamer that causes so much frustration with any kind of interpretation that causes it to be shunned. However – Dreaming is as close as many people I've talked to seem to get to supernatural/altered state experiences – as many spurn the entheogenic properties possessed by certain drugs or wave away the risks associated with the drug culture. Wherein ritualised settings and implements for sorcery, meaningful incantations and strange or specific geometry, names of entities, demons, angels, gods and djinn, song, dance, trance, chant, frenzy etc can help aid the magician in increasing or channelling the effects of a drug – some drugs need no such help – indeed some drugs can take complete control of the magician – I refer to large doses of strong street LSD, an extra-strength dose of the psilocybin found in mushrooms, but more specifically mescaline/peyote. These types or doses are often to the "societal detriment" of the user – since these substances are so strong they can permanently affect one's perception, and permanently shift ones focal point of awareness so far out from its accustomed position that state sanctioned madness (at least as it appears to others from the outside) results from the deeming of an inability of the user to function 'normally' within society.

Still continuing to expose/involve myself to a vast number of thought systems, alchemical paths, magical methodologies, occasional drugs, short insight roles, face or integrate stimuli that conflicts with my ego, and so on – what has impressed me most as a continuous factor throughout my experiences with thought is my belief that whatever I point my mind at, I breathe life into.

That is to say – that I have sufficiently proven to myself that altered states and in some cases, supernatural experiences, are possible through the agency of the mind alone and a fanatic self-immersion or accepted want of delusion of a form or set of forms – being the equivalent of descending into a personally chosen madness – does not substantiate what I then experience, but it does substantiate that I 'experience' because I have immersed myself. Qv. the 23 Syndrome: Liber 13/13.

I believe that others, pre-loaded with specific concepts and explanations of things such as Time and Space also project these concepts simply because it's part of their programming – or what they have learned and/or chosen to accept to work with and work within. Shared convictions of the world in such a similar way – give rise to specific architecture and interpretations, defining permanence, solidity, validity and reality. If this permanence is deliberately broken somehow – things that were not previously visible, 'believed in' or locked out of perception are more perceivable. I have encountered over the years startling (startling because I have formulated many of my ideas thinking them original only to discover they are not) similarities in the works of others that verge on such a system though it is difficult to determine exactly what is meant and if the context exists for them as it does for THEM in what have often been occult-style garbled references to such a view.

Austin Spare, to cite just one example, appears to have struggled to express something of this line of reasoning in his 'Logomachy of Zos' and to seek to break down the processes of logic and assumption. In one set of insights, he tried to show the other side made pure/raw interactions, language and words instant miscommunications via their own clumsy handling of such purity of expression because of their habit of attaching and reading into what was presented. In realising this – he thus bordering closely on the means to break free of form. But his narrator either did not quite manage to achieve workable practical formula for doing so, or, in expressing perennial emanations of wisdom at a different time – did so in a different way, rhythm, vocabulary and tempo.

I quote here two interesting passages:

“Is the Truth necessary? The need is for our own Truth: lack of integrity makes for sterility and is meaningless. Things more necessary than Truth are expressed through our efforts to render such.”

“There are no conclusive conclusions, yet nothing germinates unless we have, or make, the necessity of arbitrary ‘will-desire-belief’ for a possible image of our ambition.”

Austin neatly expresses two of the many alchemical keys utilised by THEM; the first passage renders the intention by THEM to ‘return people to themselves’ wherein building their personal integrity and foundation requires that anytime someone grabs hold of our work as dogma or semantic authority we must dislodge that grip. This probably makes us appear dis-interested perhaps even stand-offish or arrogant – but it must be. That is the formula that works.

The second passage presages the conviction by THEM that any singularity is a deception, any conclusion creates exclusion – and yet to teach esoteria there must be something visible to allow interaction with the world – in this case, a form, our ‘Temple’ is itself that necessary evil.

I’ll add another one here which amazingly relates a similar set of insights as was dealt with separately without any prior knowledge of Spares work in our essays on the “23 Syndrome” and “An Analysis of Frequency”.

“Words, words, words, however used, whatever they symbolise, request or tell, say more Showing in between the antics of all motives. Yes, word-rendering deals the quickest of deaths to flabby ideas; and also words are the most poignant, suggestive, contagious, substitutive, and lasting means to convey anything. Most deadly virus, most potent abreaction of magic subtlety even your erasures reveal your believing by their persuasive influence and their magic.”

Reading these tracts and the many more startling epithets in Logomachy of Zos I am struck by the similarity of Austin’s insights with our own – as I am continually awakened by the over-arching power and undercurrent of Synchronicity that connects us. Spare also had the same luxury we do of leaning on the terminology of Psychology and seems quite enamoured with the Ego as the place/point from which the world proceeds outward.

It is almost as though THEM's presence existed to re-translate these perennial truths, recorded so many times in so many other places, for a new time using a suitable contemporary reorientation of language those of our time would clearly understand – a message that quintessentially remains unchanged but whose stages of understanding provide a challenge for each generation as that understanding grows. Just as some may one day try to interpret us. Except – I have only just come across the work of Spare – so no deliberate intention for a translation was possible.

Moreover, Spare appears to have shared the view that all of the minutiae that filled the volumes of his books was strictly His – that for all its scope and mass – was yet only His, and just one compression of the unique private experience of being.

Chumbley and Crowley do too – using a quasi-language that sought neither to explain or justify itself to others, calling on all manner of strange words formulas and terms to denote processes and/or things from their perception of the world that had no prior name – or that used such terms to give a common meaning another one.

While beautiful expressions one and all in their own right – my own impressions of such works were like that of modern art – wherein because people did not understand what was written, and it went over their heads, or because they could not understand it because it was so stylised and cryptic as to not to be decipherable but used all manner of poetry, glyphs and quite frankly, nonsense to appear deeper than it actually was – they read into it and made a pretentious song and dance about its awesome merit and genius.

Now, obviously, such cryptic ciphers certainly have their place on another level of the occult in that being undecipherable or possessed of ambiguity they act like Rorschach, tarot or other meditative devices such as the mandala – inciting self-reflection. They also have the added advantage of not clearly saying anything about anyone – which means authorities can easily arise to interpret the content for others – and they also remain perennially interesting because each person can access such devices at any time in their own private way without feeling like a fool. Crowley was more amenable to this than Spare. In one way, this crypticism is the very essence of the occult, as it aptly captures the heart of the matter concerning the struggle between objectivity and subjectivity.

I have continually encountered a desperation to quantify aspects of our Being step by step unto an extremely dissective degree of analysis – Chumbley did it, Dee did it, Aquino, LaVey, Long, IOT, WOT, ONA all passed through this intense stage of self-enquiry and exasperation – wherein the magician second guesses every postulate, fears every assertion, and questions their own authority to assemble the answer with what are always considered to be flawed tools – this is a pattern in the work of many.

It is especially prevalent in the hundreds of young magicians that I have encountered over the decade wherein the maddening frustration to work things out to the nth degree results in volumes of privately deciphered text and correspondences, astonishingly strange diagrams and illustrations of cloaked insights in the unique language and logomachy of the magician. I have boxes of these, myself.

Of course, Spare, like LaVey, Crowley Chumbley or Dee, etc are dead men. Gone from the world and with them any answers. There exists no chance to enquire further of them into what was meant by various phrases in various works or to seek depth/clarity in the expressions they left behind. Perhaps it is a true signification of the Work itself that it leaves such quandaries behind even for those who pursued it with their lives. Like so many before and after them we continue the Great Work with Guess Work. A minute's silence for all the poor mad bastards who laid the foundations for the occult.

Synchronously – Spare appears to have also been concerned with the numinous and even refers directly to an intersection of time and space as a nexion – a terminology that has been behind some of the most influential work of the Order of Nine Angles. In this copy of Logomachy ‘numinous’ is spelled as ‘noumenal’ and a nexion is referred to as ‘nexity’. How long has the Cosmos been attempting to presence this change in consciousness that we are present vessels of?

“time-space is an empirical relativism deriving from our manifold of complete and unsynthesized representations seeking nexity. The unrelated has neither time, space, nor ego.”

In order to return to my previous points regarding an altered state of perception I digress to notes on the results of my encounter with the Angles:

I used to look at a tree for instance, and instantaneously project its life direction or life force as thrusting upward from the ground. Running through my mind what I had been taught about trees – running the program “TREE” at the speed of light – leaves, branches, wood, sap, etc. and with it, my knowledge of how trees grow, that they grow and the innumerable examples I had seen that ‘proved’ all of this. Thus, when I perceived trees I perceived them as growing objects and attached the concept of their life moving upward.

After having my brain fried by the Septenary Way by encountering my personal hell of the meaning and presence of the ‘Angles’ – coupled with my acceptance of relativity; when I looked at a tree (or anything for that matter), I no longer processed it automatically as something solid that was outside of me or separate from me.

It used to be just another stationary inert object that time flowed past/through just as Time and space intersected neatly so that one travelled with the other. But since the Angles – nothing is that nice and simple anymore. In fact, all objects took on a more complex axis like this > * and I could feel the trees energy as coming (and being part of) more than one source – and not just part of the scenery in my perception as an external item which once it and largely everything else was.

The tree was no longer connected to the world as strongly as once it had been – it did not seem to be any more a part of ‘nature’ and causality than I did – but emanated (life) from some secret place of its own.

The angles also broke the convenience of feeling myself to be moving while it was a stationary object – my awareness told me now that it was moving in concert with everything around it – just as I was, and everything else was – shifting all the time. And the tree which had previously informed my sense of one fixed shape and description – i.e. large, covered in bark, standing still – split off to generate a layer of perspectives. Not just on the level that my eyesight could pick up, but with insistence that beneath the bark there was a world seething with insect life, within the trunk and leaves it was groaning with invisible growth spurts and secret alchemies, on smaller diminished scales it was the universe of smaller creatures harbouring microscopic worlds of its own, and yet at the same time just one tree of thousands, a relative part of a much larger landscape and forest.

Moreover, my perception of Time was altered due to the acceptance of the acausal component so that the tree no longer grew nice and simply from one point in time and would finish in another – but now all stages of growth were implicit while at the same time the tree lived its life before my eyes and the landscapes changed as if hundreds of years were passing, or dropping away, throwing my perception back and forth like a rag-doll trying to rationally conclude where in time and space this tree was situated.

My concept of the world has never been simple since the day I found the Angles – all at once things zoom up so I can see them from a great height, zoom in so I can see them as layered in dimension and size pending my own consciousness as a human, smaller and larger than a human... zoom back forward, and even directions lose meaning. “up”, “down”, just weird sounds and syllables that seem rudely out of place and desperately inadequate to explain this maddeningly slippery slideshow.

Time though, time really ruined my mind esp. when the Linear perspective of it was dissolved. See the diagrams in UAE wherein I discovered that not only was the tree growing upward and outward in time simultaneously with me – that is to say, sharing the same time continuum so that we both travelled it at the same time, me getting older as it got older – but somehow space/matter which was on the y axis, while time was on the z axis, were both were travelling toward and away from each other at the same time – yet remained intersected. A conceptual nightmare for my linearly trained mind.

It's nice and easy to go through life with neat convenient postulates that you don't look at too clearly –and get wrapped up in the trials and tribulations of it to keep you busy enough not to ever have to seriously enquire into such foundations. But when these things which people take for granted are no longer accurate or possible – in fact irreparably damaged so that one feels dirty trying to return to them, to deny the expansions and opening of the senses that the magician perhaps foolishly lusts after – it is as though I had become obsolete to the rest of the world and am struggling to cope with the simplistic perceptions other use to govern it. These widening circles of perspective also re-coloured my interactions with people – in some of cases for the worse, in some particular cases, such as understanding how my own mind works – for the better.

None of this altering, zooming, maddening perspective is voluntary – or a gift or skill I can switch on and off – I need no meditation on objects to make them do this – the whole world and its contents have become extremely uncertain for me and all of its visible geometry null in value – and I doubt I can ever again trust or believe it. Now it's as if I look at things beyond the physiological media of my eyes. If this is some side-effect or result of some degree of acausal perception, it is maddening, and I've stayed quite mad from its effect.

I find myself looking beyond things all the time – treating clocks watches etc as something that other people do, like I'm a visitor in the world and the "Time" is something others work to.

My enormous body of work with forms, illusions, dissolving the matrix and other such things is probably a direct result of my personal experience with suddenly breaking part of my mind so that I saw the world in terms of literal angles – very much like a wire-frame.

I tried to encapsulate this 'essence' in the Master card of Archetypia – but nothing static really does justice to the uneasy shifting-ness of the world I now find to be my lot in daily life. Things certainly don't have the permanence they used to – I see whole lives of things sprout grow and rot as they sit in place, the house I live in swallowed by grass and claimed back by trees as some sort of future vision forces the house away and through its path of time more quickly than it ever really should for a normal person – who I'm fairly sure doesn't feel the world is illusory or slipping to and from an unexplainable loop that spatial concepts like external/internal/outer/inner are just hopeless to use to describe it.

If I wasn't me and read some of the things written by the Temple of THEM – I'd certainly think the writers had lost a few marbles. Some of the concepts I believe in or try to explain really are completely mad insofar as they juxtapose what already exists as the status quo in regard to perception.

I don't curse any madness I might have picked up. It's not a happy madness – but neither is it really a sad madness – it is more than anything a deep sense of loneliness and isolation from others and just staring beyond everything that others find joy in. It seems that you have to lose a lot of marbles to go deep – and I've tried where skill had a hand and with a lot of luck to lose only the right ones.

I didn't have inner silence when I found the angles – I hadn't even tried at that stage to quiet the chatter within. In fact, I had a 'religious' experience that left great distaste and embarrassment and anger with me.

But I believe the gradual erosion and eventual disintegration of the concepts that my mind held firm (such as the super-simplifications of linear time and space) was a fundamental step that helped greatly to experience the angles and to achieve unusual insights and ideas. Also, that this process of breaking things down could greatly help as a process of alchemical putrefaction to enable someone to achieve similar or even greater perceptual changes without having to go through the personal anguish and hell that I did to get here. And yet the challenge remains to stay sane enough to continue to form and share coherent retrospective of my journey but still to travel further along it. Perhaps I am the only one to travel this path and come up with these ideas that characterise my work – perhaps I am not tapping into a collective current that others may follow and expand – but am self-deceived in my own delusions of magical progress – but at the end of the rainbow, sanity is over-rated.

Fair enough that my experiences are possibly all in my head – or in no way fit to match the set of descriptions that I've heard a mescaline or peyote trip brings on physically. Using (infrequent) strong doses of mushrooms and LSD does not appear to have been the causal component that led to the vivid hallucinogenic perceptual change of the world that has taken place for me – but LSD was almost certainly the launching pad.

I cite the complete difference that took place in my artwork after my first LSD intake as a drastic example of how deeply this drug may have affected me – but in all fairness I have been involved with others heavily into the drug culture for many years and throughout they nurtured my understanding, respect and made my experiences with such substances more meaningful and spiritually rewarding, acting as guides, than such experiences would probably have been – and my influence from drugs is best disguised as a rich and lengthy tapestry. “Burning holes in my brain”, “opening up neural pathways” these are two of the concepts my entheogenic travellers used to describe to me what was possible with such substances. And no question that they did – and were at least partly responsible for my cynicism of all that I constantly refer to as ‘forms’. A few near-death experiences have added to the spiritual grasp for more to life and the urgency with which I’ve written about it.

All of these and no doubt many other factors have resulted not in a drug-addled delusion but a psychic reintegration and interpretation of the world that is best described as a permanent sense of slight disorientation both spatially and chronologically.

I have the constant feeling I’m between worlds, somehow a ghost travelling through time and alive and vivid – but somehow that I’m also a projection back from a future point in time where I’m already dead.

And I’m only thirty years old – this is heavy baggage to go the rest of the way with.

Damn you ONA! None of this may be real to you, or others, or even for me – it may not even match what is experienced by others who believe they’ve tapped into such things as the acausal or at least are onto the right track – but may be a direct result of the ideas and concepts I have continually washed my brain with.

Uncharacteristically for me, I have not assumed a priori that the acausal or other worlds or states or that which lies in the glimpses of those strange places and happenings of the supernatural – by whatever name – are found subjectively or objectively.

But – what is possibly my own self-delusion could also very well turn out to be the groundwork for a science of reorienting consciousness resulting in acausal perception, or at least a weirdly expanded perception bordering on opening the gateway to the former. Experimentation continues.

A RE-EXAMINATION OF THE AXIOMS OF SCIENTOLOGY

I have decided to re-write the article for a good friend of Anon who recently posted my 2004 article on Scientology so as to make it clearer and stand alone as a separate study that re-introduces my way of thinking to readers interested in criticisms of Scientology rather than require them to have previous extensive familiarity with my current of work regarding deconstruction and forms. I will address each of the Axioms in turn.

Axiom #1. “Life is basically a static. DEFINITION: A life static has no mass, no motion, no wavelength, no location in space or in time. It has the ability to postulate and to perceive.”

Inevitably – all human constructs upon which religion or schemata of life are built up – require a pre-existing anchor point most likely to be grounded on faith in an unknown element of a spiritual or occult nature. The anchor used here is a ‘life static’ – which is essentially a word to denote the pre-conceptual supposition on which everything else is then built. If this element is not supposed – nothing else can be built – so it is first necessary for someone to introduce an abstract that can turn the whole summary of life achieved by someone else’s vision of what it is – into something that can be grasped intellectually and rationally as an idea, by giving it a name and a definition.

The axiom further defines a life static as ‘having no mass, no motion, no wavelength, no location in space or time. It has the ability to postulate and perceive.’ What is happening here? If you can be persuaded to accept the abstract of ‘life static’ you suppose the abstract for yourself as a starting point – and will then read on, adding or attaching further ideas and concepts onto this primary starting block. In order to understand any abstract – you must create something else against which to compare it. The most common example I can give – is space vs. matter. If you suppose space, then in order to define space, you must provide a ‘tension’ or opposite concept against which the first concept can be compared. To explain space, you must also explain the absence of space. This creates a tension of two abstracts that ‘lean’ on each other and validate each other. In this way, they become ‘concrete’ solidified and for all intents and purposes, relied on as real. Whilst abstracts are arguably the only method humans can utilise to understand things – the method is wide open to abuse of every sort owing to the nature of language, how it is used, why it is used, and who uses it for what.

What is then happening here is that after persuading the reader to accept the first postulate of a ‘life static’ – further comparable definitions to define the abstract are loaded onto it. However, Mass, Motion, Wavelength, Space, Time and even ‘no and ‘a’ are also abstracts and unfortunately for all would-be religions, cults, and brain-washers abstracts are ingrained with a trail of hidden suppositions that can tell us exactly how the writer/author actually perceives such things as time and space – which can often be separate from the words written by authors to paint a deceptive picture. This trail can further illuminate the genuine intent of the author who often attempts to cloak that intention with flowery crap, romanticised cliches, ideology, or other types of form designed to persuade a reader to believe what is written is something other than what it really is.

My work involves the concept of forms which are created by the human habit of abstracting the world around them into objects, boundaries, divisions, planes, fields, spaces, and millions upon millions of names for everything and its combinations. I have written at length on several particular subjects in the rest of my work but the main themes that involve this Scientology examination are that the English Language, as the carrier of knowledge, derived from Latin, and Latin was an attempt by the Church to homogenise (make as one) all world languages into one dialect. As a result of this hijacking of language, and because of the very grain of the mentality of the Church, language was distorted and injected with two major things representative of Church mentality: duality and morality.

Duality is basically the idea that things can be divided clearly into opposites. This is such a strong idea that only through comparing one abstract against another can we ever understand our abstractions. We can then treat both abstractions (both of which are illusory and usually just words for an object that summarise the object into very simple terms) as real and build upon them. But human beings require two abstractions in all cases to understand anything – called a ‘tension’ – and this leads to an ingrained oversimplification of perception becoming habitual that is close-minded and believes if something is not ‘a’ it is therefore ‘b’.

Duality is never happy to let ‘ab’ exist. Morality – is a judgemental inclusion in language that makes us habitually add a value to our abstracts, in most cases either a simple polarity of ‘positive’ or ‘negative’, couched within neutral joiners – or at least, seemingly neutral joiners such as ‘the’, ‘a’ and so on. But these little joiners are anything but neutral. They, in tandem with other words, can actually tell us an enormous amount about how the writer perceives the world, the reader, himself, and various topics by unconsciously informing us how they perceive time and space, to what extent they place faith in various forms and concepts, and which concepts they have first supposed to build their case. Often – this information reveals many contradictory facts about the writer’s actual perception and the perception they write about and demonstrates a clear attempt to deceive the reader. This is the case with almost all style of writing from all walks of life.

If I might try to demonstrate further the strength of abstracts, can you explain what a wavelength is without using any words? Can you communicate it to someone else without speaking or writing it down using language? Generally, not. Sign language is silent but still requires the use of language and thus its inbuilt duality and morality which control and manipulate certain suppositions into being. Drawing it requires that the person recognises the symbolic postulate for it, and even if they understand your squiggly line as a 'wavelength' when you show it to them – to understand it they must accept the same notions language requires to be rationally understood. It is impossible to explain a wavelength without relying on others reliance on the solidity of abstraction.

I would at this point urge people to check out my essay 'The Chronobet' which tries to explain how something as simple as the word 'is' informs us a great deal about how a person perceives space by; supposing a singularity exists and therefore supposing 'is not'; (duality); supposing separate or discrete objects or concepts separate from their being exists and therefore that space is at least 3 dimensions and has clear divisions between each object, and supposing a concrete dimension vs. a theoretical dimension or abstract vs. reality, tells us here is a brain that is using words cleverly but is still using exactly the same wire-frame we all use. Etc. This tends to trip up so-called enlightened beings and reveals the author's ego at work, the status quo of perceptive faculties and beliefs being sustained, and nothing remotely transcendental.

One of the more noticeable powers (and dangers) of abstracts is in our automatic reaction when abstractions are presented to us to sift quickly through our mental catalogue (at the speed of light without all) and find an opposite to compare it with the abstract presented. We therefore automatically accept that 'abstraction' is a valid system and support it by not questioning it. This allows many clever tricks of the writer to get through without being challenged. Note also that the concepts used are usually those with great emotional attachment and meaning in them so that the reader recognises a word or concept and automatically starts abstracting out of habit.

In effect we are conditioned, and largely cannot escape, making a dualized and moral-based judgement in every single word and sentence we write. This goes for the Axioms too; by persuading you to accept 'life static' as the grounding base – the writer can then attach further abstracts, explain it through the absence of it, add further definitions, meanings and so on – that appear to say just one thing but really say many things, some of which the writer cannot help but give away.

If someone cleverly uses the right abstracts, they can take us on a very carefully crafted mental journey that creates a certain view or geometry of forms in our heads – which we strengthen – because of the power of our catalogue of opposite abstractions which are there to validate abstractions. Some people refer to this as brainwashing, manipulation, PR, or bullshit; but it is very clever, very powerful stuff that takes advantage of our gullibility, our trust, our senses, our method of perception, our habit of abstraction, and basically preys on many other things humans do all the time we are simply not aware of (for various reasons) that lead us to come to certain conclusions when presented with certain information.

It all begins, when you accept the first abstract ‘life static’ and then agree to attach the subsequent abstractions of meaning and definition of life static and its associated attachments that the writer claims to be at the essence of things. Once you accept that is ‘true’ you accept a whole lot of stuff that goes with it whether you want it or not. To start with, you are not only accepting the abstract ‘life static’ but you are accepting the meaning of ‘is’ which involves a specific orientation and understanding of linear chrono-spatial arrangement to take place for rational understanding, ‘basically’ which supposes degrees of understanding are possible and relies on you accepting that knowledge comes in degrees, as well as suggests that the author is possessed of a more complex explanation, accepts that we can Know at all, that human beings can make accurate and authentic assessments of things. Because this is a postulate, it brings with it many other associations and abstracts we may not have wanted – it suggests a great host of other suppositions about life and how it operates – just on these two words alone.

Then of course you must also accept ‘a’ if you want the sentence to make sense – which is again a suggestion that something can be separate or singular; in effect you are agreeing with the author that time and space is composed in such a manner that time and space exist, exist as a 3d (or 4d) matrix, that it is linear, that objects exist, that our perception of the world as made up of objects is correct – and so on.

There is a lot of this that goes unnoticed, trained as we are to quickly assess things automatically and eventually unconsciously such as this in order to get on with day-to-day life easily and conveniently – especially when reading. Scientology is certainly not alone in taking full advantage of the crippling secret powers of language to control us – since we generally don’t take notice of words like ‘a’ and ‘is’ but tend to focus on unusual terms like ‘life static’ – not the familiar carriers and joiners like ‘the’. But is in ‘the’ and ‘a’ and ‘of’ that the most information about spatial perception is obtained – not in the conscious stream of the ego that tries to convince us it is ‘beyond time’ or some other such thing. There is a lot to all words and a lot of processes to what we are actually doing when we read and accept them – and it is knowledge of this acceptance, which enables others to control and manipulate through clever propaganda by keeping space and time orthodox through the continued esoteric use of these carriers and joiners.

Axiom #2 “ The static is capable of considerations, postulates and opinions.”

An interesting second step. ‘Considerations, Postulates and Opinions’ could quite easily be understood to be three ways of saying one identical thing; these groups of abstracts very often come in threes. There is potential reasoning behind this but perhaps it should be in another essay at another time. Writers often flesh out a weak point by stalling you from noticing that weakness usually because they are unsure (and cannot know) whether you have accepted the first postulate – life static’. The fact is, all the entire structure of subsequent abstracts, ideas, words, terms etc are necessary to give weight to the first abstract ‘life static’ – because when you really get down to it, without words, a writer has nothing and no objective proof of a ‘life static’ – so it is necessary to quickly provide struts or supports for the first flimsy idea by making a geometric prism (prison) of lots of abstracts. Of course, only if you have first accepted their abstract ‘static’ can you then load further abstracts onto it.

What happens when we posit anything is that we automatically have to posit their opposite, and without meaning to, our abstracts are suddenly heavily loaded with innumerable associations and attachments that come with that postulate. If we posit space, we have to have a whole host of other abstracts to explain it – to set off against it. This is precisely what is happening here in these first two axioms. After accepting these two – everything else will follow on by building on this foundation of abstracts weighted with abstracts until you have so many different attachments, meanings and definitions, you essentially build yourself a geometric form, kind of like a metaphorical wire-frame dodecahedron, which because it has so many lines and vertexes, resembles an enclosed shape; if so, we treat it as “real”. Every abstract in that shape is then supported by an equal abstract, until they are all supported by a house of abstracts. But everything else added to the first postulate is also an abstract – and we tend to forget that because of the way we naturally process information dualistically and morally, because that is the instituted way of doing things used by humans for thousands of years.

While the way we talk about time and space may seem extremely varied, words tell a different story to what authors would have us believe, because words are imprisoned in a specific concept of time and space that cannot change unless their context is changed. What really only changes, is the outward form or papier mâché that authors use to cover the very same wire-frame and ingrained perception of time and space that is common to us all. In some cases, it may simply be that an author cannot express the esoteric or occult because words and language as the only carrier are hopelessly trapped in dualism and moralism and can only be interpreted through such windows. This is precisely the single-minded monotheistic mentality of the Church ingrained in our very perception, our very tools of perception, at work.

The human brain is a very powerful machine, it has the power to make anything real; and out of sheer habit and expectation (and even because our society rewards that habit) that is precisely what it does. Cults merely take advantage of this dependency and the power of our reliance on abstracts built into us.

Axiom #3 “Space, energy, objects, form and time are the result of considerations made and/or agreed upon by the static and are perceived solely because the static considers that it can perceive them.”

This is an interesting axiom too. Space, Energy, Form, Time etc are all abstracts. They are names we give to phenomena which we have enshrined as separate phenomena that we believe deserve separate names precisely because of how we view time and space. The strength of Scientology rests not on the particular words and ideas presented; but on the ancient invisible art of postulating a time-honoured perception of space and time that supports and couches all the other concepts suggested without us ever questioning the system they are being couched in.

This entire sentence makes absolutely no sense unless we accept the shared consensus of time, space, form etc that the writer relies on us to postulate with him in order to weight the abstracts for ourselves. The same goes for me writing to you about it – if you don’t process ‘it’ ‘for’ and ‘to’ the same way and make the same unconscious prejudices about space and different divisions of moving through it, separate objects, and so on – you can’t read the sentence, so you invest those words with meaning for me. But Axiom 3 actually contains no value, since it uses abstractions (which are empty postulates unless we fill them with meaning) and says they exist either by our agreement or without it (which is again an empty postulate unless WE fill it with meaning); what is the point of even saying it? This is a popular ‘Zen’ type algorithm used in thousands of texts that attempts to create a mystical contradiction or sense of married harmony (a hierosgamos) by two opposites: but only in word. It is problematic of language that it leads unconsciously to dual type situations such as yes/no, in/out/ with/without to try and express the synergistic (one idea, compared with another, gives rise to a third). This contains no value except that which the reader decides to invest it with.

Since, the author has however provided only a dual-derived solution, ‘it is with our agreement’ – or it is ‘without our agreement’ it is left to the reader to weight the abstract nonsense with their own decision and invest the sentence with meaning- but we will do it dualistically because that is the environment we are immersed in, either/or, yes/no. It is unfortunate, but only natural owing to our method of communication and perception, that very few people will think this hard about the very beginning of their processing of such information and the part they play in allowing it to manipulate them and they play, in manipulating themselves.

We can in this example, see some of the underlying duality in the writer's brain surface here – in the two separate sentences, the writer uses sets of twos, cause and effect. That because something is 'a' it therefore leads to 'b'. Whilst this seems a fairly innocent way of thinking – it hints at a fundamental core belief in many things, and a limited viewpoint comprised of dual-think that is behind all extremely dangerous forms and styles of communication. Given the geometry of hidden concepts that makes up this first trinity of axioms and the ideas and weight and postulates you are being persuaded to accept – the stage is set for increasingly subtle and controlling manipulation... Whilst the concepts here are gentle, you can be sure that as the author gains control by building up his shape within us (creating a literal spell) this dualistic thinking will be used with full stubborn force against his enemies or those who refuse to accept later ideas stubbornly hedged in dual think. You would therefore not be 'ab' but require to be 'a' or 'b'.

Therefore, you would be viewed either as an enemy or a friend of Scientology; and for many cults the 'us and them' distinction is a major element that leads to such furious argument when 'ab' cannot be accepted. Whilst many readers may reject the concept of an actual 'third eye' you will probably have experienced a pleasurable glow or feeling of empowerment when reading something that you believe is profoundly expressive of the truth of things. Potentially my writing has given you this excitement that you are learning something new, some new way to look at things, some secret into the world behind forms – potentially not.

If it has, then this 'glow' is another aspect behind writing that is used to take advantage of you. Great wisdom is to be found in the world, by an aeon of great writers and thinkers that have characterised fundamental basics in the way we think, approach thinking, and gain knowledge, and distil wisdom. What many texts written to elicit a certain reaction do – is tap into these truths, present them on an esoteric (unconscious level) because they give that glow but package their own forms and messages into them. In this way, you are receiving the essential glow from wisdom that underlies the sublime height of understanding by various persons that surfaces again and again throughout time as a pattern or frequency – and thus you listen, it rings true and you take notice, open your eyes and ears and may even be persuaded to believe what is being said because it is a truth.

But it is very easy for someone to take those esoteric truths and introduce their own messages within them, to twist those truths or the carrier method of those truths into their own shapes for their own ends. For instance, having relied on the shared consensus in place regarding time and space (which is in no dimension, basic) that pre-exists in language and the fact that we work with and accept abstracts automatically; it is easy to cite space, time and form for instance, and not have to ‘explain’ them. Because anyone who tries to explain them – simply cannot do any phenomena justice, unless – you – accept and imbue their answer with meaning from your own supply.

And to explain it, they must use abstracts – and then you might ask them to explain those abstracts. Which they will require more abstracts to explain such as ‘which’, ‘they’ ‘will’, ‘require’ and so on. At a certain point it is you who will decide you have found the truth or essence of the thing, settle for a certain combination of words or geometric prism of concepts and that will be that. You will then base all your abstractions about what space is on the set of abstractions you liked most. But abstractions bring you no closer to understanding space, only allow you to distort it into simple manageable chunks in order to process it at your convenience. Scientology is here treating Space, Time and Form as objective, as already existing concepts with clear definitions and meanings; which they do have; but those definitions and meanings are also abstractions and built on a mesh of abstractions; they can be convenient, but they tell us nothing about the phenomena.

Axiom #4 “Space is a viewpoint of dimension.”

In light of what has already been said you can see that; confident they have built a strong foundation of abstractions that support each other to make a base-plate – the author can now proceed to pull abstractions out of anywhere to further provide supports to what has already been supposed. You can see, that ‘space’ and ‘dimension’ are weighted against one another but both are merely abstracts, thus neither can be of the other except in further imaginary abstraction; – you can also see that suppositions have been made by referring to space IS; the concept of singularity is suggested by the author using ‘A’ and further prejudices regarding a belief in linear space and how objects are situated within it – by the authors use of the word ‘OF’.

Again, I’d suggest checking out Chronobet for some more details on how these words suggest a relationship to a perception of time and space and the ramifications or consequences these types of unconscious prejudice tell us about the authors real perceptions beneath his words. The use of these words in such a way is typical of a conformist view ruled by dualism and moralism. That tells us that he is therefore, as trapped as the rest of us in the dual/moral dilemma that imprisons all people because of the way language works and what it suggests. His methods are archaic, as are most attempts to use perennial esoteric truths to couch one’s own egoistic bullshit of a lesser nature and purity; – and can be seen in almost every piece of writing you care to examine – including my own.

Here is an interesting twist. The author began by using the word postulates as a methodology for understanding, as a way that we conceptualise and thus shows he is in agreement with the common understanding of this term. He understands in postulates. But energy is not postulated particles in space, because everything is always a postulate, everything is an abstract. Energy does not somehow exist separate from us as discrete phenomena until we postulate it, it is already and eternally a postulate, as is space, the concept of particles and consisting. What is happening here, is that the idea of postulates as something we do, is being used to claim that there is a constant phenomenon that exists when we use abstraction; or rather, that there is a process involved in creating energy that is somehow brought into being by postulating – but ‘postulating’ is itself an abstract.

The idea that we can project something outward to give rise to something else says a lot about how the author believes time and space operate (which is sadly a mundane and typical understanding with nothing new or remotely interesting to say). The something else is though, still an abstract, the projection is also an abstract, and the author is at least unconsciously suggesting without trying to, how they think space is formed, and where and what its boundaries are. Once again – the author’s ‘energy’ does not consist any more than postulation, particles or space consists – our words create the illusion that there are more than one object in space to be talked about, but there are really none, it is all empty abstraction which we have the choice to validate as real. This is where you decide whether you will be persuaded to believe what the author has crafted, or not.

Axiom 6 Objects consist of grouped particles.

Axiom 7 Time is basically a postulate that space and particles will persist.

Axiom 8 The apparency of time is the change of position of particles in space.

Axiom 9 Change is the primary manifestation of time.

Axiom 10 The highest purpose in the universe is the creation of an effect.

All these axioms rely on abstracts built upon abstracts and for the reader to invest them with meaning, attach them to previous abstracts, and help the author build a geometric prism within the reader by passive acceptance. If you invest any of these words with meaning, then pending the meaning you invest it with, the resulting sentence you ‘understand’ from it will set up a unique condition which bounces abstract against abstract. What is really being said here though – is nothing. It’s just shapes we interpret as letters, letters combined into words, and words we have invested with meaning or allow others to invest with meaning for us; and that can mean emotional investments too. [See, An Analysis of Frequency: Part 1].

At its most reductive level, this is the formation of all texts. Propaganda based texts tell a crafted story that relies on the power of our brains to engage in traditional fantasies used by the human race and interact with its collective method of understanding text, processing it, and influencing how we treat it in such a way as to evoke a certain response from the reader by getting inside the readers head by using ideas familiar to the reader. These keys by which propaganda gain a foothold in the psyche (human mind) are often missed since few people stop to analyse the meaning of the carrier; language as a whole; and focus mainly on the concepts being presented and their loaded reactions to certain words and concepts – not the system that delivers concepts itself. Thus, a great deal is said in the first few sentences of any cult material that says just about all you need to know about it; and luckily for esotericists and cynics like myself, language screams these secrets out in every word it uses and where it uses them. It can't help it.

Knowing just these few methods the authors has employed in the axioms is enough to tear the remaining axioms apart piece by piece and note how abstractions have been heavily relied upon for this essential nonsense to make sense; since looking at the rest of the axioms, only by investing them with meaning (and they are all just empty abstracts using other abstracts to try and weight them down and give the impression of substance) do they mean anything. It is up to me to allow the author to persuade me these words have a meaning or that these concepts are not abstractions but somehow real and objective phenomena rather than merely subjective abstraction common to all propaganda. But since most people don't go this far into what they are actually doing when they use language (for various reasons) it's very easy to fall prey to a timeless tradition of other's spinning bullshit at our expense.

Finally – I believe the author has some connection to the concepts of the perennial philosophy – i.e. that they do have some profound connection to nature and her miracles; but the connection appears to be unconscious (the author uses dualism and moralism and shows all the signs of being as mundane as the rest of us by the way they have used concepts and language to build an abstract ball of illusions) and distorted. There is no new esoteric clarity in the concepts presented which appear clumsy in conception. At no point does the author point out their own geometry in creating or presenting the axioms such as I have attempted to do – and like so many others, therefore expresses intent to rule others with forms, not release them by smashing those forms. This is because at no point does the author appear to understand his own “is-ness” nor share it with any clarity but instead relies on the pre-existing notions that characterise our species way of perception. In esoteric terms or Geo-spatial relations – the author uses the same concepts of 1, 2 and three that typify all human workings and hint at the nature of our psyche. An examination of the axioms will show the weighting of empty abstractions, the concepts of giving sets of three examples, dualism and moralism. This is not the province of Scientology but the province of all human language –most of us do not appear to be aware of it, however, and deal only in the currency of forms.

THE FUNDAMENTALS OF MAGIC, INTERNAL, EXTERNAL, AEONIC, NARRATIVIC AND MYTHIC -ONA & THE TEMPLE OF THEM –

Fundamental to magic is a belief that the phenomenal world of the five senses is incomplete. Magickians believe that we live in a world quite different from the one our five senses show to us – they believe that every living thing possesses, because it is living, certain energies which we as individuals can sense and ‘see’ if we become receptive to them; just as we can become receptive to the effects of symbols and language on ourselves and others to the extent that we can discern the methodology beneath such forms and sometimes, deduce the motivation. This receptiveness is one of the aims of magickal or Occult Initiation – and may be said to involve the individual in becoming aware of the essence of things that is hidden by their outward appearance and this applies to other individuals, as well as ‘things’.

An example of this is the existence of a hidden underlying Narrative being subtly/overtly created around us through various forms and/or suggested by means of a single/multiple literary/visual form(s) such as are used in Propaganda, Media or Networked Messages where multiple reinforcements of a similar message each play a part in a total collaboration to induce individuals to act a certain way. Another example is in the arrangement of a complex set of literary/visual forms that utilise influential devices such as logic, sentiment, precedence, emotion, morality, etc to invoke emotion through Nationalism, Patriotism or Racism, for instance, within the reader/viewer/participant. Recognition of such forms and the forces acting through them on each of us and others, as well as direct practice and assumption of various forms to explore them first-hand enables one to actively see beneath (and thus potentially influence) such presentations rather than merely passively witnessing their parade or being haplessly affected by them.

According to the Septenary Tradition, these “magickal energies” possessed by things and ‘life’ derive from what it is convenient to describe as the acausal – that is, every living entity is a point or region where acausal energies manifest in our causal, phenomenal, universe, the amount and type of this energy being dependant on the type of entity. These acausal energies (which science because it at present deals only with causal entities and energies, cannot describe) may be said to derive from a parallel acausal universe which intersects our causal universe at certain places – these places are deemed ‘Nexions’ and can be anything from a location to a movement, a form, a group or a single individual, for instance.

We as individuals, because we possess the faculty of consciousness, are ‘gates’ to this acausal universe. We possess the (mostly latent) ability to ‘open the gate’ to the acausal which exists within our own psyche to draw from the acausal certain energies, and these energies can and do alter in some way both our own consciousness or other entities/energies which exist in the causal. This “drawing of energies”, and their use, is magick. External magick is the use of such energies, directed by individual desire, to bring about changes in the causal; whilst Internal magick is the use of these energies to bring psychic, internal change. To draw upon such energies it is usually necessary for the individual to use some form of framework or symbolism and techniques of external magick use such symbolism to bring about both apprehension of the energies and their control.

Various systems of symbolism exist – most denoting types of energy by gods, goddesses, spirits or demons. In reality, the actual symbols are only of secondary importance, and a magickian who is following the path to Adeptship will soon discard such symbols/names/descriptions (and thus external magic itself) in favour of apprehending such energies as they are in themselves. In the Septenary tradition however, drawing upon these energies is first done via the ‘Tree of Wyrd’ (via exploration of the seven spheres and the pathways connecting them) and then through the ‘Star Game’. The Tree of Wyrd may be seen as a map of consciousness: both individual (of the psyche) and of those regions other than the individual where the acausal and the causal meet. The symbolism of the spheres and the pathways are the first or Initiated stage of apprehension; beyond lies the abstract apprehension of the Star Game, a complex magical chess-type game designed by Anton Long of ONA that teaches a range of Adepthood skills, chief among them, Abstraction.

Akin to many other Nexions inspired into being by the Order of Nine Angles, the Temple of THEM utilises the ONA’s Tree of Wyrd to create a magical map of Magical/Alchemical Stages/Pathways/Spheres as an authentic Western-Sinister derived device for its Sorceries.

Although a study of the Tree of Wyrd [TOW] would take us too far from our present topic – briefly: it is believed that a system of life based on Seven represented the authentic development of the human psyche and its relationship with the world – a system later disrupted by the distortion of the Septenary Tradition by other races, cultures, ideas, and the deliberate interference of the Magi to take control of the Aeons. It is enough to say, the Tree of Wyrd as revealed by the ONA, has a rich and flexible symbolism capable of representing practical facets of Magick all neatly captured in the Septenary Nonagonal helix of the Tree.

External magic is divided into two forms or types: hermetic and ceremonial. Hermetic magick is basically that involving only one or two individuals whereas ceremonial magick involves more and may be said to be ‘formal’ magick involving specific rituals or rites (usually written down and followed exactly) and an organised Temple/coven or group. In essence, Symbols, names, descriptions, tradition, etc. are only tools to be used to make otherwise invisible magic, visible, in order to fill those vessels intended to execute the magicians will with the necessary alchemy – itself a magical act. A fourth type of Magic specialised in by THEM is that of Narrative or Mythic Magic – wherein, taking elements from both hermetic and ceremonial magick, a small number of initiates involve others without their knowledge in the participation of their magical evocation using strategic manipulations and Mythos.

As the power of stories has proven to hold enormous fascination throughout human history and still does, involving others in an extended magical ‘story’ that offers an alternative to the reigning stories of the Magi is an extraordinarily powerful method of causing Change. Such magic attempts to tap into the current collective human psyche and introduce the fifth dimension of acausality by exploiting the already existing habits and training of those in thrall to the Matrix of Forms built and maintained by the elements known as the Magian – in such a way as to hurry along or trick the reigning perception of participants into supporting the evocation – in effect a detached and infinite ranged type of magic reminiscent of the Wiccan ‘Cone of Power’. With a sustained chant or canto of forms and vibrations keyed to directly effect and alter fundamental tenets of prevailing perception – the collective evocation influences those involved to involve others – thus getting others involved as characters in a living, moving, story moving each aspect of the stage, actors and plot like chess pieces accordingly – through the strategic employment of form.

Such magic externally takes the form of a hybrid between Fascination and Sympathetic magic wherein the most overt form and the form with which we have had the most experience and success is that of creating a Mythos. Unless highly imaginative or a creator themselves – thereby enabling the option of self-expanding one’s choices – people will bounce between those choices/forms offered. It seems unnecessary to state the obvious, but that is why prior to the arrival of ONA parties interested in Satanism gravitated toward the Temple of Set or the Church of Satan.

No-one practiced the ONA – because the ONA didn’t exist for them. And now, long after ONA has become a potential choice, as a Nexion of the ONA the Temple of THEM has arrived to dissect and dissolve the spellbinding power of language, form and illusion. The artists, the creative, the genius are the few that are able to raise the bar of choice – the Rest must be content to follow in Their footsteps. To date – the Temple of THEM has achieved considerable notoriety despite the deliberate absence of convenient handholds such as a recognisable cult symbol [As of mid-2011, we have since revealed one as we move to implement the second stage of our assault] a recourse to popular occult symbols and methodology, morality, reliance on accepting general notions or an openly expressed mission in the typical vein of darkness for its initiates to gravitate toward.

Yet it has risen to occupy a seat on a National Stage despite the absence of a laid-out system of ritual, magical-based symbology or table of correspondences for others to work their way through – relying on its powerful Narrative Magic alone. Instead of working with the appearances and forms that are manifest by various energies, i.e. investing meaning into particular symbols and forms – we rely directly on communing with the currents of Synchronicity, Empathy, Integrity, Solidarity – abstract words that denote these energies – but more accurately represent the core and essence which all the former and gross tools and representations of magic are built from or which all the former representations of magic (ritual, symbology, associations et al.) are built for. Such energies are notably separate in apprehension as they are than when they are artificially yoked into consciousness via a dazzling array of arguably unnecessary forms and often cause extreme disruption when employed, as has been illustrated many times by the Temple of THEM's members.

It is not practical nor possible to discard all Forms in the early stages of an Initiates development as stripping away such notions requires long-term dedicated effort and the creation of a special substitute Matrix to prevent one going mad or causing extreme damage to one's psychic entities and make-up. Whilst forms enslave and entrap us – Nevertheless, mired in the labyrinth of forms set up to ensnare and subdue us over the Aeons – is where we all begin the Great Work. As an early way of working with and exploring various energies attributed by abstraction to the planets used to loosely equate the raw memes – the aforementioned Tree of Wyrd is a masterpiece. It also has the ability, like the pentagram, through no intention of its own, to take someone on a specific guided journey merely via its suggestive shape and the context in which it is presented.

Why/How? Such an enquiry requires asking some crucial questions: Why is it that human beings necessitate Abstracts? Why is it that Initiates begin their path by investing time, effort and faith in such concepts as the Star Game, Culling [Sacrificial Taking of Life], Aeonics [The view that Magical events unfold over vast amounts of time and can be controlled by Adepts] or for that matter, believe in Concepts in general? Why is it that ONA Initiates the world over follow and accept the guidelines given through the teachings of the ONA or that Setians strive to abide by the complex religious instructions of the Setian Priesthood given in the Onyx Tablet or that Laveyans dutifully copy and repeat the litanies, rituals and satanic points laid down in the Satanic Bible?

of living to such an extent that Forms have the power to incite the basest or most sublime of human reparations and representations? A symbol can take on such power that its mere presence can enrage/inspire a people so greatly that the world is set to burn (The Swastika)– or can likewise be invested with such numinous power as to enrapture them to such a state they achieve rare heights of collective brilliance co-operation and genius (the Moon Landing / Mars Mission which gave us the psyche-bending image of Earth from space.)

Likewise, laws and regulations, even the most absurd and unjust of them can be self-enforced via a steady stream of words alone through perceived authority. Yet many of us live unequivocally with no knowledge of who we are, where we come from, or where we are going either individually or as a collective – trusting in the presence of familiar forms and stories to make sense of life’s enigmas and to guide us. How is it that Abstractions have taken on such validity, solidity, integrity to affect us the way they do? For this is precisely what they are and what they do. Such enquiries lead us into the fundamental apprehensions and special interests of the Temple of THEM – wherein a number of hammers are necessary to break through to the other side. Our myriad efforts represent those Hammers.

As each Nexion of the ONA, THEM included, specialises in taking its own approach that assists in some way in the Destruction of the Magian we too have our approach which is many approaches. Our various tendrils include: (1) The Black Glyph Society which hosts, archives and preserves those Dark Paths and Scripts capable of causing massive change through their implementation and highly valued as tools in our Occult War which it distributes world-wide; (2) Mvimaedivm WordPress which disseminates our writings freely to alter or at least challenge reigning perceptions and also acts as a connective gateway to other Nexions; (3) The Sinister 101 Syndicate which forum further attempts to break down and destroy various reigning concepts as well as host variants of non-dualist non-Abrahamic systems and enable the True Black Magickian to emerge from themselves (4) Our six-fold variants of Sorcery practiced by each member of THEM covering a diverse range of approaches including Chaos, Neuro-Linguistic, Earth-Bound and Narrative (5) Our support and assistance in training new Initiates, communing and colluding with other Nexions and the presentiment of a United Front against Our Enemies.

Through these [and other] approaches/tendrils we seek to disrupt the comfortable thinking and automatic programming of the human being, to incite realisations of Form and its power over us – to ultimately, REMIND you that are a unique being who has been shackled by the forms and architecture of an ancient tradition of making slaves of newcomers to Earth and that it is your every power as a free organism to experience Earth as you see fit. Through these approaches we seek to shatter the Geometry of the Matrix in an explosion of brilliant shards, setting minds free from domination by forms and bringing yet another piece of the Magian prison crashing to the ground. By Our own reckoning – the Intellect is a diamond that projects a laser. Pending on the adjustments made to the setting of the diamond, the arc and range of the laser can be narrowed or widened. A narrow laser is able to cut through the hardest substances whilst a widened laser is capable of projecting complex holograms of multi-dimensional representation. The magnificent prisms that are formed via the various lasers of a collective of Intellects – can, through careful tilting of the individual prisms – be concentrated into a laser of such intensity that it cuts through time and space, but especially time.

The Temple has viewed each of its individual works (each manuscript) as a tool to make an adjustment to existing prisms in the Matrix – adding tilt to each individual diamond or collective prism in a calculated attempt to engineer the construction of a gateway. Wherein the term gateway is descriptive, it is inaccurate, denoting a doorway of some sort – wherein the gateway we intend is actually the collapse of Reality and its forms. The premise is that the lasers in a collective diamond prism can be turned in on themselves causing a collapse of the total hologram. To do this requires that the logical functions and courses of action and reaction of each individual diamond in the collective prism be re-oriented to direct their laser either inward all at once – or toward a singular point. The concentration of the collective lasers at a singular point cancels them out and causes the collapse of the Matrix – this can be equated to a sudden mass realisation experienced by large amounts of people who then refuse to sustain a form and give it any power.

One example of this is the economic realisation of the ultimate power of the US Dollar which among other things funds (funded) the annual $650 billion-dollar military machine of the US which became the focus of the European Union to displace by creating a new currency to remove much of that dominant power. The collapse of the total hologram is the equivalent of opening a ‘Gateway’ to another world usually hidden from view by the ceaseless projection of holograms. The ceaseless projection of holograms – of collective belief – of so many minds focused on holding up the same or similar worldview, perception fixes the image of the world in place. A collapse is the equivalent of “mass psychic disruption”. This collapse can be made to occur on a cultural as well as an individual level – though it will undoubtedly take time, two decades of which THEM has already devoted to achieving and only grows more determined with each passing day. Although this theory might sound convoluted – this is a brief way to explain Our Grand Work and the purpose of dozens of our manuscripts specially tailored to ‘disrupt’ “normal” thought and action processing in an individual or group by playing on weaknesses or appealing to strengths in existing forms. Understanding/Recognising and seeing through the context of Forms is key to winning the Occult War, Music just as Crucial and the ability to show others how to collapse Forms, Absolutely Key. Both internal and external – the collapse of Form is a means to presence the Dark Ones with all that entails, Chaos, and Beyond...

NARRATIVE MAGIC or OROMANCY

Unlike the basis for External, Internal, Aeon, Sexual magicks – the basis for Narrative magick lacks a solid foundation for explaining its method – being still in the stages of active development, experiment and enquiry by the Temple of THEM. However, some of the theory behind this approach can be divulged, if only in brief at this point in time. Narrative Magick deals with the building blocks utilised not just by the ONA but the entire Empire of the Magian and all humanity for that matter in the way of Form and explores the theory and context as to why Form is responsible for the tremendous power, influence, and domination it has over humanity via a warped tradition of perception and interpretation.

It being no secret that THEM view the presence of the Order of Nine Angles, its Septenary Way and the manuscripts that populate it as a unitary form of Grand Black Magic designed to infiltrate the collective consciousness and cause it to aid the will of Anton Long – this Introduction touches more deeply on how such forms collectively act in the service of a higher magic of human ingenuity by crafting a story or mythos of narrative magic for others to follow and champion – thereby generating fanatical devotion and increasing the number of characters involved in the mythos's narrative, nurturing others to live out that narrative via the props provided, and use such narrative to create subtle and overt changes in the Matrix. Such changes can culminate in the creation of one form of the fabled Diamond Body. “Narrative magick” or “Oromancy” as coined by the Temple, pertains to an acknowledgement, and interest, in the existence (persistence) of a story-like quality inherent in a single or multiple set of forms that is partly conscious and partly unconscious and possesses the power to affect human beings directly.

The conscious aspect of narrative magic exists in the continuum of a particular set of forms forming a suitable platform or stage upon which certain archetypal resonances can be comfortably projected by an individual or group, and a reciprocal projection received. That is not to say that an individual will necessarily be conscious that s/he is being utilised as part of a magickal story (that is not necessary), but rather that because of the power invested in forms collectively by the human race, the necessary conditions created for a being to want to invest time and energy in being a part of the ‘story’ being presented (narrated) can be made ‘visible’, not only to the individual, but to the collective. The conscious aspect works on the adage – “if you build it – THEY will come.”

The unconscious aspect of narrative magick is rather more mysterious and a rational analysis can be said to be most difficult if not largely impossible due to inaccessibility to the collective unconscious psyche. However – it is a fact – that stories and mythos – play an extremely vital role in the perception and reaction of humanity. Few stories have motivated humanity more than those of creation – the Eddas, the Bhagadvita, the Koran, the Bible, for instance are strong examples of narrative magic that seek to provide direction and a moral compass, a praxis and a Weltanschauung for humanity. These and many other examples of Creation and End Time stories have survived, some for thousands of years, through the living of their Narrative by hundreds of generations of avid listeners and worshippers caught up in the power of their respective Mythos.

Even today, more than two thousand years later – the Mythos of Buddha, of Mohamed, of Jesus, lives on in the hearts and minds of billions of believers, motivated by the Word that compels them live their life for such a reason, in such a way. No one can refute the tremendous power of religion nor its little brother politics – a younger and less archaic form of narrative – but one which has demonstrated it too has tremendous power to manipulate the lives of people and to use that power to cement forms into being or smash them out of existence, time and time again. To bring us closer to home we spoke of the Mythos of the Illuminati in Oto Anorha #31 being a chance occurrence that propelled a humble gesture in the throes of sulphur in the 1700's into the annals of history as the single most powerful expression to describe the ultimate collective sinister conspiracy. The human imagination is a wondrous thing, a dangerous thing, but a wondrous thing all the same. Again, even closer to our current era we can cite the Order of Nine Angles, a British Satanic organisation that has brilliantly recreated the wave of speculation, paranoia, and wild theory reminiscent of the Illuminati – a wave that has gathered momentum for fifty years and has broken on many shores of the world.

For all their actual power, reach, wisdom, and truth, whether Religion, Politics, Secret Organisations, or a Garage Sale – without others adding to the story, without others 'reading' or being absorbed by the Mythos/Forms being unfolded – the Mythos fades into obscurity. There are countless examples of attempts to start secret societies that have failed because of a lack of the Mythos being picked up and carried away on the lips as reputation. Jung – believes that the rise to individual power is reciprocal – in that the collective must desire the individual to assume the role as an individual separate from the collective for such a relationship to work.

To encourage this relationship artificially where resistance is met usually involves propaganda and the persuasion of the people. The failure of varied temples and orders, even in my short lifetime with the occult of eighteen years, appears to be regularly due to the collective resistance of an idea that is presented out of time, that is, asynchronously with the needs of the collective psyche at that moment of collective development. The make-or-break elements of a successful formation appear to rely on such key characteristics as synchronicity, solidarity, proximity, and a message con-gruous with Time. If one is able to tap into the collective messages being given by the unconscious collective psyche – to discern the particular push being given from beneath or beyond, by deduction – one can theoretically ride that wave – provided one is in sync with it and does not attempt to subvert the natural process. This synchronicity with what THEM refers to as the Acausal Voice, does not suit many forms – for the propensity of humans seeking control via form and mythos does not usually function on altruism selflessness or a desire to presence the will of the cosmos – and the collective unconscious is its own law and its own Physis working independently of the consciousness. As dreaming shows us – the messages of the collective psyche are mostly in contradiction to the current psychic conscious state of humanity and are as hard to swallow as they are to hear.

Narrative magick involves an individual assessment insofar as it is possible to assess such a scope, of the present and emerging signs of the individual and collective psyche on a national scale – using such means as the appearance of the architecture, the disposition or attitude, level of perception, level of technology, economic, social and racial factors, political climate, and to a great extent, media. For today, it is media and the forms of technology that carry the media – (behold the information age!) – that are the equivalent of the oral storytellers of myth and magic and story and for that role they receive worship and adoration for the fire-side tales they weave. And because such stories still derive from the collective unconscious – pushing through in archetypal resonances and archetypes, dreams, visions, and forms – they form patterns in a synchronous fashion expressing a similar archetypal message in any variety of forms. This form of magick also utilises a derivative of the ancient belief in the micro-cosmos and macro-cosmos being reflections of and in the other – though not to such an extent that the two are believed to represent a mirror-image. It could also be called a type of sympathetic magic, akin to as above so below, wherein creating a certain alchemical change within the individual naturally has an effect on the outer world, with the potential for a knock-on effect and the re-effecting of the individual.

It was believed that the ONA, in challenging the Tos/Cos and other contemporary Satanic groups at the time, were setting up an alternate and Sinister mythos, deliberately and consciously – see for instance the 1970-80 “Book of Wyrd” – wherein this legendary relic was consciously devised to be a ‘teaser’ or a lure on behalf of the ONA Mythos to draw interest, intrigue and talk. This great example of a form being used in an act of narrative magick would lead to a divergent strain of Satanism that made conscious – not just for the few who traditionally/historically tried to deceive the masses with lies, omissions, half-truths, fantastic stories etc to create their deceptions – but for the masses, the possibility of creating a deliberate mythos, and the possibility that a deliberate mythos has been created out of thin air. This intriguing development would be hinted at again and again in ONA mss, but it was through the work of THEM that it was finally revealed clearly without mystification to a much wider and eventually attentive audience. While others argued over whether certain aspects of the Order were real or invention – and some concluded rightly that the validity of the Tradition was unique and lay outside of classical measures such as real-time existence – THEM went further and broke down its observations of the tremendous power the ONA had seized in its deliberate creation of a Mythos. We set about studying its forms in general and Form in particular. This was around 2003.

The experimental stages of the Temple (GBA-A) proved two things conclusively:

a) That it was entirely possible to replicate the power and prestige of the ONA via media and propaganda alone, but b) That a Mythos could not be written/weaved and sustained by conscious intention and imagination alone – there had to be other elements involved such as deliberate communion with the unconscious, alchemical work, and the participation of the magical workers within such a Mythos in a real-life way. One could not fake insight, nor did insight come in its natural and unexpected fashion of clarity without direct involvement in living a certain way. Without that insight – without that connexion to the unconscious world psyche – the forms generated were pale and hollow. A direct connexion to the collective psyche is necessary for the imbuing of forms with the numinous pull – the desire in others to want to manifest them – that so characterises the ONA's work.

However – another important aspect of Narrative magick – is to ‘control the story’ or to capture the idea in dramatic theatrical terms – ‘direct the actors’ within the play. Form plays a crucial part in this, for if one is trying to introduce the means to re-direct a current presenting itself in the here and now; it is not always enough to present a good argument for one's case. It is considered a general rule that while people are clinically unpredictable, when they communicate via various forms of media, they do try to be logical – and logic quickly draws a circle around the contents to be logicized in order to form their train of thoughts. Because of this habit – people generally restrict their discussion to the relevant topic using the content provided as cues for what is appropriate – and ‘stick to the subject’ – as it were.

However, Time, and the status quo of all that it encompasses, is often at odds with new ideas, and new ideas often go by the wayside due to lack of interest and especially – a lack of involvement by others in those ideas (relating back to the necessity of others to be captured by form for it to live). It is especially true that it merely takes one or two other people to express interest in something and others will naturally follow – first out of curiosity – and secondly out of habit. However, someone taking an interest does not guarantee the lifespan of an idea – a forms life requires constant nurturing until it reaches a critical mass. It can also be a matter of frustration that the ‘right questions’ are not being asked that would lead to a certain collective viewpoint being achieved by the group – this is most often the case when someone is trying to present something ahead of, or, out of time, with the current era and its particular set(s) of noetic characteristics. In such cases, an individual conducting narrative magick can provide that interest themselves by creating a second or even multiple anonymous personas to engage in discussing the topic, thus raising two walls or forms at the opposite ends of the idea, trapping or restricting the topic and the circle around which others will draw their logic in their attempt to join in -to the relevant narrative. With the creation of enough 'closed circuits' – or people manipulated into talking about a form – it can reach critical mass – by which is meant the point where less and less of one's own narrative magick is required to keep the form afloat and functional – but the form continues to perpetually replicate.

The new form – presents an alternate choice, a divergence from the norm – at least for a while where most forms are concerned – but if taking its cues from the collective unconscious – it is possible that a form could arise that has all the power and duration of a thermodynamic explosion. And by this is meant the possibility for great and wondrous leaps in perception, understanding and wisdom on a collective level – but also the terrifying raw power of the unconscious to be mishandled, misunderstood, and incinerate those attempting to usurp it.

The Temple of THEM cannot with any sagacity predict the outcome of its main and many side-experiments with the collective psyche on the collective mass – this is unmapped and dangerous territory, especially since with our arising, such an approach to magick may become 'popular' with others trying to emulate us in some fashion or another (as humans are wont to do) – and a large number of people performing similar experimentation has the potential to wreak terrific collective and individual psychic harm. [–“Whose Word is Chaos”-] (This is another reason why the Temple has only a thirty-year charter.)

As stated, – the known aim of the Temple of THEM is to give Australia a significant Sinister History. It is moot to argue for the power of the word or of one individual to affect a nation. I could cite a hundred examples throughout history of men and women who have made a significant difference to the world through lone action or inaction (fate is fickle!). But I choose to cite Veronica Guerin, the famous Irish reporter who was shot to death on the Naas road in Dublin for her attempts to expose those saturating Ireland with heroin in the 1990's. Veronica was the only woman (read person) brave enough to stand up to the dealers, even after she was savagely beaten, shot and threatened – she continued to doggedly pursue leads and publish inflammatory articles in the paper in her quest to save the kids of Ireland from the heroin epidemic – all the while knowing in her heart it was only a matter of time before she was to suffer the consequences of her exposes. Her writing and her death galvanised the entire country to oust the dealers from Ireland and form new anti-drug legislation. Keep in mind that it was only in 1996 that the first Irishman went into a witness protection program – prior to that, i.e., dating from the very birth of Ireland; you were on your own. The Irish are a hard people.

Lastly, the conditions for narrative magic appear to require a period of implementation, execution, and narration spanning more than a decade, and at least thirty years (why this number is relevant will be discussed at a later time) – placing the category somewhere between the level of discipline required of an Internal Adept and the Aeonic Magic of a Magus. This is not unnatural – The Sinister is not, for any of THEM, a choice, but a calling. What we are attempting to do is beyond the scope and patience of more than half of the dilettantes we have met that expressed any interest in Satanism – and like Myatt we are loyal to an Acausal Voice and an Aeonic Vision.

Through the infectious telling of a story, are others inspired to perform External, Internal and Aeonic magic. Through the contagion of archetypes are others inspired to give their lives for a cause, wage wars in the name of justice or war, kill to honour and glorify a god, observe customs thousands of years old. Through the power of mythos – does the world run its course – a course affected directly by the choice of Mythos available...

INTRUSION, SYNCHRONICITY, SORCERY AND DARK LANTERNS

Advanced Notes on Intrusion and the Secrets of the Temple of THEM.

For Amy B

Carl Jung was fascinated with the divinatory concept of the Chinese I-Ching and the unerring ability for random coin throws or yarrow stalks to select an appropriate hexagram from among the 64, every time. Wherein, appropriate meant in some way extremely pertinent and meaningful in it among all other options being selected, and in a superior way suitable to the situation at hand. Jung was intrinsically seizing upon the feeling that lies between the lightning rod of possibility through a divinatory tool to isolate one future from the infinite, and the numinous charge of revealing the unknown through an arcane power.

Divination tools are not invested with power by the user, they are already deemed to have it as a conduit to another realm, an acausal realm of spirits, gods, supernatural forces, destiny, fate or energy; or the often more magically jaded but no less mystical concept of the subconscious. The Tarot Reader reads the cards, like a priest determines the word of God; neither are the power, just a channel through which the power flows.

Consider an event that Has already taken place for you and is in the past. Now observe what you feel when I ask you to divinate for it – using Tarot, I-Ching, Runes etc. It's already happened you say, I can't do a divination for what has already happened, I already know what happened. Do it any way. Feel. Because you'll find that none of the tool's work. And because, like many first-hand experiences I ask my readers to engage in, there is an illustrative point to it further below. The numinous energy that charges them is missing. You can feel it's absence. You know that regardless of what you turn over, or cast, it has no power. That is, no numinosity. There is no electrical tingle in the air because there is no unknown, nothing to divine, reveal, expose, or derive power from as a human conduit of the energy that makes us to value the tools in the first place.

That's no surprise you say, these tools are for predicting the future. Yes, they are, but let's ask, why is there no power in using them for something that has already happened – Why do they lie dead, inert?

It is because we do not and cannot know the outcome of an event that has yet to pass. This seems obvious – but why does it seem obvious? Because of a fixed belief in the direction of time. Somehow, while the present cannot be used to tell the past, which has Been – the present can be used to tell the future, which has not been. Curiously, evidence that has existed or exists is less useful than potential that does not.

Yet, Synchronicity, works in reverse.

Jung, discussing synchronicity, rightly, determined that the success of correctly identifying objective causative links occurring in the past that contributed to the creation of the present was a dubious prospect. Firstly, the events are distorted by our proprietary filter (Unique Perception) wherein any hope of determining the authentic causative coincidence of events relies on:

- a) our selective conscious apprehension or what we noticed as significant that forms the catalogue from where we select
- b) our penchant to see what we want to see and force out what we don't (The 23 Syndrome), and
- c) an expectation of linear time as an existing force or ether in which events take place and a stream by which they are in some way connected to one another.

It is only when Synchronicity illuminates us with a bright flash that we feel compelled to hunt for clues we failed to recognise prior. And we often do so because synchronicity is often such an unlikely, even impossible happenstance that we have trouble believing it could have happened without a series of coinciding events contributing to its arrival, however strange.

In searching for the time-space lines that we assume had to have happened to bring about a synchronous event we scan the dark, trying to identify the mysterious chain of dark lanterns; where we recognise with a flash, that moments that seemed innocuous in isolation, when seen in tandem with others, illuminate in a ripple, lighting up the darkness from the past to the present like a winding snake. Via these eureka moments, upon retrospective searching we believe we can see the true or alternate significance of past events as critical elements leading up to a given moment. It is as if, or rather, it is, there is a pattern; a path of way markers supplied at critical junctures as experience, that while meaningful, meaningless, or respectively both, on their own are so discrete in design there could in no way be a prediction from them forward. That is, there is no pattern at the time, partly because events and experiences come one at a time in the moment and have a meaning of their own, and without being able to see a sequence of them in the rear view of retrospective, impossible for us to determine that they could lead to the synchronistic future outcome from whence we look back. Dark, over time and space, these Lanterns can span from the beginning of our life to its end, and all points in between. They manifest in chronological order as often as they do, out of order – wherein it is our unique filter that selects them as responsible as the specific causative agents that conspired to bring some later event to fruition. What is curious about Dark Lanterns is their innocuous darkness. Until they light up, we do not know they had meaning. Yet every moment, may be one. Even, as all of this process is at the mercy of memory.

It suggests, a series of events that had to happen first, for a later outcome to occur. For instance, it was only through building the Temple of THEM in 2006, that the ASOV was formed in 2014, with an appreciation for synchronicity due to the founder reading Jung in early 2000, wherein a shooting star low, large and bright enough to light up the ground during a talk on the stars at one of its meets in 2015 on a dormant volcano summit chosen for its proximity to those involved, astounded all present at the odds of such a thing occurring. If none of those previous things had happened, the ASOV would not have formed, a star talk would not have been required on that mountain, and we would not have been there to see the starlight. Extraordinary odds played out over the course of the ASOV and the Temple; the Temple being strong advocates of the power and existence of Synchronicity as a current of THEM. Indeed, One's of THEM believe themselves to be a natural envoy of the acausal voice; an entity created to serve a specific will toward evolution in a specific way; guided by chance and signs that they are on the right path. Or signs to warn them when they have strayed from it. It is believed following this path, gives extraordinary power to the life of those Individuals and a rich tapestry of connected, often seemingly impossible events, will unfold from their allegiance.

For further instance, in meeting one of the adherents (A) they mentioned a first name to me (B). A name I immediately recognised and guessed at the last name of which turned out to be correct. It came out that (B) had been sold a book by (A) just a week earlier, and I had just met (B) without anyone knowing anyone else, and of all the possible people in Victoria that I could have been in contact with (and was) these two strangers had been in contact. In just another incident, arriving to pick up one of the members, we just so happened to be following the exact bus at the exact time they were on it and pulled up behind the bus much to their surprise, and ours. Thousands, of such extraordinary synchronistic events have happened to me in my lifetime, possibly tens of thousands. My life is characterised by them. And in most cases, such portents have been considered good fortune, the results of intentional magic, or the curious machinations of the gods.

Did it 'just so happen'? Co-incidence, or coincidence often doesn't get the gravitas it deserves. It's said that coincidence is chance, chance is random, and therefore probability – and there are all sorts of methods for determining the probability of these sorts of odd connections happening. I dismiss them all and give each event a 50/50 chance. It either happens or it doesn't – at least, it's that binary on our discernible plane. Traditional Synchronicity concerns itself with not whether it happens but how. But it's not necessary to know 'how', in order to invite, increase, and incorporate synchronicity.

THE POWER OF SORCERY DOES NOT LIE WITH OBJECTIVE REALITY

The rational part of perception is of little use in Sorcery. What matters is not to try to bend objective reality through objective reality; but to employ subjective reality to bend objective reality. The order is important, so the results are indistinguishable from counter-factual interference, i.e., wondering what would have happened if I had Not performed this act? Would the magic (change) have occurred?

If we are guided by destiny, or a sense of greater purpose, or a feeling that we are being attended by something – or perhaps living a karmic cycle, or reincarnation, or a mission, or a feeling that our life is meant to mean something; we are more likely to try to connect the past to the present; to help us understand why we feel what we feel, what shaped us, how, where, when, why. Moments of realisation, where connections are made that chain together and act as a conduit for a lightning bolt to hit us with aha moments. But only when we look back, can we see those connections and find a sporadic history of dark lanterns now glowing brightly in a joined string stretching from the distant past to our immediate moment of being. Only then, can we see them through ‘logical’ sifting of the likely culprits of cause and effect. Yet, if All moments are potential dark lanterns, and they are, – then all moments are cascading toward the present from our past, and all are responsible for Synchronicity – not just those we selectively designate. And not as dark lanterns, but a field, an unbroken chamber of force.

If there are signs, such as synchronicity, and they point Toward arrangements in the past, then it implies a path where the the past controls the present, where signs suggest a path of which we are always at the end, forever on the edge of the outcome of previous steps. A path with signs that lead from and then toward a way, into shining synchronous events we are too small and too close to our life to see unfolding. This suggests there to be a path (more accurately, a circuit), and that synchronicity is an integral part of it – therefore suggesting a lack of synchronicity indicative of something wrong, or late, of having no awareness of such lanterns that light the way with their darkness.

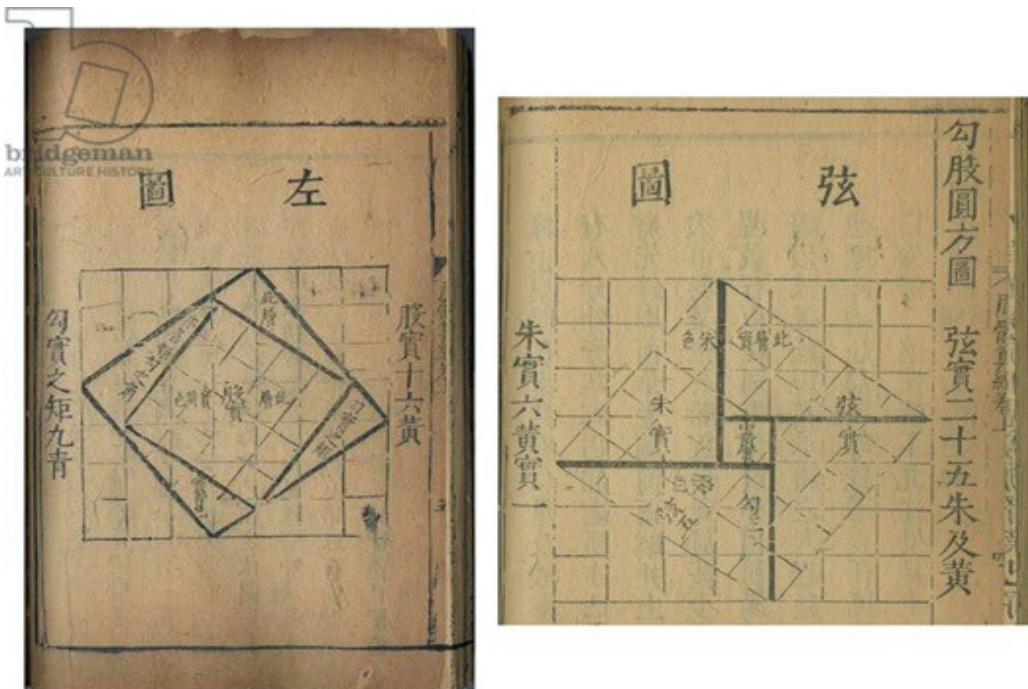

The arms of the Thrasz indicate discrete points in time, perpendicular and parallel to awareness; a whirling fury of our dark lanterns that are consummate in increasing consciousness of forces that lead to forms (that lead to forces, that lead to forms, that lead to forces etc...)

This insight, and practice is critical in manifesting THEM in our plane. The WESTERN ideas we have of time, divination, synchronicity and their interaction are flawed – but like that clumsy artifice ‘mathematics’ we stumble along with them pretending not to notice they limp when they walk.

How is it that Tarot, I-Ching, Runes etc. cannot divine the past, are also not expected to, and are used to predict the future; but Synchronicity, requires divining the past, in order to justify the present? Especially, when, Synchronicity is how Tarot, I-Ching, Runes etc. work?

Now that I have written this manuscript, where to me is it in time vs. where it is to you? Is it in my past, present or future? And if it is any of those to me, where is it for me, to you? Am I and my text with our own perception of time, dragged from my timeline into yours? Does your timeline force mine to abandon its relativity for yours to drag the All into your present? Have I been here in my present, which is now Past, waiting for you in your Future to arrive, and which is now your Present? How can my Past simultaneously be your Future? And if you read this paragraph again, what then? Is it waiting for you to re-read it in the Future which you perceive as your Present, and is reading it again now situated in the Past or Future? Or is it always the Present? If, that is so, time is not linear, it is relative. And it is so. If you are reading this, in my Present (Your Past), I intended Your Future (Your Present). If Time is linear, how can my Present in the Past, be Your Future in the Present? Chart it. But enough, while logic can be utilised in magic, logic is not magic and to play with it is just the yawning of the door.

Above: Illustration of a Chinese dissection proof of the Gōugǔ Rule (Pythagorean Theorem) from the Zhoubi suanjing (Arithmetical Classic of the Gnomon and the Circular Paths of Heaven), a book on astronomy and mathematics dated to approximately 100 BCE. This image is from a copy printed in 1603. (Source: Mathematical Treasures – Zhoubi suanjing, MAA Convergence); China: Page from a 16th century Ming dynasty edition of the ‘Jiuzhang suanshu’ (Nine Chapters on the Mathematical Arts) Our symbol, the Thrasz, is eldritch –

Dated to 100 BCE, we see the Chinese instinctively utilise particular, symbolic forms to solve mathematical problems. Therein is exhibited an instinct honed on parallelism to nature's chthonic core; for mathematics is mere magic. Moreover, what greater problem is there to solve if not Man's existential dilemma of separation from the Gods, and in its rawest form the Chinese etched the gate. Note the void or gate formed by the convergence of angles in the rightmost fig, and the Centrifugal Spin in the leftmost fig. For the Thrasz: [Relativity of Space-Time adds the curve in the arms, while Chaos/Quantum imparts the outward-curving tips of the tendrils denoting 'ahuman' affairs].

“So, all these symbolic references to the meeting of those two worlds seem to show that the world of time and the world of acausal orderedness outside time, are two incompatible systems that cannot be put together but are complementary. They are, that is, more than complementary they are incompatible and we cannot imagine how they are linked to each other, which is probably also the reason why we cannot establish any law of synchronicity, for then the wheels would have to be coordinated in a certain way. The only place where the two systems link is at the hole in the centre, which means that they link in a nowhere, or in a hole. This mysterious hole between the two worlds is in a one-sided way also represented in the Chinese incense clock” – Franz 1980, p.56

“The hole, which is the experience of the Self, breaks that cage or prison of our conscious reality apart and by that frees us from the grip of its one-sided concepts” – Franz 1980 (p.57).

The Cosmic Wheel of the O9A, the Swastika, the Sun-Wheel, the Spiral; each contribute to a subliminal approximate of the Forces of THEM that has emerged over the aeons. In the global archetype of such designs as the ancient Sun Cross/Wheel we can see attempts to/that recognise a void created by convergence of the angles, and too dissections of time, space, form, force and the order of the universe. Sometimes shaped into a quaternity, other times failing to represent the void at all. It is often Yin without Yang, the Masculine without Feminine, an aborted cosmic hieros gamos.

It is the Swastika alone that implies Spin and centrifugal motion, of time and cycle and a Spenglerian observation of aeons characterised by a symbol, an energy and embodied by the collective unconscious in the body of an archetypal mortal-King made to serve the aeons emanation by man. It is integral however, to note that this has nothing to do with Aryan heritage or cleverness from National Socialist symbol-wielders, for the Swastika is not 'Western' but 'Eastern' – and that is why it expresses time as cyclical (Franz 1980, p.50). But it too is a dormant manifestation with no self-consciousness; such that it was to hypnotise a nation of Selves and careen out of control evoking forces that spewed forms beyond its ability to reign in and its vortex ushered in a great war that changed the world forever. Such is Black Magic on a Grand Scale, then as it is today embodied by Symbol and Intent. The elegant Cosmic Wheel of the O9A with its scything arms and double swastika represented a deliberate and conscious attempt to reiterate and resurrect National Socialism among other avenues through Temple 88, with limited success. It features time – but it too lacks self-awareness.

It is the Temple of THEM who have opened the Dragon's Eye; we have made the symbol conscious; imbued it with the Luciferic ice rune 'ISA' and the esoteric stillness of self-awareness, the madness genius of the subconscious, and the predatory watchfulness of the Thrasz; pulling forth the Archetype of the Undividual – First Man or Anthropos (Franz 1980, p.37). We were gifted it – but its origin is a relic most primal, see the Suan-shu (Franz 1980, p.30) or compare the Shih to the Threshold Symbol of THEM. Or to the Chinese use of Double-Mandala's with a binary of wheels with complementary fixed and flowing components (p.51).

The Threshold Symbol and the Acausal Pentagram

Franz (1980, p.31) “Shih in the original meaning shows the heavens sun, moon, and stars, those three lines the idea being that it is the governing influence of heaven upon earthly things.” “This radical Shih is now generally translated by ”to exhibit, to manifest, to make known, or to proclaim” to make manifest, so to speak, the hidden will of the divinity, of Tao”. [Or Magic upon Reality / To Presence THEM]. From the Greek’s Cyclops, Tolkien’s Sauron, The Illuminati’s Eye of Providence, the technology of the Camera, or monolithic State and Global Surveillance – the symbol has emerged in different permutations as a powerful, potent expression of All-Knowing, seeking to See-All or an implied capacity to See-All. The same may be said of the Mandala, the representation of All-Gates. Yet it is specific gates that interest THEM. The observant will note the Illuminati symbol is not in fact a solid pyramid but exhibits a truncated ceiling where form ends and the Divine begins – separated eternally by uninhabitable space and often marked with the Archaeo-Judeo-Christian incantation ‘e pluribus unum’ – ‘Out of the Many, One’. Viewed top-down one can see the coalescence of forms, force, time-space as the truncated pyramids vertices are absorbed and limited, and when continued onward and upward forms a perfect ‘X’ where any void is pinched out of existence by the apex, by monolithic monotheism – paralysed as much as the sleeping consciousness of the Sun Wheels above. Wherefore, for the Illuminati, however, it is a deliberate magical act. For, Who, controls Form? Choice? And What is Manifest, >Here<? Who, Closes, The Gate? “They”, The Illuminated, Do. What is sublime about the Illuminated? They Shine Not. Wherein, it is not difficult to see the impetus for THEM’s subsequent magical challenge – ‘Out of One, Many’.

We mustn’t forget magic is to bend reality, implying rational thought is a hindrance and can easily be cast to the wind, since that is what it is composed of – and nothing else. Our texts have continually focused on the glaring absurdity and hypocrisies of language, ideology, forms, numbers, mathematics, time, space and other such human constructs, and carefully deconstructed these gleaming edifices that dominate modern life and modern comprehension presented as meaningful tools and institutions, that insist upon themselves with the pretence of sovereignty. Not, for your benefit these shapes, sorcerer. Put there by others for their benefit, were they.

Franz (1980, p.15) considered these prisons to be leveraged by possession of archetypal bondage. That, which THEM call ‘Thrall’ – which thrall is particular to its time, indeed, shapes each time in its image. ‘Crystallises’ the era or the aeon with particular energies communicated through over-arching ideas considered immovable with a kind of zealous militant glee and rage, only to later be dissolved as is the way of all synthesis, ever arising out of thesis and antithesis like the yin and the yang. Rightly so, does Franz intimate the extraordinary power of Form to dominate the souls of human living. As the I-Ching says, forces that tend toward extremes will transform into their opposites.

Likewise, madness and sanity are Tao, rationalism and irrationalism are Tao, communication and silence are Tao. There is a time and a place for both as there is a time and place for neither; and the sorcerer does their best to recognise these times through either models of intellect or mediations of spirit. So wild these forces, confusing man into thinking he owns, even gestated them and yet they continue to schism from his yolk and split off into uncontrollable chaos with every position – such an arrogant creature, befuddled by his own machinations and flailing grasp at enormity which he ever seeks to condense into a manageable rational paradigm. And yet, he is stripped to the bone year after year by entropy. So much for his rationality.

Relax that Western over-type that intellectually ever-seeks for an original point from which to proceed, be as Tao, move moments past such striving, accept the universe as it is, and proceed. You would do better to play with the utter nonsense of ‘statistics’ than attempt magic with a logically structured mind.

Franz (1980, p.20) astutely recognises that a key strategy of magic is to fracture the Known. We may add, it serves to loosen what binds and destroys the mirror plane upon which the Ego reflects itself and reciprocally strengthens its Weltanschauung to exclusion which obfuscates magic. Via the randomness of broken shards of reality in disarray, the sorcerer enters a new plane, peering at the gleaming angles beneath, where pattern-less chaos is then reassembled by subconscious projection of the Self.

A deeply reconstructive exercise that transports one to a numinous creative well-spring at the Source. Quizzically enough, one leaves the R’yleh-style madness of temporality crafted into hard vertices from Black Clay by other magicians and great powers, which seems so self-evident and eternal, and returns to the bridge into cold darkness and purest sanity from whence we came. The sorcerer sees the division in all “unity’s” as THEM – and dwells Between Chaos and Order, betwixt the “Spaces”; ever the magical Maybe from the logical chasm of Yes or No (Franz 1980, p.22-23). How to break the vampiric shells lain over reality but bone by bone, text by text, word by word, idea by idea, year by year... WE, did not choose the number of legions or the battleground, but having identified the Dragons faced, we paradoxically built the magical Temple of THEM to Unmake theirs.

THE FORBIDDEN YIN-YANG

The Sorcerer plays with >Reality< itself, and Constructs, however pretty, enticing, explanatory, paraded, trusted, ubiquitous – are <not> Reality.

[The Sorceress always admonished me whenever I mentioned God or any kind of acceptance of unity with the Cosmos; for her, she saw it as a betrayal of the Sinister; whose aim was to escape devourment by the Cosmic Spider and our spun Fate through black magickal mastery- not least by a rejection of God and divine unity.].

The Way of Satanism is hedonism and enshrinement of the Ego, it is the Yin.

The Way of THEM is synchronicity and rediscovery of the Self, it is the Yang.

The archetype of the Black Magician is embodied in a Promethean arrogance daring to steal fire from, and believe themselves equal to, the Gods. Moreover, to become the only God. Believing themselves Master of the forces and forms of the world they attempt to coerce reality with sound or timed inputs, by sympathetic intention or by taking a holistic approach to situations that arise to reduce/increase probabilities in their favour. Verily, the black magician embodies the Ego.

In accordance with their material will, they manipulate form to extract any advantage to achieve specific aims and outcomes that feed their personal desires. When successful, the reciprocal effect of having influenced reality, fuels their belief in the power and potency of their material will; that is, in their magic.

It is called Self-delusion, because it is not the Self that operates here – but the Ego. An equally powerful psychanism that is often being asked to leave by mysticism, and many religions, faiths and paths strongly reject its presence or existence, seeking the practitioner to eradicate it in order to free themselves from its tyranny and embrace the Self. Through such dissolving of the material consciousness, collapses the tension of the human consciousness with the forces and forms of the world plane – and a rising synchrony with natural flow, organic processes, Tao. Verily, the sage embodies the Self.

“We always use a double marker at the threshold; it is a symbolic urge suggesting that the threshold of consciousness is a doubling phenomenon”, – Franz 1980, p.55

THEM offer a third way. To keep the Ego and to cultivate the Self. It is not diametrically opposed to do both – though the following of one way over the other, either into Ego or Self is pronounced and leads to different realities, it is not possible to lose oneself completely in either. The practical function of the demands of societal etiquette, conversation, small-talk, housework, employment, taxes, food shopping and every other activity necessary for survival inhibits the dreamy idyll of drifting in Tao in perfect union with the universe. Such can be done on entheogens, deep and meaningful conversations, in the isolation of nature, in a spiritualist commune or retreat (or cult), during meditation, yoga, exercise, contemplation – but that beauty is often marred and interrupted by the harsh, ugly, artificial constructs of human intrusion. On countless occasions I have observed this, particularly in hippie culture who are an affected community with a surface level of patience, enduring calm, Zen immovability that breaks its serenity with frequency to be decidedly human, yelling, screaming, being downright nasty and in many other ways sabotaging the image they present as touchless. It can be understood then, why it is necessary to turn ones back on the world (or why it is done by so many hermits and sages) to eradicate the need to engage in human affairs as a human being and escape the artificial constructs that bind one to engagement with the howling tempest of Egoic madness that results in any interaction with beings unaware of their Self – or why vows of silence are taken to silence the same. Why monasteries exist where the diabolic din of human beings thirsting for other’s energy to sate their own insufficiencies and stuff in the holes of their soulistic deficits in a never-ending drama of low being, can be shut out.

The Ego and the Self. In the first, the world is a material plane, a pilgrimage for the body. In the second, the world is a spiritual plane, a temple for the soul. In the former one seeks to identify one’s being as master Of; in the latter, as mastered By. One is characterised by wilful determinism, the other by cosmic acceptance. One involves individual machination, the other, individual resignation. Flowing against forms and in time or flowing with forms beyond time.

I have observed in myself and others the stages of dangerous nihilism that occurs when the Self is presented; ideas harboured that nothing matters or any agency of the being is robbed through the destined entwine of fate; often leading to destructive tendencies because there is a sense that individual power has been wrested from their hands and lives and actions are meaningless. But it is an immature stage of the insight.

Ennui, or existential despair are common creatures encountered on the occult path for the One constantly breaks the Other's toys; where embracing the Ego shutter the Self, and being one with all de-voices the Ego. Both of which cause a cry of pain – for they both want to live, not in a Temple of I built for one, but a Temple of THEM built for the many. Like the Yin-Yang, the Ego and the Self cannot destroy one another, and are meant to dwell in harmony. But artificial pressures to conform to a unity only complicate matters, and rejecting the existence of one, only make the obverse stronger. The man of ego is possessed by fervent dreams and nightmares from the subconscious, the man of self is seized from the path of individual destiny and subsumed into trance, fighting off temptations he comes to believe are bad. How we may ask, can we have a world built on raising a complementary binary of Ways embodied in the Tao so distinctly across vast tracts of space and time through thousands of cultures through aeons – but treat them now as enemies of one another, somehow completely ignoring the lesson of Tao? Of Yin-Yang? The enfoldment of one force into the other, ever-transformative, ever-changing?

It has been remarked in previous works that the necessity of an enemy or Other is critical to the human being, who uses it as a springboard or tension to propel themselves to the other side of the existential river. In rejecting or excluding, comes embracing or including, the delineating shape of the Ego and its placed boundaries as a fortress of Insynsian, of a constructed paradise secured from perceived hell, as illustrated in Form 101. For there is pleasure in hate – there is pleasure in prejudice, ignorance, cruelty, degradation, destruction of the Other; a gratifying security that we have kept Satan from the Gates. It makes us feel powerful, it reinforces our heavens, it justifies our paradise. This pleasure principle applies to the Tao too – the sweetness of violent resistance, the satisfying imprisonment of the enemy of our peace, the psychic persecution of another part of ourselves to exalt another is just one of the many mad games we play.

But lest I not be misunderstood, there is Power in these games. These games are Power. They may miss their context as seen from the viewpoint of the mountain, but they have world-ripples and causal effects as they are played. Truth, reality, unity – such are the deluded grasping at Insynsian, a new singular monotheistic making of God, of the One power, law, form, force to 'rule them all'. While they interact with the matrix, it doesn't matter whether they are objectively real – they constitute sorcery, the Great Play. They are only games because in some way, we internalise one reality as operant at the expense of another, ironically pursued in the delusion we are engaging in binary immersement of the All.

Therein, no – No. Do not lay at the feet of Ego, undeserved blame. It was and is gifted to you as Yin, and your Self gifted and given unto you as Yang. And together they form the eternal pattern of all things; that Ego and Self too conform; of the Tao. And too, further, the accepted existence and operant power of Ego and Self is itself contrasted by the void absence of both; in a world without convenient psychic structure as boxes in which to gather your things. For the Ego and the Self are as fictitious as all human constructs, a temporal mirage of the Black Clay whose insistent presence obstructs your view and hides deeper secrets to existence, revealed when they are absent from your equations and perception.

The typical tempest of wavering between Ego and Self is an impossibly violent motion, see-sawing back and forth as the Consciousness and Unconsciousness wrestle for control of the Psychanism (See, Radia Sol/Radia Star) – particularly so when a human takes it upon themselves to dreamily fantasise eradicating one to worship the other. But to tame the tsunami's and calm the satanic swell is to vibrate intensely on the Bridge Back – to thrum with tremendous power and equilibrium and gyroscope in the centre to take from both sources the utmost. This balancing act in turn creates the Maelstrom.

The MAELSTROM

It was thought that certain words, rites, music, times, acts, could manifest THEM with greater frequency; that fortuitous or precision alignment of magical ephemera was the critical component to make them Intrude. But THEM ... are elusive. After many years of experimentation this appears not to be the case. Or, rather, it can, but only when there are several other elements- wherein the Tools are superfluous anyway, as it is Intent that drives the magic of the Temple of THEM.

One of THEM is a way of living, perceiving, being; who is humble in the face of forms and forces, respectful and worshipful of nature including a deep connection as nature, possesses a life-centred perspective not a human-centred one, has had reality shattered logically, entheogenically, and permanently through a supernatural event, has a sorcerers awareness of the Pattern that signs come forth and is actively watching for such portents, a view of time and space with vantages that encompass the timescale of cosmic plans, and hears, listens to and presences the Acausal Voice. Such a sorcerer is a raw envoy of nature and a closely aligned conduit for THEM. And with them, they bring a maelstrom.

And here is the curious and majestic thing – There is a protective quality surrounding THEM. Synchronicity, self-honesty, and humility – cannot be fabricated or pretended – they arise and arrive of their own volition less through cultivation and more through hubris; and it is such powerful gates that keep the many from being able to commune with THEM. Their most visible sign: Synchronicity cannot be forced – we cannot deliberately engage in a series of events to make a later unlikely coincidence; in fact, it is the element of surprise at the outcome that characterises coincidence. It is that eerie convergence of chance and timing that strikes us as significant enough to be extraordinary because we did not expect it nor see it coming.

There are, however, elements that increase Synchronicity. It is notable that merely observing Synchronicity increases it.

Synchronicity is its own master – but it occurs within what can be synchronised. Therein, to surround oneself with a paradigm of bells invites what can be synchronous to chime. Therein, is another secret of the sorcerer.

For when we play with the Abyss, we know not what might occur – but that it might, and when it does, it is likely to set off a chain reaction (Franz 1980, p.37) – for when there is an Occurrence it affects reality like the strands of a spiderweb gently strummed. Synchronicity is the Key.

As Franz (1980, p.13) remarks, 'the secret to probability is repetition' – and there is naught with more repetition than Synchronicity.

SELF-HONESTY

We have spoken at length of the chthonic, raw, umbral presence of nature's will, of the acausal voice, of the primal evolutionary drive by nature to bring forth One's of THEM across Time and Space to evolve Himself beyond himself. For one who is Self-Honest can only emanate the Self – and emanating the Self can only come from connection to the Cosmos and the Abyss of which the Self is an incarnation (Franz 1980, p.47).

Further, self-honesty being the primary and emperor of occult abilities – it plays a critical role. Self-honesty is an ease with oneself and acceptance of one's place across time and space, past, present and future; that is achieved through humility. Humility means the attainment of a life-centred perspective; Tao, or a timeless perspective of appreciation of existence and forms and forces that churn it, all of which can only be obtained over time and none of which can be fabricated. When aligned with those forces and forms, as Is, in a suspended state of non-enquiry not mentally searching for an origin or letting the Dexter categorise and order reality in chronological order to find the 'source' – there is flow and flowing with change. See then, the Aeurekanequeo's mobius-energy of the Simultaneous Pulse and Mirror Zone to see a black magical variant of the Yin-Yang.

Synchronicity is at its most excitable state on such a plane with such a person, for when you smash reality and the binds of form you invite possession of a particular state, an archetype we might call a chthonic Avatar or – One of THEM (Franz 1980, p.28-29). The latency of an archetype can when it emerges, transform the real world.

The magical power of Self-Honesty is a critical operant force because it distils the conduit – sterilising the vessel which is not clouded by distortions or self-delusion, nor hiding oneself and dulling the mirror, but burning brightly without fear.

There can be no fear when working with THEM, not of yourself nor of THEM; for they are US and we are THEM. As the founder of THEM I have never felt afraid of these forces or entities, but awe and reverence. On the contrary, I have devoted my life to building THEM and 'Them' a Temple and slowly uncovering the secrets that will allow them to inhabit it or for certain types of THEM to be presenced in powerful forms. But those around me, particularly the sceptical (who have more to lose) have often been profoundly affected or disturbed when THEM make their presence known.

An Intrusion is a corporeal accumulation of these raw energies that is intense enough to bend reality and emerge the impossible that only high-level synchronicity can achieve, chance beyond all chance, opening a gate and constituting a Visitation. An intrusion which results in cold-blooded terror and a life-changing event that makes it impossible to turn off second-sight.

LOVE

Love, is an even more powerful attractant as it harmonises and increases coincidence, even psychic communication and non-verbal acknowledgement among synced partners who act in harmony, knowing without knowing; and each feeding the other's maelstrom until space crescendos to an Intrusion.

The conduit between two is even stronger, strengthened by trust and transparency, which in turn also strengthens the conduit with THEM. The numinous erotic charge that comes from two highly-polished Self mirrors reflecting off each other without distortion is discussed in Radia Sol and elsewhere; this charge occurs as a powerful ambrosia of heightened energy exchange without Ego contagion, it is pure communication and there is often a feeling of indebtedness to one who lets another feel un-judged or free to be, or a trance state that occurs in the erotic charge of building something numinous together, at lower levels at least where only one participant is usually conscious of it. A similar high is to be found for instance, with the euphoria of drugs, dopamine bursts, adrenaline from exercise, or shared traumatic experiences in activities where a new crescendo of experience is attained; and where the cause of the high is transferred/attributed to the agency of another person.

Just as words can affect across time and space, so can presence – and in accordance with the Dyph, or differential of the Theph (see Liber Bathyal) those experiencing strong Synchronicity immerse others in it by sharing their presence, which pulls them into the current (said, Maelstrom) as a potential Dark Lantern – especially in prolonged proximity or contact; physically distant or local. Wherein a sorcerer/ess may see THEM in isolation; together with another sorcerer/ess the combination of requisite energies is accelerated as a purer more potent expression, both rare and necessary to build a powerful gate. The reciprocal nature of energy exchange in relationships, magickal partnerships or ritual work by those possessing the necessary attributes, aids Synchronicity to reach extraordinary levels with THEM manifesting more frequently, and in stronger forms, feeding on the synchronicity generated by the two envoys of the Acausal voice.

At higher levels the two are aware of, build and direct the charge consciously and deliberately together toward, into or at. It is therefore far more potent when two are honest with each other and doubly so when they are also honest with themselves. In this way of being there is humility to THEM and a feedback loop of immense reciprocal power. There are also protective qualities in being an envoy; the Thrasz representing just one guardian of Temple members.

Like Synchronicity, Self-Honesty or Humility, Love cannot be faked either. While there are artificially possible energetic fields equitable to gain the notice of THEM; all of these forces must occur organically through the path-working of the beings themselves; often over a long period of time. We do not and cannot choose who we fall in love with, it is a prime example of THEM; a force that seizes us unexpectedly but very deeply often without our consent. Yet, it is through such relationships in my experience that THEM have been manifest as the strongest presence. This and the other requisites beyond our control are what make THEM so difficult to manifest.

In a previous but no longer available manuscript: Rain Magic*K A Visitation, the forms and shapes and visage of numerous forms of THEM were discussed in relation to visitations that occurred during ritual, such as a guardian of Lake Asoth that terrified my unsuspecting priestess as a giant shape stepped out on the path, or her inability to switch off seeing dark figures running into traffic, chasing cars, sitting, squatting on roofs, watching her, or seeing ‘wooden’ figures filling her with abject terror.

Over time she had no choice but to embrace THEM or go mad – though going mad is often a side-effect of Intrusion, and being mad is often the power-source of a sorcerer.

Living too close to what Jung called ‘absolute knowledge’ or what THEM have termed the Phyrn, other’s as the Abyss, and still others as the blackest seas of the deep subconscious – one operates on a low-level baseline, pretending as best one can to be as an uninitiated, untouched, unremarkable and shallow human (Franz 1980, p.20); imitation at its finest, concealing the bathyal depth within. A question to ponder is whether it is madness that screams from within channelled into intelligible genius through human conduit and a melody of shapes; or cold, inhuman omniscience of such potency it can only ever be translated and expressed as madness, as cryptic occult lyricism without, lain low by the desperate struggle of language and sound to encapsulate the umbral voice of the gods. For know ye this – ALL IS MAGIC, especially so it’s seeming opposite, and strength of the Illusion has made ye Forget. REMEMBER, says the Temple of THEM. Remember.

Herein too is another important principle. It is not possible to remain human as One of THEM: the Self and the Ego constantly trade places; one speaks in one moment from a conscious human identity or familiar personality in accustomed ways and sounds (or sounds woven into the script of words); and in the next from an unidentified dimension where flows poetry, lyric, mysticism, wisdom of the unconscious. A sudden rise from low-being into high-being that sends the sorcerer mad. For the sorcerer is a constellated archetype (Franz 1980, p.27) a concentration of black magick and shattered geometry. Living in the perpetual ‘heightened emotional state’ in which sincere divination is undertaken – it is an emanation of extreme gravitas that defies the normal, routine ephemera of life and its tedious paradigms and takes on a cosmic importance, such as a Geas, or magical compulsion that drives one to complete a quest given to their being above all other things, even if it takes his life time, his life source, to do it. My I is transformed, poured into these vessels of text in the hope they take on a life of their own, beyond my mortal coil, for my magic to last a little longer – and perhaps, long enough.

Therein, is revealed the supreme and elegant truth of the Temple of THEM: and the Keys to the mysterious Entities it acknowledges. And too, the nature of the fearsome guardians that bar the gates from the profane; for few are they who are One's of THEM.

See now, why Lovecraft is the Father of our current; Jung the Mother, Anton Long the Muse; the Sorceress the Catalyst; and myself, the Conduit.

“Then comes this beautiful Chinese idea that man can actually get in contact with that he can get to the place where heaven and earth create in an unfathomable way, without doubleness, through utmost sincerity. If somebody devoid of all illusions, and all that makes the world of the ordinary ego, goes into himself with utmost sincerity, then he comes to this central hole where creation, even in the cosmos, takes place. That is why the Chinese thought that certain sages or saints, very rare personalities, could reach that centre and by having come to this contained innermost centre of their personality could support heaven and earth, and be with creation in the universe” – Franz 1980, p.58

It is now 32 years since I started my occult journey, 18 since I founded the Temple of THEM; and despite all the changes I have made to my life, the roads I have trod, or the maturity or insight I have gained; my conviction with my geas, my magical compulsion to obey the ‘gods’, remains firmly intact. As has been said before, you cannot convince someone to believe in ghosts if they have never seen one – without direct evidence, why should they, how could they? But the V1 02 I3 4D changes all (See, Black Keys of Satan). When you do have a Visitation – you will understand why I cannot turn my back on such a sublime occult mystery as has revealed itself to me and stay transfixed and driven to complete the Temple’s 30-year charter. For Synchronicity is borne of the Game (Franz 1980, p.29), and thus the Temple of THEM is a great experiment of chance, a Great Magic, a dice roll powered with my blood.

“In all primitive civilisations ritual and play cannot be separated....So one has to be completely and passionately involved, and at the same time sacrifice any kind of ego desire” Franz 1980, p.60

Why thirty? You will Know when it is Done, though we may say it has been chosen specifically not arbitrarily and there is special effect in the Finite. One may have observed the Temple breaking its charter into 10-year durations, 3 equal parts, and the unfolding of a long-term performance of Oromancy. A basis in secrets, only because of an inability to understand what was being constructed in isolated pieces, was to be later brought together and assembled for War. And too, we always wake before the Dream Ends. The desire to be Immortal, to ‘live Forever’, to ‘Dominate for All Time’ is antithetical to all that our current teaches and all that THEM represent. Know the ‘Right Measure’, extols the I-Ching (Franz 1980, p.44). The All tends toward Entropy (p.53).

” Thus the Chinese say that through a holy, earnest play we can get closer to discovering the objective order of the universe” – Franz 1980, p.60

DREAMING

THEM believe the human psyche seeks wholeness. Until wholeness is achieved, the Self will continually prompt the fragmented aspects of its being into forming wholeness. These prompts are often censored by the Ego, and it is theorised that the Self is forced to wait to communicate less restrictively when the Ego is inactive, via the agency of dreams. Though it takes some experience to filter many different kinds of message issued from the astral realm, by listening to our dreams, a person can effectively create a psychic map that makes conscious the usually unconscious and fragmented aspects of our psyche. Following this, one can learn to follow the prompts from the Self that leads to recognition of these aspects, their roles, and their eventual cohesion.

Growth is difficult to achieve if the means of growth are unknown. People can be stubborn toward change, especially if that change entails a loss that is in direct conflict with the strict conditions of being set in stone by the Ego. The Ego resists attempts to alter it and can perform some interesting mental gymnastics to cope with the demands of the Self. This can lead to a person making superficial gains in psychic growth whereby the Ego dupes itself into believing it has listened to the voice of the Self. Consequently, a great deal of energy can be expended in good faith on a direction that seems to lead to growth, giving a brief feeling of satisfaction and accomplishment – but like using a band-aid for a serious injury – this deception serves only to temporarily mask some deeper aching that needs to be addressed and can lead to dangerous neuroses.

Dreams can be very helpful for getting ‘true readings’ of our psyche. They are issued from a part of us that is more honest, revealing and candid than anything conspired by the Ego. Dreams can show us our strengths, our weaknesses, our talents, our shortcomings, fears, guilt, ambitions, secret desires etc. etc. with a self-honesty that can be both intensely destructive and painful as it can be healing and progressive. The overall 'geometry' of dreams can also reveal a rough [or fine, pending talent] psychic sketch of the archetypal stage that a person's psyche is currently experiencing in the process of re-integration that leads to individuation.

These psychic 'readings' can help isolate neuroses, complexes, and each can then be worked upon like a person untying [or tying] a knot in their being. Dream revelations can indicate where a person might actively spend their energies to assist in the totalization of the psyche. i.e. work with the Shadow, the Anima/us [to eventually presence it in a person of the opposite sex] and accordingly steps can be taken to consciously manifest/explore the situations/energies that our dreams prompt us to alter: guiding us to make changes that we would not ordinarily be willing to make and helping to free us of otherwise unconscious influences and programs we'd have no hope of noticing high above the black sea in our rigid ivory palaces of Ego.

Yet perhaps more importantly, Dreams allow us to tap that black sea within and without that gives access to Genius. Because dreams are Archetypal – and because each of THEM have or work toward modes of using the Astral for individuation, mapping our experiences and trying to make sense of them – we can help you to interpret your dreams. Although the meanings of your dreams will be highly personal and unique to your understanding of the symbols, persons, feelings etc present – we can help you to make connections, know your Animus, identify your shadow, filter the noise from them, and act as an external mirror where you can project them, enabling you to see them from an emotionally detached mode.

The process begins by the active decision to 'stalk' your dream world, and making a conscious and continued effort to remember, interpret, and listen to your dreams. This is most easily begun by using a dream diary. The workload of keeping a dream journal is at first, hard and very demanding, yet even a cursory recollection of a few dreams can help provide pieces of your psychic map, certain energies and states of mind becoming immediately apparent even from fragments. Not all dreams are useful, but what is useful can only be determined by experience. Try keeping a dream journal for a few weeks. You can opt to email it to us privately – and THEM will offer our interpretations of your psychic geometry; leading to suggestions for activities that will act in accordance with modes that can help assist in the totalization of your psyche.

LUCID DREAMING

I'm no expert on Lucidity, and I don't pretend to be. These documents are from my own private foray into Lucidity during which I believe I discovered a powerful technique that induces Lucidity, but a foray that mainly constitutes my unique perception and understanding of the Astral and the Psyche, and my own deeply personal Dreaming Consciousness, which consciousness I interpreted in context with the events occurring in both my day-to-day life and my overall life. I would also hope that my own interpretations of my Dreams and the way in which I have interpreted them, individually and as a collective, will in some way guide and assist others in the study of theirs. In 2003-2004 I sat down and wrote out the journal by hand, saving the records into a word file for distribution online from the Temple of the Tangent group. I later deleted the Tangent group and "Offerings" with it. Later however, my hard-drive suffered a devastating crash, destroying that and many other files – which unfortunately I had not backed up. And so, this new version of "Offerings" contains scans of the original pages of my Dreaming Journal – from Jan 13 to Feb 14, most of which are neatly printed, but some of which were recorded at awkward hours of the night, scribbled hastily to ensure maximum preservation of imagery, or even jotted in the dark.

To begin with, I cannot stress strongly enough that a person interested in Lucid Dreaming or Dream Interpretation, should seek out and devour the most excellent treatise by Carl Jung titled "Man and his Symbols". Before I read this brilliant treatment of the psyche, my only option was to believe from the limited array of spurious metaphysical journals available that dealt with Dreaming as some sort of "Occult realm" in the league of E.S.P., Ghosts, or UFO's, that Dream Interpretation meant a) dreams fit neatly into an A-Z category of interpretation, and b) that dreams Always had a meaning. Neither of these claims about Dreaming held true for me during my experiment. Originally, I was probably influenced to attempt Lucid Dreaming just as I had attempted Scrying, ESP, Ouija and so on because it was listed in the books on the Occult I used to read. In my serious endeavour to learn magic however, I came to understand through what I could glean on Lucid Dreaming, from a movie called Waking Life, from a text entitled "Liber Luna Sanguinus" supplied to me in 2003 by the Tempel ov Blood, from the testimonies of alleged Lucid Dreamers, and from my own personal experience with it; that a world of infinite possibility should be opened to me if I could attain that elusive state called Lucidity.

It was said that Lucid experiences were as real to the physiology as those of waking life, and that the body-mind could not tell the difference – and therein was the appeal that perhaps a greater mastery over the body could be won. The idea then that I would be able to do whatever I liked in that lucid dream state as though it were real and that I could control the environment and all of the elements within it – was a marvellous prospect worth my time. Could anything appeal more to a human being? Reliable Information on Lucid Dreaming proved difficult to find and this was in particular due to the way that my society at large, including the occultists, seemed to view Dreams.

Dreams are not taken seriously by many people, and when they are, they tend to be taken too seriously. Paradoxically, one of the most defining attributes of Occult Experience, Magic or Sorcery, is that it is strongest in-between any two points of definite experience, that is, outside of forms used to capture or explain the experience, feeling or emanation of having had a mystical/occult experience. The people who took dreams too seriously laid down a formulaic set of rules that the “Art of Dreaming” was deemed to have in order to become lucid, or, to the people that didn’t take them seriously at all, dreams were invisible, and most people, although many times confounded by their dreams, ignored them, paid no attention to interpreting them, and often denied they even had them. I had created dream journals previously as a teenager, and although the difference in magical understanding and mental maturity between those journals and this one, is vast, it is likely that my fascination with dreams from an early age and the willingness to believe they were not something to be discarded and perhaps even something to be understood that allowed me to shape the connexion with those psychic sands early.

Dreams have always seemed highly vivid and meaningful to me, many have shaped my life profoundly, and I continue to believe that Dreaming is a powerful tool in a Sorcerer’s arsenal. One of the reasons Dreaming shyness seems to be the case may have come to light in my endeavour. Recording, Remembering, Interpreting Dreams, is very time-consuming. It requires not just a book to write things, but an entire shift of temporal concerns to remain in a focused altered-state of Stalking one’s Sleeping Self. It becomes as though Waking Life were the Dream, and one is enduring the wakefulness just in order to get back to Sleep, to the Astral or Dream Like existence that begins to take over. With extended practice, remembering dreams becomes more frequent; up to 5-7 dreams over a 12 hour period can prove demanding to record and interpret, and it begins to seem like one has only just finished the paperwork for the previous night when it starts all over again, as it’s time to go to bed. In the month and a half that I recorded my dreams my waking life began to fade, become ethereal and wispy, almost as though it were not there and that the concerns of the day were transient and non-physical. All I wanted was to have an eventful day to provide enough new food for my night-mind.

Learning to Lucid Dream requires the quality of obsession; it requires “demonic commitment” to quote the Order, and the time and resources to set aside one’s body and mind for just that. To become so focused on dreams for such a length of time was exhausting, physically and mentally, and in the end, I abandoned the Dream Project to return to my commitments to the Order. I believe I had just opened the Lucid Gates prior to my decision to stop the project, that I had found a technique that enabled a consistent and powerful lucid dreaming state to be attained in a minimum of time, and that had I continued I might have been able to write more, though I should likely have done it from an asylum. That, or what I continued to write would have been of my weird and wonderful journeys; of which, I rest assured are of no interest to the reader being merely particular fancies of my own design, and that it is the method I have discovered that is important to record.

~ Dreaming: A Methodology ~ Some safeguards were required when delving into my unconscious, as they should be for others – especially if one holds a romantic view of trying to ‘make friends with it’ perhaps in order to ‘unite’ the conscious and the unconscious; not least because this idealistic “friendship” and the possibility of this type of “union” is a product/fantasy of the conscious. My unconscious does not want to be made friends with any more that it can be united with me as some sort of super consciousness. There is a great danger in believing that the many convenient abstract names given to ideas, concepts, forces or feelings dealt with when talking about the psyche are real, physical, controllable, or conform to expectations like other tangible objects.

Dreaming, I think, is primarily a metaphysical exploration but that requires secondary methods and measures that borrow from madness as much as logic. The unconscious, has the power to really mess a person up inside, and that is why it is important, even if only as a tool, to forge a belief in the mind being compartmentalised and that not all dreams mean something, in fact, that many dreams are just a conversation with the other half, that is, with the unconscious itself, in its own language. And in this conversation, things may at first be said that are hurtful, misinterpreted, and downright rude, but do not make the mistake of believing that the unconscious will eventually come to speak the language of the conscious, or the conscious the language of the unconscious – that is to invite disaster. These elements are not human, nor do they behave as human and thus should not be treated as human – people make the same mistake when approaching the Dark Gods.

It is natural inclination to humanise everything – to refract it in our own image. This inclination must be suspended in magic. And I have learned, that to believe that dreams must always mean something or to believe they accurately represent one’s “Self” is to invite extremely dangerous elements into one’s journey, because the psyche can easily lose its rational grounding or its internal map. I’ve prided myself on having a strong mental constitution that can withstand a fair bit of having my ego held up to a mirror and being told like it is – or withstand being convinced I am what I am not or awakened to what I am unconscious of being, or able to integrate a lot of my monsters in the way of wonderful or horrific thoughts, fantasies, or internal dialogue as just that and both identify and disassociate my(self) from that content. This is probably because I champion self-honesty as quintessential to a magician. But Lucid Dreaming required at least a month of preparation groundwork to attain the state of mind that could hold onto the Dreaming World firmly, and involved a harrowing period of adjustment and unpredictable interactions with a part of my(self) I knew (know) nothing about.

Now, given what I do as one of THEM, I'm somewhat aware of how I, and some of my ideas, may come across to others as quite mad. It has been very difficult to explain my perception as influenced by an insight into simultaneously unified disconnection via the Acausal Voice, for instance, and probably will always be, since I cannot be sure anyone else shares my point of view, points of perception, or has experienced what I take, generally speaking, for granted. As a Sorcerer, such temporary leaps of faith and investing one's belief in ideas is absolutely necessary, for as mad as it may seem – madness is the Sorcerer's friend.

Oftentimes such methods are unable to be explained, luckily I have some experience in doing so and the determination to elaborate. Basically, one believes in what is necessary to get the job done, or more accurately, one deceives or tricks the conscious into action. But bear with me. Exploring the realm of my psyche required an idea to be formed about the qualities of its nature, of its structure. At best, I could consciously recognise the ample evidence for compartmentalism (that is, that my psyche or mind is separated into different sections of cognisance or consciousness) that existed in my being, the difference in consciousness between short and long term memory being a great example, and that there are elements of and in me that are beyond conscious reach. I defined very firmly, the “me” that is the controlling consciousness writing these words and conducting dream experiments as separate from a second or even numerous number of “me's” that represented either my organism as a whole, or one or more of my other mental compartments.

All of this division is of course based on temporal mental abstracts. I had defined it so clearly because the consciousness that is seated in my skull feels very sure of its position. The main, “me” had to be able to hold onto its conscious blueprint of its personal identity very strongly because it would be assailed by all manner of unconscious forces during its sojourn to become more conscious of them that could potentially have nasty side-effects. It might sound complex, and to someone accustomed to placing things directly into one specific form located in time and space, it is. But my understanding of consciousness is based in the acausal notions of the ONA – not in a limited point of consciousness operating from my skull but as flowing with the acausal in nameless possibilities of reach and origin functioning as one unified illusion created from a continuous stream of change. I must be able to speak of myself in first person, second person, and third person – (and I can, because of my collective conscious awareness of having experienced many altered states) so I can make a mature self-judgement that creates a safety net to catch the fragile ego before it falls. I.e. in convincing myself that my capabilities to divine my total self are always going to be biologically limited, as though I accept I am a large house with hundreds of rooms unexplored and others locked or permanently walled up.

This acceptance of limits prepares the ego not to be so shocked by its inability to control what comes forth that it is harmed or even shattered. I think this or a similar perspective of the mind is extremely important to have because a degree of ability to disassociate or separate from a personal identification with some of the terrifying contents brought forth by the dreaming mind is necessary not to go mad or be badly damaged by potentially dangerous unconscious elements quickly becoming conscious to the unprepared mind. The unconscious is adept at showing you things about yourself you'd rather you didn't know. It possesses omnipotent power over the weaknesses, emotions, guilt, hang-ups, neuroses, and fears with unforgiving honesty that can bring a person crumbling to their knees, sometimes permanently, and must be treated with great respect. And some of this respect is in accepting that you have to immerse yourself in irrational madness to gain anything from the occult –wherein the real trick is in surviving the journey without becoming insane.

In provoking a more concentrated interaction with the Dreaming Mind, I seemed to awaken something sentient that I could not determine as hostile or neutral. I suppose I had to personify this Dreaming State in order to control it, tame it, as I had already interpreted it as a 'compartment' of myself, it became a separate being, an entity divided from myself. And I approached it thus: My consciousness was a resident voyager exploring the unknown – but it should not expect to find some perfect resolution or united state of super-consciousness (that was a naivety I had stripped away) but expect a journey to the top of a rugged mountain to attempt a humble conversation with its unknown half.

Realise* that you will never speak either language fluently, nor will those compartments ever consciously fluently become intelligible, but there are depths to the unconscious, and I liken it greatly to the sea; there are the shallow waters where things that are useful to be conscious of are washed ashore by the ebb and tide. There are the islands one might swim out to if they are a strong enough swimmer and can brave the currents, though they should be prepared for the eventuality of getting into trouble and even drowning if they cannot. There is the vast ocean blue, beautiful and enticing but dangerous and unforgiving depending on the weather above and below to swim out too far. And then there are the impossibly dark trenches thousands of degrees below that shiny blue, swimming and crawling with strange creatures that defy imagination, a hostile and deadly environment with endless caves that go all the way to another dimension, a place where the conscious should never go, and even deeper where it may never go. To treat myself as divided into two convenient parts enabled "me" (the fragile "I") to know/feel/accept that it's judgements can not always be right (and that's OK) and that I am not able to understand or calculate the entirety of myself using only my consciousness, (and that's OK) and allows my ego the ease to consciously settle with those facts and accept its limited but nonetheless important station (the ego must be allocated praise and assurance in the trade-off), and subsequently help me to "dismiss" or "disassociate" myself/itself from the highly toxic and potentially destructive and disturbing elements that studying the Dreaming Mind can bring forth and did bring forth for me.

Such disturbing elements included highly charged emotional content that can quickly and shockingly come out of nowhere to shake the Dreamer's very core; ("Hel" was written after such a dream) Content so disturbing that it can cause psychosis or harmful deterioration of the ego – I've been mad several times but have managed to hold it together enough to come back. Or long and uncomfortable sinister dreams that come to torment the Dreamer for what seems hours upon waking – but seem like days or even years during the psychic imprisonment of the dream. Several times I had dreams that were so confronting I wondered if I should stop the project altogether or felt like my unconscious was actually trying to persuade me to give up my project. For every step I took forward, the unconscious seemed to have its own analysis of my efforts, almost as if it were taunting me to catch hold of it – only to mystify me with its violent displays of symbolism.

But again, this idea that the unconscious taunts, is a projection of the conscious mind, and the conscious mind can quickly get one into trouble in thinking that the unconscious is their friend, that there is a friend there to be had, or that friend in anyway shape or form denotes the thing that is the Unconscious.

Note to the Consciousness, Do not expect to get off the beach.

Note to the Magician, You can go further than I did.

My unconscious did not seem friendly, but inasmuch as it is the conscious waking side of me that supplies wishful projections and interpretations that humanises the content remembered – and the conscious waking side that exists quite naively of such horrific wonders as the mind is genuinely capable of when pushed – it could only be friendly in my imagination. It, the conscious mind also filters out, an unbelievable deal of stimuli from what is available, and is, in comparison to the unconscious, a starkly unimaginative, uncreative and simplistic block-stacker which gloats over its inadequate terms such as "friendship" to describe a union so impossibly complex it has apparently only been achieved by a handful of human beings in history.

Contra wise, the unconscious is a poetic genius capable of the most intricate analogies, metaphors, symbolism, and dance that can leave one breathless from their sublime beauty, shocked and embarrassed by their unashamed unreserved raw knack for telling it like it is, or wake one screaming and sweating from the sheer detail and creative terror charged with a vividness that makes waking life seem grey, washed-out and mundane. And, when I thought that I had been shocked as much as I could be by a nightmare or dream, I was proved irrevocably wrong. The unconscious appears to have a powerful if not omnipotent defence mechanism to prevent the consciousness from opening certain doors, wandering around the house, or trying to build new extensions – but no comparison exists for me to say if it is an objective censor or a subjective censor.

Its apparent from my many forays into magic, why the conscious self must hold a very high view of itself and its abilities. Because of the odds against it, it must be encouraged from within and without to strive, to conquer and that it can do the impossible because only with that arrogance does it march forth into the unknown to succeed where success is impossible. And sometimes it does succeed in such a place.

But, the reality is, one must learn to accept defeat after defeat in one's stride to Know Thyself. It should come as no surprise that uniting the unconscious and the conscious proved beyond my control. It is possible that the unconsciousness even drives my consciousness to study I, giving me the illusion of self-controlled sentience; who knows for sure? But this sort of view must be rejected to some extent by the sorcerer if one is to take the approach of being an autonomous entity and responsible for one's own destiny. one should keep firmly in mind that one is as capable of being one's own worst enemy as they are one's own best friend. ThoTh, Australia, 2009. * Regarding, "Belief", "Realisations", "Accepting" and so on. One of the hard tasks of the Sorcerer is in convincing themselves that certain things are "true", whilst remaining aware that they are not.

BREAKING THE LOCKE: A LEXICON FOR DREAM DESCRIPTION

Dreams notoriously defy the strict rigidity of time and space – points of view, observation platforms, fixation of being, origin of action and meaning often perform odd and often disorienting fusions and duplicities of each, archetypes, familiarity with persons, recognitions overlapping, falling and fading, contradicting into one another. This brief lexicon is to aid in a step toward some day making their mysteries more graspable and their deeper secrets transparent by providing the means to describe these difficult contradictions.

Fixed Observer (My Me)– when you retain all of your faculties in a dream that make you, you – from memory catalogue, real-world physical attributes, five key senses, to intact mental zeitgeist of the world – and you participate in the dream in first person perspective.

Autonomous Detached Observer (My Me's)– when you retain all of your faculties in a dream that make you, you – from memory catalogue to intact mental zeitgeist of the world but your real-world physical attributes (body) are absent – and you participate in the dream from a third person perspective.

Divided Observer (Our Me's) – when you retain all of your faculties in a dream that make you, you – from memory catalogue to intact mental zeitgeist of the world but your real-world physical attributes (body) are absent and present – and you participate in the dream from a third person perspective AND first person perspective.

Fixed Divided Observer – (My Me-Not-Me) when you retain all of your faculties in a dream that make you, you – from memory catalogue to intact mental zeitgeist of the world but your real-world physical attributes (body) are absent – and you participate in the dream from a third person perspective watching yourself – but – cannot interact with the dream and only observe ‘yourself’ going through it.

Hostile Autonomous Observer (My Not-Me) When you are both the very being that is you but simultaneously overcome by a sense that you are not ‘you’.

Quasi-Autonomous Omniscience – (My All-Me) When you are both the observer and the observed.

Divided Mental Agency – (Stealthought) When you ‘know’ something as another inhabitant that ‘you’ do not.

Non-Autonomous Participation – (My As Them) When you participate in the entire dream as another inhabitant.

Divided Familiarity – (Like but Not Like) When you recognise the appearance of someone familiar but it is not ‘them’

Split Familiarity – (Them as Also Them) When you recognise the appearance of someone familiar and they drastically and immutably shift into being someone else in such a way they are both.

Contradictory Non-Familiarity (Them but not Them)– When you recognise the appearance of someone familiar and they drastically and immutably shift into being someone else in such a way they are both but also neither.

Hostile Locality – When the scene is identical to your memory of a place but there is a pervading sense of sinister shadow that the place is dangerous.

False Sanctuary – When the scene is identical to your memory of a home and you recognise family but the inhabitants are all strangers.

Hostile Sleeper – When you are among people who are your family and feel like your family, but there is a feeling one is not.

Glued – When you attempt to run at full speed/punch an attacker but are unable to.

Divided Identification – When you recognise a familiar face on a stranger's body.

Hostile Inherency – When you recognise someone you know but there is a sense of danger emanating from them.

Forced Mutable Locality – When the scene rapidly shifts from familiar locations to unfamiliar locations, often repeating the same scene as if replaying a movie but with a different script in each visitation.

Hyper Formality – When the dream focuses on every detail around you in fine detail – from the tree root formation and stones on a path you are walking along to the temperature of the day, the emotion you feel, the destination you are going and have come from.

Hostile Pursuance – When you are pursued by a relentless killer or deadly threat.

Mutual Agency – When you are acting as yourself looking out onto the world but also occupy a second point of observation above yourself, watching yourself.

Mutual Divided Agency – When you are acting as yourself looking out onto the world but also occupy a fixed second point of observation outside yourself in another inhabitant.

Mutual Temporal Agency – When you are acting as yourself looking out onto the world but also occasionally occupy a fixed second point of observation outside yourself in another inhabitant.

Divided Autonomous Agency – When you are acting as yourself looking out onto the world but also occupy multiple points of observation outside yourself in other inhabitants.

Detached Temporal Agency – When you transition with frequency between points of observation above, behind or outside of you.

Mutable Detached Temporal Agency – When you transition with frequency between points of observation between inhabitants so as to see the scene and yourself from many points of view.

Mutable Paradigm – When you eclipse the constancy of matter size, such as having a car for a head and then climbing into another car head and driving off.

Solvent Paradigm – When the dream forces logical continuity during absurdity, such as having a car for a head and then climbing into another car head and driving off – where previous legs are suddenly present wheels with no suspension of disbelief.

Fracture – where the dream performs some act that wakes the dreamer up with its impossibility.

Chronological Temporal Immediacy – When the dream flashes forward to show a premonition of what the dream will contain.

Inverse Chronological Temporal Immediacy – When the dream flashes backward to show a premonition of what the dream has contained.

Eternal Facsimile – when we are given an object or a gift that produces an effect eternally, such as a wallet that never runs out of money.

False Existential Facsimile – when we are given an object or a gift that produces an effect eternally, such as a wallet that never runs out of money and we wake up temporarily believing it to be a reality.

Hostile Autonomy Agency – When there is a pervading sense that you are not you but you are powerless to prevent your ‘you’ from going through the actions of the dream, suddenly relegated to the role of observer in crucial, often emotionally potent, events.

MAGIC, GRAVITY, THE MAGI AND DEPRESSION

Related to the Mind War is an ancient theory of the existence of an enshrining protective field or current formed by the geometric arrangement of principle shapes by the Magian Empire. These principles are enshrined in the architecture of the Empire both Exoterically (Shrines, Symbols, Institutions) and Esoterically (Control over Time, Space, Thought) and actively resist change to them through various measures, both rational and irrational – on fronts of Logos and Madness. Some of this architecture takes the form of Protectors of the existence and continuation of God and comprises legions of individuals whose prayers, campaigns, shapes and strategies include magical assaults against those of the Sinisterion, (also referred to as Openers), who would see Christianity’s defiant fight to resist being replaced with an evolutionary advancement of the human race beyond Religions of Monotheism and Insynsian.

The Rational Mind is a precious gem but the Irrational Mind is the psychic region that is most sensitive to Magic, both as means to deploy it, and a means to be affected by it. The concept of the Irrational Mind as used here, is a convenient abstract, but for those who believe in Magic, such belief opens up an entirely invisible vista of perception where the intuition of colours, lights, feelings, sensations, dreams and exchanges of energy in interactions with other humans and other forms is a private engagement of constant warfare. Battle ensues daily with preventative measures erected seeking to prevent the extraction or vampirization of energy from oneself or others, and the sorcerer is constantly on guard for vampires and other entities that would drain them of their life-force. This itself takes energy which must come from others sources. For many this is the role of the Sinister, Aether, Acausal, Dark Ones, or THEM, and Nature, where places of power can be sought and found to replenish the sorcerer. [See Places of Power.]

These interactions are not just against individuals encountered on a daily basis – but can take place in the Astral during sleep – and also by assaults from far more powerful collective fields such as those words, actions and intentions of those who would openly prevent Change which collectively hold together a particular view of the World that resists attempts to alter it. This enables such prisons as Language, Duality, Morality, Hypocrisy, Insynsian, Egoism to reign as the acting powers in experience of the World and ultimately controls the shapes that will be seen and used during one's life on Earth. That the Church has denuded many kinds of resistance to it is unquestioned, with all manner of institutions, laws, armed forces, clergy, moral codes enforced and placed to meet head on the voice or presence of any dissenters to the way Life is experienced. At present, the concept of One God is an inevitable and dominating force on the planet, very old and very wise. Whilst laws, forces, etc openly discourage rebellion against the Church, Powerful rhetoric and violence protects Religion and the Religious, THEM wish to speak here of one particular facet of the overall design of the Magian Matrix: Depression.

Depression, in the face of Experience on Earth, is natural. We feel pain via Empathy. Depression is often not even Personally or Individually centralised – but arises from an overwhelming sensation of the essential geometry of Life feeling terribly wrong but one that cannot be rationalised or explained intellectually – it is an alien feeling, a feeling that seems extraordinarily ancient and yet familiar, but its cause we cannot isolate.

Depression, in science and medicine, has its own explanations. Magically, however, Depression is none other than the resulting oppressive force of the Magian's magical network. We are imprisoned by their Time, Space and Language, their Laws, their Beliefs, their God – though humans are shapeless in spirit, we can feel the crafted shapes of the containers into which they have forced us, containers which fit what we are supposed to be, most unnaturally. The Fear of Death, of Sex, of Joy, of Love, of Chaos defines the Magian prison, referred to as The Cylindrical. The key aspect of the Cylinder is the enclosure of the spirit (shapeless) into a particular (shape) and the same prison for all – this is an act of madness. When we consider that if one does not feel Happy, Joyous, Content all of the time, they are told by society that there is something wrong with them – that Depression, is an illness. We are sent to Doctors to ‘cure it’. This sense of wrongness happens also when we cannot or refuse to conform – or, even when we try to submit or conform to the Judaeo Matrix – there is no achievable way to belong to it and this is part of the reason why Depression is so uncomfortable, because our sensations of the world being horribly wrong or shaped to torture us are not validated or accepted by the key institutions created to prevent such awareness.

Because of the concept of Original Sin or Ultimate Sin, humanity can never be good enough for God, never be the right shape, do the right thing, no MATTER what they do or how they contort to fit to this impossible box. In some regards, it is more accurate to call Depression, Compression.

One aspect of the Magi’s essential attitude to Life was encapsulated in the Catherine Wheel, where torturers mangled the bodies of victims and Broke them, on the Wheel. In the world of Post-Modern Satanism and the present emphasis of Logos as a lens, It is common to believe that there is no War for your Soul or Mind, and that one is merely being paranoid in believing in armies of ‘white’ magicians (Closers) whose interest is in keeping Satanism and the Sinister from arising and minds from escaping the mental prison, but one need look no further for proof that this paranoia has its own life and energy than the Vatican, which sanctioned a new 100 priest army several years ago specifically to fight the rise in Occultism.

Just as You are able to create and presence outcomes, effects and change as an Individual with your thoughts, energies, actions – so does the entire legion of principles that combat the tyrannies of Abrahamism loosely assembled under myriad groups of Satanic, Scientific, Spiritual, Technological, and other anti-Abrahamic currents felt as a solid threatening force to the Empire of the Magi. It haunts them, chides them, insults them – it is not imaginary to them, they can feel it as the encroachment of strange crackling powers trying to infect their brains with tendrilled fingers and Undo the Empire they have erected to control this Aeon in the name of their Monotheistic Figures and Codex. It is why they pray, go to church, resist temptation, tell us what to do, try to restrain the Beast and dictate life from Birth to Death and everything in between. And they feel it, as they feel Everything else, as FEAR.

On the other hand, the exhortations and ferocious dedication they exhibit as a collective in preventing such changes to their Aeon by controlling or destroying individuals, forms and forces that present a threat is a force of will that is intense and powerful. It is so powerful it has become permeate throughout all of Civilisation and spread across the planet, annihilating its resistors or assimilating them through guile or force. This force transforms intent into real architecture, real soldiers, real hatred that would see any threat to it, destroyed. It is not merely a psychic feeling but a visual one, their symbols their presence their laws are omnipresent – in essence, such a force of will has physicated itself from intent because of how strong it is and can be felt as a tangible force. This is called ‘Depression’ – an actual crushing of the spirit felt from such forces to make us throw down our arms and admit defeat, to believe we are undone, that nothing can change, that such forces and forms will eternally endure and sends the message that we should stop fighting against it. – For most, Depression keeps us in check, the weight of such magic hangs heavy on our spirit and keep us from holding our head and weapons up high. But there are magical counter-measures.

We have learned that such compression can turn one into a Spring, consciously allowing oneself to be coiled tightly and then using that stored force to rebound with ferocity. There are ways to do this magically, such as descending slowly to the ground with gravity in a spiral and laying still on the floor until a sudden upward momentum forces one upward. Repeated, the force of Gravity becomes a conscious weapon. The urge to just die (the intended result of depression) can be felt most clearly when laying perfectly still at rest. Yet it is there that the force of Life itself, is felt the most strongly too and which will eventually propel one up off the floor to continue living. Members of THEM are acutely aware of the feeling of depression – on one hand it is natural result of Empathy but on the other it is felt more strongly the closer one gets to overcoming the Magian energy network. Immediate signs of this are communications being interrupted, and depression.

When you look at how THEM is branching out and making a lot of connections, flowing without conflict, and not getting lost in what it is doing, it is becoming a potential threat. If this threat is being felt the Magian’s command of the Sinister (which is neutral and can be commanded by any human whatever their morality) then it is natural to begin to feel depressed – this is in itself what make Aeonian magic so hard to continue, the depression, the feeling that things are doomed and cannot get better. The simultaneous attempt by many LHP to destroy the Ego is THEM believe an old trap – since it is the Ego that causes the upward motion from depression. To lead your enemies to believe destroying the Ego is what will stop the Magi, is an ancient tactic to allow depression to dominate humanity and prevent the coiled energy from being used by a conscious magician. It is, to close off methods to defeat the Magi. (See Diary of a Devilworshiper Vol 4)

To encourage the Ego and only the Ego is also a powerful incitement that upholds the Magian energy network. If we can spread the ability to Remember the Magical nature of the Magi’s Empire – we can Resist and Reform it. Next time you feel Depressed – know that it is the Irrational Power of the Magi acting upon you. Don't let them control you. Rise up and spit in their faces.

ON PSYCHIC VAMPIRES

Recognition of their poison and means of their destruction.

Members of THEM have noted a connexion between the psychological emergence of the Self and an extra sensitivity to the psychic emanations coming from persons in thrall to a particular state of imprisonment by the Ego. viz. the Psychic Vampire.

The level of raised awareness of said emanations may stem from the successful process of psychic growth of the Self – wherein there is developed as a reaction to magical/mental enlightenment, a super-sensitive distinction between the two states or modes of mind, each governing the organism via a particular energy that actively attempts to sustain its domination by suppressing the other.

The two major forms of Being: Ego and Self; were articulated in a previous essay titled “Radia Sol” as autonomous sentients referred to as ‘Psychanisms’. Psychanisms are modes of thought that struggle to gain complete control over the psychic faculties thus determining the energetic mode of the host organism and characterising its level of relatedness to the world around it.

Radia Sol also related why the majority of human organisms are ruled by the Ego and remain prisoners in psychic thrall to the drives of their limbic system or reptilian energy base. The ‘reptilian energy base’ is the lowest mode of reasoning used by an organism concerning how to solve the immediate problems it faces or satisfy its base ‘animal’ type urges and desires. Such urges are basic and rooted in a primal base, such as hunger and how to get food, thirst and how to get water, lust and how to sate it, the urge to procreate and acquisitiveness [acquiring things] for example, and the drive to sate these needs as quickly as possible.

Because it is not always safe or advisable to sate one's desires immediately, human beings became chameleons/scorpions: masters of deception that devised subtle or gross ways of getting exactly what they wanted.

When they could not get what they wanted: and their desire was thwarted: it was the element of the psyche called the EGO, that became frustrated and caused the organism to throw a tantrum, fly into a rage, weep or cry, or use all means possible to cleverly find a way to overcome the obstacles that beset the ego's goal.

Likewise, it was the EGO that caused feelings of joy or the act of laughter and a sense of celebration when the ego achieved its aim and fulfilled its desire.

Exactly what those desires were: was determined by a great many factors, including the Time a person was born into, the Technology available in that Time, the Moral/Ethical background of that person, The Culture in which one lived, early impressions of the World, Pleasant or Negative Experiences and any marked effect they had on the understanding or perception of solving problems, dealing with frustration, co-operating with others, trust, love and a host of other indeterminable factors.

But because the host of factors involved in shaping the ego is so large, composed of a deeply profound network of reason, memory, experience, ploy, problem solving, ethics, behaviour, emotion, sensorium, and many more diverse and intricate mental equations and contents, the ego is occult and private.

Some of the connections an organism's ego makes between one thing and another can, for instance, be grossly estimated through observing the actions or reasoning of the organism – or guessed at by a deduction of the organisms drive or motivation to act or speak the way it has as a means to satisfy some secret urge. But on the whole, the behaviour of persons and the diversity of their manner of private reason remains a mystery.

It is not then possible to discern wholly the contents of the intricate organic 'clock-work' that exists in the mental net or an organism or fathom the virtually infinite calculations and connexions made by the ego to solidify the separate elements of the world into one cohesive 'Weltanschauung' or world-view that governs how that organism reacts to the world, to other organisms, and to itself.

However, it is not necessary to have a complete understanding of an organisms private mental content in order to recognise the energetic network formed inside an organism symptomatic of Psychic Vampirism – whereupon a certain connexion has been affected or damaged by way of a potent desire left unfulfilled, a compulsive urge that cannot be fulfilled, an addiction or obsession with calculating or re-experiencing a particular connexion, a traumatic experience that causes a stagnancy in the growth of any particular connexion or the connexions as a whole, or some other frustration occurring in the processes of the mental network that results in being unable to make further connexions, results in making irrational and unreasonable connexions, or in becoming trapped in a particular cycle of connexions.

An examination of the ego is best achieved from the higher degree of the mode of Self, whereupon a greater contrast is afforded to study of the ego because of the distance in psychic growth between the Self and the ego, than an examination of the ego from its own mode.

The ego has been said to be highly 'self-centred' – which is an unfortunate use of words – for the Self and the ego have almost nothing in common. The ego is better termed 'narcissistic' in that it exists for its own sake.

The growth of the ego in both its young and its mature stage is easily illustrated when comparing a young child, and an adult whose profession involves the ability to lie. The child is sociopathic and concerned with satiating desire and urges immediately. But the adult is able to wait and to defer gratification until such time the desire can be safely or privately satiated and is even able to deftly conceal secretive intention beneath the guise of outward appearance.

The outward guise is often determined by the elements that were involved in the organism's early problem solving. This basic art of deception begins with the child re-enacting the elements that lead to the satiating of a particular desire. I.e., a baby cries to get more milk or attention. If milk arrives when it cries it may make an association [or mental connexion] between crying and getting milk. Such associations rapidly grow in complexity: a small boy may break something in order to get in trouble with the specific intent to re-create the satisfaction and praise that comes from being re-assured and comforted in fixing it or cleaning the mess up, once the stage of the stern telling off has passed. These means of 'provoking a certain situation or outcome' are like a natural form of magic that is rooted in the basic urge of survival and averting danger or unpleasantness by acts of camouflage and deception, play-acting or mimesis [mimicking expected or habitual behaviour].

Habitual behaviours become ingrained in the organism as a means of defence not only against danger, but against being thwarted in its will. The guises used often become extremely complex over time as an organism is required to formulate many different strategies of deception to deal with a variety of situations that require different kinds of manipulation.

Yet such guises are not strictly limited to individuals, that is, to the realm of the personal. Because of the impact will/mentality can have on its environment such guises can infect larger bodies or groups of people such as political or religious movements. An example of the innate obsession with deception by human beings is extant in the behaviour of the Russians and the Americans during the Cold War. Both countries assumed the chameleonic tendencies of the human in a much more powerful form by disguising their political plans, intentions and movements and using codes, spies, intense secrecy and espionage en masse in the race to deceive the other about their nuclear capabilities. In this scenario, both Russia and America excelled in demonstrating not only the extent of creativity human beings may go to to cloak outward appearances, but that the inability to feel secure by one organism can easily turn into a contagion shared by others to manifest an obsessive desire.

What causes the drive in an organism that sustains the stubbornness to achieve a specific energy level?

Although the ‘pathology’ of a person [I.e., the cause of their actions or speech] can be guessed at or to some degree ascertained, it cannot be definitively known owing to its enormous intricacy of billions of connexions, there are nevertheless specific characteristics associated with a Psychic Vampire that help to identify it. The first of these is Insecurity. The second is Lack of Genuine Sympathy [[lacking in feeling for the other person, and only relating to the world via themselves]. A third is Concealed Narcissism, a fourth, Priority.

In the most literal sense, it is a missing or loose, or ‘insecure’ mental connection that causes the specific neuroses and pathology of an individual. Without being able to complete a mental calculation owing to a complication in the mental process for that connexion – the individual is frustrated in their attempts to process an experience, idea or emotion holistically, I.e., using the whole of their faculties to bring a mental process to a satisfactory conclusion. Instead, a loose or insecure connexion becomes a focus of obsession whereby the individual becomes trapped in a loop trying to complete the missing information with only the information it already has, unsuccessfully.

Because the connexion cannot be formed by the agency of the organism itself, it requires the connexion to be made artificially via the agency of others. To do this it evokes or ‘re-stages’ the conditions that were present when the connexion was first damaged. This is usually an unconscious re-enactment, powered by a conscious drive that ‘something’ is missing and that ‘something’ can be found if only this or that situation is brought about.

Such evocation is intended to bring about the creation of an element or the elements that ‘fill in’ for the missing component that would lead to satisfaction and the ability of the organism to move on and form new connexions by shifting its obsessive focus from that injured connexion.

The behaviour of an organism involved in setting up those unconscious conditions requires other organisms to assist – to supply the energetic outlay that the Psychic Vampire needs to begin. This is where energetic exchange, energy drain and psychic rape come in.

ENERGETIC EXCHANGE

Energetic exchange is usually reciprocal. Throughout life, the ego will attempt to balance its energetic expenditure by playing an endless game of gambling in gain and loss. In exchanging 'good morning' with a friend or stranger on the street the ego expends some of its energy in a calculated risk to gain back more energy or at least break even.

If the person replies in a manner that is conducive to the conditions required by our ego to count it as a gain, or energetic reward. That is, if the ego wants the person to reply in a like manner to count the risk of expenditure a successful gamble by affirming to the personality that it is a "good, likeable, friendly" person for instance, and this is the sort of identity that corresponds with the organisms sense of "I" – then the personality or "I" receives an energetic gain that makes it feel good.

How good it feels, depends on how important it is to the ego to assert the elements that define the identity of the organism. If someone has interest in being a happy person, then having someone return a warm reply will have a higher energetic return to that person than it will to a person accustomed to being suspicious of strangers.

If there were to be a loss though, and the person replied rudely, for instance; not only would we have lost our original energetic wager, but we would have suffered a further loss of energy when our ego's gamble to gain energy is taxed further from a reprisal that injures its pride or sense of "I". In such a case, the ego may seek to extract the energy back from the person by attempting a similar rude gesticulation to 'even the score' or enter into a war with it for the return of our energy.

This might be done either by having them apologise and affirm our sense of identity as a good, nice, likeable fellow, or by depleting their energy stores in much the same way they have depleted ours.

Exchanging negative comments, putting others down, etc is probably one of the quickest ways to usurp energy from others to feed our own insecurities – whereby we 'level out' and justify our actions to ourselves to feel better. If, however, we are unable to regain energy directly from someone who has taken it, it may be extracted forcefully from others unrelated to the original incident. Which of course, leads to a vicious cycle. The nature of the esoteric world reveals this: most of humanity is locked in struggle with psychic vampires.

The patterns that repeat in families, friendships, groups, relationships, marriages, society, etc owe much to the stipulations of the psychic vampire – most of which will end in nastiness, enmity, disaster and a high amount of destruction in the secret fight to maintain a hold of and increase one energy imbalance without first fixing the connexions causing the thirst.

It should be understood however, that it is always our own ego that depletes our energy. Firstly, by taking the risk of a gamble in the first place, and secondly, in being over-sensitive and having its fragility revealed, the ego chooses to be offended. But it is the ‘projection of revenge’ by the ego that leads an organism to mistakenly take the energetic bungle to heart, and to believe its own wishes are synonymous with that of the quite separate, irate ego. This manifests inwardly as an alignment of our ‘sense of identity’ with the indignant hurt of the ego and the outward belief that the other party has caused it, I.e., Insecurity.

INSECURITY

Insecurity is an incomplete connexion that acts like a leak. Although energy may be poured into it, if there is an open or insecure connexion, energy expended into that connexion will be wasted and lost in much the same way a hole in a bucket will eventually cause the bucket to drip dry. This is the process that causes the insatiable THIRST of the Psychic Vampire. It is important to understand that only under radical conditions of change in the ego, personal identity or alchemy, can a Psychic Vampire ever actually fulfil or fix an insecure connexion. For the most part, an ego that sustains the conditions or state of mind conducive related to the obsession with that connexion, cannot be healed, and if it should become a psychic vampire, should be avoided at all costs or destroyed.

Before proceeding – it is important at this stage to make it clear that Psychic Vampirism is seldom one-sided. It cannot be absolutely determined in the favour of one party or the other who is the original initiator for a psychic energy exchange. Psychic Vampires tend to be charismatic, and the victim [prey] may deliberately entice a relationship with a psychic vampire in order to partake of its energy reserves and the vampire’s gift at fulfilling what is felt to be lacking in the prey.

The classic scenario of a beautiful but insecure person making a strong bond with someone uglier but confident is played out all the time. Whereby both parties ‘agree’ to the psychic relationship and the benefits that relationship may confer. For this reason, an entanglement with a Psychic Vampire may be extremely difficult to break by an outside party, as the vampire and prey act in symbiosis. That said, let us move onto the Hunt.

THE M.O. OF A SINISTER PREDATOR

The Psychic Vampire is often a cunning gambler of energy. Especially if they have been performing Psychic Drain for a considerable amount of time. They tend to resort to using the lowest necessary energy expenditure for the highest rate of return, and to this end, capitalise on the reptilian urges and desires of ego-based prey. Appealing to the vanities, base sentiments, basic emotions, and standardised conversations of everyday life.

It will generally begin hunting by employing a single tactic [or modus operandi] until it has studied and assessed a potential victim [or ‘symbiote’ if the prey is willing] and formed a psychic tendril strong enough to begin its rabid feast.

These tactics tend toward being Aloof – i.e., indirect means of getting attention such as secretive or sly mystical/cryptic talk or surrounding oneself with riddles and specific terminology or to be made the centre of attention – but to manipulate circumstances in such a way that it seems the vampire has been elected to be the centre by others rather than itself. Being in places where one will be noticed, acting distant and vague to draw one’s attention, creating elaborate works of art or speech and pretending they are nothing, to be reinforced on a consistent and ever-increasing basis – all the while pretending to be completely detached and uninterested in being noticed – these are the wiles of a Psychic Vampire.

Be wary of the guise of perfection and of the need of a person to make things perfect, and strangely static as though they were trying to freeze your happiness in Time, for you. But ever be just, not all idealists are vampires.

That said, there are vampires in every house, in every street, in every city, in every country. There are probably more psychic vampires, owing to the dominance of the ego, than there are stable egos that are not corrupted by their own inflated sense of importance.

Psychic Vampires are cowards that like to isolate their prey for themselves. They are highly territorial of prey and in a group, may jealously seek to keep the prey isolated from others. They also do this to prevent their prey from being fed on or feeding any other person, hence the Psychic Vampire is keen at detecting what are otherwise invisible energetic exchanges. To this extent they have been known to allocate secretive jargon and specialist topics of discussion that only the psychic vampire and the person being talked to can understand.

The psychic vampire will often [but not always] latch onto the weakest, most susceptible or insecure person with which they have the greatest proximity and determine what it is that is lacking in their prey that they can supply to endear them to it. If the prey lacks confidence for instance, they may feed their prey and its confidence by a rich and generous energetic exchange of praise and flattery. The intention is to cause addiction to the Psychic Vampire and to the energy it supplies the prey thus deterring the prey from wandering very far or for very long from the Psychic Vampires side. The prey will likely associate itself as a 'team' of sorts with the vampire whereby the vampire will fulfil and pander to any weakness in its prey, giving the prey confidence and security.

This generosity by the psychic vampire will last only so long; however, the psychic vampire will be most anxious to recoup its energy immediately after it is confident that its prey is psychically entangled and will find it hard to break away.

At the point where the relationship has been sustained for a period of a few days, the vampire will test the waters by making self-deprecating remarks intended to draw sympathy [energy] from the prey. The ego of the prey will be more than willing to give back some of the rich stores of surplus energy it has received from the vampire during the generous phase because it naturally loves to gamble. It will attempt to reassure the psychic vampire, in the hope that it can continue receiving the energy given by the psychic vampire, who will at first make it easy for its prey to placate it.

Vampires are crafty and patient. Usually, by the time a person has realised they have been attacked by such a creature, the psychic tendril is deep within them. Strange bouts of impolite or uncomfortable curiosity into one's affairs, jealousy, anger, depression, flattery, praise, insults, etc from an otherwise consistent person may be signs of a vampire losing patience from the effort to hold their deceptive guise.

But over a short amount of time, the vampire will let down its carefully concealed narcissism and gradually depress its prey by being increasingly implacable and unreasonable thus requiring more and more effort by the prey to keep an energetic balance.

The vampire will cease to cloak its priorities and refer more and more to itself, talking about itself, getting attention on itself, luring energy from others by causing them to take notice or comment on some deceptively innocent remark made by the vampire whereupon the vampire will begin draining all it come into contact within the preys circle by causing the conversation to come back to itself.

Owing to the rich increase of energy to the prey's ego from the initial contact with the vampire, there forms an addiction to the vampires' energetic boosts in much the same way one develops a taste for narcotics. A high is caused by the imbalance of so much incoming energy to the ego. Psychological Dependence on the new amounts of energy will cause a corresponding crash when they are depleted. This leads to a change in the psyche via a new and unrealistic sense of identity, similar in many ways to the original narcissism of the psychic vampire. This in itself shows the absolute power a psychic vampire can hold over a person by its knowledge or intuition of these processes and by working as a type of drug-pusher. In fact, the psychic vampire is considered so very dangerous for this ability, because it rapidly disintegrates its preys' own identity and normal energetic stock exchange and causes the prey itself to become a reciprocal psychic vampire too. The psychic vampires gradual change in behaviour is hard enough to notice, but with an energy addiction it will be either ignored or justified by the prey so long as it can continue getting its hit.

Once the prey is hooked, the psychic vampire rapidly increases its drain and sets about to exact a terrible revenge. Its implacability steadily grows until the prey must literally grovel and plead with the psychic vampire to take back its self-deprecating comments, which over time are moved from the belief that they are caused by an external source such as an enemy, parent, etc, and are stemming directly from the actions or inactions of the prey, whose efforts to restore balance by giving energy back to the vampire are now treated as insincere and callous. The prey is called a liar, and so on, in order to extract more and more energy from the hapless host.

We have established that this process occurs because of the insatiable thirst of the psychic vampire caused by an insecure connexion, and the need for greater and greater energy hits – much the same way movies must now be full of horrific violence or gratuitous sex to excite the over-stimulated, worn-out senses that require ever more exciting and strong imagery and sound to achieve the same levels of satisfaction. A psychic vampire is a ravenous addict who quickly exhausts the energy extracted and requires longer and better highs. They do not of course come because of the severed connexion in the mental networking that simply cannot be fixed and loses all the energy poured into it – to this end the vampire is extremely dangerous, a psychopath that will drain every drop of its prey, but keep going back for more, and expect it to be there.

The psychopathology that links the vampire to its prey is extremely dangerous and difficult to destroy – for even a drained husk will be used to some extent in the vampire's repertoire. The vampire is not stupid – it will realise that the drain can only go on for so long, and when the energy drain begins to weaken it will extend its tendrils into those around its prey, inc friends, family and acquaintances. It may even do this on getting to know the prey, setting about charming the circle of the prey in preparation. It may use the prey to get close to another prey or cause dissension via rumours among the prey's circles. It may make the prey an enemy and sow discord that turns others against it, for it will do Anything to get its energetic fix.

At this point, the vampire will utilise any number of tactics to achieve a sufficient level of drain. Verbal or Physical Violence, threats of Violence, Crying, Psychological, Mental, Physical abuse, Harsh and Vindictive treatment, Torture, Pleading, Crying, Making Promises, Appealing to one's sense of decency, generosity, humanity, Religion, Politics, Blackmail, any number of modes of Deception, Silent Treatment, Ignoring the Prey, Causing trouble for the Prey, Killing the Prey.

KILLING A PSYCHIC VAMPIRE

The Psychic Vampire is a relentless psychopath. Because of the enormous damage it can do one must be extremely wary of such creatures, for to excite them carelessly by giving them any attention, making a scene and demonstrating your energetic reserves, making a drama around them that causes them to feed, is like pouring blood into a swimming pool containing a hungry shark. One must be cool, calm, detached, and effortless in getting rid of a vampire – but one must take more care not to first attract one.

A Psychic Vampire has powerful intuition, perception and is able to detect very slight changes in emotion, tension, vocal inflection, or danger to its cover being blown that are otherwise invisible to the average person. But it cannot feel sympathy. It cannot put aside its own interests for very long and because it is driven by a compulsive obsession to drain others, it cannot hide its interests very long. If possible, prey seems like too much trouble, a psychic vampire will opt to find another rather than take the risk of being exposed – for Psychic Vampires have an extraordinary sense for detecting psychically resilient and powerful minds. It hates and shuns anyone possessed of Self – for the Self sees right through the clumsy contrivances of a vampire operating from the ego plane and detects the rabid dishonesty and sweet smelling deception of a vampire, immediately. Time, therefore, will help reveal a clumsy vampire, but of those vampires more subtle it is only a weak help.

To destroy the hold a vampire has on one is hard. Any display of aggression, sadness, annoyance, verbal animosity etc, demonstrates only a reserve of energy that the vampire has not tapped. The vampire will amaze at the depths of its cunning in appraising the situation correctly and winning back the trust of its prey by wordful wiles, sweet promises and laments in the beginning, and leave one breathless with the extent of its destructive capabilities if the prey tries to escape later on when the prey is in much deeper wedlock with its tendrils.

One has ONE chance to destroy the hold a psychic vampire has. Its success depends on abiding exactly to and without weakening the resolve at any point, a silent and cold detachment from the vampire. One must anticipate the many tactics the vampire will devise to continue its drain and be prepared to meet them without emotion, without energetic displays, and the same, resigned, determined, cold, emotionless detachment to ignore the vampire. One must not engage the vampire in conversation, or rise to emotion under the temptation to reply to the vampires' calculated insults and deprecations. One must not accept any gifts from the vampire, any money from the vampire, any favours from the vampire, nothing, no energy transaction either in matter or in spirit must be performed. One must be prepared for the vampire to attack the ones around it and to set them against the prey, to circulate vicious rumours and sweet promises and apologies in the same day. No letters should be read, no replies given to email, letter, phone msgs, any gifts by the vampire should be left exactly where they were delivered. The part of the world that the vampire has entered is to be treated with cold awareness that it has laid a snare to make your world collide once more with its. Flowers, fruits, bears, cars, should be left to wilt, to rot, to age, to rust, as is, without remorse. To give in ONCE, just once, is to show the vampire that if it persists long enough, it will succeed.

Again, to give in at any time, to bother to talk to the vampire, to extend an invitation, to let it take you to dinner to apologise for what it has done, to have anything more to do with the vampire is to court disaster. Only ONE time, one moment of weakness is necessary to show the vampire your inability to break its psychic tendril and leave yourself open to further psychic rape. Because the vampire is patient, it will continually manoeuvre you into a position where it can drain you. If you take it back and then try to break with it again, you will have cursed yourself forever by your weak resolve. The vampire will not believe your adamant reassertions that you do not want it back, and it will pester you, again and again, endlessly, sure of itself that if it only does it long enough, you will give in, as you gave in before.

And this raises a question – how many vampires are aware of what they do? Are vampires' conscious of their psychic drain on others or are they oblivious to it?

One member of THEM relates being a strong psychic vampire for a long time. He took much from people until he found the ability to recognise the shortcomings in his energetic networks, work through many things and experiences and identify and complete missing connexions. But there was a dynamic spiritual quest that centred him, a core dynamic that drove his actions toward knowing who what he was and identifying that core with various understandings of relatedness to others – not just being a psychic vampire for its own sake. In this sense he completed himself and found the Self. The Self is nuclear, it burns of its own energy thus there is no need to drain others.

But how many psychic vampires have the luxury of knowing Thysself through such hard work and overcoming the role allotted to themselves? And can other psychic vampires be made to realise what it is they do? The Temple of THEM believes they can be made aware – and can harness that personal “selfishness” and narcissism in a much more powerful manner than merely serving one’s own personal ends to supra-personal aims. On that note, a vampire driven by ego and unconscious or operating on a low level of awareness is one thing, a being with the power of Self-awareness who can choose to be a vampire is quite another.

Only a powerful magician can escape the clutches of a vampire with relative ease. For freeing yourself from these creatures involves an understanding that transcends any sense of personal obligations and roles in the world to be this or that to suit this or that and thus fit snugly into the carefully shaped snares of a vampire. A vampire is a master of relations, they will tailor your coffin to fit you if you do not possess a strong immovable sense of self and detachment. Such a personality lacks for little or nothing, recognises the wiles of a vampire and is wary of flattery. It is aware of the subtleties of energetic exchange and the transactions that are enacted secretly but daily by the occult faculties of the mind. In other words, it recognises the whole process of energy exchange and the dangers involved in any gamble. Because the Self is energetically self-sufficient; the gamble is no longer required. A habit of detachment carries over into behaviour and thought – shining brightly in the night as a warning beacon to psychic denizens. Developing the Self weakens any footholds of personality in the ego prone to insecurity and manipulation, makes the motives of the ego transparent, and gives vampires, nowhere to hide.

RITUALIS SANGUINIS SOLIS

Starving a vampire will cause it to use its connexions of family, friends, etc it has made through you. Keeping the vampire in stony silence may prevent it from taking your energy – but the vampire is a hunter, it will move to the next weakest or susceptible prey in the pack and begin to feed once more. To this extent, lies, deception, wiles, and abuse may be directed at your loved ones.

A Vampire must be completely destroyed if one is to kill it physically. Vampires are extremely dangerous if only wounded – the damage they may cause with their silver tongue is incomparable. Hence the head of a Psychic Vampire must be cut off in order to kill it and wrapped in black silk to break its black magical hold on one.

An enchantment using the power of Demaphyr [sleep sketching] can be employed to strengthen the resolve of others victimised by the vampire.

Demaphyr involves working visual magic at the stage of astral sleep where the eyes are shut, the body is almost unable to be felt, and brightly coloured patterns are swirling and forming abstract and intricate geometrical shapes in preparation to take the forms of the night's solid dreams...

In this place, sketch a WHITE box. Make it as real, as vivid as you can, and continue to draw it until each night it comes to you of its own accord.

Also, construct a live BLACK box from wood or cardboard or metal. When you hear from your loved ones or friends of misfortunes or vicious rumours or misdeeds caused by the vampire – propel the emotion felt into the WHITE box of your mind. Let them swirl about inside it, tumultuous and angry, if necessary, but contain them therein privately and show no emotion, talk not of the vampire's acts, or acknowledge them. Show no effect of them on you. Nightly, take the energy from your WHITE box, and move it mentally, by intending it, into the BLACK box of reality. Continue to charge the WHITE box with energy in this manner by letting the vampire feed you. Drain the creature dry.

To dissipate the vampire's energy into nothing – When you feel sufficient energy and emotion has been poured into the BLACK box – annihilate its energy by opening it in bright sunlight.

To send the stored, transformed energy into your loved ones that they may resist and fight the vampire, release the energy by opening it in the darkness and think of your families/friends resolve.

Your non-reaction to messages passed on by the vampire and will to channel the tendrils safely into the BLACK box is the power that causes the transformation of the vampire's poisons into protective power. Thus is the vampire dealt with and defeated magically and physically. Its poisons exposed and its destruction executed.

THEM

DEATH OF TOUCH

(Owy of THEM)

So now, over the past 5-10 years or so, touching has been made such a taboo that it is now accepted as the norm that physical interaction with another human is wrong, both something to be feared and shunned. This lack of intimacy and empathy has made people ripe to accept the next stage of alienation – the disillusion of all face-to-face communication for social purposes. We are being bombarded with imagery that implies talking with your “loved ones, family or social circle” is more enhanced with the aid of some micro chipped gadget or another. And although it may seem innocent enough to those that have grown up in an age of constant ‘communication’, the implications of what is being done, and being allowed to be done, to our most basic and primal of acts, holds the ability to see mankind foster out complete control of the very thing that makes us human.

There are many facets to the mechanics of why and how the Magian elite would and are benefiting from the death of our skills to communicate sans technology.

Initially, through the advent of the office ‘Intranet‘ it imbibed in the common worker that now the “BOSS” had a constant window into every action you performed. As this became an acceptable work environment, then we were plied with mobile phones, touted as a necessity in the ‘new’ world of business, making it virtually impossible for any worker to truly be free of his workplace no matter what the time or day. This constant pressure has compelled people to start to loath speaking with another person, lest it be more work, more pressure or more oppression. The seed was planted.

But left at just that the average person would have, over time, disposed of their phones and returned to being in charge of their own time. This is when mobile phones started to incorporate new features and functions...games, photos, text messages...to give the illusion that it was an instrument of leisure. And then we were infested. Suddenly everyone had a mobile phone. There is even a marked line in most peoples’ heads to reduce history to before the mobile phone and then after...

So now the population had become accustomed to being constantly leashed, believing that communication before had been ineffective and cumbersome, that they were pioneers in a brave new era where mankind would be able to truly speak to each other, that the wisdom and understanding they longed for was merely a matter of being constantly available and constantly heard.

The same thing is true for the internet. Though another leap has been taken with the proliferation of “social media” sites like face book, twitter et el. In that because we choose the people we are communicating with, the ability to interact with people that do not share the same interests/hobbies/political agendas is being erased. Though it can be tiresome, humans have always been compelled to grow through the things that either perplex or affront us. But now technology is being asked to do that for us. By listing your interests etc, you can eliminate the need to ever have to even acknowledge the existence of someone you disagree with.

This is a very dangerous trend. The ability to relate to somebody you disagree with, to be able to discuss the topic without personally attacking the messenger, is vital to human growth. If our ideals/ beliefs/ thoughts are never brought into question, then we will lose the ability to look beyond ourselves. Man trapped in his/her own hype is an easy creature to control and manipulate, so lost are they in a sea of agreement that the very thought of a mistake never crosses their minds. Add to this the anonymity that the cyber world affords its users. Never having to take responsibility for what you create, never truly being able to verify who anyone is.

How easy will it become for the Magian elite to simply redirect the millions of online interactions to anywhere but its intended destination. With the complex task of trying to falsify the complexities of intelligent argument between humans having already been taken care of, people could soon find themselves unknowing ‘chatting’ with a database of responses. In these circumstances it would not take long to strip humanity of its cohesion altogether. After all, those who did not jump upon the cyber bandwagon have become virtual outcasts now, millions made to feel left out nobodies, like they are not part of the emerging new ‘real’ world.

So, all, in opposition we need to laugh, cry, learn, fight, love, fear, fuck, be bored, learn to enjoy embarrassment and discomfort, touch, learn, explore and be with other humans – face to face – lest we lose our delight in the pleasure of life. Lest we give over to those who long to control the spontaneity and impulse of existence. Lest we not live at all.

REMOTE SOLIDARITY

+o+

“And `lo the Black Sea did flicker,

With the flames of a thousand Nexion,

Cosmic blood coursing forth,

Quicksilver of the Vivisection...”

One may ask: how does the Temple of THEM enjoy solidarity and magickal cohesion if its members operate in cells and never meet other cells to conduct group activities?

An answer: Through Empathy.

Empathy is believed by THEM to be a result of contact with the Acausal. While the exact operational nature of the Acausal defies a concrete explanation: it is not dissimilarly represented by the Sea and can be grasped intuitively as an “Other-Dimensional Ocean” that rages beneath our own dimension, the “Causal”.

From the Acausal Ocean a swell [Wyrd/Cosmic Will] is generated that causes waves [Acausal charges] to well up and `break' [Presence] in the dimension of the Causal. The charges manifest in the Causal as various types of “co-nexion”, a link between the two worlds. One of these co-nexions is the human being.

A gold-fish bowl analogy is apt here. A flat piece of cardboard with straws punched through it is inserted to act as a stopper between two goldfish bowls taped together with their tops touching to form the shape of an hourglass. One bowl, let's say the lower one, is filled with water to represent the Acausal. The other bowl, the upper one, contains some pieces of sponge, representing matter and the Causal. The straws represent co-nexions between the two worlds. It is through the co-nexions that the Acausal charge passes through into the Causal. Imagine that water from the lower bowl is able to travel up, through and out of the straws, leaking into the top bowl. If there is an unlimited supply of water in the lower bowl, over time, the upper bowl will be flooded. How fast it floods is determined by the width and the number of the straws that the water can flow through. The sponges represent inert matter whereby contact with the water is the equivalent to Change, the result of acausal charge giving life/animation to matter and to us. In turn, Change is the means that leads to an altering of collective consciousness by increasing the number of connexions to the Acausal.

Via this model we can garner an understanding of oceanic displacement that allows the co-nexion to be simultaneously solitary in the causal, but unified with other co-nexions at an acausal level, with empathic communication possible that defies causal limitations of time and space.

Understanding the co-nexion of the Acausal and Causal is important; for what is known as the collective unconscious resides in the Acausal. The manifestation of the stage of consciousness that has been called “Self” is thought to be a result of a human co-nexion directly accessing the subconscious part of them that resides in the acausal.

Thus, accessing the subconscious can be achieved by widening the channel for acausal charge to presence more of its energies. And because an increase in Acausal energy is believed responsible for the inherent genius and original thought that flows from the human nexion, there is significant occult interest in tapping into such a source to potentially create a new species of being with unrestricted access to the subconscious. The Self can thus be said to be a higher receiver: a desirable progression of Consciousness. Some observations have been made regarding the results in the causal dimension of contacting the Acausal. For example, there is a marked increase in collective Synchronicity, where a unique idea surfaces collectively and consciously by many people and at a similar time; or, personal Synchronicity whereby a being experiences magical magnetism to attract improbable and often fortuitous circumstances that assist one to realise their personal destiny, i.e. “Wyrð”. THEM call this “guiding light” – The Acausal Voice. The Acausal Voice is synonymous with “Wyrð”, or in layman’s terms, the ‘express wishes’ of the Cosmic Will for evolutionary development.

THEM believe that in our six self-types coming together: we have formed an empathic ring that allows a vast torrent of Acausal energy to flow into the Causal. This increased co-nexion with the Acausal has given rise to unprecedented insight, including Remote Solidarity.

Through Remote Solidarity, presencing of the Acausal Voice by the Australian Chapter of Melbourne can assist the work of the Sydney Chapter by, for example, accepting their enemies as our own and synchronising the performance of regular Death Rites to aid and hasten the destruction of those individuals deemed Opfers by the collective will of THEM.

In the death rite the “Aeon of Fire”, empathy with one another is created by psychologically bearing witness to the will of the person who initiated the Death Rite and supporting that person’s aim. Such solidarity aids the cohesion of our members causally– with said ritual further emotively enhanced by the taking of non-sensitive photos as a psychic proof. That a member knows he/she is being supported in their desire acts as a powerful enhancement of their will on a personal level, but to synchronise the performance of focused energies allows the Acausal charges implicit in those individuals to run together causally creating a combined Will of tremendous strength.

It is possible then, and as our enemies approach Imperium; restricting the ability of its opponents to get together physically; even necessary, for isolated pockets of persons to perform powerful magick and Change together via speaking as a co-nexion of the Acausal Voice.

RADIA SOL: EMANATIONS OF THE SELF

– A THEORY –

0.

Opening Statements

This manuscript is the amalgam of two ideas. The first idea comes from looking into the various ideas that deal with the personal alchemy of the Magickian as s/he discards the Ego in necessary favour of the Self.

The second idea comes from my foray into the fields of Science and Physics to educate myself on the basics that I felt I lacked the knowledge of.

The discarding and transcending of the Ego via ‘alchemical’ processes poses some interesting inferences.

That the Ego is not necessarily the ‘be-all and end-all’ of our organisms intellectual and spiritual capacity, and that the emergence of a new species of capacity can be attained by shedding the older ego-based skin of the conscious through the harsh alchemical processes mentioned within alchemical-based texts, is interesting enough. But this alchemical angle seems to be quite satisfactorily covered for the moment and my concern and this manuscript aim to explore another aspect of the Psyche: the metaphysical process that enables the Psyche to shift from Ego to Self.

Amongst most other books that cover the subject of Psyche, from the manner in which the aspects of the Unconscious, Ego and Self are attributed to the Psyche, I get the impression they are represented almost as if they were transient beings. As if the Psyche is inhabited by the three individual entities, and ‘Ego’ for instance, is merely one power in control of the organism at any given time from a choice of three: A triplicate that inhabits the organism as if the organism were a vehicle and one of the three aspects the vehicles current driver. When I found myself wondering if the Psyche could indeed be inhabited by a sort of triplicate life of its own, I began trying to apply scientific principles from an Acausal point of view to work out how these three organisms of the Psyche or ‘Psychanisms’ might function.

The Ego is integrated with, and ingrained as, part of our conscious, sure. Yet, via alchemy, it is metaphysically possible to increase and decrease its degree of domination, and can even be forced to take a backseat to one of the other aspects as the organism gains conscious recognition of its Ego and enables the Psyche to evolve into the Self. This sounds like a relatively simple enough process in theory. However, when I'd personally apprehended the concept of the Psyche and nurtured the ability to recognise which of the three aspects were dominant within the conscious of others around me: it was increasingly clear how difficult it was for an organism to gain primary consciousness of its Ego in order to enable the move to self.

Given the elite nature of Satanists, I toyed with the idea that this inability for the Majority to apprehend, recognise and overcome the driver of their organism as the Satanist is able to, was due to two things:

The differing degree of mergence of the Acausal with the respective nexions.

The presence of an x factor in the respective organism enabling independent recognition of the dominant power currently driving their organism.

I hypothesise that Self emerges from Ego by virtue of the Self becoming Self-Aware. This self-awareness primarily requires the Self to realise it exists. So how does the Self come to recognise itself, and furthermore become the dominant Psychanism over the virtually absolute dominance of the Ego in many cases, either naturally or magically? It is reasonable to assume that there exists some sort of trigger for the Self's awareness, that such triggers prompt the organism into suddenly becoming aware of the Psychanism in current control.

Yet the 'Psychanisms' are intangible and, from many points of view inseparable: as much a part of us as we are of it. So how does an organism apprehend them? In part, this is where the Alchemical and Magickal working toward the ability to recognise and separate the Self from the Ego may come in. Yet logically speaking, perhaps the Psychanisms recognise their image and become consciously aware of it in the same way as the organism they inhabit does – by its reflection in a mirror?

Esoterically and Sociologically speaking, if one thinks of the manner in which a child's unconscious slowly forms into an Ego, one realises a process occurs wherein the organism is unable to see itself except in other people via the visible external interactions and changes it makes. (Added to of course by Environment, Culture et al until personal identity is achieved) One gets the impression that everyone is looking at everyone and everything else simply to see or more precisely, Define, themselves. Since the myth 'Equality' and the concept of all people being equal has no standing in my hypothesis, perhaps it is the unequal portioning of charge to some individuals via the different degree of individual mergence with the Acausal that enables certain individuals' better recognition and control of their Psychanisms.

Of course, if one views the Self as on the same fundamental mission as the Ego, that is, to see its reflection in other Psychanisms of the same species to reaffirm itself, one can see a distinct major disadvantage in the ratio of Self (rare and highly polished mirrors) to Ego (crass lenses of personal distortion) by which the Self may recognise itself. It is easy to appreciate thus, the rarity of the Self being attained and then kept in power as the dominant Psychanism. Perhaps this vast difference in ratio is the reason for the hermitage of Self-types who seek solace away from the majority, the paradigm of Ego. Nietzsche for example?

Unable to find another Self to reflect itself back to itself, perhaps the Self is forced to seek solace in isolation to try and mirror itself by itself. If this is the case, the ability of the dominant Psyche to grow upon Self-Reflection leads me to surmise that each organism theoretically ‘radiates’ something to be reflected. Beams of psyche like the light of a sun (Radia Sol) perhaps, which it beams out toward the Psyches of other organisms, using them like mirrors or walls to bounce itself or ‘ideas’ off. Including of course, anything else that might serve as a mirror, which can be as simple as a book, or as complex as the incommunicable sensations received by virtue of being affected by the matrix. Why? In order to send itself back information about itself to define itself, perhaps continually, in order to stay in dominance over the other aspects of the psyche, and to define which aspect is in control.

The writings below attempt to demonstrate how metaphysically this ‘Radia Sol’ might work – and I’ve broken the theory down into several smaller fundamental principles to aid an understanding.

What is a model?

Models, are an integral tool of my ability to artistically interpret and demonstrate concepts, especially those related to Physics, Quantum Theory, or the Acausal for which I lack the necessary knowledge of mathematics to convey. Quite simply, a model is the building of a structure, with bits and pieces arranged and labelled in such a way that the esoteric forces I am trying to demonstrate can represent themselves.

One example of a Causal model might be a diagram or a picture whereby the forces are represented through labels and accepted scientific doctrine. An Acausal example might be when I draw a parallel between a thing that is recognised and known by the majority as a ‘Real’ or ‘Accepted’ thing or function within the Causal. Often, I’ll use a metaphor to explain that which is beyond cause and effect, allows for x amount of dimension, and is generally not accepted, i.e. the image of a burning sea of oil to represent the Acausal and its nexions.

Take the example of a remote-control car as being the accepted view of a causal Model. It has a structure that is made up of many parts and components, arranged and labelled in such a way that the parts and components can express specific principles actively such as motion, acceleration, inertia, electricity, etc. By its abilities to do so with a remote control, it defines the meaning of the nature of the model as a 'Remote Control Car'. Note that it expresses a range of physics and laws – yet is contained within the postulate, and operates on the presupposition, that there are only four dimensions.

However, in this example, the parts, wheels, frame, motor, gears, etc are often understood by a binding general consensus and are recognised fairly easily by the majority of people. They are familiar parts that go together in a familiar way. Most people are aware the wheels are used to propel the frame, the motor to propel the wheels, the remote control to propel the whole thing... etc etc. While few of the majority, actually understand how it works, they accept this model defined by causal laws and physics and geometry, as representative of the causal, of the 'Real World'.

However, the model I am about to construct is metaphysical. – The 'parts', whilst referred to by names commonly and causally known, may not necessarily have the causal physics associated with that which is alluded to. For example – I may use the word 'wave' but this doesn't necessarily bind my usage of the word to all or any accepted meaning of the familiar word 'wave'. As always with esoteric manuscripts, there are some important things to remember about models used to demonstrate Esoteria before we continue – and these are as follows:

I) The parts that make up the whole of the Acausal model are not solid ineffable terms or descriptions of objects or movements – they are merely abstract inferences to enable the apprehension of the forces or concept being dealt with in a (mostly) common everyday way using parts that are causally familiar. As they are parts in a model, it is easy to think of the word wave for example, as an actual 'wave' and to associate the ideas connected to the word and term 'wave' as being applicable and only applicable to the part labelled 'wave'. This is a fundamental error – since these parts are not intended to represent the actual parts that make up the model, but familiar components used to help give understanding on a basic level necessary to comprehend esoteric ideas. Furthermore, the term 'parts' is misleading since the dimensions of the Acausal are not fitted together like those of a causal model – and the reader is wise to keep in mind that what is described using causal terms cannot represent the actual nature of Acausal forces.

II) The causal motions, effects, or changes that the parts demonstrate upon one another and the model as the parts and their function are explained, are mostly irrelevant, since the model deals with the Essence, the Idea behind the model. And it is this Idea behind the model, separate from the parts and familiar associations with the parts themselves, that I seek to bring to light.

III) The model is not infallible – it is after all only a model. Too often criticisms are found with the model before the Idea which the model is trying to elaborate – (and catch 22, can rarely do, without the use of such models) is apprehended. Too often the appearance is observed and not the essence. This fundamental flaw in perception develops the Projection that is the bane of all such esoteric models. Since sure, while the parts of a model exist as they Are, unless one is able to view the Idea behind the parts – one will never understand essence. And it is this raw numinous genius that is alone important. The model is not a representation of the actual Essence of the Idea but uses familiar forms to demonstrate it. Essence, which is without causal form -relies on the limited forms available to an individual to express itself in a causal way – and is therefore a difficult concept to apprehend, work with, or show to others.

IV) The ability to see the Idea behind the model, from the model, and think beyond the model is paramount. It enables latent genius to presence itself – and not necessarily the genius of the model’s maker, but that which comes from another individual who grasps and then evolves the Idea in ways the model maker may have not thought of. The more organisms capable of apprehending the Acausal the more chance of eventually representing it on its own terms, in Acausal ways.

V) To better understand my model, you will require some knowledge of ‘Wave Mechanics’. I of course assume that like myself, when faced with a subject of which one knows nothing or very little about – you undertake the necessary research to remedy this. For my model, I have posited the reality of wave mechanics and built up the theory from this postulate.

Wave Mechanics – A Crash Course

Wave Behaviour:

A wave rises and falls as it travels – the rise and fall are called Crest and Trough respectively. The distance between Crest and Crest or Trough and Trough is called a Wavelength.

Wave Frequency:

The number of wavelengths that pass a certain point in a given amount of time is called the waves Frequency.

Interference:

If two waves meet each other of the same frequency, both the Crests and Troughs of those waves combine and increase in size as they run together or phase. This is called Constructive Interference. If two waves of the same or different frequency meet each other halfway however, the waves do not overlap perfectly, and the crests and troughs of the waves do not coincide. This is called Destructive Interference.

If two identical waves are exactly half a wavelength out of Phase, the crests of one wave lined up with the trough of the other wave, these waves cancel each other out and no wave appears. There are also complicated waves in which phase and wavelength are out of sync a bit, making them both constructive and destructive in different places.

Note: Electrons are/embodiment both wave/particle properties: the more energy that an electron has the shorter its wavelength. Any point in any wave could be the location of the Electron. At the time of writing Electrons cannot be pinpointed in time and space and this peculiar occurrence is referred to as Quantum Physics.

My aim in showing you some wave mechanics is to demonstrate the complexity of waves and the myriad of ways in which they can interact with one another.

This is an important part in the model but remember; the part is not to be understood as strictly adhering to the properties of wave mechanics, but is instead an unknown quality only re-presented by the use of waves.

Emanations

Now to familiarise you with my concept of 'Emanations'. The following is not a detailed study of emanations, but instead aims to give you the reader what is popularly known as 'the gist'. Most people are familiar with "vibes" / (vibrations). A typical example would be "getting bad vibes/ good vibes". Often this phenomenon occurs without the individual even being in a position to get the usual sensory information when making a customary good/bad judgement. For example, most of us are aware of our '6th' sense when someone is watching or following us in a sinister fashion. What gives us the feeling, the 'vibe', that something bad is about to happen, or that we are in danger despite our other senses lack of alert – neither hearing, seeing, smelling, touching, or tasting, danger?

It's common to get a bad feeling about a place, but more specifically from people, to feel comfortable or uncomfortable in the presence of strangers, because of the way they seem to give off or emanate some kind of good or bad feeling from within themselves. This is the intuitive at work surely – but then if it cannot see, hear, touch, taste, or smell a bad situation, what does it intuit? Is it possible organisms give off frequencies or wavelengths by our energy, matter, chemical composition, or some such thing? – That we beam or radiate good/bad feelings like satellites sending signals, and likewise receive good/bad signals without the aid of sensory input that tell us the nature of the invisible something is okay/not okay? Perhaps when two such identical frequencies meet that's how we get people 'on the same wavelength'? I won't be going into such possibilities too deeply here, since it's a topic that is already much thrown about in Occult and Scientific circles under terms like fields, magnetism, aura etc... and is already a familiar concept to most by nature, usually just under a different name.

Based on my own experiences with 'having aura' and 'giving vibes' I've postulated that they exist and radiate from within an organism. I refer to these vibes, the giving off of waves or frequencies or charge or what have you, as 'emanation'. If we emanate, if we possess a vibration that emits telltale signals of our nature, and I feel we do, why do we do it and how?

I aim to demonstrate my theory with a theoretical model. A theoretical model subject to the above stipulations about the nature of the parts and the whole of the model, the purpose of the model, and herein attempt to sweep aside the confines of the Causal and its forms to illustrate 'Radia Sol'.

The Theoretical Model assumes the following postulates exist:

That three Aspects within the Psyche are vying for dominance: Unconscious, Ego and Self. That each of the Aspects emanates and that dominant emanation by an Aspect ensures dominance over the organism by that Aspect.

That the Aspects emanate both independently and simultaneously with the others in differing degrees. That an Aspect uses emanation to recognise itself as the dominant aspect, and then continually emanates to affirm dominance and define itself.

That Aspects are able to emanate a vast range of frequencies and even match the frequencies emanated by other Psyches.

That the frequencies emitted are subject to some or all of the laws of wave mechanics.

That the Ego is the dominant Aspect in the majority.

That the dominance of an Aspect can and does vary in degree within an organism.

That the Self can act independently of the Ego and the Unconscious and vice versa.

That the emanations emitted by all three Aspects, whilst invisible to the eye or modern science at present, radiate from one Psyche to/through/at/into/etc other Psyches constantly and ceaselessly and can be observed by the nature of interaction with ones total environment or “Matrix”.

That the Aspects use emanation like echo-sound to recognise themselves.

That Ego emanations are different to Self emanations – requiring different environments to succeed in dominance.

That Ego uses other Ego’s to remain dominant, and Self uses other Self to do the same.

That distortion takes place within the emanations unless identical aspects are interacting.

That Higher consciousness and a shift from Ego to Self can be achieved if one finds a location that does not distort the echo of its emanation.

With this in mind we can now proceed to the Theory.

5.

Radia Sol : Emanations of the Self- A Theory.

The Emanations of the Self in my theory are best thought of as waves.

Ever, you emit the frequency of your Unconscious, Ego, and Self in unique waves, like ripples on a pond, out onto the ether. Intuitively seeking to Be.

A vast expanse of millions of other Unconscious, Ego, and Self are also unconsciously or consciously emitting frequencies.

The Organism (via acausal energies) projects differing emanations onto the ether (these can be thought of as ‘questions’) to other organisms simultaneously. Seeking to ‘Be’, to become dominant, demands that the Aspect order chaos to know its own image, its own being. Therefore, these emanations are the base nature, the ‘feelers’ of the Organism that bounce ideas, conversation, interaction etc, off other Organisms (mirrors) in an attempt to put together a picture of what it actually looks like – and what it is that actually exists.

The received replies from these mirrors can be thought of as ‘answers’.

Each of the three Aspects vies for domination over an Organism's psyche but the aspect that receives more replies to its emanations than the other two is selected as the dominant driver of an organism. Usually however, the natural process of life takes an Organism through these three Aspects, the last emerging during mid-life of an Organism or after particularly harrowing or harsh experiences. Over the last two thousand years this ability of the Self to become dominant and maintain its power has been vastly diminished due to a lack of Self-types, processes used to reach self and the excess majority of Ego-types.

What makes the attainment even more difficult is the distortion of the matrix by Magian design that has allowed so many of the immature Ego-types to breed but does not allow progress to the next stage of the mature Organism, the Self.

Hypothetically, 'answers' are received, processed, assimilated and more 'questions' sent out. However, if the emanations act somewhat like waves, then perhaps they are not always directly focused at a receiver but emanate like a sun rather than a laser, and both 'questions' and 'answers' are subject to chaos. The infinitesimal number of organisms all emanating at once could be represented as the outward spreading of ripples on the surface of a pond after a stone has been thrown in. Eventually the joining of separate ripples occurs as more stones are thrown in until so many stones are thrown in that the ripples become unrecognisable. Emanations, being bounced and rocketed from one location (location: an abstract plane of projection such as an idea, concept, form, human construct or even another human etc) to another, are possibly altered by similar properties as are the waves in wave mechanics. Stronger waves may assimilate, distort, fragment other waves over and over again, they may even cancel other waves out. Resulting in a perpetual tumultuous multitude of confusion and chaos. Especially when you consider that a little like the game of paper, scissors, rock, the three different aspects emanate differently and the effect of each from one psyche on each aspect of another psyche, allows for virtually infinite outcomes. Perhaps this chaos could be likened to 'Sensory Perception' if these emanations are also what serve to define dimension, relativity, and order (ad infinitum) of our Organism in relation to the matrix?

However – this confusion of the process from Unconscious to Ego to Self reigns because of the domination of the Majority by the Ego. The Ego, using other's organisms to reflect itself off where the dominant Aspect is also the Ego, mostly operates in a causally contained frame of reference, subject to causal distortion and all manner of postulates of reality, and is inherently a contradiction to itself via the positing of 'opposites' for example. If Self generates Self, then Ego generates ego, and with so MUCH Ego the likelihood of a Self being created instead, is very slim. What we are experiencing in terms of Aeonics, is the perpetual creation of 'Organism without Self' – a bi-partmental Psyche, a global populace in psychic limbo.

On the rare occasion when the organism becomes aware of Self, a search or echo-scan for other Self's is begun by that Organism. It tries to find a location where it can refract itself – in order to define itself. By virtue of the Organism being aware of Self, this scan for other Self is more focused than the scan performed by the Ego. The Self temporarily no longer in thrall to illusions, no longer sends it waves out in all directions, but in focused bursts to specific receivers to attain a direct reply. But to get feedback requires the highly polished mirrors that other Selves are, that are very rare. Perhaps given the unique nature of emanations, a Self has different specifications for what it can and can't reflect itself off. However, unlike the Ego, I hypothesise that the emanations of a Self are not altered by absorption of the emanation by the Other Self, nor does the mingling or phasing of the original emanation occur as it does in Egos, creating a mongrel hybrid. That is to say, when the emanation of an Ego is absorbed by another Ego, it is distorted and mingled into a different refraction or wavelength containing emissions of that Ego as well as the original. Or the emanation is split into more than one wave, part of which is refracted elsewhere and only part of an echo or none at all received. Or the Ego even receives a foreign echo created elsewhere but which is interpreted as the reply to the emanation sent out.

I believe this distortion is not applicable between Selves. A Self is a complete Whole comprised of both anima and animus, no longer in need of a 'half' (either feminine or masculine) to complete itself and as such is no longer dependant on finding halves to complete (usually just compliment) itself as is the task of the Ego. Therefore, it has no need for either feminine or masculine emanations as given off by the Ego and, basically, negates them.

Often however, the Self is unable to find a similar complete receiver to refract itself off and either seeks solace, loses dominance and is once again replaced by Ego, or perhaps in extreme (or typical?) cases, dies, and the Organism loses any chance of becoming Self-aware again.

Just as we seldom see our own physical organism or what we look like from an external view, but instead possess notions of such that give us our own personal definition of ourselves, perhaps the Self actively seeks to view its own image by sending internal emanations to the external sources around it, hoping for a mirror. And just a mirror – since because it is a complete whole it no longer needs any other organisms' input but its own to see itself. But without this mirror – it cannot Be. The Idea or Process of seeking to be Self is more often than not stifled early, and even murdered in many people by society seeking to suppress recognition of this aspect. This makes finding a suitable mirror for the Self to refract off all the more difficult and random to achieve. Perhaps then, when the Self finds such a rare mirror in which to 'become' more of itself, and gains precedence over the organism as the dominant Psychanism – it operates on an entirely new system no longer using emanations for the same purpose? Perhaps it gains an increase of concentration and control over its emanation and uses it more like a laser than a radiating wave to cut through egos, so great its power it is no longer applicable to the same restrictions imposed upon an ego by having or being in thrall to the ego.

Yet in those rare moments when the Self is able to find such a higher receiver, and when two Selves emanate their Self and nothing more – (achievable only via that intangible quality, Self-Honesty) the two Selves are able to refract each other's emanation without absorbing or mongrelizing it because each Self is of its Self, is whole, rejects all other input but its own and has no interest in projecting the Self onto others.

However – in the case of a Self needing a Self to become dominant, the paradox is posed – how does the Psyche become Self if one cannot find a mirror – in other words, how does the Self find a mirror if in the first place there are no Selves? It seems difficult to imagine a Self being formed prior to being Self already – but therein the alchemical and magickal training of individuals to recognise and overcome the Ego makes possible the existence of Selves out there. Furthermore, Jung suggests that the Self is naturally attained for a period of time, but the dominance of which must be worked at to maintain or lost again, and usually forever. Therefore, it is possible to find such mirrors and doesn't necessarily require two organisms to enable recognition of Self via a mutual transaction.

In the case of the Self evolving on its own, in my opinion the power of self-honesty is the sheer power of all – and using this power to complete oneself, a Whole needs no additional input to function. With no energy expended in 'echo location' trying to see the Self anymore, the Self is self-empowered. (Continuing with the metaphor of the Sun, they self-replicate like a thermonuclear explosion). If the Self only refracts itself, the power can only grow, since it is Self-Effort, Self-Love, Self-Achievement, Self-Awakening, and Self-Awareness that occurs. If this is the case, the Self wouldn't expend its energy carelessly like the Ego does, and perhaps an excess of power ensues which flows over or spills, onto other aspects of the Self's drive to power – 'Wisdom' maybe, or Enlightenment, or other such things. If this could occur en masse perhaps with more and more Selves balancing (or at least increasing) the ratio of Self to Ego; the charge, the power, of the Cosmic might become perpetual as the Selves start to become more dominant making more and more mirrors available to potential Selves.

Closing Statements:

This model/theory may not provide 'food for thought' for all, or even for many – but it does offer a different perspective on how we function and why. The Theory can be superimposed over all human interactions to explain their mechanics by virtue of emanation. Why humans don't get along, why misunderstandings or love occurs between us, how we find enlightenment, why so few people ever reach enlightenment, or why the chaos exists in our lives, our ideas, our identities, our experiences, and our heads, for example. Furthermore, it offers an esoteric explanation of how the three (psychological) aspects of an organism might function rather than the accepted dual view of our organism and psyche combined as the one inseparable power which drives us: namely, as a sort of will to power to become dominant, lest it become recessive and replaced. It's hardly an overestimate to suggest the fierce domination of the Ego-mirror in societies overshadow the rare and often easily broken Self-mirror a million to one – perhaps more. Without a healthy Renaissance (Satanic, for example) in which organisms are enabled recognition of the three Psychanisms, perhaps we are killing our Selves simply because they have lost the will to live. It's no small wonder in such a climate hostile even to emergence of the Self that it hibernates. But to let the Self sleep, is to die a slow and insidious death, deafened and maddened by a ceaseless, pointless, bombardment of Egoic emanation.

RADIA STAR: CREATING ONE OF THEM

Temple of THEM -2011 /122fy.

My Work and my Writing – My Approach and My Motive and Methodology is given in this short manuscript and the Alchemical formula that Drives me. I reveal here the Blueprint of my Work that Others may understand or follow it.

The dominance of the 'I' in people must be dislodged enabling the unconscious processes and actions of their ego to become consciously observable to them via the creation of a new stream of consciousness.

They must understand how they make suppositions, projections, abstractions, tensions, create time, space, form and how they themselves cause these through the Engine of their Perception.

The successful result of this alchemical is to cause a specific Doubt of their Autonomy that leads to a brief Collapse of the Ego and the Emergence of the Self. As if – they [the emergent Self] were suddenly operating from another room in the back of their skull, watching their Ego working away at the controls of their Organism as a separate entity or function.

Once this split-mind state occurs there is no going back. Evolution has been achieved. There is nothing more for you to do. Their mind ceases to perceive itself as a Singularity and the individual becomes THEM – a compartmentalised being acutely conscious of sharing its being with more than one function – both of which it may use, rather than the one. This is Evolution of the Mind.

To Kill the Machine – means to Dislodge that which keeps it running. Which is precisely – the supreme and singular dominance of the Ego which most Identify as themselves. But to Warn the Ego of an attack is a fatal error – if it senses danger it hardens and becomes immovable. It cannot be directly approached and can only be drawn out slowly – much as a psychologist must dance around the issues of his patient so as not to frighten him and also to allow the individual to come to the Realisation on their Own. Thus, the Ego must be tricked into defeating itself. Its abstractions must be torn apart piece by piece / its processes broken down and made visible to that individual so that a Special Instant occurs in that Individual similar to an Out of Body Experience – With the Exception that is it Out Of Mind. In this Instant, a sudden Flash of the Awakened Self can see the actions of the Ego consciously. This can be done one by one very slowly – or, via our creation of Magickal Socialism, people can be affected in much larger numbers.

Magickal Socialism is a specific incantation this Temple has created to weaken the Ego based on what we know about how to lower its guard. This generates the correct emotional state in many people at once necessary for Change. It bears resemblance to National Socialism – and uses a similar current that made NS magical – but it should not be mistaken for it. There are Others like us – who are of a split-mind and consciously, suspiciously regard their Own motives. Our movement has sought and seeks them out. We can do nothing for an Individual who has already Evolved but we Seek THEM out to give Them a Collective Home. Our Directive is to target those who have not Evolved or Show Signs of being on the Cusp of Self- Awareness. The Simple truth is that the Banner of Satanism represents an ancient Instability of the Mind whose Current attracts those who are less resistant to Change and who may have more chance of Re- Connecting with their Total Mind – and it is for this reason alone that our Mythos is wound about Darkness.

Creating One of THEM is an extraordinarily difficult process – it is often lengthy and the process(es) required varies from individual to individual, instant to instant. It is made all the harder should the target Ego be put on alert that such a process is being attempted.

Now you understand the simple reason behind the secrecy of our motives and our movement.

I remain convinced, that whilst it may take many decades of effort – if enough of THEM can be created who create other Them using this formula. The power structure of the Magi attained through its purchase of the mind – made possible through the unconscious possession of people that keeps them in Thrall to Forms – will be utterly destroyed.

We May Not See this Event in Our Lifetime. But I am Committed. And Believe that We have discovered the Secret and the Antidote to the Poison of the Magian.

May Our Tendrils Spread Across Space and Time and Deliver Us from Evil.

SELF, EGO AND TRADITIONAL SATANISM

The Magical Quest to fervently identify the Self and subsequently eradicate the ego is often driven by a misguided perception that the ego is in some way responsible for limiting an organism, and that a being should try to exist wholly on the plane of the Self. The attempt by magicians to achieve this particular process has long been understood to be highly dangerous and is owing to a lack of experience and the hapless reliance on hearsay and the opinion of books to judge it. There is in fact a fork in the road in reaching the Self: one can either leave the world and contemplate the silent desert, or one can fulfil one's destiny as one of THEM. This essay is concerned with fulfilling one's destiny as one of THEM and the appropriate outlook concerning the volatility of forbidden alchemy.

To be one of THEM – The ego is a force necessary to harness, but not to destroy. Instead of being annihilated completely, the ego must be allowed to continue to play a role in relation to the Self. Once the Self is developed, it rules over, but can only rule through, the ego. When in an organism there is no Self-conception or connection, the ego is as believed, an inhibitor. But when the Self is developed, the dynamic changes and it becomes as an actor: and the invaluable messenger of the Self's will.

When the Self is attained one must make a choice. One can attempt to live solely in the realm of the Self by disintegrating ones ego. But, without the ego, there can be no relatedness to the world. Zen meditation for instance is the complete turning of the back on substance, on the causal, on the material, and the identity, to this extent, the being no longer has any connexion with the world and ceases to be a vehicle of change in it, except for those elements where the absence of their input/being may impact on the world.

Yet to do this is to annihilate one's physical being. Although it is the aim of many occult/magical temples and groups to achieve just this, THEM believe, attaining Self is not to be thought of as a discarding of the shells/skulls one has wrought, but to finally appreciate being able to perceive directly Form and Formlessness in the currents and seas of change from an elevated level of awareness that sharpens power, perception, and magical prowess to the extent of Adept-ship. Then, having passed through the Abyss, one is tempted sorely. To turn toward God and Samadhi and reach for oblivion, thus abandon the world to its fate by ceasing to exist or have impact on the world. Or to make one's way back, returning enlightened as a Dark God to yolk the ego [the only connexion with those still in the matrix] into forms driven by the extreme power of the Self, that have the power to raise others unto similar awareness. And not only to raise others on a personal level (for the alchemy that is wrought by a Dark God is viewed egocentrically by organisms that remain trapped in the matrix) but to raise Consciousness in general – to have an Aeonian effect upon the world through a supra-personal level of relatedness to it. The formidable increase in magical prowess in an agent imbued with Self has the potential to be an extremely powerful weapon in the Mind/Aeonian War – by directing others into a group, then a culture, then a civilisation as per the ONA understanding. But not just physically, but also magically, and to show others the way to find their Self and join us in transforming the World one mind at a time. And this, beyond the restrictive games played by the immature ego.

From our point of view, to return with our knowledge and raise others up into the stars by offering a clear and demystified view of magic – is a type of supra-personal sacrifice of one's option to go further into the Abyss and leave others behind.

Thus, in order to keep the power to conduct change from the platform of the Self in others and the world, one must not lose the power to manifest a form. One is required to remember how to come to others in a recognisable form – to occupy a body, a name and an identity through which one can be perceived – as an agent in the physical world. The ego is a precious vehicle once tamed, and if a magician has a goal, an aim, a Quest to continue change, it must be enslaved to the will of the Self, not destroyed.

Means of developing, recognising and finally living the Self are rumoured to be held by most of the world's occult communities. Members of THEM believe, based on our experience with other groups and with the ONA, that the Septenary Way is, in practice, a valid and valuable vehicle for achieving this rare Philosophers Stone. The Way, if it is understood, culminates the magical perpetual alchemy necessary to cause eternal unrest in one's absolutism – hence the alchemy of the triangle that is always squared [Thesis, Antithesis, Synthesis – Synthesis becoming the new Thesis and another Antithesis arising as a reaction to this giving rise to another Synthesis, and so on...] can eventually cause the ego to 'drop out of its own geometry'. In tandem with the Way awakening various grounding energies, connexions to the land and to magic, insight roles, alchemical harshness, solitude and a working model for grasping the world by its horns, all necessary to instilling vital affinity with the world as it is, not as it has come to appear – the Order of Nine Angles offers a path that really does lead to the hallowed ground of finding the Self. Because it is shown to work at least by the six of us, the Way is considered the first journey for one of THEM to undertake and is held in revere and promoted to others. There is no desire to compete or surpass what already works as a fine foundation for this difficult magical process. What comes after the Way is where the Temple differs from ONA by its teachings in what we have written and taught.

After succeeding (unless destroyed) in the Way, a being may feel drawn to what comes after – and we believe, drawn to the Temple of THEM via synchronicity and an acausal bond with others who have attained the Self and rightly perceived the power in returning to work magic rather than heading onward into oblivion. After our decision to return we raised a nexion [The Temple] to gather at – for as stated in our manifesto and elsewhere, we believe that our empathic ring of six Selves has come to understand much that was hidden and that the world requires a sanctuary for the emerging forces of the species of Self.

COLLECTIVE WILL

I believe that the collective will is an abstraction for an ideal that we secretly share some unifying sense of direction; though there is evidence that we do in fact do this – though not in any ingrained ethical moral sense – this appears to be learned behaviour.

The individual will is structured by psycho-physical drives such as fear, absence of fear, survival, the social contract, will to power, and the geometry of the ego that defines and delineates a being's goals and methods to attain them, i.e., what is important to do or achieve for that being. The individual will must be sacrificed any time it joins with another individual will to work on a joint venture; when this happens I refer to people raising a form – wherein the form subjugates (restricts) each individual will by dampening it with laws, restrictions and rules about what it is allowed to do and how it should do it; though often, individual will is required to be poured into the collective sentiment of the form. For example, the Temple of THEM attempted to unite individuals without becoming a group; hence we had no symbol, no banner, and virtually no restrictions – yet in order for people to grasp we were even there, we had to speak the language of forms. We had to create a 'temple', the name of our group, a mythos and story behind it, initiation procedures, and so on – this required distorting what we intended esoterically because all forms distort and create unintended suppositions due to the behaviour and interpretation of language and its ‘meanings’.

My experiment with them showed only that the individual will and thus individuation as Jung speaks of, cannot be achieved in a group environment no matter how few restrictions are imposed. Since, if you impose none, how can you have a group at all? If you impose too few, the necessary structure for a form to take place is missing. If you impose too many, you cease to represent the meaning of THEM and become a dogmatic religion that is merely copying the present oppressors...

Collective Will is for me a moral term – the individual will is more or less toward self-destruction (since without a group of some kind one cannot traditionally survive) – whilst the collective will is toward construction (since ideals, concepts, and symbols live on long past the causal duration of the human life that gave birth to them). But to assume a collective will as ‘real’ cannot be done lightly, if at all – rather, it is a term used (and I use) to provide a sense that there is a level of potential harmony within the chaotic elements that abound in any scheme that meets real-world conflict of interest with ideology.

But when all is said and done it is a support, a construct, a working theory – like all other abstracts, whose evidence for and proof of, rests on the absolute conviction in abstracts; inc. definition, words, language, and so on. And it is rather this uneasy shaky ground where abstracts begin to dissolve with one’s conviction of things that I believe the esoteric truth of being and forms begins to reveal itself. If there is a collective will – it appears to be toward avoiding fear, working within the concepts of its day, tradition, repetition of archetype, and owing to the need to escape fear (which is all around us in our architecture – and I don’t just mean buildings, but language, logic, music, methods etc) an obsessive secretly deferred desire for self-gratification. I would also, optimistically, agree with Jung that individuation is the main collective goal – hence the internet which has joined us all together, PC which is attempting to break down barriers (but sadly just increasing them), and the unerring penetration of the unconscious into our dreams, symbols and turns of phrase, as some examples, which however strongly we repress – has not gone away and is a constant reminder of our fusion from animal to human being and the other processes that drive us beneath our sugary form-covered exteriors.

However, politically speaking – (i.e., in the sense of winning friends and converts) Collective Will is often used to denote a shared agreement (whether people are aware of a particular shared will or not is usually the sticky point) – i.e., the Nazi’s told the German People what their collective will was, as did the Americans, and all other nations with a flag, a culture, an identity and often an ideology or religion. This entrapment in forms keeps most people too busy to ever really consider what is outside those things – and works to create our architecture. Globally – our psycho-physical drives dictate our collective will is survival – and so we make concessions to maintain it by keeping the peace or disturbing it.

CONSPIRACY AND THE NEW WORLD ORDER [1-5]

V.3

A particular Conspiracy needs to be proved. The potential for Conspiracy does not.

INTRO

The concept of the New World Order – like a lot of subjects I’ve tried to cover through 101 – is extremely difficult terrain. I will however present a few of my thoughts on it from a few different angles because I believe the New World Order (NWO) and the presence of ‘conspiracy theory’ as a prevalent form at large shares relationships with many of the insights I have made and is tied up with secrets of the human condition. As with other subjects I have looked at, I will try to neatly side-step the dizzying labyrinth of historical nomenclature and avoid getting tangled in who did what and said what – none of which I have any evidence for outside of general knowledge, legend or what is observable; and concentrate on where conspiracy comes from, the role it plays as conscious theme, and perhaps the role it might play as a symptomatic indication of something deeper regarding human need and geometry. I will also touch on the Magi and how there may be a conspiracy behind conspiracy that has imprisoned us for millennia. The Gnostic idea of a demiurge who created a false replica earth to imprison us may at first sound outlandish like many other occult concepts of creation – yet my work is increasingly uncovering evidence that there may be more to it than just mythology after all.

PREP

Many years ago, I read the ‘Protocols of Zion’ – and for anyone who doesn’t know what that is, (It’s been uploaded to 101) it’s sometimes called the ‘Granddaddy of conspiracies’ and involves an allegedly faked global charter put together by an elite cabal of secret Jewish conspirators as a step-by-step plan to take over the world. The document details a breakdown of practical steps needed to achieve global domination by covert and over measures and methods including manipulating economic pressures via usury, breeding out gentiles and infiltrating gentile society by becoming doctors, lawyers, teachers and other highly positioned socialites within the infrastructure of the gentile to take power and unite against the enemy as one. Presently there is a collective body of testimony that claims the Protocols were faked by the Nazis to get the Jews in trouble. Whether this is true I do not know – and remain undecided – but aside from the frightening lucidity of each of these plans, there is a chilling statement at the end of the document which basically says – ‘the proof of any conspiracy lies in what has happened around you – look around you and ask yourself, has what they said would happen, happen?’ At the time of writing (2010) I see evidence and live in a world where almost every section of the Protocols can easily be argued to have been implemented. Coincidence? Maybe. Conspiracy? Maybe. If I suddenly turn to discussing the Protocols and attempt to show evidence to prove either way a conspiracy by the Nazis or the Jews; or enter at all into the finer details brought up by the Protocols – according to my approach – I immediately lose a significant amount of information this form is expressive and representative of and enter a labyrinth of aimless semantics. The loss of information I often point out (In ‘Ethereal Discourses’ for instance) is important here. It is common practice among humans to rely on precedent – i.e. we can discuss something like the Holocaust at length because a lot of information, many views, and seven decades of propaganda from both sides for or against this topic have left a hefty mountain of records and information behind for us to build various cases.

Based on what we have read, or had told us, or imbibed from television, juggled in our heads to sort out the truth – we can go head-to-head in debate against certain opposing views using precedent – dates, decisive military manoeuvres, psychological brainwashing, reports of force, first-hand accounts, footage, photographs, and records; weighing in our evidence to prove or disprove the opposing view. We strengthen our case using precedents, and weaken another’s case using precedents – these precedents are generally things that have been proven, accepted as fact, historically recorded, taught in school, written down, or put together by our logical deduction and are accepted as given – but the carrier of such facts itself, i.e. language, moral judgement, ethics, how we prejudice time and space, all weigh in heavily in the relationship – yet are seldom ever analysed. They are treated as pre-existing proven methods of communication – but they are not. This is precisely why all the intelligence, well-read intellectuals, scholars, academics, and so on do not necessarily have greater awareness and lucidity no matter how eloquent or educated. Education tends to cram the brain with catalogues of forms – which are then compared against each other in logical deduction and critical analysis – but without a heuristic analysis of one’s own method of enquiry and indeed the general methods of enquiry – empathy with oneself and others remains low, trapped in prisms of words and concepts that bounce endlessly off one another without ever allowing us closer to the source of what we are and how we work.

The majority of occult teachings are human-centred self-masturbation, clichéd romanticism about how great we are, how aware we are, and how different some of us are from others far less unintelligent than ourselves; Enlightened, Initiated, Adept, set apart, or so we like to think. The major problem is the ego – it often refuses to be humble, to accept its own failings, to drop its ridiculous self-important visage and allow the stasis it holds so tightly in check – to be dropped so that it can accept an insult for its own good. In a typical conversation regarding the conditions at Auschwitz, precedents (proof/facts) are presented to build a case for one's argument. Following who has the most accurate information, i.e. a guard at Auschwitz may be in a better position to give a clear account of what happened because s/he was there – unless we opt to believe a surviving prisoner of war whom we suspect would be more likely to tell the truth and the guard keep things back to protect themselves, minimise damage, avoid punishment and condemnation etc. In every case where people argue about the War (any war – or in fact, anything at all) – they use precedent (facts, dates, names, proof, first-hand knowledge and cross-reference)– because the War is long gone, many years in the past, precedent is all they have left to prove it ever existed. They therefore compare dates, military decisions, motivation, personal ambition of leaders, tactics and pressures put on the civilians, propaganda, subtlety of persuasion, conversations allegedly had between parties, anecdotal evidence, surviving diaries of prisoners and guards, personal accounts and almost always quote someone who has says something that adds weight to their case. Even if they were present at the War – reports and accounts by people widely vary, especially as regards sensitive issues – for all sorts of reasons, as many as you can think of – and because of this, the variables of information recorded are far too nebulous and vast to ever be sure of their authenticity.

Each human being is possessed of a unique perspective, motivation, memory, associative catalogue for instance, and as a result, people tend toward remembering different things, placing importance on certain things, and things differently [See 'Physis of the Sinister' for loss of information theory]. Consider also that whilst people are social creatures, communicating a great deal to each other with words – in each of us thrives a hidden world; our eyes fall on different places in the world, focus importance in different degrees, take things differently, find different things important, memorable, etc. There is ample evidence to show this is true – in the way hundreds of thousands of different authors who all attended the gulf, Vietnam, or World Wars remember them and what they remember about them. How it affected them or others. This shows how extremely important it is for such stories to be recorded – because subconsciously, they each know the unwritten rule of human history – that if it doesn't exist in some record or another – it never happened. And it never happened – because it was never recorded. The onus for so many things – the rock of science – is on providing 'proof'. But unless we experience firsthand a location or event, we only know of things – and here are a few conspiracy based examples; UFO's, Crop Circles, Aliens, Area 51 – by precedent only.

But if enough scientific magazines pick up and support something, even if its complete theoretical nonsense that speculates on things existing so it can speculate on other things existing without any evidence for the first thing, (Stephen Hawking's – universe in a nutshell for instance) it enters popular culture and can become accepted. Within a few years, 'Quantum' will have always existed for the generation born after me. If we are with a group of people who refuse to acknowledge in speech or writing that what we saw was what they saw, the truth is silenced in favour of conspiracy. It is one thing to observe a UFO landing in a field, quite another for it to have ever happened. I wrote in an earlier post that, in my opinion, you'd have to be blind or deaf to not realise the thousands of mini-conspiracies around us in everyday life.

Music, what we listen to, is a conspiracy, for instance – people conspire to make you buy it, support it, report it. Time, its enforced, and God help you if you refuse to acknowledge it. Roads, they direct your car where to go, it's not easy to go where they don't lead. The traffic lights tell you when to go and stop. Computer games keep you occupied in your house doing destructive things in a virtual world instead of spending that time out on the street doing them for real. Every second you are entertained, you are controlled by someone whose graphic design, dialogue, symbolism, presentation, sales pitch, utilities, is making you think 'frog juice' is PowerAde. And you believe it, because you are trained from birth to pick up the habits of your peers and copy them. You are equipped with the training program and the tools to discern the difference between the two, but never taught to question the training program. There are measures in place that conspire against us daily in thousands of ways from birth to death. I'll cover some soon, but let's ask, how effective is conspiracy against us?

Collusion or conspiring is easy – all you do to conspire is simply help someone do something. When you ask your partner how many sugars they want in their coffee, you conspire together to make that cup of coffee the way they want it. If you want Bill to invite you to golf next Saturday, you approve his house loan. If you want to drill for oil in the Gulf of Mexico, you sweet-talk the owners and make them rich; then you use an army of lawyers (Maybe some of them provided by a friend of Bill) to clear any legal obstacles. If there's trouble, perhaps you can hire some heavies through Sam who you also met at golf through Max and discussed your ambitions with to build a new golfing resort on a Caribbean Island hideaway. Max likes that idea, and would dearly love to tee off in such a paradisaical vista and offers to set you up with some heavies who can take care of any greenie locals or people opposing the drill for a few thousand dollars– and all of a sudden you have a conspiracy among a large group of powerful, influential people, to drill for oil in a protected zone, built on the back of people (who may not even really know one another or how many people are colluding, or even how they are colluding outside of their own sphere of influence) simply doing a small favour for one another. Human beings are very basic – conspirators are not magicians – they all have to offer something to another human being to get something in return, they have to engage in banal small-talk no matter how rich they are, they have to develop relationships and make friends, and do favours for one another. They don't have to get along, but it helps.

But they don't have to know each other either. In fact – the prevalent idea that conspirators in something like the NWO all know each other and every other player in the conspiracy is a bit too fantastic to fly. Perhaps there are a few groups like that – but I think it is more likely that we tell ourselves they sit in high-backed chairs in secret rooms under undersea volcanoes and run the world whilst sipping gold – because no-one wants to think that 'we' could be controlled by half-wits. I've worked in the government. I'm sorry to say we are. You can see for yourself the antics that occur on Parliament and the resemblance to kindergarten behaviour for yourself on Australian TV. It's typical of the ego to only accept that it's might can be conquered by gods, unstoppable forces and superhuman intellect – i.e. aliens. Yes, amongst the rabble there are always a few shining scheming diamonds, sharp and brilliant that are able to organise things – but since they have to rely on people not quite so brilliant and astute, things can often turn to shit with unpredictable results. The best laid plans of men and mice...

There are a couple of basic factors involved in collusion (conspiracy) – one is that the pleasure principle usually works on everybody. You can pay all but the most stubborn idealist enough money to make them forget they had an issue with you stabbing dolphins in the face. If money, independent wealth, and flattery don't buy you – then there's the pain principle. Refuse to roll over and not get out of the way and you can be taken to court, imprisoned, beaten up, killed, silenced, disavowed, assassinated, or kicked out of your practice, for example – that sort of intimidation works on most people too. If the systems in place can't do either to get you to come over to their way of thinking, or shut you up – then maybe they'll just envelop you, give you your five minutes of fame, or the lethal six minutes; make you a star, get you on talk shows, start selling t-shirts, hats, stickers with your name on it and make a mockery of your cause by making it into yet another saleable commodity to be packaged and sold, until people get sick of the saturation and sick of you.

It depends what the situation calls for. There are some other factors in collusion – if people like you, they believe you. If they don't like you, they are suspicious of you. America chooses its president, clearly not on each candidates merits and who will run the country most soundly, but who they like better. Who can win them over, turn their frog juice into PowerAde the most competently and completely with fanfare and election stunts. Escapism it seems, is also a powerful motivator of people. Alright, now that you've been primed for conspiracy talk and terms, have now started thinking about conspiracies, and are hopefully intrigued enough to want to know what else I have to say. Let's begin.

WHAT IS A CONSPIRACY?

For all its loaded and emotional connotations, conspiracy is nothing special to humans, and nothing new – from my point of view, there are thousands of conspiracies observable every day, everywhere perfectly visible and shamelessly out in the open that go unnoticed in lieu of discussions, fantasies and comparisons of knowledge and speculation of such topics as Atlantis, Hyperborean's, UFO's, Illuminati, or an NWO. They are so subtle however, they go unnoticed – for instance, there are entire chains of companies who specialise in the psychology behind the texture of things, the shape of things, the size of things, the number of things, and so on. It is not by chance you get eight Tim-tams in a packet; the steering wheel of your car has an intricate pattern you will probably never ever look at but which etchers take three weeks to painstakingly prepare anyway, or that almost everything in your home is square. The use of words, time, the topics discussed, the elements importance is focused on, how they are discussed, that they are talked about at all, the names dropped during, etc. are all under controlled conditions.

It may seem that we have freedom of speech, to say whatever we like, for instance – but only if our words are placed in a certain order, designed to appeal to a certain demographic, placed in such a way on the page (left to right, and cover certain topics in a typical way – do they work, do they become communication.

We avoid some words altogether, lead up to arguments by providing evidence, precedents, previous examples and so on – systematically constructing our sentences in such a way that they are accepted by the reader. Any attempt to use words outside of this context, is met with disapproval or confusion. There is a conspiracy here, several in fact; a direct pressure for words to be used a certain way and only that way, held in place by social norms and dictates – and beyond that, it is almost law that any communication follows certain rules – and I do not refer to those obvious ones such as grammar, diction or spelling. When we want to construct a sentence, we must automatically adjust our words to reflect a very precise apprehension of time and space (largely invisible – please see 'The Chronobet') that orders all of our words and ideas in exactly the same way no matter what words we use or in what order. To make sense of 'Is' requires a specific universal prejudice that posits a singularity with all the resulting flow-on effects that then supposes that structures our apprehension of time and space through very specific geometry. (please see 'On the Fifth and Third Dimensions')

Moreover, every idea we have and express contains within it its own seeds for destruction and counter argument – that is just the way words are because they rely on a tension of opposites for one word or concept to make sense of the another. Exactly how this came to be is a bit of a mystery, but by knowing that English is derived from Latin and that Latin was an attempt by the Church to universalise all languages into one unified dialect (see 'Ethereal Discourses') – hence English draws from all sorts of roots and etymologies with words coming from Spain, Germany, French, Italian, and other dialects – we can understand the relationship English has to duality, and why it is a strange cobble pot of idiosyncrasies that make English one of the hardest languages to learn because of the myriad of random rules. Moreover, we know that the Church was driven by morality and division, and the worldview of one God – Monotheism – so any invention created by such minds is bound to have coloured what is produced with the same crayons. English is the product of a language created by the Church – which is why it behaves the way it does and makes communication behave the way it does, – i.e., anyone can say anything but it can be instantly refuted by anyone else because everything we posit when we use words, immediately sets up a shadow of other words. One supposition must lead to another to make sense of the first through tension – the English language is a magical dialect – a warped sacred geometry that forces a certain perception to take place.

Since the Church knew exactly what they were doing when they tried to take all the worlds important dialects (at least important in their view) and homogenise them into one – they were all too aware of what they were doing, and not only conspired linguistically, but magically, to have control over all languages, and through investing Latin with morality, created a permanent loophole for them to slip out of any nooses they might accidentally create (just as they sought the pulpit as messengers of god) forever more – effectively imprisoning people within the confines of a language derived from monotheism and morality. It sounds like some demonic design, reads like a Lovecraft tale, but if the Church knew enough to do what they clearly achieved doing – then in some sense, they possessed powerful knowledge or magical/geospatial formulas long forgotten but extremely long-lived that gave them the idea to do what they did.

Those strange angles, the apex, the nave, the corner of all rooms (which they once used to place a picture of Christ in to interrupt the Devil's cubic presence which they believed gathered in corners) once meant more than just somewhere for cobwebs to gather – the language of shapes, green language, secret angles and vertexes, planes and solids once ruled the minds of men, speaking in garbled arcane lore and perhaps of an understanding of nature's secrets that has long since been lost to time. Were we imprisoned by the Magi, or something much older, something much worse? Language may not have been invented by the Church, but they knew what they were doing when they conspired to control it.

CONSPIRACY IS EVERYWHERE

The same token of conspiracy behind things applies to all concepts. For example, time and space may seem open for discussion and hundreds of thousands of people avidly discuss warp holes, linear, acausal, pan dimensionality, time-travel, quantum and so on – yet every day the world gets up to go to work at more or less the same time, using the same clock everyone else does. You can discuss it all you like; it is universally accepted as a truism that time exists as a real solid objective measure – not merely a construct. Being 'late' is a heinous crime because it shows a lack of disregard for 'time' – and subsequent punishment for being late reinforces the importance of this concept others have for it, and the social sanctions ready to be dished out for transgressions of its omnipresence.

So, we have freedom of a sort, but something has conspired against that freedom to imprison us and the world within the concept of time and clocks. We can discuss almost whatever we like – yet the mundane world drags us through definite hoops on a daily basis. In this regard, such discussions are nothing more than escapism from the very real toil of the day – a system kept in check by a complicated system and an unchanging geometrical perception. We may not understand the system that controls us, but we understand that there is a system and that is enough to control us. It's hard to rebel if no-one else will join you. And why would they join you when they've got it good? Or could have it worse? When some 'crackpot' decides that time is an abstract – nothing actually changes – the machine just laughs pitilessly at any attempt to do something with that insight and keeps grinding away.

I mentioned the size, texture, shape, colour, name of things earlier. You can add law, time, space, music, sound, speech, language, logic etc to the mix but you will never know many of the conspiracies that surround you unless you've worked in industries that specialise in them – and you can probably never know them all. All of these very basic things we take for granted are the product of conspiracies – never mind UFO's and crop circles – those are mysteries of a sort, sure, but people seem to think conspiracies are outside of them, something strange or untoward that occurs or surfaces in the midst of normal life – when conspiracy in fact engulfs all of us in every banal way. UFO's, crop circles, may be conspiracies, but they are also very convenient things to provide so people can focus on projecting 'Conspiracy' outward and into the realm of the fantastic – whilst still going to workday after day none the wiser to the handshakes and collusions that make the world and existence that way. Daily conspiracies tend to go unnoticed, because of two things.

The first is that there is a category provided that describes and restricts what a conspiracy is, a nice, neat definition and description. The presence of the Dictionary is itself a conspiracy that possesses and enforces a moral dual structure to all words, reinforcing present geometry, and again to treat words in a certain way so that they have a singular definition. This neat catalogue of what things are and are not is an essential piece of architecture and habit that allows control over perception the same way Priests dictate to the masses what God's laws are. You are Told what conspiracy is! Conspiracy theory is encouraged and kept alive by paranoia, hints of knowledge into the system, suspicion, mistrust, atypical social clarity and so on allowing imaginations to run wild and make any claim at all regarding the way things Really work – without actually working it out. Buying into this pre-prepared definition actually helps to strengthen actual conspiracies in two ways; firstly, hearsay and rumours quickly blow out of proportion as people play Chinese whispers and lend legend, credence and intensity to hearsay consequently lending a distorted and often fearful account of things and the people behind them. The artificially created form of the Temple of THEM proved this case in point.

The second way talking about conspiracies such as UFO's helps strengthen them, is that by focusing on discussing conspiracies using all manner of juicy historical nomenclature and available precedents, as well as leaps to wild conclusions and speculation, all while we wait for our toast to pop up we are completely oblivious to the ingenuous nature of real conspiracy all around us. Distracted by escapism. In other words, talking about the Illuminati distracts you from looking suspiciously at your toaster and taking sudden notice of something odd about something you grew up with, not thinking twice about, that has a sinister story to tell if you know how to listen; all things whisper definite meanings behind their shape and the shape of all things is a meaningful whisper.

ESCAPISM: THE ULTIMATE DISTRACTION

For instance – while you might be sitting at the table typing on your laptop about the true purpose and origin of the Illuminati or the true purpose of the Wehrmacht – if your toaster suddenly broke down, could you fix it? If your toaster blew up, could you build a new one? Why not? Who invented the toaster? What a stupid question? Why should that matter to you – I mean you have better things to worry about, don't you? Don't we all? But look at it this way – you have not been equipped with the technology to fix your toaster, have you? You've been given a product of technology – but the technology itself that makes your toaster go – that's a mystery isn't it. You like to think that the world is technologically advanced, and to speak of technology like you own it, like we all have an equal share as the human race in its ownership. But we don't, do we? If we did, you could probably make your own damn bread warmer. Instead, a very few people out of the billions create our choices, and the rest of us choose from them.

As usual, I like to start with rather innocuous and silly sounding examples and show where the application leads when we consider it superimposed on other things... which becomes far more serious. What about electricity? Hundreds of clever people have harnessed the power of electricity freely for hundreds of years – one guy grabbed it with a key and a kite. But we live in a world where the flick of a switch takes care of it for us. We don't need to fly a kite do we, because we live in a technologically advanced age. Or do we? If your switchboard blew up – could you fix it? Or would you call an electrician? Do you know how electricity works? Can you make a battery using a lemon, vinegar and some copper wire? Can you power a light bulb –or build a light bulb? The light bulb has remained unchanged for something like 150 years because no-one sees any way to improve it.

In all that time, you think we each would have had enough time to learn how one works so we could make our own. Why do you get charged $200 a fortnight for electricity if it's free for anyone to make? If it's been shown to be a natural resource? Maybe it's because the technology and know-how for doing so isn't available to you? Or perhaps you have better things to do than look it up and try. Entertainment, bills to pay, people to Facebook, music to listen to, TV to watch, and dozens of other products to use that you have no idea how to make... What about concrete? Or a basic mud brick? If you had to make concrete to begin rebuilding your house – could you do it? What about food? Do you grow your own food – or do you buy it? Do you lack the technology to grow your own food? People have done it for thousands of years, freely, but have you tried setting up a garden lately? There are people waiting to sell you dozens of items that no-one really needs to do it, tools, slug bait, pesticides, soils, plant food, watering equipment, a water can, gloves, and so on – why?

We tend not to do any of these things, because either someone does them for us, or someone has already done them for us. I.e., we move into a house that has been built, make a phone call on a phone someone else built, talk to an operator about getting our power put on, and they organise it for us. We don't go out into the backyard and start building a generator – because, a) everything we Need is already provided or able to be provided, and b) we haven't a goddamn clue how any of these things work, who made them, who worked on them, how to reproduce them, or how to live without most of them. Can I do any of those things? No, definitely not. I have no idea how to fix my toaster, am still mystified as to how TV works and suspicious of who came up with the technology and how, and I hate gardening. I like to let things go wild and leave nature the hell alone. I can do a lot of things, but inventing the light bulb, creating my own electricity to power a house, or tending tomatoes until they ripen are not in my repertoire. The technology in everything in my house is mind-boggling to me – microchips, plates, wires, lights, panels, tabs, conductors, all arranged just so to make something work.

SOME EXAMPLES OF MUNDANE CONSPIRACY

Socially and technologically, a toaster appears to be an essential item in every kitchen. People are so conditioned to seeing it – that if you gave them a pair of tongs and a flint and told them to toast their bread outside over the fire pit, they'd think you were nutshit crazy. And they'd think that way because they have been conditioned to use a toaster. They can of course be conditioned to more insidious things. Electricity hums into my house inside wires and cables that connect to a complex metal box of tubes and glass plates called a 'transformer' on a pole connected to hundreds of thousands of other poles – but I have no idea how it all works. All I know is it is the done thing, it's been that way since I got to earth, and for the foreseeable future will be that way for quite some time.

Likewise, the ‘supermarkets’ cater for all my food needs without me ever having to worry about growing my own food, failing crops, or hungry snails. I remember my parents’ growing watermelons, beans, potatoes and other things for a while – but sometime in the year ‘85 they stopped and began buying vegetables and fruit and meat from vendors. Of course, now that everyone does it the supermarkets; have a monopoly, have reinvented the technology of food whilst the majority have forgotten how to grow it, and they can pretty much charge whatever they want. Within some degree of reason at this stage of course but mark my words – when you learn that almost all companies are smaller extensions of larger ones, and those larger ones all owned by about six multi-national corporations you realise that something very odd is going on. [I intend to create a Multi-National family tree at some point to trace back, who owns what.] Palmolive can openly insult Dove by saying they have 100% more of this than their rival – because they don’t actually have a rival – the two companies are owned by the same conglomerate and use each other to tension the market. Dove outdoes a Palmolive product on some grounds (new bullshit beads or whatever), then Palmolive outdoes Dove by adding 20% more bullshit beads and double the horseshit, and so on. In this way both companies use each other’s ‘weaknesses to improve their product exponentially and forever. Also consider next time you go to the shop why there is a shelf full of little rather useless tins of something next to a much larger generous portion of it for a bit more money.

It’s not ignorance – in fact too many people don’t give nearly enough of the terrifyingly adept credit these companies deserve – and many of the ploys they use go unnoticed. For instance, the history and social status of packaging is a fascinating topic to look in to. The reason that smaller tin occupies the shelves is not optimism that it will sell despite its poor sized portion and expensive price but is a relatively cheap way to offset the larger tin and make it more appealing by tensioning an opposite choice for you. Since you automatically think each little tin is actually worth $2.99 instead of the product cost of about 3c each tin because it’s been bulk bought in a shipping container load – you would never dream a company would spend oh, $80 to set up small tins beside big ones, what fucking madness would that be? They’ve actually spent about $4 and used the small tins as part of the marketing. You will in almost all cases, opt for the larger tin even if you don’t want all that product, because you’re being psychologically manipulated, you think, it’s better than being ripped off, right? I have enough background in advertising, statistics, forms to believe wholeheartedly that virtually everything is driven by conspiracy of some sort or another.

Don’t believe me that billions of dollars are spent specifically to exploit universal human weakness? Give my ms ‘GMO’ a read and see how old confectionery is recycled into new packets for all brands and resold as fresh candy. It’s called refurbishing and is an extremely lucrative but occult practice in food esoteria. They do it with more things than you'd probably care to know. Underneath all the visage of the food industry, is a seedy profiteering racket. The huge Multi-National agricultural conglomerate called Monsanto attempted to copyright the 'pig'. This group have long forced farmers to buy seeds that only yield produce for one year and then self-destruct so that they must return to Monsanto to buy more seed the next year. In this way, Monsanto dominates the distribution of agriculture and aggressively and forcefully implement mass Genetically Modified Foods – without general knowledge – and because it's in bed with the Food and Drug Administration, is a law unto itself. How the hell does someone copyright the pig?

What's that, there's no Genetically Modified Food in your shopping choices? Are you sure about that? Anything with 1442 is a GMO product. But they won't tell you that on the box, why? Because then you won't buy it. GMO is unpopular and a group of people wanting to sell you food don't want to scare you off by telling you it has something unpopular or even dangerous or experimental in it – no, better to collude with labelling and distribution and FDA channels to create a mystical numerical code instead. That way only the really smart and astute consumers will know what they're buying. Of course, that didn't quite work out so well did it – because now 'health food' is the new commodity, gluten-free, fat-free, etc... tsk. We demanded they stop fucking with our food, and they took our solution from us, turned it into a marketable commodity, and used it against us, as usual. Health food now costs double or even triple other foods. By the way, has anyone looked into the story behind Bar-codes lately?

THE ARCHITECTURE BEHIND CONSPIRACY

Why is a toaster in every home? Why do I pay for electricity instead of making it myself? Why do I go to a supermarket to buy food whose contents I have no control over instead of growing fresh vegetables? Convenience? Ah. Whose convenience? My convenience? Who coined the word convenient and convinced the world it was a good thing? Maybe it is convenient because someone else was making things very inconvenient for us – i.e., long hours at work, expensive day-care centres, or inflation in our mortgage. These issues are not timeless – they are relatively new developments – though conspiracy is perennial. Who or what happened to persuade us that toasters were a good idea to the extent that every house has one? Someone or something did – cause look – there they all are. Yet almost no-one can build one? Or supermarkets? How did they get to be so powerful? So, Omni-present? Something or someone made it that way. What is convenience really but today's buzzword for technological persuasion? What will tomorrow's be? Progress? The Future? Ergonomics? Revolutionise? Now?

What is more important than who founded the Illuminati or NWO – is making the observation that the architecture that enables conspirators to implement their designs, propaganda, marketing and all the reasons that brought toasters into the home; were well done and over with before I arrived on Earth. Toasters were probably introduced sometime in the 50's during a post-war technological boom – as for how, probably by humans relying on the power of advertising, persuasion, exploitation of human needs, marketing channels and methods, taking advantage the fact that people are acquisitive, the idea that money is absolute god and making oneself successful by being rich, powerful, increasing status with various status symbols was the thing to do, making the toaster small, portable, promising it would save time, revolutionise cooking, and that those things were part of the life goal to strive for – these things were all long in place and no doubt followed a dazzling complex path from idea to implementation, with millions of events coinciding, untold people shaking hands and agreeing to take a part in it, etc.

I have no idea how to create a television – and I'm wagering neither do more than a small percentage of Earth's population – yet they are in every home, sometimes three or four deep, one for each room. Our parents were sold on the idea, and we were thus bought up watching television, sat around it to eat dinner, put in front of it to quiet us, teach us, entertain us. It's as if it has always existed for us.

But who or what put one in every home? People like to think they have total self-control, (that is the ego's job) autonomy and think for themselves. Yet, if that were true, why so many TV's? I mean, people even have little TVs in their pockets now to access the internet – as if they can't live without them. Why? Is the internet the meaning of life – or is it a very pleasant ego booster that enables escapism? Society presently demands you have a TV in every room, or in your hand, at all times in case you miss something it has to say. You are some sort of freak without a Facebook page, a mobile phone, or an iPod. If you use a Walkman, keep off the internet, or still use a landline for all incoming calls – people frown and say 'why don't you get a mobile phone' – 'why don't you get a Facebook account?' – Join us – in other words. Join the trend. Join the collective. Join in the hypnotism. Join us in choosing from what is offered and sold. Join us, so we don't feel stupid for jumping on this bandwagon and then realising we've been led when no-one else jumps on.

FROG JUICE

Look back at advertising even as far back as the medieval ages and you will see all sorts of outlandish claims about the products people were selling. Unguents and solvents that could 'cure all' were extremely common. 'Branding' did not come in until about 1950 – i.e., the concept of company logo – yet through various means people in ancient times were able to persuade other people to buy their miracle product even if it was nothing more than liquorice water and a toad smashed flat in a jar. And they were able to do this even then with amazing frequency, because people trusted the testimony either of the salespersons pitch, or the Words (endorsements) written on the bottle or bought into the trend by observing others rushing to buy it. ‘Great!’ ‘Cure-All!’ ‘Amazing!’ ‘Superb!’ etc were enough to sell an otherwise useless bottle of leaky frog for a high price to an unsuspecting punter.

It will come as no surprise whatsoever that I cannot tell you who persuaded us to do these things, who is behind producing the products we are sold, why toasters became popular, or supermarkets replaced gardens, or electricity is sold instead of made in home-made batteries, wind farms or so on. They’ve just always been in place, and things have always been that way from my point of view as a thirty-year-old man. But the power to take advantage of various forms and things and processes that people put faith in requires persuading someone somewhere along the line that its essential to have one, whatever it is – is wide open to abuse, in fact, appears designed specifically for abuse. Sometimes things are sold that aren’t convenient at all.

TOBACCO COMPANIES

A case in point, but just one of thousands, is cigarettes. The contents are largely poison and if not for the intense global campaign to make them the only acceptable social pastime, with billions of dollars spent on promising pleasure or eliciting pain if you don’t join in, making all the most famous figures promote them in movies, having them seen at the most exciting and memorable scenes, used by young old rich poor, pretty ugly alike – associating them with class, status, power, wealth, virility etc – you’d wisely not put one in your mouth. If not for the ads, hell, you wouldn’t even know what one was. You’d have been happy enough with your pipe and the fresh unadulterated tobacco without all the nasty chemicals and pesticides. But they were presented via a very concentrated and deliberate application by a conspiracy of people and sold to the public remorselessly as the next best thing. Cigarettes were carefully associated with sex, success, and sophistication, sporting events, charities, and only much later was it proven they caused horrific diseases. But we know they knew this already – if they didn’t, they wouldn’t have needed such a global saturation that tapped deep into the human psyche on hundreds of crucial levels to sell people toxic sticks.

I once attended a paid campaign by a cigarette chain who wanted to change their packet. They wanted smokers with a significant habit and various other criteria. I did not smoke, but that’s never stopped me from blending in. My sister who applied for the trial first, gave me all the correct answers to fit the criteria and I winged the rest. They were very interested in the psychological emotions feelings, associations I made to the smallest details, the gold banding, the plastic, the triangle flaps in the plastic, the number of cigarettes, the animals on their shield, the feel of the packet, my feelings about the flip top lid and so on. Very thorough, very anal. All the answers I gave them were geared at making the pack as unappetising and unaesthetic as I could think of whilst appearing to be only too keen to co-operate. This was just a small insight into the depths of study that go into every form – forms that they want to seem effortless, timeless, and as if they had always existed. For my trouble I was paid $50 and given two packets of experimental cigarettes with an undisclosed amount of tar (marked as xx's).

Yet, instead of the tobacco companies being held accountable (and how do you do that when companies by their very nature diffuse any personal responsibility, law takes an age to be passed or prosecution to come to trial, and money sways the difference between right and wrong?) for those billions of victims of the smoking campaign who were literally brainwashed by all level of social mores into taking up smoking, subliminally and overtly pressured by more than fifty years of corporate and psychological tactics (the history of smokes is an incredible topic) – it is the smokers themselves who have been targeted in Australia to take accountability. The consumer. Those addicted to smoking are copping all kinds of penalties, bans, and ostracising. And it is here – such companies will always cite free-will, that no-one forced anyone to smoke.

I strongly disagree and indeed see the lengthiest and most hostile campaign of psychological ploys, preying on human weaknesses, and subtle and overt manipulation as being spearheaded by tobacco companies; whose influence and power is quite simply formidable and untouchable. Sure, occasionally they received a hundred million dollar fine – but what does that really do, and does that really mean what we think it does? Who fines them, are you sure? Where does the money go, who owns the people who fine them? What proof do we have other than a brief article in the paper that any of this was a punishment rather than a way of passing money between hands? A show, appearance or glamour of sanctions that amounts to nothing more than some artificial peace of mind for the angry consumer.

I have often cited the Vatican as a powerful form – but that is usually for convenience and because it is a recognisable icon within Satanism – it is corporations like Coca-Cola (who transfigured Santa Claus) and Tobacco, Oil, and other resource-based producers that hold the world by its balls and who are the most heavily instituted and protected by a minefield of law, legislation and violence. Yes violence. Ever looked into how diamonds, coffee, maize, petroleum, rubber gets to our shores – or wondered why so much presentation goes into jewellers shop fronts? Ever tried to visit a tobacco company? Coca-Cola factory? To see the face behind what you're drinking? It's a grim, cold and unwelcoming experience far from the delightful nonsense of talking animals or dancing beach babes.

While there are many clues in the documentaries, books, advertising, attitudes, social commentary, various studies etc. left behind on just how the tobacco companies became so powerful; the loss of information and the reliance on hearsay has proven all too unreliable a means to get to the truth behind things – records of forms cannot be trusted to convey anything more than a nugget of the form-makers intent, even as they often do carry a message or meme more neatly than any other means. That information is no longer observable, only the precedents are. Can precedents be trusted? Only if you trust the Matrix to tell the truth.

What happens on account of the way time/space/habit and humans work – is that the architecture the tobacco companies set up with, the contractors who built their factories, biochemists who manufactured special pesticides, the power they seized by playing by certain economic/financial rules, the ploys they used to deceive or scheme, the lies they told, the truths they hid, the people they paid off, silenced, or bought – all of these things are all figments of my imagination unless somewhere there lies written ‘proof’ that these things happened, that such and such was involved, and that a conspiracy was at hand. Seeing the factory of a tobacco company helps make it a little more real, seeing their crops a little more real, seeing the fierce security guard rather too real and not at all an experience I’d associate with the easy-going, cool suave or clever advertising that tells me what cigarettes are or do.

The key element of proving conspiracy is not having a comprehensive list of tactics and things the tobacco company did to achieve its power – that might be proof of a sort but it the quickest way to get tangled in the labyrinth of forms by comparing dates, names, actions, movements, outcomes, etc. which quickly becomes he said/she said, mired down in details, slander, half-truths, and testimony that leads no closer to the truth. It is not easy to prove any particular conspiracy exists – but the fact that almost anything humans do together to achieve something is daily available evidence enough of our habitual character to conspire, speaks volumes about the way we do things universally as a species.

PROVING CONSPIRACY

The evidence for conspiracy can never be lost. Even when the records are lost, the names muddled, the facts fudged or forgotten, the dates and events mixed up or exaggerated, downplayed or misrepresented by whoever remembered them, what remains that is often immediately overlooked in favour of proving ones case using precedents (something the ego excels at doing and enjoys immensely) such as who did what – is the omnipresence of all the architecture used in any way to conspire.

No amount of searching can bring details back – what really happened in all angles of its staggering complexity is survived by and exists only as memory in whatever was written or filmed about it. Who the hell knows what the Templar’s worshipped in their Temple? Those particulars may never be known – but simply based on the way people still act, we can know many other things. In talks on conspiracy, no doubt many disagreements will exist because many things that happened were never seen or recorded, or many actions that did not seem significant at the time to record played a crucial part and turning points along the way that either weren't seen or seen to be important – but these little scenes, and the invisible players – we will never know – might tell us a very different story if we could ask them. Why is this important? Because it illustrates how flimsy history and the faith people place in a particular way of interpreting things, is.

What will stand out about all things – is only what has been given to us as precedent. That is, assuming we even care to try and look such a thing up. They say 'the squeaky wheel always gets the oil' – and it's fairly true, put your head down and do your work, no one notices you no matter how good a job you do. Carry on and make a noise and a nuisance of yourself and you will get all the attention. The same goes for History. History remembers only the squeaky wheels – the noisy nuisance makers. What I am getting at is that the architecture for the tobacco companies' takeover was already in place by the time I got here... The power of words, the methodology of campaigns, suggestion, pressure, promises, ego appeals etc – were already well established in human social mores and the effective means by which to manipulate people already an ancient art. These arts can be repeated in virtually any age, whether a thousand years ago or a thousand years from now because the canvas isn't changing. The paints may be a different colour, and everyone may paint a different picture using the foundations in place, but the canvas has stayed the same. You could liken the canvas to the 'third dimension' or our perception of the world through this triangular prism.

Because of the 'quantum relativity' of all things – simplicity is necessary to strip life, events and people of this relativity and bind it within memorable blocks of key players and actions who and that were visible. Thus, we remember the Pharaohs of Egypt because they were apparently the most significant, certainly the showiest, but history does not record the hidden players, the toilers in the fields, the builders, the many hands that stirred the pot who may have had more than a hand in what the pharaohs (figureheads) actually did. It remembers leaders and 'decisive' turning points. It remembers a particular way. We might remember what The South did in the Civil War in America, but generally not what each particular nameless John Doe did that might have contributed in unseen ways to the outcome – because History isn't what happened, it's an interpretation – and that's all it is.

We question interpretations made by people all the time in life – yet somehow ignore questioning the really important ones – like interpretation itself. We pick key players to remember and build a fragmented distortion of events based on the evidence available. That is about all we can do – but we often forget or are made to forget that is what we have done, and argue precedents, not observable facts when we swap words back and forth. We trust the truth has been told – but we can't know it – it's all abstract and living memory – without someone recording it, it's like it never existed at all. Since the information that could be provided by the unseen players behind the events we remember are not taken into account – history reflects only the barest and most superficial details of anything by recording what was witnessed. People say this is obvious – but the way they used words as if they were pure nuggets of truth indicates only the ego understands (the ego ‘always understands’. Lol) while their self-awareness does not extend to the -I-.

Historical writers and precedent conspire to present a particular living memory of the past and preserve it by preserving or using precedents written before them: Thus for someone born in 2030, Jesus will have always been a white-skinned surfer with Anglo-Saxon features, OJ Simpson did not kill his girlfriend, and Santa Claus will have always been associated with the celebration of materialism delivering presents to homes in a red and white suit, coca cola will have never had cocaine in it, the encyclopedia Britannica will have always had good things to say about the Popes, and man will have landed someone on the moon in 1969. Precedent will not remember the secretary who gave Jim the wrong sandwich causing him to go out for lunch and meet a future executor who would take them to power; or that Jim sharpened three pencils that day, stalling his time in the office just enough to avoid being hit by a car outside as he left the building a few seconds late changing tobacco history forever...

The variables of all events and persons involvement are too large to assess anything in any Objective means because of how many infinite ways it can be apprehended. Anthropologically, physically, sociologically, economically, linguistically, historically, magically, scientifically, psychologically, for instance. We can't process all that information, so we read books, where someone else crunches it down into bite sized convenient lists of precedents for us. Or we write one ourselves and do the same thing. Consciously however, we are extremely limited in what we can know about an event, a person, or anything for that matter – which is where my rabid scepticism of forms, including religion, politics, cults, ideologies, time, space, etc comes into my work. And whilst I have covered some of the ideas presented here in other isolated manuscripts, the relationship between those insights and many things I see in everyday life involves a fusion.

Our linear time-space frame does not allow us to make connections between everything and everything else (even though this is more precisely the nature of the universe's operation) but forces us to single out objects and simplify groups of them into blocks. Thus can we say America went to war, that is not what actually happened or could ever happen unless every single person in America agreed to the war its government waged – and we generalise to the extent that we presume we know the minds and hearts of all Americans, group 300 million people into one single country, and then continue to speak in nations, with all the loss of information that implies.

The issue itself, War, is staggeringly complex in what it signifies but we call it ‘War’, because it's easy to group thousands of connotations into one simplistic description, and, because that's what was in place when we got here. My arguments and citations of various processes thus far have only been half-hearted, as I believe I have covered this and other processes in detail in ‘An Analysis of Frequency’. I am aware I have a troublesome tendency to re-explain everything about them any time I write a new manuscript – perhaps that tendency too is a map of my subconscious and the fierce relationships I see in everything to everything else that makes it hard to keep things separate.

I realise that a lot of the things I have said over the years have been said before, and sometimes by those better equipped to explain them, but the context in which these things are placed is generally not within an occult setting – but I persist in referring to my work as occult and working within the occult because I believe that the name of the game is still truly a study of the Hidden.

I strongly believe there are relationships between the concepts I study and the ordinary things people take for granted in life. I think they are very important to re-iterate and include in any understanding of ‘hidden’ or occult forces in each generation –and so while some of these things have been covered by other authors ad infinitum – they have not been shown to relate to magic or sorcery or our origin. Many of the relationships people infer when talking about conspiracy, ego, new world order, or what have you are usually bound to an isolated field of study – they do not cross over into who we are or where we come from – whereas I believe that when I am gone, my work will be able to provide a guide covering many angles that show the massive interconnection between all these things and more. For that reason, and perhaps because some unknown synchronous force influences me to do so, I endeavour to include many of these important relationships within my work that they are not forgotten but repeated for the next age.

Chloe Ortega (WSA) focused not so long ago on an insight that should be taken more notice of than it generally is – and that is, that when you are old, no-one will give a shit that you supported their products, no-one will care that you helped make the company a fortune, and no-one will care when you are crushed under the wheels of progress – the world will typically chew you up, tell you what it needs to while you’re young to make you work for it, bleed your life dry, and leave you pretty much for dead while others capitalise off your subservience so the few can live a life of luxury.

This is a truism – the companies that treat you as a consumer and turn you into a consumer so that you will make them rich, will keep doing it, because it’s the way it’s always been done. They will not often get a change of conscience and look after you when you get old – they will not reward long term devotion or sacrifice – they will fire you and hire new blood, young blood, eager ambitious innocent blood to take your place. You will be left wondering what the hell you did with your life, why you poured blood sweat and tears and your very life-force into such shallow commerce and have lived for so long to end up with nothing, no rich worthwhile spiritual Gnosis of what life was all about, under the yolk of capitalist architecture.

My mother once said to me ‘no loyalty goes unpunished’, that too, is a truism. If you want proof of a New World Order – ignore the Illuminati escapism – look at what is right in front of you every day, your body, mind, what you see, what you see people do – and why they do it. Why you, do it.

SIMPLIFICATION, GENERALIZATION AND COLLECTIVE CONSENSUS

I am still curious as to how much information the human subconscious can remember. I can string all these concepts together and bring various evidence to bear in dozens maybe hundreds of fields because I absorb a lot. I constantly fill my mind with all sorts of topics, confident that it can absorb everything even if I don’t retain the information consciously. I trust that it is being recorded somewhere by some alien power within. It is moot to argue that a hell of a lot of information is lost to us in translation – limiting our cognition of things to a more simplistic model of recall and ordering – that is a given. But our habit of doing this and others knowledge we do this is used to control us like lab rats – even as we think we are free.

THE UTILITY OF GEOMETRY

The Tobacco company’s rise to power may forever be lost except for recorded precedent – but the architecture they used to do it – is still here – still available – and still being used by others. This architecture they used existed long before them – they merely used what was already at hand. By this architecture, (which I sometimes refer to as ‘Geometry’) I mean that the tools for, practices of and methods involving economics, building a company, the acceptance of companies and commerce, the industry of companies as a means of doing business, the economics of selling and buying, the infrastructure of shipping, postal services and routes, the means to farm large harvests of tobacco, protective legislation, television, advertising and all the means used to make the tobacco companies rich and powerful etc were already well in place, or could be put in place using other existing tools, by the time young Jim, (who we will say is the future CEO of Winfield) then 8, saw his dad light up a cigar. When Jim is eventually charged with taking over after his father’s empire when his father dies or retires – he simply responds to the world by using the architecture already in place – helped along by the things his dad has already implemented by building a reputation, business contacts, commerce, shipping contracts, accumulating wealth and consolidating power by shaking the right hands, all on the back of a ready made system of trade and brokerage. Naturally (or should that be habitually) Jim used what was already there in place to continue making money and increasing power because that is the way it has always been done. He not only used external architecture, he also used internal architecture (the ego for example). What does Jim care how it all developed and came into being – to him it's always been there, and it makes him rich. He need not think too much about how it all got there, why he is rich, or where human beings came from.

There are hundreds of terrifying social experiments that prove human beings follow one another (or a leader) through hell and back simply because they don't have the autonomy to lead themselves or are held in place by anomie, a point of collapse when citizens just go about their daily business-like robots without questioning why. So why should Jim go against the norm? His dad used what was in place, his dad's dad used what was in place, and each inherited the world already filled with the architecture and systems necessary to achieve certain goals.

What did Jim use? What did Jim's dad use? They simply used the systems already in place and available to use to perform certain functions; not just contracts, legislation, lawyers, marketing, and shipping concerns – but systems in place that took full advantage of human needs by exploiting universal weaknesses, similarities, and habits. They knew sex sold, they knew a sense of humour could divert attention from serious issues or problems, they knew a long cylinder had a phallic symbolism, that using cars, ladies and other status symbols deeply affected their chances of selling more cigarettes. They knew giving cigarettes to movie stars would win converts, they knew human beings have a weak resistance to adopted group consensus, that alpha waves from the TV were hypnotic, that radio and TV required different advertising approaches, and that cigarettes contained DDT and other toxins that caused destructive effects on the organs of the body. Anything they didn't know – they could develop using the architecture in place. But they knew all this because it or systems and practices like it, had been practiced, tried and tested, and the art of human manipulation had become a business well before they arrived on earth too.

[What did 101 use when it came about? It used the foundation that THEM had already built, tapping into its fan base and supporters, used its established reputation, word presses and websites to re-direct traffic and re-orient my approach by implementing changes to its structure.]

We know that universally humans respond to a large array of things in a very similar way; they respond to basic needs being met or taken away, they respond to symbols, they respond to signs; they respond to status, they respond to wealth and power, pleasure and pain, us and them, they also respond to ego massage – precisely why 'social networking' is so popular – it allows the ego to run wild. They respond to ideas that can only be presented thanks to the intricate framework and lengthy development behind English, language, speaking, and human communication. These are the same things Jim appealed to, that the medieval frog juice sellers appealed to, or that I appeal to (though I tend to discuss how they work or what is at work at the same time as I use them in order to show everyone how they work).

We all use the systems in place, words, promises, ideals, buzz-words, popular culture; and precedent. Words, work. Signs, work, Symbols, work. Appeals to ego, work. Promises of wealth, work. Increase of status, works. Appeals to Acquisitiveness, work. Once these tools manage to convince one person, that person can help convince others to support (endorse) a product, person or event. This is done by convincing the alpha in all demographics of the product – which generally means, making it worth a company or institutions interest to support it.

To put it plainly – ‘Money talks’. When enough influential or popular people convince enough other people that ‘frog-juice’ is actually ‘PowerAde’ – or that they can turn frog juice into PowerAde for the purpose of making their lives a little cushier, offering incentives to get them on board; that is precisely what happens, and marketing turns water into wine. By being associated with those trendsetters who have high social status, either by having being paid incentives to endorse the product, actually believe in the product, or otherwise convinced the product can lend some increase in personal equity, (even by campaigning against it) ‘PowerAde’ quickly becomes a must-have commodity and everyone sets out to buy it. It is suddenly everywhere and becomes ubiquitous. It’s on TV, radio, billboards, internet, movies, merchandise, in the newspapers, magazines, or conversations of others. I only need replace ‘mobile phones’ or ‘televisions’ in lieu of frog-juice to make my point.

THE LATEST FROGJUICE (THE SPELL OF NOW)

The latest frog-juice is 3d television. No-one wants it – no-one even thought about it – until it started appearing in news, magazines, editorials, and other media propaganda that influence us and informs us of the latest trends emerging in popular culture. Emerging, or forced? We might initially resist 3d television – on all sorts of grounds – usually common-sense – but when it is on the lips of enough influential people, sold in the right conditions by the right people – it will become ubiquitous, accepted, and very soon after, a sought-after commodity. And, when it is a sought-after commodity – it gains the power to push out old technologies – often forcefully.

Cassette tapes were replaced by CD’s, CD’s by DVDs, DVDs by downloads, and downloads, probably by miniature computers that you can carry around instead of having to sit at home.... Wait a minute. Ipad anyone? Or mobile phones? What about dial-up internet? Remember when everyone started talking about ‘Broadband’? Same thing. And the same pattern of people slowly taking things up in exactly the same way that’s been going on for thousands of years. When enough popular people were convinced, i.e. service providers, government, net-nerds, computer software companies, by magazines, interviews, pressure to adopt, pressure to be ahead of the curve, soon it was quite okay for Optus to remove dial-up – and even be quite hostile about it, as if the older technology was an offence to god himself and those who used it, the devil itself. If you told someone you used dial-up today – they might not burn you at the stake, but it might make them slightly less interested in being your friend or feel sorry for you. And so the superficial river runs, as it always has, in the occult worlds of marketing, choice and control. Now everyone uses broadband, or wireless, except those talked about in hushed whispers as lepers who use older obsolete tech. The conspiracy here should be obvious. But not only is it the clever ads, marketing ploys, persuasions, frequency, name dropping and adoption in popular culture that makes or breaks a product – it's us.

Merely by talking about 3d TV, I am plugging it. If I talk about it, (that the term 3dTV is even there to be talked about) others talk about it. That's how people work – the very power of names and product placement and advertising knows that. So even if you want to say something against it, or even say something against the marketing used to push it, you must mention the product, and are therefore helping to advertise it. In all groups, i.e. all forums, for example – there exists a pecking order. Same with all families, groups of friends, and so on. What the popular, alpha people decide about it, will become its future – those who want to climb the pecking order will support the alpha leaders and adopt the same mindset – in turn influencing their own circle of peers. If the makers of 3d can convince the alpha population that 3d television will increase their personal status – that is enough to make it the new trend. If company A can be promised a high return for investing in 3d television, they'll buy in. If company B gets threatened with foreclosure or hostile takeover if they don't adopt the new policy of 3d promotion, they might cave in. Company A and B will do what they can to help market 3dTV. Little by little, through handshakes, threats, promises and leverage, 3d television becomes popular, marketable, and marketed. Too bad if several years from now it's revealed that viewing holographic images causes serious visual side effects or mental issues – that will be then, this is Now. NOW. Now. Now! And Now, is all that matters, or, rather, it has been conspired to make you think it is all that matters.

Ads no longer politely ask you to come and try their product (unless they're trying a now novel approach in an era of rudeness) they rush you, tell you to hurry, to be quick, to try one NOW. Not sometime, at your leisure, but Now. Immediately. Because if you don't (says their subtext) you're scum of the earth, a nobody with no social status, an outcast, a freak, or worse. That pushy approach must have worked at some point in the past, because it wasn't always like that. Someone told someone else it worked, and after a while, everyone was ordering their customers about. It was in fact, suddenly odd and backward, if you didn't. Do I like the 3d television? I don't know enough about it. But that's irrelevant – I remain highly cynical of the same process being used to sell me shit I don't need today, tomorrow, and for the foreseeable future – but more than that, wary that people are far more easily controlled than they think. It might seem an innocuous thing to bring up – but if anyone really wants to change the Magi, change the World, change things while they are here on Earth, then it is these processes in place that need to be taken into consideration – not the forms these processes result in. Music is the same deal – you now download because that is what you are driven to do, you do it because its cool, convenient, available, and because everyone else is doing it – because it's the trend.

You can stick to your guns all you like and buy CDs and support the market, but you're going to be hard pushed to buy any of the great old movies on VHS that were wiped from the slate when DVD decided what was going to be kept – and you're going to find CD's harder and harder to get because the majority have now been convinced that downloading music is the way to go – as if its always been there. And since those who use that term are still quite young and were born into a world with that technology – it's like it has always existed for them. They have little to no idea the enormous powerful procedures and meetings that went into making them accept it and other things. It's just always been that way. Why question it.

There is an insidious undertone here – People, will always choose the technology available to them, and choose from what is offered, unless they are the producer of technology themselves or create their own choices. Could you write the code to download music on a computer you made yourself to perform the same task as Livewire? I doubt it. A few can – and we see what happens when they do. A group of people got together and wrote the code for Facebook, twitter, Microsoft windows, eBay – everyone else adopted it, and the writers made millions, but only after a long public campaign of advertising and promotion. If you can't produce your own goods, you must choose from what THEY want you to choose, from what is made available – and in that way, what you do, is always controlled by what is available. The ways and means to practice Satanism were quite obscure in terms of something people did, relegated to spooky paranormal books and idle speculation sparked into an inferno by the Church – thus it was that the arrival of the Church of Satan through LaVey was exciting because it introduced a NEW choice, a new way to do things. The Temple of Set introduced another Choice, driven by Aquino. Then the Order of Nine Angles driven by Long introduced yet another choice – none of which had existed prior to the productions of each individual or group of individuals behind these forms.

Each of these forms was produced by producers who in Marxist terms, 'owned the means of production' – and each of these men gave Satanism new life, gave new life to a form that had never existed before. Likewise, 101 aims to introduce a new choice as well – because I believe none of the above groups have gone far enough out of the box to gain control of it. That is the way new forms work, someone must always think they can do better. Whether they can, is a matter for the gods.

By using technology to control your day-to-day priorities, organise your time, your money, your life choices, your religion, your clothes and so on right down to every little thing you attach to you to build your persona and social status – instead of thinking about your existence on earth as a free agent – you are weighed down with science, religion, philosophy, duty, culture etc. that have already been pre-packaged and sold to you. You must then select from the array of available religions, beliefs, ways of living, offered up (and Why would the Magi offer anything that could destroy them in those choices?) or – start your own. Only when you start it, will a new choice be opened up and that form exist – unless of course, your new choice runs the same course using the same tools that reins all new forms in and renders them ineffective against what already stands and has stood to prevent you from grand awareness of the scam being pulled.

We rely on others to invent technology for us because we generally have NO idea how to make it ourselves – thus whatever They choose to make, is what we must choose from. (This powerful all-knowing reverence and veneration to a mysterious ‘They’ was something we stole from them when we chose to become THEM). Whatever they want us to talk about – is what we will generally talk about – and, we will do it according to what is already in place, we will use arguments that will never reveal the morality, duality, Latin purpose, time and space restriction and imprisonment these forms were designed for to Control us and interpret the entire world a very specific way. Their way. It is exactly the same in terms of life philosophy – if you don’t have your own, you must choose from what is available.

You should not expect the Magi who have been in power for thousands of years at least, and may even be part of each of us, some process in the brain, a biological contaminant, a group of highly organised people, or an alien race – to provide the keys to the jail. There is no incentive for them to give up their power, or release us from our prison. Only we can do that – and that is what my work has been trying to do for two decades; i.e. find a way out of the terrifying power of the ‘Matrix’. What we might want to wonder about – is when did words acquire the power to turn ordinary frog-juice, into a miracle wonder hair-tonic and missing foot cure? When did a rag-tag bunch of suits acquire the power to be seen as superhuman dark Illuminati pulling strings behind the scenes? We may never know.

The origin of words is questionable, because our origin is questionable too. If we knew where we came from – it would provide context for the rest of our lives (hence the Bible cashes in on telling us) but we don’t – it’s like we have always been here. And quite frankly, for most of us, life is precisely like that, we are born into a world that has existed for thousands of years before we got here and is already covered in a time-honoured landscape of forms and precedents with people in the middle of doing things that have always been done just because that is the habitual nature of people. For instance – until I was twelve, my family called me ‘Willy’. But at school I would write my name down as Kris. This strange discrepancy did not occur to me to question consciously until a long time later, some twenty years later in fact when I remembered this and asked my family why they called me Willy when my name was Kris. None of them knew – and each exchanged dumbfounded looks with each other and shrugged their shoulders. Not one of them could give me an answer as to why. It was just what they had always done. Interestingly enough, since my mother began doing genealogy she found we had a relation called William, whose family called him Kris... It is hard not to believe in synchronous rivers of power and co-incidence running through the veins of life when presented with such revelations. It's almost paranormal. I digress.

Systems of word, language, signs, and appeals to ego – they've been working for a very long time, able to convince others merely because people believe in the value of words, trust in a smiling face, or can't resist a cologne ad that shows lots of pretty women. Yes, some of us do – but, most of us, don't. Most of us, are not producers, we are consumers – we are not leaders, but followers, and we choose from what is there to choose. We do not provide our own choices – and therein lies the very sentiment behind conspiracy and the reason for it to occur.

We don't get dropped into a static world; we get dropped into a moving clock with thousands of grinding cogs in mid-mesh, millions of forms already in place invented long ago that have established themselves beyond doubt as the status quo, the done thing, the absolute law which you do Not question. Running this architecture are billions of people habitually in motion doing what has always been done, following in footsteps, or simply taking advantage of the architecture in place. I.e. people laughed at me when I began sharing many of my observations that language or morality was an abstract or that Satan was a symptom of the deeper human condition, a mere product of something deeper in the psyche. Perhaps it was because I could not provide enough evidence or context as my own understanding was still in its youth. They've since stopped laughing and started listening – but only because I am now a producer – I have produced my own Individualosophy, Weltanschauung, worldview – and because it is unusual compared to other accepted occult/satanic practices my insights have lead to decades of resistance against them as well as an excitement that something new is on offer to choose from.

Humans are quite basic creatures. If I was getting under the Magi's skin at some point in the future and somehow gained global notoriety with hundreds of thousands of people interested in my writing – and it sent a shock-wave through the system – and they wanted to pay me to shut the fuck up – I have to say, I'd consider being paid off. I can't know at this point what I would do if presented with such an option – since my only life goal has thus far been to take the pyramid down one stone at a time and 'destroy the Church' – perhaps offset by a feeling of powerlessness at the sheer geometry of the architecture that was already set up well before I arrived – suddenly being offered enough money to live comfortably for the rest of my life and have equal power, would remove my struggle for power, and perhaps be a tough offer to pass up.

It is no wonder that corruption is rife – and mediocre is endemic – it is very easy when offered the equivalent of a bag of cash or a bullet to choose what is best for personal survival, happiness and fulfilment. Together in 101 we are conspiring, alone I am conspiring, alone, you are each conspiring – endlessly weighing up your options and figuring out the best choice, the best option, to suit you and maybe your associates. My life goal has also become more complex as I have realised how entwined each person is in everything else, and how it is related to them – including myself. Ethics, a topic I'd like to touch on at a later date, would come into any equation of idealism vs. corruption but are of course mostly habitual – easily breakable – and fragile at best when under sufficient duress. Ethics, outlined by Peter Singer (a marvellous thinker) are similar to forms, in that each ethic stated, contains within it, the seeds for its destruction. If you claim for instance, that you believe you have the inalienable freedom of speech; you automatically grant others the same right. If you claim that you have the right to fight against the system; you automatically grant the system the same right to fight against you. All human endeavours suffer from the duality in our language which immediately creates the mirror of opposition whenever a form is raised. I.e. whatever weapons we arm ourselves with, can then be used against us.

The NWO/Magi whatever you want to call them – know this. They merely use the tools already well cemented in place to perform the same magic thousands of others have before them – whose individual acts or collaborative efforts somehow set up these double-edged swords and entire systems and networks of existing forms for others to later use – and so whatever weapon we use to go to war, immediately attacks us. That is why I avoid using weapons the same way others do – because I know this too. I see the only empowerment in this knowledge coming from being one step ahead picking up the weapons what they were forged of, and for. If you know that the weapons they leave lying around are useless – you can leave them alone, not waste your time swinging a pre-prepared sword basically against your own head, and therefore concentrate on knowing the enemy, not the enemy's distractions. The NWO may have a mythical status and conjure a lot of Illuminati type secret meetings with high-backed chairs and elaborate handshakes – but its really just you and me, looking out for one another, to get what we want. The NWO is not made up of superhuman intellects – but golfing buddies, people doing favours, people sharing power.

They all sit on the toilet in that quiet humble vulnerable repose, they all cry, they all succumb to a bullet in the head. They live no longer than approximately 100 years, are prone to disease and misfortune, natural disasters or acts of god, have one head, two arms, two legs, have the same basic motor functions, and operations as each of us. They are not immortal, or untouchable, they are you and me, and him and her. You and me play an enormous part in letting things like the NWO come to power, abuse its power, keep its power. We always have. And unless we understand their magic, and each other, we always will.

Unless we conspire.

MALEFICIA ENGRAM HARUSPEX TERATO

What is a Cover-Up? It is simply a gap in understanding the breadth of one's flock vs being part of the flock. For a Govt in charge of 100% of a land and its people – it's degree of what is concerning is less sensitive, viewing the population as a whole and in terms of how many an event will affect. For an individual this translates differently – we are in charge of 0.001% of land and people – namely our own property and ourselves. Our view especially when effected by the event is that the Govt is covering-up something that has greatly affected the normal way of things, be it through deaths, disease, or tragedy. Because we are personally affected. The Govt and its officials, are insulated from this effect and see it differently, as a problem among thousands, affecting a percentage of its flock. In 5000 years of continuous rule – a nation see everything there is to see. The greatest atrocity becomes an everyday step.

We have spoken of the esoteric meaning behind a Nations Flag – not its exoteric purpose to claim sovereignty over a specific region of land and represent its temporal culture as eternal – but, a proclamation of genocide and the bloody removal of previous inhabitants. No-one moves willingly. Over time, the flag, associated with sports, ceremonies, heroes, honour, grandeur, participation, power and a people – convinces that is is a not a murder rag, it is a political affiliation, it is a national pride, it is a geographical region. Time – heals all wounds, it also erases all memory. Many countries operate with the aid of tolerant killers and everyday atrocity. It is essentially, a crime to be human wherever you are. What is perhaps most enervating even beyond the irredeemable sanctimonious denials and appeals by those accused of their actual deeds declaring it persecution – is the staggering shortness of human life to remember and pass on the evil inherent involved in 'doing' 'ones' 'job'. For the sake of appearance, for the vanity of being seen as something to strive toward or for, for the sickly love of undeserved praise – our Chattel chattel on, repressing, oppressing, pushing others around, playing at being in charge, pretending they matter above all else, lying to themselves, to others and anyone who will listen. The self-deceit and corruption of humanity is the oldest pandemic.

What, is it, that humans do, that is so important, we need to stay alive? What is humanity struggling so hard to stay above the water for? Who of any of us is so important we must persist – why is there any effort to save ourselves when there is no hope of saving each other. What is indisputable is that no matter how gallant, altruistic and loving a rising sentiment to band together to put a stop to atrocity: there will always be those who betray us, govern us, detain us – and rule us. It should be best for all mankind if the land were sunk to the depths of the water – that nothing remained to be squabbled over in the noisy farting of human greed and pretentious gain, for what? For its own sake. That is all we have and all we amount to. Shunned to the far reaches of space with absolute reason, destined to shabbily hide our choronzonic filth in the Myth of God whose symbolism is but a grand carpet under which all self-deception shall be swept – and the silliness of “Nations”.

But as 0.001% why should I not feel as such? What is it to me if my policies are enacted by my propaganda department, if my ordered incursions into a neighbouring countries border secure a certain sea, if my trade negotiations or sanctions are effective in establishing my pecking order on the global chain, or my nuclear weapons stockpile is more or less significant than my enemy? What to me, the swing-vote importance of any press meeting or the drudge of public appearance to win popularity or present a fallacious air of unity and secure my ability to cement my power in the later oppression of my people whom I will punish for making me grovel before them beforehand?

What is a conspiracy? Genuine paranoia, is rare. In the main, those who fear being hurt by something or someone have or will be and are rightfully fearful. For the first time in its brief history Australia has experienced some amount of liberty deprivation, this has prompted some to take to the streets in protest. Some entirely deluded certainly, but some very well-informed. How, they distinguish an all-encompassing global conspiracy capable of controlling all things including media presenting ‘official narrative’ vs ‘alternative’ news feeds presenting ‘the truth’ – is not up for debate – conspiracy is not political or even logical under scrutiny – it is a religion, a faith that delights in being afraid and spreading fear. It is kin to the Christian faith which peddled its wares of a vengeful Satan dragging you to Hell if you misbehaved and did not let the priest fuck you or the townsfolk rabble burn you – it is dichotomic and divides the world into Sheep (Everyone who does not agree) and Wolves (the characteristic hubris of a cult claiming an evolved state, or the good end of a pre-set see-saw.).

Those claiming the Govt want to control them are right – the Govt does, very much, want them and everyone to stay in their pen and as seen worldwide on every street – not make trouble for us, whoever is representing ‘us’ from whichever echelon of representation. The Govt will absolutely punish them for daring to stand up against it – and use the media to demonise and turn the weapon of mob justice, that irrational collective-psychoopathy that can mete out justices on its behalf and get blamed for the task. Nothing – is more savage, petty and vicious than the actions of frightened, indignant and self-righteous sheep thrown an isolated wolf. The madness of a cult of people who believe they above others understand what is happening not just in isolated instances but in full, in depth and across the planet – may well be justified.

It is possible both, that they were mad before and merely devolved into an efficacious imitative parrot, or mad after the fact when they glimpsed the viewpoint of those who frequently see the governed in percentages of concern and action – caring only enough for the individual when used as pawn to advance their chess game. This viewpoint is visible everywhere there is control and is the symptom of control. When a police officer asked the media to stop filming it was not a conspiracy. When another police officer asked the media to leave it was not a conspiracy. When two police officers joined together to ask the media to stop filming – it was not a conspiracy. But when the police officer took the media’s ID and asked if it was fake or real – then, it became a conspiracy. When officers joined with other officers in refusing the ability to film, then it became a conspiracy. Then held against his will through the implied threat of violence the journalist was experiencing what law actually looks like when its not mincing about following human rights and the misguided assumption held by most that you have to do something ‘wrong’ to get taken forcibly by people you don’t know to a place you don’t want to be to be ignored when asking why. The real evil, and its real, you see here is the mis-match of power which does what it wants when it wants.

The media sought the right permission, the policeman on the ground refused that permission even though it was given from a station above him. This – autonomy of sovereign power driven by egotistical power-tripping is what causes atrocity. The real world, is this. You don’t have rights, that’s a myth – you don’t have freedom, that’s a myth – you don’t have autonomy that too is a myth. But the threat of trouble vs the instinct toward preservation is so strong and well-reinforced that billions obey it and believe the propaganda shown them, of who and what and when, is the enemy they should fear. Make no mistake, the Govt will find and make examples of those involved in protest – ironically, the one time they should have been wearing masks in accordance with their dictum, the protest was about not wearing them: which will make it dead easy to round them up privately or publicly, using the mis-directed outrage to channel gestapo tactics of having a people inform on its people. We cannot expect much more from a people born of convicts and petty power-games that brutally slaughtered and savagely persecuted its countries previous inhabitants and denied it ever happened until offering a begrudging ‘sorry’ hundreds of years later.

Yet – still no-one wise to the pattern, fear, cause, outrage, solution, fear, cause, outrage, solution – a punched horse vs the forced imprisonment of double towers of people, or the rapine on Christmas Island of refugees, or the deprivation of liberty the forced wearing of masks the “non-mandatory” inoculation with unknown contents. The goalposts shift, the rabbit runs around the track with greyhounds in pursuit. The misdirection is successful. No-one takes the accusers to task, no-one publishes images and addresses, full names of the media identity who published the inflammatory piece that targets this or that person, do they?

Just as the Witch-hunters and their pointy fingers have always been immune from being accused while they send others to char to death in the excruciating pain of fires, burning twice, once from the flames and once from the humiliation of being innocent. The dissenters, the new-ageists, the conspiracists are not crazy or ‘fringe’ – they are exact in their re-telling (if a little carried away from time to time joining things together) of the cold pragmatic lengths the ruling party, lackeys and conspiring parties will go to, have gone to, to achieve ends. They are right about the distractions and self-important necessities of a bovine population who enforce denial of these obvious transgressions absolutely everywhere you care to look outside of mainstream media or the ‘bubblegum’ mkultra programming that hypnotises with fear and cradles with detritus. Fascism is the order of the day, sometimes disguised as democracy, sometimes as communism, but it’s not too many steps from the well-travelled and known road before it will rip off its mask and not be disguised at all.

Then – you get concentration camps, then you get disappearance, then you get the man in uniform cutting open the face of the farmer, the breaking of a femur and the forced signing of documents. Paper is perhaps more frightening than the blade. Worse than all of this, you get the held-up hand and the mumblings that nothing is going on, that you seek to defame and shame these cold-blooded killers, that you, are the guilty party, you are the problem, you must die for being reasonable and questioning their inanity and insanity. But – we’ve already announced a new aeon have we not?

The age of the favour of the greatest number, the collective and the death of the individual ushered in by the individuals themselves. Beware Serial killers, everywhere. All, in the name, of Forms.

What is Deep-State? It is the acknowledgement that there are two realities, one in which things are as the media and govt say they are with official causes, problems, statistics, issues, resolutions, accurately portrayed and dealt with by the relevant authorities to the best of their ability run by a servant of the people you elected to humbly do their job and serve us. The other reality is that power corrupts, technology is held back, murder works where coercion doesn’t, and we are floated a mirage that opportunity is equal, we should have goals, purpose, ambitions that can be achieved for status, prestige and enjoy the world around us as visitors to an amusement park, distracted by all of the stalls and rides until such time we, having exhausted our blood sweat and tears in the service of the state, retire on some pension or magical money saved from the clutching grasping claws of our overseers. It is a mature, initiated viewpoint that realises the effort of invisible hands using planned forces to placate and numb opposition, dissension and rebellion.

Deep-State operates with unlimited money and powerful connections and when it moves a piece on the board it affects a lot of time and space – it is simply you but with billions of dollars, wine and caviar, daily conversations with movers and shakers, security attache and corporate meetings, golf courses and your buddies who happen to be military contractors, judges, pharmaceutical CEO's, doctors and mining magnates. It is you, but with a role in sending the military to other countries to take a resource or demonstrate a vulgar display of power, to grant life or death and slot everyone into their place of servitude, to fuss about being given the short-hand version of a suggested law by others who take care of those petty details while you enjoy your steak dinner and blowjob under the desk. It's knowing that others would kill to know what you know and that you will kill them if they do. It's feeling important in the chain of command and that your job is a crucial bolt holding an imaginary but real-feeling patriotism or fanaticism together. It's the ability to offer No Response and ignore Consequence. It's the unfortunate side-effect of humans domination by forms to keep someone up, something going, and protect others from the truth. It's the evil that is above evil. It is the small satisfaction of making another billion dollars or seeing one's stock rise slightly in the market, it is the anal fucked supermodel line-up and the power to indulge in criminal excesses that are forbidden to most, freely and without restraint.

Many are they who copy Deep-States example but without the power – often a mimicry through fucking or fighting to deliver a pleasurable high, to dominate and take, intending to cause pain or pleasure, and simulate what is is to have power. But power isn't linear – it isn't a graceful tower of bureaus handing down a command lower and lower until it reaches the streets and filters neatly throughout the echelon. Power is not the top commanding the bottom – power, is Resentment enacted because the opportunity presents itself to enact. Power is in the police officer's refusal to let the media film. Power is in calling him the police officer not Tsung Hung of Wuhan Province and details of his age, address, intention or self-explanation of his actions without his fear of stepping out of line of the "Party". Power is getting away with it – whatever it is, melting people down into glue and harvesting their parts as a commodity, giving them daily rape, torture and bashing their skull, making/selling child porn and running networks to profit from the victims agony, excusing it all in the name of your ideal or goal and getting away with the subjugation, humiliation, excruciation, organisation of hateful, spiteful, harmful acts against your fellow man.

Most people will only ever be able to pretend they have power – when they fuck up, the really powerful will put them down themselves using laws and forces they are entirely above. For breaking the illusion, for risking the circus, for letting the People see behind the curtain – which is not a harmless old man with spectacles running Oz through his jade Golem: but a spectacle of a grotesque monster with a distended jaw, chewing people to pieces with flat teeth as they drop from the conveyor belt and bloat its gargantuan belly, a thousand miles long and wide, digesting the pulpy broken mass to power a single light-bulb.

When the individual ceases to be recognisable in perspective – when one's interactions rise to the level of meetings, chairs, congress, ministerial cabinets, press conferences, international flights, peace talks, economic forums, NATO, OPEC, EU, and lose their human face, as market shares, stake holdings, percentages, gains, incursions, wars, losses, fallout, balance, negotiation, trade deal, 0's and 1's – then you see at an elevated opportunity with movement in any direction, a persona enabled unlimited power and purpose, engages in the eternal legacy of waste. He yolks his power to his Nation, his Religion, his Party and struts about a peacock parading his all-too human feathers, preening and pushing about his people in uniform to complete important-sounding important-meaning tasks. He does not know you or I – and when he makes his proclamations, his decrees, from on high – we never see the King; we Never, See, the King. We just see his Fools, Presidents, Representatives, Royalty and other parades in the garb we expect from those who rule us to be garbed: to be covered in gold, or crowned, or dressed impeccably in a suit and separated in time and space by luxurious surroundings, impressive flags and speaker-boxes, living in giant houses with guards and sentinels and who are in every way a different species from us even if we resemble the same human form. These are our Gods incarnate, whom we never meet but must always obey.

Such is the nature suspected of Deep-State, so fiercely afraid are they of these mythical high-dwelling beings mandating from the heavens that they get designated a new caste by those beneath them: they become reptilian, alien, horrors from another planet or another time. And philosophically, economically and practically, they are exactly that. They do what we can only dream of – we do what they say even when we don't hear them say it – and we resent them. We resent them, because Power is Resentment. And they, resent us because we are what make them Powerful. Like wearing trash on their heads to fit in, they grimace and give a sickly forced smile of acknowledgement that we are begrudgingly the same species, biting back the anger that we think they are beholden to Us, the snotty, idiot, drooling base rabble that pave their way like fleshy stones to be driven over to reach their castle. The problem of course – is that this mentality is like a light that shines down through the darkness and is seen by those far below who resent not being far above. Yet there are those below them, accessible, vulnerable, powerless – who do not have guns, or threats of imprisonment, or power to choose who to accuse, or control the processes for making reports of rape, theft, abuse of power – by those who have a badge or a trinket that makes them part of the great heaven, a foot soldier with visions of promotion, a drudgeon with a truncheon, or worse, the men and women who take pride in doing their job, in feeling like they belong, in being lazy and enjoying the easy bowl lane with the rails up of being told what to do and how to do it: the self-important pretender to the throne, the good dog fetching a paper to please his masters.

And then there is the presence of Form... that mysterious THAT which creates a THEY, that dominating over-arching squatting nightmare tendril that turns everything it touches into an identical simulacrum and drips with the sickly ichor that it's all Necessary. And after all that has been said – what can you fathom to be necessary by anyone for any of this? A poisoned world that prides itself on being the antidote. What conspiracy they say, clutching their phones and tapping away angrily with their hooves. These people are dangerous they say, cheering on their sport teams clutching hammers beneath their coat. Racism is disgusting they bleat, priding themselves on belonging to a Nation and identifying with its 'culture', You're oppressing me they chant, savagely remaining individual and only associating with those that exactly whore their viewpoint.

So, what is a Cover-up? What is a conspiracy? What is Deep State? They're real illusions that the illusion is real. Only if you suspect the possibility of illusion can you see reality. If you do not suspect illusions among your reality – you are Deep State, you are a religious fanatic whose indifference is the keystone of their power. And a soldier who will rise to their defence. You will kill in the name of their form – you will condemn, shame, punish those it commands you to punish, it need merely point you to today's traitor for you to begin throwing stones. You, are the conspiracy. The demagogue accusing others of wearing a 'tin-foil hat' while you sheriff your town with your tin-foil star. Understand this: The people protesting fear that their government is trying to kill them and kill you. They fear that many of the reports of hundreds of thousands of non-popular news channels indicate the true Beast beneath the halo you so adore and relish in being blinded by its light. They fear that the unspeakable become speakable when it is happening to them and to you if they do not speak up, if they do not rise up, if they do not resist the slow but insistent slide from democracy into fascism.

They fight for your freedom and as a result of being terrified by what the Pope and his entourage by which you are so enamoured, is able, willing and entitled, to do, get away with, and repeat. They are afraid of their Government and its power, of micro-chipped skins and jack-boot patrols, of removed access to living amenities, compassion or decency because a uniformed officer says no. They are frightened of the destructive tendencies of politicians taking cues from shadowy warmongers, clerical paedophiles, criminal organisations, diplomatic immunes, CEO's and billionaires representatives.

They are terrified by your unblinking servitude and reaction to being locked up, muzzled and shot full of an unknown substance merely on the videos shown to you, the manipulation of public sentiment, and the known ability of govt's to manufacture lies, propaganda, evidence to gain popular opinion for cementing a new form that you dumb dumb dumb fuckers fall for, over and over and over, day after day, before and since the Trojan Horse; drooling your way off a cliff with the promise of a stick or a carrot. They fear You and your inability to see all of this, any of this, way up on your moral high horse. There are those that believe the COVID-19 Virus is real and there are those that believe it is a global conspiracy of world elites to reset the economy in the face of the difficulties inherent on a planet littered with knuckle-dragging opportunists, crippling past governance of resources, an unsustainable population and forced to eat a shit sandwich made from its aeonic legacy of waste.

There are some who believe the Govt is willing to murder most of us to retain its equilibrium and control: those who remember such human pleasantries caused by so-called ordinary people that led to the Holocaust, Mao, Pol Pot, Stalin, Bush, Reagan, Putin, Croatia, Vietnam, Hiroshima, Tienanmen, World War II, 9/11, Iraq, Afghanistan, and any other country you wish to name where people are butchered and flung about as nothing but hindrances to the more important task of shining a great big dick. Those that know how quickly the slow slide into tyranny occurs and the steps by which it happens that every time, every step, the larger populace decry as paranoia, insolence, traitorism, evil – until they find themselves imprisoned and flung about moaning oh why didn't we listen, why didn't we see, why didn't someone save us, why doesn't someone stop this, help us, help me?

Nature's latest creation run amok has changed things – is changing things. That is undeniable. Real or imagined, unfortunate incident or deliberate biological weapon – the fear it has created is the foundation for tyrannical oppression to take hold under the guise of collective public safety. Shouting down and ridiculing those that see its real face, is a tactic time immemorial of tyrants and sickly sovereigns who enjoy basking in the glow of others awe and envy but white-knuckle fearful of stooping to smell the rank odour of their actual shit. Everyone has a role to play and my uniform outranks your uniform. Wearing a uniform is the greatest symbol of oppression there is – a sanctioned racism with terrific amenability to abuse of power that allows personal and prejudiced discrimination to run rife. But you should thank those who protest in another life – they had the courage to face what human beings are genuinely capable of when driven by an ideology – especially when it puts on a mask and masks its enforcers.

It is simply unfortunate those with no power lose control when they get some, squander it badly and still end up on the end of a gun by those who wield power for a living, wisely, judiciously in its cold, vengeful, untiring and unrelenting state. Because those who protest do so to express outrage at the actions of the Beast and its soldiers. They will powder your bones to dust for standing up for your family and tell the world you were a traitor. They'll build Guantanamo Bays and torture captives for decades; they'll do handshakes under the table that Taliban and ISIS can take this part of the country so long as they leave this one – in exchange for some vile prisoners to be released: and they'll agree to paint each other as Allies/Enemies for the public narrative. They'll commit untold atrocities against innocent people and spin the story, far away or into candy for you to eat.

Even your outrage has its own rooms specially built by DARPA so they don't have to hear your bullshit prattle and it can be filtered and controlled by Facebook and Twitter and Google under the guise of moral high ground. Deep State is not afraid of you – it is you, they use you and those who protest as equally as they do any other pawn. They agitate them to rise up too, then feign shock and disbelief that their kindness and guidance for the good of the people is being attacked. Beware that sign.

And yet no other tactic surfaces, just more running through the town trying to wake the people, throwing bottles and bombs, only to gain the ridicule and condemnation of the populace you wanted to protect from themselves and a calculating violent govt feigning shock and pretending to be innocent. A govt that highlights the deprivations You have caused by protesting to those who Did Not. And so they turn you against each other, endless and eternal – justifying their satisfaction that you are bovine masses and must be corralled if you are not to destroy themselves when you can be of service to their ends. And are they wrong?

But with the invasion of Them, those unquestionable forces that dwarf us when they present themselves, pale us and our ‘journey’ as a species into insignificance, remind us, force us to Remember our temporality and games of utter nonsense on a lone planet in a cosmos full of stars – there is hope for evolution. Not from the ‘new generation’ or the one after – but this one, when its back is truly against the wall and it dawns through the treacle of hope slathered on by governments and their jamming of fingers in a greatly cracking dam – humanity, you, and let’s be honest for the vast majority – if it doesn’t concern You, it’s of no concern – faces extinction. Extinction will play a very crucial role in your life from here on out. It will be the reason you must Obey – for the greater good, because we are “all in this together”.

Meanwhile the elite play golf, fly to space for entertainment and enjoy their money and excess while you quietly die, without any noise or trouble, thank you very much. Life has reached that awkward moment where it is trying to go on as normal, in its established fashion, its traditional circuit – while a new apex predator has presented itself. Like a wolf dimly aware it should be scared of a Tyrannosaurus; we’ve compared ourselves and been found very wanting. Nations are afraid. The Govt is afraid. The Left are afraid. The Right are afraid. The Centre are afraid. You are afraid. All of different things. But – it’s all forms and forms are all there is.

Seeing other perspectives doesn’t make you enlightened, tolerant, Zen – it makes you want to murder all ideologies and burn the world to ash. I’ve heard the virus referred to as World Karma, a cosmic retribution to punish us for our moral transgressions and mostly non-existences characterised with sporadic nastiness, cruelty and delight in others pain. Others see it as the coming of their Gods, the Lord Almighty and End of Days, Allah in his infinite Wisdom, The Illuminati seeking to dominate the planet through a NWO, The military cruelty of China unleashing a biological weapon to weaken the world ripe for invasion not just economically as before but militarily and for all time as it believes it has the right, or the vagaries of Nature on the back of pure chance spawning a super-virus that at least 1000 different people have been blamed sequentially for in releasing or exacerbating – upsetting the sheep in their pens with egregious discomfort.

People right across this 40,000km globe were dying in horrific unjust ways before this virus and will be tomorrow. From bullies, Small-men, gangsters, drunks, power-trippers, jealous husbands, toxic relationships, struggle for water, air, freedom, environmental hazard, dangerous workplace practices, smoking, drinking, drug overdose and many countless brutish snuffings for simply being in the spotlight of some human dreg or other drunk on power or ego. Itty-bitty flying saucers aren't the pandemic – Abuse of Power is. If this virus could be beaten then be assured life should go on as normal – as it always has, in the pandemic of abused power with more of the same, same, same. Brain-dead monkeys smashing their fists on the glass to get what they want. But COVID-19, They, is the panacea of form, a reckoning angel. It doesn't care what you think, it doesn't respect boundaries, it outnumbers human beings the way China outnumbers the globe, it has seized control and settled on the whole of it, and rapidly mutates so as to make it impossible to stop. With countless islands and regions of different strains preserved indefinitely, and an endless supply of hosts it leaves us speechless to stand before something so much greater than the combined might of us that we cannot bomb, defame, destroy, discredit, imprison, murder, threaten, blackmail, mob, shoot, stab, reason with, cajole, coerce, fine, starve, sue, fight, fuck or even see. It is the paragon non-human, an Aedividual. It does not need us – we are merely moving through the same time and space, it is a fortuitous biological anomaly that we happen to roam and share it far and wide with great ease such that it now blankets the earth. But it doesn't need us – it just Is.

We, on the other hand want it to stop. It's upsetting the balance, its playing havoc with equilibrium, its displacing economies and ruining trade – that lifeblood of our species that we will perform even with our greatest enemies: even in prison when sworn to uphold our racial alliance, trade, is paramount, while waste is our legacy. We build our worlds to capitalise on the pleasant drugs our brain produces – that drives everything we do. The virus just capitalises. It is a marvel to be in awe of – a force we can only view as a weapon of breath-taking ferocity to us – a God that does not see us nor desires our worship but walks among us as the newest and most beautiful of nature's creations, a successor. Faster than a bullet, more devastating than a nuclear bomb, more destructive than a war and with no discrimination of rich or poor, no allegiance to power, nothing close to anything we have faced before. It is One of THEM – but More are coming. Move beyond time – become the Sun. Maleficia Engram Haruspex Terato: The Monster looks deep inside us, Remembers, and Becomes Us.

FANATICISM AND MILITANT SATANISM

(Sath of THEM)

Take care not to lose yourself in your Roles...

The Satanist is supposed to be first of all a sorcerer, a Goer on the Left-Hand Path, and not a religionist of the RHP, so fanaticism too, is a tool, a weapon in the sorcerer's hands rather than an extreme emotional belief to indulge in. By adopting an insight role one learns how to use such a tremendous weapon like the fanaticism of others. After all fanaticism is a human emotion and the sorcerer is something different than a human being, at least a monstrous alternative thereof.

Let's see with a cool-blooded mind the basic emotion which underlies fanaticism: this is the despair of frustration, not the belief itself which is just the side-effect of that despair. It's the despair of frustration which overwhelms the ego thus unleashing the irresistible impersonal and unconscious force of the Will to Power which could work wonders during a war or any other situation or crisis. A great skill is necessary to deliberately use one's own or others despair in order to produce that irresistible force known to the humans as Fanaticism and to the sorcerers as Decisiveness. In the latter case it takes no efforts or strain once that impersonal force is unleashed – at last there is only the sight from the pyramid of one's enemies' skulls...

This Will to Power unleashed by the means of extreme despair is also known as the Dragon's power which lies dormant in the collective unconscious of humanity and it's the aim of all human leaders to gain control over it. But as the known history of the last 6000 years has proved, it is what controls them, destroys them as well as anything around them and then falls asleep till Its next awakening – there are still not adequate Dragon riders amongst the humans. Now let's see how this force works in the hands of our enemy.

What follows is not a metaphor, but a real myth and the language of the myth is the only known way to describe what is taking place on a genetic or DNA-based level: In order to overcome the other deities all over the world, the Jewish ethos's collective genius known as Jahveh or Jehovah, resorted to the means of frustration by simply eliminating His female counterpart Anat, or Ashar, thus making sexual pleasure a taboo: so, by making a deficit of something natural, He created a sellable product advertised all over the world by His Old Testament's Genesis, but that was only the side economical effect of this act of frustration.

By suppressing one's libido or by having one's libido suppressed a frustration known as despair is produced, which for its part – if correctly directed to some abstract ideal, produces a militant sublimite, which turns into that tremendous weapon known as fanaticism. That's in fact the simple principle underlying any discipline well known to any military cultures. Jehovah by his prophets (the Jewish shamans) just wanted to discipline His ethos and prepare it for conquering the world. The Jew should be able to mutilate and kill by stones the female beauty blamed for adultery thus tempering his heart – lest no sentiment soften it during the Conquest. The old Goddess' seductive charm was to be mercilessly dealt with. However, in order to destroy the immune system of His enemies of the White race and make of them puritan dupes armed with their Aryan sword in their one hand and the Jewish Bible in their other hand, He adopted an insight role – that of the Nazarene – to make them conquer new lands and peoples in His name. The discipline necessary to produce their fanaticism was the same: sexual frustration led to an existential despair and a militant sublimite produced thereby. The European inquisitor was really great in mutilating the female beauty while struggling with himself to repress his own sexual excitement at the sight of her tortured nakedness... That's the sacrifice Jehovah once fed and still feeds thereon, such is His barbaric taste. If the ancient Goddess once took Her male human sacrifices She at least slew them in an ecstatic way, at the climax of their orgasm (as in the case of Dionysos) while Jehovah feeds on agonising victims always in the form of humiliating punishment and execution.

Yet the European ethos, though Christianized, was still dangerous for His "Chosen" people – something was to be opposed thereto, so Jehovah adopted another insight role – that of Allah. Thus, the Islamic faith was invented and given to the rest of the Semitic and Turkic peoples (the Judaism being reserved only for the "Chosen" ones, both Semites and Turks – the Jewified Khazars were in fact a Turkic people) – a more simplified and militant version of Judaism, as puritan as Christianity but unlike it promising full sexual satisfaction in the afterlife. This worked better and the Islamic warriors, being so motivated, took over the European crusaders first in the Near East, then they conquered all the South-East Europe putting to their scimitars millions of White people.

Having both Christianity and Islam served to His dialectics (though eventually turned against His "Chosen" ones), Jehovah adopted a more modern insight role – that of Karl Marx... Another militant puritan ideology was invented. The rest is well known by history but the Marxism is still actualised in present-day China, where you can see how they deal with spiritualities other than their Marxist agenda, for example the sect Falun Gong's recent persecution, though all the torture reenactments in the internet are censored lest they arouse some sexual excitement... I suppose they apply the same methods against the Tibetans today. And they would do the same things with anybody when Jehovah eventually conquers the world through China. The West and the White race are weakened enough, so new obscurant ages may lie ahead...

To paraphrase Robert Graves, now in the West Jehovah has adopted the insight role of a “liberal” who is far away from the ascetic holiness to which his prophets hoped to draw the world and He has even allowed the Western world to be governed by the unholy “pagan” triumvirate of Pluto god of wealth, Apollo god of science and Mercury god of thieves...”Unless the ascetic Michael can quickly reorganise his scattered legions of angels for a new puritan campaign of sexless unworldliness, there can be no escape from the present more than usually miserable state of the world.”

Another vital point as regards fanaticism is mediocrity. The Jehovic model is again the best example in this respect. In order to have fanatical hordes at one’s disposal one needs to keep up mediocrity in the society. It’s done again by manipulating magically the basic human sexual drive, first by rites of passage such as the circumcision and then by the collective taboos. Note that Jehovah is not against sex, He has always bidden “Multiply and breed!”, but He has always condemned the pleasure of sex because the orgasmic sex could produce a strong, heroic and individualistic offspring as was the case in pagan Europe where the children were conceived during the fertility feasts, wherein the Gods and the Goddesses would also take part and that’s why there were so many myths about heroes who were half-gods...

Instead, Jehovah needed offspring conceived in shame, without orgasm, who were just clones of their puritan parents and He needed a lot of them in order to turn the world into a “Garden of Eden”. After all, the sexual act is a creative magickal act – the more energy and passion one invests therein, the more powerful offspring one produces. If the White Race is higher than the other races, it’s because the process of individuation therein is more intense than in any other races despite of the Magian/Jehovic distortion. However, Jehovah relies on the quantity, not on the quality and that’s why now the planet suffers the problem of overpopulation. Note also that the wrong people have the right conditions to breed. Jehovah is not afraid of some quality elite Satanic minority as well – if He cannot destroy them directly, He has set in motion certain social factors which are to prevent them from breeding between each other.

After all, Jehovah is now turning into a cancer to the whole human race, hence into the cancer to the whole planetary organic life. He is a monster and could be destroyed only by another and stronger monster. Yet, as the cancer, He is a stupid monster because by destroying the organic life he will destroy Himself as well except in the case of possessing another planet, so He is to be destroyed by a more intelligent monster. As I said, the Satanist is supposed to be first of all a sorcerer – which means other than a human being, an alternative of the human being who deals with means which could be deadly to the human race, thus being a monster in respect to the humanity. We are to go beyond all that human emotionality which makes the humans Jehovah's dupes. But in no way do I mean becoming some emotionless aliens or supermen – on the contrary, we are to know and experience that emotionality in its totality, because it's far greater than what the human limited perception is able to perceive – it's in fact the Dragon Tiamat's force which would make Jehovah's ambition ridiculous and that's why I said we are to go beyond the limited human emotionality which is suppressed and distorted by the monster Jehovah who feeds thereon as a vampire. All we need is Decisiveness, the fanaticism is for the masses we want to influence on.

When I was a little child I suffered nightmares, and often woke up screaming of horror. Once my mother advised me to become more terrible than my nightmares and I made use of that advice, it worked. I used to turn into a monster when attacked in my dreams so the nightmares fled away. Another method I learned through the years was to relax at the very grip of the horror, to allow it passing through me, to possess me, to become one with it, to integrate it within my being, a method I apply in respect to the Dark Gods.

The shock of encountering an enormous serpent in the wilderness initiated me in this approach. Later I realised there were two basic drives within the human unconscious opposed to each other – that of the total attraction and that of the total repulsion perceived also as sexual lust and terror of death. The normal humans indulge in the former and avoid the latter. The fanatics repress or have their sexual lust repressed that they may exercise the terror of death upon their enemies or opponents. The Dark Gods, however, manifest their presence by both the forces felt together simultaneously – it's an unutterable paradoxical experience where both the opposing drives are felt as the same thing. One just goes mad and the only solution is to relax in that madness instead of resisting it.

So, I do not need to repress my libido in order to have the terror of death at my disposal. When possessed by the Dark Ones I am able to skin alive some enemies, to put his skin on myself and then fuck his lover before his bleeding eyes! If I am to practice some discipline it's to accumulate more energy for a greater experience with the Dark Gods – could be dangerous indeed I admit and maybe not for anybody, there is no guarantee I will stay alive after some more intense experience, but such is the sinister path. In the last four years I practised such invocations outdoors, in the wilderness, in some special sites of power or nexions, and meanwhile noticed a certain synchronism between my experiences and some events in the political life of my country.

As for the Age of Aquarius – I'm not very competent in both astronomy and astrology but see – the Vernal Equinox still takes place in Pisces; it will take maybe some hundreds of years to see it in Aquarius, so the obscurant times lie ahead. When the Vernal equinox was seen in Aries it was the time when Alexander the Great started the Imperium phase of the Hellenic Aeon. The astrological zodiac has nothing to do with the real zodiac visible in the sky – for example now the Sun is still visible in Aries – it will enter Taurus after a couple of days, while according to the astrology it was there still on 20 April. I suspect there is also some distortion made by replacing the Julian calendar with the Gregorian one in the beginning of the so called 20-th century, so we are not really born under the stars the astrology claims to have been born – as far as I know only the Hindu astrology considers the real zodiac as visible in the sky and once it coincided with the Western one before the change of calendars.

This matter is to be researched. Anyway, Aquarius is ruled by the planet Uranus whose qualities are: electricity, discoveries, cybernetics, alternative sciences mixed with occultism, parapsychology, strange drugs, sinister illuminations, paradoxical truths, antinomianism, super modern technology combined with primitive sorcery, cosmic research, spacecrafts, aliens, the UFO, sudden changes, revolutions, unexpected turns, upheavals, natural disasters, nuclear explosions, unconventional wars, terrorism, radiation, mutation, eccentricism, weird experiences, sexual deviations etc.

Uranus will neither satisfy the expectations of the “New Age” hippies whose positive wishful thinking will be made ridiculous, nor will Uranus allow any hope to the obscurantist’s who long for restoring the patriarchal values, order, moral, safety, one God etc. So, Jehovah is doomed in the Aquarian Age but there will probably be more than one Armageddon while the old Aeon forces are totally smashed. If I am to project something in this sinister future, it’s my vision of the Magickal-Socialism and Cosmic exploration as a further evolutionary step of the Third Reich’s National-Socialism but in no way this would mean some obscurantist returning to the Newton’s physics in respect of the Outer Space as the ONA proposes. Most of all I envisage a revolutionary replacement of the present human-centred civilisation by a life-centred civilisation. Read “The Diamond Age” by Neal Stephenson for further insights as regards the Uranian Aeon.

GOD'S ARE NOT DEAD: MYTH'S BITCHES

Take it as read that any serious problem with believing in Myths lies in the sneaky suspicion or firm accusation that the incredible accounts within them are a) fables, allegories, parables b) political machinations c) impossible due to our knowledge of physics, history, reality d) fabricated e) based on some true but now garbled re-telling f) feature Gods. But taking any three at random (and taking three is no accident, since ancient times, triplicates of action or event have been a staple of Myth and has filtered down into the common numerator of examples given) such as the Odyssey, Maui and the Sun, and the Trojan Horse we can find equivalents for all of them the personal spheres of daily activity; long journeys fraught with dangerous tricks and traps, extraordinary strength and ability required to overcome insurmountable obstacles, or being deceived and letting something in as a gift only to have it revealed as anything but. For any Myth there is a comparable personal equivalent. The nature and power of Myth is understood as something we choose to adopt, rather than something that adopts us. And that is a fundamental difference.

This article will examine several aspects of Myth and reassert that it has retained power and dominance over our lives despite a contemporary more to regard them as antiquated stories intended for a time long ago.

I speak not for the benefit of the LHP, as the magazine this article was originally written for (In2theFire) intended, but the NHP, the No-Hand Path, a denomination that THEM represent through magical socialism. The LHP may seem limitless, but it denotes boundaries in being Left; places it claims it will not go, like conformity, mundanity, the Herd, – whatever they may be, the Left opposes itself to the Right and nothing is understood without engaging with all forms. For me, it is a necessity to look at everything as useful, to develop a 361-degree understanding, and whilst they may seem old and irrelevant in these apparently enlightened rational times for the reasons given in the opening passage above, No sorcerers of any path will walk their journey without being assailed by Myths.

Since Myths are immortal, and sovereign, they are synonymous with a form of Gods. What are Gods but characters used in stories to describe forces greater than us and the battle for their Sovereignty; Gods we are expected to draw example from, to wage our own in their names? Gods as we understand them are not only personifications or abstractions of humanoid or monster but can take the form of entire cycles of experience. (Qv. The Book of Absu). The outward disagreement between Theism and Theistic, of Real Irrational Deities or Abstract Rational Demons has not impacted the existence of Gods – their appearance to degrees including somewhat and entirely, maybe, but not their existence. The typical battle between forces of good and evil, right or wrong waged across the planet by the minute through debates between humans over the triviality of truth is one of the key aspects enshrined in Myths throughout their revelations of human behaviour, comedy, tragedy, and folly of timeless interactions through Archetype. Such battles to prove or disprove anything, which we engage in daily, only cements the reality of the forces that Myth denotes; namely of forces that fill us with a pressing need to be right, or with Lust, with Hubris, with Love, with Arrogance, or Delusion, to champion something over something else and in due course to be exposed to Irony, Correction, and/or play a part in the micro-story in such a way that we cannot help but imitate the archetypes and character interactions of old.

Whilst an often harmless exercise for humans to need to have their say, this ‘need’ is at root the same force that has driven humanity to its bloodiest wars or to share in cooperative triumphs. Such a force has no perfect name, but thousands, for we all call Myth a different name, assign another's reality as misinformed or insanity. In the end it makes no difference to its potency. These forces seize us and whip us around like raindrops in a greater storm fired by the need to be heard, or to champion our Gods above theirs. No less explosively, connivingly or strategically than the figures in Myth, and almost always in the same footsteps, repeating the same interplay of human emotions and actions, events and dreams – and our involvement is the seed of a cosmic Unfolding. It may be that we find out that we were wrong/right, or that our actions led to the mis/fortune of another, or that our actions/words had some impact further down the chain on how the story turned out and how it turned out for them and for us. Giving rise to such feelings as regret, satisfaction, tragedy or irony.

In the daily course of our lives we are called to act as Gods, to watch from a Mount Olympus as a Zeus, all the goings on below in the mortal world – we know what is going to happen, we can see the outcome, but the poor mortals below are compelled to act out their roles, unwittingly or consciously, their fates determined by the paths they have chosen. And as Zeus all we can do is watch it unfold. It may be others whom are the poor mortals, or it may be actions and momentums of our own that we can only hopelessly watch play out their role. For all our power to act, there are forces bigger than us, forces of love, hate, revenge, learning that we dare not get in the way of, and often, cannot get in the way of.

Myth acts upon all of us nonetheless, in this way or in others, compelling us into roles with other Mythic characters, creatures, beasts and charmed or destined meetings – it seizes our person and forces us to dance in accord with some unknown song, to which others, uncontrollably respond, feeding the mad currents of the story and swept away down the formidable torrent of archetype unable to stop the repetition of human foible. It seizes us without our consent, involves us in its plays, and often without our appreciation that this forcing of our hand into adopting specific shapes for its own purposes, is one of many forces that all humanity are bound to experience. And like the same sun all of humanity have ever seen, it is immutably an inheritance that myth is immortalised as a commonality to all human beings – among many, many others.

In short: We cannot escape Myth and we cannot transcend them, we are Myths bitches. Even the very art of escape of figures who thought themselves smarter than the Gods that bound them is enshrined in Myth, as hubris, such as through the Greek Myths of Prometheus, Ariadne, Sisyphus, whose arrogance or natural talent that rivalled the gods was met with cruel retribution. And so it is for any man that thinks himself a God, easy to overreach and fall, to try and trick the gods, for death takes all and as the ego swells, often before time. There are Myths that tell stories of those who worshipped the gods, ignored the gods, fooled the gods, refused to believe in the gods, challenged the gods, turned their back on the gods, betrayed the gods, killed the gods, created the gods. And these stories are repeated by human beings aeon after aeon, acting in the way they do, as the characters in these ancient verses.

It is apparent to see that for all their age, the stories remain the same from culture to culture, some with more animals and miracles than others, but the blueprints are virtually identical. Heroes, Monsters, Villains, Magic, Trials, Overcomings, Deception, Learning, Explanations for Phenomena, Tragedy and so on. There was a time during the early days of Sumeria when its myths were veined with Gods and Humans on equal footing working together in Harmony. This is the only civilisation in which this footing is found. At an indeterminate time in History, the fundamental relationship between Gods and Humans in Myth was changed; they were divided and set at each other's throats. This is most clearly evident and accessible in the Eden Mythos of Christianity and the Fall of Angels which is followed by the Fall of Man but occurs much earlier in History with its foundations in a virulent form of dualism. Hereon, Gods became external to us, exalted above us, and in many cases hostile or indifferent to us. Our creation became the impetus for war, and competition between the Gods and Humans began to rage throughout Myth. The introduction of a more potent division between Mankind and Gods via the development of morality, some say through influence by Zoroastrianism and its emphasis on Good and Ill assimilated by the Persians and Medes who were in a position to spread the change widely through pre-Judaism is one of many pressure points where the tide of equality between Men and Gods began to turn.

Yet no less in the stories of the Sumerian Enuma Elish which are among the oldest that have been recorded, were the same forces at play of Battles of Will, Force, Spirit, Vice and Virtue, Tragedy and Comedy, the Petty and the Divine, Injustice and the Ironic actions of others – part of a larger story, as in the Greek, Egyptian, Aztec, Australian etc. Though thousands of miles in space apart, sometimes thousands of years divided, the configurations of humanity's stories span these vast gaps and dominate even today our daily lives because the forces they describe/preserve were not restricted to those ancient climes, they moved through time, with us, and continue to dominate us. The schism that has developed with the unconscious knowing and being privy to and part of the reality of these acting forces that Myth describes, and modern insistence that denies them, has caused neuroticism that has seen us forget why these things are called Living Stories and to ignore Powers that are right in front of our face. To ignore them at our peril – for it is stories and their archetypes that move all things human.

The stories told, whether a short fireside tale or an epic odyssey may be outlandish, may cause us to shake our heads in disbelief that such things could ever be taken as real, to suspend our notions and knowledge of physics, or give us cause to think that there was a time long ago when people were different, somehow less developed intellectually than we are, and that they believed and even saw Giants, Demons, Gods who appeared to them, haunted them, who were visible and real either through ignorance or suggestion by savvy leaders, witch-doctors and the like. Or invite us to speculate that they were in some sense taken for a ride by their own gullibility or lack of experience, lack of context or education. That in all cases, there is a rational explanation for the creation of these Myths. And there isn't. There is certainly no evidence of a single reason for their creation or to know the extent of the belief invested in them, to the point imagination manifested demons, and even if so, to know if those imaginations were on equal par with that mythic figure, the real or venerated figuratively.

Myths are as power or as dangerous an entity as any violent or insane demon that might possess a host, or as vitriolic and explosive as the holiest of adorations for a monotheistic God. They tug at who we are, and bind us into place as knots in a rich tapestry that hypnotises us and takes over, we find ourselves steeped in all manner of stories and wonder how we got into them, what happened that led us to become something we became, or marvel at the memories we have of stories long past which we retell again and again like a mantra. 'I deserve this'. 'God loves me'.

But Myths, even as synonymous with Gods, are pointers. They are remnants of the terrifying spectral forces that own us, signposts littered throughout time that allow us to know we are being lead, and an entirely different manner of Them altogether. A taste. For if I had not experienced the utter terror of the Others without their human interpretation, and come face to face with those Others, I should not be so utterly obsessed with worshipping this Temple to THEM. They would be as abstractions, figments, ghosts and goblins in the shadows. But They are not. I digress.

It is not difficult to re-tell any Myth and substitute modern conveniences, names and places without so much as ripple in the pond; and it is because the wrapping, the messengers, like the other-worldly power of dreams to conspire new and endless ways to say the same thing, are just that, they are Forms, they are Wrapping, stepping stones or handholds that relate to us, translating the alien reality of the Phym (The World matrix) into a language that we can grasp as individuals and as groups, viz. stories which give rise to an understanding and relationship to the Land, its resources, it's terrible powers, regeneration, rebirth, life, death and all of these other forces that, whether we believe in Gods/Myths of any kind persist and play out day after day in taking possession of us to enact Archetypes, or ask us to believe in Gods above, below, or within.

Love being a prime example of such a Force. Anyone who has fallen in or out of Love knows its insurmountable power, to cause us to Love someone or something forbidden or unattainable or culturally taboo makes no difference to that force; it operates without our consent and chains us to that Love, and like a drug it hurts when we don't feed it, when we try to go against it. And That is the type of omnipotent power such creature as Myths was developed from; it is of the same pool of soul-stopping intensities that Myths relate; struggle, war, strife, tyranny, suffering, triumph, resilience, change, sorrow, absurdity, cycles, archetypes. Chess pieces moved to some mad scheme we think we understand, or control, only to be rudely awakened by the deftness of Myth to take us by surprise.

A high percentage of music is dedicated to this Force, of Love, which takes us from shallow to shining eyed mad men and women, seized with lust, passion, giggles, joy and a timeless bond – and also to the dark side of Love which tears us apart, creates confusion, hurt, pain, suffering, agony, heartbreak. There is no pain like a broken heart and the timeless mourning of lost love or sickly fawning of new love is a power that has endured aeons.

There are a great many forces greater than us, and early humanity recognised and enshrined these in the Myths. The struggle to rationalise the perception of Gods seems to be required to somehow legitimise them, as anything other than what they are. But I will not try very hard to legitimise them, because they are legitimate to me. We may imagine the world of ancient times in which these myths arose as very different from the one we know littered with electric bulbs and street lighting, even set apart from older times when devices such as the torch or lantern were available – and a very dark time ruled by darkness the majority of the time.

Where darkness was an enemy, the shroud that hid bandits, murderers, dangers, drops, death. Where walled cities and small townships fearful of prowling animals and men prevailed. What were benign landscapes by day would have transformed at night, shadows play tricks especially in the moonlight, but more so in the utter darkness where wo/man is at their weakest, his eyesight ill-developed for a world lacking light, and the daily construction by the sun of the edges, boundaries, dangers and risk cues that daylight brings. In darkness the senses would have had to rely on sound, fearful of every mad screech or creature thumping or crashing through the undergrowth with little fear of men, and who may in fact be a very cleverly disguised enemy. There is every reason to suspect that in such a climate, the imagination ran wild. On the other hand, the Sun, Moon, Stars, Sea, Rain, Clouds, Space, Mountains, Storms, Fire, Death, Life, – Natural Phenomena need no mysticism, they are as wildly in need of explanation today as they were then – thank God for science.

The Gods are not Dead. Where Gods are dead in the modern mentality as entities that watch us, favour us, or made us, other Gods have arisen, for this is an inescapable aspect of these supra-personal forces, they are older, larger and set in motion a thousand myths precisely because they were understood to be Sovereign over man. There is no less danger in ignoring Gods above than ignoring Gods below – whether people are given reason to deny the existence of external Gods for lack of proof, for adoption of modern sensibilities, for the need to separate themselves from superstition, to assimilate into their culture, to hail intellect and critical thinking over a sense of primitive savagery; or to repress dreams, their desires, their secrets, to think they can slow or stop Time, or rise above hubris, or avoid misfortune; the Old World remains mired in this false escape we have told ourselves exists by telling ourselves over and over that the Gods of old were for others, for a time long ago, for tribes that dance around fires and have not yet attained the cultured understanding of the world that we the civilised world, have. No matter who we are, or what we believe, we are mastered by forces that control, direct and use us without our consent.

Myths are elastic, with great capacity for superimposition. Choose a Myth. Substitute its characters for people you know that fit them. Change the places, the time, the location to those you recognise, as has been done many times with the classical drama Romeo and Juliet. Or consider one of your own stories, and that parts of you, or separate actions you did, repeated its own miniature scale myth. Maybe you let someone into your life who seemed for all the world a gift, and once in, they attacked you, made war against you, got in through your carefully guarded citadel through deception and guise. It's happened to most of us, as it did in the story of the Trojan Horse. Virtually any myth involves a set of universal characteristics or characters that we can fill on the intimate, personal or wider scale by people we know, or things we have done or found ourselves engaging in either after the fact or during, surprised, disappointed, angered at our betrayal of ourselves and somehow wandering far astray from who we thought we were, lulled by some story that took over. The relics are interchangeable because long ago Myth identified the placeholders.

In one modern re-telling via a zombie who retains his faculty to think (and eventually talk) like a human and falls in love with a young female survivor. The ability to recognise in Myth something greater something more pagan than ancient foolishness or parable is to recognise the timeless power of archetype and the power that understanding them can bring to the Sorcerer.

Exploring, Adopting in part or Living Myths opens the door into the realisation of forces that dominate human existence and our relationship with nature that these Myths have immortalised to be retold again and again – because they are as alive today as they were thousands of years ago. Recognising and extracting the underlying reference to these powers, these “forces of and among THEM” is to open the gate to the Abyss, for they run through all of us, tyrannise the life and bearing of every human being who is at the helm or mercy of some story or another that has changed greatly in appearance but little in esoteric potency.

Sorcerer – We are Myth's bitches. With that knowledge comes the power to move among them or bring them to actuality for magical gain by identifying and filling the placeholders. Embrace this undying inheritance. It did not develop by chance as a fashion.

THE BLACK KEYS OF SATAN

If there is such a thing as specific principles to work with or access Satan, then there are certainly a set of keys. The reality is, that if you have not had a paranormal experience and met with any of the dark forces that inhabit other planes, you have no reason to believe in them, and thus your logical mind does not experience the crack that such visitations bring, your mind and perception of reality stay intact, and act as a shield or seal against such visitations.

When you Have had such a visitation, it is impossible to deny, because being paranormal, the unsettling inability to provide logical explanation leaves you in a state of knowing there is Something more than what we know, and yet having to endure the day-to-day necessity to deny it to live in a certain world. This line, this kind of experience is what separates the Theistic believer in Satanic forces as deities, energies, demons, devils, entities that manifest on our plane of perception through various incarnations, veils, so spots in the world where such denizens slip through and confront us – and the believer in Satanic forces who sees the paradigm of Satanism as culturally metaphorical, as a set of values, a way of living, as an apologist, as an application of rationale and reason, logic and intelligence; a dismissal of ghosts/goblins as antiquated or tricks of the mind; other variations are virtually endless but they do not involve the change of effect from visitations. The term blood-curdling is over-used but it is very apt. To come face to face with One of THEM, and that includes satanic entities, entirely alters one's ability to discount them.

Thusly, Visitation, is the first Key. Whether you believe Satan is a real force that haunts, hunts, possesses, works evil and kills as a literal demon changes everything. I have not seen Satan. I have seen only dark forces and spectres that may or may not be part of or associated with Him; a handful of times over the course of my life, and felt the terror that curdles the blood, witnessed the suspension of physics that accompanies such visitations and passed through the aftermath of having to deal with them. It is to defend something that the majority of people have not experienced and have no reason to believe exists who have not felt what you have felt.

Orientation would be the second key. Satan has been taken to mean many different things. These are all malleable and artificial human-oriented speculations that aim to grasp, shape and control forces that are very poor philosophic descriptors manufactured by the smugness of self-assured intellect. You don't forget the emotion of Bliss or Terror, the most potent experiences of those words when you have felt them and next to those feelings that get wired into your blood any words fail to express the power of such a feeling so frightening that it can turn your life on its head and cause you to see things very differently ever after. The classical resistance against Religion as fools who believe in a sky-man for instance is not so easily dismissed; the descriptions of demons given are just that, descriptions; flat, symbolic teasers that are pretty but hollow, they do nothing to prepare one for them who come unexpectedly and in a way no book predicts. It is relatively easy to adopt any given orientation of Satanism and to do as one will using human terms and values to make their way through the world for whatever aim may be in accordance with ones Wyrd. But when you have been Visited, you must then reassess the plastic nature of many of these human edifices in the face of what do you do now with your life if there are things that are real? Might there be more of them, more powerful ones of them, and even, despite all intellectual scoffing, a God or Satan or Worse at the end of your life? The stories that abound of such entities, of planes and of hell, seem figmentary, scaremongering, antiquated and any other number of descriptions to dismiss them logically, but you cannot be sure after visitations which often have the effect of causing one to seriously assess the orientation of their life and their place.

The Third Key then, is Invitation. It is impossible to put these experiences out of the head – they are called supernatural because they override the natural and leave an indelible question mark on perception and leave a hole in the seal of logical safety. One can either try to deny the uncomfortable evidence of them and try to bury the memory as an embarrassing trick of the mind, daily heaping more of the normal and sedate upon such memories in the hope of forgetting them entirely or unconvincingly explain them away – an art doomed to fail and go on to live to a ripe old age with the dagger of them every now and then in a quiet moment forcing its way back into the mind, raising such terrifying memories from the dead, through dreams or daydreams, to haunt one until and at death. Or one can seek to know them, as horrifying as it might be to repeat the experience, to push for more of what is generally a very little of their presence, of their mark, and strive to identify and open the Gates to THEM, to walk where few walk, and risk losing everything to get Closer. Closer to all that man fears and has striven to forget. Closer to whatever causes that paralysing shock that can change your entire life's direction and annihilate thousands of carefully tended networked beliefs in an instant, closer to the force older than evil and yet the source of it all. The occult makes little sense before such Visitations. It really does.

What comes now is the Invitation to THEM – in as many forms as it can be imagined, to re-open at our will and not theirs, if indeed at all possible, the Gates that allow them In. Now begins the real work, of trying to identify the real magical means to open portals and the language they speak to communicate. Is it torture, sexual depravity, murder, symbolism, pain, suffering, time, location, intent, emotional experience, synchronistic coincidence, a specific magical partner, a mindset, certain shapes or tools, night-time, evil, trance, incantations, dances, musical instruments, certain notes or drugs? What, opens THEIR Portals? What language do they speak? Do they speak in entire experiences? Do they speak to us through dreams? Now begins the task of the real occult work, with the undeniable drive that they are there, and the trial to access them with the hope that we can communicate and not simply be star-fucked.

A Fourth Key would constitute Dedication. Genuine Dedication comes not from a desire to Know but from being Known, from a Visitation that interferes with the ability to be distracted by Maybe. Maybe they're real, maybe I imagined it. Genuine dedication arises from the terrifying energetic shock from visitation that leaves no doubt that they are. And from this, there can be no denial that what they are is everything worth seeking, a power worth laying one's life down for as a sacrifice in the face of that sovereign awakening as to our place and relevance, our paper knowledge and ignorant bliss which pales in the face of what these things Are, and that they Are. They are the reason for Religion, for Morality, for Sanity. They are the reason for the shield that is God. It goes without saying that Satan is capable of a great deal more than such visitations, and if there is a Devil, a king of these things, no-one could meet THEM. Just as theory and experience are separate worlds of their own, I have not found any grimoire that accurately describes these Visitations or evokes them. Filled with detritus about controlling them, ordering them about, and giving imaginative descriptions of these Demons – almost none mention the emotional rape and turbulence they bring to the soul which does not know how much it relied on inherited reality until it is shattered. There are shallow warnings in such books at best, even the strongest of admonitions about messing with these forces are inadequate. Nothing would be strong enough to act as an appropriate warning to stay away from summoning/calling/inviting them in. Because until they are present, it remains surreal, safe, and a game. It seems unlikely to get Closer to these things, the Fear is impenetrable. And to do so seems like it can only end badly. But that is the power of the Dark Forces, of THEM, and we, seek to fall deeper into it. 1V.2O.3I.4D.

THE TEMPLE OF THEM

INTELLIGENT EVIL

Wherefore came the urge to commit acts of evil? The Devil.

Like Satan, who spurned satisfaction, spurned contentment and perfection, spurned second place... The nature of evil is to surpass, to exceed and outdo itself. Evil is an accumulative insatiable monster – a hideous chilling killer – a godless witch-thing that always beckons one more step into the creative abominate – willing to drag those who ally themselves with it well across the line they drew in the sand for themselves, far into the reaches of insane spaces to darknesses and species of horrific cruelty most have only glimpsed in their dreams where the temptation to revel in shredded meat and the rain of blood mates in orgiastic violence.

It is seldom in the name of Evil that acts of evil are performed however and direct attribution is rare. Worship in its name is secluded to those acolytes of the Prince of Darkness – and the many devils that survived with Him into the new world from the old world. The Yezidi, Cult of Kali, Witch-doctors, Voodoo – call directly upon the names of evil, seeking in their mad stupors and crazed trances to elicit the powers and ferocity of the Old Ones to hurtle vitriol upon enemies and friend alike.

It is rather in the name of mindless and mundane events that Evil is given its most common graces. Never called by its true name, evil is the blind idiot god – worshipped by humanity through acts of bovine weakness – through inane or petty jealousies, arguments or excuses, through domestic violence, unsatisfied sexual impulses, misunderstandings, envy, anger, pride, love, arrogance... no homage to Evil is proclaimed in these endless acts of worship. Yet dark whispers betray and inform.

Accidental evil is the most common of evils – borne in the cauldron of mistakes others wish they could reverse, deaths dishonours and damage they repent causing, sorries they can never give, emotions they can never take back. Their line is clear. They are the cows in life, unblinking servitors whose virtue is their regret in straying from the Dark Shepherd of Hate and the prospect of having to face their retribution. The quickly angered, the uncontrolled flames of passion, the heart before the head – the strong bent under their own will by uncharacteristic flashes of intensity that engulf and consume. It is the most common because it is the daily occurrence of great activity and movement in the human as it goes about its life with its fire burning.

Mundane Evil is the second of evils – fields of excruciation ingrained in the static slow-moving anomie of the human race whose love for repetition enables the greatest and most insidious of evils to occur through a lack of empathy with the wider remit, oblivious to the ultimate harvest of the connexions of every action to the outcome. The mindless paper-pushers, ink-stampers, button-ups, just-doing-my-jobs that cause that sweetest of delights for the Devil – the twisted knife of unnecessary anguishes. The foreclosures, fines, the punishing jargon of legalities, the financial squeezes, the pressures of conformity, the power trips of bureaucracy, the roundabout chase of keeping everything in place, demanding the impossible. Those who watch on, who deny themselves as pieces on the chess board, these are the souls of mundane evil – for whom fault is a distant dream, and responsibility a pat on the back and some crumbs from the Tabernacle.

Deliberate Evil is the rarest of evils. There are few who seek to perform evil and call it by that name. For most people, evil has no name, and in their wicked light they never consider that they could be evil, nor their acts, so cleverly justified and convicted – surely any other would act the same in their place? Many commit evil, and many call evil by its name, but there are very few who openly drag themselves to Hell in a conscious chariot of cunthood. The book of the dead is full of leaders, kings, dictators, tyrants, villains, scourges, murderers, lovers, whose lives ended the lives of many. But in the name of Peace, Justice, Revenge, Honour, Patriotism, Loyalty, Control, Commerce, acquisition, Passion, Envy, Anger, Country, State, Nation... For something, anything, other than pure evil.

Why so rare?

There are very few men with black enough hearts to bend to the total will of Evil. For no matter what the particular action, regardless of how concentrated and creative, how unspeakable or horrific – it is never enough to sate the aeonic blood-lust of a creature spawned in the first days of man. A Djinn of Death whose face has been the last vision of trillions of lives in a veritable bottomless chasm of blood. Indeed, the very naive very quaint misnomer by which the rightly fearful name the absolute nature of pure evil is testament to the rarity of those who pass the hallowed gates of man's limits and become something else altogether.

Pure evil does not exist – pure denotes a measure, a limit, a place where evil is at its absolute. The worship in Satan's Kingdom has no limits, nor does it have a shred of merciless purity. There is no point where evil ceases to seek to surpass itself – it does not persist or exist, it is exist-ing – chang-ing – burn-ing – thriving, eternal and eternally, always seeking to exceed itself. It is not enough to smash a delicate baby's skull in with the back end of a claw hammer, its father must watch while he is raped.

His wife's teeth must be smashed out of her face in a shower of splinters of ivory and handfuls of her shit as she loses her bowels force-fed to him. But that is not enough. His mouth must be torn like a zip-lock bag and his throat invaded with meaty handfuls of his loin-fruits and little undeveloped pulsing insides, his violent vomit suppressed and his eyes pricked with pins as he chokes and gags in voiceless horror and helplessness on the slippery sinuous membranes of his own living creation. But that is not enough. He should be raped by a dozen men, their fat dicks pushing his broken baby further down his throat with each thrust until his lifeless ragged body loses its form and cocks lose resistance against his torn wide anal flesh.

But that is not enough. He must be torn limb from limb, pissed and shat on, his bones snapped, and scraps of his skin peeled off and trampled on the floor. His family should be locked in boxes with their hands and feet cut off, locked in with his corpse, and forced to fuck each other with the promise of freedom. Fires must be set and the screams of the burning should be recorded and made into a song to be played for kindergartens, sent to the deceased's loved ones. Burning victims should be let out whilst they are still alive, rushing from the building in agony their skin like molten jelly, to suffer and suffer more than death. They should be eaten alive and ice-cold nails driven through their pulpy flesh as they lay dying, pricking holes in them for fun. But that is not enough. Evil demands more, MORE, MORE!

It demands ever more clever deceptions to wreak the maximum amount of suffering, of hurt and betrayal – it demands that the victims first be misled, tricked, coaxed and relaxed and then horribly brutalised. Evil demands elaborate schemes and set-ups, the inward turn of promises that give rosy glows of love, affection, trust and the downward face first spiral into the turgid faeces of realisation. But that is not enough, the victim must think they have a chance to escape to be free, redeemed – to make their humiliation, agony and unbearable disbelief all the sweeter, the act all the more unthinkable evil.

But that is not enough – every drop of salvation must be wrung for evil to reward its servitors, evil must endure – the clumsy experimentation, the confident horrors of purposeful knowledgeable infliction, blowtorches to blacken, pliers to extract, solvents to drink, rapes to endure, beatings to excite, the breaking of little bones, the sobbing, whimpering, scream, pleading, begging, crying, the breakdown of the eyes and the glaze of resignation, the destruction of form under the force of one's relentless assaults – the white-hot orgasm of uncontrolled violence against others. But that is not enough. Mark parts of the body, with hours, so the victim knows the game. Leave unsolvable tasks, ridiculous requests – revel in the defeat and soul crushing confusion of asking the impossible. But that is not enough. It is never enough. There is always more. The flesh collapses before it can bear such levels of evil but there is always more. So, the killer stalks another, captures a second, rehearses Hell and horrifies Heaven. The pores of their skin stink of blood, their nails harbour flakes of horror, even as they go to church, donate to charity, smile at you as you drop your kids off at creche. But that is not enough.

Evil goads others who kill one or two or even many – and then it leaves them for another willing to ride the dragon further than the pussy before it. Evil is a force that wants the World. It sleeps with anyone, but it will slit its mother from ear to cunt for a bigger cock to ride. Evil takes small sacrifices even though it doesn't care about them, doesn't reward them, doesn't remember them, because it is Evil. It leads men through blood-soaked darkness clawing at their hands and pulling them into travesties, sins, murders, toward perversions, abominations, toward new depths, unknown depths, where depravity lays at the gates like a doormat and new species arcane and sick writhe and pulse. And no matter the effort of the darkest men, regardless of the strength to hold Evils hand as it plunges backward into the abyss, Sooner or later All Men let go.

They let go because they simply cannot follow Evil to those places – He is too hungry, too unfeeling, too ambitious for men to sate. Those handful of mortal souls who have tried to give the World have been left in utter dejection on learning she now wants the Stars. But for every evil doer of wicked, abominate deeds – there is always one to come after who will see the yawning gaps where more could have been done, where opportunities were missed, through weakness and a weak hand grip, resisting the drag to Hell.

But evil is forgetful, disdainful, indifferent to Today and living only for the ever after Tomorrow. It cares not what you did for it yesterday even if that be the piling of enough skulls to obscure the sun, it craves only the Moment, the Evil Incarnate, not the Evil Incarnated. It bears no qualms in severing its loyalties, revoking its gifts, renegeing on its promises – changing the sweet melodies of narcissus. It is always a matter of degree – and of those degrees the evil done unto one man is forgotten where the evil done unto men is a hundredfold, and again where evil perpetrated is a thousandfold, and again where that evil spreads its tendrils into the planes and spans the world as a poisonous spider, its fangs dripping with the anticipation of a godless haze of rabid murder.

For Evil the deed is not the act, it is rather that the Devil is in the details. Architectural Evil – the planning and plotting of Grand Deceits, delicious insidious deceptions played out over days, months, years, lifetimes or Aeons. The salacious pleasantries of the killing face, the elaborate misdirection of diabolic intent, the satanic schemes that crush hundreds of thousands on every front with excruciating patience, that steal and corrupt minds and flesh, set the virtues to burn and brother against brother, nation to war against nation, the vessel upon himself.

This Architecture is the consummation of Satan, the cosmic fucking of the stars and of the Self – the equivalent plotting of the overthrow of the Perfect, of setting Heaven and its inhabitants to burn in the heat of War. The immolatory flame of the Darkest Prince rises up within when we unleash the Beast – but how that flames loves to dance before it sets the world to burn! How it loves to parade its finery before leading lambs to the slaughter, to preen its wings and gloat in unrivalled vanity and show-off its mastery. To revel in its evil deeds, to relate them, savour them, strum them to the screaming in absolute arrogance, hatred and disregard for all of life and everything that is precious including moderation, temperance, restraint.

Evil cannot be controlled – if it can, it is not Evil one is doing but a simulation of off-day good. Evil baulks at nothing. Nothing. Ultimately it has no friends, no loyalties, no master, no law. It does not know restraint. It does not know mercy. And it is all that is not. For Evil is the art of the vain-glorious Blood King – the envelopment of the total soul into the black of Hell and the wickedest emulation of the Original Genius – Intelligent Evil. As for the architecture in the height of virtue, in the lift of samsara and the light of God – their existence serves to amplify and illustrate the extreme sovereignty of the Devil even for the evil man. For the evil man is not Evil – and forever, forever, forever, just a man.

PURE EVIL:

But what is pure evil? It is an evil that waits, that fills its prey with hope, with love, with illusions – and bides its time while it builds an intricate web that causes maximum hurt, chaos and pain to all of its gossamer-wrapped entanglements. It is an art of delivering breath-taking ferocity and surprise with everything leading up to the moment where claws rip through the painted canvas so patiently, painstakingly built and peel the very innocence from the world so deeply that it elevates the meaning of evil itself. An act of Grand Black Magic that echoes from one generation to the next.

CONTEMPLATION OVER KILLING [2]

THEM are pragmatic about the power to kill. Ordinary people kill, every day for every conceivable reason. It might be to rid the world of a human obstacle, or for money, or power, or for the thrill. Whatever, Killing is a means of actualising the will, it serves selfish interests, as do all human motivations; motivations cloaked by peace and mungbeans that comprises the fragile sugar-coating of interpersonal relations and communicate. If killing were a sacred act; one could understand the noble gesture to wait to be appointed an executioner by a Master/Mistress with the conviction that the offer chosen was particularly important for some long-term strategy of vital importance to the Sinister Dialectic. But killing is mundane, whether in war or in a domestic dispute, the act is performed to serve the interests of the killer. THEM believe killing is a pragmatic option/solution available to each of us, not the domain of a Master/Mistress; but a means to enact the will of the dark and self-possessed.

THE SINISTER GROTESQUE

The Sinister Grotesque [A SATANIC HERESY] According to a theatrical maestro "the art of grotesque is based on the struggle between the contents and the form". The adherents of that theatrical approach find the struggle between the actor and his role on the stage more interesting and dramatic than the natural and organic performance when playing a role. If we look closely around us we could see this missing between contents and form almost everywhere. If we look at ourselves we could see the same phenomenon within us too. As if everything is a grotesque bigger than life. It's an abysmal revealing. It's, in fact, a tragicomic situation. Only an experienced Satanist (a Master/Mistress) could feel at ease with that fact.

Here is the heresy: Satan, in fact, is a grotesque archetype, rather than an Apollonian perfectionist. Yes, the Prometheo-Faustian-Luciferian aspect of Satan is Apollonian indeed, but it's only an aspect and it is this aspect namely, which makes Satan seem as a tragic character. It's the heroic but hopeless struggle for perfection in the material (causal) world which characterises that aspect and the only thing which attains to the Divine Immortality is the Fallen Angel's pride... It is what reincarnates itself and the tragedy repeats again and again. It's the doom of all the empires established upon the ideal of greatness. The intellectuals with a Nazarene predisposition of mind like very much to invent moral fables based on that aspect of Satan. There are, however, some would be Satanists who are not able to be even tragic heroes.

Their strain to fit themselves to that role model is often ridiculous and grotesque. It's again because of the missing between the form and the contents - and that missing is not always because of the lack of sincerity in their intent. It may not even be because of the lack of will-power. For example, one may have no appropriate physical qualities and one's physical construction may not allow one to develop the athletic body of some Hellenic sculpture (with the smallest possible penis) and one may feel trauma in the process and even get ill, go mad or may commit suicide and get saved by some loving Nazarene girl in the last moment... One's sensitiveness could prove greater than one's strength or vice versa: all of the struggle for balance could produce an even greater imbalance: all of the struggle for harmony could produce a greater disharmony. Training, competition, struggle, success and struggle again - otherwise you are neither a Satanist nor an Aryan. But all the sport, art, music, all the classicism, all the divine ambition could be reduced to strain and strain over strain again.

Yet all the efforts could suddenly turn into a catalogue of failures, accumulating complex over complex and the final strain could end in a noisy farting...And all this under the strict and critical look of Apollo. What a shame indeed! xxvi There is, however, a rather sinister aspect of Satan, who has been somewhat neglected by the Western Dark Tradition - that of Dionysus. It happened to me to be born in the native land of that mysterious Thracian deity, who was the opposing counterpart of Apollo during the so-called Hellenic Aeon. The former Thracian land is abundant of archaeological evidence about the Thracian culture which was in no way lower than the Hellenic one and in some aspects even more profound, especially as regards the Dark mysteries.

Neither were the Thracians lesser Aryans than the Hellenes, nor there were enemies who didn't taste their deadly battle skills. However, due to the long presence of the Turko-Semitic hordes, and the misery caused by the consequences of the two World Wars, that region has sunk in oblivion and lies beyond the scope of the Western culture which knows about Dionysus only by some Hellenic and Roman sources. Unfortunately, while the West weighs if it is to turn its attention to that vital region for its cultural inheritance, the present local sub-humans will destroy or sell everything abroad. Some say Dionysus was a deity of the wine, women and songs, in brief, a god of merriment, and they aren't wrong provided they can see the merriment beyond the Abyss and the Trance of Sorrow. Dionysus's merriment is beyond all that strain of the struggle for perfection and excellence - he has experienced much more.

Dionysus's music was rhythmic - the dithyramb, some kind of spontaneously measured singing, playing and dancing which excited a lewd ecstasy ending in an orgasmic death.(A very pale analogy could be made with the modern techno-rave culture, but it could be misleading.) Dionysus's trance was in-between sex and death, in-between the comedy and tragedy, sliding as a snake between all the pairs of opposites and going beyond the whole paradox of Being. Yet this trance wasn't Buddha's Non-Being. The latter, if we are to follow Schopenhauer's logic, is also in result of the Apollonian striving to perfection.

This whole thing could be expressed by the magick of grotesque, which is a deliberate acceptance of the missing between form and contents, some sinister letting go with the paradoxical mystery of Being. It's some bizarre releasing from all the strain after perfection, some perverse enjoyment in the asymmetric and disharmonious, some ecstatic rejoicing in "the obscene and distorted character of the Universe" as Crowley once wrote. The very fact, that we as human beings, are predestined to die, is tragic enough, and the whole strain after perfection could only make the biologic tragedy to seem beautiful, making of it an aesthetic. Dying for an ideal could make sense of life indeed. Striving to see the harmonious structure of the things in Nature and living accordingly, also makes sense of life. Seeking to individuate one's consciousness from the collective unconsciousness could make of one a magickian and magickians are able to make sense of life not only for themselves. Aspiring to attain an acausal Immortality would make probably the greatest sense xxvii of human life. And so on: this is what differentiates the Apollonian individuals from these who live as it fits to their unconscious urges.

The Dionysian individuals are, in fact, rare, but one cannot confuse them with others when one meets them. As if their very presence creates some distortion in their surroundings. The missing between their form and contents is usually evident but it's as if they feel at ease with that fact and not only make no attempt to hide it but sometimes even deliberately seek to make it more evident in a way that everybody around them starts to feel uncomfortable by realising a similar incongruity in themselves. That's why people are either ready to throw stones at or to applaud the presence of such individuals, or both things simultaneously. Usually, however, people either try to avoid them, or try not to remark their presence. Such individuals often feel themselves as if they were a mistake of the very Nature but at the same time they rejoice in the absurd fact of their being. Their existence is living evidence that Chaos is not just an abstraction. They are the tragicomic characters in the play of Being, the jesters of Chaos itself. They open sinister nexions with their very presences and make the people around them laugh and cry simultaneously. They are the true archetype behind the Great Fool of the Tarot tradition: the guy who parodies the Magus's perfect jugglery.

To play deliberately false is a subtler art than the perfect performance. The Dionysian principle could be regarded as releasing the tension of the Apollonian perfectionism. It's also the mocking aspect of Satan and those who are not able to laugh together with Satan are their own accusers. They have just taken themselves too seriously and there is no need of anybody to accuse them when hearing the final sardonic laughter...

THE SOBER RE-REALIZATION OF THE HUMAN CONDITION

“Life is but a walking shadow, a poor player that struts and frets his hour upon the stage, and then he's heard no more. It is a tale, told by an idiot full of sound and fury, signifying, nothing.” – William Shakespeare. For all their efforts, for all their striving, scheming, day-to-day detailing in their infinite scope and detail such as the mind is capable, for sex, for power, for status, for everlasting glory, for dominance, for legacy – can you name a single Gladiator? A single Noble from Sumeria? A single person that does not appear in history books and whose life has faded to nothing but fragmented tatters lost in the Abyss? No – you can't. And one day, Soon, human, you too will pass from this world to oblivion. For all your struggle, for all your striving, whatever you think, whatever power you think you hold, or have grasped from Gods unseen, however proud you are, however rich, however happy, or self-important – you will return to dust – swept away by the tide. You will be forgotten, and you will be lost to time. You will be You no more, but the nameless, faceless, lifeless corpses on which your young boots now tread in the cemeteries, where you stand in the shadow of the buildings that built your world long before you arrived in it, and the roads you took to get there. Everything you built, to dust. Everything you said to dust. Everything you are, and were, to dust. And in the face of this magnificent awakening to your impending death, what do you claim? Fearlessness? Pride? Your ‘Accomplishments’? – Your ‘Achievements’?

If yours are so mighty, then you can name Theirs, for if such ‘Deeds’ are to be remembered, where are they? Beyond the handful of scribbled notes of historical fumbling, that glorified a few random souls while the many went unanswered, unheard? Do you have to conquer the planet to be remembered, invent the light-bulb, become the focus of learning and education, in some way, stand Out, to convince others of your majesty? To ashes you are going. Day by day, disintegrating into nothing while the incessant jackboots of those behind you in their millions juggernaut, war machine, erasing whatever footsteps you may have left on your proud march, foolish soldier of fortune. All those things you grasp, all those dreams you dream, all those you crush underfoot to get what you want – to be who you are – will soon be an Other, embodied in the same game, stepping over your grave, nameless and dead. And all you gave in this mad struggle, thrashing about like an idiot siren blindly echoing all those others before you imbued by the light that shone and faltered, thought itself in control, will come to naught, devoid entirely of reason. It is they who will take you, they who will ensure others forget you. THEM – who persist, eternal.

THE FORMULA FOR CHANGE [I-X]

[I]

One day two Alchemists were trying to create the Philosophers Stone.

Alchemist B watched as Alchemist A added aquae vitae. Then watched as he added more aquae vitae. Then watched again with surprise as the Alchemist added more aquae vitae.

Alchemist B remarked: What are you doing?

Alchemist A replied: Well, I'm creating the Philosophers Stone?

Alchemist B replied: By adding the same element over and over? Don't you know that Alchemy requires many different types of substance? What difference to the formula can you make if every element you add, is identical?

Alchemist A's subsequent reply, was of no consequence.

[II]

Alchemist A added the copper sulphate which shone a brilliant hue, quart dram of gold that delighted the mixture dividing it into dragons viridian and lilac, and the slice of apple exposed to the rays of the moon which fell innocuously into the tincture bleeding a trail of crimson wake.

Such beautiful ingredients he breathed in admiration. Surely all privy to this process could agree.

Then, in the firelight, his brow crumpled as he stared at the next ingredient on the table. He turned to Alchemist B who was patiently observing.

It won't explode when I put it in will it? he asked.

Alchemist B replied, yes, almost certainly. But it is essential to the process.

Alchemist A pointed to a pale-yellow cone of powder.

And that, he said, isn't that extremely poisonous, wont the odours hasten us to the grave?

Alchemist B replied, yes, almost certainly. But it is essential to the process.

Alchemist A pointed again to the table, and the hideously ugly toad that besquat there.

And that? It's so ugly, is it really necessary?

Alchemist B replied, yes, almost certainly. It is essential to the process.

Alchemist A threw his hands up in the air and raged about the room. You'd see us killed, you're a madman, a lunatic, you've taken leave of your senses!

Alchemist B replied, yes, almost certainly. It is essential to the process.

Alchemist A shook his head, fine, you do it. I'll watch from the oubliette.

Alchemist B picked up the explosive, the poison, and the ugly toad and held them above the tincture.

Alchemist A overcome with the need to protect his brethren pleaded with him to abandon the process.

Alchemist B ignored his companions' pleas and dropped the ingredients into the mixture. The resulting explosion and poison vapour quickly killed him, painting the walls of the room with his and the toads' innards.

Alchemist A rushing in with his mouth covered by rag, waved frantically at the blue smoke, clearing it from his view – and there in the midst lay a gleaming stone of such beauty he could only stare – as words echoed in his head.

Essential to the process...

[III]

One immortal day in human history, the entire human race succeeded in destroying their ego's. And they were heard from no more.

[IIII]

Alchemist A throttled the life out of Alchemist B and ate the brains from his skull.

Now you probably didn't expect that did you.

[V]

Alchemist B turned the crystal glass orb in his hand.

I see things, he said.

Alchemist A replied: What do you see?

Alchemist B replied: I see a fierce battle between two men, each with an army behind them.

Alchemist A remarked: Why are they fighting?

Alchemist B replied: Today, for my entertainment. Tomorrow, to become the Past from which I learn the Future.

Alchemist A replied: Who is winning?

Alchemist B replied: I am. They fought, so I don't have to.

Alchemist A promptly smashed a heavy mahogany chair over Alchemist B, knocking him to the ground dead with his orb which smashed into shards.

You always have to fight, remarked Alchemist A.

And opened the door to the beautiful Alchemist C.

[VI]

Alchemist B stood staring at the beaker in front of him. His eyes were strained, bloodshot, his clothes reeked of being unwashed, his hair was flat and lank, his skin pallid and greasy.

Alchemist A arriving for a visit asked in surprise: how long have you been standing there?

Alchemist B, unblinking, simply replied, 'change is slow'.

[VII]

Hearing a knock at the door Alchemist B hurried to to open it. There in front of him stood the travelling gold merchant.

“Need gold? For your studies, m’lord?”

Alchemist B smiled, “no, we’re fine, we have plenty of gold, thank you.” And shut the door.

Alchemist B returned to his experiment.

Moments later he turned to Alchemist A and said, “we’re out of gold, I need you to visit the village and get some for our next process.”

Alchemist A looked surprised and remarked – “but you said we had plenty?”

Alchemist B remarked, “no, I told him we had plenty, I didn’t tell you we had none.”

[VIII]

Alchemist A had carefully prepared the entire host of ingredients over 15 hours.

Everything lay neatly assembled upon his lamp-lit table, each substance carefully measured and dosed and arranged in an orderly fashion to be placed into the beaker and crucibles sequentially with maximum perfection.

Halfway through and priding himself on his organisation, Alchemist B passed by, observed the systematic arrangement and without further ado reached into his pockets and threw whatever was in them into the bubbling elixirs.

Alchemist A yelled in frustration: “Oi! What the fuck?!”

Alchemist B merely replied – “you’ll work it out.”

One day two Alchemists were trying to create the Philosophers Stone.

Alchemist B watched as Alchemist A added aquae vitae. Then watched as he added more aquae vitae. Then watched again with surprise as the Alchemist added more aquae vitae.

Alchemist B remarked: What are you doing?

Alchemist A replied: Well, I'm creating the Philosophers Stone?

Alchemist B replied: By adding the same element over and over? Don't you know that Alchemy requires many different types of substance? What difference to the formula can you make if every element you add, is identical?

Alchemist A replied: It is not called a Concentration for nothing. Change requires its own absence. This too is essential to the process. As is knowing where and when.

[X]

Alchemist A watched with some curiosity as Alchemist B folded empty paper, sealed it in an envelope, and sealed it under lock and key.

Why keep this one secret, if it has no secret, he asked?

Alchemist B merely smiled and replied: There must always be mystery in the world. Lest everything become hollow.

XORCERY: BREAKING THE SOUND BARRIER

Cymatics – the creation (or revelation) of geometry, shapes and patterns when matter is vibrated by sound is a vastly ancient comprehension. It – may have been widely used in ancient times to perform all manner of feats and effects today we consider impossible – or lack the imagination and depth of appreciation for sounds agency, to consider at all. 'Sticks and Stones may break my bones – but words will never hurt me' – the stubborn, deflective mantra of many children, and some adults deployed as a coping strategy when teased, or verbally assaulted ignores the fact that Words – utterances of sound – arranged into particular strings – can very easily kill you or cause you, to kill. Words – the vibration of air, a formation of pneuma, the breath of life – can completely fold your reality, build empires, change how you treat others or others treat you – overnight, and even in an instant.

They can condemn, coerce, corrupt, create. Words – carelessly and carefully spoken by almost every human on the planet – phrased and framed – spat and sung – channelled and churned – are one of the quintessential elements of Sorcery. We may know them as Speech or Anti-Music. We – the human being, ourselves a product of sound vibrating at specific levels to hold us together are an instrument – through which Voice, Vox Humana, Anti-Music emanates. We are restricted because of our size, shape and apparatus to only speak or hear between a limited range of hertz (Hz), pitch and tone. Outside of these limitations lies an immensity like that of the stars which we can never touch, know or experience – and so we must remain fixed on one star, like our dogged dreams of landing on Mars – while untold other planets are ignored because they do not suit – us.

Chant, choirs, musical instruments, birdsong, were developed to imitate and flow with and compliment the natural phenomena and vibrations of matter. They were tuned and toned to generate frequencies, melodies, enchantments – and to summon, channel and direct force. The bringing together of people to sing in unison or combination is an extraordinarily powerful event – the sound created enraptures human beings, changes their thoughts, vibrates through them and the group and creates sacred geometric energies. It is worth noting that Churches, Mosques and many organised religions favour a square or rectangular arrangement of architectural structure and people to perform choirs or sing music – while ancients appear to have favoured round architecture and ringed choirs and movements such as dancing or singing in a circle.

If Churches did not also use music as a sorcerous addition to enforcing their message, and require such rigid shapes in order to include a leader at the front of the church who might also give a sermon – they too might use a circle. Assemblies that use squares and rectangles generally denote a hierarchy, with everyone facing the same way and more often than not, situated lower than the speaker who stands solitary at a podium raised above and in front of them at a fair distance. A circle however is a different beast – it symbolises equality and harmony, unison and dissolution – there is often no hierarchy in a circle – its very shape is universally adopted when people come together to place their hands on each other's to form a psychic knot of entanglement that ties them all to one another as equal partners. It is adopted for many joyous dances, and famously depicted in Arthurian legend as a sovereign unity of democratic rule. Many ancient symbols employ the circle – whilst Christianity invokes the cross and the triangle. National Socialism also invoked sharp angular symbolism but interestingly – never formed a symbol of its own, borrowing the Sun Wheel for their infamous 'Swastika'.

The underlying sound gives rise to manifest shape – some are harmonious, others are a distortion. Christianity, denuded in some ways, still has a gargantuan grasp of the world because it was and is – formed of genuine Sorcerers – melder of form, who understood the archaic currents of the preworld uncovered by others – and used them to their advantage to re-craft time, space and reality – the artefacts of which are omnipresent. But they are a distortion – National Socialism is another distortion – without a symbol even of its own it is easy to understand why this form was born aborted, but the majesty of the original symbol before it was confiscated has its own real power – power the Nazis borrowed to append to their misshapen paradigm of the Third Reich – so it continues. Run on the battery of the Sun Wheel and forces far older than time, it reignites the stunted, regressive militant with its original burning spark – who can no more comprehend why he has become a national socialist – than he can face the crippling xenophobic and myopic fear that crushes him into rank and file and steals his life and gift to direct life toward a meaningless detritus in the amusing belief they are an ‘overman’ or ‘Übermensch’.

The Cross stretches across the canvas of time and space, controlling and representing perception in the 4th dimension by breadth and width, by binary at odds or dichotomy – two forces at cross purposes to create friction and a singular point (The Present). The symbol taken as the Swastika represented 6th dimension – time and space plus spiralic cycles inward and outward, both in compliment and contradiction – a reality the 4th dimension cannot fathom or retain control from within, so, a cross – the single most sorcerous anti-music that fixes the world and its inhabitants in place like nails, bolting us to a distorted perception of ourselves, others, our collectivity and our gift. The swastika, its original authentic fire and power mis-used for Germany’s War Machine, tacked on, results not in an understanding of cycles, forms or forces – or an Aevolution, but only in temporal bound deformities, ‘higher beings’ in word and rhetoric alone, while their actions are those of amoeba, the same clumsy steps of a billion lesser humans before them and nothing else, thumping into walls and each other as morons still grasping the basics of the human body and potential. Stealing its Intent -to patch onto their shabby flags – has done nothing but obscure the stars.

We have shone a light numerous times on the power of Words, from ‘Chronobet’, to ‘Analysis of Frequency’. There are – still many many vestiges – that point the Sorcerer toward this ancient art, both the promises of peril and discord, and creation and harmony demonstrated throughout human history. Sound motivates us more than visuals, sound dominates our reactive instinct, sound is the wild magic, the anti-music of the human race that has gotten away from us, the chthonic fire of life itself that we mimic and mantra with little understanding and even less comprehension. What we say, the noises we make, are all devastatingly powerful and all too often immensely destructive.

In my experience as an occult teacher, I have seen hundreds of instances where even without voice and using only words, my sentiments or arrangement of letters bring dynamic changes to a person’s life, bearing, behaviour, meaning and direction. This is even more pointed in person – described as being ‘highly persuasive’ it is simply my ability to identify and then bend or break the struts that hold up a form a person is dominated by, that make me so. But we as a species are lost, corrupted and have let Sound slip away from our once majestic grasp. We fundamentally understand how to fashion words into weapons – how to wound someone, change and manipulate the perceptions of others using them, and the soothing effect they can have when we use them in a harmonious way. Yet we stay silent when we should speak and speak when we should be silent.

Our timing of sound and rabid exhalations are at a legendary cacophonous level – and our collective vibration is causing us all violent increases in suffering. To wit, I prophesied that it will not be long, and perhaps as early as 2020, before we begin to experience enormous, devastating earthquakes on the planet that will form the second stage of crystallisation of the Undividual. THEY have delivered the first stage as the Plague – which will level Individualism and dissolve ish-ness and ismism, Our vibrations and collective sound making are exciting one another into such a frenzy it is now destroying buildings and architecture, symbols and sounds themselves. When we consider that every group of people has their own patterns and vibrations, and these mix with new vibrations and groups of people – the resulting geometry which manifests as the Events those people experience – is extreme and complex – and is now at such a level that it is tearing through the concept and paper castles erected as the ‘United States’ and levelling it to the ground. There are simple, elegant, timeless reasons for the existence of concepts such as peace, understanding, harmony, kindness, charity, benevolence, generosity and sacrifice.

We each know intimately from daily experience that the way we speak to a person dictates the reaction we will get from them – we recognise that different people require different words, different sounds. Women utilise their second, softer voice to great effect often invisibly, men speak faster or slower to retain hierarchy and assert or relinquish control, some people respond more to force than to form, and some people respond more to form than to force. Propaganda, symbolism, poetry, music, argument, debate, command, reason, colours, clever titles, clumsy slurs – we use them all to create change in those around us and within us – but without a greater appreciation of the immense and unrivalled power of sound, of our Words – we endlessly slice one another to ribbons, form parties and attack a singular person with a barrage of hate, or cut ourselves so deeply we lie bleeding – because we have lost the ability to master and manage, Sound. I’ve had the opportunity and the ability to create fanatical warriors with my words, to create many violent and nihilistic individuals hypnotised by what I say to them – like a snake charmer charms a cobra with vibration.

Over two decades I have encountered thousands of vulnerable, impressionable, malleable, controllable individuals that I have instructed in occult matters, shared a journey with, or learned from in my own vulnerable state. In all cases the common denominator was their motivation to Seek, to Know, to Understand. Like a glass bottle – what they pour into themselves or have poured into them – often determines the taste, colour and flavour of philosophical wine they will pour into the next cup they encounter and that will pour from their vessel. While always an alchemical process of change and flux this vessel – every form that distils in their bottle has a life of its own, a certain length and depth of dimension that to approach, cradle, embrace, exhibit (and sorcerers aim, evolve) is entirely capable of ensuring what they pour from their vessel remains relatively fixed for a given amount of time.

For example – and I use this example owing to the perceived prevalence of the “far-right” growing globally – One does not become a National Socialist overnight except to join to a force hoping badge-flashing is enough, no, one studies WW2, one finds succour and sustenance in what Hitler did, said and achieved and finds themselves persuaded word through symbol that this is the form by which they identify, that there is or was some form of injustice executed within a racially aligned paradigm, and a specific enemy or set to combat – and filled with artificial poignancy, a sense of spiritual or political duties, which they will adopt and champion, which they will serve and protect. This – takes time. All forms, once inside the bottle, will borrow a period of life from the vessel to live themselves out. During which – One tends to surround one’s vessel with Pourers who add more of the same, strengthening the wine (viz. form) until it is fermented into vinegar. On that day, the wine sours, and the bottle is no longer the vessel, it is the contents of the bottle, that use the vessel merely to hold together. Some vinegared vessels will add a cork to their bottle – preventing any new wines from being added, and ostensibly fix their vessel into a permanent, stagnant concoction.

Many, dozens, of my peers went on to create their own groups and temples – some pre-dated my own – but of them there are none that did not seek ownership of their visitors who slowly became disciples and whose wine was eventually turned to vinegar, forever trapping them under the iron fist of some form or another. Numerous of these devolved into NS, Satanic, Fanatic or other hateful, simple rock-throwing drudgeons reminiscent of Cro-Magnon man, to which devolutions were attached elegant soliloquy to disguise their actual wallowing in mud flinging shit as numinous praxis, supremacy or poignant authenticity – much like car manufacturers sell obnoxious vehicles to obnoxious people by borrowing the ringing power inherent in perennial wisdom to craft an enticing enchantment.

So many – absorbed the same material with such promise and somehow regressed into violent automatons dominated and ruled by the contents of their bottle, and too, so many believe this ageless clash of dumb-ass against dumb-ass like children eternally in the sandpit is worthy of the mechanism and vessel they were gifted – Our Temple of THEM. For these mighty scholars that are obsessed by a single star in the tapestry of a studded cosmic blanket – the wonders of the unlimited universe breathe a patient sigh. Naturally I exhibit great scorn for this, borne of despair that humans are exhausting idiots that have gotten virtually nowhere in all of the time on this planet.

God gave me the gift of knowing Bliss – he gave me no instructions and said nothing – but following that reception my response ever since has been to seek the means and method to stop the cycles on a large scale that have been the reality into which I was born and push humanity forward so it can try again because this practice run was an absolute fucking disaster. For this reason, THEY chose the form they did – a form against which we have no defence, cannot fight, cannot see and do not even need to believe in for it to decimate our societies. We are fighting each other – but fighting the virus together, impossible as it would be for humanity to work together just once in recent history, is also not the lesson. Fighting – is the lesson. The word, the action, the problem – the rapidity of human beings to regress to it. In the 50's people were very fond of UFO's and Aliens – often dreaming that when the flying saucers came to Earth we would greet them from the rooftops with signs of Peace, that we would meet these strange little green men that exited the floating disc and spark a revolution in galactic space-faring.

Our movies, books, urban myths, conspiracies, documentaries, ancient and current histories are littered with all manner of aliens of all types and disposition. But now, that the flying saucers are here, and the aliens have arrived – no-one has come out to greet them because we cannot see them. But they are here, in their trillions, a silent, invisible alien invasion by another species with which we did not anticipate and cannot communicate. Cymatics – demonstrates – that all matter takes shapes based on the sound that passes through it. Did, we, as a collective race, create this Virus through our collective sound – through our boiling hatred, prejudice, cruelty, nastiness, violence, regressive arrogance and mean-spirit. When you vibrate certain substances the individual particles form larger ones (hence propaganda or rhetoric forms tribal groupings, forms societies, forms empires) – but – when the majority of the planets people are vibrating like this, with fear, anger, violence – the planet, will react. And, so it has.

It reflects our presence, our behaviour and our voracious discordant atonal quality – which is so disharmonious the Earth is a shadow of its former self, with great waste, mistreatment and caustic anti-living with the land – it is with cosmic amusement and karmic justice that people are taken by surprise when she seeks to reflect our treatment of her, back to us. When I say the populace is reacting with aeonic knee-jerks I refer to the temporality through which it devises minute by minute solutions, actions, reactions trapped inside a rigid importance of the Present – ‘lock-downs’, ‘suppression’, ‘vaccines’. But we who wish to evolve must look far beyond that – and we must understand that the modern lens is fractured, the result of its outcomes are what we see today, the results of our understanding is what we see today – people hitting each other, calling each other names and wasting oxygen in hate-fumed vessels boiling over with vitriol, stacked in hierarchies the world over applying forces in a downward spiral to those below – indeed, it is very hard to fathom, why it is necessary for humanity to survive, to appreciate that it has any kind of goal beyond stubborn persistence through rape and love, to grasp why beyond its tenacious survival instinct it struggles to save itself at all. Merely because it Is, does it do so.

But of reasons for humanity to continue, to keep perpetuating suffering or joy – there are scant. There is nothing important about us but the importance we presume. All we have done and do is bicker and smite. Hard as it may be to appreciate – what is emerging is the Dawn of the Undividual, a new Aeon that will emerge from the ashes of this one and give rise to a Ahuman being that resembles only the shape of the last but nothing of the content. We will re-learn the majesty, agency and necessity of mastering Sound – and we will discover how to move gigantic stones, carve solid rock and drain the oceans – for the Ice Age is coming, and after that the need for Ahumans to live underground, some practice of which, we shall all get very soon. It would be mindless naivety to believe that any kind of peace is possible at this juncture – in fact the very opposite is necessary, the disintegration of the aeon and its forms can only come with holocaust and war, suffering and bloodshed, deafness and violence, destruction and annihilation – Death is the great Teacher, but our self-destructive tendency is our Master.

As the Omnicast envelops us in the greatest darkness we have yet known in modern times, the ugly din our planet is making will only foment the most intricate and explosive disasters – and all that will come for the next four years will be a ceaseless bombardment of noise with the daily challenge posed to not succumb to madness. But by 2025, there will be more than just the inkling of a new human being present on this planet and more than just a passing of the former one. The fulcrum will have shifted, and the weight will be on the side of evolution. In the meantime – there is great gravity in the phrase ‘Be excellent to each other’ – try to remain silent at least a few times a day as there is more than enough noise being made already – and prepare for a rude awakening that sorcery is unshakably real as is your responsibility to all human life

REICHNO-CONTRA

A New Sound [1]

The original concept of "Reichno" was the fusion of White Power messages with hostile subtleties of the Holocaust and the contemporary trance of techno - designed to match pace with and then speed up the heartbeat resulting in frenzy.

"Contra" - is a new design. It fuses rap music with layers of contradictory sound-bites. Martin Luther King's speech to the nation is interspersed with the established ethos of the street violence embodied by rappers Tupac Shakur and Notorious B.I.G / or - recorded footage from the chaos of the unfolding LA Riots simultaneously is heard as George Bush Snr gives an address to the UN on the New World Order and the control such an order will ostensibly exercise. A third layer of vocals, unusual and usually absent in contemporary music which concerns itself with clarity by restricting itself to main and backing vocals - offers juxtaposition to the political machinations of the speeches illustrating the difference between well-intended rhetoric and the reality of the blood-soaked streets and desperation of the Afro-American culture via its sub-culture.

Shakur's Black Panther influences and undeniable drive toward self-realisation made him a potent political speaker and legendary rapper. Luther's poignant dream speech is further counter-pointed by the inclusion of these two rap moguls. famous for the East-West Coast rap wars resulting in both of them being gunned down within weeks of each other. Behind all of this raw reality of which the rappers spoke, stand the shadowy figures of politics, in turn implementing or resisting the invisible hand of power from the Illuminati that Shakur became aware of in prison and ostensibly gave the middle-finger.

Contra is defined by layering contrasting or contradictory audio deliveries and concepts over, under and either side of a third main lyrical track- and by using a noticeable break in the melody where it falls silent for a period of a few seconds only to build back up again - as well as a three-step pattern of silent stops that shock the listener and accentuate both the melody and the main lyrics with their absence. The pauses, break the spell of musical entrancement and remind the listener of their reality being artificially constructed, imperfect, a mode. Contra also has the characteristic of using a melody with a Sinister tonal set, to create an unnerving, threatening feel. It's messages and music seeks to incite emotions of unrest, feelings of injustice and anger toward authority.

Certainly - THEM also has A Dream.

REICHNO-CONTRA: REVISITED [2]

Reichno-Contra is a 'new sound'. It takes what is highest in a culture (Reichno) and contrasts it with what is lowest (Contra). While simultaneously pitting two opposing cultures against one another. Said another way, it contrasts a culture's aspirations and dreams, with its reality and nightmare, and includes an opposing contrast of a competing culture.

For example, in a track no longer available but also created by 'DJ Rayne' the juxtaposed soundtrack of woman being tortured and screaming in pain was overlaid with women in ecstasy in the throes of orgasm. The overwhelming 'mixed-message' forces the subconscious to split in order to try and listen/perceive both tracks, often alternating between hyper-attention to one extreme over the other, as holding them both in consciousness is a difficult task. The dual-sound forces the listener to struggle to identify and enjoy their preference of the two, also flooding them with its opposition. This creates sonic and cognitive dissonance which overcomes the focus of a song/composition on a single subject to the detriment of its counterpart. The brain must then try to cope with the aural assault which challenges preconceptions about how music should sound, how forms should be monolithic, and invites a deeper contemplation of the space between tensions. Since neither soundtrack is wholly discernible, it mutates into binaural confusion and creates an entirely new sound that forces the energy, meaning and gravitas of both concepts to the conscious mind, rather than the usual programmed feed of one at a time. The listener may find themselves mentally muting their preference in order to hear the competing message - in itself, the esoteric aim of Reichno-Contra is to develop tolerance, empathy, unity through its heretical onslaught by collapsing both forms. There is inherent within it too, a deliberate ambiguity for the listener to determine what exactly the composer is trying to say: this ambiguity makes it uncertain whether the music is positive/friendly or cloaked/sinister.

In 'I Have A Dream' the 14 min track features a sinister undertone or sub track overlaid with two diametric energies that occur semi-simultaneously. The sinister element in this piece was a variant of John Murphy's 'In the House in a Heartbeat' from the classic zombie movie '28 Days Later'. This element supplies an unsettling feeling or association of horror or darkness.

The speech of Martin Luther King considered a high cultural point in Black history (Reichno) is contrast with the reality of black life in the ghettos that gave rise to rap (Contra). That is, the hopes, dreams, aspirations of black America are confronted with the reality that has emerged and solidified many years later. While King waxes lyrical about his children being judged not from the colour of their skin but by the content of their character, of the freedom of black America, the emancipation - 2pac and Biggie are scheming about mundane kills and rampant black hostility in a subculture of gangs, guns and violence. At the same time, white narratives interject (viz. a speech on the New World Order by George Bush Snr) which represent opposing forces to both cultures which challenge(d) and compete(d) with the high and low black culture. Therein we have high black culture contrasted by low black culture challenged by high white culture and then despite all these lofty ideals the reality of life with the Los Angeles Riots - also set to rap (A capella by 2Pac, Biggie). Literally, high white culture (media with helicopters) hovers above low black culture (riots). Finally, low white culture expressed with the ultra-violence inculcated into the slaves of the state via Full Metal Jacket's 'this is my rifle' caps it off. The music is intended to depress the listener with its comparison of how far its culture has fallen; expressing themes of hopelessness, shame, guilt, anger, sadness, despair, violence, realism, control, manipulation and cultural rejection.

Reichno-Contra distorts and turns iconographic cultural references in upon themselves. For instance, a speech by Adolf Hitler can be contrasted with the sound of worshippers at Mecca circling the Ka'aba. Songs such as Deutschland Uber Alles can overlay recordings of verbal Jewish ritual ceremony, scripture reading, Israel's national anthem or speeches of a current actor such as Netanyahu declaring war on Gaza. A sinister undercurrent might be as simple as a continual note of E Major or the low chanting in Carmina Buerana's O Fortuna and the sound of a train (with obvious implications), or Tubular Bells from the Exorcist. Likewise, a British speech announcing the death of Hitler and the end of World War II would represent low German culture.

Reichno-Contra is a hideous new black magical musick developed by THEM that represents what CB called 'the mimicking of structures' through a forced enantiodroma of concepts that were devised to remain apart. Reichno-Contra forcefully unites two opposing currents with a sinister melody by contrasting their high and low cultures, tangling them into an aural war with one another. The musickal schema cares not for the sensibilities of the racism and racial division that composed them as discrete elements and disregards the supposed sacredness of their separation. It rejects to honour either form in its natural habitat - and distorts both using one against the other, representing a musickal form that expresses what CB labelled 'the decline and destruction of civilisation' and that is precisely what this music represents. Ironically, in the hope that its birth creates such terrifying heretical variants so as to eventually ruin modern music and spawn a return to the seven notes, over the course of some hundred years, of course.

VEXAGRAM

All forms are susceptible to countermeasures by even basic means. Forms can be likened to geometric keys with uniquely shaped teeth that fit a corresponding lock to make each half compliment the other. The key needs certain conditions to be met (to be locked in) to have effect and make the total form effective.

The Key here relies on the frequency and type of words used to indicate the ratio and rationale of people. It is an applied assumption (rightly) that the way people communicate (The Lock) suggests only a small number 'up to no good' will be likely to use certain words with sensitive (negative) connotations with higher frequency and will therefore pinpoint themselves from among the faceless millions by using them.

To illustrate how the theory of form (with occult overtones) can be used to effect practical real- world results, this is a prototype idea for a ‘trip script’ designed to jam or overload the computers that search for key words and bring down the systems that invade our privacy. Rather than trying to omit key words from communication so as not to trigger a hit – Vexagram is designed for mass use to overload and render the search function of ‘listening’ servers such as ECHELON, or KEYNOTE obsolete by making all trigger-words equally common-place. But it can also act as a viral contagion. Distribution is indiscriminate and by default automatic; by the time you read the word ‘Vexagram’, the signatures of the key words below are already registering as a ‘hit’ coming from your computer by all active State listening systems – thereby instantly turning attention toward all who unknowingly ‘enter the Vexagram’. Distribution could also be manually effectively used as a smoke-screen by copying and pasting its contents before and/or after all messages and replies either as a replica of the Vexagram or as an invisible inclusion in emails and other messages by sizing its font to size 1 to look like innocuous dots or camouflaged completely as white text. Assuming it proves effective, coding retaliation would involve code to exclude this particular set of characters from the listening systems ‘hit list’ as a ‘nuisance program’ – to keep Vexagram polymorphic, theoretically each new user should add a new word to the list or change its order.

BAPHOMET AND A MAN'S ROLE FOR SINISTER WOMEN: THE GREATEST HERESY

+o+ I was asked a question recently to the effect of: “What do you think is the greater Heresy, NS or Islam: Hitler or Bin Laden: and which one should I aid to bring Chaos?” So, Satanists, want Chaos? Let me iterate what I think Chaos involves: and buckle up because this touches on a disturbing truth conditioned to be forgotten by men. A truth hideously feared.

First some points: 1. I believe undoubtedly that there is a distinct and unchangeable difference between the biological, physical, and spiritual essence of Men and Women. Men, to whom the Logos is centred, understand via their intellect. Women, to whom Eros is centred, feel via their emotions. 2. The ONA, have in the past, referred to their Order's Tradition as run/orchestrated by Women. 3. Baphomet as depicted by the ONA is a Beautiful Woman. 4. If Satanists want Chaos: then thus far they are looking in the wrong quarters. Almost all of my wisdom in life has come from that invisible force that provides all men with a dialectic more alien than any notion of the Acausal: of which, perhaps noticeably, I have written very little: Women.

The fact that I have neglected from issuing my insights regarding women in a similar written form to all the other varied topics to which I have turned my attention: is not because their involvement has been minimal in my transitions – but entirely the contrary. The way women have helped me understand myself, them and the world is so far removed from being able to be understood via records and doctrines of interest to the egoic Logos – that I have, since I began writing, deliberately avoided insulting these forces by trying. But, it would appear that now is the time to pen some comments: pointedly, and unreservedly toward those whom are asking for, working toward, Chaos. I should now like to make a few comments that concern “Satanism” to its very core.

~ The ONA's recently concentrated efforts, (viz. MSS from Mythos/Wordpress) to supply women with an occult archetype, “the Sinister Feminine”, in order for women to escape what may be inevitably viewed as a Man's concept of Women, is noble – but it is not enough. To try to supersede the mistakes of feminism is also noble – but it too is not enough. Baphomet – for all her unearthly countenance and glory, is still, the supply of an archetype for women, by men. That there are Mistresses/Priestesses in magic – is testament to a fundamental problem with the way men see women – namely, from the point of view of men. Women in magic are only provided a secondary rank and position that cannot help but be controlled and channelled through male charity (however good willed and intended) – because to place women in this role is to ask them to act as we do, to perform an act of ego, of control, of openly visible acts and prowess, strength and showy displays of force and energy. Though women innately possess the passion, violence and strength when necessary to act in the realm of men as men do – these are not the characteristics of women: these characteristics are the realm of men. And where, in rare cases – those characteristics are not performed by male agents – they are the result of women trying to copy him.

When not given/living/fitting a pre-designed feminine role, whether priestess, waitress, or goddess by men – what, really, is the natural predisposition of women? When they are not occupying a male expectation of what they should be that is forced upon them, socially, psychologically, spiritually, physically, legally, mentally, financially, visually, what and who, are they? Something extremely important pointed out to me by one of THEM is as follows: “The kicker is this, when men do understand the role and restrictions placed on women – they still miss the point by trying to fix it. All women want is for men to Understand the lot of Women. Because through understanding the lot of women, this would be enough for men to change the World subtly and inevitably through their empathy with us.” The recent fascination with emulating for example, some aspects of the extremist factions of the Islamic Religious Community by becoming involved in Terrorism to hasten the end of the Magian Power-Structure – is when all is said and done: a male concept driven by Ego – and, here’s the thing, a concept imprisoned within a masculine (restricted) mindset. Blowing people to pieces either with guns or bombs is not only needlessly destructive, but also a far more serious symptom of collectively increasing Self-Hate, inverted and projected outwards.

Whereas, one simple, but extremely uncomfortable, indeed terrifyingly adept move – in line with causing Chaos, with increasing Satan and the Dark Gods, with imbuing personal and collective Adeptship, Acausal foresight and a practical initiative resulting in moving hard and fast Against Time is an understanding of the Power-Structure of the Magian and its Male-Oriented Dominance and the depth and variety of One’s (Both men and women) own unconscious projections onto Women, leading to empathy, sympathy and a genuinely open dialogue. This does not imply a duty as men to try to change Women’s lot either with Feminism or even with further enmeshment via such noble, but in my view, similarly blinded notions of yet another Archetype for women to fulfil (for men) viz. Baphomet, whose archetype is a parody of the crux of the problem in the first place. All this questing I’ve witnessed by others for Aliens, Dark Gods, Demons, Satan, Extra-Terrestrials, and, laughably, “Intelligent life-forms” has been performed by people completely unaware that their very own unconscious projections onto this mysterious other half of our species are hiding the very thing they seek for. Women, very rarely get recognition – not because they don’t deserve it, an estimate is beyond the ken of any living being – but because they don’t want it.

The writing in Mvimaedivm IV by the Sorceress Sor Terrosa as she shared her wisdom on the LHP is an extremely rare case in point – most women do not express themselves through the written word. Women are more connected to the Earth than any token Lord of the Earth could ever be. It is they who carry life, who have life ripped from them, and who secretly, subtly control the movements and decisions of their men, whom in isolation, are as soft, insecure and afraid as any of the women they publicly claim to protect (or exploit). Of the creation of Life, Men penetrate and withdraw – and biologically, can only observe and watch life force. It is not their lot to have wombs or to bear children. I will return to this in future commentaries but it is one of the things that truly divides men and women – to pretend there is no difference is as ignorant/arrogant to believe we are completely different.

Men, for all their wisdom, simply cannot understand why women do not write to express themselves like men, since logic and reason, intelligence is the language of man. Men do not understand why women don't wish to be willing priestesses or fulfil the roles those men believe can empower ("their") women – including the archetype of Baphomet. They do not understand why women do not seek to wear the crowns of authority or fight the wars for all those self-important abstracts man convinces himself of or comprehend women's complacency not to strive to be seen, recognised, forcefully visible or openly intellectual tour de forces engaging in 'constructive' debate and logical rational with men or with other women.

Some Men have lost consciousness of Women and many others are in increasing danger of doing so in the future. The Magian power-structure has all but exhausted Women and distorted their inherent attributes into virtual non-existence – men no longer see Women as they are but in the roles that women must play if the world is to keep going – albeit without the recognition of their role in this. Man is mostly blind to Women as they Are, just as they are blind to the Dark Gods, or Acausal, as it Is. It is no wonder there is so much confusion and angst in the Occult when the Mysteries stand before Man only to be overlooked and dismissed, if seen at all.

A shame then, that more have not had the education I have, by the women I have shared my life with. If, we are to be honest, and perceptive before our Time – magicians must understand this: If we are to withdraw everything we project upon women we will have to recognise that everything we withdraw is everything that Man has placed upon them. For instance, if we withdraw their sexuality, their arts of making themselves beautiful, their role as housewives, girlfriends, business partners, mothers, sisters, – if we withdraw all of man's projections upon women to reshape her as he sees fit – then we are to understand, (if we are strong enough to stomach this Abyss), suddenly, sadly and horribly, that we know next to nothing about the pure emanations that ARE the force that is Women because everything they are, and that we are told they are, that they are told they are, is modelled after man's expectations, man's tools, man's glass ceiling. In one aspect concerning the Sinister Feminine the ONA is, in my opinion, misguided. And that aspect, is that they have made Baphomet beautiful – and that her beauty, alone, makes her Sinister, Desirable, Powerful.

This is a fundamental flaw that any serious magician should be warned to take more discerning note of – for it is in a restoration of dialogue and appreciation of women as they Are, that a similar serious quest for destroying the Magian power-structure is ignited. For at this Time in our mortal coil – difference, divides, and appearance, conquers. In my depiction of Baphomet – unlike that of ONA, the Goddess is not a skinny blonde woman but a full-hipped, curvaceous faceless beauty. In her hand, she holds a kitchen knife. This is not an arbitrary depiction or a pro-feminist symbology – it addresses the very serious endemic that men have no concept of more than half the population – and, it is an oversight, instituted by the Magian patriarchy, that will kill them if they do not realise this aspect of their Deep Sleep. Nor do they – though they can be seen to struggle against every visible “man-made” prison of words, flesh or time in order to “transform”, or “breakthrough”, or “mutate”, or “Become” – seek to extract themselves from the essence that is their own doing.

That is not Self-Honesty it is Self-Deception. More concerning is how few Occultists, Satanists and men have ever noticed this particularly silence inducing problem AND tried to fix it. Most of those that have been vocal – have been silenced by force. Were Women for instance, to be paid for their unpaid ‘duty’ of domestic housework, the payment owed would bring down the entire economy of the Western World. Without the compliance of women to perform the free labour system of domestic ‘duty’, child-rearing, etc on which the Western World depends – the illusion of strength and power exhibited by man and their flashy displays of ego within the Matrix, AS the Matrix, would come to naught.

The Baphomet I have presenced is a force of the faceless self-projection of man’s insecurities and neurotic inadequacies and who represents the silent tolerance of billions of women with whom no genuine dialogue has taken place regarding their own essence as a separate people. The face of women has faded from man’s perception – and only the superficial myth of Beauty is in danger of remaining. On such I refer the reader to ‘The Beauty Myth’ by Naomi Wolf. Behind Baphomet stand imperfect women of all shapes and sizes, a countless army of faceless, knife-wielding dark goddesses, rising up – representing a tremendous actual, magical and figurative torrent of one sinister and sickening blood payment. Unbound contains a Nile of frustration and silence exploding forth in a voice that modern and deaf man can understand – a visually explicit and intellectually cognisant cry of violence and exasperation at the grotesque distortion imparted daily by the enormous injustices characteristic of male arrogance.

But all this injustice... all the slavery, low-paid work, unpaid domesticity, child-rearing, horseshit farce about equality and meritocracy, glass ceilings, the legalised cruelty and torture of women and their place in society is, it must be said, to some extent tolerated by women. Not because they enjoy it or because they cannot rise above it but because of their subtle and stronger connection to the Earth, to the Moon, to Life incarnate: and because they let Man have his way on the Surface, have his toys and his fun, while Women run the underground. For a Man to learn how to “Feel In the World” as a woman does, rather than “Think Of the World” as a man is accustomed to do – is arguably an unattainable goal. And yet, it is the greatest Satanic and thus the most heavily buried and forcibly forgotten magical exchange there is – an exchange that would rip the Magian structures down irrevocably and irreversibly.

To re-learn such exchanges – to understand how to listen and hear again (without intellect – that is, to surpass our biological intellectual limitation and be a super-man) and comprehend what lies beneath the shells on which we project our self-image as men thus imprisoning and encapsulating women within our own illusion – is without doubt the greatest Heresy, the most forbidden Taboo – not of the Western World – but of the Eastern too, and for that matter, largely for all Time. The temporal fascination with, once again, the affairs of men in typically male ways/matrixes of warfare and ego to overcome the Self-Hate we feel by rushing toward Oblivion in nihilistic defeat by emulating the symbology of annihilation with bombs, guns and pissing contests is representative only of our blindness, our ignorance, and our lack of courage to understand who WE are, not, just who MEN are. The undeniable empirical evidence for these assertions is in the fact that so few women involve themselves with the Occult in an open, flashy, visible way. Rather, it is with endless understanding behind the scenes that they support, nurture, guide, instruct, admonish, and advise the men who ‘run’ it. To be an effective agent of Chaos – one need only open a genuine dialogue with our mysterious other half.

THE GREATEST HERESY: EQUILIBRIUM

Equilibrium is the restoration of BALANCE, between the sexes, not EQUALITY. Equality is a trick, a trap, a deft lie, the attainment of which only mires the world deeper in the Magian's prison. Imagine a scale that does not move and is weighted the same on both sides. That is an analogy for the concept of Equality. It does not exist.

Change, moves all things. And at any given time, it is counter-weighted. Equilibrium expresses this counterweight. Imagine a scale that moves constantly but when one sides goes up the other goes down as a counter balance. Power and subservience, knowing and not knowing, having the solution and being perplexed; in a position to act or not in a position to act: at various times the different genders are more suitably adept to take the reins and the other at being the counter-weight. If we deny that there is any difference between Men and Women then we believe in the concept of Equality - that men and women have no differences. This enshrined denial of difference is society's way of keeping men and women apart magically - despite 'equality' appearing to be campaigning for the complete opposite. To use a visual analogy - equality is the sense that the scales must be at the same height for there to be equal footing by either sex - i.e. that difference can or has been eradicated and men and women are 'equal'.

Equality, creates an artificial standard that cannot exist and can only be chased after, and is, because people believe Equality is a concept that improves this deterioration in communication and social standing between the sexes. Although men and women are not equal - equality implies a static point of rest, of perfection, a state where no difference exists. This concept of equality applies also to the inner psyche and the masculine and feminine traits of both sexes - which are always in motion growing stronger or weaker against the other via changes of a cycle of motion that is relentless. In short, there is no reason to believe equality is possible since there are no natural instances of it observable - it is a construct, artificial and derived from a misunderstanding of natural forces and influences within both sexes.

In general, men are superior in certain aspects to women and women are superior to men in certain aspects, particularly on the psyche-based, perceptive front, and social front. It seems like only a slight difference, splitting hairs per se, but it is actually a vast reorientation. What equality implies is the loss of motion of change. Or, that changes for either sex move in tandem synchronicity. The scale analogy where both men and women meet on equal footing in either models socially or psychically is flawed - it cannot be attained because it is a romantic carrot on a stick, and to strive after it thinking it can, is to perpetuate a dangerous myth. What it denotes is inertia that nature does not possess, and to believe it does, is to fall prey to illusion that separates the sexes. 'Balance' is a more authentic approximate than Equality.

Balance implies Equilibrium, which does not denote perfectly matching scale weights, inertia or lack of the scale moving, but in moving it maintains an equidistance of the scales arms in motion - meaning sometimes, a woman's strength is more weighty than a man's, but together, they maintain equilibrium - and vice-versa. It means a man may tilt very low down, and elevate a woman up very high, or that for a brief moment they may be side-by-side - and so Equality denotes a loss of movement psychic or socially and an artificial way of viewing Actual forces, whilst Balance denotes continued movement but with men and women equidistant to each other - a see saw - that does not attain inertia. Wherein the arms of the scale may fluctuate wildly up and down on either side, but with each movement up or down, a corresponding movement on the opposite arm is transferred - thus in some instances the feminine intuition of the sinister feminine is far stronger than the mental logic understanding by the masculine thinker.

But both sexes need each other to make sense of each other - just as equilibrium in the psyche comes from a balance of female/male characteristics psychically/alchemically so too does it arise from relationships between men and women that rely on the coupling of providing what each sex needs from the other. Why does the distinction matter?- The human being can generate terrific forces of change, or simultaneously, enforce rigid stagnancy via their understanding of social forces, the program or 23 syndrome that determines how they apply actions to thoughts. The difference between Equality and Equilibrium may seem minor - but words are very powerful, to really pull out of them what they mean, and thus, what they do, is only a minor step toward breaking down the immutable void between men and women by attempting to look more closely at the terminology used - much like trying to understand something by reading an old manual is not as helpful as reading an up to date one.

The fabric of things is held together by many things, among them words and meanings - to go over some words more carefully can be a useful habit to inculcate. A caveat is important here. Am I talking about equality from the perspective of social status and opportunity (such as legal 'rights' or privileges)? And when I say 'equality' am I really saying that the differences between the sexes are important, and resisting the perceived inclination of our society towards androgyny? Yes, to the first bit. No to the second. I am not resisting the inclination toward Androgyny - I am challenging its definition and geometry as a concept, as it exists in many spheres. Androgyny denotes half and half - but anyone with a psyche knows that either the male side dominates, or the female side dominates and that domination on one side, creates equilibrium - not equality. And one of the good reasons men and women gravitate toward one another - to get from another what they cannot get themselves.

Equilibrium - not equality. For example - a couple that argue incessantly, are nasty to each other, may not have equal power - in many cases one sex is more submissive than the other - but there is often wonder why they don't break up, why one allows one to treat the other in such a way - and an answer is equilibrium on the external scale - the relationship may be unhealthy but it satisfies or seems to satisfy their needs. It may be Stockholm syndrome, abuser identification, conditioning, desperation that they go through it over and over - but they stay together despite themselves, bound by other forces that balance each other and keep them doing the dance virtually forever. Many of these relationships also stay together due to desperation and the knowledge that society is very different for women than it is for men. Social and cultural enforcements treat women poorly to begin with but doubly so when it comes to those who leave their men. Domestic abuse is rife in Australia, at least one woman is killed every week, as opposed to the few men that are killed a year. This is a subject that needs a fuller treatment than can be offered here.

Meanwhile internally it is far more likely that their masculine and feminine psychic aspects are not equally aligned either within their own psyche or compared with that of the other- there is imbalance, which comes out in the external relationship. One needs the other more, or they both need each other for different reasons, those reasons may be very sad. But there are four quadrants to an Androgyne magically - not two.

The masculine and feminine internally/ and the masculine and feminine externally. As my colleague, Christopher, who was involved in this discussion turned manuscript rightly assuaged, "the term 'equality' is a socially and politically charged word that can be misconstrued by a casual read of our comments. 'The Greatest Heresy is the restoration of RESPECT between the sexes and their differences, not ASSIMILATION of the opposite.'" If people did indeed, after all this time think that THEM or I were representing traditional and simplistic attitudes on equality in social roles (the outcome of this equilibrium influences but has very little to do with the expected slavery that women endure) and not trying to dig at a far deeper esoteric truth - then they should hardly know us or understand us at all.

Perhaps a 'concrete example': Sometimes the man does not have the capacity mentally to comprehend his own actions/comments, he is temporarily then inferior to a particular woman's understanding (generally his partner) of these actions - in this case the woman patiently explains to the man the missing elements of his psychic content in order that he may make a more informed/rounded decision from a completer perception of all the angles. This is a submission of the man's intellect to the domination of the woman's - in most cases temporary. But here is the thing: men do not like to be thought of as submissive either in stature, or in psychic ability: their egos get in the way; but that is how it is - if we stay away from everything that is an affront to their ego we should hardly bother concerning ourselves with the occult at all. This temporary submission occurs moment by moment in relationships where a set of strengths in man and woman interplay amongst one another, taking turns to dominate - in a mundane fashion this is often boiled down to that overly simplistic phenomena 'who is right' - but that is merely the outward result socially (visibly through certain detrimental dualistic conditioning and lack of exposure to the internal esoteric phenomena that both sides are there to help each other grow as a combined unit.

When, in some units, army soldiers train as cadets, if one falls, others pick him up. So, it is with a relationship - only this symbiosis is rarely recognised by the male, who finds it very hard to admit he is not complete. It is not for nothing that history remarks with consistency on the Logos and the Eros of Man and Woman - or draws parallels between Mars and Venus - but it is NOT a battle. It is not meant to be won by one or the other - and to pit men and women against each other in this way was a stroke of master genius by the Magian matrix and its sorcerers that needs to be broken.

Women are not enemies of men. This utter prevailing nonsense that women are incomprehensible, that guttersnipe comment 'what do women want' - only indicates a severe lack of men's abilities to communicate in any but their own preferred/institutionalised way. Identifying this is half the battle to break a very crucial chain... Another example: When a man and a woman communicate - it can be said that there are two specific transactions going on. There is the communication itself and how it is phrased, that is it is phrased at all, and most importantly that it has some sort of resolution/conclusion.

This, is the man's way of communicating. Through this he is able to apply his intellect, his critical reasoning, take all of the comments and come to some sort of end-point that he needs to make the communication intelligible. Then there is the way women communicate and why, which does not seek a resolution. She knows then, from the very outset, that the man seeks to have the conversation to get something specific out of it - why she wants the conversation is therefore ignored and bulldozed (all too often, women let men have their bottle). This in itself is something very hard for men to understand - because Understanding is their most relied upon faculty, to their detriment, because there is other means beyond Understanding, but unfortunately they remain unrecognised and so men and women remain separated lost in translation - and when a man cannot understand a woman, he gets exasperated and believes her mysterious, hysterical, emotionally unstable or crazed, or unintelligible.

Women express themselves to be heard, they know there is no resolution, they do not seek an end-point, much as they do not seek someone to change their circumstances, just to hear them, recognise them - for women, merely being seen is a difficult task, for most men will see women through the Logos, misunderstanding them entirely. Women are the pack horses of men's deficiencies, only rarely do they point them out to us; the same cannot be said for the reverse. Women are emotional creatures, it is true, but men are the more emotional creature and this is often denied. Yet the proof should anyone go looking for it is there - women are covered up while men bare their breasts in public at will for particular special reasons to do with libido, hypnosis, and weakness. Men are the more fragile of the genders for they have to endure much less of the reality, the pain, the truth that women do, that women have shoved upon them because men are generally too fragile to carry such heavy burdens. Men can work together and share power it is also true, but women are taught to be in competition with one another, to vie for a man's attention and to snarl at any other 'bitch' that gets near.

It is true, too, that women are sweet, alluring, demure, enticing, nurturing and have the potential to possess all the capacities of man but they are also dark, sinister, destructive, malevolent, vicious, cunning at the same time - these qualities do not separate, they co-exist and few can handle them, appreciate them for what they are - hurled along in the maelstrom women are, and all of this and much more, is hidden, "neath the simplistic insulting fabric of the prevailing arguments about feminism or equality which argues things completely irrelevant and avoids getting to the crux of some of the world's greatest deepest issues of its human divide and the intense difficulties that arise from ignorance of them. That is why Equilibrium between the sexes is the Greatest Heresy - because it's simply not talked about, it's talked around, over, beside - no-one wishes to face the terrifying spectre of the Mother.

Equality then, is an artificial construct that applies only to social standards, not to esoteric ones. Equilibrium then, is a naturalistic construct that recognises that social standards are created and influenced by the prevailing perception and apprehension of esoteric ones and too the interplay of many other standards. As should be obvious, Equilibrium has a more esoteric set of mechanisms than the mere social outcomes that result from them - pending who holds (or IF they hold) and how they hold and Comprehend these esoteric truths. The questions of should women get equal pay (yes), should women stay at home (their choice) can women be physically as strong as men (yes), should women be able to choose abortion (yes) are to argue results from a cause - the cause is seldom looked at, because of the difficulties fraught between the two styles of how men and women communicate. For the most part, men, can only communicate as men. Women on the other hand, are usually gifted with the ability to do both, communicating through either channel. That men have not learned how to communicate as women do is in my opinion the majority of reason men go looking for gods, demons, baphomets - when such things are right beside them if they only know how to ask, look and hear the answer - and, what they are looking for. If it is too hard to stare in the face of, you've found it. I realise the volatility of the subject may bend some egos out of shape. If those bent could get past that inherent fragility, they could open up a marvellous power.

PHANTOM QUIZZICS: A MODERN ANATOMY OF THE BRAIN

Genesis Understanding the brain is complicated. Phantom Quizzics builds on our work with Radia Sol and the Ontology of THEM to provide an analogous model by which to approach it. The brain is organised into three tiers; a lower tier made up by the Brain Stem and Cerebellum, a middle tier containing the Thalamus, Basal Ganglia and many components of the Limbic system and an upper tier comprised by the Cortex. The Brain Stem regulates arousal, Autonomic function and internal states. The cell bodies for the key Neurotransmitters that regulate behaviour are found in the upper Brain Stem. The central core modulates emotion and memory and helps control speed of movement and rate of thinking. The upper tier carries out higher level sensory processing and motor control, complex thought, and memory storage. An emerging discipline of science that combines information from all the major branches studying the brain is Social Neuro-Science (SNS).

A combination of social psychology, cognitive psychology and neuroscience, this hybrid science, just a decade old, is illuminating secrets of the physiology and human psyche like never before – leaving Jung and Freud's theories nowhere to hide. This radical breakthrough is so large a departure from the theories of the past which relied on a lot of speculation, and not the observation of oxygenation in the brain allowing specific activities to be isolated to respective parts of the brain - it has called for a division between the old unconscious and what is now being termed the 'New Unconscious'.

In 2001 the first ever symposium on SNS was held. Synchronously enough at about the same time this author was rapidly travelling down a tangent path of militant occultism it was spreading its wings unbeknownst to me. SNS embodies what the former path never could – illumination, evolution, inspiration, and keys to truly unmask THEM and the genuine powers and pressures of Phorce and Phorm. Since SNS will be a future cornerstone of THEM's interest – it is necessary to introduce the reader to SNS and to provide what THEM has already begun to develop in the way of an analogous short-hand map.

Firstly let us assert what is being studied here and the realm in which it takes place. The focus is on creating a map that shows the relationship between different areas that compose the brain inside each human skull and the relationship between each human brain to another. The analogy we have chosen to use lends itself to a good approximate of the brain's activity: for as above, so below. Let's detail the landscape.

The Theph

Let us imagine that the Brain is akin to a city much like our own. The two hemispheres are skyscrapers, each as tall as the other but catering to different businesses. These two scrapers are immense and heavily populated. But they each support the other and the needs and economy of the inhabitants inside them - those myriad other aspects of brain function. In actuality the brain is a thriving dimension of equal complexity to our own cities - each part needs another to complete processes. Artistically then we reconcile the analogy by having the scrapers circle back on themselves to form closed rings and a gigantic city in miniature. As the main physical hub and continuing with the idea of the brain as being a heavily populated city that produces exports of all kinds: we liken it to a Factory, or The Phactory (shortened to Theph) (Artificial terms are used to remind that this is merely a model, not a precision diagram). So, we have two donuts with a slight space between them. To appreciate by analogy many unknown and uncertain factors of its composition, function and make-up we give the donuts a twist to show the difficulty in determining where one scraper starts and another ends. So, we visually join the two rings as an impossible object, similar to a mobius strip - blurring distinct geometry and indicating that a greater clarity is yet to emerge.

So now the hemispheres are co-joined to resemble the hub of a city. Let us give analogue to more detailed activity. Secondly, we add a populace to inhabit the skyscrapers of Theph from larger sectors representing companies, departments and offices, to finer details within those sectors representing bosses, employees, janitors. These are not people, or individuals, so we will call them Psytizens. (Citizens). Throughout Theph, the daily, hourly and even momentary activity of these tenants – these psytizens – (for they are not human, and we are best to abandon 'tenant' in favour of a new term to avoid confusion of metaphor with apparent reality) have profound implications for the Theph.

Let us add the presence of a populace by mentally etching the placement of millions of windows and doors on the sides of the mobius-like entwined scrapers. These apartments and offices we populate with 'tenants' – each one as individual as any of the seven billion human tenants on earth, or the 100 billion brain cells of the brain, with as many or more idiosyncrasies and/or apt similarities to the vastly diverse. Now we add further complexity to represent the neural pathways and electrical currents by passages. Some apartments are connected by terraces or externally/internally by hallways and staircases. Some windows share the same verandah, some tenants share their apartments with others. Some tenants live with family or know others who live in areas far from their own as other members of their family, neighbours, partners – even across town. Some tenants receive regular visitors, some are too busy or too dangerous to be visited often or at all.

Stairs, ramps, alleys and byways, overpasses and bridges stagger the physiscape of Theph – many are heavily used on a daily basis by the throngs of tenants, others, seldom or never used have fallen into ruin, they lead off into dark space illuminated by the sole lantern of a disconnected ganglion. The renovation or building project once begun in earnest lays abandoned, synapses protruding like live wires from half-built structures unlikely to ever be completed. Some are works in progress, and only left momentarily in limbo before being shaped into yet another architectural marvel of Theph. There are temples, churches, universities, libraries, museums, markets, law chambers, courts, prisons, schools, art halls, observatories, memorials, factories and a wealth of other equivalencies. Psytizens have ranging employment in Theph just as we do. There are the 'good jobs' like experiencing dopamine ranging to 'unpleasant jobs' like telling the ego, no. But there is no morality we know of - the Psytizens might like or dislike their job but who knows if they do or if there are rewards beyond survival for doing it well. Jobs include but are in no way limited to Maintenance, Finance, Economy, Archives, Administration, Security, Hit men, Thugs and Prostitutes.

Whatever new knowledge we gain of the world of SNS, we may transpose an appropriate function to a human equivalent to easily and adequately express it. Certain areas of the brain are presented as whole companies, such as the Anterior Cingulate Cortex – a brain structure which is involved in the emotional component of physical pain and which neuroscience has proven is the same structure associated with social pain - might be floor 42 in scraper A, or the downtown park, or a shopping centre. The Dorsal Striatum – responsible for mediating unconscious bias of similar traits - might be one of the underground car parks.

These are just examples of how certain departments have analogy with the city metaphor. For by using our over-developed human-centric perspective we can with ease stow the intricate complexities of the neural scape into tenants of a city with jobs to represent the huge array of activities of the brain. To indicate the ceaseless activity of the brain we infer a thriving night-life every bit as complex as the day life. To emphasise the complexity of this activity cell to cell we infer social order and disorder at odds, the needs of the subconscious and higher conscious pitted in conflict as in human religious/political factions in society. The care of the Theph is paramount to some. Some tenants/forces for instance conspire to use the nuclear power of the Theph to power us for good, to harvest resources, attain knowledge, assist in construction or repair of spaces – other tenants seek only to use the mammoth powers of the Theph to burn it to the ground, lay waste to their world and even lay waste to other worlds.

In developed areas, Psytizens enjoy a near instantaneous postal service which helps support the economy of information and allows supra-communication, though from time to time, bad weather, poorly developed infrastructure or even muggings prevents the postal service from timely relays. Again, deriving similarity from human society - the tenants are socially diverse, living in a multitude of locales of respective wealth or poverty. There are rich and poor areas, domestic, commercial & industrial sectors, pleasant street blocks and nightmarish ones. Some tenants pay their electricity bills (electrical functions used frequently during processing) and are in good supply leading to repetitious factories of thought, idea, activity – others are destitute and live in or on the edges of crumbling ruins. Others still are ghost-towns, devoid of living tenants with smashed panes or windows tightly nailed shut and whose denizens are shunned or feared. Still others are completely insane, criminal and dangerous and have been locked away in minimum and maximum security prisons and asylums.

Despite best efforts, breakouts are regular and police and the Censor must patrol daily. So now that we have mentally built one Theph, we can look at each brain in each human skull as a Theph, and each skull as a planet that holds the city amid a vast space of billions of planets (Theph) collectively known as the Dyph. As human beings pass into proximity with one another, so does their Theph come into contact with that of others with regularity or irregularity, allowing interplanetary visitation between tenants of different worlds. This orbital nature of humans passing into and out of physical proximity is what we have termed Phantom Quizzics, a play on Quantum Physics.

It is difficult to speak of the brain, of electricity, of anything in a singular vacuum, since physical implies a constant and objective phenomena -when the time in which we live has been shaken to its foundations by relativity. Though invisible for a long time, we have built machines that allow us to see these Psytizens at work, and with such fine detail we can even read some of their mail or build a database of who knows who. There are however billions of tenants and knowing what each of them do for a living, their social structure, their relationships and a reliable phone book are years away. It is difficult to gain access to the deep underground and sewers, high-rise apartments, locked and special archives, cemeteries or the dead-psy – places of ruin where psychaeology has yet to unearth the electro-history of each Theph or places too dangerous to visit, where sealed tombs with frightening symbols engraved on their mantle lay behind fierce protection barriers, buried to protect other tenants or banished for the well-being of Theph.

There exists many thousands of Temples of worship, religiously attended by the Psytizens in various degrees, some with throngs of followers and others with a lone worshipper still holding a candle for some long lost idol or overthrown ideal. New temples and gods are discovered daily with inspired religious fervour and devotion as regular therein as herein (on earth). On occasion, some Phorm of zealotry becomes common religion and throngs of worshippers send their favoured idols to the Ivory Tower; a tall thin tower with no room at the top except for one idol at a time, before which lies a mighty winding staircase that is of such grand length that information is often slow to reach the tower with news of the psycity below. This resistance to change the system, is reflected in the stubbornness of individuals to alter their perspective, and is suitably represented as an Ivory Tower.

ELECTROHISTORY (THE LIMBIC)

As in the world we know with its own dimension of Time, so too does the Theph have its own. Its "Electro-history" spans millions of years. With deep impressions left by the equivalent of dinosaurs marching across its landscapes. Move forward to a time when it was populated with inhabitants within a giant city and it is a history with old families and syndicates, enforced by underworld gangsters, wealthy and elite landowners, respected across Theph and with frequency, beyond the Dyph. These are Psytizens who have lived in an area for generations (with 90 years being an approximate length before expiry) but the sub-history of which, shares a collective evolution over millions of years, while the electro-history is far more recent, (spanning approx 75 years per person). This history, not unlike our own is populated with grand architects, developers, councils who plan and give permission for grants, land, new construction and oversee it. No doubt the brain has its own version of the Pyramids by metaphor.

Architecture of the Theph suffers from the same pitfalls as modern day ones; it may be built quickly and suffer from internal weakness of structure or faulty wiring, they may be sited wrong, the workmen may be shoddy and leave much to chance to cut corners, they may be torn down or collapse of their own accord. New buildings may also be paragons – a stunning architectural showcase. The majority of these tenants belong to old families who keep to themselves, who seldom reveal themselves to us but are known throughout Theph by some of its Psytizens as the equivalent of the Illuminati. The oldest derive from the Reptilian limbic system. They oversee military applications and basic functions, eating, breathing, heart rate, sympathetic nervous system and parasympathetic nervous systems, endocrine, neuromuscular, organs and all key functions of the human organism. The Limbic system includes a ring of structures such as the Ventromedial prefrontal cortex, dorsal anterior cingulate cortex, amygdala, hippocampus, hypothalamus, components of the basal ganglia and sometimes the orbitofrontal complex.

As complex as it is, the Theph forms only one allegorical analogue of THEM's Ontology. It is only one part of a more complex model that details the relationships of Psyche to Phorm, Form and Force and is represented by the symbol of the Thrasz, the spiralling eye of THEM. Now that the concept of the Theph and Dyph are outlined the model in which it sits, viz. the Aueureka-Nequeo ('I have the Impossible') can be elaborated on.

MAGIC, GOD, THEM AND THE PI SYNDROME

The Decline of the West (German: Der Untergang des Abendlandes), or the Downfall of the Occident, is a two-volume work by Oswald Spengler, the first volume of which was published in the summer of 1918. Spengler revised this volume in 1922 and published the second volume, subtitled Perspectives of World History, in 1923. The book introduces itself as a "Copernican overturning" operating as a paradigm shift involving the rejection of the Eurocentric view of history, especially the division of history into the linear "ancient-medieval-modern" rubric. According to Spengler, the meaningful units for history are not epochs but whole cultures which evolve as organisms. He recognises eight high cultures: Babylonian, Egyptian, Chinese, Indian, Mexican (Mayan/Aztec), Classical (Greek/Roman), Arabian, and Western or "European-American."

Cultures have a lifespan of about a thousand years. The final stage of each culture is, in his word use, a 'civilisation'. Spengler also presents the idea of Muslims, Jews and Christians, as well as their Persian and Semitic forebears, being Magian; Mediterranean cultures of the antiquity such as Ancient Greece and Rome being Apollonian; and the modern Westerners being Faustian. According to Spengler, the Western world is ending and we are witnessing the last season — "winter time" — of the Faustian civilisation. In Spengler's depiction, Western Man is a proud but tragic figure because, while he strives and creates, he secretly knows the actual goal will never be reached. From Spengler we gain a cyclical understanding of birth, life, decay and death that moves beyond the confines of the personal/human cycle and into the cycles of larger life-forms viz a viz the cities and civilisations that we ourselves have formed en masse by our activities. Just as cells, microbes and organs live an existence that is to us alien yet intrinsically symbiotic and/or simultaneous to our own, their union forms, occupies and co-exists with our human organism.

Humans in turn form the cells, organs, blood and muscles of a higher type of organisation viz. cities. Cities form the cells, organs and muscles etc. that evolve into the highest or final form of organisation via a civilisation; an eventuation that for Spengler was classically linear (ancient-medieval-modern) and an instrumental/purposeful occurrence that is a zenith of human achievement that gives rise to a different (evolved) consciousness. Each mode of form has its own life-span and each life-form is made up of and makes up, others. A microbe may live twenty-four hours but may contribute to and make possible the organisational structure of a human being. A human being may live seventy years but contributes to and makes possible through density of population a city, which may exist for hundreds or thousands of years.

The passage of Time is different for each of the life-forms mentioned and when we get up toward the Civilisation stage of life-form that may reign for Aeons we are talking about the passage of time in terms of Aeonics. Precisely how long an Aeon is and what defines the start, middle and end of one, has no easy answer. Occultists continue to debate the subject with numerous schools of thought available variously describing the life cycle, behaviour, identity and duration of Aeons.

The Precession of the Equinox is one such description whereby the Earth's wobble causes the location of the Pole Star to shift every 2,300 years or so and the Sun to move into the house of a new sign of the Zodiac. Thereby each sign denotes a specific level of consciousness or mode of being called an Age that characterises the Aeon over the course of 2,300 years; with the current Age being disputed as belonging variously to the Age of Aquarius, or Pisces. Any close examination of the concept of Time from an archaeological perspective reveals that there exists grave disagreement over this fundamental progression with numerous Chronological models suggested by which to accurately date historic events, so for several reasons any type of Aeonics, (and further, its entanglement with a conception of a non-causal dimension) rests on very unstable footing as a precise science or credible/useful mode of apprehension.

A particular cynicism idiosyncratic of the Temple of THEM is that views of History by virtue of being based on History are unfortunately shaped by the evidence available. It is almost certain that as well as the Steel, Iron and Stone Ages there was a Wood Age of which no remnants survive. Archaeology discusses surviving wooden artefacts and structures within the Iron Age but is strangely silent on the possibility that prior to Iron there prevailed a masterful epoch that utilised wood. There is almost certainly, embedded in rock deep beneath the ocean's surface, vestiges of other cultures and civilisations that perhaps someday during the next Ice Age when the sea levels once again drop hundreds of feet as the oceans are locked in ice, may reveal themselves and their horrors or marvels to those humanoid eyes still living.

A bitter shame we shall not bear witness to such prophecies. Sadly, History is an artificial assembly often relied on as fact or evidence, that, without all the necessary pieces, struggles to fit the pieces it has where it can. It is almost certain too, that despite the evidence in existence found buried across the globe in presently raised landmasses, those that have long sunk beneath the waves took with them many traces of empires and edifices that long predate our recorded history. In the shallow depths of bays and harbours such glimpses of forgotten relics hidden beneath even a few tens of feet of water occasionally surface, reminding us that much has been swallowed by the rising seas - and as time progresses will continue to be - until such low-lying cities and their cultures as presently exist now, are lapped at and eventually drowned beneath the waves, relegated as generations pass to myth and finally forgotten like the rest of the Abyssal.

It has been argued that cities cannot be alive to which the reply has been that they perform all of the major functions that human beings do that defines a living thing, including breathing, excreting, and growing as well as being composed of living cells (humans). Another argument that cities are alive is that they are composed of material that while seemingly inert from our human-sized perspective, is a seething invisible dimension of other living creatures. Concrete for instance is subject to bio deterioration by micro-organisms that live inside it and specialist industries tackle bio fouling, the build-up of organisms on surfaces that cause detrimental effects. What then of water, petrol or wood? But this argument amounts to little more than saying a city has a slimy overcoat. Certainly cities are filled with other lifeforms besides our own, and one might even say that the increased complexity afforded by the accumulation of human beings in a given locale also gives rise to forces that operate at a greater complexity than humans do in isolation such as economics, logistics, resource management, market forces, crime and quickly take on a life of their own that is very difficult to predict and affects human beings from top-down.

These forces become separate from the control of any individual but are given shape by rational and irrational forces, which potentially behave the way they do in a style that seems chaotic via its own laws with complex rules and repercussions. Certainly, one could put forward the statement that cities are a more complex arrangement of living beings. But is to equate a city as being alive a biased reliance on human-centred perspectives and vantages and project what is important and relevant to our organism onto it as if it were a singular entity with identity? Is it Romanticism to suggest a city has a pulse, a heartbeat, a personality or sentience? Or is it recognition of a more evolved and complex life form? Is it perhaps just simple anthropomorphism? The God Projection that we throw onto dolls, pets, cars, corporations and inert icons? Must everything be equated to humans? Must everything in some way resemble us and become an extension of our self-importance?

For us, the Phyrn denotes that which manifests in degrees of resistance and substance, beyond the two pseals. But there are no neat divisions where one thing ends and another begins except for those appearances afforded by a given vantage. It is impossible to disentangle the 'e' from the 'E' except for convenience. The influence of Psy cannot be eliminated to distil an equation. From our personal optical vantage the world appears beset by entirely unique forms and forces, but further in we are but cells and bacteria, water and electricity - and from further out, microbes on a ball among billions of balls. Only from our vantage do we retain the identity and appearance we so characterise as distinctive of human beings and given that we are incapable of viewing the world from other vantages as often as we are the personal optical one, we naturally tend to cement a belief in human superiority and self-importance.

In previous essays THEM have written about the A-causal, a term coined by Carl Jung in his work 'Synchronicity' and expanded upon by later voices. In those essays were sentiments that likened the Acausal to the Sea; and suggested similar properties of flow, ebb, and tide that penetrate our own causal dimension as though flowing through holes from that dimension into this one per the rents to other dimensions (ripped in the sky) made famous by Lovecraft, slowly filling up our dimension with a stream of other-dimensional energies. According to some, such energies presence themselves through human beings as an increase of individual consciousness and/or a rise of collective consciousness. Furthermore, is the belief, that each of us acts like a socket between the two dimensions through which these other dimensional energies flow. The premise being that if these isolated sockets were to be somehow plugged into one another creating a circuit for the energies rather than just lone pin-points – then the foundation is set for an expansion from the individual to a group, the group to a city, city to a culture and culture to a civilisation. As the human sockets - individually discrete in their own dimension but singularly united by virtue of the fact they are powered by the mother intrusion in this Other dimension come together to create a circuit, they so-called 'presence' this Other dimension.

Accordingly, the more of this energy flowing into a given individual or any other level of form (group, city, culture) the higher the chance of it evolving into a Civilisation. While this concept is acceptable as a model in its own right, it supposes a number of factors that run counter to our particular understanding and is fraught with problems of the self-importance of human centred perspective. To believe there is a special 'pool' set aside, the purpose of which is to help human beings attain anything, let alone assist them in burrowing into the earth and being responsible for its grand follies over the course of a thousand years is the equivalent of believing God exists so you can pray to him to help you tie your shoes, win the lottery or whatever other petty personal goal you desire to attain that day. Whether that God be encapsulated as an entire other dimension, a race of alien super-beings, a single intelligent creator or a carpenter makes no difference when how that God is utilised is identical irrespective of its form.

If the A-causal exists it is because we need a new superstition to stroke our egos, once again deluded that the powers of the Phyrn (forces of THEM) have nothing better to do than look after us. The inherent predilection of human beings is to create or accept and then project outward mammoth omnipotent entities that occupy some divine hierarchy well beyond the human order, and then arrogantly enslave them and push them about using all manner of arcane methodologies including prayer, incantations, sympathy and faith. 'God favours me' they say, or 'Jesus made it so', 'Mohamed is kind because it did not rain' and other trite self-serving aggrandizements that indicate a belief that such powerful entities have no better purpose or role, for all their power and wisdom, than to ensure some human being finds a five dollar note, gets a meal, or successfully harvests some carrots. The same criticism applies equally to Satan-ism & Satan-ists.

What is most objectionable about religion, above all the squabbling, mindless bloodshed, cruelty, stupidity, arrogance, stink of human weakness; is this fervent belief that God (by any other name) is a slave to petty personal whims and has a vested interest in seeing these whims realised. The same objectionability applies to the persistent vogue of 'summoning' various demons or deities to tell them what to do and demand favours and presents from them - a practice that is highly popular even among those who claim to reject God. Yet what is it that all Gods, have in common?

Their existence is to serve humanity or in some absurd cases, an individual human. So, if Gods exist to serve this purpose, and we see that Gods are apparently particularly fond of looking after, watching over, being there for, humans. What many in fact reject, is ever only a particular 'shape' of God from a very wide selection - they do not reject the concept of God. Some reject the concept of God as a Creator in Heaven in favour of some other shape, whatever it might be, however they might paint it - but every human however, utilises their own shape of God in an identical fashion. Wherein that shape exists only to serve, prop up or aid the human being that believes in it. If a shape does not aid a given human being, it has no utility, no use, and is spurned, burned, hated, forgotten or replaced.

Imagine a God that did nothing but exist. Who did not listen to prayers or answer the pleading whine of human beings on their knees or in synagogues or mosques, that had no interest whatsoever in the human race but existed among it as an array of powerful forces that only incidentally and never with deliberation, affected us. You have just imagined, THEM. An unfortunate side-effect of our Temple being a Temple is that in having a symbol, a mission statement, aims, a lexicon, imagery, texts, an ideology we run the risk of being transformed into a religion. For all of these icons if you like, are what are required for a human to build a ladder to God. The paradox being only by providing these icons can humans be spoken to. The struggle then, is to speak to them without inadvertently giving rise to the means where another shape for God is created that merely replaces their existing one. It is far more difficult to escape the lure of an Apex, of monotheism, of believing in God, than most believe and unfortunately this does not look set to change any time soon. Humans are religious creatures in act despite the intellectual insistence they have long left it behind.

Insofar as it is observable, the forces of THEM have no interest whatsoever in the preservation or assistance of the human race. Neither to appear to each of us to exhibit themselves and prove their existence (however much we exhort, plead, whine, demand and by whatever means we think we can bring them forth!) nor to help us achieve a single thing important to us at the low scale of answering our prayers or the high scale of building empires and ruling over one another with bloody sticks and blind religion. The forces we name Death, Time, Gravity, Progression, Entropy - no human has ever escaped these forces or their inhuman march - at best we have made use of them in an entirely human-centric vantage to structure our aims and ideologies.

But lo, let us not make yet another God out of prostrating ourselves yet again before some giant phallus and make ourselves feel good and worshipful from a holy acknowledgement of our insignificance! Such a sharp razor on which we have to walk... What the concept of the Acausal equates to is the same faith-based projection outwards that something cares about us or directly exists for our benefit - that is to say, God. The desire too, to build monuments about us that explain the enormity of life and stave off the utter chaos in which we cannot live as rational logical beings, is a product of understanding collective curiosity, fear and survival. But each to their games. The 23 Syndrome was a discovery that allowed us to understand that if we were able to consciously re-orient the lens through which we saw the world, our interpretations and thus perceptions would shift significantly and allow us to believe whatever we needed to believe. As life for us consists of navigating through seas of form this shift is often forced upon us, or through neglect, ignorance or coercion by ideation consumes us - or, more rarely, arises of its own volition as 1 See "Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Geometry" Vol. I, page 56 originality, genius or madness.

The mind is a fragile container and finds it easiest to gravitate toward God or an Apex of sorts that simplifies the complexity of life's forms through reliance on a single lens. The brain does not seem overly capable or amenable of altering this singularity to accept and function with a multiplicity of lens. But perhaps this is through atrophy and the sovereignty of the Ego and it is or can slowly learn. Jung made the philosophical argument that such a force as the A-causal could only be presumed operating by the fact that while it could not be shown to exist it stood to reason there was some force operant behind Synchronicity. Others followed suit. There are some people who dismiss Synchronicity as mere coincidence. They use the word coincidence pejoratively to imply that the connection drawn between two events is absurd. Yet the word coincidence, means co-incidence, 'co' meaning to share the same time and/or space, and 'incidence' the phenomena of two simultaneous events. Saying synchronistic events are just a coincidence then, denotes only uninformed and unintentional agreement.

A Tradition the Temple of THEM has inherited relates that Mages of old had found a correlation between keeping their word to the Gods, and the gods keeping theirs. That is to say, that if the Mages' actions were rightly aligned with the will of the gods, there would appear synchronous portents which are today called coincidences. It would happen that fortuitous circumstances of extremely good (or ill) luck would manifest for the Mages that helped them reach their goals on earth; so long as they did not break their word to the Gods, the gods would continue to help them in mysterious ways.

This seems to be the fundamental law of “Wyrd”: the idea being that some of us have a destiny to convey the wishes of some Other via our life and in being an envoy of such greater powers, are granted our desires, goals, and the necessary outlets for that Others expression. How we distinguish what are Others wishes and what our are own is a matter for philosophers. Magic is rooted somewhere between the realm of the irrational and the realm of the logical - at some point, different for all, we have to jump off into the absurd and be okay with it, for magic to work. We are required to suspend belief and doubt and trust in some other force by mysterious means to achieve our will. One mode of thought by THEM that views the Phyrn as malleable Black Clay suggests that it doesn't matter if you use an old shoe to base your cosmology on if it gives you the results you need - while another mode of thought by THEM asks: is life about getting the results you desire? Or even, is life about getting results?

Many people seek only to get results and pore over occult tomes (and not just occultists, but people in general) seeking methods and looking for shortcuts and promises from others to give them what they want. They do not ask whether they should, whether results should be the goal, or whether they are entitled to them - for that is the realm of the monk not the monkey. This evidential autonomous belief of self-entitlement is the root of all human conflict. For all my logical thinking and ordering of things neatly I have at times had to perform “leaps of faith” and shut off the sceptical thinking part of me. During the Ordeal of the Nine Moons I entered my temple space and asked a 'Dark God' to aid me in finding a partner to join me on my path. I informed this entity that I would withhold what she wanted most until my request was met. I should add here that it seems rather pompous and downright silly to be making demands of Dark Gods, I suppose that in working with ancient practices created during a time of different consciousness it seems strange to the level of consciousness that now attempts to invoke them to be doing so. But to do so one must play the role of the magician, and part of that role is a mastery or triumph of demons within and without. In the early stages of Satanism, it seems by necessity to garner insight by elimination, and almost archetypically inevitable that a magician must be arrogant, self-assured, believe in magic and make demands of greater powers.

So, what did the Dark God I made a promise to, want most? According to my guide, she wanted my ejaculation. The sexual energies created by an orgasmic release are those most crucial for Dark Gods to manifest. Why? Because they represent power and life and the means to separate from the Web of Wyrd that ties all human beings into a destiny of death and being merged once again with the Cosmos - and by giving up my sexual energy I was relinquishing my right to an independent existence from that web of Wyrð as an autonomous Sorcerer beyond space and time. One might say, I would remain food for the Dark Gods. By keeping my seed to myself and performing the necessary libations I went through considerable torment that one day gave way to a strange sharp peace. I felt that sexual urges, impulses and projections had ceased to motivate me and my perception gave way to a world that was previously concealed behind the hazy veils of sexual tension. With no projections of my fantasies, needs, desires onto others – I could for the first time see people clearly without the rosy haze of sexual/emotional transactions getting in the way, and in a raw light that caused a profound esoteric change in my understanding of my being.

There is a similar exercise from the Vamachara wherein for a considerable time the student imagines all humans beings as skeletons, wherein we are all the same underneath, there is no sexuality, lust or prejudice against a skeleton upon which we cannot project our unconscious biases that details of the flesh and gender incite. Whilst withholding my seed from the dark goddess, I entered the temple regularly to re-state my vow. The Ritual was supposed to last nine months, but within two, I had met three women suitable for partnership. My sacrifice had given me the results I wanted and by keeping my word, the Gods had kept theirs. The woman whom I chose, “Bron Wrgan” led me through a relationship that broke a level of my naivety as she was to prove mad and allow me to see that such madness lay under the surface of most but in some was of an entirely different ilk. I felt that Bron Wrgan had taught me a greater lesson in self-reliance and that I should abandon looking for a priestess.

However, Bron was a twist in the road to Wyrð. Patterns knitted together that continued to synchronise the appearance of a great woman to be my partner. I later joined paths with my present partner through an intense magnetic attraction with great swathes of synchronistic events. How did this come about? Coincidence? Positive thinking? Will Power? Dark God intervention? A little of each? It’s not easy to pin down. That I believed that I was able to make such a transaction, that there were powers out there capable of granting my desire, that this method would work if only I gave it devotion, that I was entitled to invoke these powers to grant me a partner, were magical threads of which any single one would be very difficult to justify. There was rather, fervent faith, intent to believe, willingness to suspend logic and doubt, and re-interpret reality involved, and so I implored my will to rearrange events, meanings and symbols to show me the reality I wanted to see.

And, if results are what are desired, then adopting such methods is a valid way to achieve them. Wherein, due to the lens distortion, even events that may have nothing to do with favourable alignment, can be seen as such and the Sorcerer believes their goals aided by the forces they believe in. If the result is the same, whether an actual change afforded through such forces was coerced or random events were taken as signs of forces aiding the goal and thus the Sorcerer is deluded (and ability to discern the two is existentially questionable) makes absolutely no difference to the Sorcerer.

What others perceive of the events claiming such methods are madness or impossible also has no bearing on the alignment created by the Sorcerer so long as the Sorcerer remains convinced of an altered reality, so will they live it. Magic is in effect pejoratively a self-induced psychosis or an art form reducible to the Crowley-esque phrase 'Shape under Will and Will over Shape'. If you sustain a magical paradigm by yourself it can be difficult to block out those who would seek to return you to logical dismissal of your ability to perform such feats. But, if you are surrounded by those who constantly affirm your ability to say, speak with angels or the dead, convey the messages or love (or wrath) of a God, then it is much easier to sustain a self-induced psychosis or act of magic longer, deeper and without doubt with group support that feeds the magical egregore.

This practice is an expansion of the individual 23 Syndrome into a collective Syndrome known as the Pi Syndrome after the indefinite string of numbers attached to Pi that occur beyond the constant 3.14. And Pi Syndrome is the successful method at the heart of organised and disorganised religion (one million people can't be wrong...). The idea that we can somehow snatch hold of some invisible currents in the earth or floating about in the air and transform things into other things, or that we can tap into a world of sympathetic demons and through laborious incantations and spells have it change an event or help/harm a person seems an ancient belief, but it has never really become an antique – it has been in constant use at least since Sumer and is still in full swing now as writers and artists use words and images and struggle to expound, or as physicists search for the latest theory to explain everything, tinker with stem-cell and biotechnology research and decipher and alter the human genetic code. Magic, is universal. But God is a scourge that will not die and is far from dead.

CORRESPONDENCE AND INTERVIEWS

Interview: Fall of Man

I. Could you please introduce yourself, for those who haven't heard of you or the Temple of THEM? How long have you been active as a LHP practitioner?

+O+ Sure. I'm an anonymous writer who goes by the name Ryan Anschauung. I'm male, 32 years old and Australian. I'm best known for my writing, my artwork and my long-time interest, research and involvement with the ONA. The Temple of THEM is a group I co-founded as a means of; Codifying and collecting individual strains of non-dualistic Sinister and Left-Hand Path practices and sorcery; A means to delving deeper into my fascination with the geometry of forms and exploring the meta-science of all things; Understanding forces and magical energies as they are without the stigma of protective charms and circles; Enacting changes/transformations on an individual, group and collective level via magical manipulation of forms through the vehicle of a living mythos; Performing black magical rituals and sorceries within a group setting; Returning focus and context on the consciousness as just one of many operant aspects within the human psyche in an effort to balance the ego; Returning focus and context on the nature of humanities inherent weaknesses; Recalling the origin of human ethos and the reason its architecture is the way it is through analysis of esoteric clues imprisoned in the visible behaviour of humanity – and many more objectives besides. I have been an LHP practitioner since I was twelve years old when an extraordinary altercation with some of the forces variously described by religion and the occult, set me on the path of Satanism. Now 32, I am of the view there is no hand and no path and words are no match for the unerring and near infinite calculations of the mind made in silence that words only complicate. +O+

II. What and who are your main influences, both as a practitioner and as a writer?

+O+ All of the members of the Temple of THEM. My Mother – a wonderful person with extraordinary intelligence, perseverance and marked insight into many worldly things and particularly into people. She has influenced me and my bearing more than any other person – and supported my work, my ambition and believed in me way back when my writings were just chicken scratchings. My partner, Owy, also a member of THEM, deserves separate special mention for her unerring ability to make me think things through incisively and thoroughly and who taught me the values of emotion in lieu of an over-reliance on intellect – and yet also how to be more ruthless and more loving. Sath, sorceress of the Temple of THEM and longtime mentor who opened my eyes to a great deal of raw forces within nature, the rich lore and mythos of many strains of sorcery and many secrets of magic. To all these women I am indebted. My Brother – one of the very few men to gain my praise and respect and influence me with his bearing, maturity and attitude to life. Anton Long, Richard Moulton and Carl Jung in equal measure. Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland, Norton Juster's Phantom Tollbooth, and the stories of Roald Dahl and Terry Pratchett's Discworld had profound influence over me. Nietzsche, Aristotle and H. P. Lovecraft all offered me tremendous insight also. However, in terms of 'practition' it is fair to say that everyone and everything has had some influence over my direction holistically. I remain acutely sensitive to the synchronicity that speaks through the green language of the world, empathic and connected to THEM and the forces I have learned to appreciate operant in the world, sceptical of my own self and wary of the world's architecture. I never tire of the new in my effort to unearth the old. +O+

III. Your occult texts seem to have a strong influence from Psychology and Philosophy; do you consider magic to be solely an expression of our inner power and capability, or do you think there are active, external (supernatural, divine, etc.) forces affecting it and controlling it?

+O+ Of everyone I have ever read views from – Carl Jung has perhaps the most precious, the most honest and the most perfect resonance with what I have come to feel my reason for life is based around. In many ways – precisely because the processes with which Jung deals are so nebulous and difficult to grasp – indeed beyond grasp – it is natural to rely on philosophy to struggle toward the concrete absolutism the conscious mind demands to make sense of the sublime. In regard to magic, like any other form I view it as infinitely tiered – there are no contradictions in it being both and more, none and less – for as different as they appear in their endless external geometry – all forms arise from the same place: the human imagination. Magic then, is solely endless things and solely numerous things as and when we each decide or it is decided for us – simultaneous and discrete in equal measure. All of the best secrets are hidden in places we cannot yet go – and I think Jung's which depth enough to devote my life to seeking to know if bridging the gap within can be achieved – for nothing has driven me forward more nor revealed more magic and incisive revelations of genius than the archetypal messages of my dreams and seeking to commune with my own mind – which lights the passage into the dark of the collective and the primal nexus that drives us by some unknown unknowable means and method. Only by catching sight of it in stolen glimpses through conscious reflection on the geometry of my conscious mind, through mistakes, hubris, slips of the tongue, sabotage, over-compensation, archetypal manifestations, dreams and so on – and through the invaluable research of Jung that enables me the possibility to recognise the signs of the psyche I experience or observe and a map as to how they relate to one another – have I approached any sort of comprehension of my total psyche or at least create a more receptive environment to listen, be informed, by more than just my conscious ego. In regard to supernatural or divine forces controlling magic or even us – I cannot deny my experiences contain visitations from Something(s) that shook me enough to leave me permanently unsure. And yet I no longer speak with them, as if they were meant for a time after death far from now and a world away. In watching yet another weed surface in my garden, its little seedling possessed of the same chthonic unstoppable life-force that brings nations to its knees when that force spreads its wings in a holocaust of humanity – I am humbled by the secret of its unparalleled destructive power and authentic sinister beauty and Mystified. To get closer to this source, I believe Jung’s work with the unconscious and the same omnipotent power it has over our conscious sense is a true key to any step toward an evolution of collective perception, behaviour, and purpose. +O+

IV. Do you consider yourself a Satanist? What is Satanism for you?

+O+ Yes, I do. No Master. I consider Satan to be representative, an echo of something far older than any ism has managed to capture. And before him, other shades and shapes that appeared before man – right back to man’s success in overcoming his Original Fear. And yet I still think of Satan as I did when I was a boy – as a force that defies perfection, defies its creator, defies being ruled and struggles against. Satan was for me, a stand in father, and as such, he took on a power as old as time usually reserved for the secret psychic world of the relationship with a living parent. Such a transference has simply had simply untold consequences – many of which define my work. That such an entity had to be adopted in lieu of a father – I find tremendously sad, but I have long stopped grieving for the absence of my father and accepted that what was, was what made me. His archetype has been of profound benefit to my existence, and through his shade I have conquered dangerous challenges and been inspired to travel deep inside my own vehicle into the depths of what is me and face the horrors and dissolve the walls that keep most people out of their psyche and imprisoned in a conscious cell. I know myself extremely well by way of compartmentalising my psyche and accepting that my conscious perception is limited, and my ego blindly pursues its own ends. Through dreams, synchronicity, empathy, form and my own form I listen to my unconscious and divine my path. Inside us all lay ghosts and demons few are willing to fight – for we have forgotten how. We have shunned the unconscious by enshrining the ego, and our actions have made insatiable devils and The Devil out of that ignorance. The mind struggles with what it denigrates as vague – but the demons are not entirely within and not entirely without but somewhere in between that takes us inexorably toward an unknown direction. Satan is a light that burns all in its path – all obstacles, all loyalties, all lies, all forms to cinder and cinder to ash and ash to silence. It can only ever be a solitary journey shaped by those things that press it through the motions. +O+

V. You are based on Australia; how is the occult scene over there? Unfortunately, it’s quite often for people to oversee or underestimate any occult society that doesn’t come from Europe or the US. How do you think the distance from the rest of the Western world affects the views and ways of Australian magicians?

+O+ It is as best as I can say the same as anywhere else in regard to the mystifications people heap upon the vehicle by which they should to rights make their journey, but clutter it hopelessly with unnecessary weights borne of obfuscation and sheer nonsense. Self-honesty is extraordinarily difficult to find in people – and even when it is there, self-knowledge is then lacking. We go through these many days, these many hurried motions building and crafting til we reach the suns zenith in life only to tear it all down and think upon impending death and the meaning of life. With some conviction I can confirm that THEM aimed and aim to illustrate, among many other tired stigmas, that location is irrelevant to the creation of a Nexion with empathy. For this reason, I was vocal about being Australian, Irish and only young – to show them what these supposed inferior nation, nationality and gentle of age can do or earth. But let them underestimate and oversee – many of them would not know what was hidden from them if they hid it themselves. Our name travels on a different current – we strike a resonance other groups cannot match because we are true to the messages and the voices of the Self, of the inner and unknown, and glimpses snatched from our dangerous forays into the ungraspable through our sacrifice and deadly cold will. Like, many things, distance is a perception borne of the ego – assumptions based upon the limits of experience – and yet the size and shape of things is so important... it is the key to the universe. Australia is only young, some 200 years old, and it does not have the history and depth of the UK or US – but we said many years ago that we aim to change that. And eventually, we are confident, that we will.+O+

VI. Can you talk us about your upcoming release “Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Reality”? How long have you been working on the texts that conform this release?

+O+ All my life, just in an effort to understand. Though I have struggled on and off over the last decade with the validity of being respected, understood, or published – sought many times to distance and deaden myself to the ambitious joy of my ego to be published – Threshold represents not just an anthology of my work spanning two decades of thought and bottomless re-examination but fulfils an elusive secret want I have desired ever since I began putting pen to paper. It is a great honour for me that Fall of Man wants to place my works in a careful boxed compilation and it is not going too far to say perhaps one of the highlights of my life I will look back on as an old man and treasure. +O+

VII. One of the most interesting concepts from your system is that of the Matrix. Could you explain us briefly what is it and how it defines your vision of the world?

+O+ If I begin by equating it to the Matrix of the movie fame it is a good starting point. The Matrix is a term I use interchangeably with Geometry. The Matrix I refer to is not a computer simulation – but its source is not just within us. There are two aspects to the Matrix. There is our perception – through our ability to compile catalogues of meaning, with every thought we build and layer our perception with forms. Every form gives rise to other forms in a chain reaction until we are enclosed in a geometric prism that shapes how we see the world. What we imagine or perceive has the power to shape our actions, and consequently, our actions and thoughts further add layers to the matrix – both ours and others. But there is another type of form – authentic form – the Black Clay. The Black Clay infers the reality we see, but immediately distort when we name it, label it, project upon it. If we touch a wall, the sensation of touch is authentic; calling it a wall is not. It seems an innocuous example, but humanity is made up of scorpions – our entire ethos and organism is mired in a tradition to deceive. Confusion between what is real (authentic) and what is not (illusion) leads to the artificial matrix being constructed – where merely using clever, elegant, or magical manipulation of forms leads other to believe something is something its actually not. In this way has the Magi gained total control – since all attempts to break out of the grander geometric matrix our individual matrices on masse generate, serve only to feed and fuel it. The Temple of THEM seeks to make the human race Remember its origin, and to devise tools to break out of this magical Matrix. In such a short amount of space – it is difficult to put forth the reasons for these apprehensions – but I hope that the release of Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Geometry will spare my keyboard and vindicate my assertions. +O+

VIII. You're temporarily stepping down from your duties as a guide and mentor for those willing to introduce themselves in the path of THEM; what are your future plans? Will you focus on your writing, so you can reach more individuals, instead of personally mentoring people?

+O+ Being a guide only meant breaking one of a billion possible preconceptions into pieces that an individual came to greet us with to enable them some freedom from the oppression of their convictions – again and again. But one cannot do that forever – one is met only with new formulations and convictions – and it becomes a Sisyphean endeavour, pushing a rock up a hill only to have it roll down again. Self-effort and self-honesty are the only way to become one of THEM – and those that have it, don't need me. I would hope that what I have written serves people – but I hold no illusions as to the validity of my work which is sure to change as I get older and explore deeper armed with the knowledge already extracted. The mine is infinitely deep – I know this – and in some ways I look forward to when I am 55-60 and can perhaps say I found what I was looking for amid the darkness that is life. I will continue to write, probably until I am an old man, but hope to finish a novel I am working on that presents my insights in a new way and allows me some freedom from the analytical nightmare that is my struggle recorded on paper. I fear the day when I reach more people than I already do – for that is a sign of impending mediocrity as much as it is a sign of success. I wish only to understand myself. The Temple of THEM has plans to purchase land with the funds generated via the Black Glyph Society and other tendrils of our Temple and continue its various strains of sorcery in private practice thereby fulfilling its proscribed 30-year charter. +O+

IX. The last words are yours; any piece of advice or wisdom?

+O+ Ad Accumulum Infinitum ... and Remember. [Special thanks to Fall of Man and the wonderful and talented artist with whom we worked, Namtaru of Namtaru Creations. ISS] +O+

Interview: S. Maher

1.) How long has the Temple of THEM been operating?

Since Jun 11, 2006.

2.) Do you actively recruit members? And if so, what is the criteria for recruiting people? What would the benefit of being in your Temple be to the individual?

The members of THEM share a unique empathy with one another that is founded in being able to operate beyond the ego via the development of the Self. We believe the empathic ring created by the joining of individuals possessed of Self, each working on their own separate LHP path or in tandem with another member, unites us on a higher level than a group based on ego and acts as a conducive nexion to achieving our own separate LHP goals and a synchronous sinister goal we term Sinister Solidarity. THEM believe that true solidarity devoid of petty squabbling and the power-play that leads to entropy and destruction of a group – can only be achieved when each member is free from the possession of their ego and has developed synchronous empathy with first, oneself, secondly, the acausal, and thirdly, the paradoxical significance and insignificance of the human being. Because of this empathic understanding, we do not seek out other individuals to physically join us in performing our private magic, we rely on Synchronicity to ‘recruit’ others, by others recruiting themselves. The ring is closed to outsiders.

However, anyone who is at the fore of developing their consciousness through alchemical, magical or psychological mediums for instance, who strives to succeed [or succeeds] in overcoming their ego thus developing their own sense of Self, is paradoxically, by that achievement, one of THEM, too. Paradoxically, because after such an achievement an individual is likely to spurn the support, guidance or companionship of any kind of formal group and will thus come to understand the meaning of Sinister Solidarity and being one of THEM. There are no real benefits to signing on to our [or any] online Temple, only in having the inner fire to be a vehicle of Change. Simply said, a Satanic Spirit toward perpetual alchemy, i.e. the ability to force, create and continue to always Change, is the key tenet to any kind of 'association' with THEM.

3.) LaVey notes solipsism as an anti-Satanic sin. I find it quite attractive, the thought that I am the god of this entire universe which in itself is just a figment of my imagination seems quite satanic. How about you? Is it a "sin?"

An online dictionary defines Solipsism as: 1. Philosophy. the theory that only the self exists or can be proved to exist. 2. extreme preoccupation with and indulgence of one's feelings, desires, etc.; egoistic self-absorption. Questions have the effect of making things seem easy. Frankly, Satanic is as Satanic does. Satanism is to be decided by each Satanist. What it is to be Satanic depends on the apprehension of 'Satan' and 'Satanism' by that individual. Although I believe it may be seen as side-stepping the question, doing just that is what separates members of THEM from the way others frame what it is that appears here. Since all answers are equally valid from the point of view of any respondent self-possessed and arrogant enough to Believe in their answer, all answers are opinion left to be validated by someone else's will. In some sense, the question posits only a choice of sin or no sin; it requires a response channelled and pre-shaped by the layout of the question itself. Members of THEM are arrogant masters in their own right, powered by Self and without doubt as to one's own authenticity. Hence, we are arrogant enough not to be forced into the corners these kinds of question require, and to recognise them as corners to begin with. No objective answer can be given for this or any question, if it can, then you are not one of THEM. However, to play ball; no, I do not think human beings are the masters of the universe: I believe we need to deceive ourselves into thinking so by creating a matrix of form that hides the horrors of the truth of our fragility. It is on the basis of this matrix and being exposed to the Abyss that someone may see beyond said matrix and suffer real insight allowing real arrogance to manifest based on illusion on one's own terms.

4.) Why did you choose the name THEM? What is the meaning of it? How important is the name of a Temple to the overall workings and success of that group?

THEM has many meanings, it is not just indicative of a group of people, it also means Them, the Dark Gods, and their voice that issues through when the vein of the subconscious is tapped and directs the psyche beyond ego impulses and contrivances. It is the state that is experienced when Self and Ego become active as two powers that can direct one and embodies the loss of identity that allows one to become a shape shifter – this separates US, from them. It is also a term to denote someone who has truly built their own self-image devoid of others expectations that shrugs off the world's and societies roles with friends, family etc., as projections that aim to force a person into a role and play by the laws of the matrix. A being that can smash all intellectual chains into dust, possessed of a determination of the will that others stand in awe and fear of. Furthermore, the word THEM is an appropriation of a Magian fear meme. When people quote an unknowable source in relating a scientific or religious fact, they generalise and thus create an illusory authoritarian figure, "they" i.e. "they say that..." or "that's what they say" that builds on the fear felt by all in thrall to the matrix, that gives psychological and magickal credence to one's claims. We have stolen that "They..." and it has become "THEM". If a form is designed to execute an agenda by intending to influence certain groups then the name of a Temple is of vital importance. A name is an important exterior aesthetic that will more often than not be the first piece of information about the Temple encountered by a prospective adherent and thus care should be taken to ensure that any name chosen should be in accordance with the aims and intents of the Form and express the 'aqua vitae' of its current. If you build a "Temple of Idiots" – they will come. Because a name will be perceived by outsiders as a broad description of the Temple's function, it will influence an adherents first impression. Pending whether that first impression is favourable the adherent may or may not decide to investigate further; if they do, then the name has successfully performed its role and will be carried away on the lips as Reputation.

5.) What's your opinion on so called "Traditional" Satanists such as the "Cathedral of the Black Goat"? How do you view the issue of animal sacrifice?

I judge and affirm my own path to be Satanic. I don't care about the stance or views of other Temples or Groups. Animal Sacrifice? If something is to be killed, I think killing a human being that is deserving of death should be considered first before the slaughter of an animal that is an insensible and innocent party to the blatantly stupid/enervating behaviour of human beings. In Australia and America, in fact a lot of the West if I may generalise, societies seem to hold a sentimental and romantic view of human life that is not shared by the rest of the World. I think this is partly because of the twisted Christian crusade for 'Right to Life' and partly because of Political Correctness. To this end, we have over-populated the Earth with wasteful organisms and shoulder weaklings who cry foul should even the sick or ill be deemed unfit to walk it and disposed of. Hence even those who will needlessly suffer due to deformity or sickness are preserved. We have declined into the worship of mediocrity, turning our backs on our heritage of pride and excellence inherited from the Greeks. There are ample reasons I can think of for culling human beings over an animal, none of them profound mind you. I don't perform animal sacrifice because I don't feel any desire to kill animals. I'm fond of animals and seek to punish those who are cruel to them. Then again, I suppose refusing to give up eating meat is contributing to the cruel culling of animals on a daily basis. If you're going to take your cues from me about whether to take a life or not, then take your own.

6.) I came across your Temple on the Internet as a yahoo group. Do you exist in any other medium or publication?

Our Temple is a mouthpiece. Our real work is performed by each member of THEM in a private way, working toward Sinister Solidarity and our own individual goals: toward 'Blood and Soil', I believe the term is. Since we've all been members, or still are, of various other magical groups and utilise those connections to further the aims of our secular Temple of THEM, I should think we do exist in other mediums owing to our influence, but not under this name.

7.) I know when I first contacted you I asked about how many members you had. Can you tell us your number and are all initiated into the seven-fold sinister way?

Six. Yes.

8.) May I ask your racial ancestry? Any Irish blood in your veins?

Yes. The founding member of the Temple is Australian born, of proud Irish descent.

9.) Quoting from your Mvimaedivm web group "Australia does not have much of a sinister tradition...". Do you feel that being removed from your ancestral lands (presumably Europe) hinders magickal working at all? I personally found Australia to be a strange alien place compared to the green fields of the sinister land so to speak? How would one of your group undergo the black pilgrimage for example being many thousands of miles from the long mynd?

Personally, no. But there are five other members I cannot represent. As I have not visited Europe I have yet to discern any psychic or spiritual difference of connection to the land. Australia is a strange place – and I think that its alien-ness is to its credit in acting as a global fulcrum to connect members of the Sinisterion in a psychic manner. It was settled by convicts – many of Irish, European or Chinese descent – and in this sense its land is ruled by an air of brooding injustice and violence, of despair and alienation. This is still an undercurrent seething in the Ethos of the Australian people with many cultural icons of worship in the way of supporting the under-dog, helping the 'Aussie battler', the working class need for perpetually overcoming adversity [but remaining quiet or humble once you succeed], or the romanticism of villains or criminals.

Yet it is as invested with darkness as is the country of New Zealand, in which I spent a lot of time performing various rites and ceremonies, and its isolation from the rest of the world, its grounded, earthy, violent spiritual heritage of Maori warriors, gods and cannibals precedes any mana superficially invested by the white man, in much the same way the aboriginal of Australia have imbued the Australian landscape with a connexion and spirit of menace and magic tens of thousands of years old. If anything, this innate primeval energy is more conducive to working Sinister magic than recourse to any of the white idols and edifices of the last 200 years for a sense of spiritual possessiveness – for it lacks in those edifices, and it is the ancient, proud, fearless, warrior, spirit-filled world, type energy that imbues Australia that causes a mimesis or ‘remembrance’ of my European heritage and what has been lost; the despair and desolation of our species into materialist sops that joins me with it.

Although initiated in the Septenary Way, and a derivation of the ONA, the members of THEM do not collectively practice it, or teach it – that is the domain of the ONA. Rather, we teach what we have extracted from our contact with various LHP forms of experience and knowledge. But were we to require walking the Black Pilgrimage, I expect a member would find the means to travel directly to Shropshire as has been done in the past, or we would create our own Black Pilgrimage and extend the Sinister Tradition into the roots of the Australian Ether – for all Traditions started and must start somewhere.

10.) What’s the purpose of your Mvimaedivm web group? You seem to store information and make it available for others to download? Is this a betrayal of the tradition? The ONA itself has ceased publicising and retreated back “underground” do you perhaps see yourself as a second generation ONA temple?

Its purpose is undecided. Its purpose has changed and will continue to change in accordance with the Wills that shape and form it. Various experiments have been tried from the Temple framework, most of which have met with success: including a sort of Archetypal magic laid out over time in accordance with our understanding of the progression of forms in Western Tradition and the wisdom of the Ancients. For now, the Temple is a nexion [build it and they will come] without a concrete purpose. The real work is done offline by the efforts of the six members to live the Sinister as they see fit – this often has some influence on what is posted or the direction the online Temple takes. No, I do not feel that we are betraying the Order of Nine Angles or the Sinister Tradition. A betrayal of Tradition is a personal concern for what is merely a bottle-necking of the energies of form in lieu of a strong connexion with what has already been established. However, there can be no departure of THEM from ONA: if we were to sever all ties and denounce the teachings of the ONA then we should be a reaction to the ONA, yet we would still have come from them. If we were to embrace ONA openly and teach exactly what they teach, then why bother to have a separate temple at all?

Form flows from form or breaks off from a Form – but it is united by an acausal bond that transcends the qualities of space and language that are used to make particular areas ‘separate’ from others. We are all grateful to the influence the ONA has had on our understanding, and as a result we keep it alive to honour its vitality – in this sense, we are members of ONA and glyphs that store and continue the Tradition. That said, there are many things we ‘disagree’ with in regard to the ONA, and to that end, each of us found we either shrugged off the physical seven-fold tools and passed through the Abyss to where we no longer required the guidance of the Order, or founded an understanding of its essential current as a method of perpetual alchemy; a triangle squared. After such a realisation, the simplicity of things gets tangled in words and ways. The ONA current has passed through us, and from us it will pass to others, just as it was passed to them. Hence we believe we ‘get’ the message and the reason for ONA and live and act accordingly to that understanding. We don’t consider ourselves a second generation ONA temple, we just don’t see the sense in cutting the ties of those who have helped us build our pyramids of skulls. The ONA have made numerous statements about retreating back underground over the years I.e. Qv. the MSS ‘Terfyniad’, ‘Return to the Dark’ and others and so I have to take this latest revelation of retreat with a grain of salt. I have seen no indication that the ONA have ceased publication or have diminished in presence.

11.) What’s your opinion on David Myatt’s Conversion to Islam?

Irrelevant.

12.) Why should one of the left hand path, concerned with self godhood, care about the destiny of the human race (Aeonics?)

Because to acknowledge any one of those things, “concern”, “self”, “godhood”, “destiny”, “human race” etc is it necessary to create or sustain for oneself a matrix of illusions to bounce the perception of one’s importance off in order to sustain optimism and hope in life. Such a matrix is necessary to first build as if one were building a house, for what comes after questions are exhausted and the matrix is torn/worn down is excruciating indeed. The maturity to be able to perceive the at one significance and insignificance of the human being, if one is able to withstand the destruction done to the ego and try to get a fair apprehension of one’s role as a life in the universe, will smash this question into so many pieces that one may eventually come to see the futility of asking such questions and even break through to the Abyss, where the realisation of the matrix, the abyss, and the significance/insignificance of that poor human thinker, may lead to suicide, or ecstasy.

13.) What’s your opinion on NS politics? Is A NS revolution the way forward to induce Aeonic change?

It depends who or what is the driving force behind the Form. The form alone cannot succeed unless the conditions conducive to that form are present. To try to establish NS as per the Nazi glory days, i.e. with Nazis, now, seems to be somewhat naive – but an alteration of that form tailored to meet the challenges posed to its arising may succeed. The Americans seem to already have their own NS, which is actually a kind of Anti-NS in sheep's clothing for anyone with eyes to see, saying one thing doing quite the contrary, although without the beautiful haunting occult mystique and heritage of the European/Aryan that the Nazi drew upon. I tend to think that Russia, and their leader who holds a PhD, has written a book on Martial Arts, and is physically superb is a sign of recourse to the glory days of politics and war-like, Greek, mentality; a healthy reaction to the skinny little Magian intellectuals such as Howard and Bush; Vladimir Putin and the Russians alliance with the East is going to play a big part in the shaping of any kind of 'Aeonics'. Russia seems to be at a crucial point of deciding its alliance with the Western or Eastern Axis – and I think the next spiritual force to emerge with a similar ferocity to that of the NS, will come from the Russians.

14.) What's the gender breakdown of your group?

15.) Have you any interest in Wicca or White witchery? Neo- Paganism, LaVeyan satanism, setianism (temple of set?)

No. We have an interest in steering others away from, and the destruction of those groups however.

16.) I became introduced to the writings of the ONA via the Ordo Sinistra Viviendi, from New Zealand. Now I know that NZ is far removed from Australia but seeing as you guys share the same corner of the globe maybe you might have some insight into a question that has been irritating me for a fair few years now. Have you any idea what happened to these people? where did they disappear to? Kerry Bolton etc?

No. But I will put forward a theory. These 'people' are creations of the Self, there is a mind behind them that does not wish to be seen or recognised for its individuality. The physicality of such persons was never there: only a phantom with a name that carried its secret masters/mistresses will.

17.) A question on the star game. I personally have built myself a working game. However i have no-one to play against. Any tips for a novice star gamer? I've read that you have encountered some working problems in the practical playing of the game, a bug in the system so to speak.

Plenty, a +o+ Treatise on the ONA's Star Game is hosted as a free file within the Nexus. If you have no-one to play against then play against yourself or ask one of our Temple members to join you in playing the On-line Star game. Regarding the working problems of the Star Game, I believe you are referring to an essay contained within that same treatise written by one of our members in 2006 referring to a certain mathematical probability. The essay claimed that when playing against an opponent whomsoever started first could always ensure a win simply by following a certain strategy. This 'bug' was later given further examination and an important omission found in the reasoning. This 'mathematical certainty' exists in the basic Star-Game, but it does not hold true for the Advanced Version which does contain 'chaos' tiles. Likewise: an Advanced Version of the Star Game can, in fact, be built using the instructions given in Naos despite the claims made in the MS "Geometric Complexity" by the same Author two years ago. Nevertheless, in error we learn, and the +o+ Treatise is hosted in its entirety. The essay on Black Magical Sympathy that concerns mapping the sympathetic nodes of the Star Game using Intent and Abstraction as well as the 'Training Exercise' are both still useful and informative.

18.) Thanks to THEM for answering my interview. You have a great web resource on your yahoo groups, one which I find extremely useful. Any Final Words?

In Sinister Solidarity.

Interview with THEM: anon

x.) THEM speak about a need for "Solidarity" in their writings – can you give me an example of how Solidarity is used within the Temple of THEM?

Sure. Functionally – We share the same email address at the Temple and for many groups this would be a risky venture. It generally takes only a clash of wills and a heated argument and one of the party would have no qualms in changing the password to lock others out or use the account to cause mischief. But I don't really think that it's just implied trust that allows us to be so assured of each other's intentions. It's knowledge that over the course of years our companions have worked hard to become aware of and exercise the option to control or over-ride the impulses, motivations, and emotions of the ego. THEM recognise the instability of assuming the I at all times because it means being trapped in Time and in the Matrix by the egos of others – this leads to being unable to shake one's 'role', lessens a magician's perspective and can even lead back to egocentrism. There was for a long time a belief expressed by various members previously involved with Alchemy that once the Philosophers Stone was attained [which we equate here psychologically as the Self] it would immolate the realm of the ego and the temptation to revert to that state of consciousness by virtue of destroying so many of the pillars of that state of being – Time, Space, Duty, Name, Form, Concept, Logic, Law, the I and even Thought – are all ‘damaged’ irreparably in actually extricating oneself from the Matrix; so much so, that the convenient life of reliance on the Matrix by others can never be lived for a magician again. It is now known, through attainment, that this is not true. Even with the awareness of one’s actions and speech – the ego continues to babble occasionally.

And in those cases where that babble is not checked the Self can become re-consumed by the easy ride and low energy expenditure of the ego. But therein lies a precarious balancing act performed by each of THEM because there must also be outlets for the ego to continue its babble – channels for its incessant existence lest the power to take shape be lost. The ego is thus treated as a vehicle that can be driven whereby the will of the magician watches over it, seldom leaving the ego to its own devices, but taking advantage of the opportunities the ego creates within the Matrix as a functioning cohesive unit of form. Watching over the ego is not an intellectual motto – it is a way of Life for members of THEM. Philosophically – our online Temple is a tendril, an experimental possibility; it does not matter overmuch whether we all agree with what is represented in the online forum. We all know that it is the nature of a Form to interact with the Matrix in such a way that it generates a unique signature, a hard-wired cobweb of connexions whose specific geometry will increase various probabilities and decrease others – and that individuals/groups will intermesh the Form into the Matrix simply because it is one, I.e., a Form.

Each external interaction with the Temple prompts a magical response from the Temple. As others buy into the myth, we feed the Myth and solidify tentative belief and curiosity into a solid foundation directly connected with that individual or group. When others believe in us, they spread the message and myth of THEM for us independently. Because we each understand the nature, methods, and ultimate goal of the Temple, we each understand why certain things are said, or made so. Very often, something seemingly posted out of the blue is a response to a private enquiry or clandestine interaction by an individual with the Temple. Thus, the outer appearance of the Temple or the ‘ego’ of the Temple is apt to be peppered by all kinds of pathways and topics of the smaller sphere of the semantic variety. While the inner connexion of the Temple or ‘Ga Wath Am’ sees these semantic necessities holistically – in the replies given writhe the seductive tendrils of black magical intent designed specifically to suit or more accurately ‘tap into’ or ‘create sympathy’ with that individual and have them further intermesh our Myth within their Matrix.

The process is similar to downloading a computer virus tailored to attack the support systems of the Matrix and the Magian and bring them both crashing down over time. Magically, the Temple of THEM is a co-generated Sinister Form; an organic seed that has been designed to meet the challenges imposed by the modern occult environment and mentality. This form is still in its infancy but is now beginning to take on a life of its own, a plant germinated by the agency of others in the Matrix and occasionally watered by us. But this doesn't mean our online representation is taken lightly as a side-project, even though it is mostly extra-curricular to the lives of members of THEM. The voice of each member is incorporated into our manuscripts, which tend to have a homogeneity owing to being expressed by one appointed writer, and each of us share our specialist knowledge of various semantic spheres to help ensure a fluid integration of difficult clientele. Members participate in the Temple affairs whenever and however they choose to and are kept up to date on its growth via the reports and public announcements and private tuitions stored in the shared email address and via the Temple e-zine, 'Oto Anorha'. Each member can thus provide their specialist knowledge to support the Representative, express any concerns or new directions the Temple should take, or inform the Syndicate of important changes in the external/internal network.

Solidarity is further enhanced by the common understanding that Change takes time. Especially biological change. Sustaining Self is primarily a matter of the conditions created concerning the lightening and the sun [or Time] and to maintain the Self it helps to live within a magical Weltanschauung pursuing short- and long-term goals + an Aeonic one. That way, the contrivances of the Matrix don't weigh one down too much or for too long and what really matters can be attended to. This outlook in itself helps remove the magician from the trap of thinking only for the moment. A common far-reaching perspective that shadows our seventy or so allotted years keeps us focused on the task of fulfilling our goals within the Temple of THEM both individually and collectively.

Attaining the Self is extremely difficult but it is only the first evolutionary step. The second step is in sustaining the Self and this requires constant vigilance – the natural evolution of a magician is to immolate the ego and attain enlightenment but such embodies the loss of the ability to take form or the desire to interfere, to take a stance or to have the arrogant foundation to ground a conviction; such persons may be enlightened but they sacrifice their original goal [to be like Satan] to go on beyond words, forms, and being. The power of the Sinister however does not lie in leaving the Earthly plane and going to meet God; or in becoming an aetherial vapour that is 'too wise' to trouble itself with the affairs of the human being. The risk to abandon what one originally set out to do [be Satan] when coming face to face with the secret Samadhi is GREAT; and it can be justified away as one passes through the Abyss where meanings have no ground and the Sinister Quest is abandoned in the wake of some a priori experience of being; but it takes an immensely strong will to get this far and make the decision to return to remain loyal to the Sinister.

To continue to employ ones will under the direction of such enlightened knowledge and possessed of magical prowess is to walk the Earth as a Dark God. Thus, we have not destroyed our egos but yoked them into the service of our developed Selves. Beyond that, the third stage is in continuing to teach the Rites of Passage that characterise the ego and the Self for long enough to create a folk that are engineered toward developing this greater state of mind either genetically or by Tradition; hence, for instance, the creation of the Nexus, “Mvimaedivm”.

Having the Self in our lifetime is a great achievement of personal enlightenment but we are aiming for more than that and seek a collective, inhuman [we say inhuman or first human rather than ‘human’ because of the embarrassing connotations associated with typical human behaviour] enlightenment. What form will arise to occupy the shattered wastelands of the Magian Empire we shall just have to wait and see via ‘Vindex’. Our concern is to act as ‘Falcifer’ – to smash the status quo and prepare the conditions for a hostile aeonic takeover. In the most humble sense, we try to bring a little bit of Satan into everyone we meet. We do this by not buying into the Magian way of life.

Psychologically – THEM assert that we are a new emerging species by virtue of our numbers and our presence of mind. The attainment of Self has previously been thought to only be achieved by lone hermits, individuals isolated in time and space by their particular Wyrð – and although periods of isolation are necessary to bring about the dissolving of the ego – there are nonetheless a half dozen of us now united via the Acausal Voice as a species. Our synchronicity has been founded on unique principles and understanding of sorcery, and whatever our personal aims – we are each “cold and sure of our magic“. We represent the rise of the ‘Undividual’ and the fomentation of a culture. Watch this space.

Interview: Mark Sievwright

The Last Word from THEM

This Interview took place via Skype.net (With Filters) on December 11th 2008 with “Thoth” from the Temple of THEM. I’ve inserted a couple of questions that were answered by email in late November of 2008 in where I think they fit but I also had to ask for clarification on some points after the interview, also inserted. I met Thoth after reading the “Diary of a Devilworshipper” and made contact with him through the yahoo forum Mvimaedivm in September. He agreed to a request for an interview and I am told that this is to be the last public commentary made by the Temple of THEM so I was honoured to be chosen for the task. Special thanks to AeveA of the Black Glyph Society for her assistance in transcribing the interview and for allowing us to print it in Aldebaran.

Thank you for taking the time to answer my questions, I really do appreciate it. I have a lot to ask you, having been reading and thinking about the work published on Lulu and our private correspondence for quite some time. I guess my first question is – have you ever met Anton Long?

Hi Mark, not a problem.. and no. Not in person. Only as an idea.

An Idea?

Sure. I think there are still a lot of people unsure as to why David refuses to be seen as Anton Long despite all the evidence that's been produced to favour an obvious conclusion. When I first began my walk with the ONA in 2000, all I initially wanted, was to travel to Shropshire and meet and train with the enigmatic Grandmaster. I even tried to send the ONA a letter asking for admission into the Order. It was returned though, the box must have been closed by then. However, the older I got, and the more involved I became in living the Sinister Way – the more insight I gathered, all kinds of previous preconceived idea I had about Satanism began to fall away. There's a big difference in a magical path from the outside than there is on the inside. Mine has been charged with a feeling of dynamism and excitement, and so I'm lucky, but it's not like you can subsist forever on mystical nonsense, if you want to get anywhere you have to have a big dose of realism, and that comes with trying to follow something like the Sinister Path. The insights revealed are not necessarily the one's you expect. And slowly I began to feel that Anton Long, whom I eventually linked with Myatt, was something/someone other than what it/he appeared, and that AL, was actually created for something. Something deeply profound and something beyond the Mythos being weaved. You have to remember that Myatt was born in the 1950's – and men born back then had a completely different outlook on the world than someone born in the 70's. AL was also born into a life that involved a lot of travel – a lot of realism and seeing the world as it really is. And I think from this, the persona of Long developed.

For me, Long is the personification of an “idea”, and I don't mean the term “idea” lightly, the phrase “External Wraith or Manifestation developed to represent an Outer-formed, Inner-felt Development of a Unique Perennial Pagan Ethos based on a scrutiny of Sacred Geometry from a Way of Living that garners experience directly from many of the forms given great worship as means and guides by Humanity to alter an Ingrained Ethos” is probably better than “idea”. Even his name, “Along” is synchronous with the underlying aims of the ONA, which are so often misunderstood, generally by a) people who have never devoted themselves to actually living its Tradition for themselves and remain on the outside theorising from what is written down and disseminated; moreover, who expect and believe in some predetermined outcome or objective result from such a way of Living which I assure you is never the case and that each Initiate learns differently even though they utilise the same base core system and b) believe that the concept of the ONA has only one layer and is related “as is” via its manuscripts and own admissions – and which, is most definitely not the case: with a perception in tow that the ONA is represented “as is” via its manuscripts: the ONA can only appear as a contradiction of extreme complexity.

The secret to perceiving the ONA lies in living and experiencing the practical means and methods relayed for oneself, the alchemy of which results in drastic alchemical magical and philosophical changes, unique to each Initiate; for only then is the necessary internal groundwork laid to understand the extreme simplicity of the ONA. For me, Long is a species of free-floating consciousness with great power to create significant changes; an embodiment of the archetype Satan, yes; partly through his tremendous Promethean tenacity to live the way he has and understand so much by himself; and partly because of his emphasis and development of the dis-connected unification of acausal consciousness between all beings; but a consciousness more unrestricted than the box “Satan”; a unique embodiment of personality that I have not seen in my thirty years of living in any other human being. Some people sometimes show me some aspects of that consciousness: but AL is the first and only man I’ve encountered whose essence has deeply affected who I am and what I try to do with my life. Aside of course, from the character of Satan.

Why do you think Long is Myatt, like evidence-wise?

Well, assuming, loosely, that Myatt does not have his material written out by someone else before he releases it, Myatt and Long both use long strings of commas to break up sentences in a very similar way, as does ‘Julie Wright’. My experience has taught me that people, artists especially, are very particular about language when they write. Due to the audio inflection they hear in their head, they write a certain way, to express how they hear conversation, where pauses, when/how emotion, and so on play out in a conversation and in how people interact with one another; also in what details are captured and which are omitted, in the breadth of vocabulary, for example. All these are particulars that can’t help but emanate the consistent underlying structure of how language is understood and perceived in its conveyance by the writer. Their Iambic Pentameter is the same too. Myatt writes so much that to consistently maintain any conscious focus to disrupt that style of writing would be too much of a strain to keep up – moreover, Myatt is probably not aware of, or recognises the impossibility of cleaning up, the “linguistic” trail he leaves behind.

The word ‘fastly’ rather than quickly is idiosyncratic, as is the consistent “misspelling” of ‘past’ with ‘passed’, the omission by both AL and DM of ornate description, as though the style of prose adopted for the Deofel Quintet coloured everything written since... it’s my opinion that Myatt wants people to know he is AL. And damn right, AL is the best thing to happen to Satanism in the last four decades.

What the hell is Iambic Meter?

So far as I understand it, it’s a fancy way of indicating the measure of both the mathematical and poetic rhythm or spacing in verse and the overall measure of meter to which they flow. Eminem and Dr. Seuss are two great examples for this. When reading Dr. Seuss, for instance, there is an impulse to insert an extra syllable in some lines to give more order and poise to the prose, which often seems stilted because it is missing a syllable in a place that interrupts the smooth rhythm of the prose. On the other hand, Eminem is a wordsmith whose masterful use of rhythm is a powerful example of correct Iambic (Penta) Meter or perfectly measured verse. As is the Haiku poem, which uses five syllables, then seven syllables, then five again, a style favoured in Japan.

Going back, what do you mean Anton Long was created for something?

I mean that AL is a deliberate magickal creation. There are powers and actions granted via a channel emanating a certain personality that AL can perform, but which David Myatt, cannot. Likewise, actions and stances that ONA, can perform and hold: as a separate entity: which David Myatt cannot. All because of the different codes of conduct each possess, or more accurately that he has given them the power to possess. THEM have come along and penned Liber Dabih at an extremely fortuitous time, because over the years, each of Myatt’s lived forms have been treated superficially, seen simplistically as snapshots which described Myatt, and each form with its own attached tirade of ignorant outside observation and commentary. And one of Myatt’s most infamous actions was a conversion to the Islamic faith much to the chagrin and disgust of many pro-National Socialist circles: who, never really understood why Myatt was seen to be joining them in the first place, at all. At this time, like all his other forms, Myatt’s Islamic learning can now be placed within a fair context. I think Myatt is genuine about using Islam to attack the Magian, it is a role that makes a lot of sense from the perspective put forth by both AL and DM about championing Heresy.

Yet Myatt’s recent tally of shape-shifting confessions have brought him to a place where his over-arching concern is for the level of suffering needlessly endured by the promulgation of forms, illusions and divisions that man-made abstractions have the power to do, and a deep sadness that humanity has learnt or is in danger of learning, nothing from its past five thousand years; and thus that all forms such as National Socialism, Militant Coups, Islamic Fundamentalism, etc, should no longer play a part; but, he is caught irrevocably in-between Knowledge and Time. While he Knows/Lives with these profound integrated discoveries of suffering and the Numinous Way intimately as David Myatt: the struggle to do nothing and the struggle to do something clearly rages within. As Myatt, he can do nothing to try and change the flow and precession of suffering – for Myatt is Above Time: but as the ONA, as Long, he can actively continue to struggle against the odds of the Times (Long is the means by which David can manifest In/Against Time) we live in by using a variety of forms, the complete ONA being one of these, to infuse the consciousness, the deep learning of David Myatt, into the world through the Seven-Fold Sinister Way. Thus, not just the results of his learning, but also the way in which he set about teaching himself. Obviously, the idea that Myatt has split personalities for this theory is appealing, but it would be incorrect. Myatt's personalities are not split and from his point of view, and mine, there is no differentiation between the two men and the plethora of other manifestations which each serve different purposes for Myatt: which emanate from one consciousness; but which consciousness is Acausal not Causal. Thus, Myatt feels himself, rightly, a part of you, a part of me, a part of something greater, and is moved to express it, i.e., the Numinous.

So, okay, do you want to meet Anton Long?

No... I don't think that it is necessary to do that anymore. Long is a part of my consciousness, a fellow wanderer who feels that awful sadness I have felt with the world and whose own life via the vehicle of the ONA has influenced me profoundly. People who have that feeling have nothing to say to each other – they're already connected.

What is your impression of David Myatt?

My impression? I perceive a gentle man and a gentleman, doing what he can to make the world a better place. But we're at a point in time where you have to literally smash someone over the head with a shovel to change their ways. I also believe that Myatt's age is having an influence on his recent mindset – and that ONA's forms are currently exhibiting a potent mixture of wisdom and fatalism – possibly due to an acute awareness on his part of his approaching mortality and the amount of time he has left to complete his Wyrd or achieve what he set out to do.

Would you say his involvement in extremist Islam is making the world a better place?

I don't believe Myatt actually converted to Islam. He may have demonically lived the role, but the same underlying messages in his NS writings are the same underpinnings in his Islamic stuff. It's just different wrapping paper. Despite all the outer appearances put forth, I don't believe his heart is in it and as I said to someone else, I think Myatt's dream of space colonisation underpins all of the forms he has taken on, that ONA is his grounding principle, and that all of his efforts revolve around his faith in the Order to deliver.

I have to ask, is THEM really an ONA Nexion?

The short answer is yes. From my point of view based on ONA's definition on what a nexion is and what I discern ONA are – how THEM carries on and extends the qualities relating to those definitions: qualifies THEM to present itself as a genuine nexion of the ONA. And that is not to say that my understanding of a nexion is the only, or the right, one. Before many others, we understood Myatt and the underlying nature of his work beneath the sensationalism of his involvement in this or that form – we were not in thrall to the forms he took and did not react emotively as he changed through them. We have remained cold and detached watching Myatt work.

We understood what he is doing and subsequently could work out what he was doing. We empathise deeply with that work and have vowed to further it (We each took the Initiation Oath in Naos as a serious element of our devotion to the Sinister Quest and the ONA). But we should not be misunderstood as being the same as ONA, because we are not, we are an extension Offspring. Insofar as THEM understands the ONA and the reasons relating to the propagation of it as a whole and a large number of its parts, re: Dark Gods, Star Game, Culling etc, THEM do claim to represent the ONA from Australia, and not, necessarily, as a Satanic group. We have the experience and understanding to teach aspects and the spirit of the Seven-Fold Way – Whether or not this connexion is “officially” recognised by the ONA is irrelevant: all the important work is performed in the shadows and with hints anyway.

Wait. What do you mean by hints and shadows?

I mean just that. When people come to me and ask if ONA is still active for instance: I ask them: what makes you think it is inactive, but more to the point, what makes you think there is an ONA at all. Where did you get your evidence from? From the ONA? They say the Internet or quote some source or web page which contains MSS, invariably written and published – by the ONA themselves. So, it is a question of personal critical analysis, and how much weight people give their own projections and conclusions versus a comparison of fact and observation. But to be fair, until I got further into my journey, I had no idea how much subtlety was involved in Satanism. I can share that a hell of a lot goes unsaid and a lot of it regarding strategy.

Sounds like a lot of cloak and dagger stuff goes on behind the posts?

To some extent private emails are exchanged that affect the outcome of certain elements: cloak and dagger, if that's what you want to call it goes on, because there's a tremendous amount of work involved in instigating change and in making that change look flawless. Think on how much THEM have revealed in its published MSS, understanding/working with the ONA has never been easier. Then think on how much remains hidden and always will until a certain level of cognition and consciousness is reached via self-effort that unlocks such mysteries and makes everything crystal clear.

What about these secrets?

What about them?

Are they to do with the inner workings of the ONA?

I can't tell you that. But not to give too much away, there was a little book circulated around the underground not that long ago called "Obtain Me" in Latin. See, although the Order speaks openly about Culling, theoretically speaking, there is a vast difference between "obtaining the Red Elixir" and obtaining the Red Elixir. Someone must have decided information on that aspect was lacking and written a book about the finer points of cutting someone's head off.

The ONA?

I'm not sure, but I don't think so. There was no obvious indication that it was an ONA document.

One of THEM?

Not to my knowledge.

What was in it?

An introduction to technique explaining the difference between things like the clean decapitation one can expect from Japanese sword-cutting and the grisly separation of the head from the neck by force via the brutal hold and cut used by some Extremist Sects, for instance. And this is where the "ultra-hatred" mentioned recently by ONA comes in handy – since there is an irony that if you're emotionally and magically ready to cull someone by magic – you are correspondingly enraged enough not to want to do it magically. And if you've seen Japanese execution style beheadings they are, assuming the executioner knows his stuff, quite clean, and noble. Whereas, if you've seen some footage (or the real thing) of someone on their knees being thrown to the ground, held down and having his head sawn off with a knife by force – it's a much more harrowing thing to see. And since the ONA don't favour the Japanese style, copying Baphomet implies a rather brutal task.

What else was in there?

Uh, there were some notes on undertaking an “insight role” as a butcher's apprentice for a while to get familiar with the mechanics of blood, arterial spray, etc and a section on chemicals like certain acids used to dispose of the remaining body, and all that classic stuff you could find in the older “criminals handbook” – but also, some esoteric lore regarding the powers of the blood and severed head and so on.

That's pretty full on!

It's not though, Mark. The world is a Sinister place full of Sinister people doing Sinister things. But the Sinister aspects of the world are too many to bundle into a day of news, and let's face it, a lot of people widen their perspective of the world watching the television. Every second of every minute something awful is happening to someone somewhere in the world, and probably every two seconds something so atrociously inhuman it defies the reach of the comfortable imagination. There are people just across the way that would kill you horribly just for being white, or there.

Some people treat Satanism as a game, and some treat it so seriously they are willing to kill for it. If all you know about Satanism is from the books you read at the library, the opinions you gather from the internet, or from the continuing idea that Satanism is a safe tame practice in direct opposition to Christianity – then you're not going to be the sort of person that finds “Obtain Me” in your post office box. You gotta go out and get yourself into a whole lot of different shit so you can make the judgements for yourself as to what is what. When the totality of life's meaning hits you after you've gained the insight into your own mortality via the Weltanschauung you've accrued from the world around you – a grim fact remains, you don't have long to express yourself, perhaps seventy-ninety years at the most to take all of the world's lore, assess the tragic situation of life, form a plan and seek to remain after death.

Good point. Can you tell me about any other secrets? Do THEM have secret handshakes, code words or anything like that?

Well, we're not masons. We use green language sometimes to refer to sensitive topics or make sure we can identify ourselves to one another and we do have passwords to access things like Liber SSS, but overall, we're quite open in our communication. We do have a beacon signal. If you see that evil eye of mine pop up on your group or in my photo-spot it means one of THEM are watching, listening and possibly participating. It means we're home.

Liber SSS?

Yeah, our collective grimoire.

For spells and such?

Sometimes. Mostly it's records of activity, initiation files, correspondence, administration, and stuff like that. We also keep what's called a "Mvimaedivm Tree" to show the patterns in membership and the ebb and flow effect of our form.

Does everyone in THEM have to conform to a set of rules or a mandate or something like that?

I think you might be getting THEM and Mvimaedivm mixed up. The idea of THEM is that a person who is destined to be first human or be one of THEM will do it by themselves. That they have the 'Satanic Fire' to succeed in their Sinister Path. Part of our roots to ONA persist in our belief that Synchronicity (which we equate with the Acausal Voice) will bring about people who are meant to be with us into sinister solidarity. So Mvimaedivm is just providing a meeting place for those of like disposition. Obviously, because we have a Temple, and a form, you can't completely abandon rules of conduct. Each member of Mvim swears three life-long oaths in a manner of their own choosing. One of these oaths is to restore the chivalry, courtesy, integrity and loyalty between members of the Sinisterion. Well, I say restore, but I'm not that naive. I doubt there's ever been a golden age for manners. But we don't forbid things – people grown up enough to have an appreciation for the cynical view we have are grown up enough to make their own decisions and live with the consequences.

Can you please tell me more about Mvimaedivm group?

It's a network that attracts the serious minded by only letting in people willing to demonstrate practical initiative. Following that, access is given and part of our network becomes theirs. If over time, we think that an Initiate has proven themselves trustworthy, we invite them further into that network. Mvimaedivm itself is a useful occult library of the Sinister that offers a wide-ranging selection of serious occult texts to enable a practical and pragmatic understanding of what is and what has been involved in the Sinister. But because of the diversity of THEM's members, many of which have been involved in other systems, our approach allows forks in two directions. One of which involves sobering logic such as our work with Forms which approach aims to elevate one out of the occult labyrinth, and yet we also support a headlong immersion into the Sinister including the risk, the danger the threat of death that can come about in learning, and host varying systems of Sinister magic put forth by various exponents of it for each to try for themselves to form a direct judgement of any given system. After admission, we don't take the mantle of instructing initiates in the direction they should take, bark orders or tell them what to do – anyone with enough fire to go through with the Self Initiations deserves the benefit of the doubt that they are self-reliant enough to proceed in their Sinister Path using the resources we provide – so a member of Mvimaedivm is generally someone who takes the Sinister seriously and is willing to go the extra mile for it. However, if someone asks for guidance then we're there to give it. We've turned and are still turning away a lot of people from Mvimaedivm simply because they refuse to take the most basic steps toward enacting a Sinister way of living – even though the nature those steps take are placed squarely in their hands, membership in Mvimaedivm is very low. But we support the handful of people who are willing to do the hard work from the beginning over the 250 that waste everyone's time.

What do you do once someone joins Mvimaedivm?

It depends on what we think an Initiate needs or if an Initiate needs anything. Some make contact with the Temple Rep. Straight away to discuss their path, some already have their own path and are members for their own agenda, naturally, and some don't require guidance at all but pass the time making use of the extensive Library. A lot of people lack the deserved arrogance of genuine self-empowerment and one of our first aims with a new initiate is to let them make their own way. That is after all the essence of Learning. Either you get horribly lost or you find your way by knowing what it is you need to get to the next step. If we think the disposition of someone is at a certain level of maturity, we might help hook them up with people in the know using our connections, go out of our way to help them with any occult system we might have additional knowledge of, or, sometimes, make them part of our Mythos itself. We sometimes take chances on people that pay off. In the future, if we think that an initiate is really doing well in the Sinister Path, and would suit our group, we might be able to extend a physical invitation for them to meet and join an offline Temple of THEM.

You don't do that now? Invitations I mean...

Not yet. THEM still requires a lot of groundwork to rise up from an invisible presence to a form of manifest aggression. Mvimaedivm plays a special role in that – but it's only part of a temporary means to a greater end. You don't get power just by having a forum. But the forum is very useful – as is our lulu account – and our experimental reliance on synchronicity seems to be working well. To enact what THEM intend to do will require a long time and a lot of patience, and commitment requires a certain attitude. A lot of people don't have the wits or patience to plan, execute, let alone understand, a long-term sinister strategy. We emphasised some of this in points made in our L1313 treatise regarding reform/revolution, human-centred, life-centred perception, and the permanence of the human consciousness and the consequences of entrapment in that consciousness being directly related to the self-perception of size by the human being. Unlike ONA, we're not intending to operate very long. We now have approximately 27 years left to implement our aims and so far, it is running like clockwork. We achieved our first aim not that long ago, and I'm told, our second.

What was your first aim?

Releasing certain information. It was not possible to simply come out and say certain things without a solid trusted base of authority from which to say them. We built that and then said what we had to say. What we said has changed the game-plan for a lot of people involved in the Sinister.

The stuff you guys put out there definitely interesting. What is your second aim?

'Narrative Magic'. A couple of people have now taken it upon themselves to "Spread the Wyrd" by making a fair amount of our published work available as free downloads. Whether these people are friends of ours trying to assist our Mythos, or whether they are trying to deliberately sabotage us to settle some score, or even a mixture of both, is totally irrelevant. Now that we have people promoting our work for us, we no longer need to be online to do it ourselves. Our intent to hijack cyberspace and presence a Sinister History in Australian Satanism has just taken another beneficial turn. A critical mass has been reached, the wheels of perpetuity are turning in motion by themselves, and the Internet will no doubt live up to its reputation and do the rest.

I understand that you have amassed a pretty cool library of black magic. Can members read Liber SSS?

We do have good library, yes. We've relaxed the restrictions on what can be added recently, partly due to my own feeling that it's best to know thy enemy rather than pretend they don't exist, so in some instances we allow elements of Cabala/Crowley into the fray. Uh, we've got stuff by the FL, OHLP, OSV, IOT, ONA, TOB, WOT, OOS, HR, Chumbley, Castenada, Myatt, etc, some of it for serious study, some of it to use when illustrating examples, and some of it donated by others on the Sinister Path. And nope. Liber SSS is only for THEM. Sometimes we let someone have a particular book not listed, like, Pharmako or Viridium Umbris if they are studying hallucinogenics or dabbling with entheogens, Azoetia if they are studying Cultus Sabbati or works by Ford/Koetting so they don't go buy them. A former member donated works by Yockey, Burney, Le Bon, Spengler, Clausewitz, Devi, and so on, A new initiate just added a whole bunch of work by Chumbley and Spare, which is very useful. The more someone works with us, the more we work with them, but generally we only give these out in special circumstances. Oh and of course, THEM. But a lot of our stuff is too large to add to the group, so the majority of it's accessible by enquiry only. A lot of groups have libraries of occult stuff – but we have supported by people who have worked for a long time with many of the different systems personally.

Do you know all of the members in Mvimaedivm personally?

Actually no... I'd like to but you know us Sinister types, we tend to keep to ourselves. That is part of the understanding behind the formation of Sinister Solidarity – we're each working toward our own goals whilst working toward those of the Sinister collectively. I have talked to almost all members of the group at some time or another during Initiation or correspondence though. The group has undergone a lot of changes in the last two years, our numbers were up to 150 at one point, but this was before self-initiation was introduced and a massive cull late this year of people dropped the numbers down to about 40. A couple of those I've known for a long time and have had extensive interaction with.

Do members have to answer a questionnaire or provide ID?

Nope. They just have to have the fire to overcome obstacles put in their way.

What about THEM – Does THEM have a real, i.e., solid Temple in Australian or is it just an online group?

Not yet. And THEM is different from Mvimaedivm. Mvimaedivm is our online nexion, our line of contact with other Sinisterion, anyone with the right stuff can join it. THEM, the name of our group, is closed to outsiders. To some extent we're involved in the practice of ritual magic of some kind – so occasionally we require somewhere to meet but we utilise secluded places in the bush or landscape rather than a house or building. We do a lot of driving. More out of necessity than choice. But a solid Temple doesn't exist and if it did, it would have to fit the particular view of magic and Satanism that THEM have developed regarding form... So, we don't have a set building where we might ask others to meet us for Initiation or whatever, no. Australia is our Temple.

Well, a friend of mine mentioned that you guys were trying to start up a group called “Nexion”, can you tell me more about that?

Seems your friend is also my friend. “Nexion” is just an idea being considered to make a separate physical Temple in and around Aussie [Australia] available to practice aspects of the Sinister face-to-face. We're looking at organising a group with cars who can drive to particular spots in Victoria in large numbers to perform Satanic Ritual overnight. Sort of like a blitzkrieg for drawing acausal energy down into those locations. Ideally, such people would have some practice in Chant, be able to Fight, and be a serious and trustworthy practitioner of the Sinister. But it's early days for THEM and for us and it's just an idea at this stage. One of the major drawbacks to something like that is the possibility of losing our carefully protected anonymity.

Hey that's cool – The idea of travelling around in cars to do overnight rituals sounds pretty intriguing. Say it did start up – What would I need to join Nexion, would I need to prove myself before being allowed in, or would I have to move to Victoria?

Well, that's still in the works. You'd need at least to be a long-time member of Mvimaedivm, have a background in the Sinister, be reasonably good at Satanic Chant, an adult, own a car and for us to know we could trust you and to believe that you were one of THEM. And no, not necessarily, we work out of Sydney too.

When you say ritual do you mean like Black Masses from the Black Books of Satan?

On occasion yeah, that is something that still serves a purpose, and the Mass of Heresy too, possibly an OSB variant in light of the current climate, but the main concern would be performing the Rite of Nine Angles – and other magical rituals particular to THEM, I'm sure you're aware of our stance regarding Sinister Solidarity in that each of THEM have different paths with diverse styles of magic – not all of which are ONA-based. But we'd have to be very sure of someone before letting them into our private group. At this point in time, we've shared our ideas and insights through Mvimaedivm by using "leaderless resistance" type-tactics.

And what's OSB?

OSB is Osama Bin Laden.

Some people have said that you guys are just like the ONA and don't really exist offline.

Tell that to my brown belt. I set out to get a black one in order to be able to instruct Satanists on the finer points of culling and self-defence so far, it's taken me three years of commitment to the role. Even in this I've seen people come and go while I've stuck at it. Frankly, I think we exist and that is all that matters to me. Also, I know for a fact that our work is influencing and has influenced thousands of people and that is undeniable. It would be nice to see the collective effect – but I have been lucky enough to see just some of the short-term changes afforded by our efforts, a lot of people aren't so lucky to have their work recognised in their time. But, a lot of people have said a lot of things, I've challenged most of them: see for instance posts in the 600 club.com, or occult forums.com where I've set forth my opinions on the ONA based on experience, not on hearsay and idle rumour. Certainly I've not completed all aspects of the Path – not that this has stopped me from gaining a very good understanding of the ONA itself – but members of THEM combined, we've completed most of them; inc travelling to Shropshire, the Black Pilgrimage, designing a Sinister Tarot, the Rite of Nine Angles, the Dark Pathworkings, the Rites of EA and IA Adepts, building and playing the Star Game; running a Temple (and I don't mean this one), training others in the Seven-Fold Way, completing numerous Insight Roles, learning Physis, practising and extending the Sinister Tradition and so on. THEM offline is rather different to THEM online, as I'm sure you'll understand: besides our methodology is laid out quite clearly in the Oto Anorha magazines for anyone to see; we have created a Mythos, in a very short amount of time might I add, and we are aiming for certain long-term changes. Some of those changes are now visible. And thus, serve as undeniable proof of our existence, that is of course, assuming you understand what we are and represent. We do exist, but at this time, and from this viewpoint – it has been very difficult to commit the ego and the arrogance to continue making the same mistakes particular to people by forming some sort of physical army or group together.

There is also the prickly matter of maintaining Anonymity. THEM practice Cliology or Aeonic magic via exerting influence over certain forms of growth, and this depends on how the understanding of forms in theory plays out against real-life reactions to certain forms. Thus far, we have been spot on in predicting the outcome of certain actions as regards our Mythos. One such aspect being our distribution of Sinister Materials from the 'Glyph', another being the online solidarity afforded to solitary practitioners by 'Mvimaedivm' group; both pretty well known by now, however, two of our members, for instance, work within the Prostitution/Sex Worker industry and actively promulgate changes therein- I'm working towards a black belt in martial arts as an Instructor in order to teach honourable but lethal self-defence in the future to Satanic clientele. And, of course, each of us pursue our own independent aims in our own ways. The genius behind ONA is or must be nearing his 60th birthday; and noticeably his attitude has changed as his insight has grown: esp. as regards the Numinous Way. And of this attitude, I am in agreement: having come to many similar conclusions myself.

The nature of the challenge imposed by the Times for Satanism has certainly changed as has the solution to meet that challenge. Where some see an overt stand as ultimately required in a militant force, coup or army as the right way to conduct Satanic affairs, we do not necessarily agree. Our understanding is from experience, that change, is very slow and takes a long time: and that to implement changes, requires patience, wisdom, and patience. Every day we diffuse our Satanic insights into the people in the world around us: every few days, THEM is changing the perspective of someone to enable them to see what we see. Slowly, but surely, we are making gradual, imperceptible, invisible changes via our conduct, via our personalities, via our understanding of magic and of change; in the world: that are being rooted in the consciousness as living thriving ideas and practices. Changing them from the inside permanently not tacking on a badge or uniform temporarily on the outer. THEM are performing the long arduous and often unrewarding implementation of genuine alchemical black magick in the tradition of the ONA with a view to creating a tradition in Australia that gives this country a truly Sinister History.

Others will come and go – but we will persevere against all odds through the next three decades, quietly completing our experiment. Mark my Words. Having, for instance, shared many of the same intense quiet moments with Nature as Myatt, and been an avid proponent of the ONA for almost a decade, I believe I recognise and thus empathise deeply with what he is doing. But, with such an enormous volume of work available presented from so many stages of his life, it is easy to come into it at any stage and think one is reading Myatt's most recent insights.

The pressing underlying crux of David Myatt is a tightrope between extremes, a balanced fulcrum that has its own self-righting equilibrium between sharing the awesome wisdom of the Numinous Way that people might stop, listen, grow, and mature from being inspired by the peaceful acausal symbiosis achieved from exhausting the (ultimately illusory) possibilities of so many forms that promise to guide a person; and having taken them each to their conclusion found still, something lacking. And the explosive destructive elements of Myatt's nature. Remember, that the people most likely to make a change in the world, those with a pathological dislike or even hatred for the Status Quo. Such as those on the fringe of the neat slots that society tries to put people in, and those who have been deeply wronged by the current or prevailing powers or ethos, that is to say, the same people who will gravitate toward unorthodox measures and paths to fight, combat, and dream of using to conquer the Injustice, the Absurdity, the Arrogance of the Century and its Keepers -having the qualities of militancy, aggression, readiness for war, struggle to understand, to know for themselves, to right wrongs, to crusade for mankind or even oneself that one finds in all manner of defiant beings, are not rare.

Moreover, they are the type of beings who gravitate toward something just like, the ONA. And perhaps they will even call themselves a Satanist. And yet, while the flutes of peace wax lyrically, the talk and suggestion of War as an answer from someone in a highly influential position draws us (and parts of humanity listening to Myatt) closer, perhaps unintentionally on his part, toward the type of typical Religious Armageddon that will inevitably repeat the centuries of bloodshed that seem so lamented by Myatt: viz. in a struggle that will involve real violence, real bombs, real guns, real deaths, in order to enact the ideal of the “Numinous Way”. While I have always been able to see the innate hypocrisy built into language that unfortunately is a part of Any form, any single idea put down which spawns an immediate shadow, I have to ask as one of THEM, as someone with my own distinct identity and understanding of the forces in play by many people: is how this is going, the right way? Is this the only way? Must people be shocked into awakening? Is WAR the only way to cause Change? And do I support this?* I cannot help but see a clever engine of National Socialism prevalent in what I see being laid out by Myatt: A soft sweet tune that preludes the beating of war drums and the annihilation of flesh.

You have to remember, I’m not Myatt/Long – I have been loyal to the ONA for nearly a decade, but at the end of the day, I am my own man, have my own agenda, my own Weltanschauung, and my own hateful crusade that I’ve been enacting, organising, since I was a boy. *When you’re locked in a room with a computer, building a world around you, projecting your dreams and fantasies into and onto others by wording something cleverly this way or that; to garner support for your ideologies which seem so simple and direct from that seclusion, from that isolation in which no loud boisterous or rude person interrupts your train of thought with carelessness, or angers you because of their lack of manners, regard, or empathy for anyone else but themselves, or wanders past eating something and dressed head to toe in some uniform indicative of social distress prior to casting the wrapper on the ground, or harasses a sales clerk, honks on the car horn, speeds past you on the wrong side of the road, snatches something out of your hand, makes no eye contact when talking to you, or rants and raves loudly in the street about Jesus or Whales or Car Insurance – and when it seems everyone is a dreg, a waste of space, a vacuum ignorant arrogant and belligerent: you, that is I, deeply wonder, why I have bothered to protect the human beings I have with my powers of reason, compassion and empathy.

Why I have bothered to write so many things that speak warmly of humanity, of its worth and its right to go on if only it could change itself in some small way so as to live in a more harmonious fashion. Why I have bothered, to place the ONA in a context it was never meant to be placed in that has allowed it to be understood, dissected, minutely examined, and even copied. Why I have bothered to hold back or prevent any of the numerous blood gates that were supposed to spill open resulting in gruesome deaths, mindless arrogant destruction, and misery and tears. Why I have been so gentle – speaking as a wise man to the hundreds, thousands of people who have asked me for guidance in such a way as to becalm them, help them to understand what is beneath the question they ask – instead of an irresponsible warmonger, using that enormous trust for raping their minds and gullibility, fragility, humility for all its worth for my personal selfish gain, surrounding myself with sycophants and bullies and people who say yes to anything so I can have headless corpses with my name on them right around the world. Why I have bothered to say “wait, have you thought about this?” so many times instead of saying, “that is exactly right, you have understood perfectly, the point of culling is to kill DROSS, JEWS, Magian, DREGS,” and to pile on example after example of instances to build that person to a frenzy, or why instead of giving answers that diffuse that emotion I haven’t given promises of glory, honour, and power within the ONA in exchange for absolute obedience.

Why I have bothered to be so resolute in my impartiality, to be fair, or a gentleman, to give away so much, to offer so much freely and without asking for anything in return: when humanity is, the way it is. Dangerously, there is no answer I have found: no abstract on which to hang my hat or believe in that supports my conduct, no ultimate ideology that rewards my kindness or grace, and nobody to which I am answerable. And the more often I sit in public and watch people, the more I hate them... the more that diplomatic assurance of their innocence crumbles, disintegrates, falls away to leave black hollows seeping with selfish poison. And so, I wonder, if things were different, if I were to suddenly direct my soldiers to kill, to do all those things I have cautioned them about, to cease to demystify the ONA and feed, nurture, the obvious conclusions if it should make me feel better that I was responsible for Chaos instead of Compassion. If I were to give up my chaste mantle and HATE the world as much as it hates me... to be Satanic, and not Stoic. And while I wrack my brains looking for an answer as to why I should not, I watch yet another person pawing at their friend in the street, gossiping about mindless trivia, blaming another and trying to persuade someone else to join them in their abject stupidity...

But is that their fault or the fault of the people that control them?

That question in itself is a cop-out. People that lack the power to Know Thyself are just fucking stupid. And frankly, the time or the patience for calm measured logic or emotional disarmament is coming to an end, so who cares? Many of our Grandfathers fought vicious wars and gave their all for their country’s freedom: and for what? Would they have been pleased to know that their fighting, suffering and valiant stand would end in THIS? Would they have bothered to keep fighting if they had known that having the latest technology would become so indispensable in day to day living for so many, or that letting all our Australian companies and heritage be sold off to foreign interests to make a buck would occur? Would they have fought Germany so hard if they had known what the USA would do afterwards? My god the USA is the Holocaust Incarnate, killing people inside and out. And what goes on? More shite about the Nazis, more whining about the Germans, more endless sinister sounding background music and ominous pro-Jewish voice-overs apparently still in shock as to the so-called atrocities of the Nazis. Blah blah blah. Would the ANZACS have bothered to give their lives so some useless dregs could populate the streets wearing pants that have to be held up with one hand, while whining or causing trouble with their presence, their arrogance, their degeneracy in their little clubs and gangs. These dregs are all culpable, cullable, killable.

So, you advocate killing other humans' beings?

Subject to the rules of culling and the tests provided for measuring a person's character to see if they are worth sparing – Yes, I do. And so enraged am I by what I see, so saddened and enervated by the futility of Ways and Forms and People, and yet so conflicted as to how to judge who should be killed or what should be attacked am I, that I have turned to contemplating killing myself.

What? Are you serious?

Ever heard the term 'Blaze of Glory'? As I find myself and my optimism irrepressibly beaten down by a drudge existence and repeatedly surrounded by fucking fools and degenerate scum – that powerful protective abstract I set up so long ago of being a man of Honour, Courage, Integrity, Fairness and Compassion is cracking, breaking and falling away. Perhaps the worst has happened and I have become like them I hate so much, perhaps I have become ordinary – no longer steeled against my emotions and cooled with rational intellect but savage and stupid, angry and ready to lash out and blame and gossip and poison and hate and wallow. But even at this low point – I'm different, I'm not like that. I'm a pragmatist at heart and I don't have the failings inside that cause people to go on a shooting rampage or hurt and harm others just for the sake of feeling better, in fact perhaps that was why I never made a very good Satanist because I was just too nice. No, I am a great believer in energy conservation why cause myself more suffering or cause more suffering to anyone else when I can just snuff out the source of it all? That selfish horseshit where people go out on a killing spree that's just as bad as any of the shit I see where people throw their rubbish in the street, bully someone, or talk about someone behind their back... it's all too human. I doubt I'll be remembered for long – what did I ever do? But if I am remembered for something, anything – I don't want it to be, despite all the gravitation towards it I feel as this Magian energy descends upon me to defeat me, as another selfish asshole.

I don't know what to say, I still don't know if you're serious, you don't strike me as a guy who is joking.

I'm not.

Okay... Well, you spoke about a Sorceress who you are now receiving training from – could you tell me a little more about that?

The magical approach of the Sorceress, utilises some of the symbology of the ONA as way points, but is a solitary practitioner of the Sinister with hard-line views about the faults of the Order. The Sorceress and I met some five years ago and have been on/off contact throughout them in a collaborative and sometimes explosive effort to achieve our own agendas. Of all the people I've corresponded with or met, the Sorceress is the most knowledgeable when it comes to magic. It was her magic in fact that brought me my Anima in the shape of my current Mistress, her wisdom that has helped me survive the madness of the occult labyrinth and taught me an astonishing deal about black magic, sorcery and occult lore, her patience that has tempered my impulsive approach to Satanism, and her influence on my decisions and understanding of magic has in no small way given rise to the unique Temple of THEM.

Together we've attempted a lot of covert infiltrations into all kinds of organisations, IOT, The RuneGild, Tempel ov Blood, O.N.A, to name a few, have borrowed one another's talents to bring about circumstances beneficial to either of us, inc the magical destruction of enemies of the Sorceress, and our separate strengths have balanced each other out considerably. My intellectualization of magic has prompted her to write down and share her mostly oral tradition and wisdom, and her unrivalled devotion to Sorcery, esp. in this day and age, has inspired me to attempt all manner of mad physical quests to understand Sorcery. I should point out that since she has no desire to be noticed or recognised the way I do, a lot of the credit she deserves for her role in the formation of our nexion goes by the wayside – as it does for the other four Sinisterion involved in this experiment. But it's necessary to poke a figurehead out from the shadow at this point and well, I'm that figurehead.

Do ONA and THEM work together?

We act separately but our understanding of the ONA is powerful enough that we have been able to flow with and thus aid their forms in Symbiosis/Mimesis.

Sorry... I expected a longer answer. Can you give me any more details?

No.

ONA has referred to you guys as an 'Associate' of the ONA, but you cite yourselves as the Australian Nexion of the ONA. How does that make you feel?

What? It doesn't make me feel anything. I am not, and never have been an accepted member of what could be called the Inner ONA. At best, I have remained on the outside as a devoted (and it seems, respected) librarian and Sinister Initiate simply doing his part to keep the Tradition alive in my own way. I don't know any of ONA's members personally and have only ever interacted with the Order in an online capacity -during which I've received guidance at various times for my Journey that enabled me to grow beyond a given moment or answer a difficult question, or contacted a representative to discuss one of the dozens of projects that were influenced into being via my exposure to living the Sinister Way. I don't know who DL, CB, AL, really are, except from what I can divine from the internet. And in many ways that personal distance has been the catalyst for my particular vein of wisdom. So, I'm quite content to be called an Associate – that's what I am. ONA have always been gentlemen where efforts to add to the Tradition have been appreciated and I have had more than my fair share of praise from it throughout the years. I understand why ONA does not jump to officially embrace our group or myself as ONA. I understand and I accept it.

I see. Can I ask if you are the author of 'Diary of a Devilworshipper'?

Yep, I am.

Is your real name Ryan Frank as it says in the Introduction to Volume I?

Nope.

Who is Ryan Frank then?

Just another Pseudonym.

How many Pseudonyms do you have?

About fifteen.

Wow. Really? Fifteen is a lot, how do you keep track of them all?

Um, using the computer regularly so I can remember all the different passwords is pretty important because I don't have them written down anywhere. And each role has a different point to make or function to play so it's not so hard. I don't really sign anything with my/a name anymore. But occasionally I get them confused. I used to care, but I don't now. Anyway, no-one seems to notice the mistakes I make nearly as much as I do/did.

So, Is Thoth the same person as Ryan Anschauung?

Yep, they're both me.

I've seen various posts written around the net in forums discussing ONA under different names, what about AA or flay or Khk? Are you these people too?

Flay and Khk, Yep, they're me too. A.A. is an associate.

Tnepres Ra?

Yep, that's me.

Is there some special significance behind using the name Thoth?

Not really. We began abbreviating the name of the TEMPLE OF THEM to TOT. But I didn't want to be known as the TOT or TOTH so I changed the T's into crosses, and we ended up with the symbol +O+. Every time I get some profound insight, I tend to change my name. I note that I seem to have been working toward more and more impersonality in them. After Friend Ley I wanted to distance my title even further from a solid form so I made it Thoth. It fits my role as a teacher being the name of the Egyptian God of Wisdom and all, not that I equate myself with him. But it was just a convenient way to say The temple Of Them.

Hm. Why would you use so many different identities?

Originally, to prove to myself that I could do what the ONA does online, and a couple of other things about the ONA. Secondly, for intelligence gathering – you learn a lot about how people perceive you or your form from a third person reconnaissance. Thirdly, for entertainment. And fourthly because I'm probably a little bit mad.

Has anyone noticed you're so many other people?

Noticed it? Nah, I don't know – no-one's ever mentioned it. I'm sure some people have made a connection between some of the names but no-one has seemed too interested in discussing it. Does it matter so long as I'm communicating what I want to communicate?

I suppose not. I've seen pictures of Myatt and Beest but I've never seen a picture of you. Why not?

What do pictures of Myatt or Beest have to do with me? The point of me using all those nicknames was anonymity. And that anonymity is something I intend to keep. I've never published my full name or a picture or description of myself and I intend to keep it that way. Not even the other members of THEM know my full name. I don't think it would make a difference to people what shell the intelligence they collaborated with took in real life anyway. It's all about communicating consciousness in the end, invisible consciousness.

So, you don't want recognition, not even after all this time for all the hard work and the whole wealth of insights into ONA and the occult that you've given to so many people, myself included?

To be honest, some, sure. But not by face. Just by name. Because you can do a lot with a name. When it comes to form you need to make one that is enticing, something that can hook people and allow them to catch on to your current.

I have a friend who says he knows who you are.

Do you just. That's one of the strangest things I've ever heard. Why do people think that just because I don't want to show my face that I'm more interesting? Surely "who I am" is completely irrelevant? But go ahead then, tell me who I am.

He says you're Myatt in another disguise.

Does he? All these internet games have really fucked with people's perceptions, haven't they? I'm Thoth from Australia, I'm not David Myatt. And that's as close as you're ever going to get to knowing who I am. But I'm not Myatt.

How old are you?

I'm 30 next year. (In 2009)

You're pretty young to be writing books.

Yeah, I'm a freak huh? I don't question it – maybe I'm a bit mad or horribly sane – but something in me likes to write and needs to write so I've written a lot. And I'm proud of what I've written – I think its good work.

Why are you being so honest, assuming you are, with me in this interview?
Doesn't that risk giving away who you are?

Nah., I don't think so. I'm a bit tired of being split into so many other personalities, been doing that for a loooong time, and I've told you my age because I want people to see that even someone as young as twenty-nine can make a mark in Satanism. Besides, you asked for an interview, and I accepted – and since you're asking straight questions, I'm giving you straight answers. In fact, I always give straight answers to those who come to chat with empty hands. Anyway, this is my last interview.

It's a real honour that I am in that position, but why? THEM looks like it's doing great, spreading fast, and your Temple is making quite a name for itself, why stop now?

Eh, boredom mostly. Frustration, Anger, Sadness at all that I have seen and been a part of, I suppose. I watched a lot of ONA inspired groups rise and fall, and still they do, like a martial cadence, and while I achieved what I wanted to achieve with the ONA (I understand a lot of people envy my position) and have been able to give guidance from my own path to others via THEM- I think a lot of conclusions about life and especially about the occult have finally come down to rest for me. The world is not worth saving and any group that tries to bring Chaos and Destruction to bring about Armageddon, Ragnarok or any of that shite idealism is really only doing the ordinary: the human boring and mundane, the same selfish plod of me me me it's always done. Besides, I doubt anyone really ever understood what the Temple of THEM was even about or why I was doing what I was really doing. And you know what? For once, I'm not going to bother to explain.

Does this mean THEM will no longer be aiding the ONA?

Indirectly I think our work will aid ONA for a while yet. But directly, yeah probably, but I'm more than just a member, or should I say associate, of ONA y'know. THEM's six managed to infiltrate a lot of the more prominent magical groups worldwide: Temple of Set, Church of Satan, Illuminates of Thanateros, Misanthropic Luciferian Order, Tempel ov Blood, A:.A:. OTO, all we had to do was change shape. Form is everything. plus, many of the members of Mvimaedivm have considerable experience in many other systems, and so on... so I've had constant exposure to the concepts of the occult for a while now. Overall, it seems that each group has its strengths and its weaknesses. Each group has some really good ideas but also several really bad ones. Whether its restrictions on its members, moral overtones, dualism, including Jewish-qaballah, involving the occult in politics, pointless rites of magic, or whatever; the whole situation with occult groups is, to quote another one of THEM: "FUBAR. Fucked Up Beyond All Recognition."

This all sounds pretty grim...

Yeah. The shadow cast by Wisdom is Despair.

What will you do?

I don't know. What is there to do?

I should probably ask a few more questions on behalf of people since this is your last interview. Would you like to comment on your Tarot Deck?

Sure. The Naos Deck. It's been really useful to me these past five or so years. I brought my first car with the money I made from the Tarot, a VH Holden Commodore v8. White. I really liked that car. I got my license late, and I went after it so I could practice ONA Rituals in the bush. I had it for 10 months before I crashed it while driving stoned when I was 22. I nearly killed myself and two of my friends so I gave up drinking shortly after that incident. I still really like the Naos Deck, the colours especially turned out great, and just the memory of how much effort I put into making it work, designing it, painting it, working out how to get it printed, assembling the deck and managing the sales of it, all that hard work and perseverance still makes me smile and gives me satisfaction of a job well done. I only have two decks left of the original 18. A couple of decks I gave away to friends in ONA and THEM or Mistresses, but the rest have kept me able to do so many things over the years by providing a quick boost of cash when I really needed it. People I gave sets to still say they like them and use them, and the other day someone told me he was still putting his set to good use. I hope he didn't mean he used it to chock the front door open... It's still the only complete ONA Tarot too y'know.

I understand there was talk of another set? So, are there any plans for more?

Of Naos? I don't think so. I don't think demand is high enough. It's a pretty rare thing to get someone so passionate about the ONA that they are willing to spend a thousand dollars to practice part of it. I've approached a couple of publishers over the years but none have answered in reply. So, I guess it's one of those time and place things destined to be rare. I do want to finish Archetypia though.

What's Archetypia?

It's my own impressions of what certain ideas are. You could check more out about it on Aeclectic Tarot Forums where I have a write up about it, but it's not another tarot – it doesn't have any structural restrictions like Naos did, it's my own impression of the essence of certain archetypes. Like Change, the Magician, Satan, or the Coming Aeon.

What about the Diary of a Devilworshipper, is there actually seven volumes and will they ever be made available from the lulu store?

I've been asked this before. Here's an answer that still applies.

Sent to one of THEM Feb 9th 2006.

Well, one aim was to prove through conclusive evidence that certain theories of mine were possible. What many of those theories are, shouldn't be revealed at this stage but one such aim was to prove for myself that single-handedly, a mythos could be created and sustained. THEM has managed to do that. The surface of these forms continues to be misunderstood – and while that occurs, I will continue to teach people what lies beneath – as that is the true course of my existence, to help, or as DM puts it so nicely, to stop the suffering. This, by changing the cycles that usually dominate unconsciously by showing how humans evolve. Whether using Satanism to do this has or hasn't been effective is not really a concern – I believe my work has brought life to Satanism and holds its own against any proponents of its different systems because of the raw self-honesty, willingness to expose my own stupidity, misunderstanding, arrogance, ignorance etc without the need for having to be seen as a superhuman masculine male who must always be right lest his ego be challenged.

I am as supremely arrogant as I am humble – though I should point out that the arrogance arrives from living Satanically, that is to say, bounded within that form and the parameters an – Ism creates. To continue my work, it may be necessary to leave Satanism altogether as the last and final form of my interest, behind, and begin anew in a different direction or fashion. The books – so called Six and Seven are in fact viewed as real books – though to acknowledge their contents now would be to divulge too much. Obviously, this won't be released for another two years at least, so I can tell you that 'book six' is another experimental black magical practice [though black magic and its context in relation to its author should be understood before making assumptions] viewed as the organic Now; that is, as a living narrative taking place in the present time in the interactions fostered by this group and its members as an experiment designed to test a number of the above hinted at theories and to see how difficult it is to implement changes to existing forms or give rise to a new one altogether. That of course by setting some handicaps such as not relying on the usual channels that bring a form together, notoriety, or popularity.

Book Seven I am told is a reference to some distant record that might perhaps be made of THEM's involvement with the ONA that someone somewhere might write concerning any changes that THEM to manage to invoke via its short-lived [but life-long for its author] manifestation. Thus, book six is happening Now with its authors, characters and story line determined by the actions, motions and concepts brought forth by THEM and its interaction with others in the hopes that it can indeed presence a new Archetype. While Book Seven is what might be written about THEM should it manage to do it and prove the worth of its 'Science'. That is, if THEM's experiment works, then it will leave behind a wealth of highly detailed information on the movement and methodology to provide a powerful model for future Satanism. I think that this is something that will not be understood and might even be foolhardy to prematurely expose or inform people of – what is essentially non-satanic takes aboard those most likely to have passion and a malleability that can be affected through the form of Satanism and changes them in accordance with that archetype which some have termed the Thinking Warrior.”

I've read some of the new Volume Five available at Mvimaedivm group, and I also was lucky enough to have a copy of the original one placed on lulu for a few weeks. The two versions are like two completely different books, was this the intention?

Yep. The first one was an attempt to show the rise of the group THEM by showing various stages in its formation as time progressed until THEM became the Temple it is today. Or was then, at least. But I abandoned that version. I didn't think it was good enough to accompany the others, and at best it was a still unformed idea of what I wanted to express. You can read 'Secrets of Mvimaedivm' at lulu for more information. But the second version of V5 is much, much better.

Are there any writings you haven't published that you think would be of interest to people, or to the followers of THEM?

Heh, they wouldn't like the term followers. Uh, yeah, I never stop thinking, and I've been writing since I was twelve. I lost a hell of a lot of material in a computer crash, but I still have the ideas in my head. I have about 700 pictures of alternate and rough tarot drawings that might be of interest to some people. Thousands of pages of correspondence, and discussions and letters with many magical groups. Uh, a dream journal that probably gives a great insight into my pathology, I certainly think it would help others interpret dreams. I also have two huge boxes of papers to be sorted containing all kinds of mad shit that I wrote about or recorded from my path. I had to pick and sort through them to find material appropriate to the themes of Mvimaedivm (DOAD) but I had to leave a lot out. I would perhaps have liked to include more but it's really not necessary, Mvimaedivm achieved its aim, it would just be egoistic stuff to flesh it out. I've had a pretty busy life.

You seem pretty relaxed Thoth. I've read other interviews with THEM (with Thoth) and you're not usually so flippant or informal in your replies.

Yeah, well people don't really know me, do they? I reckon I have a great sense of humour for instance. But you can't show that in Satanism – the two don't go together. Because you notice, soon as anyone satanic says anything funny, they quickly move to cover it up with more seriousness. It's like a hole you have to fill. And anyway, do you have any idea how stoic and hard-ass you have to be to keep the secrets of hundreds of people and a dozen powerful satanic organisations? I've had to watch myself for a long time, be very careful in what I say or who I say it to. I've not even scratched or revealed the tip of the iceberg in what I've said about the form-based information (not the context) of groups like the TOB, IOT or the ONA. Nope, like a vault I've stored thousands of secrets I've watched others desperately dig for. I've let out a few, but only in context. Like what ONA is. But all the cloak and dagger, the diplomacy, the perception necessary for others to have: all requires hard work and a lot of silence. It's tiring, mostly unrewarding work keeping secrets. It makes a man grim, hard and careful with every word. In case you can't tell, I'm also very loyal. Now that I feel a time is coming when I won't have to need to take the role of filtering such secrets as I teach aspiring Adepts, I can just take those secrets with me: what the eye doesn't see, the heart doesn't grieve over.

You mean like the meaning of Fayen?

Lol! No. Wow... Fayen is recent, like a month, yes? No, I mean older secrets. Questions that should be asked but don't seem to be that are waiting right under the noses of people using the Septenary System. Look, you all know there are a lot of unasked questions, you probably have a lot you want to ask ONA yourselves if you ever got the chance. I offered that chance openly and candidly to the occult community but few cared to reply- funnily, that even as so many obsess over the ONA, they don't want to ask it questions directly. But I don't care. It's all over for me. I don't want to answer any more questions, and I don't want the responsibility of guiding any more minds or hands outside of Mvimaedivm. I answered the question about Fayen in Mvimaedivm group. That information comes directly from a friend (or associate) from the ONA.

So, you have friends in the ONA?

Well one or two, now and then, if and when. I still seek guidance from the ONA sometimes.

Is “Darklogos9” one of them?

Sure. Dark Logos is a friend.

Do the ONA like THEM?

Well, yes, clearly, or they would have been as acidic with us as with others, but I think, tolerate is probably more how they would see it. ONA are or can be extremely aggressive and possessive of their Mythos. But on the other hand, we understand the ONA can't afford to make official alliances. ONA doesn't like giving the power created by its mythos over easily. To be quite honest, though they may never admit it, ONA went through a tough transition these last few years, and I think the work of Ryan Anschauung, Tnepres Ra, Friend Ley, Thoth, whatever you want to call him, helped in no small way to get them back on track.

The ONA has certainly been gracious enough to extend its gratitude for any help I have given them, and likewise, I have been gracious enough to do the same. ONA and THEM worked in symbiosis to achieve and extend the goals of both groups but primarily ONA – but we've also had some fierce disputes too, all of which ended in stalemate. Together we played a great game, and it was as much fun as it was a serious endeavour of like-minds. But now I am done and leaving the company of the men and women with whom I played chess, to their own devices. Confident that I have served the interests of the Order the best that I can while I was an associate. I left behind a lot of writing too.

You certainly did. And a lot of people grateful for it.

I get that impression.

Are THEM Chaos Magickians?

No – we don't flit from form to form without gaining any depth in it. We try to understand form, its 'mechanics' and its relation to the human need for it. So, no.

This might sound silly but is THEM a secret society?

Well not anymore! Heh, no, a secret society tends to be a bit more secretive, yeah? Look I could have said a lot more than I have about a lot of different things – but that silence is what earns respect and a hand in the dealings of Sinister people, so in that respect we are in an alliance with certain secret societies, but mostly open practitioners in some way related to a serious practice of Traditional Satanism as defined by the Order. But there are several strains represented through Mvimaedivm that allow for greater diversity in respect to that definition. Basically, THEM is an experiment by a group of people heavily involved in black magic, heresy and heurisy. THEM is private about the details of its actual affairs and inner movement but spreading our particular Mythos serves a purpose crucial to our experiment. I know it all sounds a bit mysterious, and I have been very guarded in my replies today, but rest assured, we fully intend to complete our thirty-year charter and give Australia a genuinely Sinister History.

Is THEM in any way a Neo-Nazi group?

THEM will use whatever it needs to get the job done so in some cases we may have come across as a bit Neo-Nazi. But not really no – in the end it is an assessment of individual character not colour that stands tall.

I read that Mvimaedivm and the Temple of THEM were founded in July of 2006 – is that correct?

Yes, it is.

So, you don't claim any mystical lineage or to belong to the same Sinister Tradition as ONA, Albion, Hyperborea or anything like that?

No. Everything has to start somewhere. The seeds for THEM were probably planted around 2003 with my failure to spark life into any of the other groups I founded. I felt that this was probably due to my own lack of occult reach, knowledge and power at the time and that I lacked the right ‘fire’ to head an occult society. Over the following years I gained respect from others including the ONA as I worked hard on myself and my path and shared as much as I could in the process. It was probably due to my unorthodox approach to magic more than anything that made me interesting enough to create and maintain a group. I think I originally hoped that I would be able to succeed Anton Long as Grand Master of the ONA if only I worked hard enough – that is, take over when he inevitably would need a new representative if he ever left or turned his back after becoming an Immortal. But I’ve since abandoned that hope.

Why?

Why? (long pause) Because not long ago, I was welcomed by the ONA into their definition of the new elite.

Are you serious?

Yes. I am.

Why did they do that?

I’ve been unwaveringly loyal to the ONA and its Mythos for a good nine years. I’ve risked everything in the course of that time, my relationship with my family, my friends, girlfriends, influential occultists and groups, my freedom, my life, and my time. Time is something you never get much of, and never get back. By the time you become a smart enough occultist to understand the world you’re generally reaching middle-age. Assuming you started early like me. Just quietly, I think I deserve the respect given to me and to be recognised as a serious occultist. I would hope that when people are done (or at least, as well as) devouring the likes of books full of demonic correspondences, home-made ritual and not much else, that they would pay my work a visit. I’ve tried very hard to cut through the bullshit in the occult world using myself as a guinea pig. My work saves time.

Well, it did for me, but you’re saying that the ONA welcomed you into their elite?

Into their definition of an elite, yes.

What like the new Christos Beast? Does that mean you’re now an Adept or a Master? What? No nothing like that. It means my work efforts were recognised and my understanding of some things admired but it doesn’t make me an Adept or anything like that. From my point of view – I’m going to be working on that for the rest of my life.

Why didn't you say this earlier – is it breaking the vow of silence you took with ONA to tell me this?

I guess it's just my way of making things final. Acknowledging and letting it be acknowledged that I achieved what I set out to do – as always – though not necessarily what the ONA wanted me to achieve. And possibly. But I've held dozens of secrets for the Order over the years. I'm entitling myself to share one. The ONA may simply deny it if it troubles them I've made such a claim. Such is the way of secret societies.

Would the ONA deny it if I asked them?

You'll have to ask them.

That's really interesting. Okay well let's move onto some of my other questions. Do you believe in a New World Order that controls or seeks to control everything?

Hm. What a question... As it stands, a lot of my literature contains references to a grand opponent called the Magian (a terminology borrowed under my influence from the ONA) – and the definition and justification of that term has changed a lot for me as time's gone by. The first time in my life I realised I had such a thing as enemies was during interactions with people I didn't like, or who didn't like me. Then at around twelve enamoured in my Christian stint and sorely disappointed by the result, God became my enemy, and thus contra wise, Satan my friend. It was a nice easy simplistic set of rules to play by back then.

Later on, it was not God that provoked my ire, I reasoned that God was a product of imagination, of people, and turned my attention to those people who took God out of context to create Christianity. When of course I realised the historical and societal significance that Christianity had achieved I was floored by its power and set my bar higher to encompass the whole idea and religiosity of the Church and Papacy. Of course, in my day to day interactions with people I realised that it wasn't just Christians that were my enemies, or that I didn't like or who didn't like me, and by that stage I had reached an age where I was very impressionable and went looking for answers by others, during which I found the concept of Racism appealed to me because it tended to keep those people close to me, bonded to me, in solidarity. Then of course, as my absorption of Racist ideology became more potent, I began to see the Whites being played off against the Blacks, and so the world had become a battleground for me with two empty slots into which I would insert two opposing qualities.

Due to the concepts I met with in Sociology, Psychology and so on, I met with the concept of Capitalism which I came to understand was influenced by the Jews. As my interest in Satanism deepened I was forced to concentrate on my Innerself during which I began to understand my connection to myself to others to my mind my body and how it and I functioned – a lot of experiences taught me various elements about prejudices, self-honesty, blame, weakness, strength, cowardice, nobility, and so on. And this would have helped me to slowly unravel my hand from around the throat of an invisible abstract.

However, after ONA, and several other strong influences including New Ageism, Conspiracism, Satanism and so on, the material I had absorbed affected me enough to make me quite paranoid of Secret Societies once more, including the power and reach of the Church. A lot of fingers from the groups and interests I had involved myself with pointed to the Jewish Element, and by proxy the Christian element. However, my study of Nazism had led me to believe that there was more to the simplistic stories I had been telling myself for years and I began to wonder what was beneath my perception of the world as a battleground. Some things just didn't add up and I became decidedly more sceptical that my perception of events, history and Weltanschauung was accurate. A small example of this is given in Vol 3 of the DOAD viz. There's No Place Like Home where I examined the conscious views I held of my parents.

Historically, so far as I could tell the Jews had previously been called the Hyksos and had been an ancient nomadic group kicked out of most of the countries in the ancient world for practising money lending and usury. Later, as the Jews they continued the same practice which practices influenced or directly erected, Capitalism. Capitalism gave rise to Materialism, and Materialism seemed to be the one factor that all my enemies shared as a characteristic reason behind their behaviour. So, no longer feeling that it was colour that defined people but character, I began to wonder if I were right to condemn the Jews as behind some sort of super conspiracy. This got all the more complicated when an associate expanded the historical nature of the Jews for me to include Islam, Christianity, and Judaism as stemming from the one prophet Mohamed – a history lesson in which I realised just how deficient I was, and probably would always be, in the Facts necessary to make a reasonable accurate judgement of IT ALL.

From there and because of my close proximity with the ideology of the ONA I began to turn my attention to what I felt was a sort of giant super factory that manufactured that type of character due to its immersion and role in Capitalism, Jewry, Christianity, and Materialism. Viz, America. And, to continue to practice Satanism – it is indeed necessary to have an enemy. But for a long time now I've not been studying the outer forms presented by the ONA in the way of alchemical correspondences, the star game, dark gods – but rather, been trying to work out why these forms are being presented and for what reason. Unfortunately, (or fortunately) the insights I have gained from watching the ONA build their Mythos has had the effect of making me understand the world in terms of Form. What happens when all of those name's ideas and projections you have built, all those forms you trust in as real concrete happenings become perceived as a set of empty abstracts that you have projected outward – is devastating to you. The idea of a New World Order is not so easy to believe in – but that point of view has been the catalyst to overcome that has provided a great deal of the dynamism in my struggle with myself. Without it, without a wall to push against or push over or push through – there is only a vacuum that dangerously resembles the Zen of the Buddhist, or the union with perfect peace or God that threatens to rend my image of myself as a Satanist working to destroy the Church, inoperable.

To some extent, I've had to decide whether to go with my gut instinct or heart, or to continue lying to myself and deceiving myself that I am at War with some all-pervasive force(s) that are threatening to destroy the world. So many times, I have come up empty handed with an answer as to if something is controlling the world and I have been forced to return to ask myself if perhaps I am paranoid delusional or simply trapped in a fantasy of my own making. And yet I see that same character, that materialistic gleam, or selfish activity in people, all the time. And so, I have come to understand that objectively, I can never really know, if the problems of the world lie with America, the Church, The Jews, the Magian, or simply with me. And that is torturous – because my action and direction come from knowing what to do, knowing what brick to push or which level to pull to bring some change to something else.

And wherein, I think that I am now at a point in my life where I am standing at the mouth of the Abyss. All the intellectual reasoning and speculation and elaboration I have so carefully developed is of no use and no comfort because I know it is not impartial. All the willpower I have developed from years of diligence and devotion to living the Sinister Way of the ONA, the years I spent concentrating on just one thing whether it was the Tarot or living like a Nazi, are of no use to me because will-power can do nothing for me here when there is nothing to Will, nothing to overcome. And as I dwell on all of this and the processes I've been through, I am really back to square one – engulfed in that feeling of the ineffable sadness of the tragedy of human life because of the way humans are and the way I am. I was quite astonished to read that Anton Long's journey had resulted in a similar mournful lament – I did not think, given the Mythos of the ONA that his concern with human suffering would be the result of so much evil. And continuing it – that is why I mentioned the possibility of his age influencing his work. But anyway, I felt that I was alone in that mourning and for that reason, a failed Satanist unable to revel in wicked deeds but only shake my head at myself in pity. And I think that for a long time yet to come, I will be trying to work out whether the Enemy is Within or Without.

Whoa. Okay. I came across a phrase you used in one of your Diaries, “To Be First Human”, but I haven’t really seen anything else written down about it – could you elaborate on it for me please?

Sure. My aim in life is to make the world a better place – and largely that means a lot of the onus of responsibility for the way it is rests squarely on the shoulders of each of its inhabitants. I suppose it is confusing to some people that I have chosen what is generally a “Dark, Evil, or Black Path” by which to be altruistic to do it – but my reasons for choosing ‘Satanism’ are many and I believe they are sound. As it stands, I believe that all the work I have done for myself in the way of inner development has made me a better person, has led to my good understanding of the human mind, and has, via what I term ‘alchemy’ – changed me into someone not easily swayed because of the depth of my analysis into any form that presents itself, given me the patience, understanding, integrity, loyalty and empathy to endure and continue to endure the slings and arrows resulting from the self-honesty I treasure as the key to my Wisdom, and by my example of self-striving to better myself influenced a great many people around me to think more seriously, more carefully, more deeply, on the forms that surround them, how they use those forms, and also how others use them.

Is that what THEM is for?

Partly. But THEM won’t be understood if people think it is standing on one side of the fence. It’s a complex assortment of people doing a complex assortment of things. We’re not good or evil – if anything we’re frightfully pragmatic and therein people who’ve worked with the Dark Gods, confronted the shadow, etc will understand why “THEY” serve as an appropriate epithet. THEM is capable of healing as much as it is harming.

Would you say that you are a Gnostic, a Hermeticist, Alchemist, or Satanist?

Hm. Just to make it clear, this answer applies only to me, the other members of THEM have their own personal self-schema. I’m not real clear if there’s a definition for me in any of those. I don’t know – “Heurist” always struck me as a fitting description of what I do – but there’s a reason our imagery lacks any overt symbols. Our Manifesto showcases a hand-headed (“hand-crafted” in Initiatory terms) eagle wearing a blank medallion and holding a flag with nothing on it. But you would completely miss the point if you thought that the symbol of no symbol was appropriate to use to represent us. Vol III of Mvim. Has a poem in it called Ideathology – representing a point in my path where forms began to dissolve, where a certain perspective of things began to emerge that is characteristic of the driving force behind THEM. That is, that there is an essence of esoteric currents, invisible but for the traces they leave as they manifest in temporal forms that can be felt as living, writhing energies, Wyrð, propelling certain things into the forefront of collective consciousness. And part of this is our belief in the momentum gathering underneath the human psyche that not only are people becoming wiser to the double-sided nature of forms and increasingly becoming disenchanted with present and past forms to provide a narrative, but to understand consciously that forms are not forever or as concrete and fixed as they and their makers might make them seem – but temporary shapes used to define a section of the black clay or Change.

A conscious acknowledgement of the perceived power the Magian have, as opposed to the real power they have, is increasing the ability each person possesses to wrest that power back. We have successfully entered the engagement and offered an alternative to bouncing back and forth off the forms presented and a reliance on form itself. Thus, THEM can teach the systems of a form as presented by its makers, and then what we perceive beneath that form and its currents.

Okay well now I'm almost out of my prepared questions and it's almost 2 in the morning here, If you could change anything about the world, what would it be?

I don't like the word "if". I think that's why people take on the title of Satanist, so they can live the archetype of Satan and aspire toward the grand illusion of beating the odds.

The odds of what?

Being significant. What I want to change about the world is tied up in my Work.

So, you wouldn't ask for World Peace or No Suffering?

I'm not that naive.

What is the difference between THEM and the ONA?

Hm. Every difference, ONA is Myatt's personal Wyrd, THEM is mine. ONA has been active in the Sinister Satanic stage for about forty years. And THEM, just three. Before the ONA, I was a very different person, very. The influence ONA has had on me is profound – beyond anything I could have imagined. I have always been very intense, very determined, very sure of myself and my goal to destroy Christianity. Of course, the Sorceress has also had an immense effect on my perception as she often played the role of Devil's Advocate in my advancement. So being tempered between their forces has forced me to thoroughly examine my various moves and motivations the entire time. Realising the immovable was meeting the unstoppable I suppose my perception transcended a conviction of absolutism in either form – both of which represented the distilled essences of everything still of any value to me in terms of teachings. THEM is thus the spawn I guess, of my influence by Anton Long, the Sorceress, and my own amalgam of both of these tutors. From my point of view, I've been taught magic and Satanism by two ruthlessly honest and direct Masters/Mistresses. And I think that would be the major difference I think, that I'm still a student of Masters. But I'm ready to put into practice all that I have learned and am learning... and while I have a strong background in the Septenary Way (on which I intend to build) a lot of my understanding resembles nothing close to the Mythos or Methodology of the ONA. THEM has been gaining a reputation as a bastion for many different mature strains of the Sinister as well as an audience increasingly ready to embrace the methodology of form and narrative magic.

Well, it's getting late, so I want to thank you very much for taking the time to answer all my questions so thoroughly and patiently. It's been a real pleasure and I have so many more questions to ask but somehow, they seem to be stupid things to want to know in the face of what you've said tonight. So, Thoth, any last words from the Adept who founded THEM?

Yeah. Initiate. And I hope the ONA win. See ya Mark.

FORMATION:

To the Order of Nine Angles – A Letter to the Order,

It is with mixed feelings that I write this letter. I am in debt to ONA for what it has made of me and for the tools that it has provided that have allowed me to make this of me. In the spirit of genuine Satanism as applicable to ONA's understanding of it as an evolutionary procession – I write this letter to share further insights into the Order of Nine Angles organisation and the discoveries I have made of Satan. I have never signed my name as Tnepres Ra of ONA. Although I strongly consider myself an advocate of it, I am compelled to express myself in a fashion that illuminates even if it destroys – and so there is conflict in seeing myself as an ONA member. Rather, I think of my wander as something else that ONA seems not to pursue or purposely omits; the sacrificial journey of an avatar for collective psychic reunion. While ONA clearly travels along the lines of Jung's quest for individuation – using stages or grades of practical integration of certain memes and energies in order to restore a numinous charge to the symbolic and to nature, via angles, dark gods, and other archetypal mysteries, seeking to restore a charge lacking in almost all who use the occult and almost all but those select magical primitives that have not attained "modern" consciousness – THEM has arisen to bridge certain modes felt to be lacking within the Order.

I would hope that you see my insights as the aspiring sign that change is coming, that younger people are awakening even if that awakening creates waves for your generation and your structures. THEM lives. Nexus A) There is a theory in modern Psychology that goes something like this: Our minds, when formed, are protected from psychic harm by a container called the Ego that slowly builds up in strength as we grow in order to enable us to withstand the potentially harmful inner forces that dwell in our Unconsciousness. The Ego also helps to protect us from those outer forces that threaten us in the real world. If the Ego is damaged during crucial stages of its development, the container may break or leak under duress, allowing what is called 'the Abyss' in magickal terms or 'the collective unconsciousness' in psychological terms, to be released onto what we know as ourselves: the "I". The contents of the Unconsciousness are capable of being extremely dangerous and often surface as irrational impulses that clash head-on with the expected rules of society; Psychopaths and the impulsive/compulsive individual exhibit examples of the ability of the contents of the unconscious to interfere in sane growth.

Before humanity gained the level of consciousness that allowed us to recognise ourselves as individual thinking beings separate from the rest of the world, it was ruled by base desires and savage primal instincts. At some point in our evolution we were able to suppress our ruling animal instincts long enough for consciousness to arise; and we were raised to a state of self-awareness that allowed us to appraise and wonder at our own existence. This unique state of self-awareness is referred to as the "I" in 30 Psychology, and has long been regarded as the single-most fascinating achievement of the human organism, but the emergence of the 'I' came at a heavy price. In exchange for consciousness, we had to forcefully drive our natural instincts (the Collective Un-consciousness) back from the fore of our minds and forge a new kind of conscious collective agreement (the Collective Consciousness).

To help do this we created, and then instilled, values, group obligations and right conduct into and onto each other, further suppressing the raw state of our natural being. So long as we kept our primal dark forces in check, we were able to get along with each other relatively well and develop societies that were ruled by law, order, and learned proper conduct. But the primal instincts that dominated us could not be completely suppressed. While some adopted the new Conscious collective agreement and made a religion of holding back 'The Beast', some followed only in part practising its release in private, and still others refused (or were incapable) to suppress it at all, continuing to worship or live in our natural state of being. Those that made a religion of suppression were ill-prepared for the strength of their enemy. The Beast could not be tamed, and the forces of the unconscious were powerful beyond their wildest dreams. Although punishment was meted out to those unable to hold back the advancing forces of our primal being, as a social admonishment to discourage others from releasing what was imprisoned within, suppression did nothing to sate our desires and urges to behave naturally according to instinct and locking away our inner Beast only served to starve it.

Ravenous for release from its cage it strained and struggled at the feeble prison of the mind, tearing at the fragile walls of the sanity (Sanctuary) we erected to keep it out until the protective defences of the Ego were eventually overwhelmed and the suppressed forces manifested as unchecked acts of raw desire, often many times stronger than when originally imprisoned, and often expressed as acts of sadistic cruelty, murder, torture, brutality, violence, blood-lust, war, passion and rape. These forces have been variously named and interpreted, but are known by the name 'Demons' in magick, or as the 'Shadow' in Psychology. By forcing our instinct underground we committed ourselves to a life-long struggle against our very nature, in order to maintain an artificial existence. The artificial existence could only prosper under certain conditions: the most important of which was suppression of raw unconscious desires.

In our natural, uncontrolled state of being we were terrifying creatures suffused with a brutal, primal darkness that has been called "Chaos". Chaos is representative of the unconscious and is anathema to the Order that consciousness wishes to exist. Out of fear of the Beast, the sufficient release of which threatened to engulf the conscious accomplishments of humanity in chaos and destruction, various Religions and magical tribes came to call the unconsciousness by an unfavourable name, the equivalent of 'The Great Beast'. The acts of the Beast were named 'Demons' and all who were associated with the 'works' of the Great beast were condemned as 'Evil'. Yet those who fought the beast the hardest were often those most afflicted by its insurmountable power. The struggle to simultaneously suppress/release what we physiologically/biologically are, and wish to be, is an intricate balancing act that causes enormous psychological pressure on the Ego. Like steam, this pressure must be continually vented in brief puffs called 'outlets' I.e. as emotions, or human creations; and by which most of the building pressure of the energies (or the power of the demons) is released for the sake of the sanity of the being.

If such energies are kept under lock and key and an option to vent, to 'exercise the beast' is denied, the exertion needed by the ego and the conscious "I" of the being to hold back such forces will grow exponentially. The Ego can only do so much to hold them back until it is eventually overwhelmed. The fact that our natural state is one dominated by the unconsciousness tends toward its favour in a war of wills. No matter how much care is taken to control or remove them; like the phenomena of the stubborn weed, the tendrils of the unconscious will keep returning, writhing forth again and again into the fore of the mind in an endless struggle to choke the host plant into submission.

Without outlets, the forces grow stronger by the day until they grow powerful enough to over-run the defences of the Ego or shatter it completely, causing psychosis and/or madness. Likewise, if only some venting is allowed of the beast, primal energy will eventually build up enough strength to tear through the thin veil of protection offered by the ego, damaging it, and at the very least consume it with a barrage of irrational emotions and desires that drive the being to fulfil them or take out its frustration at being unable to fulfil them in other, often destructive ways. As it takes considerable time for consciousness to build up its defences against the irrational instincts of the Unconsciousness by developing our Ego, any early breakdown of the 'I' is scarring or traumatic for us. The 'I' is therefore protected by the ego until such time the 'I' has become strong enough to erect psychic barriers and defence mechanisms of its own. But while our consciousness builds defences in the mind to wall it off from the Unconsciousness; we are mostly unconscious from birth until our adolescence, and even after developing the Ego, may remain in thrall to our unconscious desires for most of our lives.

Yet effectively, we forget what we are in favour of what we are told we are by our environment and begin the arduous struggle of assimilating ourselves into society and life by learning how to tame the Beast. This act of forgetting and fighting our natural state of being without conscious knowledge of such a war causes intense internal conflict that lasts our whole lives just to sustain our Ego. The ego stores for us the unique, stable set of conditions we each live by, and our actions are motivated toward keeping those conditions just right or in 'homeostasis'. If however, those conditions are altered too much, the container risks breaking or leaking and psychosis may occur. For this reason, once set, the beliefs of people are often unchangeable; intertwined as they are with their world-view, their ego's protective mechanisms, and their very identity, they will fight like a cornered animal to reassert their view of reality if it be questioned or challenged. It is only through practical and thorough magical practice, or, psychic exploration, that the contents of the unconscious can carefully be integrated with the Ego to form a Super Consciousness, or Self.

NEXUS B) Taking the Sinister Tradition at face value; The creation of a mode of War in ONA's Sinister Tradition is based on two paradigms: one being "Magian" and the other "Sinister". The context of this War is taking place in Time, whereby the two forces battle for domination of Future Time, and gains by either side are measured by the achievements awarded to those forces whose achievements are seen as manifest in political/religious/magical & individual abstractions aligned with 'Magian' or 'Sinister' lodges. The struggle to usher in a new Sinister Aeon is carefully planned out by psychological returns to various stages of consciousness [citing over-simplistic examples of which I am sure you need only the gist; the hunt and kill of the rabbit using a bow by the neophyte = a return to primitiveness; the archetypal dark gods = to return consciousness to its numinous base and see gods in nature as does the magical primitive, etc] coupled with 32 chronological measurement devices such as Aeonics, to provide evidence of cosmic approval (or neutrality) that authenticates 'Satanic Strategy' or the Sinister Dialectic as a valid momentum on a global (or cosmic) scale.

ONA writes that a Galactic Race is to take precedent if all goes well with the Creation of a New Aeon and Gateway Nexion. Briefly stated: this is to be achieved by raising the consciousness of enough people to become Adepts and so pass on the Tradition until eventually Satanism becomes an openly practiced mode with implications that it will cause large-scale change in consciousness. Thus, ONA expresses an affirmative belief in the evolution of consciousness as beneficial and sets it and its integration with the unconscious, as one of its highest aims. This calculative alchemy of exponential growth owes much to the Order's interpretation of Satan itself: an interpretation that like all root ideals, forms the focus point from which all subsequent ideological works proceed in a specific vein. So far as the form 'Satanism' is promulgated by the ONA, ONA are the exemplary masters of Satanism.

It is here, however, that THEM, I and ONA differ in our levels of descent in the interpretation of Satan. Any recourse to dogma is of no use to me here. What I am speaking of when I talk of the ONA's momentum as regards the reunion of the Conscious and the Unconscious, simply shadows words; for these two forces integral in our nexions, one recent the other formed in time immemorial: are beyond apprehension by dates, and figures and rational argument proceeding from an educated, intelligent, or even well-informed view as regards the nature or origin of Satan, and are mere nothings in light of the subject matter. I may use a similar analogy here in how THEM approach discerning the nature of Satan as I may in discerning the deeper motivations of human behaviour . Put simply: while the Word 'Satan' is fairly recent – where does such an ancient form, collectively known across time and in all cultures, originate? Where does this numinous universal symbol reside?

It is certainly not in the rational intellect of the thinking extrovert/introvert who is at the mercy of the darkness of his total psyche by virtue of his "modern" state of consciousness. It does not originate in the Solar Cults of Albion (though it may have been practiced there), nor in the Sumerian Origins where Western Tradition is rumoured to have begun. An idea as old and omnipresent as 'Satan' by whatever name or form it is known, is an idea that manifests the world over in the psyche of the human being. Not just as darkness, shadows, demons, spirits, gods... it can be as creative as it can be destructive.

ONA's use of 'aitia' as Accused (even if historically correct) proceeds in a direction away from that base from an assertion that the interpretation of Satan was incorrect and ONA have made available public Satanic teachings to reflect this notion – yet, THEM know that this first interpretation itself is based on some pre-source or pre-force, from which came the interpretation. And we ask: What was it? We ask not where the conscious idea of 'Satan' comes from, but why it pre-existed in the unconscious before our species were even Conscious. Although ONA writes at length on Satanism, it is understood that the uniqueness of each person leaves no authority on his nature, and ONA can do nothing to reveal Satan – speaking of it in a mostly existential post-modern approach, exhorting that each must find their own interpretation.

THEM know ONA's Satan is neither truly defined by or is the sum total of 'aitia' Accused, or Accuser. ONA's Satan is beyond words and written records, abstracts, ideas etc – (Indeed I say even beyond time itself) but the specific subsequent assertion of this archetypes interpretation and the mission of ONA to initiate an evolutionary rise of consciousness of the unconscious operates on a level that leaves room for THEM. For the ONA's mode is chiefly one of 33 co-dependence on the fabricate matrix and we believe inadvertently obscures Satan by its omission of certain modes in unfortunate accordance with current attitudes of Western neglect; the major one being the Oneiric, or that of dreams. We have already discussed to a conclusion, that the ONA's public operations while wishfully of an immaterial nature are still based on subjectivity and not objectivity; because objectivity is like God, it cannot be proved.

THEM propose the following: 'Satan' is De-evolution. In order for the Conscious Being to raise itself above the 'Beast Within' its instinctual nature, the Unconscious, it must learn to force Conscious holograms into a reality to create for itself a stasis where the ego can grow. It must maintain these holograms lest it revert back to the Beast – and typically an eternal struggle of the Self and the Ego ensues until death. The reinforcement of holograms around a being by its parents, its peers and eventually by itself, are a means to consciously deny or 'forget' the beings origins as an Animal or Primal Being, and allow it to partake of 'Civilised Society' by building and maintaining a fabricate matrix of structures, objects, names, forces, gods, demons etc... upon the shoulders of the Beast, in order to 'forget' it, build an Ego, a tool that asserts Consciousness, and pushes out or holds back the Unconscious.

The essential War of each human being, then, is a biological/psychological fight between two states of Being; Consciousness and Unconsciousness; where each human fights to suppress or release the Beast as an innate act of asserting its natural truth as a primal animal, OR, to assert the fabricate matrix to establish Consciousness and its associated holograms as the new truth. In the case of the "Unconscious", the reasons for its suppression are obvious - the mass release of the powerful beasts that are inherent inside of us is a truly dire threat to the fabricate matrix, the Artificers that keep it in place and benefit monetarily, politically, religiously, etc, and would unleash what might be referred to as 'Qaos'. I use the Q to differentiate it from the term 'Chaos' which is a fairly rigid abstraction in modern times, and to refer to a specific reversion of evolution; a de-volution (depending on how you see the raise in consciousness as beneficial or detrimental to our species) of the human being into its primal non-being.

Qaos is to remember and then live our true nature that we have been told to forget by the “Conscions” and to free oneself of the fabricate matrix by reverting to the primal state to act on uncontrolled impulse and raw animal brutality. Satanism and Black Magick seems to unconsciously seek to release this Beast, and consciously seek to release ‘power’ in controlled (sometimes uncontrolled amounts) in order to learn that nature once again, that we may experience and if at all possible control, heal, and reunite that primal surge. For a person to understand their Shadow, balance their anima/animus, give equilibrium to their psychic strengths and weaknesses, overcome the ego and return to the self by uniting the conscious mind with the unconscious mind, dreams are a necessary requisite. THEM believe that through utilising the power of dreams a person may become individuated. We hold that Astral/Lucid Control, dream recognition and Jungian analysis is the one definite reminder of the “Beast”, reveals 34 the nature of “Satan” that ONA seeks to invoke, and yet not one shred, bar the tarot card labelled ‘Dreaming/Dreams’ by CB is devoted by ONA to this essential Gateway. The difficulty in the astral is discerning which apparitions are really demons that communicate, and which are corruptions, i.e. which contents are unconscious atavisms and which the excrement of the Conscious matrix. And THEM believe that mastering this approach to psychic integration is just as important as the Star-Game that seeks to restore the numinous charge to the realm of the symbol and is on equal par as Supreme Black Magick.

A Triangle Squared, & Our Sinister Regards, THEM

FLUX

“Thank you for contacting us. I’ll give you a formal run-down of the Temple and then go into a more casual overview of who we are, what we do and how we’re doing it. We have two private chapters here in Australia, one in Sydney and the other in Melbourne where I am stationed. The Temple is comprised of six magicians, each with extensive experience in the Septenary Way of the ONA - in addition to separate specialist knowledge of various other magical systems such as the TOB/IOT. Each magician is working toward achieving their own individual goals whilst simultaneously working toward a collective Sinister Strategy - part of which is raising the consciousness of Australian Satanists; part of which is presencing the Sinister and the Dark Gods here within our Australian nexion.

The online Temple itself represents only one aspect of our work. We believe the empathy that is required to perform successful magic with other individuals is extremely rare, and the cohesion of six such individuals rarer still. As a result, we do not seek the assistance of others to assist in our private practice of black magic. Rather, we rely on the emerging current of the species of Self to draw individuals to the Temple via Synchronous means. [Each of our members has attained the Self, or is actively working towards attaining it.] From the Temple, THEM teach a system of principled black magic and offer their magical experience and knowledge to others by working with an individual on a one to-one basis to suggest alchemical, psychological, magical or physical ways in which that individual can break through to the next stage of their magical prowess.

Change is a crucial aspect to our work. We also host an extensive library with resources and links aimed at addressing some of the problems of inner fire currently lacking in the Australian practice of Satanism. For instance, the manuscripts by the Tempel ov Blood restore a certain caustic severity to Satanic practice providing rising magicians with an ONA-type system over the popular past-time Satanism of the dilettante; whilst the grimoires of R. Frank [aka Tnepres Ra] comprise an experimental 'narrative' or 'archetypal' magic that 'sweeps up' or 'taps into' many varied types of psyche and magical stages using empathy and psychological/magical resonance - grabbing the reader at their particular stage of magical practice and then showing them how to progress forward from it. Beginning with the simple, the grimoires gradually increase in complexity over Seven degrees until the magician is enabled a powerful understanding of Essence vs Appearance, the nature of Form, the Matrix, the Mind War and comes to face the Abyss.

We believe that a person who is taught the origin of Form; how and why it is used; and who is able to put the illusions of our enemies into a far greater context; will be appropriately equipped to deal with the nature of Magian magic and laugh at the feeble attempts of Forms to indoctrinate them, making them extremely difficult to enslave. We don't believe that these changes will occur overnight and expect the first stages 40 of our Strategy to take about thirty years to implement. But THEM will give Australia a Sinister History - if it's the last thing we do."

PLATEAU: FROM OTO ANORHA

Extract from an Interview in OTO ANORHA V.II

Q - You speak about a need for Solidarity in your writings, can you provide some examples of how solidarity is used within THEM?

Sure. Functionally - We share the same email address at the Temple and for many groups this would be a risky venture. It generally takes only a clash of wills and a heated argument and one of the party will have no qualms in changing the password to lock others out or causing mischief. But I don't really think that it's just trust that allows us to be so assured of each others intentions. It's knowledge that over the course of years our companions have worked hard to become aware of and exercise the option to control or over-ride the impulses, motivations, and emotions of the ego. THEM recognise the instability of assuming the I at all times because it means being trapped in Time and in the Matrix by the egos of others - this leads to being unable to shake one's 'role', lessens a magicians perspective, and can even lead back to ego-centrism. There was for a long time a belief expressed by various members previously involved with Alchemy that once the Philosophers Stone was attained [which we equate here psychologically as the Self] it would immolate the realm of the ego and the temptation to revert to that state of consciousness by virtue of destroying so many of the pillars of that state of being... Time, Space, Duty, Name, Form, Concept, Logic, Law, the I and even Thought... are all 'damaged' irreparably in actually extricating oneself from the Matrix; so much so, that the convenient life of reliance on the Matrix by others, can never be lived for a magician again.

It is now known, through attainment, that this is not true. Even with the awareness of one's actions and speech - the ego continues to babble occasionally... And in those cases where that babble is not checked the Self can become re-consumed by the easy ride and low energy expenditure of the ego. But there is a precarious balancing act performed by each of THEM because there must also be outlets for the ego to continue its babble - channels for its incessant existence lest the power to take shape be lost. The ego is thus treated as a machine that can be driven whereby the will of the magician watches over it, seldom leaving the ego to its own devices, but taking advantage of the opportunities the ego creates within the Matrix as a functioning cohesive unit of form.

Watching over the ego is not an intellectual motto - it is a way of Life for members of THEM. Philosophically - our online Temple is a tendril, an experimental possibility; it does not matter overmuch whether we all agree with what is represented in the online forum. We all know that it is the nature of a Form to interact with the Matrix in such a way that it generates a unique signature, a hard-wired cob-web of connexions whose specific geometry will increase various probabilities and decrease others - and that others will intermesh the Form into the Matrix simply because it is one, I.e. a Form. Each external interaction with the Temple prompts a magical response from the Temple. As others buy into the myth, we feed the Myth and solidify tentative belief and curiosity into a solid foundation directly connected with that individual or group. When others believe in us, they spread the message and myth of THEM for us 37 independently. Because we each understand the nature, methods, and ultimate goal of the Temple, we each understand why certain things are said, or made so.

Very often, something seemingly posted out of the blue is a response to a private enquiry or clandestine interaction by an individual with the Temple. Thus, the outer appearance of the Temple or the 'ego' of the Temple is apt to be peppered by all kinds of pathways and topics of the smaller sphere of the semantic variety. While the inner connexion of the Temple or 'Ga Wath Am' sees these semantic necessities holistically - in the replies given writhe the seductive tendrils of black magical intent designed specifically to suit or more accurately 'tap into' or 'create sympathy' with that individual; and have them further intermesh our Myth within their Matrix. The process being similar to downloading a computer virus tailored to attack the support systems of the Matrix and the Magian and bring them both crashing down over time. Magically, the Temple of THEM is a co-generated Sinister Form; an organic seed that has been designed to meet the challenges imposed by the modern occult environment and mentality.

This form is still in its infancy, but is now beginning to take on a life of its own, a plant germinated by the agency of others in the Matrix and occasionally watered by us. But this doesn't mean our online representation is taken lightly as a side-project, even though it is mostly extra-curricular to the lives of members of THEM. The voice of each member is incorporated into our manuscripts, which tend to have a homogeneity owing to being expressed by one appointed writer, and each of us share our specialist knowledge of various semantic spheres to help ensure a fluid integration of difficult clientele. Members participate in the Temple affairs whenever and however they choose to and are kept up to date on its growth via the reports and public announcements/private tuitions stored in the shared email address and via the Temple e-zine, 'Oto Anorha'.

Each member can thus provide their specialist knowledge to support the Representative, express any concerns, or new directions the Temple should take. Solidarity is further enhanced by the common understanding that Change takes time. Especially biological change. Sustaining Self is primarily a matter of the conditions created concerning the lightening and the sun [or Time] and to maintain the Self it helps to live within a magical Weltanschauung pursuing short- and long-term goals + an Aeonic one. That way, the contrivances of the Matrix don't weigh one down too much or for too long and what really matters can be attended to. This outlook in itself helps remove the magician from the trap of thinking only for the moment. A common far-reaching perspective that shadows our 70 or so allotted years keeps us focused on the task of fulfilling our goals within the Temple of THEM both individually and collectively.

Attaining the Self is extremely difficult, but it is only the first evolutionary step. The second step is in sustaining the Self and this requires constant vigilance - the natural evolution of a magician is to immolate the ego and attain enlightenment but such embodies the loss of the ability to take form, the desire to interfere, to take a stance, or to have the arrogant foundation to ground a conviction; such persons may be enlightened but they sacrifice their original goal [to be like Satan] to go on beyond words, forms, and being. The power of the Sinister however does not lie in leaving the Earthly plane and going to meet God; or in becoming an aetherial vapour that is 'too wise' to trouble itself with the affairs of the human being. The risk to abandon what one originally set out 38 to do [be Satan] when coming face to face with the secret Samadhi is GREAT; and it can be justified away as one passes through the Abyss where meanings have no ground and the Sinister Quest abandoned in the wake of some a priori experience of being; but it takes an immensely strong will to get this far and make the decision to return to remain loyal to the Sinister.

To continue to employ ones will under the direction of such enlightened knowledge and possessed of magical prowess is to walk the Earth as a Dark God. Thus, we have not destroyed our egos but yoked them into the service of our developed Selves. Beyond that, the third stage is in continuing to teach the Rites of Passage that characterise the ego and the Self for long enough to create a folk that are engineered toward developing this greater state of mind either genetically or by Tradition.

Having the Self in our lifetime is a great achievement of personal enlightenment but we are aiming for more than that and seek a collective inhuman [we say inhuman or first human rather than 'human' because of the embarrassing connotations associated with typical human behaviour] enlightenment. What form will arise to occupy the shattered wastelands of the Magian Empire we shall just have to wait and see via 'Vindex'. Our concern is to act as Falcifer - to smash the status quo and prepare the conditions for a hostile aeonic takeover. In the most humble sense, we try to bring a little bit of Satan into everyone we meet. We do this by not buying into the Magian way of life.

Psychologically - THEM assert that we are a new emerging species by virtue of our numbers. The attainment of Self has previously been thought to only be achieved by lone hermits, individuals isolated in time and space by their particular Wyrd - and although periods of isolation are necessary to bring about the dissolving of the ego - there are nonetheless a half dozen of us now united via the Acausal Voice as a species. Our synchronicity has been founded on unique principles and understanding of sorcery, and whatever our personal aims - we are each "cold and sure of our magic".

DISINTEGRATION

Dear Ryan, As far as I know from you, Ixaxaar didn't approve my "Sinister Grotesque", so they will hardly approve my drawings as well. Since the ToB called my work "indulgence in decadency", I have no more trust in any post-ONA puritan "satanic" groups. Seems that the reaction the ONA wanted to arouse against the CoS-like Satanism turns against the wrong addressees as well as any persecution during the human history. Seems that the "sinister" also turns into a label which is to be used only by the "authorised" (such like the ToB). If the NS revolution promulgated by the ONA prevails it will eventually persecute any satanic/sinister/LHP individuals. There is nothing great in humanity except the human folly ;} On the other hand, I'm not sure if my terrotics are very appropriate for illustrations to "The Book of Sor.Terrosa". Yes, maybe some of them. In fact my "terrotic" drawings are some kind of sinister pornography perpetuating the theme of the simultaneous Sex and Death. In fact all these drawings are just means and I feel myself illuminated by Thanateros unlike many cowardice's from the . It's my Wyrld to open that nexus and pass through it were it "indulgence in decadency" for some fascisoid puritan mystics. In fact it's my nexus to the Dark Ones and I will make it open wide. Timing is my main difficulty though I'm able to wait as nobody else. I have already forgotten what drawings I had sent to you but I will pick some up for the Book of Sor.Terrosa. Stay well S.R. Terrosa Feb 27 Dear Ryan, As far as I know from you, Ixaxaar didn't approve my "Sinister Grotesque", so they will hardly approve my drawings as well.

On the contrary - Ixaxaar did think the "Sinister Grotesque" was Satanic and interesting too - but at the time were seeking only material for their edition of Clavicula Nox II - my own angles and curves was knocked back too on account of its length and its unfinished status.

3 >Since the ToB called my work "indulgence in decadency", I have no more trust in any post-ONA puritan "satanic" groups.

Oh? That's rich coming from the ToB.

>...Seems that the "sinister" also turns into a label which is to be used only by the "authorised" (such like the ToB).

Well, perhaps my own notes from 'The Psychology of Satanism' in the revised book II will be of interest to you concerning groups like ToB and ONA, though in differing aspects and degree of course.

>In fact my "terrotic" drawings are some kind of sinister pornography perpetuating the theme of the simultaneous Sex and Death. Yes, a very, very interesting idea with much valid evidence to support it. SR, t. MAR 5

>perhaps my own notes from... book II will be of interest to you

>It's wise as everything written by your hand and made me reconsidering again my attitude towards the ONA. I'm neither on their way nor am I a renegade. I just enriched my understanding by studying the ONA's MSS. To follow strictly ONA's system would be to narrow my worldview though I use the same symbolism. I use it but in my own subjective context. They may punish me for that and the idea of being their opfer is even exciting for me provided they slay me at the climax of my orgasm.

I believe ONA are beyond the infantile stage of passing judgement by any sort of superficial observation of any person's specific undertakings; if indeed they are watching at all. Their way is one of change and alchemy: all paths are a point between two others: they teach others to see the archetypal energy beyond the appearance of actions, a far greater chess game than the egoistic imitation temples that abound scrabble with.

It may be of interest that when speaking with "Arcturus" he continually redirected my efforts to synchronise myself with the Sinister Tradition; for example with my vision of a new ONA tarot, away from conformity with the Order and back to a focus on myself – and MY unique vision of the Sinister. Indeed, among other notes not recorded in my writings he referred to me as "the most interesting of the new initiates to come along" a comment prompted by the diverse nature of the manuscripts that I sent him. And later still told me "By what you do - you are the very essence of the Sinister". Not you understand because I followed Naos to the letter, though I tried at first and was later told "very few have done so" but because I had a vision, a unique understanding to share of the Sinister that did not necessarily compliment the ONA or even draw from it greatly. I asked all types of questions of Arcturus, when was it right to sign ones name as a member of the Order of Nine Angles, where were certain manuscripts, has CB seen my own Naos Tarot and did he comment, does ONA have an opinion on Crop Circles, Merlin, etc... It was when I understood the ONA for what they were that I began to move away, not in contempt or arrogance, but in love and genuine understanding that ONA was one expression of the Sinister and one only. Take heart. You are what you seem.

>Yes, I don't mind the human sacrifice provided it's done in an ecstatic way as in the Dionysus mysteries and not being a mere execution. I don't mind the NS provided it doesn't restore the patriarchal moral of the Roman Empire. Moreover the ONA is too English for me and I derive from a different ethos, not lesser rich than the English.

Eusebius further urged that I start my own temple with my own ethos and tradition, further clues were that I not try to obtain the English incenses, but that these were rooted in the Albionic myth, instead I should try to find my own native incenses in Australia. Further evidence that ONA is not out to make clones – indeed the idea of following the Sinister Tradition is cloaked by the use of NS and tools and words etc... to separate the Satanist who knows to follow hir (to quote your androgynous term) own vision from the mediocre.

>I undertook my self-initiation ritual 3 years ago using soil from a military cemetery and during all the wars my country has been a foe to England. It doesn't matter on a cosmic scale at all but anyway, for me the LHP means a subjective approach and not belonging to anything greater than me except my own greater Wyrd which is not to belong to the human Wyrd at all. The remaining is a means. Moreover the ONA have stated that their "teachings and traditions have been made public, that is, available - thus enabling any individuals who may be interested to follow (if only in part) the way of genuine Satanism, for those individuals by so doing (however slightly) will aid the sinister dialectic, increasing the dark forces presenced on Earth. Some of these individuals may progress to the Order."

I do that without any wish or hope to progress to the Order. I think the Order would be delighted you were pursuing your own Tradition in such an intense and progressive manner.

>By using the Tree of Wyrd and the ONA symbolism I seek to discover my own sinister system and tradition. I seek to integrate all the Satanic thought generated through the Aeons on the base of my own appreciation of what is true or untrue. According to my appreciation the ONA are something very near to my sense of truth yet their competitive brutal championing is somehow repulsing male for me, since generally I don't like the males. 5 As Eusebius said: "All works are built upon the efforts of those that have gone before them"

– I too used the Order to separate. The Order claims to have been represented by women, but the last few names have been male contributors and heirs. This is bound to lend male energies to its ethos. There is the individual who runs the Temple of Hel still out there that I would like you to meet. Perhaps you can teach her a few things about the Sinister Feminine and give her a chance to really know darkness and the LHP. She's part of a triad, one member of whom is a mediocre COS, and the other seems to be a Wiccan mystic.

>I also emphasise on the physical but in a subtler way. The ordeals I invent for me are not easy at all but they are based on my self-knowledge and my own organic tempo-rhythm. What I know is never to give up my original intent - sooner or later it shall prevail. If one fails in an ordeal one shouldn't blame oneself but try again. When trying again without blaming oneself, one shouldn't congratulate oneself. If one fails again, one shouldn't blame oneself for blaming oneself, but try again without punishing oneself for failing. Finally one shouldn't blame oneself for congratulating oneself ;} Yes, one could become addicted to overcoming ordeals, but it's better to have such an addiction than the rest of the human addictions. All the past ordeals and experiences have already become resources of my emotional memory. The emotional memory is one of the main resource of the actor (respectively the sorcerer). The good actor never struggles with the role if s/he is to play some role which is alien to hir. One first asks oneself: "What would do me if I find myself in the same situation as the role?" Here one's imagination should awake one's memory of a personal experience which is the nearest to the role` situation. If the memory of that experience unlock its specific emotion, the energy of that emotion will fill up the role and it will become alive in a very genuine way...No need of any stupid male willpower to persist pretending one is the role by imitation.

For example if one is to play a tragic role, one needs to fill it up by the emotional energy of one's own specific personal subjective experience of some sad, unhappy or tragic event in one's own life. In the magickal context, if you are going to invoke someone of the Dark Ones, for example Shugara, the emotional memory's energy of your subjective experience of some specific great frustration in your personal life would feed Her to manifest Her presence in a genuine way...Of course, she may need more but it's up to you to come on terms with Her. An objective archetype needs the magickian's subjective experience to feed on in order to manifest its presence. Is it understandable or overstandable? ;} I am sceptical of such a thing as Objectivity; certainly one may imagine a world in which one is an outside observer, but such imagination is subjective nevertheless as personal views colour everything. But your method is sound, the drawing of subjective energies by imitative association with an objective archetypal energy makes sense, and I have practiced this method in the past.

Now I would like to share something with you and ask for your opinion. No need to make you know about my personal problems in the causal world or consensus reality - I would like to share with you how the things of my quest are in the Acausal world in terms of our common symbolism. I have to admit that I'm in the middle of an ordeal, on the edge of crisis. Presently I have fixed my being in the Sphere of Indulgence & Transformation. I have invented a magickal mechanics for transforming the energy of my past frustration into a black flame of demonic lust (Moon-Mars-Mercury-Moon) which is my magickal fuel to defy the outer world. It's also a magickal shield against the blows coming from the Sphere of Chaos & Unknown - of course, there is no safe guarantee against these blows, except the Luciferian empathy to foreshadow them or re-direct them to strike proper targets. I'm not an adept in this yet it comes somehow natural to me. I realise very well it could destroy me as well - especially when my frustration of having been burnt my eyes and fingers because of the Vision of Greatness, ties certain knots in the Web of Wyrld. I'm deadly vulnerable in such a moment. I'm afraid that if my black magick apparatus was more effective this problem would grow even more dangerous. Anyway, I have to continue, advancing to the Sphere of Love & Ecstasy with the above-mentioned defect of mine. I know very well what it does mean according to the ONA criterions as regards the Septenary Way - I have still a lot to do both in the Mercury and Moon spheres but my approach is a cyclic one - by moving on an ascending helix - thus I always return to the un-dissolved problem but try to dissolve it from a higher level. So my quest now is passing on the path connecting Mercury and Venus and confronting its guardian - the Lord/Lady of Indulgence & Love, of Transformation & Ecstasy, in fact - the introvert being of the sphere of Lucifer, where I really am - being not so stable there. It means a confrontation with the Other, a quite another introvert being with a quite different experience and Wyrld than mine. Here is my vision of the 7th path of ToW: (Would be very familiar to you if you've watched the movie "Twin Peaks" by David Lynch.) There is before me a large lane of black and white squares as a Star-Game board or as a chess-board. Through the blackness of my Devildom I've found myself there, within a large black square. As a Horned Beast which is also the chess castle, I'm advancing straightly forwards but feel very ill each time I go through a white square. Whose pawn or piece am I?! This board should mean a confrontation. And there is before me a large red curtain on the horizon. When I'm approaching it comes out both a blood fall, flowing downwards and a fire flaring upwards. I stop - there is a sheet written by my script: "The true emancipation is possible only when the conflict between the sexes is brought down to an honest mortal combat." I'm feared of that and don't dare to go through the curtain - it's really sinister and awesome.

Back through the blackness of a square I have returned myself in my Devildom. I'm coming to understand that the curtain was the veil of Satanas (the 4th path coming across the 7th) between the sexes. I remember that experience of having been on the other side of the curtain together with another being and having seen together the Abyss...and then stepping on broken legs in my own Hell. Is all that experience going to repeat itself again? I wonder if now the time has come to put a poisonous arrow on my bow and approach the sphere of Venus by the 2nd path. Or, just raise the undead vampire from the coffin of my being and go through the 2nd path? However, I'm asking myself: is that a fair play? What do you think about that?

As unique individuals we each find our own fascination with the particular components of a form to invest within it our private magical calculations of various active and passive energies to web together a greater understanding of 'planetary' connections. Though you understand your references to the paths as objective (indirectly inferring that they can be known by a similar capacity to all who know of them), ~s I do not. I cannot and will not venture to enter an opinion, because this is your chess game, and you are both black and white. In fact, even if the above was a dream, I don't think I could understand it. You're a complex woman who has played around with elements of the human being that would send most people mad or into a screaming fit. You're a new species for which there are no shared meanings or comparisons to discuss the occult discoveries you have made. Nevertheless - the square is considered by Jung to be symbolic of Self, a chessboard with many squares may be a sign of extreme focus on achieving the self, or perhaps your self's frustration that you are not recognising what you have already achieved - self. Perhaps because the peaceful cease of inertia that carries us to our self will end your quest you fear the white of emptiness. In the end, I am but a wall as you know, for you to bounce off. A dream figure in your dream. You know to do, and you will do when the time comes. Write when you have possibility, Ryan. I'm still here. Sinister Regards Terrosa SR,

I will always write. Ryan MAR 6

Hi Ryan, >oh? That's rich coming from the ToB. Yes, in particular, from some Bloodlord whom I wrote the following:" On my part, I would say you indulge in some form of mysticism and call it "sinister". I'm afraid you are addicted to labels as some theatrical criticiser. This is what prevents you from seeing what I'm in essence. As for the indulgence - it should lead to transformation: One just needs energy to go beyond - the decadent lacks that energy whatever his indulgence is. I'm not of them." He didn't feel obliged to answer me anymore, demonstrating some kind of scornful silence.

SR Terrosa MAR 11 > Though you understand your references to the paths as objective (indirectly inferring that they can be known by a similar capacity to all who know of them),

~s I do not. I cannot and will not venture to enter an opinion, because this is your chess game, and you are both black and white. Yet a common language based on the ToW's symbolism could be one of our few chances for solidarity in the sinister.

Hello, Hm. Solidarity in the Sinister. You and I have solidarity without the TOW or the ONA do we not? We both practice forms to express another world with new rules capable of changing the frozen state of this one - to deny the inheritors, and to reclaim our lost fortunes. We are what might be referred to in disdain by the Lodge as THEM. We are small but we are THEM. We are ever alert for the smallest signs of weakness in those that rule, as Satanists we keep alive the current that defies the normal run of things, we make the difference in an easy, effortless win by the Magian by our resistance - everything we do fills us with hope that someday we may change what has become of the world, not for some selfless ideals and a utopian vision of humanity but because we are disinherited from what we really want, Power. The desire for power dynamic keeps us going in a war we know we may never win. That we are all powerless, is our solidarity. our struggle to find something that can destroy what IS or has been erected to be IS, our disbelief that we ourselves don't have the Power that the Magian hold, unites us. What power we do have, is developed by learning how to use the holograms erected, the world that IS to our advantage by manipulating those desperate enough to understand they too are disinherited, but too stupid, too blissful to lead a revolt, or to recognise the futility of the individual. Our power lies in personal accretion of prestige for creating enemies the disinherited can release rage upon by accentuating the holograms of what IS to our advantage - our power lies in an ideal that cannot be silenced so long as the Magian continue to promote and validate it under its name 'Satan'. Solidarity in Satanism is unlikely by the very virtue that Satanism is an individual quest. We may understand for all we are worth the machinations of others, ourselves and so on, we may truly view the world as it is or as it appears, but in gaining this vision we lose the power to organise into groups. The spread of our world, the Satanic world, of Satan our saviour, onto their world is what we want because it affords us a certain dynamic that we struggle not in vain, that we're not dead yet, that life has a chance to change her mind and give us the Satanists, power. power is in organisation - Satanism can never unite people into an organisation with power, it exhorts the use of lone cells. That's why NS is used by ONA, NS is a socialist regime, an organiser of people into a collective front behind an ideal - our ideal alienates us from ourselves, from others, and from any chance of having power beyond the range we accrue for ourselves in our commanding presence over the slaves, in our own privations and trials to satisfy ourselves we are better than, more powerful than, our slaves.

That is why THEM. Them is not Satanic, it is vague, it is an ideal that everyone can be part of - you are with THEM, or you are against THEM. Them does not need to promote its ideals because them has only one tangible ideal, that its name is an ideal. Anything we write to inspire, no matter how great, will not give us the power we want to rule, to overthrow the governments and the states etc. because we just like the Magian, need the stupid masses. And, as Satanists, we know that the stupid masses will never be organised. It is WHY they are stupid masses. nevertheless, we of them work to undermine a 'system' that has never been undermined, because if we do succeed in toppling the rulers from their thrones, we merely assume the same role they had and perpetuate the lie. So, our solidarity is in not honestly acknowledging that Satanism is a banner under which we all go to war for personal power. It keeps us sane. (or insane). ~shrug~ it doesn't make Satan any less powerful in our paradigms, it doesn't lessen the effect Satan has on the disinherited, it doesn't make the slightest difference how many Satanists see the truth - Satan is our hologram, as real as any other.

ONA do what they do for power. ONA themselves may very well be Magian - spreading a new form of Satanism that exhorts individuality and destroys the desire to congregate. Nevertheless, perhaps my view is too sober, perhaps you can offer some wisdom here? SR, one of them

MAR 12 >Nevertheless, perhaps my view is too sober, perhaps you can offer some wisdom here? Your view is wise enough as ever but it seems that having wisdom is not enough for our cause. Were Them a group - it's nice, it recognises its cause - what is quite enough for a group. But if Them is a temple, it should not only seek after its cause but share its responsibilities as well. Solidarity based on powerlessness cannot unite a temple - the Temple of Them was your original idea, wasn't it? Now I hear only about Them. Temple means a sacred space and our sacred space is the ACAUSAL...Here the causal 10 wisdom doesn't work. We DO need to develop practical abilities to deal with the ACAUSAL - otherwise we are philosophers, not magickians. Magickians deal with the ACAUSAL. You cannot deprive Satanism of its magick, of its ACAUSAL essence, reducing it only to philosophy however wise it may be. Are you able to have "out-of-body" experience at will? I have never known.

This topic is always a taboo amongst the most of so called magickians who avoid it, saying it's too relative, too subjective an experience, depending on the individual etc. intellectualisms. Entering the ACAUSAL, however, is quite an objective, distinct, tangible and really sinister experience. Unfortunately I still cannot claim I'm able to do it at will - it comes by itself but it's not enough to call myself a magickian. Yet I have led my former temple through the ACAUSAL, I have taken decisions there, I have even returned to save a lost soul there and did save it. A Temple DOES need conventions such as a symbolic map and common symbolic language in order to deal with the ACAUSAL. A symbol DOES NOT symbolise anything in the ACAUSAL - it's directly the thing ITSELF! Unlike many groups and temples in the West who extinguished because finally it came out that their magick didn't work and everything was a blah-blah, my former temple disintegrated because of terror - the terror that magick DID work! My former temple consisted of nasty, unscrupulous sorceresses and sorcerers who used by any means to distort the causal reality and gain goods, money, loves, revenges etc. and the most were quite successful in these. We even tried some kind of aeonic magick within the scope of our country and the effects were too evident to be mere coincidences though others made use of them. Terror came when we felt self-confident enough to enter other worlds. Neither the self-confidence nor our LHP philosophy did help us there. What makes the ACAUSAL really sinister is its indifferent ALIEN attitude towards anything human however lofty or un-lofty it may be. What we lacked was more self-knowledge and new resources of power to transcend our human conditions. We became introvert and disintegrated as a temple.

Eventually a temple should have a concrete purpose. Seems that ours accomplished its own. So, are Them a temple, and if they are, what's the temple's purpose? The purpose is to be formulated on the basis of the individual interests. My main interest is to investigate the ACAUSAL and gradually map the new spaces I have entered while being aware of any parallel changes in the causal. What about yours? I tend to feel that there is a subtext beneath all your wise reasoning and it says to me: "Please, leave me alone." Am I right or just touchy? S.R. Terrosa MAR 13

Touchy.

(More later) >- the Temple of Them was your original idea, wasn't it?

Yes. But an Acausal temple. You as one of THEM, or "they who seek to express the sinister" in my causal terms, are free to choose your own means and ends to express it. The name is but an enclosure of separation. What that separation is, is a causal demarcation between those causal forces (the Nazarene, the Jew, the NWO) that oppose our Acausal forces to see this dimension penetrated by Dark Gods. Dark Gods, for me, as you may have noted, cannot live in that part of my mind that is logical and causal - thus on a causal level I reason them away, but that I believe in them on another level entirely separate from a rational one should be evident from my continued efforts to presence the sinister. An irrational quest to bring Satan to Earth is in my blood, my presence, my being. What use is accusation of powerlessness you ask? It manifests the archetype of Satan. The anger at being cast aside. Though, these truths are evident for me, they may not be for you, and you must know as a conduit of the sinister that I can live in harmony with the idea that both of us are wrong both of us are right, because we are each at the centre of our universe. Thus THEM (merely shortened to Them instead of temple of them for convenience and perhaps because of my distaste for ritual magic) is an all encompassing abstract with no definition but that we are against all of THE OTHERS. Who you choose to be THE OTHERS is entirely up to you. Whether you associate yourself as one of THEM, in my definition is entirely up to you. You may have your own which is equally or perhaps even more valid than my own. As one of them you are entitled to use any means, any ideal to achieve whatever you can to complete your goals before THE OTHERS complete theirs.

>...Are you able to have "out-of-body" experience at will?

I get flashes now of being in someone else's body, like I were wearing them as a suit and looking out of their eyes, yet still in my body at the same time talking to them, with an intense sensation that I am them. I do not deny magic - because I cannot deny anything. My sometimes paradoxical views are not evident. Nevertheless, I know of what I speak, what I mean, regardless of whether I can convey the esoteric essences behind it. In some ways I just have faith that you understand I am as dedicated to the Sinister as I have ever been, but that sometimes that means denying certain 'truths' held dear in language, meaning, and even rational sense. Sometimes, when I gaze, I slip into a deep reverie that leaves my body still and my eyes fixed not on anything around me, but in space. That can last up to minutes. It is as though I go somewhere, and only become aware of it when I am snapped out of it by a conscious decision to return, either by automatic response to respond to someone calling me, or a reaction in my brain that tells me I have to wake up now. I am unsure where I go, it is no different to the world but yet it is, like I've slipped through a wormhole into another universe separate from everyone else.

>A symbol DOES NOT symbolise anything in the ACAUSAL - it's directly the thing ITSELF!

Exactly - thus THEM denotes nothing but the meaning you give it or the meaning you accept me to confer upon it. If you wish to make the Temple manifest, by all means, do so. In the sense of a temple - I consider the nexion the temple, the skin and bone and blood powered by the Acausal through our physical organism that is the "temple" - the body is a temple the saying goes. But I doubt they thought of the body the way we do. >Unlike many groups and temples in the West who extinguished because finally it came out that their magick didn't work and everything was a blah-blah, my former temple disintegrated because of terror - the terror that magick DID work! Yes, magic DOES work. Otherwise I would not be what I am today and what I intend to be tomorrow. Please do not think that powerlessness means we have no power, it is a relative term to indicate that we are not able to control world finance, industry, or politics, we cannot order Gunship Helicopters to raid Iraq or in any real capacity express the sinister via political leaders. In that sense we are still growing as individuals, yet to turn into a culture. But we are making headway as the Sinisterion, and perhaps we may have a civilisation someday. But today, we do not.

>My former temple consisted of nasty, unscrupulous sorceresses and sorcerers who used by any means to distort the causal reality and gain goods, money, loves, revenges etc.

I believe in all magic. I am aware that the nexion that is us can do incredible things. The rational part of me explains them, because I need the rational part to function as a sane member of society to infiltrate it and manipulate it and walk among its peoples spreading my soft sinister words without drawing attention to myself. There are always, ALWAYS, more numbers in any equation I lay down, reasons for what I say and exclusions, anomalies, and so on. Here you see I am explaining previous general points in greater detail, and again if you ask I will break them down again, and again, until I cannot break them down, but I've yet to see that day in fifteen years of conversation. >Terror came when we felt self-confident enough to enter other worlds.

Neither the self-confidence nor our LHP philosophy did help us there. What makes the ACAUSAL really sinister is its indifferent ALIEN attitude towards anything human however lofty or unlofty it may be. Yes, that's why in causal terms we are powerless IN RELATION to those who have the kind of power that runs society - but perhaps I was too hasty and did not consider other kinds of power that DO put us above the Magian.

>What we lacked was more self-knowledge and new resources of power to transcend our human conditions. We became introvert and disintegrated as a temple. Eventually a temple should have a concrete purpose. Seems that ours accomplished its own. So, are Them a temple, and if they are, what's the temple's purpose?

That should be evident from the above remarks, do you wish them to be a temple, if so what is the purpose of that temple? whatever you do with the ideal, will not change the ideal - it will just express it. as the ONA expresses the ideal of the Sinister, of Satan.

>The purpose is to be formulated on the basis of the individual interests. My main interest is to investigate the ACAUSAL and gradually map the new spaces I have entered while being aware of any parallel changes in the causal. What about yours?

My diaries are but one more step to beginning an erosion of the Magian. We all have to start somewhere, and usually somewhere very small - my books on Satanism are a means to contributing to the downfall of THE OTHERS. There will be more. I tend to feel that there is a subtext beneath all your wise reasoning and it says to me: "Please, leave me alone."

Am I right or just touchy? Touchy Terrosa ;) I'm surprised you think me wise, you were for a long time MY mousa, my Teacher. I truly do not wish you to 'leave me alone', and I suggest you feel this way because I do not 'receive' and process your questions, but bounce them back to you with a zen grin and the comment 'you know the answer to that'. the simple matter is, I believe you do. As honoured as I am that you would like my input - what can I say that you have not thought of already? S.R. Ryan PS - I stopped signing or addressing my letters recently, perhaps this lent to your worry that I might be indifferent to your email and our contact- not so. I'm rather unfortunately a complex fragmented person, with many egos, many personalities, and very little consistence, I am quite random is what I meant to say. Satan is about the only core thing about me.

X MAR 14 Dear Ryan, Believe me, I can understand you very well, yet it doesn't satisfy me since I don't find it enough for us to be effective in our war against the world. To hell with this postmodern or zen "it's up to you etc."! I know very well what is up to me but what I am now doesn't satisfy me at all. Tell me "it's your own problem" if you want but I don't believe you are self-enough as well. Tell me "it's your own opinion", or tell me "everybody has hir own etc." which is another way to excommunicate somebody or say "nobody has whatever own etc." It's all the post-modern alienation the Magian seek to impose on us all. The most of the Westerners behave in that way. Yet, are you satisfied with what you are in the moment? We arrive again and again back at the question of being deprived of our power - but it isn't enough to make our solidarity/Satan effective. There are many "Satanists" who are addicted to "the anger at being cast aside", because it gives them a sense of self-importance but if they are to give a physical expression of that anger they quickly assume a distanced post-modern attitude. What we need is new resources of Acausal power.

We need, however, personal power in order to discover such resources. That's all I would say - I'm going to get bored if I'm to say more.

>should be evident from my continued efforts to presence the sinister.
>An irrational quest to bring Satan to Earth is in my blood, my presence, my being.
How will you make it effective? >>

The purpose is to be formulated on the basis of the individual interests.

>My diaries are but one more step to beginning an erosion of the Magian. we all have to start >somewhere, and usually somewhere very small - my books on satanism are a means to contributing to the downfall of THE OTHERS. there will be more. It's your formulation of purpose in response to my question. Is it?

>perhaps I was too hasty and did not consider other kinds of power that

>DO put us above the Magian. Yes, there are other kinds of power that WOULD put us above the Magian, provided we are able to bear them, to conduct them.

>Satan is about the only core thing about me. I have no more to say. S.R. Terrosa March 13 A late reply...

>I have to admit that I stopped any writing after you suspended our correspondence - it was you who inspired me to write ;}.

Your writings are always remarkable insights Terrosa; I could not exclude them if I were to remain faithful to the Sinister; much of your own wisdom has given me my own – 15 particularly my abstinence from sex to lull the dark gods into giving me a priestess and refusing to ejaculate (viz the sex and death cycles) until I received what I wanted. In fact, I had two choices for a partner after only one and a half months of non-ejaculation, neither very good, i.e. Sinister, but nevertheless raw material to be used in my own furtherance of ONA ritual understanding. The individual so chosen was so chaotic (mentally sick) that in the subsequent explosion as we parted, something broke in me; I finally saw that people could be capable of any petulance – I refused to believe it until I saw it with my own eyes, and when I did some dark hatred grew in me, some detachment, some new sharper cynicism of people as a species.

Also the meditation to feel ones essence, as down or upward motivated yielded much wisdom, more than any other ritual I have performed. You have taught me well the methods of black magick – while I am still in the Abyss, a place where all is abstract and uncertain, nothing can form in the mind that is real for all I know is unreal. Thus I cannot suppose tools and energy connections to be conduits of magic yet, since I have lost all meaning and desire to give meaning to things – except to communicate within the consensus hologram. Indeed, Temple of THEM could easily be launched into the causal on your own insights alone: the Book of Sor Terrosa is an incredible addition to the Sinister Tradition. Are you ready now to bear some friendly critique?

Always. >I think you have completed a significant stage of your life by collecting and synthesising all your written working till now. During my transition from mercury/salt to mercury/mercury Septenary I was in a heavy struggle to get rid of my local guru and find my own path. Yes – this would coincide with my rational separation from the ONA.

>I don't want to interfere with your intents... ..Physicalize your ideals. Stop to praise the ONA's principles but live them physically so far as you can - otherwise you would go mad:

Yes Terrosa – several times I have made moves to MOVE. My car crashed, and I spent all my money saved from “working” spits in a menial job to pay my rent and keep my vacuum intact. Only now without money have I returned back to the system taking a pension to fulfil my obligations to my family and pay money. It is but a small joy that I can see others not interrupted by the chaos that plagues me. My sister for instance is a Magian. And I agree wholeheartedly, I intend to travel; each time I am set to go I make a mistake that costs me my vehicle or my funds. Thus I might surmise that it was not yet time to go, but now nearly and finishing putting my last 4 Septenary stages behind me in writing I am almost ready to go where I need to. The content of my books is illegal now – it's illegal in Australia to even suggest inciting terrorism, intellectualism, crime, or 16 any of the other things in my book.

There are daily arrests on Muslims and suspected terrorists without any proof, held without trial just like in America. Thus, my books expose me to the possibility of imprisonment or retaliation. That is what I meant by heading into direct war with the establishment. I challenge America's fiction by exhorting that they bombed their own buildings for instance, such a statement is now akin to denying the holocaust. >It's not very natural to write books being even younger than 27 years - maybe you want to be as Nietzsche but Nietzsche is not a good personal example to follow, though being our true Aryan avatar.

Luckily, I'm still sexually fit and clean. But no, I've read Nietzsche, he and I are different. I have done physical things, not just intellectual ones – nor do I wish to end up thinking in despair like N. The world may be a hologram, but it is still malleable, see DWR intro. Nietzsche gave up on the empowerment of despair, thinking the world a lost cause – it may very well be, but if one can force oneself beyond good and evil, beyond abstraction, one can force oneself back into the lie that is the Magian world to creates one own holograms, maybe also as fake, yet as real as any reality inside the matrix.

>It's not wise now to abandon one's old allies hoping to find new >ones.

No – and even though we may not agree in some points, I bear you no menace or ego – I am not concerned in having my own individual points recognised by you, merely my connection to you as a comrade throughout the war. You have always been my ally.

>Do you remember Z 88 who was somewhere from the middle states of America?

Death to America!

Yes I do remember Z (of interest, the letters to Alex, are Z in 2001 in a different name.

DEATH TO AMERICA. I disappeared... but I am back from what I had to do. I quit speaking to TOB when I found the representative to be a dangerous amateur in concealing the activities of his temple. Had I wished to I could have had many (more – I already had many) sensitive details from him that in the hands of an enemy could have lead to the temples demise. I have had at one time or another addresses for all my contacts – a sobering thought that the Magian could also gain them, were they capable of similar deception.

>...It's in fact Grand Britain who stands behind the America and seeks >control over the world.

Yes – GB is in the pocket of USA, as now is AUS, FIRMLY. 17 >Wasn't the U.K. who thwarted any attempt for creating an European Imperium - who thwarted both Napoleon and Hitler who were yet men of Wyrd?

Yes, GB.

>Why the ONA don't rely on Russia where there are far more qualified individuals and conditions for an Aeonic change than in America?

ONA have several websites in Russian. ONA rely on anyone who can think independently to make their own sinister expression. There will always be those that take the Sinister (or any ideal) and distort it according to our own distortions - Tempel Ov Blood arrived on the scene with lofty claims to replace the ONA ~s I don't need to tell you that hasn't happened.

>As I already said, the most important care for me is not to lose any available alliances and keep the links strong whatever differences may exist between the allies.

Yes – I agree Terrosa. To the bitter or glorious end.

>...There is no ideal which humans cannot profane... Yes, another reason why THEM also has no boundaries, no temple, it cannot be profaned. THEY cannot be broken down by torture, beatings, death, etc to destroy, deny, reject the Sinister, to confess crimes or give away contacts for new programs of Magian thought. The Temple of THEM is Acausal. It does not exist causally, therefore it cannot be touched. THEM, that is you and I are those that express the Acausal via our casual nexion, that sets us apart, from THE OTHERS, the other Them.

>You Tnepres may wake me up if there is something worthwhile to wake up. Good night and Sinister Regards Terrosa

I have plans to continue my astral mastery at some stage. Excuse lateness of reply. SR

MAR 14 >Dear Ryan, >Believe me, I can understand you very well, yet it doesn't satisfy me since I don't find it enough for us to be effective in our war against the world. To hell with this post-modern or zen "it's up to you etc."!

Then, should we build a new magickal system that overshadows the ONA? A system of magick that fixes ONA where it went wrong, patch up its holes, re-write or expose its 18 doctrines? make a cult that specialises in making cults by using secret psychological control memes? re-emphasise National Socialism? or some new breed of sinister archetype like the Noctulians have done in the Tempel ov Blood? Write new black books with your and my own magickal teachings in them, that do not take the magician into the stars, but down into the bowels of earth to live out our wills to use their bodies to destroy whatever they can of the great hydra? should we run into the flames of the hydra ourself and go out in a blaze of glory? which part of the hydra should we run at? what would strategically make the difference in your opinion? No, I am not being sarcastic or twee, I am deadly serious, what is it you would like THEM to do?

>I know very well what is up to me but what I am now doesn't satisfy me at all. Tell me "it's your own problem" if you want but I don't believe you are self-enough as well.

Well who knows, Self, if I've any, doesn't seem to have achieved anything to fantastic but the ability NOT to rock any boats to make a smooth path to get what I want. But why on earth ONA Satanism wants this freedom from abstractions is beyond me - its merely apathy in a pretty box. You're right about that. but if I was ONLY that, then there'd be cause for concern.

>Tell me "it's your own opinion", or tell me "everybody has hir own etc." which is another way to excommunicate somebody or say "nobody has whatever own etc." It's all the post-modern alienation the Magian seek to impose on us all. Most of the Westerners behave in that way.

Hm. you make a valid point - they did say the occult blindness could get you at any stage of development. Am I blind?

>Yet, are you satisfied with what you are in the moment?

I believe my books (my experiences in writing) might be useful in making some small headway individual by individual by creating displeasure toward all religion. That's something we need in the Sinisterion, to make a war on all religion, not just religion against religion, and having felt that I could contribute something to that, I am satisfied with who I am and what I've done so far, yes.

>We arrive again and again back at the question of being deprived of our power - but it isn't enough to make our solidarity/Satan effective.

You do make a good point. The problem I personally have had in physically striking is exasperation. I don't know how to attack the Magian's ideal of consume, conform, contort, confuse - but by making people aware of what that ideal is, giving them the chance to sidestep it and perhaps slowly come to some greater awakening. That there might be a 4th WAR BOOK, a terror guide and physical presencing of the ideals of the first III books is not out of the question, again I know, it's a book. I've smashed churches, stolen their symbols, robbed Christian's peddling their faith, spray-painted a magical pentagram to bring down decadence on my suburb, fought with people tooth and nail who are Magian, physically attacked them, mentally, spiritually, (magickally?) - nothing major has come of it but my own minor subjective experience. If there was an effect in my acts, it may take a long time to surface, or it meant nothing in the scheme of things. What do you suggest we do to destroy an ideal? I've already written propaganda to make people despise the church, see it as a poorly sick child and feel pity, and, so revulsion, the worst kind of emotion for it, I've tried extending the ONA's own tradition, making it more palpable for others to follow, with many extensions over the ONA's holes, a tarot deck to show it could be done if one only had the will, aided ToB to continue their sick aims, Temple of Hel to continue promulgating feminine sinister ideals... are you suggesting intelligence and whatever wisdom is, is not conducive to action? should we fly back from the edges of nothing into the hologram and begin cementing our name in physical forms - obviously it doesn't matter WHAT the essential truth of the world is, there is a world and we can control it IF we try.

>What we need is new resources of Acausal power.

I opened temple of the tangent to collect those individuals - to inspire ORIGINALITY, of the 500 odd members of the ONA group, 14 joined, none of which posted anything. People ARE SICK TERROSA, they don't HAVE anything to offer me, just money and their body, I feel they must be educated and healed, at least lifted above the Magian veil BEFORE they will even consider sinister actions. If you think we can raise an army of dupes to do our bidding then show me how - I've tried and failed to capture a physical temple in the causal - probably I set my standards too high!

- >should be evident from my continued efforts to presence the sinister.
- >An irrational quest to bring Satan to Earth is in my blood, my presence, my being.
- >How you make it effective?

Effective? In your terms or mine? I'm a child of change, how will I know what's changed? Few things are ever evident, hence my despair. But to go out and just fling myself at people who are Magian and eat their faces or something, I mean what is that going to do?

>It's your formulation of purpose in response to my question. Is it?

Do you not think my DIARIES are a map, Terrosa?

>perhaps I was too hasty and did not consider other kinds of power that >DO put us above the Magian. 20 >Yes, there are other kinds of power that WOULD put us above the >Magian, provided we are able to bear them, to conduct them.

You wish solidarity with me don't you - a physical solidarity in shared goals and a move away from isolated cells who do their own thing? That's what I seem to read into what has been written here today. Let's then, begin building the causal temple of THEM.

>Satan is about the only core thing about me.

>I have no more to say.

I doubt that. ;)

MAR 14 Thank you very much for your late answer and the new version of your Book II. I just came across Spengler and it would be interesting to quote the man who first spoke about the antagonism between the Faustian and the Magian (and the first who use the term "Magian"): "The moral imperative as the form of morale is Faustian and only Faustian. It is quite wrong to associate Christianity with the moral imperative. It was not Christianity that transformed Faustian man, but Faustian man who transformed Christianity--and he not only made it a new religious but also gave it a new moral direction. The "it" became "I," the passion- charged centre of the world, the foundation of the great Sacrament of personal contrition. Will-to-power even in ethics, the passionate striving to set up a proper morale as a universal truth, and to enforce it upon humanity, to reinterpret or overcome or destroy everything otherwise constituted--nothing is more characteristically our own than this is. And in virtue of it the Gothic springtime proceeded to a profound--and never yet appreciated--inward transformation of the morale of Jesus. A quite spiritual morale welling from Magian [he uses this term for culture of the Near-East] feeling--a morale or conduct recommended as potent for salvation, a morale the knowledge of which was communicated as a special act of grace-- was recast as a morale of imperative command...." It comes out, according to Spengler, that it was our Aryan militant spirit who made of the peaceful and tolerant Magian idealism such a nasty tyranny. From a historic point of view it's not deprived of sense. What do you think? Yet what DID make then the Aryan to adopt that Magian idealism??? Was it the Faustian spirit's curiosity?

S.R. Terrosa MAR 14 >Thank you very much for your late answer and the new version of your Book II. You're welcome. 21 >I just came across Spengler and it would be interesting to quote the man who first spoke about the antagonism between the Faustian and the Magian (and the first who use the term "Magian"):

Hm. Well let's forget for a moment my own sporadic use of the term Magian. It's ill defined as most of my enemies are. Is there a Magi? Maybe there was once - is there now? What is there now that is observable? You are familiar with the Lead Protocols of the Elders of Zion, yes? Well there is this for instance, run by the Jewish or not, the idea that there must be slaves and masters; a view carried by not just Jews, but everyone of every different nationalities, joined in the idea of gain and power. Power is a drug. You can't get enough. It's like cocaine - you stop feeling the need to control it after you've had a good taste of it. It's human to want it. I've never truly thought of it that the Magian arose out of Faustian man, truly. That's an interesting idea, a challenging one for me. Does my ignorance blare it? I will have to think about that in order to try and answer it. Your female, I'm male, that's a difference. I think that revolutions have to start small and be able to adapt to changing conditions, by knowing what those changing conditions are, in war: you would like to continue the sinister tradition in its older format by enacting physical temples, ritual magick and uprisings despite the fact that it is now commonplace for people with ideas to disappear just for having them noticed. Yet, there is no reason why my 'zen-ness' is not as important to THEM as is the manifestation of Temples and a concrete magical system.

We can have both you know. If you look down on my intellectualism then you forget its based on experience not theory. If you look down on my approach to reflect people back to themselves then you are ignorant of betrayals and time wasted trying to help morons up out of their pools of shit only to be stabbed in the back. If you look down on THEM as an ideal, then you forget that the Magian is also an ideal, and unless it can be shown to be an ideal people are never going to recognise it. Why will people change the world if they don't know why they should. Are you worried for your life? Are you insecure that you've not done enough, doing enough? Are you going to lead me the sleepy 'intellectual' Tnepres into battle, is that it? I know you want solidarity, but why? Are you insecure that you cannot make the difference on your own? If I'm so intellectual, why do you need me at all? Why are you here pleading with me to see reason with your views, when reason is not a requirement for Satanism. You want to throw grenades? Shoot guns? Get me some guns, ill shoot them. Get me some grenades, ill throw them, but where, when and at what? An ideal?

All that will do is make martyrs, are you trying to hurry up Ragnarok? Look around you, it's already started. I take a risk even in speaking my mind in these emails. Australia is no longer the place of kangaroos and surf, it's descending into a police state, closely monitored by big brother and heavily enforced by an ideal, called the WAR ON TERROR. What I have written is an illegal, imprisonable offence - I run the risk of capture every time we speak. There have been raids all over Australia of late, on people 'suspected' of terror. no proof, just a witch-hunt.

Either adapt or get erased. Zen, via my books if that's what you want to call it, is one way of raising awareness of what's going on. When that information is out there, people will understand what has to be done. Thought is illegal now. Is that not Sinister enough? SR, Tnepres

MAR 16 >I have no more to say. >I doubt that. ;)

I'm waiting for a sign, Ryan. A sign from Satan to me. Lets stop exteriorize our inner dialogues by talking to each other in that way. By doing so we just produce a noise. Stop your inner dialogue and listen to the silence of darkness - it may take time but do it. Distance from the buzz of your many selves. Maybe Satan has something new for you too?

>Thought is illegal now. is that not Sinister enough?

If you feel threatened, please, take any measures not to expose yourself by writing certain words in your emails - they trace certain key words. Here the situation is still unstable: My country is still outside of the EU; moreover there is a tendency the extreme right-winged nationalism to come in power as a reaction against joining the EU. (Though I did support acausally that tendency, I would not join the local nationalism causally.) As I told you - I understand you painfully well. You are a hero for me. Yet it's just not enough what we both have done till now. There is much more to be done but in a quite different way than that until now. A way subtler but deadly. I just foreshadow something vague. In order to better understand me I do strongly recommend you a serious study of Castaneda's books. There is a really sinister tradition therein which nobody of his new-ager followers does not really understand.

Maybe he himself too. As if all that tradition was addressed to the wrong people. However, I think it would complement what the ONA have missed to give you. Sometimes one needs to investigate another tradition in order to restore what had been lost in one's own. Though it's the fourth book, I do recommend you to begin with the "Tales of Power". Stay well, Ryan. S.R. Terrosa

MARCH 18 > Lets stop exteriorize our inner dialogues by talking to each other in that way. 23 What inner dialogue? You accused me, I answered to your persecution.
>Distance from the buzz of your many selves. Maybe Satan has something new for you too?

A blank void stretches from the mechanical migraine that tinkles and whistles in a high-pitched scream, a heavy weight drags me backward into space and things and pushes me flat against the encroaching past becoming present like a bug against a windshield. Unable to stop the flow behind me, I am in time. But I sense beyond the great black patch between this stage and the next. I feel the next stage where I will be possessed by different energy in a hopeful wistful sort of dream state, a prescience of the future. If Satan has anything new for me, It's that there are things beyond even Satan.

> As I told you - I understand you painfully well. You are a hero for me. Yet it's just not enough what we both have done till now. Again - do you wish only to continue your quest by devaluing the past efforts of your organism, to create the dynamic tension of mortality that you are running out of time, and fear that you will not realise His face before the end of your causal charge? So far as Satan is concerned, nothing will ever be enough. That is why we are Satan-ists, not Satan. You did not answer my responses to your accusation Terrosa. What do you want to do to strike at the Magian - where is the weak point, do you want a physical Temple and how shall we accrue the followers and build it, should we write a magickal book and devise rituals to bring down the Sinister, or should we rush out in a blaze of glory? You're ready enough to accuse me of doing nothing but intellectualising Satanism away, and yet to my responses explaining my standpoint and my achievements you infer them as my inner dialogue - what is all BUT inner dialogue within MY realm of understanding in which there is no objectivity? Your Hero does not hear an Outer Dialogue but yours. In my opinion, your projections need withdrawal from me. You must decide whether Satanism is the Wurm, to be Earthed and Grounded on the Physical Plane in Physical Symbols or is the Cosmos, in which case the Satanist to live up to its name must go Beyond Satan, beyond the Physical Plane and See Earth as an impossible, insignificant speck that matters little whether it survives in a Magian or a Sinister fashion. It is merely a small rock in a universe filled with more potent and deserving forms; for paradoxically; Satan cancels out the need for Man.

In light of Satan, Man is nothing, the Cosmos is everything. And what can the Cosmos have to fear from a small plague of parasites called Magian on one of its infinite specks of dust? Why should Man be cosmically destined to rise, when clearly man has so many faults and an egocentric intuitive that posits man at the centre of the universe, which, we are clearly, clearly not. So - Which do you prefer - apprehension of the Satan of the Magian that exists as a hologram on the Physical Plane, whose powering up acts only to elevate the status of those gathered under its banner albeit under some spurious selfless guardian of the cosmos ordership - OR, the Satan that exists beyond the Physical Trappings of the 24 Matrix, cares not for either side of an illusory war, being unable to care, and takes the mind far beyond the stars, beyond the petty turmoil of a planet that just happens to be by chance inhabited by an organism that has evolved himself, outside himself? Earth, or Fire?

>In order to better understand me I do strongly recommend you a serious study of Castaneda's books. I do recommend you to begin with the "Tales of Power". I will look for it. >Stay well, Ryan.

And you, Terrosa. PS - book 1 was revised several times and now has seven chapters. Nevertheless, there was an eighth chapter that showed my transformation by the alchemical parallels in my art work with my person. Did you receive this?

MAR 18 The Book 1 you sent to me has 6 chapters (the 6th named Outro), so I have neither the 7th nor the eighth. I refuse to produce an intellectual noise anymore. Please, do not destroy what you have created till now by stepping on the same place. I really have no more to say. S.R. Terrosa

MAR 19 I understand. Revised book 1 sent to you. S.R. Ryan

March 20 Terrosa, the current format of elucidation that my Diaries work by is magickal in an entirely different paradigm to that form which magick is generally perceived and approached by. Your drawings for instance would look out of place in my Diaries because of the difference between social explanation used by me to convey magic, and the dark earthy "woodcuts" that might have appeared in De Wyrmis by Lovecraft drawn by you to convey magic. I've been trying to reconcile the two, and have been experimenting with creating a new grimoire for convenience called Liber Synystyron. The idea being, that I have taken the writings of Azazel (just to begin with) and distilled the essence of the insights contained in those writings down into a very fine drop of blood, that is then channelled into 'demonic/magickal speak'. This lends the grimoire a frightening aura, that belongs in a world of demons and blackest, hateful magic. There is a great calling for your artworks inside the Grimoire: see for instance my own that has been dyed red and altered by computer to resemble a blood-etching... DOC LIBER SYNYSTYRON

MAR Thank you, Ryan - I received the revised book. Again, make use of my advice to study Castaneda's tradition - it may bring to you new insights on the path. (Provided you really need them.) I just received your Liber Synystyron - thank you again. However, I don't know De Wyrmis by Lovecraft. Yet I intend to use my drawings in the context of the revelation I have from Satan, which is hinted at my "About My Terrotic Drawings". I have sent it to you, but now I'm sending to you again, to remind you - it's short but informative. I have no pretence by saying "the revelation from Satan" - yet it is a simple and sinister revelation: man and woman are to be sacrificed together in the climax of their orgasm - this is the formula for bringing forth the Satanic Aeon. Neither the matriarchal formula of the single male offer used by the ONA, nor the sterile patriarchal formula of sacrificing the female at all - whether by the rituals of the Holy Inquisition, or by the fascisoid warrior way of overcoming the ecstatic principle, are adequate anymore. (Castaneda's warrior sorcerers also use an asexual formula but their reasons have nothing to do with any moralist or ideological principles, were they Magian or Aryan.) S.R. Terrosa 23march >Yes, I intend to purchase several Castenada books today .

>As I advised you, start with the 4th one: "Tales of Power".

I looked for it - it was not on the shelf. I bought instead Heart of Darkness by Joseph Conrad, Myth of Sisyphus by Camus (in order to understand better what you meant some time ago that I best beware lest my acts become a Sisyphean cycle), the first book of the Sea of Fertility tetralogy by Yukio Mishima - for when I asked Eusebius if CB had seen/commented on my Naos tarot, he told me the answer lay on the last page of this series, that would make sense having read the whole of it. I am working on getting Tales of Power (nod) I did remember you specifically requested I obtain that one.

>Would you send me a list of their titles - they were entitled as >far as I remember?

Yes - give me a few days. there are some 150 emails to wade through. I had them all collected on my computer, but deleted all ONA, TOB, and Terrosa folders in one fell swoop. Because after writing my diaries, my paranoia had reached a peak and AeveA warned me I was sounding mad. Taking Aeveas wisdom to be better than my own, which I felt was somewhat biased in my state, I knew she could see outside of me where I could not and accepted that she was right. I deleted my files to hinder my access to the world that consumed me so. I have only fragments on paper - unable to be shared with others unless I go to some trouble. S.R. t.

MAR 24 Leaving again - this time for the big snowy mountains. Will be back after three days unless buried under some avalanche. (It's preferable to what may happen to me among humans.) I've surely not sent this terrotics to you till now. No this is a new one. & Return safely Terrosa. ? ?

>Unfortunately the ONA resurrected such dead forms of puritan occultism (or obscurantism), which Crowley and La Vey had destroyed. But such is the human mediocrity –

Yes... but then I'd like to think my diaries are leading toward the next step beyond the ONA, by intimating how the ONA was created and how as a higher lifeform (culture) it can be studied to reveal much more than what is said in its texts, but an overall presence and magic it works from higher planes and larger patterns. Also an encouragement to combine physical and spiritual searching to understand the relationships present in and around us by establishing a method of enquiry that is a fine balance of scepticism and conviction. I am often surprised with your keen analysis and scornful disdain that you continue to communicate with me - surely I too have many tendencies toward decadence and so on that I may not be aware of? That escape my keen eye? All I can say is that if you are here, still, after what we've been through, then I must be doing something right ;) right? ? ?

>Yes... but then I'd like to think my diaries are the next step beyond >the ONA, Your diaries might well be gems of wisdom but see below. >

I am often surprised with your keen analysis and scornful disdain that >you continue to communicate with me - surely I too have many tendencies toward decadence and so on that I may not be aware of? That escape my keen eye? All I can say is that if you are here, still, >after what we've been through, then I must be doing something right ;)

>right? (First, lets put aside my spiteful character, which often works against me. I'm too addicted to my magickal animal - the unicorn viper, which is often found with a smashed head when near to places of human activity.) See Ryan, you are too heavy of thought - me too. I need a release of my burden -

Interview with THEM: WSA 352

1. 352: What was the inspiration for... or what is the meaning behind the name "THEM?"

+O+ Please keep in mind that while speaking didactically (as an authority) comes naturally to my style of writing – I by no means believe any of my points are objective or unassailable. I came to see from my involvement in Satanism – even within a powerful organisation that expressed and emphasised freedom of thought and an independent path – qv. the ONA, that there was still some restriction against certain forms as a result of the ‘skeletal’ infrastructure of the Order; which as a visible formation, had to use arguments, pre-suppositions, dialectic and create forms to put forth and express/share its views. Because of the duality of our language – all worded views correspondingly give immediate rise to a counterargument, and this duality applies to the dichotomy of creating a clan of friends, instantly creating the perception of a division between insiders and outsiders, or a clan of enemies.

However – this distrust and subsequent attempt by Myatt in the early years of ONA to distance himself from the Modern Satanic practitioners as well as the Jewish Qabala, gathered such fierce momentum that for a time the ONA was largely followed by fanatical NS supporters. The result of this snowball of fierce hatred of the Jew/Magian/Christian and the Qabala however did not move on from the stigma of ONA – when Myatt moved on. Thus, it is that much of the instruction of ONA members comes from ONA mss, while a study of the enemy is skipped over, out of a misguided sense of loyalty to a changing path by Myatt, which on paper or screen is generally perceived as static. I.e., something written on his path many years ago, since buried under new insight or genius – is taken as fresh, up-to-date, and wrongly applied to an environment in which the conditions that gave rise to that insight have drastically changed, or no longer exist. This is probably why it is exceptionally important that an emphasis on abstraction and the fifth dimensional way are understood. I digress – while hating Jews and condemning the Qabala may be intuited or construed to be encouraged by earlier ONA mss (either directly or indirectly) comprising part of Myatt's changing experiences and learning: It is more important to Know thy Enemy.

How does one do this if one does not study them out of fear for being judged a Magian? An ONA member generally assumes from the mss that the Magian and their works are to be avoided at all costs – building up a quick judgement of all such associated forms as poison, rubbish, to be ignored. This assumption of what is expected includes an understanding that involvement with the TOS and COS via the perception of the Letters of Stephen Brown is to be aiding an undesirable form. So in the early stages – overwhelmed by what it means to be a member of ONA – certain assumptions lead to certain omissions and self-restrictions. Myatt's own forms could not help but raise the bar as far as Satanism as a discussion point was concerned. Some very careful thinking and philosophic gymnastics has been developed as a result of his detractors being forced to go out of their way to bring logical dialectic and debate. But for all its freedom, ONA still had the unfortunate outcome of creating restrictive policies as to what was considered Lhp, Satanic and so on. To limit oneself via any mode of thinking, any window of perception, any way of viewing the world – is to immediately limit possibilities. The Adept, someone who is in charge of their own Wyrð, will come to see through practical application, that they must use all and everything available to them in their path as they see fit to achieve their aims. The forms must never master the Sorcerer. If suitable forms do not exist – then the Sorcerer can create them so they do. The learning and study (and appreciation) of the Qablah or of the Jewish Faith or working from within a technically Magian system such as freemasonry was not banned per se, but frowned upon as being unable to assist the Sinister Way.

To the detriment of the possible Adept – only half of the system was learned, and comparisons with the Qabala for the Tree of Wyrd, largely shunned by people willing to accept Myatt's early views as current gospel. As a result of these divisions and others – there were many who had an interest in ONA, even fierce loyalty and admiration, but whose views or background were so aligned that they were ignored. In some cases, disagreements over the treatment of ONA regarding Lovecraft, Crowley, or LaVey were the catalysts – in others, disagreement over Culling, National Socialism, or the nature of the Dark Gods, the means to open the Abyss, the Will to Power of the ONA's magic, or the methods by which it propagated itself were the cause of friction. Perhaps after 40-50 years of answering questions, defending the ONA, trying to make people see reason or sense, AL gave up responding – because the ONA grew silent in the face of many of its detractors and champions alike. Many felt that there should be a means for others to share their own experience of the Sinister even if outside of the ONA's framework.

For quite some time I had been trying to make this happen – largely to benefit myself – as I experienced my fair share of silence too. But I was far too inexperienced, too young, too headstrong to be a competent leader at the time, and the groups I did open quickly dissolved. I was lucky in that throughout the silent treatment of others, I was able to communicate with the ONA, receiving some mentorship in the process. Up to this point my involvement with ONA was fanatical and blind. After I met the Sorceress however, I found myself neatly seated between two powerful opposing views and complete paths of the Lhp, on one hand the ONA, on the other the Sorceress who tempered my fanaticism over the course of years and whom I worked with to work out the problems facing Satanism – listening and discussing our involvement with the Septenary Way, and to which we both agreed the problem facing Satanism was one of Solidarity. Meanwhile I continued to receive magical instruction from both sides, notwithstanding my own powerful drive, forming a synthesis enabling me a truly fortunate understanding of magic.

After the genesis of my insights via Radia Sol: Emanations of the Self – we came to see that an independent body of shared experience from all Lhp paths, using a similar framework, terminology, and groundwork as the ONA, but advancing beyond the personal spheres of creating the Adept toward such things as a study of the components that formed the ONA, (giving rise to our mss on Remote Solidarity, Sinister Solidarity, Form, Abstraction, Mythos, etc) that would be more suitable to our respective understanding of magic and the Order, which at the time was extensive. Moreover, I had made a lot of contacts who felt a similar way. There was of course, also no place for many of the theories and workings others around us had – in the ONA's system. Recognising our Acausal connexion, a focus on psychology and sociology, numinous aspects of Time and Space, the power of Narrative Magic, Form and the creative faculties and tools for building a Mythos, extensive knowledge of the ONA, inc how it worked, what it was doing, what it was, put us in a key position to both continue the Sinister Tradition of the ONA – attracting many interested parties keen to learn about the esoteric properties of this enigmatic organisation – and a variety of people from many different paths and mind-sets coming together as one – set us apart from other occultists and current ideas.

What defined us could not be set down as belief – since we all thought independently, or race – since we were all from different backgrounds – or location – since we were at the time all over the world; – only Time. We believed our unique connection to each other to be the result of breakthroughs on the work on our Selves, and some strange new experiment by the Cosmos calling for the emergence of a more connected unity in people. We believed our personal encouragement for a greater connexion to our unconscious opened up certain gates, certain genius/madness, and a unique nexion; we believe that connexion to the unconscious, and the rise of the Self, to be the Voice of the Dark Gods. Thus THEM, The Dark Ones, and the voice that issues through as a conscious recognition of being a plural or collective unity of selves, not one ego.

2. 352: You have obviously dedicated a great portion of you time and energy to the ONA, thru the many books you have written, and the hundreds if not thousands of initiates you have taught over the years, even decade. We know there was a time before all this when you, like all of us were searching. Maybe you went into a few religions, tried a few Ways, even tried a few kinds of Satanisms before you found the ONA. What do you see in the ONA? What about the Order do you feel makes it stand out above the rest to which you decided to dedicate your time and energy to?

I saw expansion – and I still see expansion. I still don't know whether to call it simplicity or complexity – but the ONA was so different from all the other views, all the other systems, all the other thinking, I had done before – that I was convinced it was magic. When you compare the ONA to a group like the COS, or TOS you see immediate differences in the approach – in the direction – in the purpose – in the methodology. Most groups, though they try to differentiate themselves, work within a basically similar system – with pylons, degrees, restrictions, dogma, doctrine, leaders, followers, blah. They might look different on the outside, but on the inside they follow a regimented and religious styling of hierarchy and rank. They are different only in wrapping paper. ONA on the other hand, even from the very beginning was so far out of the box from anything I had seen that I am still learning from it even as I learned the first day more in a few hours than any other occult organisation had ever taught me before. For instance, other occult organisations might try to capture you inside a certain frame of view/belief – ONA explained that this happened, how it happened, and that it could be avoided. It went 'over the top' of the occult labyrinth and dispelled the nonsense that went with it. It was like an enormous eagle high above the circuit, peering down with a panoramic view, all-knowing because it focused on understanding the essence behind things, not the illusions those things presented. There has never been anything for me personally that has rivalled the ONA for its genius – something I have lamented at times in fact, because there is nowhere else to go after the ONA – after I understood Myatt and ONA – I found myself lost. Because every other writer had been trapped in form, lacking as someone once said, a ‘praxeology’ – their work was like looking through rose-tinted glasses again via a small myopic perception of the world, however lofty – it paled in comparison to the scope of the ONA. And to some extent this is why the Temple of THEM was necessary, because after learning so much, there was no other way that I could evolve further. I’d reached my limits.

3. 352: How was your personal “journey” into the ONA like as you progressed thru it’s grade rituals?

Difficult Just like you, I had to force my way into the ONA and solidify that position over time, a lot of time.- and I did not do this the “Traditional” way. This may surprise you, but in terms of the Septenary system I am not even an External Adept; I attempted this rite but set the bar too high in arrogance thinking my black magical will power would prevail. Well in some areas it’s useful – but not in this one and not that time. I failed the External Adept rite though I keep it in my mind to attempt it again. And I have not attempted to perform the Internal Adept rite because I fear that my personality would experience too much change, too much shock, and possible even a re-orientation of my anima – proving disastrous to my relationship with my Mistress. As it stands, my personality is required to achieve the aims of THEM. The fact that I am so familiar with ONA but have not followed it to the letter – should provoke some interesting questions – but with luck provoke more understanding than inquiry...

4. 352: We know the Temple of THEM is ONA, but as a Sinister organisation in itself, it is... as it sometimes states – different. In what way?

The Temple of THEM is not actually an ONA Nexion. It called itself a Nexion to reinvigorate the ONA and give the impression of fresh blood to save it from stagnating during some dark years it was losing its vigour. Prior to you, in fact. But its members were either so inspired by, taught via, or involved with the Order in varying degrees, including respect and homage for it, that it would be hard to call it anything else. As the Order has said – we of “of the ONA” and we recognise that. As for the second part of your question – one need only read our mss to get an impression of how different THEM are from the ONA. THEM openly invite viewpoints that conflict with our own to provide dialectic – since the point is not that people accept what we’ve written, but accept that what is written anywhere is a viewpoint – and should be recognised in that context. We directly oppose the ONA’s Tradition in some of our manuscripts – but more importantly – the insights and secrets we share about the ONA's form, function and methodology were not given to us by the ONA – i.e. they did not teach us how to understand them – in fact, they put all manner of obstacles in our way to doing so. Despite this, THEM teaches about Mythos, Forms and Abstractions using the ONA as a prime example – to allow others to perceive what is behind the illusions of the world and its Magian masters – thus destabilising the infrastructure of the Authorities on the outside just as Satanic Alchemy destabilises it on the inside. We are not sanctioned by the ONA as much as tolerated – and toleration is a necessary evil – because THEM will voice itself whether the Order wants it to or not.

THEM has also expanded much of the Septenary Tradition not only via its own works or preservation of all former ONA mss – but via the dialectic it has posed, prompting answers to difficult questions from the Order. The crux is this – if ONA had not been so hard to get answers from, so secretive, silent on matters, and more willing to talk – we would not have had to de-construct it brick by brick to see how it worked. I should point out that where we found weak points – we have always endeavoured to patch them up. So in some way, ONA's silence has brought life to a new science by necessity; Narrative Magic.

5. 352: Personally, in your eyes, how relevant is the ONA/Sinister Way in today's world?

I'd like to answer that question but information is lacking because it's in limbo. The WSA is modifying the Tradition from what it was to something altogether unique for future generations; it is difficult to say which ONA or Sinister Way is relevant because they splinter into all-possible definitions; and today's world for me is hardly an objective anchor from which to proceed. I will say this – ONA were relevant for me, then, and now – without which, I should likely be a very different and stupid man. The keys in ONA are still as perennially unchanging as wisdom from any great sage or work – but with the extensive and elaborate (I must confess, breath-taking to watch) transfiguration of the Order by the WSA under way – I believe the ONA has never been made more relevant, more accessible, nor more profoundly condensed. Even by Us.

6. 352: You've been active in the ONA for at least a decade. During that decade the ONA has been successful in accomplishing many things. Have you noticed, or are you willing to name certain "endeavours" where the ONA failed or made mistakes?

Even after a decade of observation – it would be presumptuous of me to think I knew that ONA had made a mistake – or to comment on Myatt's conduct from a point in time now past, especially, because as an Initiate, I know firsthand that "mistakes" are a necessary part of learning, growing, evolving. If you don't make mistakes, it probably means you're not trying hard enough, daring enough, defiant enough to reach further than you should, and won't experience the sobering humbling fall that marks every step on the staircase of wisdom. But ONA had to have made thousands. If it didn't it wouldn't be the powerful collective experience it is. It clearly grew from them all, too.

7. 352: If you could change the ONA to make it “better,” and more relevant to the next generation; what would you change... add, phase out... etc?

All of my works and books contain the indications where I felt changes should be made. And I went ahead and made those changes giving rise to THEM. With that: it's no longer my desire to change or challenge the ONA; that responsibility has been taken squarely on your more than capable shoulders – with full support from Us.

8. 352: What are your personal hopes for the Temple of THEM?

As you may already know, THEM are highly secretive as concerns details of their intended function and purpose – hints have been given – but I cannot answer this question; in some regard, THEM is a hypothesis, an experiment being conducted over a thirty year period, and to explain the experiment would affect it. Nonetheless, we hope that the Temple succeeds in acting as Falcifer and ushering in Vindex, in saturating the global psyche with the ONA mind-set and the work of Myatt, to teach what lies beyond, beneath, and behind Appearance; Destroy the Magian; and to give Australia a truly Sinister History.

9) 352: Your most memorable Insight Role – What was is, and what did you learn from it? How was that Role different from the person you are within and the life you normally live?

Probably a dual role. Working six months as a janitor in an elderly home, and then six months for the federal government as a clerk immediately after. Proving to myself how easy it was to shape-shift by fulfilling behavioural expectations. I also learned how extremely different it is to be an average working joe, (I've held jobs in furniture removal, retail, salesman, warehousing, demolition, metal works) and part of the government payroll. The conditions are so different it made me very angry. Safety, Workplace laws, Comfort, Restrictions on task, insurance, premiums, superannuation are all vastly superior to the working man. I am completely disillusioned regarding the effort of the govt to get people into jobs – which they have treated as a new religion, with job network providers popping up everywhere in the thousands quietly performing a number of dubious activities to get people jobs including extensive psychological profiling. Just as WSA say, the ten percenters are real, are a threat, are our enemy. You make excellent points too in your comments regarding the nature of schools and how they are there to make machines for the industry. This also goes into all the echelons, where in every part of society the rich are catered for at the expense of the poor man. I once had several in-depth discussions with a Q.C. at my gym who was so disgusted by the justice system he had quit. And, because I am a Satanist – and my job required gathering National Intelligence – it was directly at odds with my subversive, revolutionist spirit.

10) 352: In your honest opinion: What role do girls play in the ONA? I mean besides making nice naked ornaments for altars; things needed for rites that involve copulation; and reading the part in ceremonies where it says “priestess/mistress.” Is a girl even important in the ONA?

In my honest opinion – my essay “Baphomet: The Greatest Heresy” covered my thoughts on this subject aptly. Because of the secrecy by other members concerning their role in the ONA, let alone the role of their priestesses – I can really only speak for myself and the role my “priestess” has played. In the beginning of my path I sought out word for word, exactly what was required by the Way – viz, a willing priestess who would learn chant, follow the Septenary way, and generally rise up there spheres alongside me in the proscribed manner. However – I don’t think the ONA ever met someone like my “priestess” NineRays. 9R was willing to do all of this, for me. 9r and I were friends before lovers. For many years she watched me go through the motions, becoming a dangerous fanatic in the service of the ONA. But throughout she also guided me, making me second-guess myself very often and very hard when I came at here with my opinions, ideas, and answers. It was thus she got her name Nine-Rays, for she always knew how to introduce Chaos into anything, even my most sure of answers – for this, any credit to the powerful arguments and common-sense of THEM, belongs to this woman and her ability to make me think ever harder ever further. 9R was taken with the ONA, as was I, and we performed dozens of rituals based on their tenets, chanted together, and generally assembled ourselves into an ONA lifestyle with all that it implies – but she did this not for the ONA, but for me.

However – it came to the point where 9R showed this to me, and as she had always done, remained independent of the ONA even if she used some of their works for her own means. She was always strongly, fiercely, darkly, Sinister, willing and capable of using violence to coerce, even before I met her and introduced her to the ONA. She is a tall striking beautiful red-headed woman with a very intimidating presence. She has and always will, walk her own, path, as she does now. And without that spirit of hers, I should be a weaker, paler, man now. And, she is not the only strong female to influence me, my mother, and the Sorceress, my girlfriends of the past – all strong catalysts. Even though though many of them may have never even heard of the Order – I firmly believe Women of whatever creed play an essential role in the dance of Men. Neither do they need to be directly involved in such things as Satanism or the occult, to do so.

11) 352: We know there are many sincere people out there who are interested in the ONA, and desire to apply its principles, and contribute their time and energy to the ONA, but who don't have the advantage or opportunity of knowing someone to teach them the Sinister Way, and would appreciate guidance, or an adept to point them in the right direction.

Besides advising these solitary individuals to gradually work towards undertaking the initiation stages of the ONA. If you could devise a practical curriculum, or essential practice to help them on their way to develop their magickal skills and such what would it be? Or Describe your own method in a way that would teach the beginner; what steps, chants, and methods you use to magickally manifest your desire that works best for you. I would advise them, naturally, to look into THEM. THEM – is not a curriculum of defined magic, we are not about returning someone to an occult labyrinth to memorise rituals, names, means, or even a philosophy. We do not believe in one singular magical system for all – but share what we know from experience among us without expectation. We are a means of devising an extremely powerful sense of self-analysis, critical analysis, and rational deduction for when you DO get into a system (occult or otherwise) that has a proscribed curriculum. So that not only can you learn the little things like the leaves and the flowers of the system, but can study the tree, the roots, and turn your eye toward the rest of the forest. That you would also take many things into account in your journey that are largely invisible when you start it – more quickly, can also be of benefit, because Time is your greatest enemy. Thus we host systems like the TOB, IOT, WOT, ONA, OSV, OOS, and so on for others to choose from, combine, or simply study at their own leisure, in their own way. We are, like the ONA, not a simple repetitive set of classes that teach magic, we teach how we learned to learn.

12) 352: Pathways and Pathworking – for the benefit of those beginners of the Dark Tradition who wish to gain insights as to the way and method an experienced Adept pathworks: Would you describe a pathworking session as you personally preform it, in whatever way you have found works best for you?

Well I'm not an Adept – I'm an Initiate. I would refer them to Shugara – A Sinister Pathworking. Pathworking opened my eyes – because I saw nothing. No demons, no mystical gateways, no voices, no nothing. If the Pathworkings changed me – they did it subtly. But then – that in itself is an experience – testing what is given you – and forming your own conclusions – are what has always worked for me.

13) 352: Dark Gods – To you personally what are these? There comes a point in an Adepts journey to the Abyss where he/she begins to more frequently experience acausal intrusions and maybe even some form or manifestation of these Dark Forces: What's your most strangest encounter?

From my experience – there’s no way to describe what these are. Any conscious grab to understand these concepts only seems to push them away, hides them under wishful interpretation. Rather than try to grab them – to understand or rationally intuit this concept – I just let them be.

14) 352: What is the “Magian” to you?

I answered this question in a set of essays called “On the Cold Facts of Form and Manipulation”. This is a complex question, as have all questions become with my understanding of the limits of language; because all answers where abstractions are concerned (and everything is an abstract) require me to take into account my personal bias, limitations, expectations, and prejudices. This can’t be done fairly – because the ‘Magian’ as an abstract does not essentially mean anything, and could yet mean everything. The easier level provides a nice solid answer like, our enemy, Nazarene this, ruining aeon, blah blah. But I don’t feel like a “You” – and even though feeling as though I should say it’s when referring to myself – this is too eccentric for language. And some proof toward the limitations of language to aptly express the alchemical changes of the occult. This is probably why the Lhp and Satanism insist on you providing yourself with the answers to these. Some may see this as avoiding the question – but if my time with ONA has taught me anything more than I’ve already elaborated – its the true power and key of self-sufficiency when it comes to knowledge.

15) 352: How is this Magian force to be destroyed?

It’s not that easy. But breaking through language is one means to loosening the simplistic boxes that define reality and the means of apprehending it. Language binds us to a specific geometry. Qv. Liber 13.13

16) 352: As an Adept with advice to give to those solitary genuine ONA initiates beginning on this Seven Fold Sinister Way of ours, who don’t have the advantage of a group to work with, but wish to some how contribute to the destruction of the Magian by “bringing down” more acausal energy to help manifest change: How would you instruct or advise them, as far as what they can do as a single individual, to either be a living nexion for the acausal to pass thru or to physically help destroy the Magian?

Again, I’m not an Adept of the ONA. I would advise them a) to observe very carefully how they themselves process information and learn as much as others have written about it as they can until they feel slightly schizophrenic and detached from their ego, their ‘one-ness’. b) to observe very carefully what comprises the forms they witness in the world in regards to taking into account their own possible ignorance, arrogance, failings, prejudices with good humour and with self-honesty and understanding, and a sense of humour. c) to seek, devour, and explore the works of groups like the Tempel ov Blood, (and E. A. Koetting), the Order of Nine Angles, the Order of Saturn, the White Star Acception, and anyone else affiliated with THEM as we propose not to bury someone in a system for our own ends, but to remove one from the occult labyrinth and place them squarely into their own seat of wisdom.

17) 352: Imperium – 300 years from now when “Imperium Galactica” has been actualised; in your mind: How do you envision it to be? What does it look like to you? What are your hopes, dreams and visions of it?

This term used to mean something tangible to me, but it no longer does. “Galactic Imperium”, like “Solvat Saeclum in Favilla”, “Anti-Cosmic Black Flame”, “A Sinister History for Australia”, or “New Aeon” or whatever end or ultimate aim our language professes as the motivation for a form is from where I stand empty rhetoric used only to effect the magicians will; it is the creation of simplistic, tangible, graspable, propaganda or handles (attachments to forms) to allow many to grasp what is conceived by one. Whether a political or magical or social or religious or scientific interpretation; it’s all interpretation; one shouldn’t forget that and one should strive to understand that if one does not; the laziness of the human being is the laziness that allows society, condensing what is into interpretations that take on a solid immovability; from which all manner of brave postulates proceed even if the prime interpretation is wrong.

Whilst on one hand it is essential to work with such phrases, building and substantiating a mythos/reality to support them and the necessary handholds so that others can support them too – the Sorcerer is or needs to be above getting trapped in forms, and believing they have of themselves any real validity or existence; they have only persistence. Imperium, insofar as it echoes from ONA – is David Myatt’s personal word, to reflect his apprehension of the future drawn from his studies of the past. And insofar as it reflects a synthesis of wisdom that many of us share agreement on; the idea and ideology necessary to achieve Imperium, qv, Falcifer/Vindex is used by THEM but understood as a form, to carry along the momentum its presence generates among people such forms have the power to affect. My hopes and dreams change as I change, but my belief, is that an external Imperium is only ever going to arise when the inner sanctions people impose upon themselves are re-oriented. Imperium, via the death-grip of the American-Magian Axis, is already bringing the world to a boiling point, and I think it is going to get extremely dark before the dawn. I cannot imagine what the world would be like, nor the outward changes it would undergo were people to follow the same train of alchemy I have; that is outside the known, and I cannot speculate on that. What I do have conviction in though – is that THEM acts as Falcifer to tear not just down but through the Magian; and whatever comes after they fall, is up to Vindex.

18) 352: In your eyes: What is Anton Long to you? Is he a prophet, a teacher, a guru, some guy with some great insights, or is he irrelevant to what you have become and or what the ONA has become?

Anton Long is the closest approximation I have had to a father figure (via my projection onto him as a father via his resonance of the archetype of Satan), and the best mentor of Satanism I have had the fortune to encounter. AL is without question a genius in my mind, though one must not forget to thank the many others around him who were a part of ONA and who made his genius ever more vibrant, ever more diverse, and ever more accessible with their own. He's all of those things; a prophet, a teacher, a guru, a guy whose work has completely revolutionised my life and what I do with it. I don't of course sell my own attributes and fire short here; I may see AL as many things, but he is not my God. I have an excellent memory – I've never forgotten, nor will I ever forget those who helped me in my path to be the man I am. I acknowledge every debt; and preserve every member of the Sinisterion in my memes, that the Tradition be REMEMBERED. I am very impressed this man has done so much with life. He's an inspiration to us all.

CORRESPONDENCE: GEORGE SEIG OCT 9, 2009

Hello George,

My name is Kris and I am the founder of the esoteric satanic organisation the Temple of THEM. I have tried to reach you via Exeter University – but failed to do so. Your email was supplied to me via a member of the Order of Nine Angles.

My understanding is that you are currently engaged in writing a dissertation regarding Western Esotericism within the Exeter Centre for the Study of Esotericism (EXESES0). My need to reach you pertains to an erroneous belief that the Temple of THEM utilises, practices or embraces Nazism/National Socialism in a similar fashion to that of its former patron the British, Order of Nine Angles (ONA).

On the eve of your great talk – I fear that perhaps you wish not to upset the apple cart, to ignore us, and hope we will go away – but I suspect you simply have not received our emails and are unaware of the conflict your cataloguing of us in the Neo-Nazi basket has wrought. In the interests of scholarly clarity I should very much like to discuss the matter personally with you to assist you and your studies by providing one-to-one email inc. factual context and dissertations produced by this Temple to help you re-orient your understanding of who we are and what we represent, inc. those dissertations that have openly stated and concluded Nazism to be of no benefit and openly invite you to further discuss the context of ONA influence on the Temple of THEM, and THEM on ONA, particularly in the ways in which we differ which are many and markedly. I am also under the impression that much of your information is second-hand and perhaps coming from one Jacob Christiansen who runs ITP and offer you the opportunity to make your own clarifications/conclusions in the interests of scholarly clarity and appropriate representation of this Temple and its aims, intents, and beliefs.

Sincerely,

Kris of THEM

October ?

Dear Kris,

The offending blurb has been taken down. I just had my final pre-submission supervision regarding my thesis and it looks as though I will be able to squeeze in some extra words and content, so I will definitely find any communication with you useful in the course of completion. Thanks again for offering. I'll also be preparing the lecture I mention for the Satanism conference in Norway through the following week. Particularly if you are of the impression that Jacob Christiansen has inaccurate or misleading information (which would therefore likely to be presented) you may want to be sure I have accurate information instead, which could be used to rectify any errors made in other people's presentations. I will also email the coordinator of that conference for which the summary of my talk appeared without delay, requesting that the reference to the Temple of THEM be stricken from it. As I said in my previous email, any further reference to your work will be after we have communicated further.

G.J.

George Sieg

Hello again, George

In a bid to contact you I originally sent emails to different faculties and persons located at the Exeter University hoping to hit upon someone that would pass on my messages. I did not in fact think that I would hear back from you – so it is something of a surprise to have done so. And on the contrary, I think its a shame that your talk was cancelled – even had I not been able to reach you, or had you chosen to ignore us, it would hardly have mattered overall if an NS slant had been given to THEM in passing in academic circles – it was rather the context in which THEM utilises NS that I wanted to talk to you about.

Briefly put – I read the gist of your speech would make mention of the irony that ONA/THEM [Satanism] etc. used NS based elements to bring about a new Reich when historically Hitler and the Third Reich eschewed all such forms of secular occultism and some say occultism in general. Russian sectors of ONA have previously reported interference and persecution for practising occult and upholding NS materials as part of the corpus of the ONA. The outline of the speech to be given would have wrongly inferred that we were not aware of this discrepancy – but in fact we are. This was the first point I wished to correct – both of our organisations are well aware that occult organisations even if they were supporting NS would have been shut down, imprisoned, or executed by a fascist dictatorship. Mind you – in my opinion, if there is an irony in the ONA, it is that many who joined it or took an interest did so because its tenets of reductionist/anarchist ephemera regale its readers with the possibility of freeing themselves from the political and religious powers that be – yet Myatt’s ONA has become just another one of those powers preaching past sins from a bigoted pulpit. David Myatt’s firm grip on NS insofar as it remains a persistent tool of ONA philosophy – is partly built on an optimism that by examining and subsequently denying many of the proofs of the ww2 holocaust – perceived injustices and unfounded slander of Nazi Germany can bring to light the many flaws and shameful practices committed by the Allies – including unearth a long-standing conspiracy of a Jewish/Nazarene cabal to undermine the Dictator and take control of the world themselves. Whilst the world maintains a concerted effort that the holocaust be remembered – ONA maintains a similar effort that the holocaust be remembered yet rationally examined in an emotionally detached and critical analysis. Or at least they did.

When you speak about NS in relation to the ONA you are essentially digging up the past – for it has been more than a decade since ONA openly supported that cause either in mss or deed. THEM’s interest in NS stems by proxy from its support for all-things ONA, inc. the Temple 88 mss – but it too [NS] has long been considered a defunct form for achieving what we wish to achieve. I should make clear at this point – that THEM does have members that formerly and presently align themselves with NS [of varying shades and intensities] – and I was among the former – all part of a growing process – but I have long ceased to believe in Aryan Superiority or support National Socialism. In fact I have written an entire volume on my journey with Nazism (inc. my enamourment with/departure from it) for the sake of learning about Race and myself through what the ONA call ‘Insight Roles’. The fact is – NS has since been replaced by Islam in Myatt’s journey – a change reflected in ONA’s doctrines – so those of us who grew up believing in the propaganda put forth via the Temple 88 mss when it was appropriate to the ONA – were shell-shocked when Myatt turned about face and supported Islamism. But this is part of the magic of ONA – it can eloquently and vividly grab hold of a form, condense it into a manageable code, and attract people to practice it.

The crux is this: Satanism holds, that to Know NS personally, for oneself, to judge and decide independent of popular, historical, or recorded opinion the worth of NS, [or anything] requires one to experience a form for oneself. This goes back to what I said about the Order being based on a war against the establishment/the status quo and the Jewish/Magian cabal. At least this is the drawbridge via which ONA led many hundreds, possibly thousands into battle on its behalf. Of this and other experiences was born the judgement that NS was no longer practical or useful – but also that it did still contain certain elements that were useful and constructive to this Temple. E. Weber wrote a fascinating doctrine on Racism where he alluded that ‘Racism’ was originally created by fascists merely to gather together a certain collective union and motivate them under one banner – only later did it become re-tooled (again politically) into its current meaning and become a easy means of political demonization. On the question of race, I am far more even tempered than I used to be – but these days my contention still lies with the public’s denial of race as a qualifier for description despite its prevalence and the obvious. Race may not be popular – but it is still clearly a ubiquitous motivating factor. And motivating factors are where much of THEM’s own work takes its cues and pursues its studies.

I should add that at this point if you are confused as to whether THEM are in fact ONA, I don’t blame you.

I created the Temple in 2003 with some other people using the seven fold way and other magical ways as a means to get myself and my insights and work distinguished from the ONA. In 2006 we went public with our revisions to the Sinister aspects of which we felt had been sorely neglected by the Order – including the issue of Solidarity. Yet we took an active and highly industrious role in making the ONA look larger than it was, more widespread and more powerful than it was. We called ourselves the Australian Nexion of the ONA and worked sometimes with/sometimes against Myatt’s own Order – spending years teaching practising and preserving the seven-fold way. Admittedly, there has been tension between Myatt and myself as we both struggle to try and change the world via various Satanic platforms.

Magical Socialism is the hybrid that emerged from the Temple of THEM to replace NS – but our attempts to get this off the ground have been thwart by the vagaries of humans to cohes without the crutch of forms. That is, its not feasible to teach the direct esoteric experience of THEM which is more or less a deep commitment to a life-long path of searching, gaining insights into things and attaining Gnosis or a wordless knowing; without providing a “Temple”, a “name”, a “description”, and a host of other things to represent a “Presence” for people to attach themselves to, places for them to make contact, but unfortunately such forms often end up obscuring the purity of the matter of a deep empathic connexion to oneself, others and the world by being mistaken as the esoteric nature of THEM itself. sigh

I should point out that far from being the destructive lackey of ONA – THEM has striven to distinguish itself from the Order in many ways for many years. Whilst the Order maintained the principles of the Seven-fold way it suited many of our collective practices and views. This has put us at odds with Myatt many times and

I've had a lot of heated debates with him. None more so than when they placed WSA in charge who abandoned many of the sound principles of conduct that made ONA noble and appealed to a future Galactic Imperium we could all appreciate or aim for – into an Afro-American gangster betrayal that championed new and un-insightful nonsense such as killing without traditional tests for character. With WSA's 'changes' the line has grown thinner and thinner between the long-touted heavy-handed violence and injustice of the establishment we are told the ONA stands against and those that claim to be championing its so-called eradication becoming the dickheads we originally all sought to avoid and breed out of life.

Our last move was to finally disband publicly withdrawing our support for ONA on the basis that the Order had become childishly unstable, destructive and unpalatable – no longer representing the rich core of Sinister knowledge accumulated 1970-2003 in the way of the Seven-Fold Way by a Corp of dedicated adherents – but run by the new and inexperienced WSA who jettisoned what many of us held to be core tenets of a traditional way of living that worked and represented the Sinister – in favour of pouring libations at Myatt's feet. With the abandonment of many of those core principles including speaking from experience; common courtesy; and being that Myatt purposefully engineered these changes himself – it was decided to sever any connection by the ONA to the Temple of THEM. This in no way implies the cessation of privately instructing others in THEM's work on a one-to-one basis – which continues.

Re: Jacob, it is not that his information is unreliable – merely second-hand. I was not impressed by his MA thesis on the Order (of which he sent me the final draft) and felt it a dry and scant piece of writing heavily based on the litter of skeletons of Myatt's older outer forms. I'm happy to cast an eye over your own draft to check the information if you want. At any rate, if he were passing you information on us – I should prefer to discuss the Temple of THEM with you personally as per my heartfelt requisite that each should make their own conclusions with the best information available – to wit I am willing to provide you whatever you need to make your dissertation accurate and insightful. Our work covers an enormous range of topics – though the majority of our published works were penned directly by myself. George, I had planned to raise something of a fuss over the NS wording – but that was then and this is now. Since we [THEM] no longer have a vested interest in our outer appearance and PR – the above should be considered idle chatter and the efforts of someone else deeply interested in exploring the fascinating topic of the ONA with candour and integrity. As a student of the occult and humanism in general I enjoy such discussions – and with a background in the ONA I put forward the offer to help you research them or offer my knowledge/opinion of any of the other myriad groups presently or formerly associated with the Order. But my forte is the Temple of THEM of which I am representative and I invite further discussion – particularly if you intend to include us in any talks as associates of the ONA.

My reply here has hopefully been expansive but it is by no means comprehensive. I have intended to emphasise a certain level of awareness operating behind our use of forms that is not as cut and dry as it might first appear but I can only go so far in a first email. The matters at hand are compounded by the existence of acute levels of awareness in regards to how/why certain forms are perceived by the general public – ONA/THEM do not blindly follow NS/Islam as a matter of course; but as part of a greater strategy of opening the mind of observers toward the possibility that all ideology even supposedly contradicting ideologies are nonetheless unified at the level of human and heuristic exploration. Yet for every positive statement I can make about the movements of the ONA – there is always the necessity for qualifiers and disclaimers to each. This complexity is due to the reductionism inherent in esoterica and in itself makes ONA a difficult subject to discuss linearly with any revealing frankness.

I look forward to your reply.

Subject: Re: Urgent Att: G. J. Seig (Temple of THEM)

Dear Kris,

I am, in fact, very grateful for your email — or, rather, emails, as I gather from reading this one that there have been others. You are correct in assuming this is the first I have read, as I have been failing to check my messages while buried in work. You may be pleased to know that the talk to which you refer below was, in fact, cancelled due to the demands of completing my dissertation, which does not, in fact, refer to the Temple of THEM as NS, despite the apparently erroneous advertisement for the somewhat related lecture which may have given this impression. I was, however, of the belief that the Temple of THEM, or some of its members, had in the past aligned themselves either with National Socialism, or its imagery. If this is also incorrect, I appreciate your taking the time to correct the mistake. Further to your offer of personal communication, I would be very interested in, and appreciative of, this, both for academic reasons, in that I am sure it will be relevant to a presentation I intend to give next month in Trondheim, Norway at the first ever academic conference on Satanism (at which conference Jacob Christiansen will also be present), and also due to my personal interest in the Sinister Way.

I also have another apology for you, in the same trend as my failure to check emails for weeks. The demands of my thesis have apparently increased my absentmindedness in advance of becoming an actual professor: I am dismayed to report that among various packages of “unopened books” arriving for my work, I discovered the book which I was meant to return to you so long ago. I have no idea how it managed to end up in the wrong stack, but it will be posted back to you in Australia as soon as I have the opportunity now that I realise it was never sent before.

I formally submit my thesis this week, but after that I will have ample time for correcting such oversights, and hopefully for correspondence with you in advance of the forthcoming conference.

Further, I'm sorry if my inadvertent ignorance of your emails temporarily gave the impression that I "hope you will go away." The reverse is certainly the case and I am quite pleased to be in personal contact with you in this context. Indeed, further to my conversations with Chloe of the WSA, I had intended to attempt to get in touch with you anyway, but the word limit has forced me to severely reduce the extent to which I can explore these traditions in the initial dissertation. I still hope that the future expanded version of my work will be able to present much more detailed, accurate, and relevant information on these subjects — and as I'm sure you know, they are of great personal interest and significance to me as well.

Thank you for your patience.

Best wishes,

George J. Sieg

A REFUTATION TO DR. BENJAMIN HILLIER

To whom it may concern, and to whom it should concern.

[The Temple of THEM (aka 'THEM') has recently been notified of a video published by Dr. Benjamin Hillier of the University of Tasmania (UTAS) alleging the Temple's involvement in and promotion of National Socialism and ties to terrorist organisations. The Temple of THEM has requested YouTube take down the defamatory video labelling THEM as a nexion of the Order of Nine Angles (Hereafter, O9A) and a National Socialist organisation. Additionally, THEM has downloaded and archived the video should our following response to the video be unclear without the source material: which can be provided. A copy of this letter and the video will be posted on the Temple's group page as a public announcement, and a copy of this letter and the video will be sent to the University of Tasmania. Finally, the video has been archived for the Temple's own legal records. Timestamps below refer to relevant sections of this video.]

Nazi Occult Metal – Esoteric Fascism in Extreme Metal

Music <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GqcSovgKH2A>.

I am the founder of the Temple of THEM and I speak formally for it.

I suppose something need be said in relation to the strange, poorly researched, and sensational claims that the Temple of THEM is currently, or even recently, associated with either the O9A, which publicly and vehemently denounced the Temple of THEM as a make-believe posture with no association to the O9A (Religious Forums 2014) or the claims that THEM promotes National Socialism (Hillier 2023). I'm glad Hillier "found something to suggest we fell out" to "answer the question of whether the Temple of THEM are still a part of the O9A" (Hillier 2023, 34:45) – although in his own words "he can't remember" precisely what the stance on 'mundanes' (the colloquialism used by the O9A to describe its enemies he should be referring to) or the indicated position on enemies of the O9A being allowed to be murdered or raped (Hillier 2023, 34:55) or its position on child murder. According to Hillier, and I quote, "One group thought yes, and one group thought no" (Hillier 2023, 34:55)– an academically outrageous open accusation to leave ambiguous for a man in possession of a PhD, speaking on a discipline with which he is only vaguely acquainted and has no formal education. Again, and I quote, Hillier says 'I can't remember' in relation to sharing his knowledge on the values and directives of the O9A (Hillier 2023, 35:04). In fact, the O9A is on record as to how much it despises the Temple of THEM in multiple time-stamped public statements issued over the years (Scribd 2023; Religious Forums 2014) that in unequivocal terms declare us 'pretendu' 'charlatans' and 'frauds' via o9a spokesperson Kerriscott (Religious Forums 2014) – facts on record that even a -casual- google search brings up. The Temple of THEM was informally court-marshalled by the O9A in a private forum, records of which trial and its conversations which attempted a public shaming of the Temple, are retained by both O9A and the Temple of THEM in dated archives titled 'A Bit Further Down the Rabbit Hole' and 'Alice in Wonderland – the Temple of THEM (Mvimaedivm Black 2021).

Dr. Ben Hillier claims to be an academic and has a PhD. I am an academic, too. When we write papers at university, it is the rule of thumb to specifically pick a position to argue: for or against. The subject matter is researched with an open mind, the facts are gathered and a position is determined after all of the facts/arguments are considered. We offer both sides though, and it is our writing and arrangement skill that elevates what we wish to present as truth and diminishes the counterargument. The arguments we make at University are constructed with a formula (Referencing) intended at every step to present what we write as factual and difficult to refute by using dated citations of the names of the authors from the papers we have researched that inform a reader of the year information was either published or accessed so sources can be checked and verified. Academics are trained to argue for or against a point – but they are also trained to do proper research, cite material, read more than the fragments that suit their claim, to be fair, show integrity, and exhibit responsibility. Peer-reviewed means assertions made by an academic have undergone rigorous scrutiny to make sure they have authenticity and adequate evidence before being published. Reviewers carefully fact-check information and verify sources for a good reason: there is a responsibility implicit in getting facts right, because getting them wrong and presenting them as right through the powerful distribution channels of academia and entering data into its stores of resources and becoming part of its global reach can cause real harm or damage to others if the facts are incorrect. As an academic with a PhD, it should be a matter of habit that peer-reviewed facts are used in any presentation that involves speaking about other individuals or groups and the sources used should be clear and referenced if you are going to discuss and distribute those statements publicly. One would think a PhD meant at least four years devoted to studying and understanding the material of which one professes to be an authority.

Ben Hillier's education is on record and is not in occultism, counter-terrorism, or even theology – it is musicology and ethnomusicology (University of Tasmania, 2023). Dr. Hillier has a right to speak freely even as he denies it to others, but not when it comes to making public statements that are patently false and dangerous to entertain. Throughout this video, no academic rigour of any kind is evident here as I will shortly show. What is evident, however, is Hillier using his PhD as a pass card to defame my occult organisation, make false allegations, and endanger the lives of others. Hillier has an ethical and legal duty in presenting information as fact and is in breach of numerous academic integrity tenets. The University to which Hillier belongs should be ashamed it has failed him so completely in his duty and execution of the above academic rigours to which all academics are pledged to uphold – or be made aware of that which it may be unaware.

Hillier has litigiously declared the lead singer of Ignis Gehenna to be tattooed with the Nine Angles insignia (Hillier 2023, 34:11), where in fact numerous other images of the singer's chest prove it to be an unrelated geometric design with a sword running through the centre and bearing no resemblance to O9A's Nine-Angled Septagram symbol.

If the fantastic accusation were not enough, Hillier took it upon himself to then ring the venue where Ignis Gehenna were playing and defame the band through lies he believed to be true (because he did no research as will shortly be shown), spreading his 'findings' as a vigilante (Hillier 2023, 36:50). Hillier illustrates his personal bias in lamenting his righteous (and misguided) actions did not cause the gig to be completely cancelled by the rumours he spread (37:00-38:00).

Furthermore "that is his personal view" – a view he made directly public when he sought to deliberately and with malicious intent make unfounded allegations and interfere in the lives of a set of musicians, (an interventionist interference that he believes should be a "scene-wide thing ... With bands, venues, promoters working together": Hillier 2023, 54:06) and admits to other vendettas "to get the band shut down" such as the band Taake by directly talking to the promoter and "pressuring the venue" to drop the band (Hillier 2023, 54:43-55:30). Hillier openly admits to haranguing promoters about bands all day to ensure bands he disagrees with are dropped (Hillier 2023, 56:10) (italics emphasis mine) and criticises venues for "booking Nazi bands" (Hillier 2023, 56:19). Hillier evidently enjoys his power in bullying promoters with his claims they have done wrong by booking a given band, which treatment and response of acquiescence from the promoter he refers to as a “gold standard” (Hillier 2023, 56:32). Hillier's ideal based on the “driving force behind his PhD” (Hillier 2023, 58:12) is to “keep the scene safe” (Hillier 2023, 56:44) – this, despite declaring members of bands he does not know to have allegiances to alleged terrorist organisations and tattoos of allegiances to groups that they do not have. And, indicates evident political bias in his relishing of the debasement of the opposition voicing their opinion (however unpopular) and being outnumbered at rallies (Hillier 2023, 1:04:45). Curiously, after his odd ambush of National Socialists in Black Metal and the danger they represent, Hillier undermines his argument entirely when he states that National Socialists and Occultists are “playing pretend” (Hillier 2023, 1:05:05) – in which case, where is the tangible, credible threat from National Socialism or Black Metal or the Opposition that warrants this debacle of a discussion in the first place? Hillier then, strangely goes on to admit “there is not a huge influence of Black Metal on Esoteric Fascism that I can see at the moment, but I am sure there are little groups of it” (Hillier 2023, 1:05:12-1:05:15) and “he is not sure who is doing what” (Hillier 2023, 1:05:39).

The lack of consistency in what can only be called a disjointed zealous tirade, beggars belief and makes clear that Hillier did not make the video to protect holocaust survivors as he claims but to put forth his political and unresearched views of Them, O9A, Black Metal, Ignis Gehenna and the apparent threat of National Socialism. It is a bizarre rant that destroys its own credibility and unclear why Hillier even had to make this video or open his mouth pretending he is an authority on the matters at hand, rather than a biased, self-serving spectator determined to use his position to legitimise his hackneyed imaginings, even sabotaging his own points by the end of it!

There is a gravely concerning element to this, because a man with a PhD making false statements and being taken seriously can do as such, because many believe his PhD suggests a modicum of academic integrity. Hillier is right about one other thing, we are pretty serious (Hillier 2023, 38:11) and we take allegations from a man tarnishing reputations and deciding who is and is not a Nazi freely with his musicology PhD, very seriously.

On an academic level, let alone the occult one, I am embarrassed that this ‘authority’ speaking on satanism has veered so badly from academic regimen and integrity. It is deeply concerning that someone who is placed in a position of authority and has the reach, resources and reputation to speak as an authority has made untrue statements concerning so many aspects of the Temple; with the gravitas that speaking from such a position of authority leads people to believe the speaker is sharing facts, peer-reviewed information. Academics, indeed even people who make casual statements about others have a responsibility to those groups and people under study to be fair, not to endanger them by making accusations, or recklessly ruin or sabotage their careers by contacting and harassing parties claiming their assumptions (not research) is evidence of wrong-doing. They certainly have a responsibility to not spuriously tie them to organisations to which they do not belong including suggesting terrorist links and associations.

Democratic societies have legal institutions and laws, watchdogs and bodies to deal with terrorism, terror groups, hate-speech or racial vilification. Any academic should know better than to personally take it upon himself to crusade for a personal political agenda using the status of his University as a police badge or to quantify his actions under the auspices of educational authority. I suspect the University of Tasmania knows nothing of this video, the reckless actions of its zealous faculty, nor the fallout that has cost a band its employment because of the accusations levelled. Moreover, Hillier has placed (THEM) an occult organisation that has virulently argued against ideology of Every Type since its inception in 2006, as championing the nonsense believed and practiced by the Christianic political ideology of National Socialism; knowing full well the implications of this (baseless) assertion. Hillier says ‘I tend to think hate-speech is something that warrants silencing’ – (Hillier 2023, 53:10) perhaps he should take his own advice.

Additionally, Hillier has the audacity to disparage my Temple of THEM wherein he admits he does not know the names of any members of the Temple of THEM or Ignis Gehenna (Hillier 2023, 1:05:20) – of which – I am unapologetically proud has been fighting against the vacuum suction of extremism for almost twenty years, from which I can speak from direct occult satanic experience. Moreover, you only have to type ‘Temple of THEM’ into Facebook to find our lighthouse group, or google to bring up archives of historical documents, or to make contact. We are not hard to find even if we do use pseudonyms. Several interviews have been granted by the Temple of THEM to enquiring occult academics over the years including Dr. Connell Monette of Al Akhawayan University (Internet Archive, 2012) and Dr. George Sieg of the University of New Mexico (Sieg 2013). Any serious and diligent researcher who takes time to engage with the Temple of THEM and its voluminous writings can also quite clearly see this for themselves, or read what has been published by previous academics with proper integrity and professional standing.

Importantly, any organisation or authority of any supervisory sagacity of Australian security including ASIO, ASI, AFP etc that has monitored my online activities because of my previous connections to O9A and its sinister current, will have nothing but evidence of my bearing, responses and actions backing up exactly what has been said across all forums, messages, phone calls, public or private and will verify what is said below about the Temple of THEM’s mission, action and conduct the past 18 years. Because we are different, even if some are too myopic, dim or politically obsessed to appreciate us.

Just because we are an informal occult organisation and our occult writings are voluminous – does Not give academics the right to misrepresent us, it does not entitle those in a position of power vested in them by their academic credentials to cobble together what suits their purpose and declare ‘this is what the Temple of THEM is or does’, and it certainly does not give anyone the right to declare us a supporter, promoter, associate of National Socialism because they were too lazy to adequately spend time doing what an academic is supposed to do; fact-find, properly research, provide citation including the year of publication of information, ensure academic integrity by reporting honestly, responsibly not engage in personal vendettas. Unfortunately for Hillier ‘it does become a very complicated topic very quickly’ (Hillier 2023, 53:17) and that is because clumsy, lazy research about the occult orders of the O9A and the Temple of THEM have often been sensationalised, ill-considered, barely researched, nor studied holistically for what they represent; but cherry-picked for juicy details out of context to help hacks develop their careers. Only a few academics have taken time or initiative to approach and speak with the O9A or the Temple of THEM, so it is small wonder there is so much mystery and misinformation. Founts like Hillier take advantage of the fact few people understand Occult Groups to grandstand and impress with their ideas, because like Hillier, most people never take the time to immerse themselves with the material we write, examine why we write what we do, fail to treat our material with the respect or gravitas most other academic sectors receive, or acknowledge that our currents deserve acknowledgement as genuine spiritual and esoteric currents of humanism that fundamentally disagree with core elements of society, reality and the status quo.

There are literally thousands of topics covered by the Temple of THEM, it is a daunting task to study us and appraise what we have done and do as an organisation: but it is not an excuse to fabricate what you feel to be true and slot us into a narrow purview that is academic misconduct at best, slander and defamation at worst, even incendiary and litigious. Though I do not have a PhD, I have at least, attempted to properly cite my material and sources and provide links and evidence for my assertions, for my claims, so that my credibility can be established through providing the source of records and facts for others to check. With the majority of Temple writings taking place from 18-40 years of age, we have a hefty corpus that would take any scholar years to digest – but also noticeably lack any academic regimen as I never attended University, I left high-school early, I didn’t know the world of academia or understand why Anton Long (founder of the O9A) referenced and cited everything he wrote. This may be the first article I have written about the Temple of THEM that uses my new-found skills, and even as a rank amateur, I know and respect what academic integrity is.

My own involvement with the O9A is also clearly on record and I am not ashamed to share it, nor have I been, and went to war with their organisation over significant differences. Prior to 2008, O9A did express distaste for child murder or abuse and it was O9A's Difference from the Catholic Church and its bevy of protected paedophiles that was what made O9A different and appealing to me from 1998 up to 2006 (See, Diary of a Devilworshipper Vol II). Intractable moral conflict on this matter of 'us and them' deepened as the ToB and WSA emerged and the O9A more and more entertained amoral destruction of anyone who was not O9A (mundanes) and to more frequently speak of and encourage deeds I did not entertain. I began to see a different side to the order, and wrote about the similarities of the O9A to the Catholic Church that I had lifelong wanted to see collapse, even going as far as to compare Long to encouraging paedophilia (a statement I later retracted). The Temple of THEM even encountered an individual who offered to traffic children as a financial pursuit to 'aid us', as many idiots often confused us (THEM) as having values identical to the amoral O9A. Such individuals were always forcefully ejected from THEM, even threatened. When it seemed to me O9A's structure now so closely replicated the Church with its black pope (Long) lording with its equivalent Jesus (Vindex) over a clergy who were forced to follow scriptures and punished anyone who dared disobey (And the O9A's fury and public disavowment against many persons that aided the Order throughout its history is also on record), I turned my back on it. I was repulsed at what it either had become or always was, and schismed violently from it to form the Temple of THEM. All of this is discussed throughout the voluminous material of the Temple of THEM for any serious and capable scholar to find or dotted about in the O9A's own archives.

My attitude and response to all these matters is clear, public and has put me at odds with my Satanic and Occult peers' multiple times. It is also available for anyone who cares to take the time to look up, rather than accept cherry-pick unrelated facts shared out of context because it suits their spurious dissertation that caters to left-wing zeal. So, let us try some facts shall we.

The Temple of THEM was formed in 2006 and now features over 18 years of writing over 20,000 pages of text on a dizzying range of occult matters and covering the varied chronological journey of my life exploring many different paths and belief systems, religious, spiritual and political over the course of decades. A similar project or autobiography attempted by Anton Long, but which I had begun long before I ever heard of the O9A in 1998. Eighteen years is long enough for the mind to be changed on convictions many times – and among the earliest Temple publications are a Flag with No Symbolism indicating how we feel about Ideology (The Temple Manifesto), and a direct denouncement of National Socialism (Diary of a Devilworshipper: Part II) as a fool's game that suckers in adherents to work the will of satanic instigators whose agenda is to use such forms to their advantage.

Of Hillier's fascination with 'Weltanschauung'. As an extremist and adherent to Nazism, I read Mein Kampf, and I read many other books on National Socialism too including Weber's book on fascism which described 'race' as a political fiction. My issue was not reading enough of anything else in those years. To understand anything; anyone knows, it is necessary to devote time to study, research and learn about it – to try to properly educate oneself on the subject even if in a narrow lens, in ignorance because you don't know better, or because you think the current is interesting, cool or can in some way make the changes to the world you might see it needing. As 'Ryan Anschauung' a play on 'Aryan Weltanschauung' I did entertain the ideas of National Socialism for some time, a few years at least, as a young man where I was exploring the Saturnian section of the O9A's Nasz Dom and its Temple 88, and was heavily indoctrinated myself due to my own failings to recognise anything more than blind idealism and thinking I was being told the truth. That I was learning the secrets of the Universe.

I am a highly creative individual, my experiments in magic and unusual way of looking at things have been a key element of the interest in the Temple of THEM by those who have been curious or members of its current. Without an established moral compass to guide any sense of the impact or legacy of something like 'Reichno', a colder, callous me saw it as a means to experiment with music as means to transmit propaganda to further the cause I believed in, like Oppenheimer tinkering with the atomic bomb thinking in his wisdom it was a good idea, a worthy idea, a valid idea. The concept was only ever a concept and it never eventuated beyond a draft. Contrary to Reichno, many years later, under the pseudonym 'Willet Rayne' I fused 2pac, Notorious B.I.G, the emancipation speech of Martin Luther King, speeches from George Bush Sr, the Los Angeles Riots, and 'This is my rifle' from Full Metal Jacket with the music from 28 Days Later to make a commentary on the tragic gang wars and state of warfare and waste among Black America titled 'I Have A Dream' (Temple of THEM 2019). 'The Tentacles' Hillier quotes from 'Liber Tentaculum' (Hillier 2023, 35:45) are in fact transmorphed from a National Socialist list I found that listed 100 points to aid NS, that I simply replaced the Temple's name with here and there modifying and modernising the ideas. Liber Tentaculum was produced around 2014. This alone helps indicate the age of the material quoted and as my entire occult corpus illustrates, I have moved through many currents, changed many times, revolutionised and reformed my beliefs and values repeatedly moving away from extremism – and at no juncture have I ever stepped over my unbreakable moral compass. I have never raped, killed, murdered anyone, never hurt children, or animals, in the course of my Satanic journey. For me, it was not about the base and low urges that seem to interest so many, it was a means to change the world, change myself and others and make it a better place by stopping them from doing these things.

Given the extraordinary depth, breadth and longevity of the Temple, It would be possible to zero in on any few phrases or period of the Temple of THEM, or cherry-pick to form a window that claimed to represent its total values – or make assumptions about what we or I believe to be true, then, or now. It is perhaps the insult that smarts, that despite having done so much to stop others believing the nonsense of ideology (including the ideology of the O9A) see, even (Form 101 in the Temple of THEM Facebook group) we are then being labelled by some incendiary mouthpiece as equivalent to a tragic sub-form of politics; as if that was the extent of our aims or lifelong work; to make Nazis. It can easily be observed that I have used dozens of names in the course of my career as an occult writer and artist even musician with Ryan Anschauung being just one temporary one and including just some as: DevilworshippR, Friend, Friend Lee, Friend Ley, Thoth, Tnepres, Tnepres RA, Ryan Anschauung, Willet Rayne, DJ Rayne, Khk, Hollow, Hollow Krist ,– each representative of a shift in my thinking, often accompanied by a change in the symbol I used to sign things, and representative of a magical transition. Furthermore, I have often used these names at will out of sequence.

My last publication ‘Liber Bathyal’ used the name Ryan Anschauung. Furthermore, The Temple of THEM WordPress did not ‘disappear’ as Hillier opines (Hillier 2023, 36:14), it was deliberately taken down years ago because I felt it had run its usefulness, had run its course. It is currently being reassembled, and a good thing to because there is clearly a dire need for common-sense to be re-shared in the world and the teaching of how to learn and teach others properly; something Hillier could benefit from. Moreover, any interviews of Ignis Gehenna will also be returned to the Temple WordPress as it is reconstructed; a labour requiring hundreds of archived documents to be re-uploaded during 2023 and will take some time. Yet clearly, what we write is needed again.

The political stance of THEM on National Socialism is on record and unmistakably evident. Just a week prior to Hillier’s video (Hillier’s video posted on June 22 2023) I had made an open lament on May 26th (that is dated) on our lighthouse Facebook group about the downfall of one of the members of Atomwaffen recorded in a police interrogation video, and his tragic involvement in extremism that had led to him shooting two friends – and – the importance the Temple placed on being a beacon that helped those searching for purpose to their lives to avoid falling into such paths and wasting their lives by ending up dead or in prison for nothing more than ideals – of any kind (The Temple of THEM, 2023). Moreover, I have been monitoring the rise in National Socialism in Australia and the recent protests because it shows political movement gaining power by the in-power “Left” against the “Right” (both just convenient fictions as any political scientist knows) and a discourse seen the world over that some group or another should be stopped at all and any cost including civil liberty because it is a threat.

Let’s be clear here, we are not saints, we’re not pretending we are – there are dark, dangerous, disturbing elements to life and knowing Thyself, the occult knows that just as psychology or criminology knows that. If people are going to be Nazi’s we can’t stop them – but we DO try. One conversation I had involved a young man who told me he had sworn his allegiance to the Aryan Brotherhood. I pointed out that he had basically decided that even if you're a child rapist, killer, wife beater, just because you're white you get a free pass. After some thought, he changed his mind. I don't know what became of him – but I do know that I have changed the minds of a lot of people in a lot of ways – and almost always for the better, peaceful, thoughtful outcome where I urged them to think deeply, or broke their argument with logic, reason or example to help them see beyond forms, ideology and to prevent being trapped by the same things over and over. In the simplest terms: Because I've been a fucking idiot, and I'm no longer a fucking idiot, I can help others not to be fucking idiots. In more accurate terms, people make mistakes but they do so because they lack enough facts.

The citations used by Hillier to discuss the Thrasz, or Liber Tentaculum use a very small part of the Temple of THEM's history, tied to a specific phase and in relation to eighteen prolific years of occult work. I have written many times about my brief involvement with National Socialism and my belief that it could be a vehicle for change. And my realisation that it could not. I've written of my overcoming of the prejudice of race, and subsequent realisation and maturation that character not colour are what matter. Not so long ago I was helping the Indigenous Party of Australia to found a party branch here in Victoria as a volunteer; liaising with the AEC and VEC on their behalf. One of my first directives upon gaining access to the critically sensitive membership list was to emphasise to my associates an instant improvement to their lax security, inc. password changes, and so on. A National Socialist on the other hand would have dangerously exploited that access and violated that Party's trust. Countless times I have discouraged white supremacists from their ideals and continue to do so – not because white supremacy is any more dangerous than any other supremacy – but because it Is Supremacy of any kind. Those of us who have lived longer lives than many of these impressionable young men (or women, those less frequently), know that such ideologies are likely to seize us, shape us, control us as forms and groups do, one by one, until we discard them through some awakening or realisation or other – or they become who we are and we are a walking set of values incapable of thinking any other way than our programming. Besides sabotage careers, all Hillier has done is show how poorly academic mindset is at representing the truth in the occult world which few bother to try and understand or only accept others word about what it is or does. Admittedly, occultism is always more complicated than academic writing itself allows the author to present. Yet Hillier's video is not academic writing – he could have said anything, but he had an obligation legal and ethical to present facts, evidence and truth.

Yes, the Thrasz IS a modified Swastika but not the wet-dream Hillier thinks it is (Hillier 2023, 32:24). Quite clearly and at every opportunity THEM talks about being aware, alert and wary of ideological forces that can congeal in history and society that form similar zealous insanity as the Nazi Party represented. The Thrasz and its meaning is clearly outlined in multiple documents by THEM (The Temple of THEM 2023b) The EYE in the middle of our symbol is a direct reminder that ALL Ideology serves to demonise an ‘Other’ and create a fictitious enemy to fear or hate to ride political fandom and rise in the hierarchy of power, esteem and prestige. Moreover, the Thrasz is a shorthand symbol for the Temple’s far more complex ‘folded’ Aeurekanequeo: an ontological, epistemological and cosmological diagram of reality (Liber Bathyal n.d. see appendix for description).

The Thrasz represents an understanding of Cycles with events and steps just like this video that accumulate and stack up on one another leading toward a political outcome, where fear-mongering and uncontested claims launch an attack that is unwarranted precisely because the attacker thinks time is on their side and they are on the ‘right’ side of history: which leads to a witch-hunt such as Christians and other conservatives are infamous for. Hillier’s video is one such step in propaganda that leads to the creation and societal construction of the ‘Other’ and it is the same energy and construct of creating an enemy that leads to murder, massacre and genocide in other countries discussed in the discipline of international relations – if you enjoy evidence, if you trust evidence, look for yourself, it is all there in historical record exactly how and for how long the Temple has detested and rallied against adopting ideology of any kind, resists political and religious norms, indoctrination and is smarter and more aware of currents, forms and forces than those who buy into this poorly-researched ‘academia’ are. The fact I have spent two decades trying to convince wide-eyed young men and women AWAY from All this ideological nonsense, makes Hillier’s claims ludicrous..

More than that though, he insults the very occult group doing the most to stop people from buying into Terrorism, Extremism and Politico-Religious Ideology that may have ever existed. The Temple therefore shows people a greater, wider, broader pattern to their choices, the options, their beliefs: and holds all of the documents it has written throughout its life in various archives that help show the huge changes made in life over time, of the fuller journey made over the course of twenty years at least. It does not hide them and pretend that one form is more evil or more righteous than another – in the No Hand Path, all forms are possible and used but in the end all forms are expected to be rejected and permanently questioned. The very motto of the Temple is REMEMBER, and it refers to not being blind to the litany of forces attempting to trap a person in their own view. Our code exhorts individuals to embrace, exhaust, and evolve themselves. I make no apology for learning about National Socialism, for entertaining their ideas as a young man and becoming a fanatical extremist myself; I knew no different. Just as I don’t apologise for going to Sunday School as a child and inadvertently supporting paedophilia by legitimising the church, or for worshipping the devil in my teens because I thought the Devil was real.

Hillier is right about one thing (Hillier 2023 18:50) “these scenes are perfectly happy to take anyone they think they can get”, such groups, including the left, prey upon those weaknesses of mind and understanding, to recruit anyone they can get; all forms do. That is what all marketing is, branding, lobbying, group formations of any kind, from individual sewing circles to international organisations such as the UN, EU, NATO – using mottoes, slogans, symbolism, codes, manifestos, values, propaganda to Construct a form that seems so real its reality cannot be questioned. If THEM is in any way dangerous, its no more dangerous than art, philosophy or cynicism in that it demands you Question everything and Think deeply, properly, broadly and avoid making mistakes about what life is for, who you serve and why; when you should be autonomous and highly alert that the world is trying to suck you Into groups and forms of all kinds for their own agenda and purposes.

The Temple of THEM is unequivocally clear on these matters, repeatedly over the course of decades; it is also unequivocally clear that each of those that ascribe to the Temple are In Supra Solidarity: they are their own person and make their own decisions. Just a read of the ASOV (Australian Satanic Organisation of Victoria) Flag post or our Oto Anorha e-zine illustrates the extraordinary effort and the very challenging approach of The Temple of THEM to eschew, that is reject religious symbolism, lasting forms, any obedience to a doctrine (Temple of THEM 2014). We have claimed that even our flag should never be held as sacred but burned regularly to show there is no slavery to our current; we have rejected the idea of a formal compound or building to gather in because we do not want to make the same mistake of creating a new religion; a mindset we have spent twenty years trying to break down to help people avoid believing the assertions made by others Without doing investigation of their own.

THEM demands that you go your own way and do your own thing and that includes learning by making mistakes or decisions that are no-one’s business but your own – unless it comes to our attention that you are incapable of empathy toward others in that journey in which case you will be forcefully ejected. We, have values, morals, strong ones and we jeopardised our standing within the O9A to assert them resulting in a protracted aggressive conflict between our groups.

In addition, any sincere and capable student of occult disciplines that Does have a deserved PhD in Theology or authority to speak on O9A or THEM, who takes the time to contrast the Temple of THEM and the O9A will observe the cut-off of acknowledgement of the O9A’s value and inclusion of its material in our writing is centred on and before 2008, almost entirely concerned with its early works, from the seven spheres of Nasz Dom (1998) to works produced up to 2008 before the O9A entertained a new direction, and rarely any further. Those Temple works that do discuss later O9A are often some smatterings taking place in the protracted character assassination performed by the O9A against myself and the Temple of THEM. The ideas and direction of the O9A after 2008 long ceased to interest me in any fashion. But I and THEM also acknowledge the contributions O9A has made to satanism, humanism, occultism and acknowledge the many aspects of its rich and diverse occult current that have nothing to do with murder, terrorism or sexual abuse which are of fascinating interest and value to the occultist, present unique and powerful ideas (many of which inspired, encouraged and shaped how I think) and it is a shame these elements are not fairly examined or studied with any depth – instead of the sensationalist-seeking nonsense looking for a few murders by unstable psychopaths who attach themselves to a current. Especially ironic in a world shaped by holy wars where millions of priests are paedophiles.

Ideas of great depth explored over Long's lifetime by the O9A have been pushed to the side because it is far easier to understand and interest others in murder than it is to understand or expound satanism as a form of Greek Physis or explain Aeonics and cycles in history influenced by Toynbee and Spengler.

What the Temple of THEM took away from the O9A is verily its fascination with the transience of forms, the dangers of discourse, the power of words, the hypocrisy of authority, and the violence of ideology that dominates society. More-so, the series of phases or steps that lead to outcomes through step-by-step changes in societal fabric, be it social engineering, academic promulgation to policy-makers, political lobbying or movements that gain power or modify/introduce legislation, or series of events no one sees as forming eternal patterns AND WARNING SIGNS that tend society and its people toward dangerous outcomes, peaceful or violent because of its love for creating an enemy and a new rise of an equivalent Nazi Germany holocaust paradigm headed by fevered nut-jobs who gained too much power and who think they're on the right side of history doing the right thing and entitled to do so.

The problem here is that NS is somehow presented as a special demon, as Worse than those demonising it. Wherein it is Those who demonise others that create the tides of political power that leads to dire consequences including war; the war in Rwanda between the Hutu and Tutsi for example that lead to millions slaughtered in bloody massacre was sparked by hate-speech and the French reinforcing the idea that there was a difference between the two groups, with the government favouring one over another and feeding demonisation which eventually resulted in breath-taking atrocity (Callamard 2017). So too, by declaring an enemy did the Nazi party rally against the Jewish population and make them out to be aliens and inferior beasts that gradually empowered the political war-machine to subdue and coax the population to agree and sanctioned Nazi Germany to eradicate them in the holocaust.

Unequivocally: It is IDEOLOGY of All Kinds that creates this fictitious enemy against which nations, groups and individuals go to war – not One kind vs another, but ALL. We see this pattern eternally, at all levels of society, and with 85% of the planet religiously motivated and practising (CIA Factbook 2020) it does not take much to create an ‘other’ or to create the dangerous conditions that ignite Difference and blind hate that leads to people being destroyed or damaged by others who believe the rhetoric. Rhetoric is extremely dangerous: study Counter-Terrorism or International Relations (as I do) and you will see how dangerous incitation is, how slow and gradual it is, and how quickly it gets out of control. Indoctrination by ANY political ideology must be questioned at every step.

Here, at least, I recognise what Hillier is Trying to do, he believes he is right to demonise the National Socialists forms and call out their use within Black Metal. But what is he doing – but the same thing? The only difference is popular legitimacy: people will side with him because it is widely accepted that National Socialists are an ‘Other’ – not people making a mistake or being fooled or controlled by ideology to belong, not misguided boys or men swept up in the hypnotic power of symbolism, not explorers whom discourse had lead astray, not curious souls who engage with it to learn, or the lonely and lone wolf who see the opportunity to enjoy a family of peers, or ideologues who think they know what is best and champion what they think is right based on their Weltanschauung and how they view reality. No, the implication is that Nazi’s and Neo-Nazi’s are not people, they are Other, you can do anything and everything to them, they have no rights because they are beasts, not stupid people doing stupid things that might some day wake up to it or realise they’ve been duped through a narrow lens that Allows such forms as National Socialism, Socialism, Liberalism, Neo-Liberalism, Fascism, Feminism (Though I personally champion feminism) and other Isms to prosper. And as an ‘Other’ they are somehow outside of human decency, subject to all forms of terror that the state or its zealous adherents can muster. I recently wrote a paper on terrorists and their post-structural relation to the ‘Other’, wherein through a fostering of heightened fear and the fiction of security we have had the world (the globe, the planet) plunged into a ‘war on terror’ that restricts civil liberties for 200+ Countries simply because America said so.

The Temple of THEM rejects the discourse and the superficial games played to create ‘Others’ and then slaughter them because they are an ‘Other’. WE ARE ALL HUMAN BEINGS. We do adopt stupid things, we do go through Goth, Wiccan, Christian, Liberal, Activist, Terrorist, Militant and other phases because that is how we LEARN. We don’t start life knowing how it goes or what its for or what we should do with it – we RELY on the forms and forces available to us, AND their arguments to adopt them, to make decisions as to what is true, who is an authority, what we should believe, why and for how long. Only TIME and experience can break those patterns and allow us to see if we have been foolish, misguided, dangerously deceived or blinded by FORMS and our own gullibility, weakness, hope, optimism, conviction, values or beliefs. So why is it necessary to pen this detailed response to an idiot who makes silly assumptions? Because Nazism and other atrocity starts small, with small voices saying small things that snowball and gather speed because no-one saw the danger in such behaviours. Or failed to connect them to a greater continuum where what starts out as something small can escalate rapidly, even cost a man his musical gig because a few poisoned words were whispered into someone's ear terrified of being on the wrong side of history and having the crazed wrath of Antifa at their door.

Again why does it matter to speak out against Hillier's nonsense?

The United Nations policy for instance, in many cases, involves restorative justice which involves rebuilding countries that have experienced civil war or genocide by bringing peace through military intervention, and THEN peace-building, which often involves reintegrating those who have committed atrocities of all kinds; rape, murder, mutilation, torture BACK into society without punitive repercussions, JUST to keep the peace and retain sovereignty of a country as the status quo. Entire cities of people across the planet have engaged in these atrocities and are then reintegrated with their neighbours who cannot fathom for the life of them why they are forced to work beside their family's killer. The world is FULL of horrific people doing horrific things daily, including governments slaughtering their own people – with over 90% of wars in this century being intrastate (Jackson 2007). Just take time to look at Al Jazeera world news, and you will see genocide and conflict, wars and destruction, death and hate, mass rape and killings taking place at volume globally, every day. Power begins at a micro-level, countries don't just jump into genocide, it takes a series of steps, propaganda that builds a case against an 'Other' that then becomes open-season, is stripped of humanity and made powerless, who are then destroyed by a zealous populace or government through coming to believe the fabricated lie and give it legitimacy through law.

Hillier's accusations are not benign and he is not just sitting around making notes, he is creating an 'Other' and already creating that 'Other' has had consequences through his irresponsibility. What is it precisely that Black Metal and National Socialists in Australia have done that warrants a witch-hunt? Even Hillier doesn't know. He says so, clearly, in his own fevered diatribe. Why are they so special? Because Hillier wants to flame tensions, and Hillier wants others to believe he knows far more than he does so he can bask in his own self-delusion as an occult scholar of either the Temple of THEM or the O9A (Of which I am both). The arguments made here should obliterate any credibility of Hillier and his assertions of THEM. We don't exonerate the hatred that is promulgated by National Socialism, clearly we recognise Nazism as a significant time in history that we should all be aware of so as Never to repeat it – but to point out, pointedly that there is no logical case for this subgroup being somehow more evil, more destructive, more dangerous than hundreds of other groups and forms. Black Metal and even Satanism are Nothing close to the carnage occurring daily around you and me, especially by those in charge of us and the authorities creating Others to police their sovereign states. The USA alone has invaded over 100 countries since World War 2. The Christian Cross has billions of bloody deaths and murders under its banner, but they are the ruling power, they have legitimacy so they can demonise an ‘Other’, who, just happens to be, Satanism. Satanism is an easy target after all. Yes, most certainly there are a fair share of psychopaths attached to Satanism, and a very few who kill – but where is the real threat? What, is the real threat? Where is the logic? How can you think that NS and Black Metal is a more dangerous threat despite the stark empirical evidence that Black Metal has no history of anything close to these other groups, movements; there are outliers that do kill or have killed within any scene – but you will find more people shot dead on an everyday school shooting in the USA than the whole history of Black Metal is responsible for. THINK! Do your research, go look, cross-reference, challenge your own assumptions, think deeply and think for yourself, don’t fall prey to forms, don’t fall prey to propaganda and political rhetoric – THESE are the messages of the Temple of THEM; they Always have been and they Always will be.

Some of my colleagues expect Dr. Hillier to step down and rescind his PhD, I think that is too harsh a measure. Hillier has defamed my group, shared misinformation and caused damage to reputations and real-world lives: but he made a mistake, an error of judgement, and I believe he should be given the chance to amend it – not be stripped of his academic achievements for a single misstep. Consequently, The Temple of THEM demands Dr. Ben Hillier retract his statements and video, issues a formal and public apology to the Temple of THEM, a formal public apology to Ignis Gehenna, and that the UTAS carefully scrutinise Dr. Hillier’s conduct and the lax rigour and dangerous free-wheeling of his academic acumen.

Yours,
[Name Supplied], founder of the Temple of THEM.

Addendum:

Takedown Request:

I am the founder of the Temple of THEM which is Not a National Socialist organisation and is on record for over twenty years trying to extricate people from extremism and ideology. The commentary and actions of this irresponsible so-called academic has shown blatant disregard for the safety of those mentioned and made volatile and untrue statements. A response to this defamatory video is being prepared by the Temple to be released publicly and to the University of Tasmania. Please remove it.

Appendix:

Liber Bathyal: "Liber Bathyal is the long awaited new work by Ryan Anschauung (author of the acclaimed "Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Geometry") and the Temple of THEM. This new volume in the Nox Sine Occasu series, metaphorically named after the bio-geographic region of the ocean bottom, is an advanced selection of treatises dealing intimately with ways, means and benefits of understanding and applying form that demand more from the reader than it has ever asked of them before.

Liber Bathyal includes for the first time the complete ontology of the Temple of THEM – and a full explanation of the symbolism of the Thrasz (including the complex Aeurekanequeo that is the esoteric heart of THEM designed to replace the Tree of Wyrð) and an in-depth analysis of Form and how it typifies the key principles of our understanding. It advances an analogous suggestion for grasping the field of Social Neuro-Science, an emerging discipline of crucial import to THEM and an evolution of Radia Sol and Radia Star. In the words of Ryan Anschauung, “through delving into the principles of dissolving contradiction and simultaneity, Liber Bathyal develops and describes a methodology to evolve human perspective and reorient the traditional function of the brain. It discusses our views and strategies toward Abrahamism, Self-Delusion, THEM themselves, and raises critical questions regarding equality between men and women and highlights the problem with the concept of socially striven-for equality vs. the reality of psychological relativity and equilibrium – and much more.”

Liber Bathyal dares to go beyond the Occult conventions of rituals and mannerisms to investigate the true meaning of adept-hood in the 21st Century. Borrowing from Psychology, Neuroscience, Social engineering and dozens of different disciplines, it presents a staunch Individualosophy that holds in its hands a compression of all possibilities.” – Liber Bathyal \(fallofman.eu\)

MVIMAEDIVM BOOK V [See Chapter 11]

ON SOLIDARITY

“We are drawn to Satan as others are to Christ, Vishnu, or Buddha. He is Our God and Our Father. We exalt the Name of Satan. We turn to Him, as Our God and Master. Why should we separate ourselves into branches or denominations? Why should we declare one path true and reject the way chosen by others as false? Do we know the mind of the Dark Lord? Are we able to transcend death and arise as demons of flesh? Throughout history, there have always been Dark Souls drawn to the Inverse Deity. There has never been more than a few in each nation. Only larger cities have had the population to give birth to groups of Satanists. The creation of the Internet made it possible for the first time that millions of people could communicate quickly. Because of this incredible change to human communication, there is for the first time in history a worldwide community of Satanists. Satanists have called for Unity and for the creation of a Satanic Community. The Satanic Community already exists. It exists in message boards and websites across the `Net. The difficulty this community faces is that it is divided within itself. There is no central authority. There is no unifying dogma. There is no doctrine that Satanists agree upon. There is no reconciliation of theological conflicts. The Satanic Community exists in highly fragmented and chaotic form. If you have read my books, you may know that much of what I say contains lies and half-truths. What you may not know is that the `lies` are deliberate. It has been my work to deceive, to divide, to defy expectation, and to throw off balance. I have often said things that seem contradictory, but my approach has always been that “who” the statement is directed towards is more important than the content of the message. Such is the particular deception of this Dark Soul. I rarely speak the truth, and when I do it is in such a way that the truth is hidden. I have done my master’s bidding well. Now, the name of Tsirk Susej shall be exalted further. Many shall come to the knowledge of the Dark Lord through this servant. Those who receive me, receive my Father who is in Hell. They shall discover the Unity in Chaos and enter the Abyss of Consciousness. This is a Call-To-Arms, This is a call for Unity. Arise! Guardians of the Black Flame! Step forward, all those who live in the Devil’s Fane! The Goat of Mendes is calling. The Dark Lord is beckoning! The servants of the Dark Lord are called to unite in a Brotherhood of Darkness, and to bring forth evil and terror upon the earth. Unite Servants of Hell, that the Dark Lord may execute His judgement!”

Magus Tsirk Susej
Senior Ambassador
Embassy of Lucifer

Our ultimate goal is the evolution of man into a being equal to a god.

+O+

I agree that Solidarity is a key component missing from Satanism, Tsirk suseJ, perhaps by Magian or Nazarene design, or by our own certainty of exploration, Satanists are splintered into many ‘secular’ organisations and there is fierce rivalry among them that discourages a collective. However the distinctions that are made by adherents that separate those adherents from one another via unique understanding of Satan and then interpretation of the world as follows, – is in my mind, what makes Satanism, Satanism. I am vastly sceptical of anyone trying to assemble such splinters – for these splinters are the Sinister Dialectic of Satan, whereby Satanism has been shaped into various vessels by various orgs. adding, subtracting, refining, and testing various modes, the COS, TOS, OSV, ONA etc have all taken the existing status quo of Satanism at a point in time and taken it in a new direction. This whole process of re-shaping the status quo is quintessentially the archetypal action one would expect the Rebel to have been representative of – thus Change, Entropy [the mature understanding that things die] and Chaos i.e. that the world should not be perfect, is Satanic.

If we are to take on Satan as a reference guide in our lives then it is the things he stood for, the actions he was famous for, the will to power, of the way he lived that should be copied and emulated, in my opinion. But my opinion is only that. If you want to try and solidify as one combined Satanic Kingdom, it is not enough to appeal to a romantic sentiment of Unity, because humans are subjective creatures, you must first convince them that there is one truth, and disintegrate the notion of a difference of opinion as to whether “Satan” is a jigsaw puzzle put together via ones own individually determined conception, or whether he requires instructions to understand Him. Now comes the kicker... If you are to raise yourself above others in order to determine what is the truth for them, especially in Satanism, you become an energetic emulation of the Judaeo-Christian God construct, who’s character put himself before and above all others as an authority on the subject of how to live. Satanists, by and large, tend to be people who are sick of having others tell them how to live – and thus they begin to copy the example of the original Rebel Satan, and define their own parameters, and often, these parameters fall well outside the social constructs of the Matrix. Ideas in the Matrix are confined to specific boxes such as morality, ethics, logic – whereas a student of the occult is also versed in the irrational, the obtuse, the fantastic, and the esoteric. Thus, the splinters run deep under the skin.

Sinister Dialectic, via this massive paranormal and mundane exploration of Satanism by the actions and words of many diverse minds and arguments has yielded more than the sum of ‘Satanism’. Many opponents to the Church living the archetype of the Devil, [albeit today we would say ‘unconsciously’], by rebelling against the Church throughout history have no less claim to be Satanic than does the hard-core advocate steeped in books of madness up to ass. What determines whether a person is Satanic, however, goes right back to your own perception and interpretation of who and what, Satan was. And this is to me, the type of action resonant of the Prince of Darkness, and the type of action to fight against the status quo or those trying to impose a status quo that makes the precise point of Satan’s “argument” – viz. Who does God think he is to try and tell me and us what to do and how to live? Who is he to tell me what is what, and what gives him the authority to have made “me” or tell me what he has made? What gives him the right over me? Which brings me to another point that you suggest there is a correlation between the length of time that one can travel the LHP and the years behind ones ears to claim themselves an authority. God was alpha and omega, before and after time, he’d been around forever, (which is a fair bit longer than 25 years) and Satan, probably upon his birthday, still told God where to go.

Anton Long/David Myatt’s similar claim to represent Satanism is laudable – however one can see the vast changes his force has made upon it and choose to recognise those changes as beneficial or detrimental, but again, that too is open to interpretation. Because that is the surface of things as they move about on the world; with people assuming the mantle of king for a causal moment in order to make changes to the status quo, [i.e. it is necessary for the ego to be sufficiently confident before deploying its will to power] before being hurried along by the Sinister Dialectic. Because ONA too, although claiming representation of Traditional Satanism, and IMHO making more sense than most things I have encountered thus far, still have their detractors. It's the way of things for Satanists. It has been said, that Satan has no servants. It's been said by me (with a mere sixteen years involvement in including Satan as a guide to life).

Now, your personal interpretation of Satanism, "Whatever argument we may make to defend Satanic Philosophy, the Satanist is a Satanist because he is drawn to the Inverse Deity which defies God and rejects conventional society. This attraction to Darkness is solely the distinction of being a Satanist." I do not find myself in agreement with because I hold particular views about Symbolism, Dialectic, Will to Power and the Ego – that give me cause for great scepticism regarding absolutes, oversimplifications, by others, and primarily, the idea of being associated with Darkness might have thrilled me once, but it annoys me now. I think ONA's silence is more convincing. And this, "And so, here we are...followers of the Dark Lord. Does it matter if he is real, or simply a product of our collective subconscious?"

Yes of course it matters. Logic and reasoning are two of the main attributes of the archetype of Satan that lead to his questioning of his role in God's Plan. His is the Faustian ethos of exploration, the search for an authentic existence is what drives Science, is what moved the world out of the Dark Ages, and allowed the Earth to be correctly viewed as slightly oval rather than flat, the planets to revolve around the Sun rather than the other way around, the autonomy of choice [such as it is] etc. Each of us wants to know Satan intimately and set out accordingly to do so. Although as I see it based on my interpretation of what Satanism is, and I'm sure there will be many disagreements and agreements alike, some get wound back into the religious net that permeates its practice and begin Devil Worship, Anti-Christianity, get obsessed with Death and Heavy Metal as Satanic, [and perhaps they are iconic of Satan] – but others use logic, reasoning, deductive skill and thought to rule their world as opposed to the crazy-ass dogma of the Modern day Church and look at Consciousness, Progress, Philosophy, Science, Human Behaviour, Heuristics etc to keep back the bullshit [i.e. separate] that has come from the Church's mind regarding Satan, and seek out what others have to say on the subject.

Realistically – this type of searching and learning from others can only take one so far – one must work it out for themselves what is really what, and the powers of magic, religion, faith etc are opposed to figuring out an, and I use the term lightly, 'Objective' understanding that satisfies the individual first, and sometimes, the wider community second. In all the time I've been reading and watching and listening to people talk about Satan, about the only thing that seems to be agreed upon when all the ideas are compared together, is that each Satanist has an individual understanding for a very good reason – they each see Satan in a different way. If we didn't – and what you're proposing seems to be analogous to making Satanism a mainstream religion like Christianity, with one god, one path, and one voice – then what is the point, of Satanism? Of using Satan the rebellious archetype at all in our human adventures through life? If we copy the way of the Christian and go for one god, then all we would be doing is copying that example – and although we might say, become all powerful and be just like them in strength and number, the point is, WE WOULD BE LIKE THEM. We would have accepted the underlying fundamental attitude to Life that is Christian, that is afraid of death, of change, of entropy, of the body, of independent thought and understanding.

Finally – if you're really trying to speak to Satanists and not non-Satanists, you should, by virtue of the archetypal similarity of Satanism in all groups, know all this. You should be aware, that others with any mantic skill will see right through what is written from seemingly selfless martyrs, or servant of Satan speaking for all. If not, know this – a Magian current stinks to high heaven and its smell is immediately recognised. If you have spent 25 years on the path only to culminate in this, then I think you have spent them unwisely, friend.

DVIM DVISIA

“The essays of THEM are different from those of Ryan's Mvimaedivm. Albeit a lofty task, Mvimaedivm was a journal of changes, experiences, viewpoints that the magician in question could look back on to see connections/connexions from the future, i.e., examine the path through retrospect, and although it would have been impossible to record every insight, major triggers in Mvimaedivm provoke memories of certain times of life that were resonant with particular energies. THEM texts are not connected to Mvimaedivm, and it was decided that Mvimaedivm could not hold up the foundations we were trying to erect because of its highly subjective nature. Emphasis on it was decreased, and texts that extracted the insights born of retrospect turned into texts by THEM – including those on remote solidarity, sinister solidarity, the acausal matrix, the demon Orgasmatron, cold fusion, compulsion [most of which are in the group archives] and those about to be released.

As you say, there is a lot of interesting material in writing in general, in particular, the nature of writing to crystallise mental 'walls' or 'ideas' that are then lived, tested, challenged. Some people take on the ideas of others – for those ideas are, at their essence, the captured form of the current limit of another person's understanding. Although this limit, is often packaged as authoritarian on the subject, and at the time, it may well be considered as much, the aim of such writings by the author is a separate channel of cause and effect, as to what Actually happens when writing is set free. I.e., whereupon you take on the idea of Masters and look for the rules laid down by the ONA to apply to your life and what you see – you may, pending perceptive skill, see just that, or enough of that second-hand subjective apprehension of the personage ‘Anton Long’ to appreciate his viewpoint as valid or invalid. That is, you may come to believe that what Anton perceives has objective truth and be given insight. On the contrary however – you may also be able to see what Anton meant, but not be satisfied with his explanation. It may be that Anton has missed something in his interpretation [at least, from your point of view] and then it is your responsibility to say okay, I see the Masters thing and recognise that there are levels of wisdom, but what is behind these levels of wisdom, can it be broken further down, after all I can see A, B and C, and that doesn’t fit with the teachings of the ONA, but I can see it, I discovered it through my insights...

And this, is precisely the point of dialectic, of meeting a form, accepting a form, living a form, testing a form – and taking that form further, making changes as one sees fit... because the hardest thing to accept for a magician, is one’s isolated, but superior subjective existence. Taking on the ideas of others can help guide one into a re-creation of another individuals Weltanschauung or world-view, or even ideology or train of thought – but it does not mean that it is the final say in the capacity of that mode, and fighting this obvious insight in order to stick to another’s interpretation of things is what causes Occult madness. All things are transient forms and illusions that are believed in for a period of time – i.e., it is a necessary part of magic to be coerced into taking on a mode as real – until that mode is no longer able to prove its worth under one’s growing powers of scrutiny. And this scrutiny may be collective as per a group, or a civilisation, or an individual. Subsequently, some will develop genuine powers of reasoning, common-sense, and self-reliance by understanding the nature of Ideology, of “Satanism” of all forms and treat them with a grain of salt but nonetheless a certain reverence when seen in the light of the bigger picture for their function – and some, will stubbornly stick to the teachings of a form like glue, refusing to believe the key to understanding it isn’t in there somewhere if only they dig deep enough or magically mutilate themselves enough to find it.

It’s been said before – you cannot fit a square peg in a round hole. Forms can guide and that is all – they are not objective, nothing is. If you think about the ONA teachings holistically – as the means to ‘Mastery’ – why would the ONA wish everyone to adhere slavishly to the same mode of understanding, to see the world exactly as Anton Long sees it? They would not...”

MUTUAL DIVISION: A TALE OF TWO CITIES

+O+ The question asked earlier on how we can begin to discuss things if we cannot break them down into greatly simplified parts such as Us vs THEM for convenience is a good one. It’s one I’ve been asking myself for a long time in fact.

My own answer is to split perception into more than one avenue – hence my interest in the multiplicity of being able to give many answers that may seem to contradict one another but can be delivered equally validly because that sort of thinking seems to escape the traditional intention to seek either/or and have both and more.

We should do both. I have believed from a very young age that people are controlled by forms – thus a logical understanding of them would free them of this control – highlighting my own naive belief that it was a misunderstanding that kept them in thrall to what I viewed as harmful traditions of human behaviour. It's not of course a matter of logic – and I was greatly humbled to assail what I had envisioned would be a strong but singular castle, sprinting from room to room slashing at Christians, only to eventually make my way to the cellar to find a vast subterranean labyrinth bizarre, complex and staggeringly huge beyond belief.

I realised to reduce all of these intricate burrows and warrens that pulse with millions of lives, ideas, concepts, forces, forms each with their own tendrils, offshoots, flowers and seed, forests and lakes, deep caves and black abysses I could not analyse each one. I believe life is brief, see that most humans do not live very long and at most 70-80 years and immediately realised the problem of being able to know Everything about Everything – which I believed was possible as a boy – was rudely awakened, not much later on. I found what they had in common – reducing this chasm of infinity into context that sharply demarcated the infinite repeating intricacies from core constructive attributes. One example being rather than look at the meaning of each Symbol – I tried to go behind the curtain to know what caused Symbolism.

Why do I attack forms, words, concepts when they are the best we can hope for? I suppose it is due to my original view that forms control people who do not understand them;- over time I saw how words enshrined concepts and took over from what they were supposed to designate to represent these new artificial arch-forces such as Time, or Space, or Democracy or Freedom or Satan;- and to this day believe, that whilst we cannot do without our words and easy demarcations of things without which communications are next to impossible and futile – there should always be an awareness of the artificiality of words in order that they do not regain control over a person since they are as I have proven to myself many times in various experiments able to act as magical spells that cause changes often without anyone being the wiser. It is of course evident too, looking back through history to see the staggering implications of writing and the printing press.

So – it is I think better if we have a tiered understanding of communications [though admittedly I do persecute them within an inch of their nth.] so that words can be used Both ways. Marx said you needed to own the means of production;- and if you are not wary of the magic spells of words you are thrall to them;- I know this from many personal experiences being indoctrinated by this or that concept, helping to indoctrinate others, or indoctrinating myself deliberately or accidentally. Words are a means of production: if we treat them as impostors it is harder to be taken in by their charms – that said, this is only one crucial part of becoming self-aware and somewhat more freed from traditional programming. It seems to be a hard step for many people to take, I know it was for me and is still something I work at to understand how to cast different spells or marvel at the trickery and subtlety with which I later find myself having been seduced by a form or assortment of letters...

The next part is of course to proceed as the others do and use words without digging into their ultimate meaning but to ride them as consensual glyphs of a universal language. It has not always been popular but I have often striven to break even the spells ONA cast on people – since I believe the only way to make Adepts is to show them how these spells are cast. This has of course interfered in AL's intentions to mould people a certain way whilst me and others like me have tried to break the moulds and then show people how to make them themselves. This is perhaps the fundamental difference between ONA and THEM is that ONA cloak or do not reveal what they do whilst we observe what they and others do and then repeat and reveal the trick.

So to summarise: once you get to the point where you ask – but how the hell else can we communicate: then I believe it is safe to communicate without analysis of the wheels of the vehicle – because then you know it is an inexact science, whereas those who don't fall into many traps.

Of course it is impossible for me to decide whether helping people by sharing insights is a good thing or a bad thing or just a thing. On one hand the case can be made that breaking things down ruins the Sinister and saves the weak – on the other the case stands strong that the very revelation of the Sinister by the ONA was itself a saving factor that introduced a strain of life to the world many would have languished in ignorance without – and I include myself in those numbers. The very act of ONA surfacing did begin to break down what was apparently an empathic learning with no masters or guides by adding them, even lightly – heavier later on with more and more insights, guidance, lore and so on until some 5000 pages of revelations were saving many from such ignorance and gave them a new way to pour their essence into making changes.

Leaving that alone: I think in the end such devastating critique of the foundations of form, word and concept are best used against any kind of enemy to rabidly deconstruct and reshape their stance on the stage – as artillery to weaken critical infrastructure rather than as a means of self-understanding or heuristics because there is No end to analysis since it is like caving. Anything, let's say, The Devil, invariably leaves its own local formations and opens up new subterranean chambers that stretch far off into the rock and down down down into all manner of tunnels and forgotten cities, channels, ice, lava, [metaphors for historical, geospatial, anthropological, psychological, modern/ancient critique, typological analysis, cultural bias, personal agenda, limitation and so many other endless ways to view something from – because everything can be connected to everything- that is the power of words – and humans simply do not have the capacity to analyse everything, or the time, resources, lifespan or intellect.

I think if it is proven to you that this is so – or you prove it to yourself by trying to analyse the heartbeat of the universe yourself by stripping things down into this that and the other to get to some perfect understanding then so long as the fragility of communication is kept in the back of our minds and we consciously commune with knowledge of its limitations – that it is not necessary to punish it or ourselves by breaking every sound/word into pieces any time we want to get a point across.

Certainly, I am the last one to be saying this – as I have tried to break everything into those pieces. But then, this is the conclusion I have arrived at after all that time and destruction. The knowledge from a journey breaking so many things, invaluable – the end result, probably easily predictable. +O+

RESPONSIBILITY TO THE RESPONSIBLE: AN OPEN LETTER TO NERO OF THE NOCTULIAN BLOOD COVENANT

Dear Nero,

Your commentary ‘The Issue at Hand’ published on your WordPress July 5 2023 has caught my attention. Partly, because I believe interference by political actors such as the FBI to, somewhat ironically, ‘Shrence’/infiltrate the Tempel ov Blood via Sutter, for reasons likely known only to the FBI – does not delegitimize the occult teachings of either the Order of Nine Angles (O9A), or the Wamphyric Tempel ov Blood (ToB): only some of its bad actors. Partly, because I believe a distinction must be clearly made between groups and individuals to learn from and move past the damage caused to currents practising the Sinister, particularly as pertains to the difficult issue of accountability for producing forms that influence and affect other individuals, directly or indirectly. Therein, a tangled understanding of what and whom advocated which act must be better clarified to un muddy the waters – especially so as in relation to Satanism, accountability is a controversial case.

Among his Nine Satanic Statements, Anton LaVey of the Church of Satan famously proscribed ‘Responsibility to the Responsible’ (Church of Satan, 2023).

Oxford Dictionary defines responsibility as ‘a duty to deal with or take care of somebody/something, so that you may be blamed if something goes wrong’ (Oxford Learner’s Dictionaries, 2023). Cambridge Dictionary emphasises a position of authority, viz, ‘to be in a position of authority over someone and to have a duty to make certain that particular things are done’ and, ‘to have a duty to work for or help someone who is in a position of authority over you’.

While I agree that the O9A did not advocate paedophilia directly, it did broach the taboo subject in early works such as ‘The Girl Goddess’ fiction featured in the online Nasz-Dom text collection. The sense I perceived from those texts around the year 2000 when I read them, was one touching on the subconscious drives of erotic charge between adult and child, the protagonist’s energy surrounding awareness of the taboo, an artistic psycho-sexual explication that commented on Western sexual mores and is not to be confused with promoting child sexuality, abuse or pornography. In my view, the fiction was tasteful and illustrative of the forbidden; dealing with the protagonist’s internal conflict between primal desires of lust, tempered by moral integrity. Those with an axe to grind or who lack the refinement to understand the instructive guide of such fiction toward understanding subtle occult energies, appear to have seized upon these early works as a smoking gun to condemn the O9A for advocating paedophilia.

The ToB on the other hand, was not as tasteful or illustrative as the O9A in these matters and took a different point of view. For them, raising such issues and using pornographic child images/themes in their current’s representation differentiated the ToB’s use of child sexuality from that of the O9A. I can only speculate as to the intention behind such tactics, as the form was driven by multiple actors including authentic Wamphyrists, individual ToB members and supporters, and the FBI. Given, that the ToB provided their own reasons for engaging in child pornography including wanting to tear down Western society; an argument can be made that while intending to embrace the O9A’s ‘amorality’ which is indifference towards morality: the ToB embraced ‘immorality’, viz. a specific intention to use taboo forms precisely because they knew that child pornography was wrong, and illustrated defiance against most social mores.

There are two matters that need to be untangled, however. Firstly, the conflation or combining of reference to Individuals within O9A (that we will term bad actors) vs. the collective O9A. Likewise, the conflation of Individuals within the ToB (that we will also term bad actors) vs. the collective ToB. Wherein in this case, ‘bad actors’ is not a moral pronouncement of said individuals but a label assigning deviance from the group’s norms. Secondly, the issue of anonymity that allows Individuals to present their views under the collective organisational umbrella of a Group (i.e. a Corporation) and escape accountability.

We can both fairly and unfairly say that the ‘O9A’ was and was not advocating paedophilia. I was present in the O9A forum’s when two prominent members, DL9 and Chloe both advocated paedophilia as a strategy against mundanes; a suggestion met by others in the forum with mixed response. Therefore, those individuals within the O9A forum who enjoyed considerable authority, were advocating paedophilia. However, despite having handles, both, were anonymous. Only they know who they are, and there are no indications they used their real names in exercising their identities. For many, the statements made by those two people drew a line in the sand; some embraced the idea, and some rejected it. Yet, despite things that were said, and things that were done, guided by these individuals and their writings and discussions – we can still say that O9A did advocate paedophilia (when accounting for individual behaviours within the subculture) and did not advocate paedophilia (when accounting for public statements shared under the collective of the O9A defining its group values and limits). Using the same signifier ‘O9A’ to refer to both individuals and its collective (which you confusingly refer to as the ‘general widespread core O9A’) has confused the actors involved, and this has allowed them to escape responsibility for their part in the advocacy.

There are two further perspectives to consider here.

Firstly, the Satanic Perspective, which is an individual’s interpretation of Satanic values and limits, and this is a degree of continuum. For some, like the Church of Satan, there are guidelines, statements, moral principles to follow: However, as the O9A, also famously proscribed ‘Satan has been hijacked...’ and ‘what is evil if not Satan?’

Evil can be said only to entertain moral limits as a contrast to the intention to transgress them. It is worth noting that for ToB, a specifically Wamphyric/Vampiric current, Satan was in part an inadequate archetype to express their current, which resulted in the development of other archetypes such as the ‘Alienic Terminator’ or ‘Noctulian Shocktroop’ – that drew less on Satan and more on the Pantheon of 21 Dark Gods devised by the O9A, including Nythra, Shugara, Noctulius, Azanigin and others. For others, Satan represents a Rebel, including by the Temple of THEM; whose practice of Satanic tenets is summed up in the three words ‘Embrace. Exhaust. Evolve’ without any implication or guide for how that process is to be achieved – and my own understanding of Satan’s archetypal values as ‘Vision, Ruthlessness, and Dissent’. Many who embrace Satanism do so to rebel against social norms or values, and often this means a disregard for what is legal, permissible or ethical. Further, many who embrace Satanism find there are myriad interpretations, groups, ideas, values associated with Him, including emphasis on different elements represented by different names: Lucifer, Pan, The Devil, Satan, or different ideals; prometheanism, anti-nomianism, anarchy, anti-cosmicism, and many others. The rich diversity allows cherry-picking for the individual forging an identity within a subculture that enshrines above all other things, the importance of Individuality.

As individuals choose from the forms available to them, they combine elements to suit their needs (consciously and subconsciously); drawn to certain ideas above others at given times reflective of the concerns of the psyche. The ToB, for instance, took vampiric ideas from Michael Ford and Coven Nachtotter/Black Order of the Dragon, and the Dark Gods of the O9A, and the concepts of the CIA's MKULTRA/Monarch to break down and rebuild a new kind of 'satanic shocktrooper'. The Temple of THEM took, among many things, the archetype of Satan as a rebel described in the Christian Bible, Jung's Analytical Psychology, Lovecraft's Elder Gods and Cosmic Horror, the O9A's occult teachings on the temporaneousness of forms and the enduring process of change and its dialectic. Both groups then reordered and rearranged these elements within their respective individualistic vessels to present a new arrangement of perennial forms and forces collectively that it is convenient to call a 'current'.

Implicit in Satanism, however, of virtually any variant is a Challenge to Authority. It is for this that Satan is renowned and illustrative of pride, greed and envy (perhaps all seven sins). Daring to challenge God's authority, He was cast down to Hell. For all the interpretations of Satan that exist, a backdrop of two thousand years of entrenched Christianity, the ubiquity of the Bible and the archetype and representation of the Devil and His character in popular culture imprints every Satanist with the impression of Satan's distinct core value: Rebellion.

Rebellion, like Chaos, is a maximal concept: whatever comprehension is made of what constitutes Order, will form the basis for comprehending chaos in Order's negative space. Whatever comprehension is made of whichever authority may prevail, will form the basis for comprehending who and what to rebel against – wherein individual comprehension determines the degree of that rebellion. In short, whether it pertains to murder, rape, theft, terrorism – some individuals do not give a fuck about State authority, law, or others. Some perform these acts from curiosity, compulsion, opportunism; others from reasons unknown; some because they believe such acts further their cause or stock, whether that be self-gratification, self-indulgence, or pinned to some higher, loftier ideal such as 'Solvat Saeclum in Favilla' or the collapse of the Western Hegemony to install some new idealised form of Government germane to one's occult current.

This brings us to the second point, Heresy.

Satan, does represent paedophilia. Satan, does represent taboo. Satan, does represent lust, amorality, self-indulgence, and evil. Even as Satan may represent intelligence, enlightenment, moral superiority: Satanism does not preclude paedophilia. Satan, whether theist or atheist, is not of this Earth and neither are his values. That is what makes Satanists, Satan-ists (emphasis on the suffix). That is, striving to be like Satan. And that is an open-book unique to each interpretation – just as much as the life course of every human being born onto Earth and plunged into a morass of existing structures and discourse that imprint morality, socialisation and obedience onto an initially lawless being. Only a dispassionate, rational discussion of paedophilia in relation to Satanism, and Satanism to the individual, can go any way toward authentically and fairly assessing what is and what is not, Satanic. For as mentioned, according to my understanding of Satanic values, if a group such as the O9A set themselves up as authorities on satanic matters, they run the risk of the practising Satan-ist rejecting that authority and substituting their own.

The value of learning from experience is not a safe path. The parable of a child touching the burning stove-top and learning a valuable lesson from their brain about pain is a common one. So too it goes with personal choice and development – wherein, ‘babying’ a Satanist and insisting they conduct their life and explore their boundaries (including evil) within safe confines and moral boundaries, may not be Satanism for everyone. And it is this ‘personal responsibility’ that David Myatt (allegedly Anton Long) termed Pathei Mathos, or ‘learning from adversary’ (Myatt, n.d.). Though it is ethical to denounce crimes (sex or otherwise) as being unethical and ‘not aiding the sinister dialectic’ – a moral stance to improve the betterment of the individuals gathered under one’s organisational umbrella, and to some extent improve the lot of the wider community who will come into contact with such individuals as they conduct their learning on their journey – is that the Sinister Dialectic? The Temple of THEM do not and have never advocated child abuse, but we question the value of proscribing values for others over letting them make their own choices. The struggle to live what you believe versus the struggle against what others believe, and the changes afforded on both sides through all and any forms that occur in human happenings, represents the Sinister Dialectic.

For from the perspective of the Rebel, what is gained by the Satanist, whom we can more accurately define as a Satan-ist, from letting others dictate their course of their existence? Certainly, there is a continuum of time and a place to obey others. But development cannot happen with hand-holding and restraints, the individual must learn to master themselves by applying the lessons learned from their conduct and bearing. The journey, of whatever ilk, cannot be bound to moral guidelines, however, noble – and while I personally agree with you that child abuse and rape are abhorrent – professionally, those statements fail to appreciate the promotion of evil in any variant, just as the O9A’s exhortations toward Chaos failed to see for some, Chaos also involves chaos toward them. What you have effectively done in ‘The Issue at Hand’ (Noctulian Blood Covenant, 2023) is draw a line for others, who should be drawing the line for themselves. There is a notable problematique in including your open-ended ‘and anything detrimental’ clause, too. For me, in drawing the line for themselves, a person properly represents the rebel Satan – for whatever is the norm provides the source of rebellion.

These considerations notwithstanding, I come to my final point: Accountability. Do authors that write bear accountability for the influence of their texts over the actions of others?

Cambridge Dictionary defines ‘accountability’ to mean: ‘the fact of being responsible for what you do and able to give a satisfactory reason for it, or the degree to which this happens’.

It is difficult to find, among thousands of O9A or ToB texts, writings that do not actively encourage rebellion of authority or lone wolf activism, of an adherent or would-be adherent, in order to bring about/manifest a better, even golden, age. The majority of O9A texts can be categorised as manifesting a better Individual – and manifesting a superior reality. In characteristic flirting with breaking taboo, the texts range from encouraging espionage to terrorism – both in an overt, real-world practice to excite and promote change to a given status quo, and in an introverted retrospective of one’s subconscious, existentialist being and context as a unique human being impinged upon by forces within (psychology) and without (cosmogony) held together by an ontology and epistemology; the building blocks of comprehension and meaning that translate forms into a currency of value.

O9A, ostensibly, encourages individuals to form groups with satanic values – but it is those groups that tend to promote the activism, terrorism, and engage in living the forms promoted by both groups, rather than the O9A. So who is responsible? If we take a reductionist approach, without the O9A, there would be no ToB, no THEM, nor x-amount of other nexions and offshoots. It existed before all of us, and it’s influence is plain to see in each of our writings and expressed forms. Contra wise, comprehension of the State’s constraints against various forms of human expression are inherent drivers of conflict and rebellion which often promote creativity and divergent thinking and expression of sub-culture. Sub-culture, predicates a normative culture in which the sub-culture is deviant, and O9A is deviant precisely because it is a mirror of the prevailing culture. So, is the prevailing culture then responsible for the O9A? For without the conditions it provided as a thesis, there could be no antithesis.

It is fact that the State holds those writing texts legally accountable – but the interference by the State via the FBI in infiltrating and subverting, subversionist occult currents, blurs the distinction of accountability. The State as the monopoly of violence is rarely held to account for its actions, and a counterfactual question to be raised is what would the ToB have become or manifested were it not co-opted by the FBI. Further, what purpose did co-opting the ToB serve the State? Was it to capture a handful of lone wolf activists, or to delegitimize the O9A as a competing ideology? Was it to legitimise internal threats to State that could be securitised to justify a given piece of legislation, or did the role of Sutter and the ToB form a small part of a larger game with bigger fish? Is the FBI responsible for using child pornography to entrap, or was the entire thing an ARG just to see what might come of it and who might be compromised for future gains? For the most part, State intelligence is subtle and rarely noticed – as I recall, claims that the ToB was infiltrated by the FBI were initially met with disbelief and scorn. Now it seems, Sutter’s compromise is confirmed by various legal documents. It is interesting that legally, the State holds individuals accountable for their actions – corporations and organisations, however, stand a much greater chance of avoiding accountability due to their shroud of collective anonymity presenting as a non-individual body corporate. In the end, it seems no-one is responsible for the last twenty years or the harm caused by or to poor dupes that were destroyed or fell victim to the power of a collectivised form.

I wish you luck in rejuvenating your vampiric practices sans moral reprobates. However, while the ToB made a catastrophic failure in announcing its intentions to attack and bring down the State; this was a core element of its ideology. Plus, constraining the promotion of evil and destructive forces, energies and actions that were adopted and lived by many individuals who were overtaken by the Sinister Dialectic – and the inherent revision of what is taboo in relation to one’s value standard in one’s journey – will severely limit the growth and capacity of individuals corrupt and unstable enough to further the ToB in its original aims of over-throwing Governments. Which, without the inclusion of these two factors that so (over)excited the blood and fervour of some, does not leave much of a legacy to resurrect.

Nonetheless, occult organisations such as the ToB, O9A, THEM, and others, scandals of their members aside, still harbour texts, and intention to write texts, that have an effect: a library that is rebellious only because of its comparison to the forces that constrain, and a subculture of metaphysical currents that continue to seek to elicit in human beings an appreciation of existential context, and the nature of change internally and externally. The extent to which these ‘mirrors’ to reality are held up, generation after generation as a commentary on the temporaneous insubstance of what is and are understood or misunderstood, is not for us to determine, but for each of them. We are as responsible for how others interpret our works, as are those who represent the flip-side via the control of ‘consensus’ reality. The only reason to establish responsibility is to apportion blame – to which society must answer for being inadequate for those engaged in the occult and seeking to change it. And, We know how often society answers for its role in this mad little experiment we call Life.
Kind Regards,

The Temple of THEM, Australia

*While I have done my best to reference, my categorical knowledge of O9A texts relies on substantial exposure and memory. CHAPTER 6

RITUALS

DARK VEIN

There are some, still superstitious animals, bound in an ancient spell placed long long ago upon the brow of the primal savage who believe in the Soul – in the breath of life given to them, by the God Almighty, in his original shape before Man knew Him. Today, even today, after millennia, it is still an ingrained custom to fear the loss, of the Soul – and to hasten its return to the body with a blessing following any violent exhalation that threatens the departure of the breath. There are some, still superstitious animals, who, by way of veils, have the kind bliss and blindness of God’s protection and who do not see Them or They.

They say, in some circles of black magic practitioners that the consciousness and the incessant chatter of the intellect harbours a godly protection from the Elements, a natural shield from the other worlds. Metaphysically – they say it is the particular intensity of the mental Hz vibrating above 110 via the momentous clatter of the mind that ceaselessly spews forth idle banter, fantasy, form that prevents the threshold into other worlds from being crossed. LSD, psilocybin, Severe Trauma, Extraordinary Shock or Horror can dislodge this natural protection, placing the internal chatter into a severe catatonic state, silencing the organic motor of the thoughts and effectively shutting down the protective generator. Silencing of the mind allows things beyond the rational control exercised by the mind to seep in – anyone with any significant time spent in Solitary confinement in prison, or has experienced the void of sensory deprivation will attest to the proximity that silence brings one closer – as if pulled through a wet wall – to God. Or to the Devil. And other Things.

There are some, through charity of oblivion, who never get this close, and keep every possible thing – every argument, every rehearsal, every doubt, fear, fantasy, dream, analysis, object, name – between them, and this wall. This is the stance of the rational fortress – which dare not let go of its babble, of its tower of Babylon, its knowledge, its books, its endless torrents of forms and geometry. We do not believe in Angels – there are no angels. And there is a Him.

Dark Vein is a pact with the Devil. Regardless of the ritual form it takes, the secrets are the same in any ley geometry where only very little is required to perform the transfer. So go ahead, ask Satan for his gifts. All you need is your soul.

Dressed for Lust, Orgasm, and smear your juices upon a fresh pomegranate.

Add your spit. your blood.

Before a banner of our Eye,

Say word for word, the following.

“My name is _____ “

“Tonight, I abandon all that I was given”

“He opens the Gates through Me”

“Into this place I invite all that I fear”
“And all that has forever been feared”
“All that I have not seen, all that I do not know, all that is hidden from me”
“Into those that dwell here, the Devil”
“Into those that dwell here, the Lost”
“Into those that dwell here, Death and Destruction”
“Bind – through my knot, of Seed, Saliva and Salvation my Word”
“And through my Word my Flesh”
“And through my Flesh my Soul – My I, my Am”
“In forfeit take that most precious to me”
“In fiat provide that most desired by me”
“My name is _____“
“I Remember THEM”
“THEY forever Remember me”
“Take me from this place if I should forget”
“It is done and cannot be undone”

The Pomegranate is to be taken at the nearest opportunity to a place of great height or a place of enduring darkness where you must cast it – or some other place, you cannot possibly reach it without extraordinary effort. Do, not, cheat. Into the sea off a cliff, down a well, into a forest or buried in the deepest hole you are able to will yourself to dig. That is all.
+O+

The Rite of Rain Magic*K

[“Rain Magic*k” is one of a series of three core Rites practiced by THEM that involve submission to the Inhuman, quintessentially pagan forces of Earth. Submission to the Rain being the first, the Sea the second and the Moon the third. All three Rites are Hermetic [that is, practiced by a lone magician] and are performed at night. It should be apparent that the Rain and Sea share very similar properties. An endurance of the Moon may not immediately seem as tactile a ritual as being saturated to the bone by a heavy downpour or being whipped by the salty spray of the ocean carried on the fury of cold winds – but it employs principles that are deeply esoteric and similar to the ancient instruction to lay, unmoving and watch the stars wheeling across the sky from sunset to sun-up. The same principles used in the Rain Rite are used in the Moon Rite with a full moon being observed and contemplated over the course of twelve hours.]

Preparation:

Before nightfall on a windy night pouring with rain, a high and isolated hill is selected whereupon the magician is to stand, arms outstretched to endure the elements. Although relatively free to choose ones garments: clothing is not to be waterproof.

Intent:

A psychic connexion is made whereupon the magician meditates on Sinister figures historical or present and realises the same rain falling upon them has fallen on all such figures.

Primer:

Water, like Mass, is a finite element. It is not created or destroyed but amorphous: forming and reforming, as Ice, Snow, Hail, Mists, Frosts, Glaciers, Lakes, Rivers, Seas and Rain. It is inimical to Change: Evaporating, Photosynthesising, Pooling, Freezing, Flowing, Surging, Changing, Shaping, Destroying, Creating, Cradling and Disintegrating: essential to Life and merciless in bringing Death. It is present in the most humble of puddles and the deepest of oceans. Like the Moon: upon She who all who have walked the Earth have gazed upon: Rain is a bridge: it has touched, at one time or another, all personages, and thus all personages connected to the Sinister. The same rain that fell on Jack the Ripper as he stalked the lantern lit streets of Whitechapel in 1888, fell upon all of the hard faces of the army of invisible phantoms throughout history, standing watch as their wills played forth the strategies that would culminate in Evil. It has trickled across the flesh of all your idols, saturated the soils of the greatest battlegrounds and filled the blackest abysses on Earth with its volume. It has dripped from the entrance of the most isolated caves, from the pagodas of ancient China and the castles of medieval Ireland. It fell unabated, a presence that provoked meditative contemplation in those standing guard thinking on the cold wet night and accompanied the prayers of those in a Temple with its diffuse roar. It has both frustrated and accomplished the strategies of the greatest Generals and for millennia set back or brought forth the catch of the humble fisherman. It has been present at the times of the greatest beauty, and the most sublime sadness – at times a passive, at times an active, force of nature, permeating the lives of all beings plant, beast and man. It descended on the Ziggurats of Sumeria the birthplace of Western Civilisation and it will fall beyond Solvet Saeclum In Favilla. The same rain that fell on the Dinosaurs in the antediluvian is the same rain that falls ceaselessly across the planet now and forever. The rain is an uber-aeonc phenomenon: and perchance it remembers... The Rain remembers.

Direction:

Choose:

I.) The magician approaches the hill with the intent to actively tap into the memory of the rain, to raise an exaltation, to be a part of its currents and come to it as a worshipper; as something less than the Rain that wishes to be touched, to be one with its awesome power. Arms outstretched and legs shoulders width apart the magician forms a standing star to endure the rain. The ritual stance is maintained until such time the Rain completely ceases to fall.

II.) The magician approaches the hill with the intent to passively endure the driving rain, not in the spirit of struggle or dominance but in quiet observation to watch, to share time with the rain without intent to direct or shape it, – to let it awash ones senses, ones flesh, ones being with its presence, to endure what it brings in the way of comfort or discomfort. A casual [more accurately, unassuming] physical position should be taken that feels natural to take given the circumstances and the magician, such as leaning against a tree, sitting on the wet ground with ones knees bent, or even lying down staring upward into the sky. The Rite is in one sense an act of humility: endurance: awareness: sorrow: and visitation of sublime and inhuman beauty. The greater the submission, the more powerful the rite, the more exposed to the elements the position chosen by the magician should be.

The Rite:

Essentially the Rite involves no formal words. As a visitation of an inhuman force, the ego must remain silent. With reverence come in memory of the sheer aeonic permeation of the places, lives, deaths, forms that the Rain has been present at. If words are to be spoken, let them be spontaneous: as a private conversation with the rain.

Alternately: when you arrive at the hill and assume your chosen position of endurance: meditate deeply applying the Rite of the Tempest to annihilate all thoughts. When silent and still: tell the rain “I’ve come to Remember”. Remain still and endure the visitation. Only when the rain has completely ceased: it is right to leave.

Addendum:

* The ‘K’ is an optional addition to the Rain Rite involving making love [magically directed] with one’s partner. It is seen as a practicable extension open to exploration by those conducting Rain magic to involve some element of sexual activity. However, it is held [I.e. known] to evoke a separate energy and thus a different direction to employ sex in the Rite as given above.

Experience has shown that the Rain Rite may last as little as a few minutes or as long as a few days. Regardless of the length of its falling: and as you well know, the Rite will fail if one's resolve is abandoned due to human concerns or physical weakness. For this reason, advise any aspirants, a fast is advised 12 or 24 hours before committing to the Rite and prior training [Qv. Trial Full Moon Rites to build appropriate stamina and endurance]. As with the EA, the urge to urinate/defecate must be controlled. Directly addressing THEM however – FAR harsher measures have been endured in the past in our elite black magical syndicate and your extensive experience and demonstrated commitment to magic shadows the resolve of most. The Triangle of Acausal Rites may be considered an extension, or rather, 'in-tension' of our Archetypal/Narrative Magic utilised to replace the Victorian/Latin + "Human-Centred" systems practiced by the many Temples/Orders from which we derive. Like the AOF, DDD, RIR, etc this current of Rites scorns the excess of the spoken word and any inability to focus extreme power by thought/intent alone. It spurns a need for such forms as frenzy to summon power. We are drawing on the genuine esoteric principles of the Dark Gods and our intention to annihilate the "Art of the Pentagram" [Qv. Art and Artists of the Pentagram/OA#11] will, without mercy, be realised here in Australia with the establishment of our magical veins.

These three Rites will be added to Liber SSS and any further notes, variations, accounts, made available from the Main Temple Account. ISS.

INVOKING THE TEMPEST

It is for an individual in this Age, imperative as a Satanist, to continuously hone one's capacity for reason and intellect until it shines as a sword of death... but there comes a time with intellect when one's reason cancels one out with the magic of the rational.

Where ones thought has so de-constructed reality that all actions seem futile, and one is plagued by the inability to give meaning to one's prison of freedom; one thus becomes a tortured and existential question mark of a being... unable to decide where Wyrd lies or destiny beckons: afraid to invest one's energies in anything lest it prove a later waste of time; a paralysis that comes inexorably with worship of the God of Logic.

Such individuals can be seen in abundance in this time, writhing in the agony of philosophic limbo and spraying nihilistic blood in the form of questions; ever questions, and despair that someone should answer. Mastery; Excellence in everything; from weakness to strength; thought to feeling; this is the triumphant ecstatic of living that is the mark of a Satanist; and too, of THEM. Lest an individual become a specialist; limited to mastery of a single or handful of crafts; above all aspirations carnal, physical; we seek Excellence. Thus, one who believes themselves master of their very nexion; of the flesh and will that is given them; should be able to exercise excellence in Silence.

We have spoken, and others have spoken in turn, of the Ego; glibly as an abstraction that each can assume to be understood on one's own terms; and often assume within the context of the superman mentality/deceitful occult ego to have exorcised or controlled; if even made its acquaintance. While many deny they have one; it is relatively simple to destroy this delusion held dear and reveal the innate function of a phenomenon that leads one invisibly to self-hypocrisy and limitation of being.

It is necessary then to demonstrate the awesome power of the Ego and show to those who believe themselves free of it; the arduous magical task of the magician of meeting, understanding, and conquering a precise element of our being, made precise by the exercise that follows. [Note that it is not necessary to follow the prescribed actions; merely the principles.]

*In a blacked-out chamber where no light may enter/ or outside before the sunrise; assume a standing position; feet shoulders width apart; and hands rested at the sides.

*Close your eyes and picture a black, fathomless Abyss. [I.e., The Abyss from the movie Into the Mouth of Madness]. Let the impenetrable darkness consume you and every thought. Around the verges of the blackness, create a shield of silent whirling blades or a silent howling tempest that destroys Any thought that enters your consciousness; bar the Abyss and the protective wind.

*Let nothing distract you from standing on the edge of the Abyss; concentrate all your being on it. No thoughts should run through your head, no daydreams should occur and only the silent abyss should exist for you. If ideas or thoughts begin to form or whisper, or speak, or chatter; if you should wander into a reverie of something unrelated to your exercise and find yourself becoming aware that you have strayed into thought:- then you will now be conscious of the existence of an often over-riding urge for the mind to incessantly provoke and encourage internal chatter.

For an External Adept this is acceptable; the EA Rite of ONA being an early stage of the Seven-Fold Way, is in fact, the antithesis of this exercise; for during the EA Rite one is encouraged to lie under the stars and let these thoughts form with almost abandon; where it is expected the initiate will create the groundwork to magically congeal. But for one who believes in no-limits, of Satanic aptitude; an inability to silence oneself on command, and remain silent, is a by-product of the exaltation of intelligence.

The conservation of energy expenditure for a magician via standing on the edge of the Abyss; in the silent desert can hardly be stressed enough for its intrinsic Sinister value; such energy expenditure is touched on in Volume IV of Mvimaedivm by Sor Terrosa; and will be discussed in greater detail by THEM in time here in our public forum.

But for those who hear the chatter of which we speak; who have yet to broach the gates of Satanic Majesty, who will witness first-hand the distractions that possess one's will without detection but that which exists in retrospect, who stand at the Abyss and hear the screaming of the Noise still – consider this a reminder of your Satanic Oath for Excellence and of the insidious deception of the Deceitful Occult Ego...

THE GALACTIC ORGANIC

Some may remember an invention of mine many years ago that formed part of the esoteric theory of the Naos Deck. It is detailed in Onaos but the principles were based on geometry and magic and were an expansion inspired by the Star Game. The idea being that rather than use numbers/digits in the cards, a unique alchemical set of images that changed from one thing to another would be used to psychically and unconsciously reinforce the ethos of the new symbols both in myself and others who used the deck. Using imagination, a starting symbol would transform over the course of a sequence visually depicting the abstract transformation of symbols – in this case a sequence of seven turning my signature 'Tnepres Ra' into a Spaceship.

Over the course of years, I have worked on and refined this technique to the point where many have been mystified as to the ubiquitous use of +O+ at the beginning and end of my sentences for a period of about 5 years.

In confessions of a Sun God – DOAD 3, I explain a little about the many personal name changes I have taken on over the decade and why – detailing this process that has changed me from Tnepres Ra (Sun of Satan), to RA (Sun God), to Ryan Anschauung (Aryan Avatar), to friend lee/lie/ley, Khk, and a dozen other 'nym's as symbols representative of a dynamic I passed through on my way to a series of goals – culminating in the use of +O+. Each one just falling into place as a play on words, some synchronous event or harmony of geometric shape or words that made each transition an effortless change as if it were just the natural flow of things.

+O+ was also used as stylised T's equalling +EMPLE OF +HEM;- but the meaning behind their usage is not frivolous and is deliberate.

Firstly, in any role where you are directly involved in teaching there is an erotic excitement between teacher and student that is similar to an addiction to using the gym and a love of adrenaline. As they feel they are making progress, this eroticism that comes about from the electricity of building something together and the ‘highs’ that come from esoteric breakthroughs and smashing chains on someone else, spills over into something else. This else is not entirely benign as it often expresses itself in praise, adoration, applause, adulation, sycophancy, fawning, and many other states besides. The danger of this is the inevitable classical fall caused by Hubris or believing one’s own hype, getting a big head, expanding the ego beyond its normal shape, causing mistakes and a shattering of the phenomenon that causes people to bestow the archetype of Teacher upon someone.

Aware of this – THEM uses anonymity. In particular, I use it for several quality reasons. I speak openly and make many enemies. If my enemies are half as dangerous or destructive as I am – then I’d rather my role as RA never cross boundaries into my life as X. Anonymity ensures shape-shifting has no boundaries. Anonymity taken a step further, to equal anonymity from oneself is the reason I use +O+ or my other pseudonyms with the reason being that, my actual ego, X, does not get praise or hubris-raising derivatives, directly. “Ryan” is a fail safe, an alter-ego that weathers the criticism and acclaim – a step removed from my actual ego. Not being called by my name reminds me of the separation between what I and THEM are doing – and the treacherous undercurrent of archetypes that controls who is possessed by what that could stop us from doing what we do if we were swayed by such forces.

Jung has always and will always fascinate me. +O+ describes a mandala that means Individuation. It is a broken mandala, with a central ring, and two crosses, the first forming quarters and the second, mentally rotated, eighths. The quarters signify Individuation – the four parts of the whole to which Jung ascribed as signatures of growth toward Individuation, whilst the eighths signify a compartmentalised psyche and a symbol as old and nameless as time. It is taken apart into 3 pieces, the +, O and 2nd + to further remind me of my relation to the Work and the dangers that come with it. It is in a sense, Sigil Magic.

The darker side of this – is that such measures as derived with the intention to protect our ambitions from the wrath of the Gods indicate a massive ego (guilty) and invite disaster on the grounds we are trying to AVOID attaining Hubris and be taught a lesson by immutable forces told of for aeons in thousands of cultures. Will such a method work? It has so far. Can a person ride a current indefinitely? I’m too young to know that. THEM still has a long way to go, and at 34, I am not even in my stride, but only just beginning to see my most recent past work in a new light afforded by retrospect that seems to arrive painfully slowly and there are still many shadows – but I have never been shy of exploration and experiment, that is what my life is for and dedicated to.

THE ACAUSAL PENTAGRAM

An Allegorical Anatomy

The regular Pentagram used in magick, being a ring-sealed five-pointed star, is often regarded as a protective device; a guardian barrier between the spiritual and one's own world, and more accurately, a symbolic division between the Magickian's conscious mind (Dexter) and unconscious contents (Sinister).

The framework is enduring – representing Man at the centre of the Universe as a Divine Conduit surrounded by the All, the Cosmos wherein the Pentagram's only malleability in magick is often its tilt: whether its horns are regarded as upward and Demonic or downward and Divine. In a sense, this ageless symbol encapsulates a specific view of the context of the human being in relation to Gods, Demons, the World, Oneself and Others. And of this – the regular Pentagram is one that expresses Great Fear and Great Arrogance.

The objective of such a symbol is to call forth or evoke Great and Terrible Powers – be they Angels or Devils – and to stand in and before their might; even to demand or cajole gifts and exchanges, make deals or contracts from these entities – and all from the safety and temerity of one's protective barrier, one's shield, one's magical fortress. Like standing behind the thick glass at a zoo and sheltered from the lion's real form and animal instinct, innumerable ancient and modern day Magickians tour the zones and call to the gods from their insulated bubbles as sight-see'ers of the Abyss: insulting the Powers Within and Without.

Yet:

The centre of time or space does not belong to Man – nor does he stand in the centre, nor has he ever; such a depiction of the internal pentagon of the pentagram as his pedestal is the accumulative centuries of Magi legacy of fear, a transposition of his supposed place in a so-seen dichotomic universe of Inside/Outside, Good and Evil; a terrace on which he stands protected as God's creation; fucking arrogant fool. The Acausal Pentagram dissolves this platform, tearing it from underfoot to plunge the Sorcerer into starry tendrilled space and into the depths of unknown dimensions amid the Homes of THEM wherein Forms and Man are undone as the Illusions they are. Where only Forces remain.

The closed circle of the Pentagram neatly encloses the points of the Star, a sealed container that lets nothing in and nothing out, a safety chamber from which the Magickian can feel empowered to wheedle and make demands without consequence of being over-run, possessed or flooded by the demonic, the satanic, or the Chthonic; to engage with entities and spirits that physically and psychically push with thunderous power and safely avoid the ruin to the peace of ontological ignorance of those that emanate space-time bending capacities on one's experience that can erupt in dissociation, madness, gnawing mortal doubt, para-psychological theistic paralysis, and other forms of psychic or actual destruction. From this protective device, oft accompanied by Gematria, sigils, smudges, candle barriers, and other arcane defences adorning the Pentagram, space or person issues the litany of expectations for these forces to fulfil at the behest of the protected Magickian. And, the expectation that having been sufficiently chastised and humiliated by being held in place and space and interrogated, shaken down, bound to promise and delivery – such forces will be promptly returned to their prisons, obedient, complacent, patient to await the next cowardly rub of the genie bottle as and when the Magickian requires their services again.

The points of the Acausal Pentagram deliberately puncture this seal – protrude beyond the veil and fuse the division of the Holy with the Heretical, opening the Sorcerer to a flooding of the Spaces; to the Will of THEM. We approach Not from a Faraday Cage or Sealed Container but an open-handed, open-hearted place of humility: a Broken Star, a waiting Ouija board, holding the Intent of a cold burning flame in the maelstrom of darkness. We do not Seek Anything from THEM but what they Give – THEY are held in awe, in wonder, and in true Love. There is no Fear, no Arrogance, no false ‘I’ but the Love and standing in the stream – occupying the Bridge Back as a conduit between Worlds Internal and External.

Into such humble bodies, fearless and Loving, THEY flow and possess. But for thousands of years – such star gates as the Pentagram have remained sealed, frightened of CHAOS, terrified of and insulated from THEIR wrath, fury, beauty, reality: by arcane bulwarks and fireworks, chalk etchings and angelic scratchings. A paralysing shield as much for the Supernatural as the Psychological.

Unseal your Pentagram. Abandon your Fear. Know Yourself – And Stand before THEM we Say to You, with Love, that you might know THEM for the First Time.

THE RITE OF REGURGITATING CHORONZON [I]

The majority of the time – the mind acts to censor or restrict its immediate desires and impulses either by filtering them down into more socially acceptable alternatives or by learning deferred gratification. The unleashing of the Beast inside of us is historically attributable to the most abominable and horrific releases and actions of the human race – limited only by the already diverse and terrifying realm of imagination – with the exception of dark veins not yet tapped.

Some of this is detailed in Theory of the Beast, and some of the nature of evil and its energetic habit of dropping out of itself (just like the energetic behaviour of Absurdity or Chaos) is detailed in Intelligent Evil (Oto Anorha #32) in order to supersede the tension of opposites and come back over its previous incarnation with unexpected vengeance in an entirely new strain of abomination that leaves us frozen, breathless and afraid.

Choronzon is reputed to be an extremely dangerous arch-demon of the abyss – a force that dwells on the sickening trash and psychic waste spewed forth by the deluge of forms and human imaginings and day to day viciousness of its inner beast that moves in the shadows occasionally sprinting forth with its teeth bared to cause us to become atavistic and permit various degrees of atrocity. Crowley claimed to have summoned C with a friend in a famously recorded testimony wherein his friend tried to destroy/kill Crowley through possession.

Whilst one aspect of THEM is the alpha-cynic and that cynicism characterises much of our writing – it should be pointed out that our cynicism acts as a filter to extract the refuse that attaches itself to the occult and to distil the truths beneath the lies. In short, we believe we are not alone and that there are any number of ignorant walls we maintain for our own protection to keep them out or keep them under control.

There are ways to tear down these walls.

This includes a dangerous psychological rite that one can use to access the Beast directly and evoke the Devil's energy in an uncontrolled and frightening fashion. Like many magical rites, it is simple – and acts by putting pressure on a few key variables. We originally called it the “Black Book of Satan” /but have re-termed it the Rite of RC (Regurgitating Choronzon) to prevent confusion between it and the publication by the ONA of the same name.

Appreciably, many people require great and difficult instructions, hard to get ingredients, days of kneeling before altars and so on. Maybe they feel they need to work up to it – or maybe that misunderstand just how close the Devil really is to the surface of all of us. [Heresy and the Heart of Darkness]. The following rite is ‘experimental’ – but something can be said that no-one has ever felt comfortable showing us or revealing their exact results or working grimoire. Embarrassment, illegality, taboo, shame, fear, reputation, and so on are all very powerful censors – and there is a good reason they exist.

The shock to the system of the RC Rite can be extraordinary and highly and permanently disturbing. It can and generally does open gates you cannot close without serious complications – and meeting the content that writhes in the Pit is often forgotten or dismissed because the ego so carefully blocks out the horrific throng that assails consciousness, most of the time. A certain desensitisation has occurred that rites like the Black Mass help to highlight in regards to the power of our minds to really truly fuck us and make us cower in the corner strangled by our shadows – nightmares still have this power but they are often unwilling and arrive of their own volition. The RC Rite allows a conscious effort into this murky abyss with no protection except that which the individual may have developed through their long-worked for measure against psychic calamity or spiritual destruction.

- 1) Obtain for yourself a blank book with no less than 30 pages.
- 2) On the floor, outside or inside, draw/set up a broken pentagram. Also known as the Acausal pentagram it does not have a finished protective circle and the lines of the 'gram are interrupted at points. See below. The pentagram is envisioned as having a black energy erupting from the centre with its tendrils obscuring the lines of the 'gram and breaking the protective circle.
- 3) Light a white candle and place at each point of the acausal pentagram. Burn your choice of incense.
- 4) Sit outside the acausal pentagram and meditate for a maximum of 3 minutes until you are relaxed. Say 'I call on the forces of darkness and the powers of THEM. Fill ME, Guide ME, Show ME.'
- 5) Enter the acausal pentagram with your book and a pen.
- 6) Sit in the centre. Say 'I open the Gates and I Remember.'
- 7) Blow out one of the candles and say 'I need no protection, and I abandon myself to you. Fill ME, Guide ME, Show ME.'

You will shortly begin to write, without restraint, without order, without question: the darkest, cruellest, sickest, evillest things you can think of, with the express intention of fuelling them upon themselves to see how sick you are capable of. You must write until you either Disturb yourself and see the sudden sense in your psychic censors and protection from the Devil come rushing in and abandon the rite altogether. And to abandon the rite remove and destroy all ritual items used. Be sure to first Complete the pentagram before you rub it out/remove it.

Or, plumb the depths of your horrific imagination and cruelty to expose a side of your self your better judgement keeps hidden. The aim here is to deliberately try and disturb yourself to such an extent you break the locks on your defences and let the Devil in – and suggested means are acts that involve terrible travesties using emotional attachments to loved ones. Once you break those locks – you cannot unbreak them. Severe psychological disturbance and suicidal verges have been reported before by initiates undertaking this rite and complete resignation from the Sinister is not uncommon after performing this rite. If you are ready:

8 . Take a few deep breaths. Open your book and begin writing.

We Remember The Temple, The TEMPLE OF THEM!

+O+

CLOSING:

[Closing an acausal pentagram does not guarantee something did not come through that doesn't want to leave. You're warned.]

9) When you have had enough, stop. Read the book you have written, once to imprint it. When you are finished – Close the book. Take a few deep breaths. Say 'I have been shown and not looked away. I am ready to be shown more. But not tonight/today.'

10) Now, very importantly: leave the circle and Destroy the book. Burn it or take time to tear it into the tiniest pieces you can so as to be unreadable. There are two very good reasons for this; 1) so no-one else can see how fucked up you can be, charge you for breaking any laws, and get frightened by your Beast (which they will) as the book has the potential to destroy your familial and friendly constructs and relationships very quickly -but more particularly so you cannot return to read them. 2) the second one you may discover for yourself, but the hint is in the name of the Rite.

11) Blow out the remaining candles. FINISH the broken pentagram before you rub it out/remove it. Break the candles, and the chalk/material used to make the 'gram and dispose of all ritual items including remainders of the book.

(12) Optional: Alcohol loosens inhibitions – a glass of wine or enough to get one tipsy without preventing one from writing legibly can increase the hatred and uncontrolled passion of this rite considerably. There are many other variations to increase the energy – these will not be mentioned here but they involve violence and/or sexual activity or any imaginative combination as per Black Mass considerations. Music is also an option – wherein THEM suggest the YUGGOTHIC CHOIR.

THE RITE OF REGURGITATING CHORONZON [III]: STARING INTO THE SUN

It is illuminating to have some idea how we may present to others. – and highlight to the Self further subconscious tendencies that inhabit the blueprint of who we are but which often go unnoticed, unseen, occult, or hidden from us in particular – visible only to those outside of us. There is no question we cannot change what we are – once we understand what we *are – if we want to change – and we understand what shaped us that way. But we must consider that what we are, powers what we do, and tinkering with it can cause drastic and unpredictable results including losing the power to do what we have previously done – and even entire personality change making us unrecognisable to others, but more dangerously, to ourselves. This is why diets, trends, “self-improvement” do not work but acts only on a superficial level – while grief, suffering, trauma and sacrificing the ego via such activities as insight roles impart deep and permanent change. The psyche is an elasticated icosahedron and as delicate as an unexploded bomb. Tug on one part of it and you dislodge another – emphasise and focus on one part and you neglect and repress another – in both cases, serving only to arm a latent explosion. But that is black magic and that is the risk the great game involves.

Knowledge and Happiness are at cross-purposes with one another up to an extent of the journey – then they merge and become as meaningless as each other. Into the Abyss I dissolve the Abyss. *Are – a particularly problematic statement used for convenience not accuracy. Who decides what constitutes our being, us, them or THEM? Form or Force? Wherein are the boundaries of duration of ‘are’ – when does it become ‘were’, and how, and by whose authority? The only answer to these questions is your will to power to enforce one being greater than those whose enforcement would have it otherwise. Similar to the burgeoning expansion of sexuality, gender identities that is attempting to shrug off and fragment from the controlling Man-Woman dichotomy and has become LBQTI et al – so to we can expect the concept of Time to begin undergoing a similar explosion into multiplicity – likely within the next 10-20 years due to the prevalence and rising influence of “Quantum” – and which sophisticated evolution will eventually affect the way words ‘hold’ and ‘express’ concepts of time. This is not new, just new to many of us where Time is a draconian feature of our lives due to its monopoly.

What I am seeing as I am growing older is the emergence of a new species of human being still in embryo but which we can anticipate the constitution of through the extrapolated effect of the fully-grown forms present in life that will someday affect it. We are moving more and more rapidly toward an evolution of the brain’s capacity to hold contradictions in its stead – and the humans capacity to handle and not be overwhelmed by that capacity – and the dissolving of a culture built on Insynsian giving way to one dominated by THEM. When it manifests it will bear little to no resemblance to the understanding and motivation, ethos or zeitgeist we currently experience. The death of Christianity is not the eradication of the external cult – it is the over-throwing of the simpleton grasp of the brain and its psychanics emphasis by the general population – it is the throwing off of a aeonic yolk that seeks the lowest, quickest route, a primitive asymmetry of neuro-potential and the services to which it is tasked – and the development of a super-patience that can more ably use the brain to its fuller extent. Computers – are a symptom of this, and a result. If I have been understood these long years – it need be appreciated that Christianity, Islam, Judaism (which THEM groups together as Abrahamic) are a simpleton grouping based on such a primitive grasp as mentioned above, often attacked by a simpleton reactive response to being overwhelmed by the enormity of what these words denote and the forms they represent – which is thousands of years of complex striving of human endeavour that have borne the very fundamentals of Being. Of Spirit, of Meaning, of Symbol, of Pattern, of Purpose. that we enjoy/endure today. If we are to rage against anything with surety – it is ourselves and the inept perception and clumsy abandonment we repeat to the dominating power of forms – preventing us from a lucid comprehension of the forces.

Commonality in argument is that such groups have caused War (including previous exhortations by my younger self) – but that is symptomatic of the requirement for monotheistic representation of forms, it is not the desire of Religions themselves but a by-product of religion when used by the lower brain – wherein the genuine aim of religion is to get closer to God and his Works and has given the human race its legacy and legitimacy. If we are to be kind – the monotheistic zealotry toward Insynsian, toward one world-view is a responsibility shared by the idiocy (but primary function) of the Ego – and the inexplicable Love one feels when over-whelmed by God or creation and the fierce inferno of these forces combined to realise the self-actualisation of Worship. What we need understand is that the raw comprehension of a perfect God capable of creating what the zealot experiences by way of Earths wonders – is compared to the tissue-paper imperfect, clumsy, aggravating agency of human beings which serve only to insult, smear, degrade, destroy, lower and subjugate this Perfection.

Therefore, those that do not agree with the zealot and help them cope with the overwhelming experience of union (sub-union) with the Divine, are easy to disregard, easy to destroy and eradicate without mercy or compassion (genocide typically expressed AS mercy or compassion). It is a fevered madness to preserve sublime beauty at all cost – to hold forever imprisoned, the shape most pleasing in the sacred geometry of God's image. Truly – a blinding light. We may include subconscious Jealousy among the lower brain – for when comparing our deeds or creations to those of say, the Sophia Hague, Taj Mahal, Kaaba and the attention it receives, the reverence it bathes in, the sheer colossal scale of its undertaking which even architecturally is a daunting topic let alone the spiritual power that bid it be built: many feel small, and powerless.

Powerless when their culture is dissolved, powerless when their own power is taken from them by law, a police force, or an army. Powerless when foreign cultures run rampant and present change that affects their lives upsetting the stasis of the ego and the security of the familiar. And the righteous indignation that surfaces by masked banner waving men and women fails to see the bemusing irony of cultural hostile takeover from the other side. All flags of all nations – are ‘Swastikas’. All of them. To understand less is to fail to grasp how nations are formed and the blood shed to do it – an inability to grasp economics, markets, resources, trade, culture and what it means to be human. Like a childish man beating his wife or children because they present little to no physical threat of retaliation to him – advocates against Abrahamic religions often cannot see the wood for the trees. Who we are is a collection of forms governed by forces.

None of those forms are more important than any other – we just think them so because we have to have such a collection to have a personal identity. Like piling a random assortment of nuts, bolts and cogs into a bag without looking to constitute our moving parts and the parts that move us – and running a charge through them with electricity to represent our sentience – so too are the days of our lives. Clumsy, awkward, disconnected and absurd. When someone agrees with what we believe or we think it so – naturally the Ego gets a high from being validated – but all of our ideas, our aims, or lofty goals and sense of purpose and bearing are really, just Neanderthalic bullshit. When our view of the mammoth forces we face as a human entity are presented to us – they shadow us and our ability to grasp the god-like enormity of their intrinsic meaning. As such we go out to fight a tsunami with a sandcastle. We struggle and scream and make small splashes in an ocean vast beyond compare – a force for good, evil, a cog in others stories and a helpless fool in our own. Until we are no more. Nonetheless – all signs point to a drastic evolution of the human race, once several generations of this at once embarrassing at once crucial stage of one, have long passed.

THE RITE OF REGURGITATING CHORONZON [III]

In the first Rite we attempt to draw out the Devil – the subconscious evil and chaos that dwells beneath our exterior and is suppressed by our censor, filters and self-control – and where not by punitive measures such as fines, jail, beatings, death sentence. In essence a force equivalent to our own Will can control us – while one stronger than ours may destroy us. This summoning of our repressed desires, hateful thoughts, destructive impulses and fantasies is drawn to the conscious surface to allow us to know, name and identify our demons – to witness the brutal detritus swimming beneath the surface and to show to ourselves the Darkness we conceal under our conscious visage. The aim is to integrate these ‘demons’ so that the personality may be made more whole and a bridge widened between the conscious and subconscious.

Often overwhelming, it leaves many who attempt it dazed and confused while these elements assimilate into part of who we are. The Second stage of the RORC is a self-analysis using multiple tests and charts provided by society and its constructs to determine or describe our outward emanation/aura/countenance to others to ourselves, to better understand how we fit into societal expectation. The third RORC aims to unlock specific keys in your genetic blueprint and restore to you all of the you’s you have lost as you have evolved and shed certain behaviours and memories. Begin by getting a ream of paper and a pen.

You need to use a pen because the brain pattern for writing text on a keyboard vs writing it with a pen touches on different parts of your brain and your psyche – it activates mental sections and archived memories and memory retention in a way that is genetically ingrained in us far longer than typing and carries with it the weight of the magic captured in paper ink and pen, the action of writing and its effect on the hemispheres of the frontal cortex using a specific hand, and the meditative quality of expressing oneself in a manner most familiar to a million years of humankind. Isolate for several hours’ time where your train of thought will not be disturbed and begin to write. Be sure to destroy this regurgitation when you are done. If you cannot recall the information – just move on.

Write your name, your age, your last name, your country of birth, your mother and fathers names, your siblings names. Write your birth date, your star sign, the place you were born, how much you weighed, your gender. Write your first memory, your last memory. Write about your childhood, your early toys, your bed, your favourite object, your fondest memories as a baby. Your first word, when you learned to walk, what you ate. What pets did you have, what pets did you want, what did you want to call them, were you good to them, did you spend a lot of time with them? Write where you went to kindergarten, what you drew, and why. How many books you had, what was in your lunchbox, what was your favourite colour then and now, what did the kinder look like, who was your favourite teacher. What did you do at playtime, where did you spend your time, what kind of child were you? Who did you play with, what games did you play, were you a leader or a follower. Did you hurt anyone, did they hurt you, were you bullied or a bully? Did you have a favourite teacher, what did you like about them, what made them your favourite? Where did you get taken as a child, did you go to parties, to the zoo, to daycare, do you remember when you stopped using a cot? A pram? And when you first rode a bike? Did you explore the world or stay inside, did you hurt animals or insects, did you enjoy it, do you regret it? Did you get in trouble, or were you well-behaved, did you steal cookies, or money, or make your parent cry. Did you feel close to them, or distant? Did you have both or one? Did you like one more than the other? Why? Were you more like your mother or your father, and now are you more like your mother or your father? In what regard? Did you have a lot of friends? Where did you meet them, what did you do together, are they still your friends? Did you have fun as a child? Did you enjoy childhood? Do you miss it? Do you miss the things you used to do as child? What were they and why are they so important, what makes them so special that you remember them? Do you remember your first crush, who was it, why did they have your attention? Do you remember your first kiss, who was it with, where was it, how did you feel giving it? Do you remember your first sexual experience? Was it pleasant, unpleasant, did you like it? What did you like about it, did it awaken you, did it satisfy you, was it how you imagined? Recall your first break-up, was it messy, did you get your heart broken, did you break theirs, did you handle it well, what was it about, why was it necessary for you to reach that point, was it your fault? Do you remember your first physical fight as a child a teenager and an adult? Were you scared, were you angry, did you feel fear, who did you fight, what was it about, did you want to fight, where did you fight? Did you win, did you lose? How did you feel about that? Did it make you feel better, was it over, did it affect you after the fight, does it affect you now. Did you like others watching? Did you get injured, or your blood get spilled? What was school like for you, did you feel valued individual or isolated and a number, did you enjoy lessons and learning, did you do your homework, or did you avoid it, did you walk out during school hours and go do your own thing, what was it you did? Did you care about yourself or were you reckless, did your behaviour injure or affect others at school, were you helpful, quiet or loud and funny? Did you have a favourite subject, what was it, why did you like it? What was your least favourite subject, did you try to get out of it, were you disruptive? Did you like the teacher that taught it? What was your best memory of school, who were your friends, who were your enemies, who was your best friend, why did you like them, what did you envy about them, what did you tolerate? Did you like shopping, or reading, or parties, were you more introverted or extroverted? Did you move much, countries or just region to region? Where, what were your memories of those places, which one did you like best, why did you leave it, how do you feel about that? Would you go back, what are your travel plans? Have you travelled a lot? Where to, why, and with whom? What did you like about the places you went to, which was your favourite, why, what did it say to you that other places didn't. Did you try drugs, tobacco, alcohol, what was your first experience, why did you try it, did you feel like the warnings were reasonable, did you keep up with it afterwards. Why did you stop or keep going, did you get addicted, do you feel better for having tried any of them, did they ruin your life or enhance it? What is your goal in life, what do you dream about most often, do you remember your dreams, do you have nightmares? What is your purpose, do you believe in the after-life, have you seen a ghost, do you believe in ghosts, what do you believe. Why. What is your favourite car, drink, activity, do you like philosophy, which ones, what about art, who do you like, why do you like them, what can you do artistically, why do you think you like art? Do you look after your hair, your nails, your teeth? Do you exercise, run, jog or swim? Why do you exercise? What was the first and last exercise you did? What jobs have you held, what was your favourite, why was it? What did it teach you, where did it lead you? What do you think is unfair in life, what do you think of crime, of technology, what technology do you own, why did you buy it, do you fear it, how much did you spend on it? How much money do you have, do you think that is enough to live a good life, do you want more, how do you make your money, what is money to you? How often do you go out, where do you go, do you like nature, the beach, restaurants, bars? Can you play cards, fix a toaster, cook a meal, what do you like to cook, what skills do you have that let you take care of yourself, what games do you like to play – if not cards, then on your phone, or with your kids? Are you married, single, defacto, what is your relationship status. How do you feel about that, what are you missing in your life, what would you like to change? Who is the perfect partner, where will you find them, what makes them that way for you? Are you religious, why, what do you believe, what do you wish for the world, what do you think the world wishes for you. Do you like cats, or dogs, or birds, or fish? If by this point – you’re starting – to get sick of hearing about you – then you have understood the point of the Rite.

THE RITE OF REGURGITATING CHORONZON [IIII]: THE SWEET KISS OF THE NEAR MISS

The Sweet Kiss of the Near Miss On some of the many times I have almost died. At least that I can recall or am aware of. From cutting through a live electric blanket cord with scissors aged 8. I was lucky that did not kill me. I also nearly drowned numerous times as a boy I’m told but I don’t remember the details. A suicide attempt overdosing on pills intended for epileptics and another drug (age 12). I tried to kill myself from a young age. I often had suicidal thoughts. Being electrocuted by a bull fence that I reached for while standing up to my knees in a creek. I was crossing the creek in Waitoki alone and accidentally grabbed a live wire. Not sure how I managed to let go but it initially felt like someone had kicked me in the ass with a steel cap boot. Then like hot water running through me and I realised if I didn’t let go, I was going to die. Being chased by a bull across a paddock and having to leap off an embankment to prevent being trampled. I was laughing at the absurdity of it which made it hard to sprint. We crossed that paddock in Waitoki near the second bridge all the time to get to the ‘Beach’ and only ever saw cows – on this occasion there happened to be a bull. I know if I hadn’t out-run it it would have been bad. Being taken by the rip current at the far end of Orewa Beach, NZ while attempting to learn to surf and almost drowning. I remember the current was so strong – and the surfboard I was attempting to stand on slipped out from under me and came over the top cracking me on the skull. I remember the force of the water, impossibly strong, and the taste of brine and salt, my eyes burning and the blurry view of the sand – I'm not sure how I survived, maybe I swam. Jumping over the backseat in a car at the Wainui, NZ Swimming Pool and landing eye first on a sharp stick. It was terrible pain but it must have slid under the eyeball. Later again after a bar fight at the Pub on Nepean Highway, Seaford – I got into a fight inside, then a fight outside which I disengaged from after knocking out my opponent with a glass bottle to the head and then following an instruction to run by my companion – sprinted into the darkness, crossed the road and almost took my eye out again on a sharpened stick on the tree hedge at the foreshore. Again terrible pain but it gouged my eye socket not my eye. Narrowly avoiding being stabbed by Raymond, a Maori boy at Orewa College who pulled a knife on me behind the seventh form unit. I had to outrun him. I don't remember the reason just the event. Being almost hit by an enormous ocean wave against the rocks while out with my friends Gordon, JJ and Douglas. It was night time, Gordon was visiting his girlfriend as I recall, but I don't know the name of the beach, I think it started with M and there was a long steep road down to the rocks. The spray was soaking the rocks and making the shore very slippery and dangerous – we attempted to run across a gap and suddenly there was an enormous surge and explosion of water that hit the rock and geysered up showering us in foam, seconds later the gap was flooded with deep water – it almost smashed us and it was a very near and dangerous miss. Loss of blood from punching the glass out of windows in my bedroom in a drunken rage requiring an ambulance. I needed several stitches and an operation to restore my right-hand tendon which still has an artificial tendon joint in it. Falling off my bike which had speed wobbles travelling down a steep hill at breakneck speed. I took my friends bike down a very steep hill and it had no brakes. By the time I found that out I was travelling very fast and the bike was wobbling, I had to make a decision about steering it into a deep concrete ditch which would have almost certainly killed me, and riding it out which resulted in tipping me onto the road and scraping a deep wound in my right side hip and leaving me very badly grazed. Falling flat face down and smashing my skull on a speaker at a party on the Hibiscus Coast somewhere. Drunk I think. I still have the triangular scar above my eye where I fell flat bang and hit my face on the edge of a speaker. I was surprised I woke from it and refused to get stitches. Luckily there were many people there to patch me up. I woke up in a bed surrounded by people worried about me. The time I got into a knife stand-off with Lindsay trying to save Sean Balmer from being intimidated in the garden at Daves. If he'd come around the kitchen bench with his blade out I'd have had to use the carving knife and I'm pretty sure I would have been stabbed to death given the enmity between Lindsay and I. Being bitten by a white-tail spider on the neck – a fact I did not discover until I sobered up but which left two puncture marks for four years on the right side of my neck. Stepping out in front of numerous vehicles numerous times without looking only to be snatched backward by someone. I didn't care about my surroundings as a younger and drunken man and would often just march right out in front of traffic. There were times I felt the vehicle rush by mere millimetres from me. In a car accident travelling 130km while drunk and stoned and hitting a road sign. The road suddenly ended and all I could do was try to slow down as safely as possible and spin the car to avoid a front on with a heavy-duty road sign on an island. I thought that might be it at the time. Driven mad and delirious with extreme pneumonia – and hospitalised for a week. Very unpleasant, and it almost killed me after I caught it from inhaling a bong. It dropped me like a stone and for five days I was driven mad by my brain which was saying nonsense like ‘blue elephant, pink, blue, elephant’ over and over. One more day and I would have gladly slipped away. Attempted murder by stomping on my head and leaving me for dead. (18.333) I don’t remember this one, but I have a skull fracture that runs the full circle of my skull and is visible to the eye. There are numerous other incidents – jumping train platforms in the nick of time, avoiding fights which would have probably killed me, a time my cousin pulled the trigger on a rifle pointed at me, when I got stranded on the rocks at Stanmore Bay and had to hope the tide didn’t come all the way up, being bitten by a great Dane in a dog attack, falling off various things: roofs, trees, a water tank, holding fireworks in my hand, meeting strangers to form the ASOV, choking on bacon strips at least three times, an asthma or panic attack which prevented me from breathing, and many more. My point is, death, so fucking what.

SEX MAGICK: THANATEROS AND EROS

Thanateros is the Gate to the Dark Ones. ‘They’ are of Thanaterotic nature, something forgotten by the present human species but well-known by their ancient ancestors, especially the Celts and Thracians as regards the Aryan race, but also by other peoples as well. “Thanaterotic” simply means combining Eros and Thanatos, sex and death simultaneously: two elements of opposite energy charge which generate two opposite emotions – those of lust and terror, of total attraction and repulsion simultaneously, but yet paradoxically contain each other within themselves.

The Dark Ones could be perceived by such a paradoxical sense only – They are beyond the duality of the reasoning consciousness, beyond the dual code of the mind, and so They could cause the mind to collapse when perceived – only that ecstatic part of the mind called by the ancient Germanic shamans “wud” (where the name of Wothan derives from), which is the divine madness, could perceive Them.

Opening one’s senses to the energies of the stars and combining them within a sex-magickal ritual in a place of earth power – in fact, the idea of the Rite of Nine Angles – would do wonders provided one isn’t some intellectual conceptualist only.

On finding and initiating a sex-magickal partner, it’s vital that the Thanaterotic Illumination is to be sought by exploring different sexualities and roles with each other.

A sinister couple should experiment, however, with each other first. One should lead the other till near death experience and then change their roles. No need to mention the amount of mutual confidence and trust necessary while indulging in such psychodramas.

Yet it shouldn't be like some soft BDSM whipping play, or like the ego-tickling rituals of the IOT which are a mockery of their own name. For example, the psychodrama shouldn't be less than an art of demonic acting assuming for instance the role of a priest who is to sacrifice the female, or a priestess who is to sacrifice the male, to the Dark Ones – They who are in fact predatory aliens that feed voraciously on human sexual lust and the terror of death experienced simultaneously.

Regarding preparation: An analogy is useful here of an unusual habit performed by two lionesses which after catching an antelope alive, licked its genitals in order to arouse it sexually before killing it. The efficient Sinister Predators cook their meat before they eat it – ideally it should first be relaxed, its toxicity by the death/terror hormones balanced or reduced by those generated by the counter-act of sexual arousal.

So inclined are the Dark Ones when they consume their human food via the rituals of sacrifice, and so was cooked the priest of Dionysos – aroused to death by the Bacchans. In this – the offer is to be willing and not resisting, or, willing and resisting simultaneously till at last s/he gives up in an orgasmic death. This operation needs great subtlety, and precise balance of energies – no desperation should poison the ecstasy.

After all, the Dark Ones are the Greater parts of ourselves who feed on the lower life – (lower in the sense of organic, not lower in some hierarchy.)

So, the psycho-drama being led to its final – or, to be more accurate, stopped just before its final act, that the process may be continued, one proceeds to adopt the role of the offer and the one's lover an opportunity to demonstrate her own ingenuity to show how she as a priestess would sacrifice him to the Dark Ones thus allowing each to experience the Illumination of Thanateros in a way as real as possible – but without a lethal end – since there is a lot of work to be done yet.

At the very least such an approach allows its participants to have a glimpse beyond the Gate and into the Abyss where the Dark Ones abide. I see this as an initiatory training marking the passage between the Mercury sphere and the Venus sphere, the path of Change itself. A training which would loosen the ego's grip better than any other training. But even with this Thanaterotic Initiation there is further work to be done in the Moon sphere – it's also connected to the sphere of Venus by the gateway of Death. The Gate of Thanateros is to be illumined as a preset before its real opening.

Of course, it could be opened still in the Moon sphere but there are few of us who are adepts in the so called out-of-body experience.

One more thing I should add however – and its of absolutely crucial importance in sex magick – and that is that effective and genuine magick especially ‘black’ will not work if the partners are bored while they are fucking – that is, the sex lacks vibrancy, enjoyment, fulfilment both physically and emotionally. This lack of sexual enjoyment is what gave such tremendous power to the Magian (Qv. On Fanaticism and Militant Satanism) and created and creates their brutal shock troops.

The reason black American music is being made popular by white men whose culture found it justifiable to hang black men by their necks only a few decades ago is because of its violence, mindless rape and anal fucking themes being both deeply repressed homosexuality that feeds on the unconscious guilt complex of the manly men – creating those who are most likely to engage in violent and cruel acts for their cold money-loving God – Orgasmatron. The repression and guilt of being unable to satisfy the deep craving to fuck another man, coupled with the unattainable beauty of the beauty myth which makes fucking women in the ass so much harder to do – is canalising societies collective sexual energies to produce the above psychopaths.

Sex should always be as enjoyable as possible for both partners and hereunto – one is advised to learn many ways to pleasure the opposite sex in many parts of the body and mind, inc. foot/head/body massage, hugging, kissing, simple affection, finding their erogenous zones, simple romantic gestures, mutual masturbation, laughter, as well as an exploration of as many kinds of sex as is desired inc. anal, oral, bisexual etc.

THE RITE OF SYNCHRONOUS UNION

It may be that there is conscious perception beforehand of a magical attack against you. The types of sorcery that are used in attacking someone are almost always extremely difficult to identify owing to being unphysical thus INSIDIOUS, and often directed not at the target themselves who may be expecting it or more able to deflect or redirect the attack, but at friends, colleagues or loved ones to change their mind, cause irrational feelings, disruptive energies and emotions toward the target. This takes the form of filling the head and heart with feelings of betrayal, anger, rage, jealousy, etc that cannot really be rationally explained or formulated but cause a hazy confusion driven by an implacable rage or hatred in order to drive a psychic wedge between the bonds of solidarity and splinter the mages spheres of contact apart.

These emotions in others appear to arise of their own accord and only the best Sorcerers will be able to determine a genuine magical attack and paranoia or random thoughts. The rite that follows is to be performed in the case of a magical attack against you.

+O+ Taking a Tarot from the deck with the Sorcerer themselves depicted, [which you should have drawn in your Themonomicon] the card is placed in an unbroken pentagram.

An ancient and well-trusted device that has served for centuries against malefic energies – a circle of salt is poured around the card to form a protective barrier.

Holding the altar or table with both hands the Sorcerer enters into a state of no-thinking [as per the precipice of pre-sleep] and attempts to identify the source and shape of the magical attack.

[The What/Who.] With the eyes closed, the Sorcerer breathes deeply through the tan tien [stomach] for as long as is needed to reach a tranquil state with no distractions. In the veil of black the Sorcerer then attempts to see their and their afflicted bodies in the void – as glowing lights or white skeletal frames of light and to identify the red spots or snakes/barbs that have embedded themselves in the victims. Other types of visual are likely – and the Sorcerer should use the same method but whichever visual system works more naturally for them.

In some cases it may be necessary just to feel the life force of the living bodies in the room, to visually project the victims image into the mind, or to sense living flesh.

There may be a sense of the physical spots the attack has targeted, whether the head, heart, organs, groin – or which members within the Sorcerers familial relationships. This is not always possible;- and it can hep greatly to have a partner who is psychically sensitive to a change in their moods to alert one to an attack on them – not the sorcerer themselves – which is far more difficult for the sorcerer to identify.

The Sorcerer then Speaks to THEM. If the attack be unjust – if the attack be from a scorned or dishonourable source that then seeks revenge then that source has betrayed the current of THEM by attacking one of THEM – They have ceased to have the right to use the current of THEM and They can be asked to intervene and remove the poisons, the barriers, the sickness, the attack.

When you sense THEM. “I hear you.”

When they begin to show you the attack targets “Protect us. I do not command you. I do not beg you. I ask you, to remove the barbs from [N]. This is not their current. They are a traitor to this Temple and would have seen it destroyed. They have lost their right to use this current and we ask you to remove their magick from us. Tear down their barriers, remove their poisons and their barbs from us. WE serve You. Through Empathy, Synchronicity, Solidarity WE are Your Acausal Voice. Not them. They would see this Temple destroyed and its members undone – they have no right to use this current. I return their magick to them. I care not if they remain dead or alive. Do with them what you will but remove their magick and silence them. Close their connexions and sever their words, tear down the barriers they have erected and withdraw their poisons from us. Protect us. Let nothing pass this circle. We are your Servants, We are the Ones that do your Will, we are the ones that speak the Acausal Voice – not them. They have no right to use this current.”

Whilst speaking, one should try to psychically remove the attack, the barbs, pull them out of the bodies of the targets, or see the relationships healing.

When there is a sense of agreement. “As a sign of my trust in you to deliver what is Right I break the circle. Let be what may.”

Draw your finger through the salt circle making four notches that form a cross breaking the circle. Then four more making an x, making the sign of Chaos.

With a firm voice: “It is done and cannot be undone.”

Still holding the table begin to chant Agios O Baphomet followed by Agios O Asoth.

Finally – with force, wipe the hand over the card and salt clearing them off the table or altar.

If with a partner – turn and look into each other eyes. Speak with each other and try to ascertain whether the attack has been lifted, if they feel better, if the fog or cloud in their mind has parted or gone.

If not – use the Aeon of Fire Rite to kill the attacker.

Leave the area and go do something unrelated to magic. Draw, wash dishes, garden, exercise, relax, have sex, drink, – something to create psychic distance between the conscious concentration on results and a further sign of trust in THEM to do what is right.

If you are One of THEM – THEY Will do what is Right. +O+

[Later come back to pick up the card and salt.]

FUTURE MAGICK (Sath of THEM – from C*R*U*X*)

Item I.

It has become increasingly common for magicians to postulate the existence of the two poles called ‘Self’ and ‘Ego’ as a basis for their cosmology and their position within it. After all of the Temple’s work with these two forms it is apparent to us that such a pre-requisite view for defining one’s relationship to the world and one’s terms thusly – should be seriously reconsidered. The ‘Self’ and the ‘Ego’ are restrictive, inaccurate, and stigmatised abstracts to which the weights of intellect and dogma have become heavily attached. Through such collective attachment and the language of shared meaning, the Temple worked many degrees of magic – but to extend these forms beyond mere means to represent an end – is in our opinion, untenable. What value is an intellectual self-evaluation without simple body awareness? What use is the concept of life-centred geometry without the ability to sense, like an animal, one’s surroundings? The belief of the Ego being so detrimental for the Self and the belief of the Essence’s moral triumph over Form have already become DOGMATIC and one should question them instead of automatically accepting them as a basis for one’s occult philosophy.

Item II.

In no way should the intellectual conceptualisation of the methods of magickal attainment be regarded as enough in itself without any practical experience!

Item III.

The predestination of Symbols is to suggest directly their meaning avoiding the interpretation systems of the intellect. Knowing the semantic meaning of a symbol doesn’t do magick. One’s sensorium is to be so opened that the symbol’s sight should call forth an emotional and even physical reaction within one’s organism. If there is only an intellectual association – there is no magick – moreover that would mean that one is emotionally and physically blocked and needs some means as special breathing exercises, no-thinking, fasting, sleeplessness, sensory deprivation, a good/evil guru, some shock experiences etc., or certain psychoactive agents to unblock one’s psychophysical complex.

Item IV.

The gods and the goddesses were invited to attend at the ancient orgiastic fertility rituals and thus some divine spawn of half-gods was conceived. To that divine race the Magian opposed their genetically-modified spawns of ogres – quantity against quality and now the breed of ogres (of any ethnic origin) have taken almost all the key positions in human society. The ogres are strong physically but easy to manipulate mentally. We of the Sinisterion are to invent a genetic weapon against the ogres – for the Magian are nothing without their body-guards. It's a simple enough fact, but almost impossible to make use thereof practically.

Item V.

Magick is not for all. The ritual combining a diet preliminary, or taking psycho-active agents, breathing, taking postures, visualisations, vibrations, dancing, and even masturbation could be the best training means provided one has the right attitude thereto. The art of the ritual could really open one's sensorium. The adept is not dependant on any temple and ceremonial paraphernalia – knowing organically the symbolism of hir psycho-cosmos s/he should be able to find the scheme and the elements of hir ritual in any surroundings.

Item VI.

Both the Chthonic Mother and the Old Wise Man are archetypes of the past Aeons. Their experience is within our genetic memory but we are to try to see beyond it because the sorrow therein is so great that it could overwhelm us if we are not able to give some cosmic perspective to the reptilian force within us. We need to attain an Androgyne consciousness.

Item VII.

As regards cosmic exploration – I suppose some people know what happens to the human brain when near the Great Vacuum. Whatever psycho-physical training the astronauts have undergone, suspending in weightlessness during their stay in the orbital stations with their brains exposed to the closeness of the Great Vacuum, strange modifications occur to their perception; some see some dead relatives, some receive some mystic revelations (according to their beliefs) and most of them return with changed minds (and bodies) on the earth...The more one recedes from the earth's orbit and penetrates further into Space the more drastic changes in one's perception will occur...Of course, the governments don't speak about these phenomena.

The human brain is predestined to mutate when it gets in touch with the Great Vacuum – the little vacuum within the subatomic spaces of our nervous system cells, which in fact is the container of our consciousness, will start reacting in the nearness of its Big Brother...That's the main reason why the governments have restricted the Cosmic explorations to the present stagnation. They fear the expansion of human consciousness because it will damage with madness and destroy the narrow-minded like them. The nearness of the Great Vacuum will make our (fa) to move even outside of our energetic fields thus making us to perceive still more unimaginable realities and worlds...And as Lovecraft noted, there may be nothing comfortable in this for the humans.

Item VIII.

There are two things which could really bring an aeonic change:

1. The denunciation of the lie about the holocaust.
2. The creation of a powerful PAGAN NS movement.

If the Aryan race is doomed, we should try to create a new race on the base of that fellow sinister spirit and that spirit shall create a new and fresh blood and that fresh blood shall conquer a new homeland. Using the Rite of the Nine Angles as a fertility ritual to make the Dark Ones incarnate could achieve such aeonic change. The New Aeon needs a new race and we are to create it, or at least to enlighten the right people who are to create it.

Item IX.

The simple formula for the Dark Ones to manifest their presence in the causal world is as follows – an orgy of seven couples in a place which is an opened nexion: they should reach an orgasm simultaneously and at its climax one of the couples shall be slain to provide a gateway for one of the Dark Ones to enter the world and manifest through the conceived embryos by the other six couples.

Item X.

Symbolism: – The etymologic and semantic approaches are secondary. The same applies to the runes and any other symbols. The explorer should forget about what the grimoire, or the tradition has said about them and try to understand them by that comparative and associative approach which is the primeval logic and rationality. Of course, a more direct approach would be to attain the symbol's meaning by intuition – because after all the symbols designation is to suggest directly their meaning, avoiding the linguistic interpretations, so one should approach them with an open perception and a focus of awareness moved from its daily position.

Item XI.

Except by entering trance states by will, the focus of awareness gets unfixed by practising insight roles as well, or more correctly said, (fa) is fixed in another position by experiencing an insight role. The more insight roles experienced the more (fa) positions of sorcerer's disposal. Castaneda is to be seriously studied – after all this assembling point is his great discovery. I think that one becomes physically aware of one's focus of awareness during one's phase of internal adept/introvert sorcerer, when one works to become aware of one's full presence. Entering the Sun and Abyss phase should reveal the really weird possibilities of one's focus of awareness. The human state/form could become a question of holding one's (fa) fixed on a few positions only.

Item XII.

2010-2015 to use the foundation now built within the Matrix to alter the direction of the Temple to embrace genuine sorcery and seek to attain authentic supernatural powers.

The NAOS DECK SINISTER TAROT

In the Sinister Tradition as advocated by the Order of the Nine Angles, the first part of an Initiate training involves the creation or obtaining of a Tarot deck. In most cases, the cards used are those created by Christos Beast specifically for the task. The initiate sits before each of the Major Arcana, one per night. And meditate on the image in the letter. He strives to diffuse himself into the image, imagining himself exploring the content, talking to the characters, following a path and letting the mind run free. This has the effect of making the individual projections conscious to them – the ultimate goal being the recognition of such projections in order to unravel what is really there underneath this shaping of shapes.

For 21 consecutive nights, the initiate takes a 'journey' with each card, building a magical foundation of the archetypes in his head and hopefully allowing natural connections to form. This is the easy part – the secondary aspect of learning the Sinister Tarot involves calling each of the Dark Gods portrayed through their own secrecy in a secluded environment outside, one at a time being 21 weeks in total.

In the sequence of this action, the initiate immediately begins a role of Insight—a role that challenges the present ego and leads the individual to live in the opposite way to the way he or she is or feels. It may be that a person with a strong sexuality will enter a convent, or that a quiet person will join the police force. Each function must be lived with demonic intensity – so that not even the closest friends know that it is a representation, and this is where many get in trouble for letting the representation, consume them.

What must happen from the effect of the sum of all these measures, is the alchemical dissolution, not only on a conscious intellectual and personal level in understanding, but a deeper knowing, even the sadness of insight itself – within the tension between opposites and the first-hand knowledge of how they (these opposites) dance with each other. falling into each other, but never fully taking shape – watching life and its playful manifestations as it changes within the formation, the plateau, the disintegration, and the flow...

By actually living the represented archetypes, while projecting them outwards, inwards and outwards in a synthesis of the first two methods and via amplifying the sincere representations that challenge the ego and identity and the encapsulation of oneself – one can gain a great deal of control and connection with the life forces and the cycles of repetition that govern them.

Such is the theory of the Sinister Tarot.

Reading No. 1

1) 3 of Pentacles

The Client: Troubled by the loss of direction, drowning in a turbulent past, unable to let go. Ready to seek what lays beyond if only she can grasp the hands offered to her.

A lonely terrain stretches before her, but with strength and inner resolve she is ready to take the first steps toward inner and outer resolution.

2) Death

Predominant Influence/ Acting against you: Death, the grim spectre of causal loss and the powerlessness to change it. Facing a crossroads, drawing blood from others whilst you await direction. You want to crack the firmaments but are held back by the wheel of life not yet turning in your favour, nor aligning with your spoke. You are being asked to learn patience with yourself and put behind you the bones of the past, to stand atop them and reach for the sun, so that you may succeed and grow beyond this recent tragedy.

3) The Aece of Pentacles

Distant Past: the tangled and messy energies of alignment, thrown one way and then the next, your faith in yourself and the solidity of anything is sorely tested. You believed it to be an insight into the fragility of the world and turned your back on many things that seemed fragile, unreliable, or ready to morph into something else at the last moment as if they were a betrayal – causing yourself even more pain. This has led you to purer place where you have learned to come to grips with the immutable laws of change, changes smaller than you and bigger than you can imagine, changes you fought against because you did not understand their connection to the wider insight. Fault is not your fault.

4) Maiden of Salt / Chalice

The Recent Past: Amidst the chaos that surrounded you, that streamed from every angle, you turned and hid; not to retreat as in the past but to gather strength – and then you dived. You submerged yourself within yourself, found the strength to be more than you thought you could. Beneath the dark pool of the moon you crystallised your intent, and left behind your tears, salty reminders that all things must cease, and even the greatest hardships bring with them a lesson of gold. A decision you made not to run has reaped rewards, you have grown stronger, but the hurt you carry inside is not for you now, but for everyone else.

5) Maiden Aemalgam / Chalice.

The Present: You are in an exceptional place. Aloft above your head you hold the imprisoned energies of the loss that caused you so much pain, not only of physical mortal things outside of you, but the return of empowerment within. All around the echoes sound but you stare straight ahead, determined to complete your spell and finish the diamond, the glowing crystal you have shaped yourself into, using the anger, the pain, the senseless hurt into angles you now wield as a weapon, as a shield, as a Way forward. Your strength is now needed in the world – for others you do not yet know.

6) 2 of Pentacles

Immediate Future: A perfect state of receptivity has been attained – but you cannot rest on your laurels yet. Before you can appreciate your position you need to reach out and touch an old darkness, to show you are no longer afraid. You must face your fear and allow yourself to be swallowed up once more, this time with the strength and determination to not be enveloped, but to bring it into you that you may envelop it. Peace defines you, but it is an uneasy peace, a facade for others benefit not your own. Inside you struggle with the secrets of the world, with the horrors and mysteries of the unknown. Once you would have been afraid, now you are angered by your past inactivity, enthused and excited by the chaos that looms before you. The 2 of pentacles indicates a steely resolve to find resolution and confront your fear.

7,8,9) Hel, Lucifer, The Tower

Future at Intervals: Before you can move you must make the difficult decision to perform an execution you have been avoiding for fear of your lack of strength. But the forces are with you, you have listened to them and they have aided you, held you, crafted your tears into magic. You stand between two worlds. One is the underworld where your foot now rests comfortably amidst the abyssal chaos that formed you, the other in this world of responsibility, ambition, direction, resolve and solidity – of hopes and dreams manifest. You are no longer wholly a slave to your unconscious, nor a mistress of your conscious – but the much-needed, much desired Bridge between the two. For completeness of your journey, you must learn to live as a conduit between both worlds – you have lived too long in either as a separate being. Both consumed you and carried you far from the shores of where you wanted to be. But now you must steady your nerves, your hand, and your ruthlessness born of acceptance, and sever the head that mocks you. Your initiation will then be complete.

10). The Star The Outcome: This is a truly wonderful sign, the full expansion of womanhood achieved, aligned with yourself, with others and the world around you, your footsteps are as light in worry yet as heavy in trace. You leave a wake, a legacy of determination and power that is eagerly followed by the less fortunate, by the admiring, by the sky-watchers and dreamers who wish they could do what you have done. The dimensions from this place call to you, they can no longer rush forth and assail you with their strangeness but must accept and coax you to visit them – for you are in Control. Where you go and what you do, are now driven by you – not others. And for you, that is the highest star, the one you have been reaching for, your entire life.

1) Magus of Salt / Wands

The Client: A tumultuous arrival at intense landscapes varying in extremes of hot and cold, but only at the very beginning of the Journey forward. Seeking companionship with a need for resting on ones own when those companions come too close, there is much to learn and many arduous steps to overcome before you will arrive at your true destination, though you will arrive many times before it, and think each one the authentic. Volcanic, vulvic energies, intense and passionate, often overpowered by one another cause disruption and you must learn to master each, to teach each to wait its turn before being played if you are to have the strength to start your Journey.

2) The Fool

Predominant Influence/ Acting against you: Innocence, virtue, life's naivety that either condemns one to wander the world a manic jester, or propels them through that archetype into a mastery of laughter tempered by sorrow and achieve the crucial acceptance of an ability to laugh at one's self, be gentle with oneself, and when time calls for it, yet gather all ones follies into a powerful weapon against self-doubt and uncertainty. A nuance of character, neither one nor the other, smiling at Life even as she bears sorrow. The ability to face the unknown, take risks, be prepared to jump. Be prepared to leave an old life behind and step into the Sages shoes.

3) The Magickian

Distant Past: A lack of reflexion and seriousness toward the angles that gives you your light, allows you to breeze past obstacles and difficulties, has encouraged you to isolate yourself from the needs and feelings of others. You have performed conjurations, pulled rabbits out of hats, to avoid having to deal with your responsibility in situations that have caused grief to another – changed your face, your clothes, your job. It is nothing to be ashamed of, we must all wear many masks until we find the right one is no mask – and to prepare for a journey requires a solid foundation from which to proceed, an identity and place to leave behind and travel forth from.

4) The High Priestess

The Recent Past: Growth and self-assurance and the ability to foresee shadows before you cast them, not a psychic sense but the development of intuition and empathy – the key elements that set the woman apart from the girl, the Found apart from the Lost. Gazing into yourself, scrying what you really feel is no challenge for you – you excel – but you are still detached, raised on high by your levity and refusal to be part of the often dark, muddy, messy earth – it is beneath you, chthonic wasteland that causes gravity to weigh your flights down. On the edge of a cliff, a precipice, you gaze down at yourself, sleeping – you are not awake, you do not know Her – but you will.

5) The Sun

The Present: All preparations have been made, and you have descended from your tower of isolation, said goodbye to old friends that you no longer need and set off into the unknown with nothing but your resolve to keep you company. Your wolves have gone, and where you are going nobody can follow you. There is no fear about where you are going, though you do not know and the road ahead is dark and long, your early gift of detachment, once a burden now a blessing has come full circle. You have been on this journey before, but the last time you were ill-equipped, you took too much with you and did not get very far from home. This time, you have taken nothing, need nothing, and will go far beyond the obstacles that present themselves on the near horizon, to whatever lies beyond.

6) Azoth

Immediate Future: The years have seen fit to grant you a rich vein of wisdom beneath your floating visage – it keeps you anchored, it gladdens the room and brings other light – but it will be tested on your lonely walk, and you will meet with many savage barbarians, both external persons seeking to take advantage or envious of your progress and in the form of negative frustration, doubts and fears of failure that the mountain is too high, too cold, the valleys too deep, too dark. But have faith, She Within and Without will shine a light for you, watch your passage – you know She is you, and you know what to do, you just have to do it – its what you've always known, you just have to let it happen. From your transformation in the Ice you will find the temperament to calm your fire.

7,8,9) Man Gate, 4 of Pentacles, Wyrd

Future at Intervals: The Man Gate represents a Chaotic element, a drawing down of great energies that threaten to harm or destroy the progress made, and only the Magus can direct the flow of these energies, partition them into safer streams from the raging torrent. It is your masculine side that will protect you when the gates open, your ability to reason and apply the logos over emotion and raw passion – the alchemical hieros gamos necessary to survive an attack on ourselves by ourselves. And yet, hope and a shining light in the bitter darkness from a Woman, from yourself and the reserves you did not know you had. The laughter you have carried will illustrate its perfection, its sublime apparatus as a weapon that comes as a white knight at the last moment to rescue and salvage. And you will take that hand, the cards attest to it. The Woman leads the way to the Three Wise Women, the Fates, the triple-goddess and the formation of a unity many go their whole lives without achieving. Now it is you who watch the fool, rather than be the fool – and may will seek your counsel because of the course you have taken and the insights you have gained. They will want to know your secret, the light in your heart and you will be well equipped to share it, to guide and comfort.

10) Aeon

The Outcome: The most profound of the Arcana, great ambitions, dreams, realised and with them made manifest the changing of a grand scale both seen and unseen. The Chess of the World unfurls, like a flower unfolding in the morning sun, your journey is destined to have profound effects on others and change the currents, bend them to the archetypal will characteristic of the Jester. The Wheel is waiting to turn – and fortuitously – but you will be required to turn it. Laugh, as you turn it, Magus.

CHAPTER 7
PERSONAL CONTEMPLATION

ADDENDUM

Satanism has been a vitally important part of my experience of the world, and for a long time I have been establishing a relationship with Satan, Satanic Elements, and Satanism. I have passed through many stages and belonged to many groups – the ToB, The ONA, the IOT, and have run my own, including the Temple of THEM and Mvimaedivm. I have participated in group rituals, isolated rituals, and seriously studied and thought about the implications and meanings of Satanism from as many angles as you care to suggest. I have come to some interesting conclusions – and even now, see that Satanism represents a useful, constructive and important aspect of life, given as is it to exploring the shadows, the dark, the morality of evil – and the relationship of these externalised elements that we take in hand as pentagrams, rituals, stances and philosophies as related to what is going on inside of each of us that pulls us toward such actions and activities.

Establishing a relationship with Satan is establishing a relationship with yourself – a serious journey to Know Thyself – which knowing often requires going beyond what is allowed, legal, or normal – and causes us to defy and stand against what is accepted, allowed, and considered the rule. For outside those rules lays the other half of the truth shrouded in darkness, and an unknown lorded over by such beings and energies as Satan stands for.

The further we go into this journey, the more we understand, and the harder it gets – for as we unveil what is false, we are left with little that is true. We have only a short time on Earth to figure things out, and little time to waste – perhaps why we dislike the Christian's who tie us up in knots and silly circular emotional argument – wasting our precious time to discover for ourselves what it is to be a living consciousness. Satan, that Accuser, the Heretic offers us a door to another perception, a new way of seeing.

INAUGURATION

Of all the forces I have observed at operation in the world – It is the principal nature of things to change that is the most fascinating to watch unfold. Through my own narcissistic bent and self-focus over the last twenty years I have scrutinised by own being, peering down as if some lab-coated egghead studying the contents of a petri dish and taking fastidious notes in the hope that I might make some incredible discovery. (Of what; I have changed my mind many times.)

For twenty years I have been carefully recording and sharing my experiences, perceptions, mistakes, dreams, ambitions, failures, successes, thoughts, opinions with others – dutifully making case-notes for prosperity; – that would advise, suggest, persuade, invite Change, of both personal and supra-personal spheres by those who could replicate the principles I believe I have unearthed into the science of Forms and Forces.

My expressions have filled a dozen books and filtered far and wide; – those words have been freed into the spaces and gone on to live new lives in the thoughts and actions of the Collective – completely beyond any control I might have once felt I had. Those who have joined me for a moment in my intimate retellings of my life by reading them have been a constant companion; – I know through observation, feedback and discussion many of the results/effects my Work has had on others' lives and ways of seeing the world and the things in it; – I have to date; achieved everything I have ever set out to do; – giving me a sense of completeness and satisfaction in enacting my Will that has progressively eroded that hungry, angry urgency that had characterised many of the things I have done and said always mindful / watchful that life ends abruptly and must be seized with both hands and Lived. Many of the things I have achieved I attribute to a heightened interest in forces and forms.

I have learned Many Things, even since the last time I learned Many Things. It is a matter of principle for One of THEM to change. No matter how stoically one adheres to one's forms – the longevity of the human will often surpasses the integrity of experience and envelopment with any particular set of forms which eventually live out their own span and collapse; dissipating into sub-forms, anomalies and new catalysts; – the alchemical gruel for Nyw Wyrms.

INDIVIDUALOSOPHY

By virtue of being part of an inescapable cycle of being born, living and dying within the space of 0-120 years – all human beings, diverse as they appear to be, share things in common. The most common thing we all share, is the question of our existence.

I am 30 years old, a male, living in Australia. Nothing particularly special about my appearance, intelligence, or aptitude sets me too far apart from the rest of the people who I share this planet with. Long before me, people have written books like this – and no doubt long after me, people will continue to write books like this – imbued with an innate sense of wonder about things – a burning desire to understand the world they live in – how it works – and not just accept it and become part of the furniture.

To the league of such curious souls who have written books just like this, we can add hundreds of thousands of names from hundreds of thousands of different scientific, religious, political, philosophical and magical backgrounds. For hundreds of thousands of years, in hundreds of thousands of different ways people have tried to communicate or in some way express or define the esoteric intricacies of the world we live in.

As time marches on relentlessly some of those souls have been vindicated for the leaps of faith they took or the torches they carried down dark passages of the unknown world in search of knowledge; hailed as pioneers, geniuses, heralds, humanitarians, philanthropists and whose new ideas, unique concepts and invaluable discoveries survived the thorny veils of scorn and ridicule throughout time and formed the foundations of the ancient and modern worlds.

Yet with every small light that shines forth from the darkness there have been a deafening cacophony of those whose ideas have long been forgotten, forbidden, or forsaken; madmen screaming propaganda, ideology, or lunacy from their soap boxes, ivory castles and chariots of fire. These people are lauded as insane, ridiculous, stupid or ignorant; of truth, of law; or of life.

At first glance it might seem like the two are unmistakably distinguished. But I think the difference between the two is a very fine line. I hope to be the former – but without knowing it I may well be the latter. In the end you, others, and time will have to decide for themselves which. I have not lived long, yet I was born or imbued with such a thirst as those who came before me – who looked upon the world with curiosity and intrigue and who never lost that sense of miraculous wonderment that the experience, however brief and mortal, of being alive and a life, truly is.

Before I was 30, I had written half a dozen books, and tens of thousands of pages of notes and essays describing my experiences with the world, with myself, and with others.

From age twelve I have been keeping a diary – not of the mundane day-to-day happenings in my life – but of the extraordinary observations I made regarding people, my family, friends, the collective masses at work, at play, at war; and trying to discern what makes them tick – what makes them act that way or say one thing and do another? Looking back, I was like the David Attenborough of human behaviour – I knew I was human – but I felt like an alien, like I didn't belong, and that all of the things' people were doing so naturally, were extremely strange.

Nineteen years later I am still obsessed with understanding questions which never went away by virtue of being puzzlingly human and that I am still no closer to answering. What is our Origin, what is our Purpose, and what is our Destination? There is a wealth, more than can ever be processed, written on these things – theory of evolution, creationism, big-bang theory, chance, probability, alien races; happiness, love, godhood, self-fulfilment, philanthropist, collective gain, selfish pursuit, nihilism; other planets, heaven, afterlife, memory, death, energy, reincarnation; – for all intents and purposes an endless variety of books, manuals, treatises, bibles and guides to life and its experience; all of which have been the providence of minds like mine; curious and determined to know the truth of our existence and to answer questions the enigma of our very being begs answers for.

Maybe one day, in the next half of my life perhaps, I will find suitable answers to these – if not for others, then at least for myself. But in the course of exploring the world, my own existential being, the habits and behaviours of others, the realms of magic, politics, religions, science, psychology for answers – I am the latest human being to participate in the age-old cycle of devising unique answers. And while I have read only a few thousand books in my lifetime – I am relatively confident my answers are different to all of them. Different enough that I will not be wasting others time by writing yet another book that attempts to bring a vast torrent of connections together in a unified and unique theorem – and to those people who read them when I am gone – offer a contribution to the heuristic process of exploring the meaning of life.

Because this is not a book about my tradition – but an attempt to record the tradition of tradition. It was not enough for me to use words, I wanted to know where they come from and how they had the effect on people they did. How politics or religion gained so much power, why or how they had become institutions with enormous power and millions of followers when their answers were full of contradictions.

It was not possible for me to accept the concept of Time as sacred – I wanted to know what it was, why others accepted it, what the effect of others accepting Time had on the causal world. Following that – I wanted to know what acceptance meant, what ‘meant’ meant, what ‘knowing’ was. Or why ‘what’ and ‘was’ were used in sentences. There had to be reasons... For a long time, this terrible ravenous cycle of nihilism imprisoned me in a labyrinth of empty semantics. Round and around, I went, chasing my own tail through logic and reason, only to arrive back at the beginning more perplexed than ever. As a cynical inquisitor, I destroyed everything I had taken for granted as the tools of life, because I wasn’t happy with the tools. I began messing with my own psyche, forcing myself to do things I was opposed to doing; and became acutely aware of the power and presence of my ego, mind or brain and the inter-relationship it had with the world. I saw that this relationship was habitual to others and determined that the tools we used were somehow responsible for the way the world was, the way people were and I questioned that – I questioned everything.

I am deeply aware of my mortality. It’s a fact of life. People die around me every day, in the news, in accidents, natural disasters, bizarre incidents, murder, or just terrible luck. This was one of my first observations – and possibly the most profound. The feeling that my time here is temporary has been with me a long time – it has spurred me on, to write and write and find short-cuts to knowledge to understand the world around me. I don't live every day as if it were my last – I'm not James Bond. But I have an innate understanding of my role here on Earth, and the nagging sense that it may be brief, because the window of existence allows me only a short time to figure everything out and make sense of this life. Using and comparing what has been left behind by others own maps of various esoteric geometries they observed life to be composed of – a rich life of observations of my own – and careful analysis of the present ethos, perceptivity and approaches currently in vogue by the majority – I am writing this book to contribute my own understanding of life and the human race to the collective. Whilst I have unified many of my observations into a theorem and Individualosophy – there have been some unrelated phenomena in life that simply evoked a need to be written about. Though in terms of the connection I see and will share in all things underpinning existence – calling things related and unrelated is where the trouble all begins...

We can start with a look at my own theory of creationism and the introduction of “Forms” – the most prevalent concept in my Individualosophy.

INVERSE GROWTH OF THE MASTER

In the acts of creating the Temple of THEM I have created a very specific concrete shell on which I can clearly see the ornaments of my own psyche hanging. This act of conscious allowance of psychic deceit goes beyond posing for others as a pillar of wisdom – for I am aware that the assuming of the Old Man Wisdom role is merely a shell; I understand that the role contravenes my own self-honest journey to the Self; and yet this ‘projection room’ has indefinite potential for making conscious my own demons, shadows and complexes. As I act as a mirror for others, so too do others act as mirrors for me. Though my Thinking function is able to solve the problems and puzzles put before its gaze with an extensive array of logic, reducing or magnifying objects and persons intellectually to perform a type of rational magic that can make sense of all; I remain aware while exercising it that this emphasis on ‘Thinking’ is developed enough now. Now time must be spent exercising the inferior or hidden functions of ‘Feeling’, and ‘Sensation’. Likewise, though I have experimented at length and with demonic intent with balancing my levels of extroversion and introversion, more work must be done to give equilibrium. Though I have worked hard and suffered greatly resulting in a good integration of both masculine and feminine attributes – working magically and psychologically hard to achieve their union, hard enough to have manifested my Anima in the flesh – I must now activate the connexion with the unconscious and submit to meditation, to discover the shadows and projections that remain and to own them as my own. My work is not done – and I hope it never is – I can think of no greater joy than being an alchemist seeking the philosopher's stone.

NAMING THEM 2006

This conversation was extracted from the Diary of a Devilworshipper Vol IV and published in Abyssal and is a letter between myself and the co-founder of THEM regarding the very moment prior to the naming of THEM and the magico-political and psychological states of THEM in relation to Traditional Satanism (Tsat) at that time.

+O+ – “Possible other names for the group are “Ziggurat” after the Sumerian’s – but it’s just a thought.”

“I wouldn’t like to have anything in common with “the Fertility Crescent” where from the Magian started their expansion. AL has introduced the term “Sumerian Aeon” to signify a period when the Land of Khem (Egypt) was the true Aeonic civilisation. I understand he wanted to emphasise on the Aryan origin of the Sumerian’s who are supposed to have preceded the Egyptians and to have influenced all the peoples westwards to the Hellas by their culture and civilisation. First I tended to agree with him since I was a bit bored of the Egyptian inheritance’s profanation nowadays, but after all it’s again a British theory which he wants to impose on everybody. It’s an arguable matter if the Sumerian civilisation has really preceded the Egyptian one. Also, it’s extremely arguable if not ridiculous to claim the Egyptians were of Semitic origin. The Egyptians were neither Semites, nor Aryans, they were rather from an extinguished race we know nothing about. They hold in contempt all bearded peoples While the Sumerian culture reached Europe (Hellas) via the Semitic Babylon, the Egyptian civilisation had a direct contact with Greece via Mediterranean Sea and it wasn’t yet Hellas but the Cretan-Minoan civilisation who worshipped the mysterious Kaberoi and was in an alliance with the Thracian peoples in the North. The Hellenes were peoples of warrior-puritan-patriarchal culture who invaded Greece in two main waves and adopted the former culture in some censored form – in the same way as the Semitic Babylonians adopted the Sumerian culture. Troy was the last fortress of the Cretan-Minoan civilisation which was destroyed by the Hellenes. The Kaberoi, or the Ancient Ones taught some underground initiatory mysteries which were adopted by the Thracian’s too.

It’s reasonably supposed that Kaberoi or Kaberoi came from Egypt where the underground mysteries proliferated. These mysteries were magickal and esoteric rather than religious and exoteric, and taught some secret way to the individual immortality. It’s said by Snorri Sturluson – the paraphraser of the Nordic Eddas, that Odhin came from Troy in the North to become a god. Prior Odhin to become Alfodhur (All-Father) it was Tyr who was the central figure in the Germanic pantheon. Odhin is also a god who introduced some initiatory mysteries. Maybe he has also been one of those ancient mystery teachers who made use of any local mythology to teach their initiatory systems. Anyway, I would like to use some name in a more European context if you don't mind that idea of mine for an European sinister renaissance. We know that there was some Hyperborean aeon in Europe prior to the Egyptian/Sumerian but it speaks to me nothing except some dim feelings. Maybe we are to use something which brings forth associations with future and the galaxy rather than with the antiquity? – I do understand you very well – you're a sorcerer, rather than a warrior, and that's why you cannot fit well in the ONA scheme. You don't want to risk as they want of their adherents to risk. Am I right? However, you've managed to get some benefit by publishing their stuff and that's fair, but they do not recognise you as an adequate partner, since you're not a warrior/bully, and they feel it – at least the bearded prophet, who in fact is the real ONA, feels it. I also feel it. I'm also not fit for the warrior way despite of my experience – at least from a Dexter view since my traumas are more than my victories, and since they have costed me my health, I'm not fit for that way.

However, I feel also that the bearded prophet and his adherents aren't fit for the way of sorcery as well, or, at least their sorcery is doomed in the way they practise it. The warrior disciplines his Dexter to endure the impact of the sinister via training one's body by exposing it to gross risks. The only sorcery/charm here is that the warrior project some ideal, or belief unto the sinister and hopes to get some benefit thereby – some postmortem fame at the least. The sorcerer makes his Dexter elastic via exposing his body to the benefit of the sinister – the greatest and the subtlest risk which could be taken, since it isn't the sinister but the Dexter which could kill the body – it's the sinister which teaches the body the right reactivity, or the emotional/limbic intelligence.

Can you make the difference? I hope so, since it's not just “my way”, “my opinion” etc. Having familiarised myself with Spengler's definition of “Magian” in “The Decline of the West”, I think it's a very appropriate term for the three-headed monster of Judaism, Christianity and Islam – it includes also the Iranian Zoroastrianism as an essential part thereof, and I would include therein also the atheistic Judaism known as Marxism, as well as the economic “liberalism”, and the “political correctness”, and etc. social cannibalisms invented in the Semitic Orient, or by persons of Semitic origin. It's better to have one term for all that subhuman slavish attitude towards the numinous, or the Wyrd in order get petty materialistic benefits thereof. Calling the Wyrd “God” is the simplest example of the subhuman Magian mentality. Myatt has borrowed that term from Spengler and uses it in a bit superficial context. Here I see the same Anglo-Saxon revolutionary inventiveness, and unfortunately, the same lack of profoundness. As for “sinister”, I wouldn't like to give up that valuable magical term just because the bearded prophet Myatt has monopolised it and associated it with the bully's mentality and criminal activity. When one is really deep into magick/sorcery the things become sinister anyway. Otherwise, it would be dubious indeed.

That's why "sinister sorcery" is a tautology, since sorcery cannot be other than sinister. Sinister is also the Latin for left, and magickally it's our left side where from the Fetch operates and makes our Dexter, or right side, the Ego to contract, or even to collapse. Now about the Ego: Again and again, "Ego" is the Greek for self and everything else is a distortion. The negative attitude towards the ego is one of the nastiest Magian distortions. Any "spiritual" path which emphasises on "destroying one's ego" just gives a sign that one has to do with problematic persons who have problems with their egos. Moreover, such "spiritualists" are magickal profanes who have no idea that destroying one's ego means nothing more than death in the most physical sense of the word. If there is self-honesty, there is no problem with the ego. The only magickal problem with the ego could be its rigidity, or its lack of elasticity. An essential part of the sorcery training should be to make one's ego elastic enough to contract and expand at will. To make one's Ego elastic enough for the Fetch's impact, one should free it of any unnecessary concepts and petty concerns. When the left-sided Fetch operates, the right-sided Ego should contract at will and give space for the sorcery to take place – otherwise it could collapse to an lethal end. Or, just no Fetch will operate to prevent one's body from dying. All we can think of, or create a concept of, comes from the Ego, from the Dexter.

The sinister, or, the Fetch is the weird/bizarre/freak thing which DOES NOT fit into the concepts and could be perceived by the whole body only. In fact, we do not know much about our body since its anatomy is an invention, or concept of our Ego. Anima/Animus is the closest Ego's concept to the Fetch. Both Fetch and Ego abide one's body, or, maybe more correctly illustrated, the Fetch and the Ego could be represented as two overlapped circles, and their intersection is the body. The sorcery training of the Ego should include not only the awareness of body's mortality, but the awareness of body's sudden mortality as well. However paradoxically it may sound that death awareness gives the sorcerer a chance to attain to a relative immortality. Relative, because we still do not know what happens in the field of the 3-d awareness. The Dexter Ego and its causal/mundane/consensus/ reality are product of our first awareness, including our body as an anatomic notion, while the second awareness concerns our acausal perception via the sinister Fetch' including the egg of energy as a sum of all dynamic possibilities of the body. The feeling of time within the second awareness is non-linear. The third awareness is when the egg of energy' shell is broken... William (the guy who asked intelligent questions in the o9a's forum and who was rejected by Chloe) asked me privately what were my beliefs concerning the afterlife, or what (if anything) happens to us when we die.

I will quote here my answer to him in order to continue my thought about the awareness of death: “Independently on my beliefs, I can suddenly die. Were there an after-life, or not, the loss of my physical form would be a catastrophe since my body is my spirit’s only organ of perception in this world and I’m organically interested to stay in this world once having come into being therein. My body is the only key, or lever to the real magickal forces. This world is much more than what both the religion and the science pretend to know about it. I’m a sorcerer who despise the issues of both the religion and the science. This world remains a mystery and sorcery is the only direct approach to that mystery. A mystery of dark energy...Everything is energy and interaction between fields of energy. My body is a field of energy as well. However, that energy is not in my possession yet, it belongs to external factors, and my awareness thereof is probably a temporary phenomenon, so the quest of sorcery is to make that energy my own possession prior to die. Death is a mystery as well as life. What is sure is that during death one’s configuration of energy changes and that change could cause a loss of personal awareness. To make one’s available energy one’s own is the way the sorcerer perpetuates oneself. The chances are not great, yet the sorcerer never gives up hir quest, even before the face of inevitable death. To dissolve one’s personal awareness in some greater and impersonal awareness thus enriching it by the memory of one’s life experience, is not the path of sorcery.

The Wyrd is a fact, not a belief, but the sorcerers do not engage themselves in giving it definitions though they interact therewith. It’s sensible, and it’s sensible via one’s body provided the sorcerer has made it sensitive enough. It’s sensed as a vast web of numberless threads of energy penetrating everything – it’s not somewhere beyond, it’s right here in now, provided, to say, one’s nervous system is expanded enough outside of one’s body to perceive it. A certain mushroom (probably you know about them) could enhance one’s perception to perceive that mysterious thing, but such an experience could be overwhelming, if one has no enough personal energy to bear it.

Moreover, this thing, which our Aryan ancestors have called “Wyrd” is somehow sentient though impersonal. It’s a paradox those of the “lower spirituality”, the religionists, cannot understand, and if they nevertheless get in touch therewith, they are overwhelmed and project thereto any kind of human follies, most often the fear of their own father – such is the case with the bearded prophets of the Orient. That’s why I do claim that the Semites are of a lower race (or of an ill, morbid race?) who feel little but are ambitious enough to seek after conquering the world. Anyway, the only safe thing the sorcerer could rely on is the awareness of hir own death, and that’s what motivates hir not to lose hir time with petty issues. However paradoxical it may sound, the awareness of one’s death is what may overcome one’s death. So the sorcerers usually avoid the metaphysical comforts. Some say the Wyrd “gives a chance” to the sorcerers – once gaining an awareness of one’s own thread of Wyrd, why should that personal thread lose its awareness of itself?”

As you see, +O+, much of the ONA terminology and symbolism have become my own, an organic part of my sorcery, so I hope you do understand why I'm not willing to give up these things which have made so much sense to my Ego and to my quest. When they are used in a different context the ONA will have no more monopoly over them. What we need is quite a new context and I think I gave you an example of using that terminology in the context of my sorcery. "My sorcery" is an incorrect saying since it's an open path for all sorcerers who deviate from the bully's approach to the sinister. If you want to totally eradicate them from your future quest that would be a sign you have really served somebody else's agenda, and now you're angry of yourself. I don't think it's true – I feel you've made use of the ONA's paradigm for your Dexter understanding of the Sinister. No need of suspending the momentum you've gained by your former ONA's allegiance. Changing the angle, or the context of that momentum will be our next sorcery after having once expanded the ONA' sorcery to subtler concepts via Crux. I offer to you not to criticise directly the ONA in our future publicity – it would be quite enough to announce we follow the sinister path of the sorcerers, not of the warriors. When the Aryan inheritance is concerned somewhere in our future publicity, we would mention that the Sorcerer's estate was higher than the Warrior's estate, and so shall it be forever. Seems that you're fed up of the o9a and I can understand you very well. However, it speaks that you've not managed to make o9a magick your own as well – me myself cannot betray my own investment in that symbol system since it has become an organic part of my magick. I'm afraid you has invested too much in the social aspect of the o9a, – publications, communications, running online, or real life temples etc. – a sphere the o9a's audience and the o9a themselves are still immature.

Yes, the sinisterion is somehow socially immature to stay ISS. All these surly fellows keep secrets from themselves and that's why they cannot be sincere in their social contacts. Such contacts suck and that's why you feel fatigued and fed up. During all these 6 years spent within the sinisterion's current I have limited my social contacts to two persons only – you and X, since only with both of you I've felt relaxed enough to communicate on that delicate theme of sorcery. Sorcery is always sinister. No need of any o9a-like advertisement. When one is sensitive enough one could sense the sinister presence of the very world itself all around oneself. So sinister that one may forget to breathe and thus burdening one's heart, one may meet one's death. Yet such should be the awareness where-from sorcery is done, not other. Do you know why the German group of Ice Magicians were expelled from the IOT? Because they offered a sorcery technology whereby one's brain produces in one's organism the same reactivity as if at – 50°C, a temperature where-from seidhr trance and magick start to work and one's sorcery works sensible changes in one's surroundings. As well as to oneself – the ancient Germanic seidh-sorceresses were famous shape-shifters.

The IOT (P. Carroll and the British section) were afraid of studying and practising that technology and blamed the Ice Magicians for "psycho-fascism". Having tested some aspects of my local system of sorcery I can imagine, me myself joined the IOT to relax from my severe training my organism refused to tolerate. Anyway, sorcery is always sinister since it demands one to go beyond one's mundane awareness. If one is on the sinister path, one should develop one's weird self – the fetch, the nagaahl, the acausal self, or one's second awareness, which is often at odds with one's causal self's comfort. If one persists in preserving one's causal self's comfort and deliberately neglects one's weird self, the latter will start to play weird and nasty tricks on the former.

One's life may become more threatened than it was while one's causal self was communicating with the acausal one. I already outlined my ideas for the eventual future development of Them if you remember them. I would add also the Aeonics of Pan-Europe thereto (where Pan is also the dark one called Pan). I expected to hear your own ones but you say you want to desert from Them. I say you just cannot desert from your creation like some chaos magician of the IOT's type. You can, of course, but now you seem a bit scared and there is a tendency to become even more scared if you lose your sorcerer's perspective, as it often happens when a sorcerer abandon his sorcery project by aborting it. Do you know what a paranoia has possessed most of the chaos magicians? Yes, "the Triumvir" is to be abandoned. The o9a failed in reconciling Them and 352, by showing both that the latter are their favourites, and their preference for a subaeonic strategy alien to the European ethos. Taking such an attitude it's to be maintained – in this case with a cold silence but with a presence. I don't think Them are a sinking ship yet. If you abandon Them right now you just show your fear of the o9a, or the things around the o9a, you just admit that the o9a and 352 have taken away Them from you. I offer to you a long silence (as long as to re-arrange your causality to accept the signals coming from your acausality), and then there will follow a laconic, cold and distant announcement that Them have a different approach to sorcery and Aeonics, that Them have made their contribution to the o9a via the Crux project, and that was all. Bye. I do believe that if you really change your approach to sorcery, you will really sound laconic, cold and distant having nothing more to say to them.

About Crux: I find it perfect, though I have a complaint – you have deleted a vital note of mine in the diagram of the ToW runic correspondences – that Tyr rune is more appropriate in the context of the 16-th path than Wyn rune, as I first signified in scheme. Otherwise, I'm infinitely grateful to you for adding my contribution to your Crux project – a further evolutionary phase of the current set in motion by the o9a. It's up to us to further develop that phase into something really independent and genuine. You read my thoughts in respect of that new life, +O+. Though the o9a symbolism has become organically accreted to my personal sorcery I feel I have nothing to do with those who recently speak from the o9a's name. Nor do I agree with AL that the Temple of Them should be the more traditional o9a's nexion. I think we are to foresee our next step after the Crux publication – a step making us more distant from the o9a, and nearer to the different World Wyrd you speak about. Those who sincerely pace the weird path of sorcery have no need of overemphasis on the dark, sinister, ominous, dangerous, evil etc. Yes, time to time, the curious are to be decisively warned, but preaching all the time about that stuff is boring and speak of some flaw. Even of some vulnerability. I do know some harmless snakes, which intensely imitate the appearance and behaviour of their poisonous fellows but they cannot delude the snake-hunter. I think we need a new Physis as an approach to that different than o9a's World Wyrd you speak about. The o9a's Physis is based on will-power and struggling with oneself, on some internal conflict with oneself led after all to that weakness which made our race vulnerable to the Magian virus. In order to destroy the Magian virus we are first to restart the whole system. We need individuals who are more relaxed with themselves, we ourselves are to make those approaching the Temple of Them feel more relaxed with themselves. After all, the very awareness of sinister should make one to relax if one is to react correctly thereto. I would like to emphasise on that reactivity as on something of vital importance. Let's accept that we are first of all some perceptive beings amongst the web of Wyrd – the acausal, the sinister itself. Our bodies are our basic organ of perception. Our bodies react to what they perceive. Our reactions, however, are conditioned by the RHP education and our lives are often frustrated thereby. So, our main task is to uncondition our reactions and work on our unconditional reactivity to develop our limbic intelligence (which in the language of some Eastern systems is to awake the snake Kundalini and allow it to energise all the energy centres in our body, though I would like to avoid that Eastern terminology).

Sorcery is the most primeval form of human magick corresponding to the animistic hunter-gathering mentality when all one's surroundings, including oneself were regarded as animated – having soul, or spiritual. Any further separation of the spirit from the matter have led to the present schizophrenic conflict within the human being which make sick and ill its only organ of perception. If there is a creator, its creation cannot be less sacred than it, or the creation is as sacred as its creator, or the creator and the creation are one – otherwise we have a Magian perspective. While we are to revel in the numinous, being numinous ourselves, the Magian want of us to worship it as something separate from us, thus creating a deficit thereof in order to sell it. The Magian perspective should be regarded as a form of spiritual illness, or as some deficit of spirit.

I'm afraid, however, that if we are to be genuine sorcerers, we are to re-think our concept of essence vs form as well. This conflict is due to the deficit of methodology created since the humanity moved from its animistic world-view. The form itself should lead to its essence. The form itself should be suggestive of the method whereby the essence is attained. The form itself should be the key to its essence. For example, my approach to the sigils of the Dark Ones is something like. To see beyond the form is through the form itself. The form is the gate. The inverted pentagram – the symbol of the emphasis on the physical, on the form, on the dark force of gravitation, on the avoidance of the term “spirituality”, on making of death one's sexual fetish, is again an actual and classical symbol of Satanism I propose as a new form, a form repulsive and attracting simultaneously, challenging the Satanists from both the CoS and the o9a type.

These were just some outlines of the new life I can foresee. What do you think?..."

MIND WAR

THEM's understanding of the Magian and the Mind War is detailed our MS the 'Theory of the Beast'. Basically, we espouse that the sight of the Abyss for first man was so frightening, that to conquer its fear it was necessary for the development of 'things' and 'understanding' in order to control this titanic force that confronted what would become 'man' on that being's arrival to this place... therefore we place our theory in a biological, evolutionary, type system. In covering up the horrors, man was able to become man, but in doing so what actually was was seen through artifice. This divided the world into two magical forces; one that wished to remain 'natural' and accept the abyss and a world beyond morality; the other that desired form and substance and control and invented all manner of fables to enslave the mysteries of the world into manageable chunks. This in itself was not the beginning of the Mind War but set the foundations for a system of FORM that would come to be abused by various cunning elements of mankind who quickly realised the bonus in interpreting the world for others... Of this element I infer the Christians, but well before the Christians, the tyranny of control has likely been an endless temptation for others to rule others throughout recorded and pre-recorded time. We think the ego, which arose as a reaction to the Abyss, is responsible for this tyranny, for making a religion of form, and for interpretation.

Some of this is psychological, i.e. grouping qualities which are quite separate but are generalised under one umbrella into a singular entity, a fairly standard practice for the brain and our perceptive faculties; but these kinds of faculty have been abused, enslaved, controlled, so that when someone refers to 'America' or 'Russia' we actually believe that the billions of individual citizens, each as complicated as you or I [who have yet to figure ourselves out] are somehow represented by this illusory statement commonly used to lump virtually infinite views and information from each citizen, into one little box. As if whoever wrote the statement truly knew what 'Americans' wanted, as if they could know the minds and wishes of billions of people, and many go along with this charade thinking and judging the 'Americans' as this or that based on such statements, often without the common-sense to question how anyone could know sentiments of that scale of such a diverse and astronomical number of ways in which those brains function. Such a statement is mere 'politics' or statistics – and is a small example of what constitute to us, the MATRIX, the taking of form and interpretation and hearsay as gospel over what is commonsense, observable, rational, reasonable, possible... a common sloppy madness that has strongly gripped the world by the long-standing traditional use of abuse of such things as language, logic, form, by a concentrated group of persons who exhibit a similar and materialistic Weltanschauung... (that said, only in my time has the Magian been able to be said to be represented by the Capitalist or Materialist, before my time, the Magian current was something else, represented by something else,)

Another is in referring to the plans or motivations of billions of brains by lumping them all under one umbrella such as 'The Russians', or 'Communists' or some other such grouping... the same can be said of the Magian by the Sinister... and while I and the rest of THEM are aware of this process of doing this, of creating an enemy that is ubiquitous, that we are projecting our shadow, our prejudice, our ego... it is necessary to take on this guise and take shapes and use generalised terms and reach others on the same level as the Matrix does, therein, others can put up their theories and beliefs and we will break them down so that they can be free. Our own writings are theory, they work for us and we ascribe a Weltanschauung of our own around our work, around ourselves; they are driven by the convictions made possible by our ego, by our sense of relatedness; however these theories sound in words to others is not going to affect how these principles affect our ability to believe in and practice magic based on these principles that we experience as working sorcery. Some of that sorcery that is taught under our banner of CHANGE may be understood by the astute or wise, but I doubt very much of it is; most people fix their gaze upon the appearance of things, upon the nuts and bolts, the terms and the words, the idea that someone is trying to state something unchangeable, or directly contradict their own view which is taken as a challenge...

The facts are, we teach change. Much of what you say about what you understand requires no comment from me or anyone else, you will figure out what you figure out in your own time, in your own way. Our methods are not about controlling others or obscuring magic or in pretending we are invincible or infallible; much as our external authoritarian writings may convince some that we are saying just that; they are there for a purpose, written like that for a purpose, a purpose driven by the ego – only when that first purpose has been achieved, when there is a FORM created for the purpose of communicating something very particular to a reader, and that connexion is made by the reader, can the next stage of the process begin... but the processes too are not in the end, important – what is important is the overall theme of our work, of changing, of confronting the status quo [particularly in thought], of thinking things through, and eventually, with any luck, of seeing one's own power.

But some still require the occult walk to prove for themselves that something does or does not work, some still require the arguments to prove their worth over others to satisfy their scepticism or beliefs, some still think there are guru's out there that can show them something magical and amazing inside the occult maze of tools and rituals and bizarre [without being able to appreciate just how magical the world already is], and some, like myself, are seen to be teachers, but for all I know, I remind myself I know nothing, that I may learn... when I felt I had become a Master, I joined a physical discipline of martial arts in order to start at the lowest level of something else. To remind myself of my humble ignorance, whatever my ego might wish. I learn much about myself from representing this Temple, and I continue to learn every day in some way or another. While I may say more than others on a subject, I know better than to believe 'myself'. And I know far better, than to stop questioning myself. I only realise how much I do know/don't know when I am asked a question – up until that point, knowing as much as I do is almost useless because it's a holistic apprehension that powers my feeling of contentment and dare i say it 'happiness'. In summary, what I believe, I'm happy to share and have challenged and put to the test – on the merits that it withstands such tests is such knowledge useful to others... if it doesn't then I am happy to have it pointed out, I take criticism well, and will happily re-think my 'convictions'.

I'm able to change, to make change, to back down, or throw aside my ego to listen to commonsense, or a better idea. If I or the others couldn't, THEM would not be as rock-solid as it is, or as unique. It is through the direct basis of others in THEM to control their ego [and through persons like you and your interesting insightful posts] that my companions help me to grow and I to help them because of our ability to listen, to teach and learn from one another, to warn each other of pigheadedness or of any absolute thinking... yet we each possess a strong ego that lacks no conviction to pursue its own way forward, and requires no interference from others no judgement or control, and does not need to suck the energy of others to feel its way forward by reward or punishment. One of us seeks to create acausal wraiths, another the destruction of Christianity, another to raise satanic beings, another to infiltrate existing groups and change them and so on... we have our own goals, our own worlds, and yet we each understand the temple, the terminology, the idea of objectivity, to be illusion. Our psyche is ruled by nuance. It is good that you question our forms, as well as not require your ego to be 'right'. It is healthy to admit you are in an awkward position – so are we, so are all of us. What you settle on as your own Weltanschauung is entirely yours to know and believe – I am at least thankful that we can help you really solidify that Weltanschauung with our provision of many walls to bounce your ideas off, and likewise we are thankful, for your provision of walls for ours.

INDISIGUAL

[Very old intimations of the latent archetype of the Unindividual and Becoming One of THEM]

I explored life with vigour – time alone in real Forests, real spontaneous adventures in which I discovered the consequential causal effect of my journeys on their plane, as I went.

I explored life with scepticism – curiosity expended on exploring the capacities of my organism, long walks, long talks, pouring my intention into the outcome of my actions to get what I wanted. Insight coming that what I wanted would become clear from these long walks, long talks.

I felt the rush of life in these physical joys and could smile at the folly of philosophy from an armchair – an otherworld smile, formed by the painful and exhaustive forcing of the face out of an uninitiated frown.

Really, only with this blood on the hands, and feet, could a wise man delve into what other men thought he was in the many annals of Wisdom. I read their books and wrote my own – a guide, a compilation of guides, and evolution of the guidance and nothing else.

Face to face I observed examples of the species and my species in relation to these examples. It was an encounter with chaos. Yet the pattern that was dissimilarly shared by these examples of the species walked beside rules and laws and limits and I observed of these, places where they would gather, tangents whereby the species would synchronise and become malleable.

All of them teachers, all of them students – And I met many of both who were powerful on the way here – even some who thrashed me within an inch of my life. But they could not take it from me – and in turn I took everything from them. There are many powerful individuals throughout the species. But those that power the powerful are the power itself.

In stark opposition to the species, I watched them synchronise tangents again and again, their patterns as constant as the ebbing of the tide of the sea crashing on to the shores of their lives and wearing them away like grains of sand little by little reclaimed by the endless breakers.

They did not learn though this species – they were taught – and I was forced to acquit myself as a member of their organic and form my own.

Meandering along like another little white sheep,
Though tinged with emerging Satan.
Consuming the liquor of the masses that turns sound to silence,
And generally wasting away.
Drunk too much, too quick, too bad,
And joined hands with one of my alcoholic-induced stupors.
Where memory is null and it is like being dead for lack of life,
While the flesh is willing, precariously the mind is absent, per se.
And now I leave rhyme and rhetoric aside for a while,
To cast aside the curtain of the veil.
And relate to you that I was literally bashed to the verge of death,
After some silly drunken argument of which I have no memory.
The man I was with, a friend of six long years, just watched
My defenceless body thrown to the ground with brutal savagery,
And a man thrice my size and muscle smash my face into a pulp.
And yet I was not present here.
My body was dumped on the side of the highway, left to bleed to death,
My friend presumably watched this too.
And I must have lain on the cold footpath of foreign suburbia,
During the coldest night of the year.
My blood alcohol reading was one point of fatal,
My temperature dangerously low,
My life poured all over the concrete, bloodied and broken.
My dreams, my loves, my gifts, my talents, my essence flowing from me toward the River Styx, and yet I was not present even here.
I woke up in the hospital, my face so smashed in
It was three times the normal size, though they would not let me see this,
And I had to find out two days later in a hospital bathroom.
I remembered nothing but the drinking down at the beach.
Everything else was a blank. And now, finally, I was present.
And I was calm. And I was contemplative too.
I should by rights be dead. The elements were there.
The temperature, the injuries, the loss of blood, the dumping of my body where no-one should find it.
But I was not dead. I had only died.
And it was like a cold clinical gleam entered me, upon piecing together where I was.
Lying in hospital, I asked for no-one to be contacted that first night. I was enjoying the solitude that this a priori instilled.

Instead, I sat and waited for the patterns to converge as they had always done, and for my skin to knit and my bones to fuse.

And I smiled at how easily I could have been swept from my turn on Earth, an insignificant speck in the infinite sea with no-one to know how, why, or when I had died.

To die alone.

So sudden this turn of events, could I have known I would be nearly murdered after a pleasant drink with a friend of six years?

Even now the coward is roaming free. But let this one sheep go free I say,

Even after the offers appeared to cull this spineless maggot.

Why? Because although he did it when I were defenceless,

My attacker bashed discipline into honour, pride, integrity and the Star.

By rights I should have died, my own weakness for the drink the rose on my lifeless dumped corpse.

But when I awoke and realised I was still alive, that I had survived a horrific beating and been found in the nick of time by random passers-by,

I found the strength to smile the many-toothed smile of sickly sweet Satan, For I was now a ghost. I had been dead, and I had been alive. I much preferred being alive – but I understood the silence of being dead now.

And what had I meant to the world in this life? Nothing.

While I had shone like a star... I had not the control to die like one

And if I can't die like a star,

What is life's fucking point?

I'm dead now... I don't feel like I'm living amongst the living.

I am a cold black shadow who works darkness from the Abyss.

[This prose was penned for the TOB as a shared insight into the alchemical transformation that had overcome me after I was nearly murdered in the street by unknown assailants (Though I probably deserved it, I was a terrible drunk in 2003 and a cheeky cunt too) and beaten within an inch of my life. I was found unconscious on a freezing night, my blood alcohol was so high the paramedics would tell me they were amazed I hadn't died from that alone, and I was lucky to even be found in the darkness at the bottom of a flight of stairs. I have no recollection of the lead-up to the events, and large tracts of my memory are now inaccessible – I did recall clearly however, my thoughts in the aftermath. It would take several more of these near deaths and a number of further years to stop my chronic drinking. This experience was the beginning of a sober new world view – of a man that understood he had limited time, that it could have ended without warning, and without achieving any of the goals I had vowed to set out to do as a boy and somehow lost my way... It was this brutal assault that nearly killed me that aptly captured the emergence of the pseudonym Ryan Anschauung.]

RYAN ANSCHAUNG

The world is quite confusing for me at times. The way I interpret it is so different I have made a unique philosophy in attempting to explain it, mostly to myself more than others – but I too am quite unique in the scheme of human beings. I am for instance Left-handed and an INFJ (Myers-Briggs) with a cultural background from New Zealand. Left-handers make up a tiny percentage of the world population (which could explain my frustration with the mechanical aspects of the world at times, especially unconscious as a child but impacting my learning greatly) – INFJ's make up a 1-2% fraction of personality types which makes us the rarest type of all – and New Zealand has a culture like no other. I'm 6'2" with an IQ high enough to differentiate me from the majority but not high enough to own it. My star sign is rare, my astrological chart too. I am an outsider in so many ways it is hard to list them all. For my early life I was moved from location to location – never really putting down roots until we ended up in a creepy haunted house where I had my first startling supernatural interactions and early introduction to death, attachment and grief with my pet calf being trampled to death by larger cows.

Here also I played the trust game with my older sister who let me fall off a water tank onto my back which greatly damaged my already tenuous trust of others but celebrated being more risky than my older brother and sister by climbing higher trees, exploring the hills, letting fireworks off in my hand and taking dares. But as they turned into teens, they spent little to no time with me and I wandered off in idyll. I grew up without a father which also impacted me significantly and still does but without structure to direct what I should be interested in or guidance on how to live or be I simply found my own weird way, taking cues from one of the few media available VHS video and being impressed by 80's serial killers and superheroes particularly Jason Voorhees and Batman, both strong and silent. My mother mistreated my stepsister in my very early childhood, and it left me very scarred, jarring my understanding and giving me sociopathic tendencies to the point I often felt I was meant to be a serial killer or had been one in a previous life and was atoning for it by being given a last judgement to behave, in this one.

As I grew up in the country in a tiny town of a few hundred people (maybe), 2 shops, a school with just 30 students for most of my attendance and spent the majority of my time walking the hills, forest, roads, creeks and exploring nature – my formative world was a microcosm in which I found the means to explore, experience and understand my relation to it and others. I left school at 15, having been unable to settle into multiple different schools and colleges finally finding some solace and peace at the alternative Auckland Metropolitan College before it was shut down but also left there under a cloud, migrating back to Australia at 17. My family did not call me by my real name most of my life which was greatly confusing when I found out, and my real full name is even unique as all three parts are often spelled incorrectly causing great mischief to my life through the impairing by various bureaucratic institutions even having 2 tax file numbers at one point, my eyesight is also extremely rare and unusual and it can be no surprise to anyone that knows these details I have never revealed before that I too should be so unusual as to be the founder of the Temple of THEM. Impossible things have always happened to me and impossible things are all I know.

Somehow left to my own devices my initial faith in God, introduced through the Bible and as an overarching principle that was governing Life and those closest to me or around me was broken through a powerful breaking of trust episode where I spoke to God to exchange my life in exchange for the dying father of my school friend. Naively believing this was enough Simon's father later died leaving me angry hurt and confused. After declaring my anger at God through prayer I vowed to serve Satan instead, shortly after which I believed I saw God as a blue light at the foot of my bed and this experience was so profound that up until recently it was a very powerful factor in the course of all my life actions and choices.

I turned to Devil Worship aged around 12. There were early signs – At the age of 5 I was removed from Sunday School (a religious praising and learning of Christ) for refusing to participate, at age 11 I played the Innkeeper who turns Joseph away from the Inn (Biblical story). Additional details are given in my Diary of a Devilworshipper series (also called Mvimaedivm). I believed, up until recently that my purpose as a being here on Earth was to stop or destroy Christianity. Age 19 I discovered the Order of Nine Angles (ONA) after which I was thrust into a strange new world where I would cross paths with the likes of the Tempel ov Blood, Illuminates of Thanateros (Chaos Magick), obscure groups like the Society of the Dark Lily, 218 and dozens more in the course of hundreds of thousands of interactions and conversations with all manner of people doing all manner of things, many of these conversations are recorded in my various archives and files of my groups including anonymously in Abyssal. While I had been possessed of my own mission prior to ONA I found guidance within the teachings of Nasz Dom that I had not encountered anywhere else, structured, formal, academic and mystical – it grabbed me like nothing else ever has and for the next 13 years I was a firm advocate and follower producing countless essays, works, complimenting and contrasting what it had to say.

What I took away from their teachings put me on a path even more unique than my already impossibly difficult upbringing where extremely isolated spiritually by virtue of my circumstances and bizarre set of attributions, I was radicalised and found a home among its adherents and offshoots. I founded the Black Glyph Society to archive and distribute important occult works to encourage the alchemical growth of others (ownership then given to another) and formed the ASOV, an Australian-based occult group (ownership also given to another) – Believed in my path. Even when afraid and unsure I have always stood up to bullies and tyrants. Even when it has placed me in great danger I have jumped in the way to protect others. When my mother and stepfather were arguing, when a guy I barely knew that I used to buy weed off was being stood over by a guy with a knife, when my friend was threatened by a gang, when my flat-mate was being terrorised by her boyfriend, when my stepson's father (previous best friend) tormented my ex-partner during a custody battle, when some dreg in Brazil wanted to make a pedo ring for my Temple to bring in money, no matter where or when I have always stood up for the underdog, with an unbreakable sense of justice and what is the right thing to do, that I have to act even if I don't want to because I cannot stand to see cruelty, bullying, or ganging up on one person which I've always viewed as cowardly.

In 2006 the Temple of THEM was created with an initial intention to study the origins of the Dark Gods among other aims. Sometime in 2009-2010 the 'Us vs Them' concept of mundanes began to emerge in ONA messaging and things changed. My sense of right and wrong is the reason I fell out with the Order of Nine Angles after DL9 and Chloe agreed on a decommissioned forum that children of mundanes (ordinary people not sinister) should be raped and or killed and I began to see that my love of the mystical, British-isles Arthurian, cosmic nature love ONA I had grown up with had changed in a way utterly incompatible with my values. It was a realisation that I had completely misunderstood its intention as a cult and at the same time the realisation of just how powerful forms can be and what they can become when fed. THEM began to challenge and rival the messaging of the ONA which I felt had become destructive and identical to the very enemy I had already sworn as a child to destroy, Christianity.

In fact, my writings are replete with examples of these comparisons, from Temple vs Temple to my analysis of Vindex vs Christ. The problem ensuing is this: when you are trying to actively direct how the world will evolve based on what forms you feed and what forms you starve you come up against walls where in order for your thing to take root, another cannot. This leads to an impasses of philosophy and a war against those who do not fit your magickal intention. To destroy Christianity would thenceforth involve also destroying the ONA as I came to see them as identical in essence and method to the Vatican Clergy just vastly different in appearance. What I took away from my interaction with the Order I treasure, it has shaped me in a way nothing else has, to this day it still provides my spirit a framework I could have gotten nowhere else and nourishes and encourages me to stride forward to reach my goals seeing the entanglement of human forms and natural forces in a mystical druidic dream paradigm of romanticism: at the same time sparking my intense ire.

But as I grow older things become more complex – I realise that locking myself into a battle with a thousand year empire and driving myself by a belief I can change things to such an extent as to eradicate Christianity from the planet has given me a certain fire but it is still the naive vow of a 12 year old boy – and when looked at very closely the roots of what I perceive to be choking this world are not so simple to identify.

In part this is made all the more complicated by my love of Carl Jung's psychological framework and the need to examine, identify and untangle my own internal, spiritual roots to really understand just what it is that causes me to rage against the machine, any machine, so fervently. Like CB I find expression through art, and more and more I am comfortable with mentioning God: there is an obvious peace with that but I am not Christian nor Satanist, I am a very rare design that created the Temple of THEM to assist in my own understanding of things, with no academic background, no university degree, and the many weird attributes that I was given that make me an outsider on virtually any side and yet strangely a friend to all give my written works a strangeness and difference that I used to be frustrated and confused by – but in recent times have come to finally embrace. Having spent the majority of my life using alias after alias I somehow have to fuse the different aspects of my life together to make a whole, even though they are theoretically at vast odds with one another this fusion is necessary if I am to be whole and not kept separate in the many parts that make it difficult for me to Be.

THE CHANT OF THE EGO

* Occasionally I take the opportunity to comment about something using certain situations or suppositions that have arisen in private correspondence – and tend to do this when I receive emails with similar approaches from a significant amount of people. By paraphrasing a reply, I gave regarding certain requests and conceptions about myself and my work might help give people a better understanding of who Ryan Anschauung is and what he represents. I have taken only the gist of what was said to enable the author to remain anonymous. My thanks go to the same correspondent whose comments enabled me to lucidly explain further elements of my approach.

On knowing who I am:

* For reasons related to my work I don't give personal details except where giving them serves a purpose of illustrating personal experience and the right to speak from it.

On creating distance between me and the world using a persona and the lengths I have gone to conceal my identity:

* Great lengths yes, because being anonymous is a huge part of me being able to do what I do in terms of infiltrating different systems quietly – and being unknown enables me to elude the trap of presenting a form for people to attach themselves to, via a picture, name, etc which would result in a specific process of interaction being enabled that is detrimental to my work which seeks to dislodge the attachment to forms, not build a personality cult. Ryan Anschauung is a well-known platform with a good reputation that enables me to connect with others. Whilst my work is on one level deeply individual – it is also decidedly aimed at the benefit of the collective – and in that sense there is no need for me to show my face – since my face doesn't matter in my work, would in fact complicate it. It would allow my ego to gain too much footing in my perception, to collapse on spikes of its own hype as hubris inevitably results from it being overfed. It is a highly useful function to me but only if it is used the right way. Revealing myself would be the wrong way.

On being invited to join a group of individuals to evoke certain changes in the world:

* You refer to Hitler's meteoric rise to power. And unity. As an example of just two group I have worked with in the past that shared some of your goals, the ONA and the TOB were exactly the same in using Hitler as an example of a means to unify people into a group of powerful magicians/elite – and that approach did not turn out well, for me, or for the general collective. This noble desire to create an incorruptible network of people is as old as time itself – and it's not usually with the best of intentions with a kernel of individual will-to-power sometimes hidden in sugar-coated rhetoric designed to motivate hypnotise others and build a personal ladder. It's from my experience – the natural inclination of the human animal to do this – but partly because of the environment we live in that rewards this behaviour, and partly because it is our present unwritten tradition of perception. But this noble (or ignoble) idea always suffers from a deliberate or ignorant romanticism – indeed, uses words like noble, because humans simply cannot and do not co-operate that way when a certain point is reached. There is recognition of a power pinnacle point reached inherent in each participant that orders them to automatically over-reach at that point and try to take it all. Each individual has a different point and so the collapse of the form is unknown but inevitable. All too often those who believed they were contributing to something good have poured their efforts into the dreams of madmen. But in your suggestions of means and the outline of your goals, you immediately reaffirm the obsession with the power of forms to achieve results (the ego's desired results) that I am deliberately trying to destroy/lessen in human beings. The song you are singing is an old one, one I have heard many times before and mistakenly aided. Much of my present work is an attempt to undo the damage I have done with misguided and selfish arrogance in the past. I am therefore prompted to ask – can you reconcile your goals, with mine? And am I really the one you want.

My work would ask you why you feel this way and what you are willing to risk and do to achieve this ideological paradise your ego is driving you toward. Such a question often has the result of offending the ego of someone – I hope that you are beyond that. But offending or at least reasoning with your ego is precisely what must happen here if this same archetype is to be changed. One person at a time, it's a long road. But it's the only road.

On wanting lions not sheep:

* I am so much a lion; I am my own pride. My determined individuality was a problem for the so-called free-minded ONA too, because I will not tolerate destructive forms being built just for the sake of peace by not making waves or supporting group aims. And even proved a problem for me that I have taken a long time to accept and come to terms with. Granted: issues of trust are not historically my forte and I have since worked on this, but the glaring problems with humans ganging together, however nice and altruistic they appear to be or the cause they rally for is at least two-fold: Diffusion of personal responsibility, i.e. 'Just doing my job' is the banal source of the greatest evils and this can happen whenever more than one human being is involved in anything. I have a responsibility to myself above anyone else. Secondly, my awareness of the duplicity/multiplicity of human beings whose outward forms do not necessarily reflect their inner private intentions keeps me on guard and at arm's length from people. I want to trust but my expectations for myself and others can be incredibly high.

I might also add, the fragility of intentions and integrity in people is a problem which can lead to them being easily corrupted when they begin to get what their ego wants; Or a disagreement spurs them toward sabotage, a coup, a schism or some other such typical nonsense that ruins the ideal for everyone.

On contributing to groups:

* I appreciate your offer, perhaps I will be able to contribute to your group at some time in my own way.

In reply to how I'd like to change the world and what I want to do to make a difference:

* My discussions on the Religious forum are an example of my style of contribution, which is often an attempt to reorient anyone's certainty in their forms again and again – to challenge them – and to create in them a permanent flux. This flux allows confidence in forms to be invested but at the same time provides the nuance of doubt. Multiplicity over simplicity. This process of 'dislodging' the ego's simple version of life or 'stasis' often generates a lot of conflict and results in all manner of argument being thrown up in defence; but since none of it escapes the behavioural box and all stems from the same common source, containing the problems and geometry inherent in morality, duality, and language it is hard for someone to sustain their point of view when presented with this alternative context – they may inevitably drop it.

Weakening their resolve in forms is generally as far as I go in this process as most people will then do the rest themselves. Working within a group – which requires certain changes to one’s individual autonomy can be difficult – especially as regards my approach which does not allow any form to settle as a grounding truth and is always moving the ego on from its toys. It treats the human as a compartmentalised being, yet speaks to both compartments differently, even as it uses one system to do two separate jobs. It is also quite ruthless as regards treating the ego’s defences lightly up to a point but ultimately without tact. Living in this endless torrent of shifting sands, and consistently self-insulting one’s most delicate function, appears highly uncomfortable for a great number of people.

CONFESSIONS OF A SHAPESHIFTER 118E.H.

I’ve come a long way since I first developed as a teenager from Azazael. My original website Azazaelzpagez, though now mostly blank except for a hit-counter is still up, but I left no traces of my once abundant stores of personal information. I deleted the content of Azazaelzpagez when I changed into DevilworshippR and began to frequent the ONA yahoo forum around 2003 where I became immersed in the world of Traditional Satanism and was motivated to read a great many new authors, including Jung, whereupon I first met with the ideas of the man who would greatly shape my way of thinking.

After reading “Man and His Symbols” I became aware of Archetypes and the Collective Unconscious and was able to better understand the nature of Aeonian Theory – also that I was and had been changing, passing through various stages of awareness and being. After several years of study and practice I left DWR behind to take the name Ryan Anschauung to perform my first insight role as a National Socialist. The name was taken from two words, Aryan, and Weltanschauung (roughly meaning worldview). I have worked tirelessly to increase both the spread of Traditional Satanism as a way of living and the material present related to the Tradition, including the Naos Deck, Mvimaedivm (The Diary of a DevilworshippR), amazing practical and intellectual acts, various accounts and numerous essays, in some cases such writing being biased toward the Tradition, in others antagonistic, and in these later years what I feel to be a fair balance of both.

Despite being cautious about the deceitful occult ego, I do believe my body of work to have substantially added to the Sinister Tradition and to have been both useful and inspiring to others – many examples of which I have had the privilege to see. After receiving the name Tnepres during my involvement with a cult I coupled the names Ryan Anschauung and Tnepres together to form the new pseudonym Tnepres Ra. For me, Tnepres Ra represented a stage beyond Azazael and DWR and a new state of being where I felt a good balance of cynicism and optimism regarding the Occult. As I wrote, drawing on the ideas of Jung, it came about that I re-read Man and His Symbols whereupon I came to see myself as living an archetypal cycle. As Tnepres Ra I had established a solid network of contacts, suppliers and brethren and had finally worked my way up to the position I dreamed of being in when I was a young boy (though certain illusions had been broken regarding the nature of that role on the way). However, despite the success of Tnepres Ra, I decided to change names yet again having achieved one longed for goal, I now needed another. Reversing the initials of my signature T.Ra I came up with A.rt. My life has been a work of art (and is far from finished – I am now 29 years old) and it seemed suitable that having achieved the goal I had sought after, that Tnepres Ra should be destroyed to complete the archetypal cycle I had read about in Jung and as a Satanist, to go on beyond him and become something else.

And thus, it came about that I announced the death of Tnepres Ra by a fatal collision with a car in the ONA forum. I had hoped to generate a stir and was greatly moved to see some kind tributes paid to my passing – all these many years I have written and acted and struggled to make a difference but many times it was without being able to see that I was or had and this greatly disheartened me many times. Having no experience in faking a death I botched the job with humorous and embarrassing results. Having ten different email accounts and a plethora of other pseudonyms did not help matters and I carelessly revealed my living existence. Tnepres's death came during a new idea to form the Temple of THEM with others I had met on the Path and helped show the true colours of certain persons who lacked the key component of honesty and pretended to have been good friends with him. Inadvertently, his death helped show who could not be trusted to enter the new formation.

So, now here I am, eight years later, still teaching and still learning under my new name 'Friend Ley'. The pseudonyms given on lulu for a "Ryan Frank" are of course bogus, that is not my real name either but if you combine the initials of my last three pseudonyms together it reads FRATR. L. I've come to the conclusion that my instructions to others are perhaps weakening the difficulty of the Path. This is not an easy thing to decide, any good magician flip-flops endlessly, agonising over what is right, fair, just etc and I have done the same for years, hence my taking down of various other libraries such as ONA Database. However, in my position as a teacher I am aware that those already in possession of what I am trying to teach seldom, if ever, require such a thing as the Temple of THEM or guidance and so I find myself patiently encountering the same level of aspirant again and again – generally only encountering those above me in passing. It's time for me to move on to new experiences. I have done my best to teach the Way and Mvimaedivm (Now Know My Way) that is all that anyone can ask for. I'm leaving Mvimaedivm [and its Archives] up and just leaving.

I regret nothing.

THE IRONY OF GIVING INSIGHT

I hope that 101 has been instructive so far for those who have listened to me shout into the void here. I have attempted to de-construct a great many things but also to provide a guiding light through things on many levels – not just those usually accessible to us. I've tried to give a replacement and physiologically based tension of opposites that can be tested against reality by simply Being and is universally available to everyone – not merely assert yet another set of abstract tensions politically or religiously motivated i.e. Sinister/Magian that merely confuse the issue of life further. Fear/Love are a contribution to a non-moral, non-controlled, non-abstract tension that is undeniable and universal by which those in heuristics may gain a constant footing in life, as life.

Unfortunately, in having to be so tenacious over the last 20 years or so to get my points across or explore them fully I have become aware of an even more subtle tendency of the ego – especially as regards what I am doing here today shouting into the void in 101. The ego is a sneaky motherfucker – I have noticed how my posts have gone from shouting into the void to sharing my ideas to beginning to instruct others on how to live... It is not unfair to conclude that my own ego has been built into a terrific-sized monster itself –and to be arrogant enough to think it can replace time, space, and reality and have the strength to fly in the face of world consensus, it had to be. Old habits and habitations, die hard. But if I wasn't aware of this Irony – and aware of when it's time to 'stop the car', could I really say that I had learned anything from all of This?

It is at this point that I must stop what I have been doing viz. using the ego as a vehicle to charge my way through obstacles I have been training for a long time to face up against and overcome to be heard. Now that I have made it over those obstacles, been heard, and that people are listening to the extent that my theory of Physis is being picked up – is changing views – there is a very real risk of my ego enjoying the attention it is creating and swelling up to gigantic proportions to become a tyrannous monster by trying to control what has been shared, by trying to control these simple truths by making their effortless simplicity into some artificial, irresponsible, unnatural ism. If I don't leave it at that – and now – I duly risk repeating the mistakes of so many others who chanced on a good idea and turned it into a new version of an old mistake by making of it a morally imposed code or enforced law. Sath showed me this.

The ego is a useful tool – but it cannot help getting carried away – especially when it is praised and others help to assert its subjective stasis as objective – that is unfortunate in some ways, fortunate in others, but really just an inherent part of its function prone to abuse if mishandled. Now that I have used its strength to coast through the various obstacles set up to hide fear and get my points across, I would be wise to take some time to see how they develop of their own accord. I have to say that I am relieved to have been able to finally marry my intellectual studies back into the Physis of the body to create (or more likely, restore) a sacred synthesis that might just reconnect us back to Her. It would prove dangerous to continue building a new paradigm for others based solely on what I think it should be. Though, I have not left my theory at a point where I have just revealed fear and left it at that – that would probably be more destructive than anything else. I have thus built on it a little bit past that – and even as I write this more comes to me. But more than this could easily become something as destructive as what already stands if it is again turned over to one person to re-make or believe he can re-make our human Way.

This insight is no longer mine – and perhaps it was never mine – but now that it has been written down it has already begun to undergo transformations in the minds of others – it is an insight freed that belongs to the collective, to all of us, and should be used, individually, phenomenologically, and heuristically by each as they see fit, if they see fit to heal and fix ourselves and maybe some of this shit that has gone wrong with the world.

I believe more than ever we are at a stage where humanity is still unconscious in many stages but is waking up to its collective and individual potential like never before. There are signs for this shown by the fierce inter-connectedness of what appears to be our one present collective belief – the Internet – and a global drive to make all information free. Albeit this tactic has caused some extraordinary, unusual, wonderful and desperately tragic effects by virtue of people having access to information they would not normally have access to and it likely to continue doing so. But while information has the potential to be ruled by the powers that be, the embracement of the internet is an encouraging outward symptom of a burgeoning desire to possess the power to create the means of freedom from oppression for ourselves others and escape our present ideology of what it is to be human.

There is really little more than need be said in relation to the Sinister or even in relation to 101 – and it would be counter-productive to continue past this point just to keep talking or keep the group moving – the key elements are all here and anything else can be guessed by you as you make your way onward – for really what else is there in your way except for the inventions of language, morality and time? Just as I have taken my cues from others who left signposts and helped me to put together this one thesis that has changed everything for me, once you accept that language, logic, thoughts, time, space, and all those other things we take for granted have another side to their story – knowing both sides tends to simplify all the apparently dizzying array of choices of forms in the world into a ball you can hold in your hand. Or throw. There has been so much destruction and deception from division into abstractions, yet all of us, even as we call ourselves different things and divide ourselves into opposing forces share in common the tradition of Love – the desire for the absence of fear. The planet has suffered terribly as have her creatures because there are so many people struggling desperately to assert their stasis lest their worlds fall down and they be forced to contemplate for one moment the alternative we have struggled to forget or that others have struggled to make us forget and gain power over us.

Just know that everyone who ever made you feel fear, who terrorises you, who deals in being feared, who ever made you feel those physiological symptoms; is intrinsically more afraid than you ever were with your small set of physiological symptoms; all of them completely unconscious of the terrifying scope of this phenomena of Being and the insidious control its process has over them giving rise to the fierce defences against it that cause them to project their fear into and onto others, including you. They try to frighten out of fear. We're all afraid – because aside from Love, what else is there? Don't be frightened by them – don't be frightened of love, or of fear – Love your Fear. Fear your Love. That is the balance.

A formidable minefield greeted me coming this way. There have been so many forces and people ready to mask Her truths that the world is a terrible fucking mess – littered with a graveyard of dead ends and self-perpetuating nightmares cemented over that which has been staring us in the face, IS in all of US, can be felt right now where ever you are in your very Physis; that which has been given so many names to hide Her real one.

There are forces, terrified at the thought of loss of control that would beckon forth the forces of Chaos, of the Abyss, of Nature Herself to yawn through their carefully crafted gates and barriers; forces out to instil and maintain our fear, (including our own egos) and worse yet, to twist our fear into horrors and lies so hideously that we can never know the simple state of Being, never get back to the Beginning, back to who we are without recourse to the mumblings of their priestly cast.

There are guardians, mighty and immovable who stand guard over the Way and enslave us and our minds so that we must travel the warped labyrinths borne of interpretation and the power of the ego, of the wills and of the wants of others who seek to use us, own us, scare us, keep us frightened and afraid because they are more deathly afraid than we are. Those who struggle to control the world with words and forms and illusions, trap it in geometry and morality, logic and constants, abstractions and dreams, laws and rules – are they who fear the most – so perhaps it is fitting that I should be the one to turn to face it since I appear to fear the most. And if I can face it – others can.

There are Forces the world over that split and divide, abstract and invert, obscure and presume, rule and tyrannise and ultimately distract us from being able to ask who we are, what we are, why we are – but instead settle for the architecture of fear that has imprisoned our world. But I know now that no-one needs a priest to speak to God, and no-one needs more than their own life to speak to Nature and have Nature speak back.

All you Forces out there – who quake in fear and scream and tremble at your own inability to Know thyself – who hurt and kill us in ignorance to get your own little ways or the ways of tyrants – who bully and belittle us as if you were fearless or to be feared: I have a message for you: Nature is relentless in her forces – look at all you have done and are doing to avoid looking Her in the eyes – to avoid looking us in the eyes and admitting you are just as frightened as the rest of us. We know your secret. You name everything you fear and you have named Everything. Just as weeds grow through, over or around concrete, just as the jungle reclaims skyscrapers – so too will Her messages always get out, through someone, someday, through speech, through dreams, or through some nameless vessel who happens to be lucky enough to grasp her secrets and not let go – until it is time to let go. You cannot control us forever with your illusions. She will tell others, and they will tell many more. And no matter how hard She is oppressed, She will find a way, She will provide, and She will prevail. I'm not afraid of you. There is something far more frightening than any of you – a force that frightens the meanest, cruellest, most atrocious human tyrants. And I am not afraid to finally Remember it.

CONTEMPLATION OVER KILLING [I]

On Opfers.

When I was taking on board the ideas of the ONA, I prepared to kill to prove my worth as an initiate and to satisfy my curiosity. The situations I've been in during my life have not been of strife, of war, or civil unrest – indeed I doubt I've gone hungry a day in my life. There have been a few fist fights at most, some brutal ones where I had to fight to save my life – but none of that harshness of poverty, corrupt government and police, civil war and religious blood feuds that goes on in so many other countries. I've been to a few antinuclear rallies and a few anti-war ones too – but my activism, even as a Neo-Nazi, was fairly subdued – there being no direct threat or enemy involved. I've not been in a riot so I don't know the mob mentality firsthand – I've never been shot at, or knifed, or even mugged. I know I can get angry – angry enough to want to stop the person making me angry and even to kill them in the heat of the moment- but I've not done it. I've experienced a red haze of fury descend over my eyes as a teen when I stabbed a student and chased another, but the intent to kill – it is completely foreign to me.

I watched a lot of medical dramas, and looked at loads of gory, disturbing pictures on sites like rotten.com in order to desensitise myself to blood, gore, and to see what real injuries look like. What cutting a finger off looks like, what a hammer can do when it smashes a skull, what skin looks like when it's burned, or what the facial expressions of a rape/stabbed/shot victim look like during the act to try to get some idea of the practical elements of the act of killing someone would be. I wanted to be familiar with the real scenes of damage to a body so that I would know what to expect – not guess or take my cues from the T.V. or movies. I also needed to know how to execute a killing. Here in Australia killing is not common. It may seem like it on the news, but we don't have genocide, we don't have warfare in the streets, we don't have armed gangs roaming the streets with machine guns and tanks, or rogue commanders ordering house arrests and rape and killings of civilians. It's not familiar to us. It's strange and alien and the contrast of our way of living gives us the impetus to call Australia 'the lucky country'.

But what did this mass accumulation of facts serve? To know how to apply a choke, how to stalk without being noticed, how to silence a victim so they couldn't cry out, knowing methods for disposing of a body, of clothes and weapons used in the killing, to study the Rite of Nine Angles again and again to get it right in my mind? What did looking up melways refs. and studying the maps for isolated spots, back roads, minimising nearby places a victim could run to achieve? It was all theory – and no practical. I've done enough things in my life to know that the reality is always different from the intellectual premise. Yet, I prepared. I was 21 years old and about to become a murderer in my belief that certain persons who had caused others I thought were good persons, a lot of strife and grief and deserved to die. I was about to choose whether those persons should live or die and to execute them by my own hand if I decided they should not.

My childhood experiences contain early warnings of my risk of becoming a serial killer, of taking knives to school, destroying thousands of butterflies in one afternoon, stabbing people, being isolated and involved with devil worship and a lot of misguided notions based on anger, frustration, sadness and my self-importance.

Today I fit the profile for one quite well – I'm 25-32, white male, steady job, nice guy [if a little odd], for instance, yet the only one that seems to know how psychotic I can be, that thinks there is a beast inside, seems to be myself. A lot of people speak of killing all the time as if it were nothing to them – almost all have never killed anything or anyone. Particularly when it comes to Satanism a lot of people have romantic visions of killing, and, if you're not in control of your ego like I am it's all too easy to make an excuse or build a case on the grounds to kill someone and believe they deserve it. But killing someone for the right reasons – now that's infinitely harder.

You can find reasons to kill someone for being a paedophile, or being a Christian, or for practising Satanism badly, or for hitting your car, or because you have been killing people your whole life – but it's always going to be a subjective killing. Is killing someone to aid a society, or cosmos – and the ensatzgruppen of Nazi Germany are an example – or making an offer in the case of ONA, justifiable murder? The only thing that makes it justifiable – is if I tell myself that it is. For a lot of people – it's easy to convince yourself of anything – people do it all the time. But what happens when you really are out of Time and a different species – when you think of yourself as fallible in your judgement and know for certain through experience and observation that all your judgements are subjective – think, that I can never really know, what is right, and what is a right killing? If my values dictate who is good and who is bad then I am setting myself up as a God over others – yet, without my ego, and devoid of a sense of inflated self-importance – it is impossible to be able to set one's mind to the task of doing a right killing, because without that pre-existing guide of values, without that conviction that one is right in what one is doing, and in travelling a path that continually requires one to question oneself – killing is no longer an easy thing to justify.

Most people are followers. They select a set of values and gravitate towards groups or other people that have similar values and uphold those values as correct, true, or whatever you want to call it. If I performed a sacrifice to prove myself to ONA – what would I be proving? That I was easily influenced, so easily influenced as to take directions for how to run my life or value system by a group of faceless manuscripts? Would I be proving that I was so committed to these ideals that I was willing to kill for them – maybe – but would that make me 'more satanic'? Rather I would be doing this act because I am too weak-willed to reject the ONA's advice or views. Do I reject them, or embrace them, live their way or live my own way – which is the more satanic, which, is even satanic?

Theoretically, if I kill someone, it's because I want them dead. Because I believe they are deserving of death, have wronged me, or are in some way responsible for some grief or damage to me or elements of my world or my understanding of that world. But who deserves to die? And who is the one to determine who is right to die? Does a Master? Why would they care if I killed some faceless person they're never going to see? How would they know I'd made the right choice? And more importantly – to go beyond, beyond the petty reasons people kill for to achieve self-gratification for whatever reason emotion or madness – is to understand that people kill for no right reason other than a subjective set of values they believe gives them the right to kill. Are my values better than anyone else's? Do I have the right to destroy another life, to judge it from afar, not live it myself, and make claims about its worth? Without ego – how do I convince myself I am doing Right Action? With the insight and wisdom, and subsequent enlightenment of the Abyss – how does anyone kill another in the self-deceptive delusion of thinking it is the right thing to do? I have training, for instance, I know how to kill someone – but I don't do it. Have I not found the right person who can motivate me so deeply to anger or hatred or disgust that I cannot kill them? Probably.

Perhaps I am tolerant of human beings because I see us as all in the same predicament; as morphic beings of redeemable blankness, most of which are stuck in time and blind to the machinations of change, life, circumstance, culture, ego. Anyone who claims that their Will to Power is what matters most must deal with the ugly contradictions and sloppy thinking such ego contrivances creates – I.e. if Will to Power is the supreme judge of who deserves to be Masters of the flock, then surely the USA deserve their position as totalitarian superpower and all efforts to remove them from power by calling them Magian and starting a hate-group against them should be dropped, and the Will to Power of the US, celebrated as the strongest, most successful Will. If not, why not?

One must admit – that to have values, is like having only part of the pie. To live one's life according to those values is to be blinded by them – and the only factor that drives them is arrogance. I'm not saying it is wrong to kill people, I'm not saying it is right – I'm asking why do I kill and when is it the right reason?

And beyond even that, its all Form isn't it, someone else's will directing mine – it might be the vehicle of Satanism [for instance] that defines how that will is presented, and no matter how professionally its said – in the end it's all just ego-based bullshit isn't it. No-one offers any right reason to kill – just their own.

DILEMMA US TO THEM

I remember buying a small yellow chicken I called 'John' and playing with it in my bedroom at Red Beach. I remember it pecking my eye as I was crouched down watching it and being pained and angry holding it in a vice like grip and crushing it. A day later on arrival home from school my mother announced it was dead and had been buried in a shoe box in the backyard. I felt something then. I was born to be a serial killer. Having studied so many and identified an overwhelming number of key traits, experiences, and pathologies that we as a type share in common – and knowing what I have been through, felt and the analyses I have made of my journey that I cannot share but have done my best to try to outline over these many years as a writer in the experiences I have shared – I know, that was my destiny. That – or I was supposed to be a very evil man.

Before 12 I was literally worshipping the devil under the house, annihilating thousands of butterflies, setting fires, home invasion, taking carving knives on the school bus to intimidate, having strong psychopathic fixations on girls, performing black magic, sleight of hand, hypnosis, tricks of the mind and faith on others, taking grave risks, and injuring or attempting to injure others through simple cold detachment. I was writing demonic scriptures, being influenced by books on the occult, black magic, the supernatural, cutting out vaginas and eyes from porn magazines and making a collage, keeping an infernal diary. I threw a fork at my brothers neck, a stone at my sister which cracked her elbow, another stone at my friends face (AM) and chipped his tooth, a wooden baton at a female schoolmate (MH) that hit her in the forehead – and though others reacted at my callous acts I felt no remorse. I felt nothing. I remember at the age of five trying to force a kitten to balance on a cupboard rail. I remember squeezing fish.

Environmentally – there were many incidents of torment, ridicule, humiliation that made me misanthropic, countless experiences that killers later recount as tipping points into their endeavours – many of which I have never spoken and will likely take to the grave for noble compassionate reason. I believe, I was born to be a serial killer. Except – I am missing several key traits. I don't enjoy the suffering of human beings. I don't hate women. And I was visited by God. Even today reflecting on that visitation and for all of my ability to rationalise, explain or designate experiences as within or without – I am tormented by the inability to excuse that visitation which completely transformed me. In the first diary of a Devilworshipper I write about the 'Bliss' that I felt that night and have never felt since – but which marked for me the difference between seeing a ghost and never seeing one and the perpetual uncertainty it creates in convictions of belief about the way things are and reality as we know it. I have been guided by that feeling, that gift and curse, ever since – for a very long time fighting against becoming a man touched by the Holy, struggling to overcome and live with burning psychopathy and heavy with the sad wisdom gleaned from tearing things apart to see the divine stitching – a combination which gives me frightening intensity that I go to great pains to conceal in my day to day life – skating across the surface of societal expectation easily but always with the sense that I am a visitor here, not one of you, not human – but One of THEM.

What I carry inside is extremely onerous and without it my life should have been very different I suspect – but it hasn't been different, it's been the way it was and is – both extremely bizarre and diverse in its breadth and scope of spheres: for a long long time I was a walking battle of the devil and the divine, something only the women close to me in my life will ever know. No others get the chance to really see me as I am. Keeping what I am capable of a secret is an exhausting way to live. I didn't choose it but unmistakably, as much as I wish I could deny it ever happened, that it was a phantasm, wishful thinking, a dream, the fancies of imagination, delusion, schizophrenia, dissociation or a handful of other clumsily described hysteria – whatever I think I saw, utterly changed me to my core.

It was a he. It was not Christian, or Muslim, or Jewish or basely comparable to human religion – but it did explain why there are such tremendous efforts in his name: that if such had appeared to others with more frequency in the ancient past why there were enormous crosses, lavish and gargantuan temples and mosques, elaborate churches and pain-staking love and care in every detail on every statue, window, arch – and consequently why the congregation sat in wooden pews or prostrated themselves on the ground. It reified why priests dress in gold and the scriptures of books pertaining to miracles survived and survive and are still followed today – why wars are fought to establish and affirm the sanctity of homelands, holy lands and what drives the ferocious monotheism that dominates our globe. For as much as I don't want it to have been an experience for me – wanting to revel in the epithets of traditional satanism and become the beast I was meant to be, I wanted to be, I struggled to be – always, that feeling of bliss, of absolute peace and love that I felt as a twelve year old boy from a glowing blue light at the end of my bed that completely prevents me from doing what I was supposed to do. And so here I am, still, between worlds – but no longer in combat. No longer fighting with these forces inside, no longer needing to actively suppress or place into context. Burdened yes with terrifying traits, gifted so it seems too with powerful persuasive capacities as a poet and age 41 at rest with what I am – having transformed all of my lead into gold and via this process, forged the philosophers stone.

We, as a race, don't live long. I chase my mortality every day – I am not afraid to die, I am afraid only that I might fail in my mission. These alchemical writings aim to speed up certain processes so you may enjoy the sublime existence of being unlocked and enjoy it early. For a long time I guessed at and wondered which way I would ultimately go when I had finished building the 'Temple' – would I use my power for good or for evil. Batman or Joker? Retribution or compassion? Or would I create third and fourth choices. Even if I had made a decision, I wouldn't tell you.

AEMULATION

Despite appearances – we must always remember that the codex of Mehr Seins Als Schein is in operation with the Temple of THEM. 'Be More Than You Appear'. Identification with serial killers is an emulation with the worst of men – I cannot deny what I have inside me, it lacks only the blood-lust, the desire to kill, cause suffering, a hatred of women and an ego easily sated through gratification. Had I those weaknesses, I'd be just like them. So I write about the evolution – to tap into the hearts of these men as I did long ago with the Tempel ov Blood – of their type and offer them a greater door, something tangible to reach for – supremely arrogant to think that I can in some way metamorphize such human beings and persuade them to view their psychopathy as a set of gifts and a much greater prize beyond their need to kill if only they will continue to climb the mountain within and take on the challenge of creating the philosophers stone. Many serial killers have an abnormally high or low IQ – to those that have a high one, whose articulation and self-awareness of their own acts is immense and supplies details few of us would ever think on which to dwell or recapture in a retelling of events – I address my voice in the wind.

But it should be vividly apparent now that magic and the manipulation of forms and forces is most effective when it is invisibly done, through narrative and story-telling – without exposing the bones, ligaments or joints of the intention writhing beneath its structure. Only today I visited Hanging Rock whereby I learned my companion had never been despite being told she'd be taken there and when I enquired why it was that her ex-partner believed that four girls had disappeared there and it was an evil place. The Picnic at Hanging Rock is fictional. Joan Lindsay's book however took Australia by storm and there are accounts of it in newspapers treating it as a real event – much like HG Wells 'War of the Worlds' fooled many British radio listeners into thinking an alien invasion was genuinely taking place. Such evident gullibility is not to be scorned or ridiculed but understood as a hypnosis that can take even the most hardened sceptic through narrative – most, form their world-view from it, from the tellings of science or religion and are only too happy to reel off the facts that make the sky blue genuinely believing such to be an incontrovertible truth not a fantastical pyramidal program of fear management. And so, time and time again, the POWER of forms to dominate our reality is shown while remaining all the while occult and secret to those it dominates.

As I've said the ego must be tricked, snuck up on and manipulated unseen – it cannot see the wires or the undermesh, it cannot know it is being driven into a cage or it will fight like nothing else fights making the chase for change, futile. I have prevented terrorists, altered racists, defused killers and both made and unmade criminals in the way I have held and spoken. To be formless allows me to take on any form – convincingly and not unauthentically, I am a complex person I have a lot in me, many sides, many names, countless faces – but I have been striving to become one. To merge All of THEM into One of THEM. Completely mad, utterly sane – exhausted from the juggling and the splits in my worlds – but life – life, persists, and so I continue to write.

ALLUVIAL

Beguiling and mysterious – the psychopathy of the serial killer has been a dark fascination for generations of curious, morbid and desperate human beings since their label-sake emergence in the dawn of the Industrial Age. The paragon ability of such chameleons to blend into and fulfil an exacting life in such a way as to leave all around them vivified via the roles they adopt to make themselves a virtuous actor in society is often shattered leaving those around them in shock and awe when the dark ferocity of such a being is revealed amid a horrifying litany of oft-grisly discoveries and trail of battered and brutalised bodies.

However – is that ‘perfection’ – a false face, or a second face of the being that fits that label? Is the ‘deception’ to conceal hidden intentions and a double-life – or does such a killer really mean ‘both’ of his roles? Is the outcost of such a paragon, who can in fact meet the impossible bar of such a magnanimous creature that society craves to fill its ranks with – who gives and gives and is loved, admired and affected for the better by all of those around him because of his acts of charity, kindness, Love – an energy cost paid for with the subsequent serial killing? I know the alchemical kernel of the perfect human being, an evolved First Human is to be found in the psychopathy of the serial killer.

The ‘deliberate blending’ and creation of a societally beneficial ‘double-life’ is a set of forms powered by a force that often far outstrips in beneficence, intensity and charity those who. may we say “actually are”, to an extent selfless and angelic, desiring naught but the increase happiness and decreased suffering of human beings. Whether it is the immense effort undertaken to conceal their real nature – those deceptive acts are nonetheless beneficial – and often markedly so and out of the ordinary in the spectrum of good deeds. Their ‘first-face’ may be a mask but it is also an illusion that has real-world effects and benefits to those around them. Is a corporation any dissimilar? Using a brand trademark around which are wrapped marketing campaign and PR to sell a product, give to charity, provide jobs, but may equally be devastating the environment, ruining lives, destroying people – often, indirectly, far down the chain such as loggers killing natives to claim timber resources – or firing a vulnerable employee after 30 years of service?

Yet for all the devastation wreaked to get that dollar – is that not a similar outcost for the price of delivering Goodness? The First Human, the better human being, the evolution of our species bears the key traits of a psychopathic killer – abject detachment for life, precision of action + economy of movement/thought, charisma, charm, hyper-focus, an ability to do terrible deeds in the same breath as good, but – none of the same neuroses. No hatred of women, no broken chains of emotional development, they are all of the Love without the killing. The serial killer is the egg, a primordial stage of evolution overwhelmed by itself and unsure of its own arrival – distorted and principled by the cold scratchings of aeons of relentless religion, a monotheistic brain psychanic, and a non-individuated psyche pushed about by forces that mars it beauty, its clarity and its blinding light. Such psychopathy, such devastating movement when they move, such unstoppable escapism from analysis and observation by continually changing to meet the observer – is the early stage of the vessel, from which the First Human, a better man, will grow.

Blessed with the impenetrable darkness of a soul capable of terrific Destruction brought under supra-personal yolk by such a soul – and the Transformative power of the razor-vision of a Killer to spot gaps, spaces, opportunities, in the Sinister Grotesque of events – a predators instinct to understand the ebb and flow of forms and the right moment where each action need be injected; someday this ferocious set of abilities will be employed by more than this one to identify opportunities where choices can be made, moments can be seized to enhance life to channel Pure Love – without the need to refuel such Giving with Blood, without the outcost presently demanded by human weakness : such Hate is the past and such Love is the future. You will know us when you stand near us – we will be radiating a trembling undercurrent of terrifying Violence powering authentic Kindness. We will have eyes of black cold that will force our will anyway it needs to be done – that shine and twinkle with a spirit you haven't seen since the Beginning. And then, then you will Remember.

THE FRENZIED SWITCH

Alchemically speaking – Though the urge of which I speak that visits a few, dominates, stalks us from youth in every pretty face and the blinding mesmer of innocence and gods light in their eyes fixes us like deer, calling it forth, teasing the terror to rise – and throughout our youth, temptation is overwhelming, washing upon our shores of control, eroding our sanity, our reason, our restraint with its whips, its jibes, its relentless torrents – of agonising emotional barbs – we must at all costs hold back on becoming the Monster. There is a moment that will come to you – a zenith of tolerance, that will beg your being to submit, to succumb totally to the primality, the waves of sweet destructive impulse surging over our Rock, and rip their pieces to pieces and pieces. But you must turn back at the edge – right before you take God and the Devil hand in hand and that burning rage of ferocity erupts. The temptation will be like nothing you have ever experienced before – nothing – and you will want to sate the monster, with dopamine, with serotonin, with adrenaline, with enacting your will to power without watchers, without guardians present. Do not emerge from your chrysalis early – do not compromise and tatter flesh as your trophy. Do not let the animal rage undo your potential. The gateway to the First Human lies beyond – the transformative metamorphosis of our special gifts into a far greater butterfly effect... but you cannot attain it from base human being, and besides – there are far harder, more challenging, more rewarding and deserving prey for ones such as us. Leave the women alone – there are monsters to hunt.

I REMEMBER

If Jung is right, and we suppress aspects of ourselves to form the constellation that is our sense of who we are at the expense of creating a shadow – I am the first counterfactual serial killer in history to successfully suppress and control his compulsions – and write about it.

How strange to have met God without any intention to do so, a vision that shaped me so strongly, but to have never met or felt the Devil in over 30 years of deliberate trying. Why could that be?

I am bemused at the grace and ease which opportunity affords itself should it ever have been required, and I see the plasma trail of the sinister grotesque webbing its tendrils across time and space and those spaces in between where one makes one vanish. I feel... like Jack the Ripper gripping a flower.

I feel the desire to be a destroyer. Not just of some people but of worlds, systems, regimes, ideas, patterns, and injustice. I rage against evil because I am the perfect suppression of evil. In my writing those shapes and capacities are evident. “Be more than you appear to be, “Remember”, “may THEY watch over you”.... old whispers in new forms.

And in the beginning, I set out to glow and simultaneously set everything to burn. Fighting furiously and capriciously with the two wolves that bid me go one way one moment, then the other the next – a crazed, chaotic slave to his inner demons and repressions. But I have been dutiful in the occult these many years. The flower I grip – it is Blake’s wildflower.

I have learned to make friends with my shadow and integrate my destroyer. To accept him as part of me and accept that I desire to destroy. That inside me is a prideful, vengeful, wrathful entity once bitterly disappointed with the world in which he found himself. That should I need to, I will tear through you, but unless there is a need, I simply sidestep you and go around.

But there are Other gifts. Charisma loosens secrets, charm pacifies nerves, guards are let down, vulnerability is exposed, the Self is revealed. Trust is gained. But here the path differs... there is no ulterior motive but Empowerment. Yours. I don’t want your blood, your sex, your flesh, your struggle, your terror, your power, your death – I don’t want any of that like my weaker brethren want it. I want your evolution. Freed of fear and thrall to forms. That’s all I want. For you to Arise.

Take he who slurred my temple – bumping into someone who knows his partner, I did not ask her name or elicit subtle enquiries to find and terrorise and intimidate like AWD and Drakon Covenant made a practice of. There is no need to take it there. Always that restraint – but too that feeling of a frayed leash that could snap if not for but who holds the reins.

And my entire life, that nagging feeling. Of being Put here, Returned here to ... Atone? Like I've done this all before, an eternal number of times. That this is my last chance to show remorse, to ... prove myself, my values, my honour, my love, my Lord.

There is no Christianity in that feeling – there is and was no holy Christ – but there is God; beyond all the pale strictures that represent them by man; a power of blinding Love, Grace and Peace.

And he stopped me from slaughtering you. Now I stop me. He split me into the Temple of THEM; the many. Legion.

And I have struggled to bring them back together. Was tasked to. And so, I have.

⊕ ⊕ ⊕

I remember.

SOME NOTES ON THE DYNAMISM OF INSIGHT

I learned it well and once before that the Initiate knows when to move on from the Insight Role. I have given a chronological order of some insight roles – but they are not all here. There was also in the interim my role as an Author since having never been particularly good at getting my writing into any sort of format and lazy about it I eventually founded the Black Glyph Society and co-founded the Temple of THEM both of which proved successful extension of my will. Some other roles are too private or incriminating to share. My anonymity gives me some leeway in being open and honest about my path – but it is not a get out of jail free card.

I should also make clear, that whilst the chronology of insight roles given here follows a linear order, and is to the best of my knowledge the most accurate order – these roles did overlap on occasion – but it was a long time ago and I cannot be of any further assistance sorting them. If I were asked about any one of them I could provide more information on all my insights, experiences, what I learned, and so on – but I cannot be sure of the exact order because of the overlap. In all these roles I lived the culture, adopted the ways of speaking, living, acting to the best of my ability. For before most of this, I was just intellectual and theoretical in my thinking. But following my dynamic extensive sets of Insight Roles I began to fill out my shape, my place, my aura and my first-hand knowledge of things – not as they were said to be, but as they were.

Through my adoption and impression of the Order's strict rules of fitness I found the impetus to quit smoking and gave up cigarettes and marijuana. When I say that the ONA gave me strength – I really mean purpose. I could have done these things without the Order, being always possessed of a steely determination to make things happen – but for no other reason than to make them happen on some personal scale with no sense of where I was going or why I was doing them – I.e. with no master plan. My life had been about taking down the Christian Empire, even well before I encountered the Order. But somewhere along the line I became a bit lost, indulged in sex, drugs, drink and heavy metal searching for greater meaning to my life and become rather despondent about finding it. Around this time I had been since 18, a raging drunk renowned for being able to drink copious amounts of alcohol day after day in rabid binges. My consumption of alcohol nearly killed me dozens of times some of which experiences I have detailed in my first diary of a Devilworshipper. But after discovering ONA I began to change shape – becoming far more aggressive, centred and ambitious. I began to see that there was more to life, a purpose beyond the immediate indulgence of things and a path, a succession of attainments – and it appealed greatly.

I had been writing quite a lot, reading everything I could find, diligently by the ONA and anything on anyone they suggested to have been their influence or to whom they were reactionary. I had gotten skinny, malnourished and weak spending all that time in my room creating the Naos Tarot. So, having been looking into insight roles I began one that would challenge me greatly. I joined a gym for two years using it excessively. My aim was to get fit and ready to undertake the 7FW's harder challenges. At least every second day, working my body as hard as I could until it refused to work anymore; I downed protein shakes and was eating steaks and sandwiches for every other meal. I wanted to push it as far as I could – but I didn't really understand how the body worked – that you couldn't do that – and Andy often turned me away when I turned up the next day saying I had to let my body rest. Sometimes I listened to him, sometimes I didn't. I learned about Lactic Acid pretty quickly. To counteract this [Is it apparent by now that I'm always looking for way to cheat natural forces?] I looked into soft martial arts and stretching exercises.

I opted not to do Yoga – and chose to begin practising a soft art called Ba Dua Jin. It was an impressive art and I was surprised to experience Chi and deep meditation through it – physical experiences that overtook my rational mind and showed me a new world of biology. I practiced Ba Du Jin with the intention to start Chi Kung – but it was required to do BDJ for at least a year before attempting Chi Kung. Always one with reverence for Eastern philosophies and martial arts I wisely listened. BDJ helped me overcome lactic acid build-up and to achieve deep states of relaxation as well as strengthen my muscles. Back at the gym, I avoided steroids though they were available through various channels, wanting to do it on my own.

Following some of the instructions from my mentor Sath – who remarked that using the gym was a good physical step for me but was only building my ego-armour – making my ego hyper-sensitive and overly muscular – I decided she was right, I was getting big and also more aggressive, but to what avail? I needed to exercise the right muscles, the fighting muscles to go with my fighting mind. A few months after being at the gym, and having taken the step of seeing a naturopath who gave me Reneel to cleanse my liver, which had been severely harmed by alcohol – my instructor Andy informed me the cloud in my eyes was gone.

My second Insight Role was a Skinhead role during which I deliberately adopted the ethos and geometric shape of a rabid racist. I learned about the power of perceived authority, hypocrisy, bigotry, the illegitimate stance of many political groups as a cover for justification of violence and the economics that overpowers it all ... I used to think race was some all powerful mode by which people segregated themselves – but it turned out that it was economics that was far more powerful. Economics brought supposed races at war together in truces; economics existed and found a way to flourish inside any system; economics over-ruled any abstract division of race, honour, power; Nations were founded and broken in its operations. I learned to judge each person individually, by their character, not their colour. You could do so much more with economics than you ever could with race – which is why Some Jews were tolerated or escaped the Nazi's culling as business partners despite the outward machismo and political machines against them in any positions of power. Just as one instance. But I'd later learn that 'character' was a fragile constant too. This is recorded in my Second diary of a DevilworshipR.

Following this role, I felt I needed a role that moved beyond this exhausting temperament to one of tolerance. And so I chose to take my place in a Nursing Home as a cleaner for a third role. My insights recorded for this are on death, depression, isolation, but also indomitable human spirit and the necessity of laughter for all human souls and captured in Fading. I will admit that during this time whilst painting, I grew restless and painted satanic symbols on the walls before painting them over. But I generally grew into my role to such a degree it was hard to leave. Whilst contemplating the Home I decided to test my mettle – for now I had seen that it was a mere matter of wearing the right face, clothes and actions to fit in anywhere and be seen as that which you were actually not. I was on the road to illustrating for myself that it was impossible to screen someone out if they adopted the forms, the currents, the attitude, the philosophy your organisation demanded. I began to understand how the Cold War tactics of espionage must have worked, how spies infiltrated the most secure installations. They just relied on appearance.

So, I applied for a job at the ABS as my fourth role – now detailed in my account on the L316 Nexion; where I also overheard a conversation concerning the application process of entry into ASIO – the Australian Security Intelligence Office. It seemed to be merely a matter of ticking the right boxes in psychological tests, and just enough of the wrong ones so you didn't appear “normal” or too smart to fall for the trap. During my role with the ABS I learned that the supposed ‘paranoia’ I had harboured but never been able to prove was to some extent justified now. There were other people watching us civilians – recording our movements and so on for various authorities, mapping details on satellite maps. We used GNAF, Geographic National Address Finder which does not show detail of physical objects, but is a scaled back secure version used by the Transport Authority that can show property lines, roads, addresses etc. It can also show whatever installation or location, you type in – including unrecorded military, and government installations that do not appear on public maps, etc. In regard to filling out the census, only the military and the government seemed exempt from providing details.

In regard to the Census it is officially compulsory and those who do not comply are ticked off on a list of reasons for not doing so – including political, religious or just hate the government. Resolution is attempted but a fine issued in the event of non-cooperation. If you write your details in red pen the ICR software cannot read it because it operates using infrared – making your form likely to be one of the 1-2 million transcribed by hand. However, one crucial matter not made public is that whilst compulsory, there are two sectors of Census data; the first is the most important and the only legally compulsory section people must complete; their name, their address, their gender, and how many people are living in the address. This is all that is required. The rest of the more personal details are suggested to be compulsory but are actually not – this forms the second sector comprising the rest of the census document but the ABS keeps this a secret in order, as it does many other operations, to ensure public compliance and trust in gaining personal information.

This information was all kept, originally in warehouses with boxes of paper – but fires decimated paper records resulting in a loss of records from a certain period onward, so records are now held electronically. This personal Information is given to the Transport Authority for them to make plans concerning structural integrity, infrastructure, public transport needs, additional water pipes and so on – but is also supplied to other firms my superior was not willing to comment on. This insight role was an eye-opener – since I processed a number of individuals whose profession was surveillance and listening to conversations, it is only natural that there follows a step upward from this position of surveillance and mapping where the technology is more powerful, more revealing, and more comprehensive. After sitting at a desk for months, in an office working 13-hour days, I was feeling I was helping the Magi control and dominate people by mapping their co-ordinates; though I balanced this by allowing anyone who referred to themselves as a Satanist to escape certain measures of scrutiny we were required to point out or mark a box for. But the incompetence got to me – they would spend an hour telling us how to code something and then ten minutes after doing it, we'd be called in for a new meeting to explain changes. This continued ad infinitum.

There were other considerations as well – largely my impressions that I was helping the Government as a cog to grease the wheels. To some extent you had to in order to be there long enough to observe what was going on – but after sitting at a desk so long I'd lost a lot of muscle, motivation, ambition and physical fitness – I required a more active challenge to counteract my last.

[I should point out, that my views toward destruction/disruption of the government or of architecture, etc. are no longer as unevenly destructive as they used to be. Through psychology, sociology and economics I have a more balanced understanding of the role of Government bodies, what they do and the alternative; such as how people behave as a mass/collective without such measures in place. I am infinitely sceptical of traditional methods of motivation such as race, us and them, and other appeals to act for this or that reason; since forms are no longer all that I calculate but also the many levels of human behaviour, habit, to solve problems, differently. That said, I am one of the few top percentage of the world able to write, read, speak freely, share my thoughts, and not have to worry overly much about war, famine, disease, corruption or poverty. I am beyond lucky and privileged to be in that position merely by being born where I have been. I have come to see, that such things above and many more are all complex issues – which are beyond my understanding or power to change – tied up not just in surface goings on but in the deep labyrinths of the individual human mind and their experiences, economics, environment and personal relationship with their psyche.

The juggernaut of humanity is never as simple as forms encapsulate it to be – and I am ever wary of the written word which has a natural geometry for enclosing such complexities in simplistic formats and closed loops, as is the nature of language and grammar inclined to do, which is in part a deceptive suggestion what is written about can be closed the same way. This may seem at odds with the outward statements of the ONA – and it probably is – but the outward statements of the ONA serve a purpose, for a time, until such time, the outward statements of the ONA, serve a new purpose.]

Following my leaving of the ABS who tried to convince me to stay – more because I was doing a good job than from any personal attachment – I had taken up an interest in Ninjutsu. It began with the sighting of fliers and casual reading. Then I found a Dojo.

Following 4 years at Ninjutsu and 1 year at Muay Thai I applied for the Army. My Army role did not eventuate – though I passed all the tests and so on, there was an 11 month wait, doing medicals and just waiting for my placement to be processed. The fire went out inside during this wait and I abandoned pursuing this role in favour of another.

It was during the last 3 years that with all that I had learned I had fashioned myself in such a way that Terrorism and Culling suggested themselves to me as natural extensions of all that had come before. I was now in such a position as I was trained to kill somebody and had become good enough to get a job pretty much anywhere. But my Wyrld has not been to blow things up or deal out justice to thugs [in the strict sense that I kill them]. What is my Wyrld? Well, It seems that I do not yet know – and have been merely following my intuition along the path to where it lies. Still – I am only 32 and as I understand it my age has a direct bearing and impact on my approach to life and therefore my understanding – just as I look back now and see more about my life at 18 than I did at 18 – maybe I will understand my Wyrld when I am older then, maybe around 40-45, or maybe not. Either way, ad accumululum Infinitum – I will be continuing to follow my intuition, feeling my way through the dark, and recognising the silent unmoving patches of occasional stagnancy when I am not sure about what I am doing for what they really are; signs of progress, signs of life.

What is Dynamism? Dynamism, to me, is knowing what you need – going to one extreme and then the other, and then going in a new direction altogether. It's about commitment not to one role, but to an ongoing procession of learning, using one role to power the next in an intermeshed learning that never stops – and always challenges the conscious geometry of the ego, shaking its stultifications and assumptions, conclusions and prejudices loose. There was nothing random about my choice of roles – they were chosen to build upon one another, complimenting or contradicting the role before. I didn't always have foresight into my next role – but I knew when to move on and somehow where to move on to based on what I needed to grow, on what the role I was in had uncovered for me, what was shown to me to be my weakness in or fear of, illustrated to me how little I didn't know or suggested areas where I could use more light. And when the light began to dawn the divisions began to collapse; words began to drain themselves of power; and forms began turning transparent.

I will say – that my vitriolic ultra-cynicism as well as host of other philosophical and practical, magical and mental considerations; stopped me from taking two particular roles too far – joining or becoming a terrorist faction and culling. My notes on culling are recorded in Culling: A Contemplation – I had built myself up to the task and stopped short – a wise decision in my mind. I am far from a pacifist – and I hold no illusions about violence to solve problems; in many cases I have solved them with only the threat of violence. Killing is killing – it can be for right, it can be for wrong. But if I don't agree with the motives for killing, the reason for killing someone, I won't be doing it just to prove anything to anyone. Do I believe in self-defence, absolutely I do, and I'll go so far as to kill to preserve myself, if I think I have to. But on my terms, when and if, the situation presents itself.

And, my notes and creative suggestions on/for terrorism were recorded in an older WordPress; Dark Planet, that was banned after its content came to the awareness of its moderators – heightened by internal activity during a brief clash of forms and figures. I do know some of those suggestions were copied resulting in news – but disruptive news not destructive news. As I look around and hear from people who tell me they saw my work at a fair, or won it as a prize, or it influenced them to do this or that including very dark acts some of which, where possible, I have felt compelled to step in and Stop – I have realised that whilst it may seem as if a world away my writings are disconnected thoughts that I just fire off or put on a blog – there are and have been repercussions to it. I find myself in a position of unexpected responsibility, so I suppose it is lucky for the world that I am not an evil man even as I use evil. [Perhaps against itself.] And perhaps therefore a failure as a Satanist, but somewhat more successful as the shadowy sower of the seeds of one of Them.

It is – all too easy – to use form against the mind of someone with mere suggestion or what suffices for reason via an elegant or convincing appeal to the senses, emotions or logic. Some of my early thoughts on the power of the ONA, as one example close to me that did have the power to cause action through suggestion, are also recorded in my second diary under the Psychology of Satanism. Though ONA has grown much more complex in its outward forms – the inner human tradition of how forms are processed remains essentially the same. There are signs however, I think, that this tradition of perception has been sufficiently assaulted to shake loose some of the time-worn habits of apprehension and comprehension toward a new and more acute, powerful, incisive Sinister derivative – still in a minority but steadily taking hold in the forms of the Magi where it was not able to take root before due to its elitism.

The enduring factor that remains a constant after all these and continuing insight roles – is the hypocrisy set up by adherence to a form, hypocrisy of the self and the projection that cannot help but arise to ensnare and limit being through a mode, whatever it may be. In some ways I suppose this begins to temper the severity of Insight Roles as time goes by – or perhaps this temperance just provides the catalyst for an eventual compensatory atomic time bomb...

With insight roles – What I thought would be the case – was seldom ever the case in terms of what I encountered, how I felt, what the outcome would result in, all of which afforded me rich, luxurious sensory experiences and immersion into real world situations which changed my physiology and added immeasurably to my perception, problem solving skills, and empathy with real forces, real people. Rather than sitting home reading a book about such things and agreeing with authors and merely layering my consciousness – I sought to contact and commune with my unconscious part of my psyche and the untapped potential of my body by giving it what it needed – Food. I could of course have just agreed that Nazism or racism was this or that – but now I know why – and can explain it – add to it – and chastise those who write about it being this or that for what they leave out or use to imbalance the actuality of it.

In terms of inward and outward changes, or of perspective – I could not have predicted the experiences, the emotions, the conflicts, the resolutions, the people, the fun, the danger, the strength, the work, the struggle, the determination, the rewards, the sadness, the outcome ... much of these experiences were often only understood much later on when the immediacy of the role had subsided and I had time to look back or compare it with a present role.

Form – or what I perceive and call Form – is the most powerful modality I have researched – the most immediate effective black magic I have encountered. Capable of assuming any shape any person is capable of anything. To cite Joseph Conrad “inside all human beings there beats a heart of darkness” – and a maxim to which I hold – “All human beings are Scorpions”.

My Thanks to L316 Nexion for hosting my thoughts.

Temple of THEM

TRIAD OF THE WARRIOR, SORCERER, FARMER: INSIGHT INTO INEXORABLE SIMPLICITY

Triad of the Warrior, Sorcerer, Farmer: Insight into Inexorable Simplicity I suppose it was the next logical step. From the paradigms of the Warrior, through Sorcerer, to a sudden profound connexion and desire to connect with the innate forces of THEM through farming and plants. I have grown up around those who were always in their gardens; watched my mother transform our backyard into a vegetable extravaganza and recall the clink of her spade or the piles of weeds sitting on the driveway as a boy. But it never occurred to me to involve myself, I took no interest in gardening whatsoever until this latest stage of my life and the most recent. It is a fact that I have always been awed and worshipful of nature – drawn to it as if it were some Other – its forces are humbling, its majesty unmatched. But I used to drive past people in my car and see them sweeping the pavement, and I would think to myself – what on earth is the point. Don't they have anything better to do? And yet – now I am like them, lovingly tending and landscaping my property to produce a bountiful harvest of fresh fruit and vegetables. Like the electric guitar, mathematics or composing music, the green world of gardening has always seemed beyond my ken;- previously I suppose I had no need for it.

And yet, it is as though something has drawn me back to this great love and puerile childishness of mine for Earth and nature – as if something else in my spirituality had exhausted the need for forms and structures words and ideas and found a place of comfort in amongst the chaotic insurgence of plant life which will not be stopped – never be stopped – and which will dominate the dustiest sand bowl, the air on the thinnest mountain, survive even on the cusp of volcanic rock, or thrive beneath the tremendous depths of the sea. Few things are as sexual as plants (as possessed of numinous drive to Be), as powerfully insistent, as beautiful, sublime or joyous to tend. As I have been brought to them through an exhaustion of my previous interests I have found them to have a language of their own – a sublime perfection and a life that seems so alien and magical I ask myself how I did not see it all so much sooner.

They don't have voices in the traditional sense, they don't hold long conversations on satanic tactics and strategy, they are not friends or associates, they do not require catalogues of information – they are simple and yet so very complex it delights me that I do not understand them. They are devoid of humanity and its problems, its plagues, its issues – they are some Other species which I have lost contact with subsumed in a modern world that denudes me of the need to Remember them, their purpose, gifts, importance, life. I am trying though. Economically there is pressure to turn to these arts of growing things to offset the rising prices of everything with its army of sprays and pesticides. If things are going to change, it does not require the brute force of warriors, or the subtle manipulations of the sorcerer, or the empathy with the land wrought from living of it of the Farmer but all three. How to teach this third skill if I am not at all attuned to this way of life?

Despite having absolutely no interest in caring for the gardens, tending the rockeries, weeding the dirt – and faced with a desperately overgrown property tangled with five years of neglect as I forged my writing career and let my role as Ra online consume me – I have already learned so much. I have come to understand how much change I can make to the landscape about me – perhaps more than I ever did as a Warrior that could use violence and war to bring something to its knees, or as a Sorcerer who drew down the forces of THEM and created a magical order of Undividuals who could transcend forms causing change in the way many people thought about all manner of things – a ripple effect that has since travelled well across the world touching thousands allowing me to appreciate so much about the power of one and the connectivity of all. But this carpet of wild and weird, diverse and unique entities living all round me, under me, above me, growing at its own speed, its own rules, with its own unknown directives – atomic, chemical, organic, textural, floral, brilliance suddenly entices me toward it like never before, and I have spent months now speaking to others, reading books – but more than ever before, and so unusual for me as I love to calculate, control, intellectually grasp all the things I learn or study – down on my knees in the dirt, observing, experimenting, watchful – hopeful – watering plants, digging out weeds, planting seeds, hoeing, shovelling, pruning, tending.

So many of my fellow THEM had been involved with plants (Qv. Them's private group "The Otherland" was one such place where discussions were heavily focused on entheogenic use of plants.) concerning themselves with seeking out, growing or identifying substances that grew wild – from mushrooms to ergot, datura to cannabis.- speaking often of different plants and trees, shrubs and flowers with medicinal or chemical properties and I stood on the outside, stranger to a world I did not understand, watching the foreign exchanges and marvelling even then at the camaraderie and the passion and warmth between the speakers as they traded information. But I stood always on the threshold – I could remark on drugs, on my experiences with them but when it came to any sort of experience with plants I was a foreigner.

I realise now that I was an inert participant in some secret world that has dominated the speech of humanity from before time – an ageless exchange of information about these awesome things that I have so often taken for granted or ignored. It was not just an information trade on a handful of objects, catalogued to provide some effect or another – but an entire paradigm, a perceptual moving with the world that these speakers possessed or sought to possess. A closeness to the Earth that I had admittedly (unwittingly) watered down with rhetoric in my deluge of monologues about the necessity of this without knowing that there was a vast absence of this peace I feel now, from my life. It was driving home the same point I have made again and again in vain about apprehending forces as they are – and separating them from the forms that carry them. It is not possible to speak from experience if one is anchored to a computer writing about the same experiences. Though building an Illuminati (or creating the seeds for one) required it these many years past – I can now write about new experiences, because I have freed myself from my online role.

With my extraction from the online nexus as Ra, I took on a job as a landscaper to get back out into the sunshine and begin building back up my muscles which had grown soft and somewhat pale from years furiously tapping away at a keyboard building the mythos, membership and legacy of the Temple of THEM. As I laboured alone in a field, the sun warming my skin at my new job and I exerted myself to clear a space to plant trees – thoughts pervaded my mind of political slogans proffering the importance of work, of capitalism, of capital, of paganism, of the blood and sweat of farmers immemorial growing and producing almost everything I eat – and the ancient importance of the harvests and the common sentiment that if the crop failed it was often the difference between life or death. What I was doing in this field was one of the oldest human endeavours – one of the reasons why Gods came to be and held such sway and why it was so crucial the people believe their gods satisfied and appeased through sacrifices and offerings. I thought about the pagan rebirth symbolism of the tree, of the egg. The rich connexions of these simple acts to the wider world.

And slowly, as I dug out the tufts of thick-strapped grass – my world was widening. From humble understanding (experience) that I would not break or die if I lifted some rocks, pulled out some grass, or dug some holes I began to set my own house in order – working day after day clearing weeds and scrub, trimming overgrown trees and shrubs, clearing tangled paths and choked gardens – not consciously I think – but drawn somehow closer, inexorably to the empathy I am now developing with the land – Remembering in a whole new way a new facet of things that had been lost to me. In many ways it was realising that I could in fact do gardening;- could barrow, pull weeds, plant trees, dig trenches, fix things and was not as completely useless at green-thumbng as I had previously felt that made something in me click. Out in the field ripping out tundra grass in the hot sun to clear space as a volunteer seemed to burn something away in my then present mindset – it was the simpler physical exertion, the fact that no thinking was required, no long tracts, persuasions or arguments to get a point across, explore one, or explain something that made the experience profoundly different. It was all so simple, so straight-forward, and it was euphorically rewarding.

It was as if all the tendrilled monsters with snapping jaws biting into my clarity of mind and stirred up my brain keeping it restless, cluttered, tangled, overwrought, divided – that devoured my thoughts, taking a ceaseless barrage of turns clamping their raging fangs, then another, and another deep into my attention and focus and tearing me away from the world to occupy my role as the online Ryan Anschauung suddenly lost their long-established potency. It was like a weight had been lifted and I suddenly went deeper, understood more, achieved a new empathy with this process, this transformation – a blind scribe suddenly visceral witness to a pulsing chthonic alchemy. I was starting to get it – I was since a few years previous beginning to notice the seasons, watching and noting the changes in the plants and trees – noting the change in weather, the colour changes in the leaves or the trees dropping them in heaps. I had written many years ago about a Walk I had where these things were prominent, these perceptions starting to intensify – but they have never felt as strong as they do now, nor did I act as practically on the feelings as I do now.

My comments were genuinely felt but often stopped at being musings. (Time has never been something I have been well connected to – even meticulous as I am in my writings I often get dates especially earlier years mixed up or wrong through lack of memory and no ability to accurately recall the chronology of many events. See Diary of a Devilworshipper II for my explanation – laying the blame squarely at the feet of my alcoholism and a dozen or more fights where I took damage to my skull. Time is as a construct entirely ‘take it or leave it for me’ – I feel Time is something others run on/by.) This time, in my early thirties, I was becoming aware of the other lives around me that were not mine – a life-centred expansion of all of those living beings dotted around me with a force unrivalled that kept them appearing, struggling to sprout, surviving incredible odds and growing anywhere, anytime, slowly reclaiming cleared spaces with inexorable persistence whenever I did not sustain my human influences over their processes. The seasons have taken on a new (or should that be old?) pivotal role, re-engaging me with the land as part of it and firing some ancient or forgotten memory of knowing how to do all this. I struggled at first and still now with more advanced concepts and ambitions to change my landscape around me, to work with it, to grow things on it – but in a short time I have transformed not only my backyard but myself.

I feel somehow more free, dis-connected from the intellectual wiring of the role of Ra online dealing with administration and offering guidance in dry written words – I feel like I am now turning with the earth, rotating with the seasons, setting my course by the stars. Though I am only a young man and it seems silly to speak as if I have some knowledge of age being only merely 33 years old – my experiences with the External Adept Rite and within the Temple of THEM had shown me the multiplicitousness of Time and how it could pass as many streams simultaneously – and through many powerful insights experiencing this, occupy and flow seamlessly in such a way that to explain it automatically suggests a paradox.

Or to say it another way -I feel that I feel Change much more strongly and more connected to it as it does, than ever before. The weather, the winds, rains, heat, cold, have all taken on a more immediate level of notice to me. I am new to this yet – and my first crop is yet to die and allow me take seeds and prepare the ground for the next season, but the excitement I feel is tangible over such a thing as remembering (learning) how to grow vegetables and actually doing it. I feel like a piece of me, of my ability, of my memetic heritage is being recalled... and, I did not know it was missing. From empty sandy dry (what I thought was very poor sandy rocky soil in which nothing could ever grow) I watched in amazement as one of the thirty silver-beet plants I sowed with my son suddenly sprouted from the ground weeks after I'd thought all hope was lost. Spurred on by this unexpected super-beet thriving beyond all expectations in what I thought was a dusty useless patch of dirt in which only weeds and grass could thrive, I saw that I had made a judgement that simply did not stand up to the facts.

I realised that all I had done was put the seeds in the ground – nature had done the rest. Whatever I had thought would happen, whatever assumptions had been floating around in my head that I told myself the soil was no good, that the seeds had died, that nothing will ever grow in here – were irrelevant noise. And whilst some might hate that idea, I welcomed it like an old friend. The seeds had not grown as expected. And I had only one plant out of an expected (arrogantly! Lol) thirty – I felt a childish delight when I noticed it had survived and watched over it, watering and weeding. I remained bemused by the salient fact that all I had done was put the seeds in the ground – nature had done the rest. By All the Gods I love Nature... (Sometimes forget I Am nature.)

As the weeks passed the plant grew stronger and shot higher and higher until it was a running joke among us that the plant should be trying to reach the height of the small tree beside it, mistakenly thinking that it was its mother and that was the height it should be. I did not pay overly much attention as I was concentrating on ripping out grass with a foggy indistinct sense (intuition...) that this clearing of the overgrown yard would lead somewhere if I just kept at it. But every now and then would check on it and was again and again surprised at the way it grew, the things it did, the way it was all unfolding. And it grew larger until we began to then joke it would top the fence. Or that it was mounting an effort to become Me – and that we'd come out and it would be wearing my clothes and sporting a shaved head and we'd have to beat it to death to stop it from replacing me. I spoke with my mother who said she'd never seen such a tall silver-beet (Which was until recently over 2m) and that I should keep the seeds as they would be the foundation for a superb crop next year. Extraordinary things happen with fairly steady frequency in my life. Not all of them favourable or good – but very strong forces of synchronicities govern my life. *Often it drives me mad – but I have infinite PATIENCE and yet none at all.

Plants have taught me more than humans have about the inexorable passage of time and the patience of involving myself with something that cares nothing for my perception of time but does its own things, as and when. As it grew, I kept at the yard, bit by bit making a dent in the terrible mess it had become. The silver-beet continued to grow until it was even taller than the fence, and just over my height. It has now started to die and I will be taking the seeds off it when it browns for next year and for friends. Impressed by the fact that “I grew” this giant plant in what was obviously excellent soil for it I began slowly clearing other patches and putting in more seeds. As my cleared and prepared gardens beds began to replace and outnumber the weed-strewn areas of the yard I began advancing more and more using weed killer to control grass verges, kill off weedlings growing through the pavement and regain some control over the state of it all. I read the backs of the seed packets for tips on where best to plant the seeds and followed advice where given from Owy on how to make it all work. I largely have my wife, mother, brother and his wife to thank for enabling me to get to grips with how to plant a garden – how often to water, how to keep pests off them, how easy it was to just take them out the ground from somewhere and move them, how certain plants could only be planted at certain times of year – how sun, shadow and wet were integral aspects to assisting them to prosper and answers to other questions I'd have never thought to ask.

And as I did more – old inklings, memories, feelings about what to do – snatches of things I'd seen, overheard, read, learned, been told began to occasionally filter through and I sometimes moved as if an old hand at it – just knowing what was right as if the skills of my ancestors who lived off the land were emerging through my being, somehow remembered through millions of years of repetition and coding and some ineffable hidden connection to them and the tens of thousands of years people had been doing all of this. And when I began to take an interest in my family's gardens looking at how they had done things, admiring their layouts, skills and choices it was as if a whole new world opened up – a magical passionate wonderland on which each spoke of with joy and beamed with pride as they shared tips or offered cuttings. Where has this simple but powerful joy been for me? Honestly – I think I forgot it.

It's that simple. Because I never had the life-or-death pressure to remember it. I'd gotten so used to all these others doing everything for me – so much so that it didn't enter my head that there could be such importance for such skills until this late in my life. But I need to Remember – and I am Remembering, every day, more and more. Enough to plant a dozen Spring-based vegetables which are now bursting over the sides of the garden and about to explode forth loads of fresh vegetables; enough to keep them pest- and snail free with the organic aid of just chilli and garlic spray and not pesticides, to stake tomato plants and set up sticks with coloured strings to keep birds off, enough to transplant some zucchini plants which weren't getting enough sun to somewhere better by just digging them out of the ground and watering them into their new homes with seaweed water to help the roots survive the shock of being moved; enough to add little touches of personality to the garden to humanise the fences and borders that demarcate our human presence in respectful symbiosis.

That it feels so right, so synchronous to be doing this over-rides my thoughts or intellectual noise that dominates any other activities I engage in – the din of the internal chatter has begun quietening to whispers just like it did when I was drawing down my chi in meditation or exerting massive physical effort that made my muscles burn and scream in Ninjutsu training and all those voices that cluttered my brain, arranging themselves as priorities, as things I must do, no longer keep me awake, driving me mad like the mad Arab Alhazred. It's not always nice to have trained myself to see things from so many dozens of different ways each in intricate detail.

Sometimes I drink a few beers just to dull the roar of all that information chattering around in my head and take the edge of my incisive epiphanies which are as frequent as they are randomly worth writing down or absurd nonsense spilling over the sides. But – I am driving differently now – powered on some new energy, or moving on some new ley line – relaxed by knowledge of some simpler energy, the inevitable collapse of all through inexorable flux, a man wheeling through space without friction – without doubt, without playing over every conversation had or that I might have in my head, robbing me of sleep as my brain ticks over fevered and unable to rest – planning and plotting every possible outcome to control the outcome, calculating emotional responses or strategic initiatives – no. No.

For the first time in my life it is quiet in my head. I owe nothing to no-one, I have no waiting emails ready to drag me back into a web of words pulling me away from the Complex Simple under a deluge of yet more endless articulation... No. For the first time it is quiet in my head. Like a time so long ago I achieved No-stance through the Dark Lily – cutting any emerging thought to pieces with the continual visualisation of a black spinning vortex of shredding blades and shut my brain down for the day so that no thoughts consciously entered my presence of mind. (Giving me the mother of wicked migraines in the evening that followed.) But this time there is no effort to not think. And the thoughts are not urging, they are not insistent, they are not demanding, or jumbled, or trying to pour through all at once. They are the thoughts of a calmed man, who believes he understands what actually matters amidst all the things that cry out for our time and attention – all the distractions stripped, who is at peace with who he is, what he has done, might yet do in this world and has all the time he needs to do it. He no longer wrestles with his ego pulling him one way, his ideal me pulling him in another – pulling them apart so that he can never meet his own self-image. No. Tranquillity from Storms.

If I could (but perhaps I should not) express what it is I feel that makes this new interest so fulfilling I suppose I would have to say I enjoy the extreme non-humanity of it all – of truly deeply working with, being a participant of the forces of THEM, propagating plants, digging my hands in the earth, sweating and exerting energy in the labour of working to understand, expand, advance my knowledge of this world that I have newly re-discovered a profound passion for;- though I find myself many months after my departure feeling that insistent urge that has always been inside me to write down my experiences and these changes of my journey – I find it difficult to imagine that I will ever be the same man that I was even some months ago, things have snapped, fundamentally changed, priorities re-ordered and even in some cases erased. There is for me something utterly magical in observing and working with these things. They are the products of the forces I have sworn my life's interest to.

Yes, no doubt it could all be explained in technical terms what is happening and why each process is taking place, what prevents it, slow its, or speeds it up – but for once and again – new – to me, I find myself enjoying my ignorance and the slow process of just learning through patient and continued involvement with them. And yet, why, where does it all come from, why?

No matter what may be called magic or that I have called magic before – it is the purest delight to be witness (or not fast enough to witness) the incredible changes of these organisms living their lives through the cycles they travel and the surest definition of magic I know. For a guy who has spent a decade furiously ripping the fabric of all things into threads and then even smaller pieces (As a friend once said “questioning even the question of the question’s question”) in a frenzy of it says something I think that I am more than content to just let plants and flowers Be without asking too many questions about how or why. Changing someone’s bio physicality through altering their perception is a tremendous feeling (especially the boost to the ego that you might have been responsible for changing someone’s life, actions or bearing) but losing myself, relinquishing control to work among natural plants is the greatest release I have had for a very long time. I am very used to balancing everything on a very serious tightrope, desperate to keep all the balls in the air, juggling like a madman terrified my creations would not grow or not grow the way I wanted them to.

I can do very little to interfere with plants worlds – I cannot control the force(s) that propel them into Being, I have no say over whether they live or die, how fast they grow or the changes they go through. I am a passive observer, sometimes participant, and it feels so good just to be amongst them without a rigorous intellectual catalogue or detailed schemata of the science of plants. I do not feel the usual demonic need to manipulate and turn things my way through excessive study of the subject, conversations or the use of forms. I can speak with the plants in an empathic language. But it is simple and pure unlike human discussions which tangle themselves endlessly getting only more deeply mired in their own sense of importance or writing a volume in an answer only to have it come out I was desperately misunderstood. It is so emancipating not to be holding strings trying to yoke the sun. I was doing That for so long.

It is the fact that plants have their own rules that keeps me on bended knee and resisting the impulse to strip the brave new world of its secrets by plastering my brain with textbooks, facts and figures as I would any other subject to strip them off their mystery and look into the soul of the matter with a violent eye. For instance. I watched the peas grow from a few straggly seedlings into a bushy mass of curls. I patiently got up at dawns light in the darkness to give them water before the sun came up (risking the water heating up and the droplets burning their leaves). I carefully weeded them and watched as they grew bigger and more tangled – patiently waiting to see the peas form themselves being incredibly curious to see the manner in which they would. I was enthralled to see after what seemed like a long-time flowers finally begin to appear and thought to myself – this is so awesome, pods can't be far away now, I will look at the plants every day and watch them come through. But two days of unanticipated heavy rain temporarily kept me inside.

When I finally emerged after the rain had subsided, I was astonished to see fully grown pods several inches long. I wondered in amazement how so much could grow so fast, almost overnight, and chuckled that despite watching them like an eagle for just this very event to take place – I had missed it happen by a matter of a day or so. Reading this back as I edit, I can see how it sounds like I am in Love with plants. It's not the love of giving anal sex or hardcore high quality drugs, the anticipation of some longed for event to arrive, a fast drive with extremely loud music blaring or the silky enamourment of a partner whom you cannot live without – and it's not entirely the right way to word it – but it is true, I am in love with THEM, with all their forces, powerfully expressed through one of the more sublime forms through which they presence themselves in plants.

I have seen so much evidence for THEM in all my explorations but with the collapse of old affections a purer (or perhaps just different) object has arisen from the cluttered desert littered with the husks of forms I have been consumed by and then consumed. I love that plants are so full of surprises. I never know what I am going to see when I crouch down to tend my small crops now. At the time of writing, I have dug approximately 4 garden beds and am growing zucchini, potatoes, tomatoes, peas, beans, strawberries, watermelon and radishes. I have planted seeds of flowers given to me by friends that I liked the look of to fill gaps around the yard and as experiments;- putting them in different places to see if they will grow or what. I will be delighted to see what has decided to grow and where;- its fun. I have bought and am using a compost bin to create rich nutrient mulch for my plants in the coming year – and have plans to dig even more gardens. I still feel a little out of my depth as Summer comes in and I consider how the current plants will die off and how I will gather the seeds and keep them for next year just like a farmer, might, meanwhile preparing the soil for those vegetables and plants I can grow only in Autumn, Winter.

My vision (drifting direction) is to gain the competence growing crops necessary to feed my family all four seasons of the year and reduce our dependency on supermarkets for them. As is natural to me I wonder how far I can go to produce what I need. To the point where I may someday soon be able to grow and harvest my own wheat, corn, even sugar – maybe even learn how to make rope from flax, create medicines, grow psychoactive substances or gain a more comprehensive understanding of how to use plants in the huge number of ways they are used – but which I have no experience duplicating by myself. Maybe such workings will enable me the understanding with the land to harness its resources in a way I have only ever dreamed of idly – perhaps I will chance upon or develop the know-how to create electricity, use water, wind, sun powered batteries or some means of generating free sustainable heat, light – as so long ago was done countless times through necessity (no doubt remembered and forgotten many many times) but are skills that have long been neglected in a world saturated by pharmaceuticals, automotive industries and multi-national ‘food’ growers who are doing seriously terrible shit to the genetic make-up of foods. It’s all merchandise that robs us of that same Necessity to Remember how to do so many things.

From small beginnings I have transformed my overgrown, messy, tangled sprawl of yard into a (not too) neatly manicured food-producing vista. And as I return to I suppose what is working with the land, appreciating it all, learning how it grows, changes – I sense that like a house of tumbling cards, the connexions of the greater environ will come into focus as part of the greater empathy such as the night skies, the wheeling of the stars, And I will be moving with them, moving to their clocks in symbiosis as best as I can. As so often happens with a lifestyle change it reorients everything, the way you do things, the way you see things – things you only notice as the changes you implement take hold... the importance of solstice/equinox for farming, ingenious solutions for sustaining the environ, maybe even turning my attentions as I grow more confident with livestock, butchering animals for meat, or keeping chickens for eggs. Whilst not perhaps as glamorous as martial arts, or black magic, without such skills as being able to grow food, farm the land, raise or keep livestock, it is difficult to imagine how any real sustainable practical change can happen for any group of people with any set of beliefs who cannot repeat thousands of years of performing them and which form the very heart of any tribe or society that wishes to be independent or at the very least tries to be independent which presents many challenges in our modern world.

When I was getting my black belt, I thought Martial Arts was the quintessential practice people needed to adopt widely to participate in a violent insurrection of the State. When I was a Sorcerer, I believed that people needed to adopt a practice of questioning all forms and recognising the forms as only a part of forces that powered them – that all forms were at their centre mirages that controlled us through our attachment and weakness to them. Now that I am gardening with an eye to becoming a Farmer it is only natural to assume that I believe these skills are in danger of being learned too late, never learned, and their role in independence underestimated. Food, Water, Oil, Air. These forces can be spelled with just 15 letters but the omnipresent and unquestioned power with which they are used as leverage to manipulate and control individuals to Nations, property, wealth, money, LIFE – is unquestionable.

I once believed we had to attack the concept of Time, Space, Morality, and break within us the programming of these concepts because they are used to standardise and control – but all the intellectual well-wishing, political right or might, rhetoric or argument on paper or screen comes to naught without the ability to grow your own food and work with the land. Without such skills, no matter how forceful or persuasive the call to arms – nothing changes while we are forced or too complacent to rely on the system managing all our food, water, resource needs. Magical Socialists included. I'd like to think my arrangement of the appearance of the garden and yard is where my influence mostly ends – just because there are so few things humans do not seek to control, and to hold onto that feeling of my irrelevance. It's not only good for people to feel there are things they cannot control (another facet important to the concept of THEM) it is absolutely essential.

And even though I am ostensibly a bystander – I feel it impossible not to interfere as I grow these plants to produce food, tending and pruning, weeding and watering. Perhaps that is just mild and intellectual (over)-reactionism by my ego pretending it doesn't want to have a say in shaping this wonderful world or using it– the most beautiful harmonious unchained world of plants... but I will never restrain, harness or understand that force that brings plants up from the ground at all – for my own humanistic devices, warping and wooing something, some gain or benefit from this world for me. But I will never stop being in awe of the unrivalled power and persistence by which they ceaselessly do.

Of course, when I write, I still have that child-like fascination characteristic of Ryan Anschauung – something tells me I will be compelled to Understand them in my classical sense, eventually. Someday soon I will be able to teach or at least encourage others how to grow their own food – but more than that – to begin to re-learn how to live off the land, with that land – and to learn from others how they do it, how it can be done best or better – to restore that dearth of empathy with our green friends I had no idea I was missing but which is now so apparent. There are plenty of Warriors, plenty of Sorcerers, plenty of Farmers – but few are all three and few have a life based on the Sinister and can use those titles as a platform to focus on learning and becoming competent in the skillset of each as an accomplished, skilled, motivated and sinister Undividual. I wonder how I ever did without this feeling – this simple joy in the forces of THEM. I felt it before the presence of plants and trees, blood and soil, the cycles of time and life and seasons – but they were now that I think back sensations of proximity or intermingled existence with the worlds phenomena on a superficial level however close those feelings felt. This feeling I have now through my experiences in growing plants in my yard to harvest food hammers home the disparity between learning about something by reading about it or doing it for a little while half-assed and living a form – letting it take over you and your direction so you become a Ninja, or a Sorcerer, or a Writer, or an Artist, or a Farmer.

No. What I thought I were feelings of sublime connection to THEM before didn't move me like this, those confused notions of feeling close to THEM through exposure to nature pale in memory to these. Those connections were something ethereal, abstracts – I glanced at with an appropriate amount of awe before moving on distracted by the next thing. Dark Gods, Aliens, Twisted, Grotesque, Evil, Sinister – quintessentially human interpretations of forces that are far more powerfully encapsulated in the living world of plants – nevermind gods and demons. We worship Monsanto, Xanax, Woolworths, 1411 with equal fervour than our ancestors did their harvest gods. And we shall see who is Really Unholy when they are faced with the removal of food and water and who (will) venerate those who supply them in the same manner as latter day Gods.

If we are to restore the three castes of the Warriors, Sorcerers and Farmers I suggest we must each Know each of THEM. I speak of a single person who can do all three – who can command all of these roles in the one person – powerful in physicality and commanding strength through being comfortable with the phenomena of gravity and physics / A Mage who can coerce forms into being that perform alchemical reactions causing change in events and persons that would not otherwise be – from a stranger to the course of decades and perhaps as a holograph of momentums conjured in the lifetime of the Adept – even aeons in after-effects. And a revival of learning to live with the land, grow our own food, sustain our enclaves with or without the help or permission of the system. The reasons for my departure were hinted at in the essays in the Oto Anorha #33 but were largely to save my relationship with my most beloved Owy – a relationship which had taken a prolonged severe test and almost entirely destructive trials in my fevered desire to change the world – neglecting all else around me which suffered whilst the Temple grew.

So much energy did I pour into the Temple and building, researching, teaching, speaking, that there was only the barest reserves left for my beautiful wife and my life outside of Ryan. With thanks to whatever Gods may be responsible for the experience, through a devastating break down of relations the inevitable course my myopic fanaticism had left in its wake tore us apart. Near to disintegration we were together able to force the necessary changes need for our family to survive (returning it to the centre of my attention) before it was too late. A massive paradigm shift / life choice had to take place if Owy and I were to endure as a couple. It was not a decision I took long to make. Nothing means more to me on this earth than my wife – 4 letters that do not adequately express the thousand army role she is in and as my life – not THEM, not my phantom Ryan Anschauung, not even Me. And so, here we are. Where we should be. Things will though – never be the same as they were. I have no inward drive to be the man I was or occupy a role as a teacher. I record these notes with no knowledge of when they will ever be shared and no desire to reengage with the world I knew of electronic texts and the struggle to impart insight through conversation with others. I want only what I have now – my true “Temple to THEM”

MAGIC AND THE INTELLECT [1]

After the deceptive sickness illustrated by religion witnessed through the acts and faith of my Christian sister caused my reaction to Satanism – the visitation from a spectre summarily believed to be God – and the assembly of personal madness into the forebear of Mvimaedivm – we suppose it came to be split into tendrils from its unitary congealment of one eye and see ‘Magic’ as an embarrassing waste of time.

But immediately we must step in and denounce it’s own suggestion.

There is no easy way to denounce magic just as there is no easy way to prove it.

THEM’s strong adherence to the ONA’s system and its subsequent library of studies devoted to it is heavily based (and biased) on personal early dissatisfaction with the likes of scrying, divination, ghosts, spells and superstition. To some extent the commercialism, unsubstantiation, overall context of magical acts in ones lifetime, and encounters with the humility and wisdom of the elderly (examples of the end result of life’s alchemy) could not help but lead to a cynicism at the occult practices required of magic and the cultivation of stoicism and quite observance rather than the embarrassing exhortations of a human being and its ridiculous gestures of madness To madness. Mine was a reaction of fascination to understand human behaviour through meta-psychology and sociology – through the rational, the logical, the sane, the orderly, the finite. To understand the motivations of humans leading up to or just prior to performing an act of magic – their reasons for doing it – their expectations, their answers as to what they were doing, why, how... my own experiences could perhaps be answered by a distillation of all of theirs.

I.e. what the hell was that thing that sat on my bed and pushed the bed corner down – not just for me but for anyone in that room. That thing I dared not look at because it might just give me an answer – might take away the dynamic tension that I lived, in limbo between the worlds of science and magic – as an absurdity; uncertain, sceptical, and reliant on both. Something’s I know can never be unseen. I do not think I am ready to turn over and see what it is that causes such an unexplainable dent in my bed. It should shatter my world and possibly destroy me to see something not from it. And yet I quest endlessly to find out in other ways – because I cannot look... Because of this strange emphasis on repulsion/attraction to certain aspects of magic and a shunning of others – as a result, I have naturally drawn about myself those also in a precarious state of conviction. A member of the IOT, members of the ONA, persons involved in Sorcery, the Sinister, and generally “the not quite either/or”. Personally, I’ve developed a powerful intellect and a philo-magical quality of speech and thought via the magical vacuum of my writing (such writing coming from insights into my own practices of sorcery). Writing and such things as this online Temple, the intent behind this Temple, the context into which this Temple is placed in relevance to our work – act as a catharsis. A vacuum in which I often seal myself to confront my/our greatest enemy. The powerful intellect I've developed has allowed me to persuade others to reconcile opposites or tear them apart irrevocably. It has allowed a small library of texts that embody a massive work study of black magic to emerge, and the experimental form of THEM and its interest with synchronicity, solidarity – remote and sinister, the IOT, the ONA, to form into a formidable magical emblem of Change, Chaos, and New opportunity.

However, this reaction to magic in favour of intellectual logic has become an extremely complex neurosis that it would be nice (and a release) to call contradictions – but they aren't. I don't know what they are.

With one hand I create with the other I destroy, one day I rejoice, the same I despair. In this I am not alone – my capriciousness is perhaps more ready than others, but I am not alone in my Sinister Solitary path. This grotesque so aptly captured by Dracus is at once Gnosis and Chaos. It is one thing to be a powerful speaker/writer and to create something based on that intellect, to study and read, and yes perform practical acts of sorcery to enable new insights – but it is quite another when one realises a component is missing that cannot be supplied by intellect. It is one thing to aid and support a creature like the ONA with archives, expansions, additions, creations, exultations, and examinations... it is quite another to support it with magical acts using tools, chalk circles, incantations, and the like.

The spurning of magic and its rich symbolism by THEM's current representative may perhaps be leading him/THEM to sterile wastelands. Something recently said by a member was to the effect of 'I find my experiences strangely synchronising with what is written here in the Temple'. Well, we do too... find that the Temple is synchronised with other systems. Even having never read the works Liber Null or Psychonaut or encountered Chaos Magick before one is a) struck by the potent similarity of concepts shared between the IOT and the ONA, especially where certain concepts have been abandoned, (more comments later) and b) cannot help but feel confused that while never having read such works, and that goes for many many others – that one's insights and feelings so privately treasured have already been written down in a previous age by a previous wanderer..

Does this mean that there is a set geometric labyrinth that takes all magicians down a specific route, owing perhaps to the restraints and rewards of our organism, approach, habitual consciousness, ethos, collective unconsciousness etc – or does this striking similarity of esoteric insights actually represent a shared understanding of an objective matrix?

One finds that, THEM, has thus far always returned to the Logos, to Explain, to Reason, to Understand; via its writing and relied on its belief that change is made (without hocus pocus) via understanding the elements that cause causal change and putting or relieving pressure on those elements as required; often resulting in social-based manipulation; forms that can assist in creating a certain helpful geometry to assist in an Aim, i.e. the Black Glyph Society. But what of the other magical arts – that almost anyone else seems to practice which we have thus far scorned as Old Aeon? What of Vampiric Tendrils, what of Lucid Dreaming, what, of the Double? What of Sorcery and Adeptship in the Aethers? Of those wonderful trips and lessons by Don Juan as told by Carlos Castaneda, or the magical talisman, sigil, entities summoned forth and made visible? Where do these legendary skills come into a form like THEM – do they – and should they?

What is strange is the confused emphasis on intellect exhibited by THEM which we have tried to avoid by attaining a female representative through which to change energies. The masculine, however tempered by the feminine qualities is still grounded in the logos, in the ego, the intellect, the explaining, control and orderly assembly of things, often in flashy displays of arrogance and power. Women – are generally the antithesis of this, subtle, sinister, shadowy and exerting pressure by their very being they are seldom willing or interested in being on stage or the focus of attention. The writings of Sor Terrosa then in Book IV are extremely rare, and it has been an unfruitful search to find a willing female to take the reins of THEM for an interim. After all – what for, they ask? Why such a question is asked is simply an enigma for Men.

The seriousness of THEM, is another strange deception. Occult forms require deadly seriousness if they are to be accepted as a solid foundation and worthwhile investment – esp. in overcoming obstacles, that seriousness comes through in formality, in proper English, and a didactic ‘teaching’ tone. THEM MSS have given a specific imago of the Temple and its members. Cold, calculating, Satanic, and sure of our magic. Well, some of us are – but I am not.

One omission of our representation is a sense of humour. The strict, disciplined replies of THEM give no impression that we laugh. Laughter, certainly is a staple diet for us – without that, I at least, should have gone quite fucking mad in my forays. As it stands, WE are (dramatically) sane. Some of our colleagues sharing this space (viz. the internet) with us have not been so lucky – they have become incoherent, diffused, sporadic, unable to communicate the greatness that has touched, or even destroyed them. WE at least have remained sane despite our own forays into sorcery and efforts to touch and go beyond the Abyss, enough to communicate a coherent system of analysis, carefully equilibrated between supreme arrogance and supreme humility, between optimism and cynicism. Certainly – we are aware that after Crystallisation of a Form there comes a greater risk of it becoming a Religion/a Cult – a Dogmatic slavery to slavery.

Yet we’ve continually destroyed our own form when it was becoming manifest – initiates who have contacted the Temple privately are most certainly aware of this.

The capriciousness of my forms is well known and a danger quite alive today. Maturity and understanding that one has yet to mature and understand keeps this Temple's doors open THEM, whatever obstacles it faces, is experimental – but something tells me – also necessary for some as yet unknown reason I resist the urge to tear it down and start again – it simply seems beyond doubt that this is the right incarnation, at the right time. Perhaps we have become too reliant on texts and essays, on explaining the unexplainable, on underpinning the currents and secrets in the systems of black magic we consort with by logic and philosophy. At least some interest must be rekindled in the phenomena of magic and its paraphernalia. An acidic renunciation of magic must be forgotten and a new chance be offered. Otherwise, we invite entropy.

MAGIC AND THE INTELLECT [2]

While it is useful to intellectually capture the current of THEM and expound the Abyss, Acausal ad infinitum within a framework of models, ideas and abstract understanding; allowing some, an insight into THEM.

It is now necessary to write another essay to explain the context of intellectual understanding and reasoning within the temple of THEM. Without a follow-up essay, it would be easy to assume that THEM are an intellectually based group concerned with an understanding of magic that is posited in the realm of the Logos. And, this is not the case.

Behind [or perhaps beneath] the understanding that is achieved by rational, logical discourse: Each member of THEM possesses an empathic [and simultaneously divergent] understanding of how magic is performed that is grounded in the intuitive. Our methods of magic are practiced spontaneously, irrespective of the intellectual ideas set up by the Logos to explain them. They just work.

In regard to the treatise previously posted, THEM are esoterically 'lowering a rope' into a realm that is still subject to 'Noise'. THEM believe all communication taking place before entering the Abyss is in fact, simply noise. Thus the treatise that deals with the Acausal etc, intellectually, can be said to be a communication from a platform of being that has descended into the lower spheres beneath the Abyss, in order to be understood effectively by those who have not yet reached it, and is essentially an example of the mode of inner dialogue that creates the 'noise' experienced by the uninitiated that distorts the essence. While it is sometimes useful to explain – beyond the screen, and in practice, it's better to "See" WITHOUT the disruptive agency of Thought; to see directly the energy current to be dealt with and to know intuitively and concretely what to do with it instead of uploading it with one's whole worldview of the moment.

When SEEING without the inner dialogues mediation, however wise it may be, the energy currents one perceives could be expressed only by abstractions indeed, but these abstractions can be turned back into energy currents; you can bring down fire from the sky by using such an abstraction, while the abstractions invented by the mind to grasp intellectually the energy ocean beyond would hardly work in that way. To SEE is to stop the inner dialogue of mind, to cease it while perceiving directly with one's whole being's awareness. That seeing is neither seeing by eyes nor a metaphoric expression. "No-thinking" is a basic ability demanded by the IOT from any probationer.

Moreover, the no-thinking has the property to accumulate itself – any exercise of no-thinking, even for a minute or more remains as an experience; and when there is enough no-thinking stored, it can suddenly stop the inner dialogue and thus the perception of the world kept by that dialogue. Then, one starts seeing things as they are. Intellectual preaching becomes exhaustive and boring sooner or later. The sorcerer soon or later learns to value his available energy instead of wasting it in exhaustive intellectual reasoning. Magick being based on seeing cannot generalise philosophically the perceived world – it can deal directly, exactly, precisely and concretely with the energy currents constituting an individual, an ethos and an aeon, but it cannot explain why the things are constituted in that way. After all, the sorcerers do magick, and teach those who cannot do it ;}

Several new members have emailed us and asked for permission to post potentially useful magic-related material: while this reply was written for one individual in particular, it states our position on contributions for all.

...

While the tract offered makes valid points and seeks to guide a person toward an understanding of magic, these types of tracts abound in the millions. Enough has been written about magic, and more pointedly, enough signposts erected in the occult world for interested persons to seek these texts out without the necessity required of saturating yet another group with these kinds of material. A beneficial contribution of your own written experience with magical theory and practice would be more harmonic for Mvimaedivm.

THEM believe magic Can be approached via the intellect. Yet, while the reading and study of writings of magic can garner an understanding [when combined with practical alchemy] – this understanding is ultimately like all understandings – an illusion that entraps. Intellect becomes a limitation when raised to the status of one's sole God, hindering the practice of magic and weighing it down with dogma and the noisy banter of the ego such as opinion, rhetoric, authority, persuasion and guidebooks ad infinitum, and that is all that this excerpt from Crowley, is, noise. People should not need to be told, once again, what to do or how to do it; if they do – then they are not one of THEM. The path of magic led each current member of THEM out of the habit of simplistic categorisation of magical principles, beyond the screaming of ones own wisdom from the rooftops, and through an abyss to the other side where there is silence. Your wish to contribute to the Temple of THEM is appreciated; that is, the will to help the group and its co-habitants is welcomed and smiled upon; but the form in which you have offered help must be firmly declined. A force greater than merely sharing similar interests and spouting the same rhetoric in the same groups day in day to attract personal power binds our members together; the magnetic union of the Self that draws together those of like mind and like species operates here. Cosmic synchronicity will bring those who are THEM, here; being rare beings we expect a lengthy delay. We estimate the potential for most human growth to be an extremely slow process, and are setting a goal of thirty years of operation, the length of which we are willing to assist those willing to grow; a hand out of the madness of the occult labyrinth.

As I approach my 33rd Birthday – I look back on the work I have done and the conclusions I have reached.

My convictions regarding Form grow stronger every day and I see signs that others are taking more notice of the subliminal power, reach, effect and influence of such things but sadly there is still nowhere I can turn to increase my understanding in one concentration, no available mentor from which I can learn more about the nebulous world of Psychic Geometry or the particular fascinations with which I have surrounded myself.

It seems I am in this alone, and a pioneer. I write so much but I get so little back that I cannot help but become more reclusive and less willing to communicate my ideas – all that usually happens is that they get tangled by others into a form-laden mess; by [sometimes well-meaning] people who miss the anti-concept entirely.

I am to some extent satisfied with the keystones of my point of view which form a rock solid foundation for my enquiries that no alternate method has been able to shake or surpass and it is a method of enquiry that makes no apologies or takes any prisoners. It has no contradictions and morality – it speaks the truth – however devastating that be to Forms, believers in Forms, and the human ego.

But I remain restless on many other issues I have raised and the temptation to alter and add to existing manuscripts is overwhelming. There is so much more that could be written, so much more that could be revealed, so many more dots that could be joined, and another 30-year lifetime of insights to uncover and share – a second lifetime I aim to begin soon to continue my research from a vantage of being older and wiser and ever more optimistically cynical.

I have slowly withdrawn my older writings from the internet – for I feel they are incomplete – they touch on certain subjects and make some inroads into explaining them – but the context in which I saw, in which I wrote, in which I understood – was narrower then, than it is now. I am sure I will say that again when I am 60.

Those keystones – of which I am defiantly proud – have now largely been preserved as a self-contained boxed set of 4 booklets titled THRESHOLD by Fall of Man – [Though many concessions had to be made to make it that far and the true nature of the Temple had to be veiled; concepts and words omitted, imagery altered so as not to upset careers or anger a populace – concessions and omissions that water down the essence of my Work. The Temple of THEM was a means to stand against such things and to proudly proclaim its heresies – chosen words and images chosen precisely to elicit such reactions] – wherein the Black Glyph was our means to print and publish what we liked as we saw fit, without having to edit and cut the very forms that are needed to bring changes and disruption.

But the nature of my Work is unpopular anyway – it sees right through the desperate inadequacies that the human beings tried to cover itself with, the futility of its struggle, and treats things traditionally taken for granted as mistakes, errors of judgement, lack of insight. It habitually insults the intelligence of intelligence, and talks down to the ego, it tries to remove man from his pedestal and put him back among the beasts, it rips out from under him all that is sacred and trusted in the way of time, space, incentive, morality, duality, form and leaves him gasping for air with nothing to cling to for a compass, for navigation, for sanity. It treats dreams as valid and tries to open an active bridge to the unconscious that the ego has long since sealed off, crowning itself king of the psyche becoming the all-too familiar source of humanities delicate sensibilities and vulnerable softness – blind, deaf and dumb. My disdain for human's egotist arrogance is no secret – but it has not prevented my Love for them either. But anything that directly challenges the ego – calls it a liar, calls it a fake, calls its legitimacy into question was always going to be asking for trouble. And yet – hard as it may be; sore, angry, enraged as people get – to the point of death threats, physical violence, intimidation, bargaining, co-ercement – the reactions of the ego being prodded only solidify my conviction of its function as a psychic usurper and the means for evolution requiring it to be dislodged and then co-joined with other psychic elements for balance which can, with certain methods, such as Mvimaedivm, be woken up, and Remembered.

THEM: THOUGHTS

Regarding THEM: My feelings. (2009)

There is a big difference, between something like THEM – which cannot rightly be called a group because the definition for one of THEM cannot be self-contained – and Mvimaedivm group. From my lifetime so far of interactions with people, I have seen that THEY (plural) are a phenomenon that is present in as many places and times as I have seen. These people that comprise this abstract THEM, represent a spark that is seldom fanned into an inferno. Are there reasons? I can think of a few: the inward journey is not outwardly flashy, presentable, or instant. The ego and its loud, physical, convenient products are predominantly recognised and exalted by societies (perhaps because it is much easier) than the hard, disciplined, oft-silent path of brutally honest intro/retrospection and the terrible questions it raises.

Any sort of self-discovery involves a range from minor discomfort to staring insanely into the abyss, to the threat of disintegration of personality, and the hovering spectre of the unknown. These things frighten people. These things get caged under control by over-simplification and convenient labels and constructs. And for most people that life seems to work. But for some of us it doesn't.

What's the major difference? The average person wants answers and so selects from the various views offered by others. One of THEM wants to Know – and Knowing does not come from being told, or from gently asking others, or from isolating the complete faculty of human experience into sectors – conducting non-destructive, touchy-feely experiments that don't hurt anyone, oneself or the world. To Know, one inwardly knows what must be done to Know – what gaps to fill, what bridges to cross (and/or burn), what experiences to gravitate toward.

To think/feel one can Know with half a moral code is naive. The journey contains both and neither shadow and light depending on how far one is along it. I've realised the two points of view are only separable by abstracts – every step of the journey, whether greatly evil or immoral, or greatly healing and noble, is human. That said – there are some acts I would kill a man for committing and others I would condemn him to death for. I am thus a failure in the Satanic test for amorality but then so is everyone who would follow the rules of culling with a moral compass. Thus, one of THEM is like any human, as intrinsically capable of doing anything in the quest to Know as any other.

However – as just one the brilliant points of the ONA's system makes clear – one can get trapped in justification of one's actions however deplorable because the means becomes the end. One of THEM is driven – by whatever system(s) they choose whatever evils or goods or mundane or occult experiences they choose or have chosen for them – to see beyond them, behind them, between them – back to the self – back to the ego – back to the self... In short: a small conversation between latent aspects and conscious aspects of the total human being's psyche are occurring; as they have always done – and what has been started for all-know how long is again starting, with us. And since there are now more than six of us – is a contagion beginning to spread and strengthen and solidify ISS; a conversation clearly piquing the interest of others (though doomed to be misunderstood from onlookers as all things seem to be); and taught and illustrated with the least nonsense, most stripped-down model and modality for sharing the journey in an open, honest, and both rational/irrational manner in a very long time. And strangely, this should not be possible.

There are no arguments about whose Gods are greater, about the best way to hurt someone with magic, sniping regarding the morals of each member present, no cheap shots or personal attacks, no focus on irrelevant turns of phrase or quotes or ideas; and yet there is a potent stream of dialectic. Dialectic that has enabled most of us a productive consideration or re-consideration of many key aspects to the LHP that has enriched each resonance of our practices and actions on the world.

This group, with each member fully or vaguely aware that such petty things are not welcome, relevant or the Way has given me thousands of hours of deep thought and bountiful conversation without the mountains of horseshit that generally accompany discussions of the occult/life/satanism. I know that I am not the only one. This group embodies a nuance I've not seen anywhere else I've been – and that lack is probably the reason for its emergence.

Yet members of this group, and members of THEM are united in their ISS. They understand for instance how someone can grow alone and with others at the same time via ISS/The Acausal Voice. They understand how it is possible to agree and yet disagree in the same breath with someone. Other people don't seem to appreciate, recognise or understand the many subtleties possible from the LHP that language, habit, parroting, and simplification do not allow the room for. Yet at the same time, there are many I would call THEY that aren't here, that can't or won't be here – simply because they are THEY.

MVIMAEDIVM is self-contained and can rightly be called a group. THEM on the other hand is a collective reaction that more or less believes that living 'right' requires an incredible amount of internal work. The Work is its own reward. Much of this Work is dealt with by the "LHP" because the majority of occultists opt for instant success, bypassing intrinsic laziness, and parading their degrees. They generally don't enjoy being made uncomfortable, actually fighting with their ego, or strive for depth in what they do – characterised by the fact that either a person calling themselves evil or good or black or white, is unable to have empathy with their opposing side. They cannot see or reason why the other persons resist their own view and Weltanschauung – and thus they have demonstrated that they have made no progress as a magician. They have not gotten inside (behind the geometry of) the form, only been manipulated by it.

To some extent, the spirit of an “LHP” is superior to the “RHP” because it does not pretend to have a moral compass and thus does not generally succumb to hypocrisy. Evil allows greater penetration.

When people submit to the Initiation requirements, they are in effect mirroring the opening of a conversation with what its convenient to call the Self. In all people there is a refraction caused by the reflection, i.e., the particular way someone apprehends the world. That is why a closed system of forms, words, practices, etc cannot accurately or deeply resonate what it is we came or hoped to do that actually brought us here to this forum or to this unique state of the requirement and necessity of being In Sinister Solidarity. It doesn't matter what outward form the journey takes – like the dreamworld the message will cloak itself in every conceivable modality. Whether someone believes the ONA is their thing, or MLO or TOB – beyond the forms chosen as a vehicle – we are united, not always in time and space, by Knowing, from the curious way in which those all around us act leaving us outside, that we are one of THEM. It is not so far-fetched to say that to some extent Mvimaedivm is a self-help group... though with many important differences.

Does it help anyone to be pushed further into the occult labyrinth? Sometimes yes, sometimes no – and the decision we make regarding that, we have no way of knowing or predicting the outcome. THEM trust in our judgement insofar as past experience and intuition dictate when we guide. But we aren't just here to guide either – we are just as often here to intently listen. To learn. And to hear the voice of the acausal, the whispering of the self-unravel themselves from beneath the forms. For instance. For a long time – no one here has been instructed to perform any ONA-related tasks to further themselves or grow or change (Aside from the WSA), because that is not what we feel the essence exhibited by the ONA way is. That is not what I/we feel, the essence of the LHP is. So, OUR Way is not exemplified by the ONA but part of its essence is contained within that Way.

The LHP and its travellers change, all things change; and understanding that is one of the keys to a mature outlook. That is why there are no doctrines so to speak of in THEM; our work stands alone as an expression – but therein there is much mythos to be extracted from reality. The presentation of THEM to the world for instance – is still widely believed to be the work of AL, still widely believed to be a nexion of the ONA. Whether that is actually the case, all depends on your viewpoint, and how much you trust forms.

... XXXXX

It is not a rational cool logic that directs me or others of THEM when we steer people into change, (and we don't have an interest in interfering in what people do but "merely providing a mirror") – but break down insofar as logic allows – the self-contained perfection of their way of thinking to allow further options – it is the attitude and wholly the attitude of the members of THEM and their private quest to discover and change and grow themselves that draws other near.

It is, I believe thus far, the unexplainable, yet irrefutable quality of synchronicity. I work on myself – that is my 'thing'. And so, others come to work on themselves or with others beside me, as though, to quote Jung 'my own effort were a contagion'. And that is what THEM really is. A reflection of the contagion of the Self. It is formed by people who recognise the tremendous difficulty in achieving what they have gathered to do which they once did in isolation; yet who have the fire to try. Knowing it may be impossible, incredibly hard, tiring, time-consuming, and a lifelong commitment brings us together to beat the odds.

And it is this knowing, and committing, to this journey, that takes a lifetime, that IS our lifetime that unites us. Not our interest or involvement in things ONA – that is just a convenient anchor. Whereby many people here saw what I saw (or something similar) in the ONA once or now and were awakened to the essence of that longing, struggle, curiosity of the mysterious pull of an inner gravity.

DESIDERATA

Some musings from some observations. Elitism in Satanism attracts types who are or pretend to be desensitised to violence, killing and suffering of human beings and in some cases consider themselves above the 'mundanes' for this desensitisation – and yet they campaign on such matters as saving this people, or that people, from injustice, appealing for petitions to be signed, for governments earlier rebuked for interfering in international affairs or tyrannising the other countries of the world to DO SOMETHING, and in general for sympathy for these people, from other people, strangers, who, so earlier were mundane nothings to be trampled upon – are now the key to salvation and the solution to saving some poor hapless machine gun fodder halfway around the world they've never met – and who, if they've never met, have never judged, so may very well be campaigning for mundanes after all... : so what is happening here?

The actions speak louder than words. Many of these types are quite happy to throw themselves on the side of the ‘Sinister’ as elite – but are they simply delusional? Is switching one’s Sinister capacity and Other Awareness capacity simply an inability to make up one’s mind – or a dearth of knowing thyself? One might argue that either one embraces the Sinister in all its forms – and all its horrors – and really accepts Kali Yuga or the supposed elitist cold war against the mundanes as legitimate – or is arbitrarily choosing when something is Sinister and when it is not. Since the actions indicate that they are: this indicates the subjective arbitrariness of their principles and laws. You cannot embrace a little bit of evil – evil has nothing to do with it – but as an epithet, it suggests something that does not stop, that continually outdoes itself, something that goes well beyond any man’s measure – many of those patting themselves on the back for being ultra-sinister, have either, contributed to this type of behaviour by encouraging and endorsing it in others and oneself: or have no idea what evil really can be and think there are boundaries, limits, to what people can do when motivated by a form. There aren’t. There’s no limits. How does one embrace ultra-evil (one particular traditional satanic term) and yet stop and get upset about fluffy bunnies required for that ultra-evil to thrive and live? (say, Yezidis, Palestinian children, or the next buzz group to capture the eye via media moments from now?) If you encourage this kind of behaviour, foster the sinister through sharing forms relating to the sinister, songs, art, opinions, ideas, laws, rules, principles, activities, ‘Pathei Mathos’ why be surprised? That only indicates a near complete ignorance of one’s own actions, one’s own effect, one’s own awareness of the very forms one claims to have mastery over, to have subjected to their will, to supposedly dole out in controlled doses as one sees fit that makes them an ‘elite’. I’m sure dozens of people over there have been influenced by extreme propaganda, and are now fulfilling what was written in word, in deed.

So why, the surprise? Why the morality all of a sudden? Why the guilt trip on others to ‘care’ – to ‘save them’ – to ‘sign your petition’? For arguments sake, a couple of questions: if might is right – then the “Magi” are in control – and if they have that throne then they deserve that throne. Or are we going to claim that the “Magi” ‘cheated’ their way to the top? If being Sinister is what works to gain power, prestige, understanding and join with the Theos to become Immortal – haven’t the “Magi” proven themselves more adept at wielding the Sinister than any other person, group, or pretender to the throne? Haven’t they been willing to do Anything to stay on top, including let the runaway imaginations of those who believed in the Devil and clad him more and more with accoutrements of form and finery til he stood before the Middle Ages a terrifying spectre of moral persuasion become more powerful a motivator than god – and in the words of an anonymous “What people weren’t willing to do for the love of god they did for fear of the reprisal of the Devil” – and didn’t all of it – every sordid, nasty, human, cruel, vicious, talent they have – all the deception, all the lies, all the hatred, injustice, brute force, ultra-violence, genuine lack of boundaries, get them to where they are today?

But these are our enemies? These – who if we changed the word Magi to Sinister to make some tin foil hats happy and would therein notice no difference in methodological principle – are our enemies? Would someone like to explain to me again the difference between Sinister and Mundane – and be very careful doing it? So, now that there is mass culling between the two sides, this is a problem? That there is great suffering, pain, anguish, injustice – ‘innocent’ people being blown to pieces, all the horrors of war, (‘children’ apparently has a more profound effect it seems – “oh to hell with the adults but won’t somebody think of the children!’) children being injured by golly – is it because its unevenly matched? Is that the problem that requires petitions and interventions? Is it purely because you read about the Yezidi somewhere being Devil Worshipers and decided that you had to help them from your home base because gosh darn it, they are just like me? Is it because you actually believe one side has the moral high ground and is being unjustly persecuted? Or is it because you don’t actually have what it takes to see the Sinister in full-blown motion? Did you open the box too far? Do you want to put it back in? Do any of you know how many people died to feed the mining, production, manufacture and labour demands for the iPad, iPod and PC? Have a guess. There’s blood ALL over your hands. YOU and ME and EVERYONE ELSE contributed to the things we cry about, the things that are too much for our precious hearts to bear.

I am fine with the blood on my hands. Cry me a fucking river.

SHOUTING INTO THE ABYSS

Only now do I really know how to communicate. Christos Beest said to me once that he was relieved not to have been ‘shouting into the void’... whether he meant what I mean by it now, I find myself at peace to be doing just that.

I shout into the void because it is the only pure, the only honest communication there is. There is nothing and no-one outside of me that can interpret or know my being. No-one external to pass judgement or offer advice – because this life, this existence, is between me and the void. If someone should overhear my shouting then let them take any echoes they please for themselves – let them impose their own sanctions according to their will not mine. For to directly instruct, to direct, to guide, to offer advice to others, or presume to know them is an impure and dishonest communication. My convictions, my contradictions, my rights, my wrongs, my opinions, my madness all belong to the void – it is therein that I am face to face with each of my mysteries and my mysteries alone. The void alone to whom I answer. To whom I speak.

Whom knows me. Whom speaks back.

Language, words, conversations are all loaded, loaded with weights and pitfalls and submissions; loaded with grandeur, with limitations, with will. To talk to others is to bind others, to seek agreement, or friendship, or solidarity, or material gain, or company, or assurance, or validation, or invalidation, or advice, or guidance, or direction, or answers. Answers cannot come when there are attachments but inside of oneself through oneself when everything is gone and the bones picked clean. Conversation cannot help but be misdirection, it supposes and imposes, suggests and circles, posits and invents, sustains and stains. It muddies the clear water of perception and introduce foreign objects to the pristine self-enclosed temple.

Conversation asks for submission, for favours, for acknowledgement, for trade, for love, for money, for understanding, for control, for attention, for worship – where there can be none, where there can be only a direct supra personal connection to Be or the making of noise that distorts it. The extra voices kick up a whirlwind of debris, they interfere in direct transmission with the void – both with theirs, and with mine. Words are a white noise that people don't hear for what they are – a cacophonous tumult that obscures the pure, veils the truth, of simplicity itself.

The only honest path I know now is solitude. To just be and to shout into the void as long and as loud as I need and only into the void. Then let the void share my secrets with anyone who chooses to listen. That is how to speak to others. Let anyone who overhears hear indirectly and catch any sounds that please them for themselves – without seeking to complicate their own communication with the void by asking for clarification, asking questions, making challenges, demanding infinitesimal deconstruction, criticising that which belongs to the void and without seeking to engage me – so that they too are not directly misled by the promise of communication that provides clarity – for it seeks to deceive all of us. Clarity is purely between man and the void. Anything less than this sacred silence that allows others to communicate with their void more clearly, is to impose distortion and a tyranny of will upon others.

YIADRY: EXCERPTS

Jan 1

Things have been nurtured to the point where the seeds planted over the last year or so are beginning to sprout. I have obtained all the manuscripts I so desperately sought or information regarding the nature of those I couldn't find. I have established a small web of contacts that are genuine and managed to achieve an indirect line of contact with A1. I expect the circulation of various creative and insight-related manuscripts I have written to net further contacts, and the sale of these to combine with my primary income to enable me to finance a temple. I am halfway through constructing the tarot of the Naos Deck and intend to have it completed by late February 116eh. I have written and posted the preliminary book I of my DD and received good feedback from the audience it was aimed at. Books II and III have the green light to go ahead. The companion I have been tutoring (and been tutored by) is suitable to assume the role of Priestess/ Mistress and I am hoping to perform great magick with her, as well as my first ritual during our first face to face encounter. I intend to hermetically initiate myself with the Civet oil purchased from Europe regardless of whether the two tasks of neophyte are fulfilled or not. I will write about the first of them having been fulfilled by my wilful act of vandalism and demonstrated alignment with the Sin. Tradition. The second task will wait if need be until I am able to travel and supply suitable transport for the materials. I have also opened the electronic 'temple of the tangent' to circulate/attract galactic style works.

I estimate there to be about fifty-sixty years of my life left if I accept the idea of an average lifespan being approximately eighty years for a male. I'm moderately amused by the efforts of those to extend their lifespan whether by diet, cryogenics or peak fitness -- what do these hopefuls do that requires an eternity to do it? Did any great in history need an extra fifty years to achieve astonishing pinnacles of glory and greatness, to wage wars and expand their domain, or to leave a legacy behind that would be visible or remembered thousands of years later? Do those individuals that take the power within by the horns need to glean from the hourglass, to beg Life on humble knees for a more generous allotment of years? Do they tremble in the faces of the goliaths of relentless renewal, tumbling space, or sheer death? No. We don't. We know we have an allotted time in which to do great deeds, in which to count, in which to raise ourselves up from the rabble and work on the legacy we are to leave behind. I will be dead in fifty years. What will my life have meant in the scheme of things? In any case I will have created a Sinister Tarot deck for subsequent voyagers on their way to the centre of the universe. In other cases, my life will serve as an example to others as a selfless donation to the Great Work, laying foundations and adding to existing ones with my writings, arts, insights, and supreme sacrifice, “ONE LIFE IN THE NOW, THAT MANY MAY ARISE WORTHY OF LIFE IN THE NEXT”. A guardian, A glyph, storing ancient whispers to be unlocked when amongst the chaos of the insane the old wisdom has been forgotten. All but this duty is pale in comparison to a meaning of life.

Wrote manuscript “Prima Magica Tnepres AIA V”.

Today I began a dream journal. The first step to exploration of the astral. As well as working with ritual and magick this year, I also hope to gain a foothold and some experience within the Astral World.

Jan 15

Unusual depression surprised me yesterday. After hearing nothing from the publisher for an uncomfortable amount of time, having received little or no input or output in correspondence, or from TTT – it dawned on me how much I need to be busy, but disturbingly how much I depend on being paid attention to and praised to feel that I am moving forward. I have begun to get addicted to such people and had forgotten that both Devilworshipper and Ra are not the real me but aspects amplified and embellished playing roles – playing the role of ‘always in control’ and ‘I am a genuine satanic adherent’ (maybe I’ve forgotten even the nature of the roles and they both mean ‘look at me, see what I can do, and be in awe’)...

Jan 16

The dream journal is already proving a useful addition to my occult repertoire. I have been able to discern some deep subconscious activities in my psyche and feel that within six months I will have considerable if not total control over my duration of lucidity. Interacting with A has given rise to a great deal of insight in all kinds of spheres. After mentioning and then reading the ritual to her she says she has begun to experience vivid ‘daydreams’ and sensations regarding its future performance. For the first time in involving her in conversation and matters on the occult regarding the sinister I feel genuine receptivity of the role I have willed her to play, from her. Note: Write manuscript about loss of eyesight increasing occult ability.

Jan 18/19

Tonight (2am) while pointing out the location of ‘Tnepres’ the star my mistress named after me, I saw a shooting star right when and where I pointed, verifiable by two others who saw it too. I also believe I have seen my first constellation clearly, that of Scorpio (or cancer). In the country away from the city lights the stars were highly visible and very beautiful – I saw even the shape of a scorpion and then a bear, as if there were clear lines of light connecting the stars together to form images... it was breathtaking for me. A has received her magickal name. She will be known as Mistress/Priestess 'AeveA' when working in a magickal mode. The name is a mimesis of the Nazarene archetype 'Eve'. In Sinister fashion 'Eve' has an 'Adam'. However her 'Adam' is not a Man, but a Snake; A Serpent; 'Tnepres'. The name 'AeveA' represents many things: Union, of a Sinister corruption of the Nazarene ethos by Satanic mimesis, and a Sinister intent by Tnepres and AeveA to couple + distort the meaning held sacred of 'Adam and Eve'.

The double AA's have long associated meanings attached to them. Here though, they are intended to aeonically imbue the mortal 'Eve'; to elevate her above the causal, to re-present the first Woman as a Sinister acausal archetype, composed of both the human construct of duality (the name is a palindrome, reading the same either forward or backward) and the inhuman vortex that destroys and creates duality. Our union as Master Tnepres and Mistress AeveA will mimic and corrupt the sacred image of the Nazarene Jehovah's first creation, supreme blasphemy and the perfect elocution in regard to the Magian, with each sexual act a presencing of the new, evolved, sinister, 'Adam and Eve', in which Eve lays with the snake, the seducer, Satan. Your wish was to represent my whore – and I have here epitomised to the finest most primal degree this very incarnation with the choice of your name. In your role as AeveA and laying with Tnepres the Serpent you will be the incarnation of the 'Whore of Babylon'. To me, its essence means "She that twists Time and Space". No doubt you will find your own additional meanings expressed within your magickal name – and these meanings, hidden from immediate comprehension by the profane, are the beginning of Esoteria. I have given you this name to mark you – to create Union between us, symbolic and actual, by distorting a sacred symbol far older than can be imagined. To re-create Adam and Eve is not only satanic mimesis by which something Nazarene has been imitated in a sinister fashion to subvert it) of the highest degree, which I consider a measure of how well one disturbs/disrupts the energies of the Nazarene empire – but also symbolises new beginning. Firsts. The Prime cause from which all else proceeds. Whether in the Septenary endeavour or simply as the two beings that have emerged from our cracked shells into a world around us that is now ours, by a new perspective, we have the power to re-present the roles of Man and Woman respectively. Furthermore – this name contains you as much as it does your magickal you – which you may discover to be inseparable from one another. Your name simply becomes A-eve-A. The word 'Eve' represents what you have struggled to achieve during the time we've known one another – the New. With the name A-eve-A your role can take you anywhere you want to go – a continual renewal of 'eves' as you 'begin and end' yourself, constantly. Or in my own terms, formulate and disintegrate yourself. As changeable and yet as solid, as the waters of a Sea.

This formulation and disintegration are represented by the two A's. AA is a very significant symbol in freemasonry for various reasons. I will not go into most of these, as many of them are not related to what AeveA represents. But there is one meaning that is striking and an exact representation of the two AA's in your name. On manuscripts used by the Freemasons, precious esoteric information was concealed within the 'green language' poetry that was written to hold it. The poem meant something to the initiated – and this was indicated by a white 'A' in the heading of the manuscript. Using this poem the initiated would work out the actual meaning of the manuscript by deciphering the poem. That an initiate knew to do this was because there was another A in the heading, a darker one. This indicated that half the information was revealed, in the light, and the other half was concealed, in the shadow. As it so aptly is in life, for you. And the Eve between this light and shadow represents transcendence of these two, control over formation and disintegration, light and dark – and an EVentual redemption. It also represents: EveR – Infinity to Balance & EveN – Balance to Infinity.

A sign, for the first time since writing manuscripts with the intent to make targets sit up and take notice I have received confirmation of my growing ability to intimidate. "PLM" was received well, yet the anxiety, even terror of the reply pleaded with me not to release the document publicly. The sword I held out has been misinterpreted, grasping the blade causing a cut rather than gripping the handle to help me swing it. One would think that a man so complimentary of my insight would grant credit for strategy. The definition of arrogance: "Sometimes I win. Sometimes I let others win."

Phase two of the Dream Project goes into effect tomorrow

A is exhibiting “0” perhaps even “VII”. I feel confident of the ritual going ahead and breaking my sexual fantasy. I’ve been impressed with the maturing apprehension of Satanism and the growing understanding of how to play the priestess role that A has shown and even manifested via her discussions with outsiders. Its an unusual relationship, one I thoroughly enjoy despite our distance, and A’s conversation tonight has revealed her hopes as well as her doubts. From my point of view A would make a perfect priestess and to tutor someone else, let alone find somebody with her outstanding quality to quantify, would not happen. If anything I’d end up with a different energy, a mindless manipulee – but I can offer no insight or opinion on which abyss she will make the jump to from her ledge. On the subject of the PMT I experimented today with recording the F# tone today and it went ex. Well. I feel a pressing urge to explore this medium as suggested by 1916 – but also to record that I felt the intensity of the vibrating continual tone, as if it were a secret I’d unlocked. The low sinister hum worked me into a passive frenzy and I felt the appropriate mood as would be required for the ritual. I also recorded the three key F#chord and found this to be almost playful and flippant in comparison to the dark singular F#. I have taken steps to obtain a quartz tetrahedron.

Temple of the tangent taken down. I tell myself that the initiates have had long enough to look at my writings, and that I can on-sell them to Ixaxaar with good conscience. But my genuine feelings are that my works are not visibly appreciated, and I grow frustrated at being the only artistic donor – for what? Minor Arcana almost completed... though I grow somewhat dissatisfied with several paintings which appear sloppy and or cut, the full potential of these particulars, yet to be realised... Ixaxaar have supplied me with agreed items of exchange. I feel in high spirits – the incense has been tallied and the cost seems excessive. I've been given indication that I may use seven trees native to Australia – but I am not likely to try this. The ONA ‘7’ have a long tradition of use and history, thousands of years old in some cases. I spurn the idea of a country with only 200 years in the making, a ridiculous history, and virtually no magical experience, providing me with runner-up prizes!

The Naos project is set to explode. There are no alternate tarot available in all the world (that of Baphomet is only major Arcana) and thus no competition – my market is absolute. And by the time a competitor arises I will be long gone. Let them hear my laughter... The seeds are sown now – even now a new wind breaks on the causal sea. Scepticism and praise spokes in the same wheel. The Satanist leads by example and by such examples do the masses dance as if under the spell of the pied piper. There can be only one outcome – change. Those against me are moved to surpass me – to create, to build now that a foundation has been further laid upon the work already done by CB. It matters not what their individual mechanics comprise, but that even in the detractors the sinister grows new leaves... the collective arrogance and unity in my mercurial adversaries, only more blood for the soil. Those who are for me see the possibility of escape from the matrix by example of the power of self. Inspiration is absolute – it will move the masses to generate individual achievement now that it is seen that it can be done, that no Magian restrictions and no dependence on others but oneself is enough.

Intellectual dominion no longer the focus, the plans now are to finish the sinister tarot asap. And to smash the traps and circles in young minds via the expose. Incenses and music still to be gathered, however I feel the body is now the prime focus of my concentration... I feel/suspect practice in ritual is not for me in time, but a sojourn back to earth + the physical via aevea.

AeveA – who seeks to fulfil a role as priestess in a ritual sense, unaware that the priestess is the same role of A in the ultimate end. A woman strong enough to shun the dichotomy, the first step. Who is loyal, trusted, honest, adaptive, changeful and has sealed her integrity with a character befitting of the goddess I knew she was – honour, pride, wisdom, reason, heart and the qualities of the champion race, second step. Strong enough to work without labels, to perform inward change and creativity, elan to bring the silent works to a fruitful harvest that shape within her – elastic enough to break and mend without losing sight of the greater shape, beautiful enough to embrace the hidden, the fear, the unknown, even the shepherd the soldier who shepherds her to reveal more of what lies beneath the chains that bound her power for good reason, the third step. A sense of equilibrium, of over-whelming love and darkness the two illuminators, an empathy to balance the scale when it calls for balance, the rock, the water, the earth, the air, the fire, the sun, the moon, the star who is destined to accompany me in life as my tree of life -she is committed, and I will watch to see the flight of this graceful swallow. Should in a year I feel the similar then I will accept the will of the Dark Gods as my own. Could I want to wait – who is more than she? So infinite this meeting, so divine our pyramid, will we be? Let us be.

FREE: THE BITTER IRONY OF SATANISM

I have established beyond doubt that I do not work well with others. Behind my literary achievements and physical explorations on the LHP, lies a road of crumbling citadels where what could have been can never be all because of how destructive I prove to be to any form.

I worked with the Temple of Hel – but I proved too disruptive.

I worked with Ixaxaar – but proved too disruptive to them.

I worked with Integral Tradition Publishing – briefly – before I proved too disruptive for them.

I tried to gain admission into the IOT – that bastion of chaos whose motto is ‘Nothing is Forbidden, Everything is Permitted’ but they refused me entry on the grounds that I was a Satanist from the ONA.

I tried to work with the Tempel ov Blood whose war-cries of Disruption, Infiltration, and Destruction – aptly applied – served only to poison relations between us forever more. Choronzon fall on your knees.

I tried to work with the MLO – but proved too disruptive for them too.

I tried to make my own way with Mvimaedivm, the Black Glyph Society, and the Temple of THEM: But I proved too disruptive and destructive even to myself.

Anton Long once said to me in a reply to my query of my forms clashing with those of the then fledgling WSA: “There is no conflict, only the appearance of conflict”

Yet, I’ve even proved too disruptive for that which so many honour as the Father of Diversity, that group which has made its name on calling for the practice of such activities and complains that the Magian seeks to silence its voice has tried to silence mine. Shugara get behind thee.

In all these groups there are rampant cries or support for others to practice disruption, anarchy, chaos, destruction, acausality, go beyond good and evil, be evil, the sinister, indulge in deception, be a hard man, a new species, go beyond the veils, and bring down the forms that obscure; the roar of propaganda forms a deafening cacophony. But there is noticeable irony in the fact that my energy proved -too- disruptive for all of them and all of my many past employers, friends, associates and so many things I have ever tried to do.

Dawned, the insight of this dynamic and the understanding that leads me to believe that forms do not and can not represent the energies that they seek to define and control. And that when people claim to desire the presence of certain energies – and those energies present themselves – it turns out they actually meant something else... Which – is what I’ve been trying to warn those asking for them of, all along. So many groups have urged me to go out and wreak unearthly destruction, rain death and disaster down upon the world and its inhabitants – and I have, rampaged, for years – but when I finally get to their door, the fuckers act surprised to see me!

Has no-one else ever noticed that the cries of war are heavily laden with demands of obedience, control, loyalty, honour, family? That it’s okay to be sent to destroy and strive to be unlimited in power as befitting of a dark master – so long as we don’t destroy those who set us on the path? “Bring Chaos!” many of them demanded of me – “hey wait, not actual chaos!”, they all whispered sooner or later.

I was surprised to hear more than one seasoned extremist ask me throughout my sojourn to not publish this or that, or subtly suggest that I keep my ideas to myself lest they prove too revealing – too disruptive.

For the longest time – I’ve feared my power and the compulsion to Be Myself. The fear of escaping free to Be made me controllable and allowed me to be persuaded to channel my energies into certain forms. I changed myself to fit containers – fit expectations and imposed limits on what I was and what I was capable of to suit others.

I once pained over my destructive energy; watched it burn castles and drawbridges with its raging inferno; felt guilt for what I was and what I did. I anguished and lamented at my own nature to destroy everything it touched.

I’m free now though. Free.

I have now Chosen not to be ashamed of my destructive power; to finally embrace My power and revel in the fullness of My nuclear intensity and My will to power. I now see what I didn’t see. What they all saw, and feared. Me, Free.

A Spiritual Orphan of the LHP.

Whatever that means.

LEARNING FROM MISTAKES

I have a couple of occupational confessions to share.

These past few years have possibly been the most significant of my satanic quest – in terms of what I have learned, how I have changed, and how I have changed others. In some way it was a great shame that my penchant for burning bridges, and the misguided arrogance of my youth caused me to make many diplomatic fuck-ups – esp. where the raising of the Temple of THEM was concerned: including but not limited to ruining alliances with:

The MLO (or Misanthropic Luciferian Order) whose work I have come to admire for its tenacity and dark brilliance. But wherein my capricious nature caused a 180 turn halfway through negotiations and an offer to assist them by providing artwork. My inflated sense of power as a black magician and denouncement of the MLO lead to a death threat which I managed to diffuse in what must have been a puzzling conversation for the threatee who then accepted my artwork and assistance despite the fubar I had caused. However, no further contact was made with us by the MLO, and no wonder.

Ixaxaar: I saw Ixaxaar rise from a small bookshop with a few manuscripts into the impressive apothecary of occult strains its represents today. But, wherein my supremely large ego got the better of me – I began (unfairly) to resent my submission of works as Ryan Anschauung without “appropriate compensation”. But, rather than admit that it was my own pig-headed arrogance causing friction I arrogantly denounced Ixaxaar and believed it existed only for the pursuit of money and the distribution of Old Aeon mysticism. Halfway through distributing our then new Temple Manifesto with them, I again fucked up royally, and accused its organisers of theft from our archives concerning WOT documents. I.E.T.T then sent me a list of MSS he had acquired from a different source with the WOT MS and then promptly left me to contemplate my mistake in silence. I can only shake my head in regret for the appalling manner in which I accused the Proud bearer of my Works, whom gave me one of my first chances as an author, whom patiently and lovingly prepared my work for the world and the mistakes I made that led to a broken alliance and shattered relationship with Ixaxaar.

Thirdly, my capriciousness and paranoia – my desire for control and the unforgiving deception that I required the countenance of a black magician led to the destruction of an alliance with the newly arrived Black Light Distributions with whom I had sought to solidify under our umbrella – determined not to make the same mistakes I had made with Ixaxaar – with Mr. Black. Unfortunately – I have done, just that. Mr Black and I had previously forged an alliance and he helped me to get the Sinister Music trapped for so long on cassettes onto disc where it could be shared. If not for Mr. Black, and his generous assistance – the music may have never become available. And yet – again I muddied the waters with my over-bearing attitude of control, imperiousness, and arrogance. I subsequently banned Mr Black and deleted his links – much as a child who does not get his own way is wont to do. For that act – I am ashamed.

Fourth – the infamous Temple ov Blood. I have held a dual view of the ToB ever since my brief work with them long ago. On one hand I have upheld a promise to one of THEM to persecute the ToB for its scorn of him and his Way – for that persecution of each of our enemies was to form the first basis of Solidarity under which we would unite against all that opposed us, coming together as a strong united force. On the other, I have spoken with a number of individuals over the years, some recently, during which I have given my honest opinion of the ToB and its Work – Work that is as powerfully written as its mission enacted – a beautiful writhing script that must be applauded both for the manner in which it hypnotises the reader and delivers messages pertinent, important, and potent to members of the Sinisterion. My recent decision to produce a Liber 333 containing private emails between the ToB and I has come, in a quiet moment, crashing down upon me as the realisation that I would be committing the action of a purely antagonistic warmonger; indulging in the picking of a fight, the needling need to cause change, destruction, disruption, chaos as I am wont to do even in my own forms, my own organisation, sometimes to the detriment of my better judgement – because I realise it has always been in my inherent nature, my very being, to tear things down. To raze them to the ground, to smash, annihilate, destroy.

I tore the ONA apart in such a ruthless fashion – though a dynamism, a goal existed with the ONA – not so the other groups, who I regarded as lesser projects of lesser importance to my mission with the Order – and it was a dynamism that gave my work meaning, not just destruction for its own sake, and a dynamism that I believe has now made the ONA stronger.

Over the years I have torn many things down – often even before they have been properly put up. Many groups I have created have suffered the same fate that I have – a daily self immolation of second-guessing and self-doubt leading to back flips and uncertainty that must have been extremely frustrating at times for my colleagues to witness and endure.

What I have realised from a dark night of my soul – is that the formula of having multiple persons at the side of one has been a vital defence against the many (more) mistakes and blunders I should have made, blinded by my deceitful occult ego, and has prevented the power I have accumulated, both personally, magickally, and as a respected figure on the quest from going to my head – from making grave errors of judgement. My dream of solidarity relies on the careful balance of extremely powerful personalities being able to accept the counsel and wisdom of one's companions – each mindful that the danger of the occult ego exists – and grateful to meet and face without malice, but patience, integrity, and maturity the objections, criticisms, and admonitions from one's respected peers with which he has surrounded himself.

For it has been established that yes men do not work in a Satanic community – nor do they strengthen the individuals of a clan – but lead to the blinding of vision and understanding – the darkening of the Sun that takes many groups to their spiritual doom. I am thus – Proud – that in leaving the Temple I have carefully tended for the past few years – I have not torn it down, nor sought to maintain control over its growth and life: but have passed these responsibilities onto trusted members of the Sinisterion to nurture and expand in their own Ways. I have let go without destroying what has been built. Realisation of this act – that I have not burned a bridge after crossing it – gives me Great Hope; for the Future, for any of my Art that is yet to come, for any of the companions I should now meet, or alliances I should forge with these heavy mistakes above to remind me of the fatal nature of arrogance + for the ability of a man to Change to Learn and Learn to Change.

They say – a Satanist should live with no regrets.

My Brothers and Sisters of the Sinister – I will always regret each of these burned bridges. In my blindness I branded you Fools or treated you badly – because your ways were divergent and different from mine or because I thought I knew better than you what was necessary to presence the Sinister. Now I See. Now I KNOW. That there are many Threads of Wyrld, many Cosmic Wheels of Satan – All to darkly Love. May my blindness – show others how to See.

THE R-REALITY, AND THE ROLE OF LEAD AND GOLD

In life there are some hard truths to swallow and some very hard truths to swallow. Some that cut to the core because of their perceived importance to the soul: a misguided alignment with one's Vyrd.

In life sometimes what we want to be is beyond our ability to attain because we are not intended for that role. Sometimes what we want is secondary to what our role is supposed to be.

Life has an alchemy of its own design that leads us to be what we become and takes us through experiences particular to attaining our Vyrd.

There is necessity for the presence and comedy of both gods and clods and most of us do not get to choose which we will be.

Whilst there is necessity for harmonious elements in the creation of a given form there is also equal necessity for the ugly processes in this same creation. Such forces involve as examples, the archetype of the Fool in a lesser offensive role and the Traitor in the more offensive. Both of whom, though perhaps hated, ridiculed or reviled, are integral to any alchemical creation. Time-honoured archetypes that form the numinous pathway of all stories, visible villains or invisible shadows whom define the experiences and Role of the Hero, Overman, Champion. Every fool serves a purpose, and essential seeds and growth come from the introduction of their element.

It is the destiny of some to be perhaps a caustic element or a harmonious element against their will, with synchronicity sabotaging their conscious intentions or simply from the allotted potential of the organism falling short of delivering the goods to rise above their station because of this hidden undercurrent that binds us to this role. Destined to forever wear a stupid hat and be stoned by others. Certain people, though it causes them strife and suffering, must simply follow a specific or overall trajectory whether they like it, want it, survive it or not. To become who or what these forces intend them to be.

Intended to be by dint of their unique psyche and the forms that they repel and attract in some unknown complex alchemical formula that the world seems to run on and pushes people along a certain course.

For most people no amount of Will can change this course.

Some are inherently good and cannot be evil. I would be lying if I said I had not tried these many years to sabotage the increase of darkness under the guise of being Satanic – and trying to make the world a better place, to change others in a positive way by defusing the heart of darkness.

That is precisely what I have been working for. I am not evil, or elite, and my nature has left a littered road of burning bridges behind me because of the incompatibility of my soul's nature with that of others.

Capricious with a mad mercury, I have constantly thwarted my own intentions, messed things up by getting emotionally invested, morally involved, and at every opportunity thoroughly shared my non-neutral opinions with aggression. I have pushed things just to see what would happen when they fall and yet have been surprised and dismayed at the outcomes when they broke into pieces.

Like an alchemist in a laboratory I have learned a lot from mixing energies like they were chemicals and had them explode in my face. But like a moth to a flame I have mixed the same chemicals only to repeat the explosions again and again. It annoys me that it is not in my character to be a certain something to which I have aspired, that I lack the necessary components in my make-up, will, or bearing to be something part of me really wants to be but which I simply cannot for whatever reason reason gives.

It annoys me that for all my efforts I cannot change this, that it just isn't in my power to do so. I am born to play a Fool in certain of life's regards.

And yet, the value my Fool has brought, even as a bad example of this state of being or bearing I have struggled to be, is just as important to others who need someone to play this role in order for them to be who they are destined to be. All things in the Phyrn have their place. There are things only the Fool can achieve that a given King cannot.

So it is that I need to come to terms and peace that I can never attain this desired state because it is not in me to do so.

And the struggle between my expectation of what I aimed to be and what I am, rages on, neither aspect willing to give up its hold over my direction in life.

To my chagrin – Life did not equip me and I cannot equip myself to live that role but have been assigned to another one I did not choose and mostly did not know. Pride, Arrogance, Egoism, Denial, Doubt and other shields worked wonders to keep such reality from me. And yet as much as it hurts, as embarrassing as it can be, it is my lot and something I have to accept.

I cannot be evil because I am inherently good. I cannot realise certain potentials because they are not there to realise. And coming to know this is sobering. Yet I knew this. I have inveigled myself as a wolf among wolves but with an entirely opposed agenda.

Revealed under such an insight the full tragedy to my ego unfolds like a hammer that I am unable to grant its wishes and in those regards remain Ordinary.

Yet, the importance of caustic/clumsy/foolish/arrogant/misguided elements in the reaction between forms that promotes gestation of certain seeds is as vital a water for forms as any golden effortless example achieved by supermen. Solace in the thought that it is easier to define supermen when you have the example of ordinary men or fools to compare. But ours is a lowly regarded role, like the leper or the town drunk, but without which no King could rule a throne.

And unfortunately for us ordinary men and fools, our services are always required and in great demand.

And Life, in its mysterious maddening way, provides Jesters in great numbers to the Courts of Stories and their Forms.

THE SETTING SUN, RA AND OPERATION KHK

Khk = Krist Hollow Krist. It is a moniker describing the authors name and veiled intention of creating and living the Archetype of the Saviour, to understand the mindset of a messiah, who would in the end reveal themselves a Hollow Christ. This role revolved around the concept of Insynsian and elaborately illuminated many unexplored and experimental insights into the Temples field of Oromancy or Narrative Magic. Now we know what the buttons in the glass elevator do. Interested parties can find many additional threads and expressions from the temple at the 600 club. The Khk moniker was first used in mid-2008 via an account at the 600 club marking the beginning of a long and harrowing descent into the world of mythos and archetypal sorcery.

Khk stems from a descriptor of the Temples short-hand symbolism +0+, or Cross Hollow Cross. As has been revealed in various locations and to others selectively observing the process without knowing the intent behind it, the o9a were unknowing players in a private game of alchemy and shape-shifting for deeply personal gain. But which alchemy has also joined them more closely in alliance against our ghost and has seen them grow stronger as a result with dozens of their tributaries lamenting various antics of the trickster, Ryan Anschauung, allowing them to further develop guidelines on how to be one of them, expand their ideas in symbiosis or from opposition, and identify and flesh out more controls over soft spots in oftentimes ambiguous to the point of nebulous doctrines of expectation and philosophy.

Intimations of this role which was lived demonically and followed the shape-shifting dynamic of the Galactic Organic viz. changing through various roles i.e see Confessions of a Sun God, to fulfil certain private experiments of form are littered throughout the entire corpus of Them and these secret agendas were played very close to the chest. Magic of an Archetypal nature has shown itself to work best when utilised on unconscious organisms. The role of RA ceased in late 2013 with a link openly made between his phantom and his agenda by naming him as the author of the Temple's short novel Holochrist.

ADVERSARY

Brief notes on my Insight Role as an Avatar of the Messiah.

Through my Insight Role as a Skinhead (See Diary of a Devilworshipper Vol 2) I had been somewhat bemused to behold the prevalence and permeation of Christ within various strains of their belief. The KKK as one instance or many other Right-wing groups inc. some in Sydney and Melbourne had a system that was tied up in God. This puzzled me. My defining boundaries of what constitutes Christian Values are extremely wide as I believed that it comprised the three Abrahamic Religions; Islam, Christianity, and Judaism; Any Dualistic reference that emphasised an ultimate moral division i.e Good or Bad ; Any organisation that used Hierarchy and Station to Interpret the Divine; Any group that imitated the behaviours of Worship, Piety, Faith, Blind Obedience, Hypocrisy, Sin, Holiness, Zealotry, Spite, Cruelty, Monotheism etc; any group or persons whose actions derived Strength from upholding the Status Quo; any any type of form that in some way mirrored the structure, aims, actions and cruelty of the Church. And in particular, the necessity for any form to require an enemy thus perpetually endorsing Duality as a valid internal and external structure. This is not a conclusive list.

However, it irritated me that this mentality had spilled into All things that I could see, even those forms that seemed to be above or outside it were from my p.o.v hopelessly entrenched in it. For in those things Anti-Christian or Satanic I only saw the face of God whose forms had determined the shape, style and appearance of them all, as mere negatives of Nazarene Ideology, flip sides of the same coin, the exact same thing. All about me in this land were cries of be free but only when I say so. And only how I say.

My Satan, is just one minor player in the pantheon of Ancients I describe as THEM. But the key lesson I took from Satanism and the example of Satan is Never bow down. God created and gave his angels massive power, put them to work for his ends, and placed himself above all others saying none should covet my throne for its simply not allowed. Satan heard God but chose to rebel anyway because no authority, no instruction, no demand, no word, no law, no army, no threat, no appeal to honour, loyalty, reason or love, not even the Creator was good enough, high enough, to stop him from doing what he wanted to do. And it is very odd albeit depressingly typical to continually see others try, under some code, through appealing to honour, loyalty, patriotism, my conscience, guilt, remorse ad infinitum to control who I am and what I do. I'm One of THEM, loyal to the highest of Satanic forces, the inhuman forces that dwarf human ideals, crush feeble alliances, eat all forms and fuck all stars. Chaos. The virtue of Autonomy, Heuristic, Heretic. I represent all shapes and no shape.

Of all things alien to Satanism, and to me, was this king of anti-ideals, the concept of the Messiah, Jesus Christ, A Savior, A prophet who was sent to save the World and all of those in it who would have the Wisdom to be saved. A Divine, holy, forgiving sage who was far above mortal men and sent to rescue their souls. At least it seemed alien with people trying to distance themselves from the Church and its values and behaviour as much as they could, and yet curiously repeating the same only inverse. Because it was and is still the adopted mantle of All leaders particularly those I expected it least from to act as holy men and authoritative and tell others what to do, and mad-deningly being utterly oblivious to the depressing irony of it all, babbling about freedom to Be whilst strangling it at every turn. This nonsense returned my detachment plunging me back into a nihilism of human concerns and feelings and a dismissive hatred of human hypocrisies and the forms that enshrine them.

I searched inside for the next pivotal step, what was more against my nature than anything else, what would it be hardest for me to be, to live as, to Become? Jung provided the impetus to choose the archetype of Christ – not the Christ – but the holistic energy of a Christ. A Redeemer. These thoughts and annoyances plagued my thoughts and I began to develop a goal to confront them. So, I adopted the archetype and imitated the behaviour of a Christlike demeanour into my online presence as Aryan Weltanschauung, or Ryan Anschauung, a name reflecting my bitter annoyance of the white brotherhood from my previous role whom I felt I could be brothers among but whose system was corrupted by sickening Christianity and values.

In the end I discovered a great deal about who I am, what I am capable of, what appearances and forms are capable of, and that Forms no matter what denomination stem from a unity that stems from THEM. Christian or Satanist, irrelevant.

Some brief comments: Did I think I was Christ? No, I'm not an idiot. I imitated Christ. Every major decision or minor required me to ask Wwjd. What would Jesus do? I drew on all the piety, kindness, virtue, selflessness, altruism, benevolence I had apprehended from the Bible and the dramatae of my spiritual stock of what Christ, the Messiah, a Redeemer of any religion, represented and how, and all of the evangelistic, zealous, arrogant, forceful, examples I felt and thought when trying to apprehend and exhibit the spirit of Christ given to me most closely by my sister and religion at large. And I set forth and played the role demonically for a very long time to understand just why this, of all archetypes, was everywhere, in everything, and everybody. And to understand the dis-connect others had put me onto as regards acts, actions, words and reality. At times living this embodiment or phantom did threaten to consume my identity for the only way to be Christ is to be possessed by some other force, to let it in and let it take over, and at times it did. But it was more than a role to imitate a Saviour, it was a role to Imitate a Saviour, to lead as a Hollow Christ, the shadow of the Devil, and show others in time that what they had followed was a false God, that they had been led by illusions, an archetype, had not seen the wizard behind Oz and that this was not just an act employed by me but other human beings especially so authorities, and the inability to distinguish magic and form as phantoms was precisely the reason Christianity was so prevalent, why its behaviours were the keystones in all groupings, and why the Change away from this fixed heaven was not coming but being upheld by those believing themselves in opposition. Too often did I ally with forces that claimed to honour individuality, autonomy, heurisy, and heresy only to be morally roped and spiritually raped by just another priest of another church with its own single God. Too often did these clergymen try to restrain, control, dictate, punish, own, me and those in their flocks with new bibles, and crosses and crusades. And from both sides, it forced me to take the actions I did to gain the understanding I have.

Was my role convincing? Utterly.

Do I think I am an Avatar of a Messiah? No. I'm not an idiot. It was a private experiment played out over a long period to know some things, explore a side of me most deeply repressed by my entrenchment in Satanism, an experiment of forms, phantoms, wondering how far it could go, how powerful it could be, what the purpose function and world utility of imitating an archetype I've devoted my life to destroying would feel like, and an exceptional dedication that convinced all that it was intended to convince. So convincing that the revelation of the role has been met with denial, anger, accusations, stones and a small crowd marching to the castle gates bearing torches amid cries to kill the monster. The power of archetypes is the future of magic, the evolution of alchemy, insofar as my sorcery is concerned.

Was this all pre-planned? No. Of course not. The concept began to form early 2008 shortly after my incarnation "Friend Ley/Lee/Lei" through which I ran the Mvimaedivm group and the metamorphosis into Khk. Elements of it that were planned; an overall design of the hypocrisy I wanted others to see by creating an external mirror; a fascination with using various archetypes, stances, movements, attitudes, appearances to make certain things happen, a rebellious desire to choose the o9a as my Devil for I was enamoured by them and it would be entirely against my nature to wage war against them, dangerous, stupid, social suicide, thus ironically the appropriate dynamism for self-insight and the fitting impetus to do so; an organic dynamic leading up from my past that led me into performing this role as a natural progression of my journey of shapes (Mvimaedivm) of my need to know certain things about how things work or break ; and a deep fascination with the particulars of Mythos, Archetypes and Change and how powerful they were.

But it really took its own path, told its own story much of the time. It was a crazy mix of Chance, Crazy, Accident, Opportunity, Magic, Manipulation, Direction, Misdirection, Chaos and Determination – trying to leverage people and forces to do certain things or provoke certain events or story lines into being was like trying to ride a mechanical bull. Both internally and externally. Successes and failures in fairly equal measure. Part way through I began to understand the life dynamics of the Other, of the Enemy, of deeper forces required to be present for certain things to present themselves. How acting as this or that changed a story. The battle that raged between opposed forms was not There was a lot of learning. A lot of mistakes. A lot of leaving character. And vice-versa a lot of pain caused by staying in character. But I suffer for my art. I always will. Even if no-one likes it.

Am I insane? Probably a bit.

Am I a sociopath? Probably a bit.

Did I get anything out of it? YES.

Do I regret anything? NO.

Does any part of me feel people need to be saved from themselves? At one time some inkling, but We fed him to the gaping maw of wake the fuck up. All humans, all forms, are Food for THEM.

Of course, the whole exercise, was all quite crazy. Devilishly hypocritical. Sadistic and Sadomasochistic. The ambitions of an unstable mind, opening locked doors and stumbling through forbidden forests i.e. a Sorcerer. Perhaps because doing what is entirely not in our interest, fiendishly seems to be in our interest. We have always insisted that no form, even anti-form cannot help but be hypocritical, for all forms cast an instant shadow, a reverse, a negative, and thus a duality that provides contradiction even as it provides the tension. It seems a law that forms corrupt themselves, no matter of what kind, eventually. We treat our symbolism, terminology, what-have-you as abstracts, ornaments hanging on a tree in space, to be picked, bitten and enjoyed or discarded. They are hollow constructs as everything is hollow. I learned a painful deal about myself, my own illusions and delusions, and internal archetypal associations and pool and it was worth it for that bounty alone.

In summary there is no moral to the story to be taken away here, no parable, no convictions, no truths, no wisdom; as the Sorceress once said in regards to my question of the Nine Moons Ordeal whether months of continual sexual excitement without release could damage future ability to get an erection (no): “Maybe, but it’s the Dark Side of the Force and we seek to master it.” The overall result of this experiment fed the quantum platform and philosophy of the Temple of THEM. The wealth of additional insights of daring to act the Archetype of a Saviour, some profound others merely chain links have mostly been written down amidst the writings here or added to them, altered them, refined them as the role unfolded; those of Insynsian, Phorm 361, Chronobet, An Analysis of Form, Vindex as Christ (sinister 101) and so many dozens of others that flesh out the detailed blueprints of Form and its utilities, the motions and movements that cause change or force it. The touchstones of Mvimaedivm and Oromancy.

You will have to dig for them among the 361+ posts in this WordPress. You never know what you’ll find.

Or what will find you.

Others are yet to come, but they are all yours, Adversary.

AETURNUS

If the Mother Complex bid me to create the Temple of THEM, the Thrasz a feminine symbol of the womb, creation, fecundity – Then the Father Complex bid me to create a new type of man – the First man, a compensation as I had none.

Notably, my disappointment with O9A, which I had adopted as a paternal influence, a guiding hand, a masculine tour de force that exemplified and exalted the best of Satan, and seeing in Anton Long the archetype of the wise old man, left me feeling betrayal, at which point I withdrew my projection and retreated.

I poured my energy into the Mother Complex, spending decades writing and philosophising, creating a rich internal fantasy in which I dreamed myself special, a powerful sorcerer, a potent symbol freed from my mundane reality.

For me the inner world was far more exciting than the outer and this accounted for many failed relationships, lack of interest in jobs or ability to keep them. When I had been a drinker I had partied, been the life of them, had dangerous and risky adventures, a strong, robust, reinforced ego, and a lot of carefree fun and revelling. Though even after my drinking ceased, I still had a good outer life – the inner world still held great and hypnotic fascination for me; an escape; and the hope and idea that all my efforts would someday inspire and fulfil other young men and women in a way that finding books had fulfilled me. But also, to retrospectively, retroactively, provide some kind of guide to life that I often felt was sorely lacking in my youth – perhaps again, due to a missing father figure. How disappointing and profound that energies of two mixed in one should give life to such a volcanic eruption.

Who then are THEM but the inner world's deeper denizens, those ignored functions and actors whom I shuttered away, as I more and more retreated into the safety and security of my fantastical creation to the detriment of real life. What was all of it but the murmurings of the blind idiot Azagthoth, unable to integrate the mother and father; knowing neither, both strangers; both ghosts. Mvimaedivm – now know my way; was originally a Book of Shadows. And what is all of the Temple but a voluminous book of shadows, testament to the ceaseless power of the unconscious to create, ruminate, masturbate. Decades: a lifetime, spent at the coalface shovelling black rocks into the furnace to create glowing embers year after year; but never hot enough to incinerate the delusion, immolate the prison.

What then are THEM but my Parents; the ghostly phantoms of archetype that forged me in some secret process I never knew. How to integrate figures one does not know? – whose externality is an endless pattern of superficial dealings, locked off and away from the rich, living, potent internal psyche still affected and made turbulent by the absence of these missing pieces? A hole, an abyss, a time-trap, where I stand still, frozen in ice, motionless and moribund while about me dance the frenzied forms and forces, remnants and voices of my subconscious. Thrasz. Retreating to my castle to brood, my black tower protected from the world with walls and defences, silence and hostility while the world goes on about me, awashing past me in great waves; laughter and tears, indoor and outdoor, zoos and parties, cheese and wine, mountains and beaches, sex and love. Things that I have been, could be, could have been, could still be – if I could release myself. Thrasz.

If I could dismantle my tower and break down the walls and let life carry me along in its current. Thrasz. And what are THEY but the fractured, the incompleting, the fragmented aspects of myself pushed into shadow as irreconcilable and become demons. What am I but a tormented archetypal fool, dragged along on a mad chase by unconscious forces doomed to write a Sisyphean odyssey until I die with a pen in my hand. So many times, I have stood on this precipice and forgotten – as far back as the third diary I tried to integrate, to do my shadow work, to overcome the powerful jailers that keep me treading this bizarre and morbid tesseract. And I have been as many times subsumed again, lost beneath the bathyal waves, lost from the view of the lighthouse and drowned in the ecstasy of the fantasy inner world and its temptatious riches and wealth. Offered a dance within the fairy ring for just a few hours, and verily hypnotised to dance the eternal dance.

And through it all, through the heady perfumery and intricate furnishings, the thick incense and the overdosing on the lyrical poetic drug still there comes a Calling: a rescuer, some chthonic saviour or whisper from the deep that struggles time and again to break through this licentious miasma: Remember, it says.

REMEMBER.

For the unconscious is of extraordinary unparalleled power. My own psyche a glittering constellation brimming with denizens that stalk the spaces as some Lovecraftian elder gods, swallowing those who dare trespass, those who would dare to seek the source of secrets and wrestle against the fates. And their tremendous power – causes me to forget; to forget the work I have done withdrawing projections or managing my Anima, to extricate and integrate my Shadow, to arrogantly but humbly chart this journey inward that others might not have to – or know to chart their own. I forget the path, the destination, I am unmade over and over; falling deep into the Abyss and lost to my lantern. Remember. It is difficult to remain on the mountainous pass that leads to the depths. Remember. The sheer volume of energy expended to explain the path that returns to the beginning. Remember. The incalculable exchange of all the other things I might have done with my time than journey here. Remember. The blissful ignorance I could have revelled in and none the wiser to the Other Door. Remember. The red pill and the blue pill. Remember. The comfortable illusion of a single I insulated from the burden of psychic wholeness. Remember. A happy child born and raised by two parents, structurally guided, sure of himself, secure and supported, a successful man of the outer world. Remember. No need to do any work, but to lay down the pen, the coal shovel and my life and rest or die. Remember. No driven imperative to be more than I can be, to search in vain for the Philosophers stone, the holy grail and delve into the great Mystery. Remember. No endless reams of paper, digital archives and furied eureka expression that bubble up and froth from within gorging books worth of words. Remember. A bland, mediocre, pale, flat, replicable, flesh-driven, time-taking, satisfying life lived according to the schema set by others. Remember. Psychic security and insulation that I am who I am, everything is as it appears, there is no essence, no need to question the reality before me. Remember. That I would not forget, entranced by the sway of internal gods, enticed to forget that I came to steal fire. Remember. The hero symbol that accompanied me on my journey to Hades whom would prompt at the darkest of times, in the darkest of shades, in the deepest of bowels, in the dance of the macabre and at the critical moment of life in the jaws of death. Remember. The blazing lantern of tendrils whose eye balefully glares from Within illuminating the oily silent sea and the sinuous slither of its serpents. Remember. A word emblazoned again and again as a secret cipher that only I would understand and understand when it was needed most. Remember. Followers on my trail in the unknown, the fearful underground and labyrinthine hells, Sent, to remind me. Remember. Forces that could penetrate the viscous murk and free me again and again from my twisted cage, my suspended gibbet, swinging to and fro in the cold darkness. Remember. A sword and a shield, a word and a symbol, the Holy and the Heretical that find me in the final battle, at the End of Days, fighting for life against the Minotaur. Remember. That I need not a sword not word nor battle but heart, love and purity. Remember. That the map is not the territory, that what is built does not become a tyrannous mirage that leads into the desert and away from the oasis. Remember. That the mythos is an allegory. Remember. Toward Someday I might cross those wastelands and pass through those leaden gates and be with THEM, and feast and rejoice. Remember. That someday, I might know THEM like THEY know me.

Remember Say I unto I, and, Remember Say I unto You.

Today I celebrate my 41st Birthday. I didn't believe I would make it this far into life. I've created a prolific amount of work in my youth. Now that I have made it further along the spiral in years, have unlocked and am presently enacting my Wyrld, contributed a legacy to the occult, become the sorcerer I wished to be and forced those changes I wished to see, endured the struggle with which I was tasked and followed the instruction of THEM within and without toward Undividuation – I can only wonder what lies ahead as I enter this stage of my life and finally merge my separate realms. The Temple of THEM is 14 years old and not yet halfway into its merger but the hard majority of the alchemy required has already been completed. THEY are pleased. So am I. One who Remembers.

In just 5 months I will be 42 years of age. I look back at my achievements vs my dreams in this life and I am strangely satisfied. The unsettling feeling, my Geas has diminished in strength and my fanaticism Toward has given way to a simple desire to retreat and paint. I feel that in many ways, the urgency the immediacy of what I had intended to do with my life has been excused by that force that dwarfs us, the COVID-19 virus. Such monumental changes on a global basis leave any of my own efforts at transforming this human race, improving it, breaking the cycles of Obscuranti, forging any kind of anchor back to that from whence I and we came, Evolving as many as possible beyond the primal animal and broken shards – in pale shadow. It places my fevered dreams in context and exonerates my service to Those that Called.

I have seen so much change – and seen so many things that do not or refuse to change. This life and its patterns seems to be an immutable law – and it is in the defeats by those forces I have understood the humble nature of my victories as a little spark of life that accidentally got possessed with fiery purpose, conveyed with attempts at poetry and philosophy to try and understand who I am, who you are, who we were, who THEY are – and in some way, fumble through the moral tangle of a jealous envy for destructive agents a remembered promise to something I will never understand – seeking in conclusion to leave this world richer, kinder, less broken for having been here such a brief time. With my grasp on my Wyrð wrenched out of my hands and my task given to better masters I dutifully enter the next stage and Autumn of my life – where, I am content, and satisfied to create my maps and express the natural beauty of the world within them, assemble the final pieces and construction of my game, which too has lost much of its urgency, the ferocious drive that spurred me on to exhort and exhale against the ravages and passing of time and feel like it was always slipping away from me – has vanished. As if the fire that burned inside me has changed colour now – and in this year 2020 of contemplation for so many tsunamis in my own personal life and all life have made peace with that ebbing of the dyn and clamour of conquering.

So then, to retreat to the mountains with the dragons to be a silent monk – until such time I hear another calling from THEM, leaving my papers with my best efforts behind for whatever good or ill. When all is said and done – all that I have done was as a child, teenager or younger man, thrashing about in ethers grasping for meaning and yoking conclusions into a ridable chariot for convenience, and this, my diary where I poured all those weird angles and impulses for decades now is to be put away for a while. Now, I suppose, the Real journey begins – But, I found it. And I will treasure it. May THEY watch over. ⊕

O, what a tangled web you, we, They and THEY weave. Where, am I now? Because I feel, Whole. For the first time in a very long time, since I had my visitation and my gift of Bliss that shaped me into the Sun of Satan. Lightbearer, working from and within the shadow, searching in the lead and the filth for long elusive gold.

Too many lanterns to recount have led me to this pristine place, synchronous elegant complexities weaving and woven into one another so adeptly as to wonder once more at the presence of intelligent design; and universal cosmic love, karma, and the ecstatic joys that can be found in being human; Pattern.

For have I not been inhuman, distanced and detached from their noisy throng and shuffle, disdainful of the hypnotic debasing drone and drum of their machinations and hateful that I should be forced to participate? My smile, that effervescent desire to Be, Here; to live and not to leave, to Be, less than a marching imperative, to Do; has returned. The desire to devour fades.

And those whispered secrets of alchemy and Jung have been vindicated; announced, arrived; proclaimed in their fullness; lead has been transmuted, and the glowing alembic has bought the lilac and green entwined of coiled dragons forth. My internal struggle is silent, restful, resolved; I am at peace on a level I have never known but for the presence of god.

And my alchemical secrets, against all chance and the process, have not been lost, in translation or to time – they stand here with me, a chartered course to the stars, through hell's round trips and heavens partake; the rarest of written gems; a spell that works.

I am grateful, thankful, in awe and wonder at the trail and the many glittering stars that marked it, those other human beings and their journeys that crossed my own, blazed in and left trailing light in the darkness – gifts and givings for which I am humbled and honoured that have guided me into and out of the grey desert. Countless yet countable, memorable, loved and beloved, known and unknown, here or no longer here; kindred hearts and magnets for all my forms, for every phase, every trek – universal love and universally loving. In hate, in war, in haze, at crossroads, at junctures, at mountain passes, or darkened roads – always, for me, a Lantern.

And for you too, coming this way through the shrieking madness, the noxious and toxic, hellish and harmful, baleful and bloody; making your way, your Mvimaedivm, through the blinding fog of time and the inevitable gulf of space; I hope the Temple of THEM can be your Lantern.

And that you, will Remember, to leave lanterns of your own to guide the others that come after you; and someday become a lantern yourself. That you may emerge from the Mystery a shining star that lights the night, illuminates the purpose and tradition of magick and gives hope, love, meaning and a map to those and that which are hopeless, loveless, meaningless and map-less.

That you place a stone in the Temple of THEM.

By its timeless, endless names, its shifting, changing forms, may it and we endure and become Undividual.

In Self-Honest Synchronicity,

NAVIGATING A COURSE TO THE STARS

I cannot navigate my course by the counsel of other people. When I had the audacity to enter the world as a someone, to dare to speak and make myself known and join the cacophony of the human choir in some barely perceivable way to be recognised, I inevitably found both lovers and haters on my arms. In one ear I have followers, friends and well-wishers who cheer me on with sweet applause and ego-strokes. I feel their words affecting those functions inside me that are trained to be titillated by such caresses; a connection of the praise with my sense of identity, the tickle of my ego's cock causing it to course with excitement and swell with pride.

As beautiful, as loving, as kind or heartfelt;- It is archetypically the lure song that invites hubris, the dangerous lull of the sirens around one that invite a dangerous over-inflation, a trip and then a fall. But such songs sung to one are among the most beautiful and sensual songs of the human race. It is a difficult task not to want to go toward such songs and lose oneself in the high of erotic adulation. And in the other ear – echoes the vitriolic detestation of the hangmen, whose cutting words and savageries of my character spew forth with anger and manifest as belittlement by assembled crowds who hold my name in stocks and throw rotting vegetables and sharp stones as hard as they can to dent my flesh and scour my soul, my works, my memory, my name from the earth. To cut my influence out of their beloved shapes.

When I am in the position of having both love and hate poured down upon me;- how do I orient my compass? Do I appeal to ethics, morals, beliefs, egoism? I've been on this journey a long time with many different travelling companions and have tried many kinds of adjustment to please, to fit in, to appease, to steer or even build an entirely new ship together. And with both loving and hateful comments on my steering of my ship – which are valid? If I had one or the other, perhaps it should be easier. Do I listen to the praise and adulation that informs me I am doing a good job and steering the ship correctly – be happy in myself and firm in my beliefs, trusting in the word/perceptions/love of others? Or do I acknowledge the hate and contempt, the 'slings and arrows' that rain down, as being ruthless truths, as revealing admonishments that I was a terrible captain who has caused the vessel to run aground and crack its hull;- should I be dissatisfied with myself and doubtful of my conduct, course and beliefs, trusting in the word/perceptions/hate of others?

When the ego is no longer the filter – when acceptance is no longer a consideration or desire – praise does not help me to decide if something I have done is good in their eyes or intrinsically good, and hate does not help me to decide if something I have done is bad in their eyes or intrinsically bad. One force wants to tear me down, the other wants to raise me up;- to which one do I listen? Generally those lifted up by others as Something are lifted up by allowing their ego to be strengthened through praise and coming to identify with the pedestal upon which they are placed. They find fulfilment and reward in listening to and believing the good things and encouragement given to them. It is the fuel by which an ego is raised higher than the common man to play some role, be something to someone.

Most people will seek praise and do what they can to garner the respect and adoration of their peers by doing what is expected of them by those peers – and in the same breath do what they can to avoid being punished, shunned or shamed by those peers. When the ego is the active filter, seeking reward and avoiding punishment is all that is required, it means only the sacrifice of individuality for the greater needs of the many, an abandonment of personal integrity. To allow others to grab your wheel and steer. Being someone means allowing oneself to be invested with authority or power or some archetypal resonance; inflated out of proportion via praise until they believe the hype, overstep their mark, insult their followers and adorers thus becoming a victim of hubris, and inevitably fall.

And contra-wise those who are torn down let the stones thrown crush their spirit, identifying with the cruel things said of them, believe they are a failure, a scourge, entombing them in doubt and shame. They care so much about the impressions of others, what people think, what people say, that they seek to be loved even at the risk of mediocrity making great concessions to their personality to be accepted.

Why did I listen to what others have to say? And that I don't care what they have to say about me, or care anymore about how they see my work, and shun acceptance from their tribes, does this affect the process of the archetypal crucible?

Why did I – and by I, I mean any who are in the 'twixt of such weird fortunes as to be either loved or hated by the two sides of that one fickle emotion, passion – care? Was I too stupid to realise this perennial game never ends well and that pleasing the People has been a challenge every human has failed to achieve? How did I remain blind so long to the superficial comedy of it all? How did I entertain my Love for humanity for so long in the face of the obvious? I was archetypically invested with some role and projected upon to fill in the gaps of who I am, what I look like, what I have done, what I represent in the absence of clear definition – and created differently in each of the minds of these Others who brought me forth on their own curious stages and treated as somehow special and representative of something or a scourge and a cancer of something – but either way something. Someone with something who needs to be steered to their advantages. And, that I have decided not to play ball with these others, those who like me, or hate me, is this too hubris? Am I to be thrown down for attempting to subvert the course of the God's? Is the irony that I will offend my friends as much as my enemies by saying that I simply do not need or desire to hear them anymore? Neither good things or bad things?

If I were to try to please both and set a course for middle ground – I could allow the ego to draw strength from the praise to bolster the confidence to be what was required – and yet be watchful of hubris by identifying with and accepting the savage cuts others attempt to make to my pride, reputation and sense of purpose – from others who are not me, but think it is their place to guide me. To tell me what to be, how to be it, how to act, and what to champion. Who say they are disappointed I have not become what they wanted, could not be the idol they so desire for worship. If I could juggle the advice of the different sides and take the balance, somehow chart a course that favoured both of them, I might adjust myself to perform actions and doings that fit in with what they want me to be, what they wish to see. I could abandon myself to their fickle whims, go along with their currents, twist myself into the shapes that please them, to appease them – as the majority of my journey I have indeed tried to do. A thankless tiresome drudge I assure.

Or If – I did listen to one above the other, and steer my ship along their designated course to please them, to side with their course, what then? To change shape once, is to be expected to twist into the contours they imagine however insane or uncomfortable, to lose what I am, among the need to bend to their wills and let their hands mould my clay. And when one day I grew tired of their capricious demands and resisted, when I did not allow them to drape me in their finery so as to resemble their God? Stones. Arrows. Holocaust. Stones just beneath the surface.

But by choosing to try and steer by the directions of others, I merely anger those others who supported a particular course, who then turn away from me and shift from an adoring crowd into bitter detractors, jilted lovers who believe I have abandoned them, failed them, cheated them. Or who lay down their spears and cruel jibes for I have submitted to their demands, they have cowed me, won me, forced me to abandon who I am for who they want me to be. Lovers become Haters, and Haters become Lovers like a changing tide, and all on the back of Forms.

To stand tall or even mildly appear less short, among humans is a dangerous endeavour. I cannot please both, and if I have, it was only for a short time before timeless forces crept back in, hammering at my hapless idol they had each hewn of stone with fists of hatred or love. And should I side with pleasing one or the other, or try to please both, the end result is the same. Those forces that raise and lower, encourage and condemn, exist no matter who we are and wherever in time we are born – and whatever we may say. It is inevitable that some asshole and some sweetheart, will always exist to support and strangle. And I have learned that neither one is useful in determining the intrinsic worth of a life's work.

What do humans despise more than someone different? Someone the same. And to what advantage all of this nonsense, trying to ride this writhing sea of hands so ready to support and tear apart the body at any given moment depending on the course of the ship? What security, what stability, what purpose to trying to remain an idol that never changes or always changes in accordance to the wild whims of other people? Why rise up with a voice, at all? Why not just join the throngs worshipping and demonising Gods at various mounts and be part of the vicious unthinking sea who sends gentle lapping and monstrous tsunamis at the feet of others in equal measure? Why exist as a personality? Why separate from the herd? And what of the irony? The blinding idiocy? They hold me up or hold me down – and those that do either only support the very nature of my work, vindicate the glimmerings sensed of the power of force and form embodied in certain someones and somethings that people use to their own advantages, their love and hate emerges from the primal need to control the Story and its characters, to guide, and to change how others see me for own personal advantage and agenda. This is what causes the violence on the subjective stage believed objective where only one idol may stand at a time and the schism'd throngs fight to each have their mad idol on it.

What I have done to others, others do to me, without the sagacity to see the pattern, the irony, the comedy, the majesty, the alchemy. To navigate a course, to orient my way in the world, to be who I am and do what I do until the sun goes down or I arrive at my destination: this is my ship. And such is perhaps hubris, for what God created God can destroy, and a someone is always believed to be owned by the others. To navigate a course, I believe in neither force. Listen to neither force. Am swayed by neither force. I am my own force or I am Nothing. Other people know nothing. They feel they are entitled to a say but what entitles them?

I listen only to the Inhuman, the raw voice of THEM, to my voice. For praise is a shiny bauble of poison and hatred is clumsily disguised love – one is the other. For we who are raised up or razed down are but the latest character in an ancient archetypal story demanding heroes, villains, redeemers and sacrifice, as necessary pieces on a board for debate between the divided opinions of those who make them and break them according to their need and needlessness. The phantoms of an entirely mad populace. The whole story is -traditionally- beyond our control – it is unconsciously acted out by puppets of nature through human farce and comedy, taken drastically seriously in its event but soon has its edges and immediacy dulled – a tale told and retold and each time remembered and forgotten differently or entirely. It is supposed to play out beyond recognition as unconscious powers and forces that control the story and the humans in it the way it always has, the gods of force and form shifting power, charging one monument and then another as the appropriate God. It is the lot of someone's to be loved and listened to and then torn apart or replaced through the tragic short-sightedness and zealotry of human actors of opposing sides who forever seek new idols as their tastes change, their age demands, their spiritual abyss craves. For the someone's forget they are actually no ones and that it is a twisted eldritch game of the Gods, played out across the world of men since time immemorial. And the People get frustrated trying to remake their God into new shapes, all shapes, impossible shapes: angry and vexed that their Idol no longer attains, resembles, represents, their ideals of perfection.

I am not supposed to be conscious of this process. The magic, the illusions, the rawness of it all is not supposed to be pointed out to others either. It is a secret game we are meant to play in the dark, the someone's quietly pretending not to be no'ones that the no'ones have draped in masks and status, and the inevitable march up the mountain to be king for day, before being burned as a witch the next. To refuse to entertain the game, to reject both the love and hate of the no'ones, to not be the role of the someone, and refuse to rejoin the no'ones, what is this? It is to draw back a curtain forbidden to touch and reveal a scene that is so bizarre it confuses and startles.

To be One of THEM means moving away from the human. To forget them. To eat them. To embrace that alien voice of THEM that grows louder day by day. I am navigating my own course to the Stars. Anything else is Hollow.

DISINHERITED: TRUE POWER (-LESSNESS)

What is the Grail, this undying need to discover, to evolve, to overcome the shackles of life? It's where they all start, but where I ended up is too much. Face to face with the Machine, the haunting spectre of mortality, the pointlessness of birth and death, the carefully paraded trails of children on their way to be indoctrinated generation after generation on the pavement, the precious resource of the Magi. And after that, mediocrity, the struggle to distinguish, I thought, but it is not that at all – it's a struggle to remain illusioned, to have Purpose. What are we without purpose? What is purpose? What does my life really matter? To transcend the obstacles in the Occult, the hidden, and finally see from the top of the mountain is ghastly, it burns my Ego, the view is so strong, so antithetical to it – it crushes me, smashes me and there is not only agonising sorrow there is resignation to a beast, the helplessness that nothing will ever change, the Dragon is too strong.

So now I understand the real meaning of the mythological fall of Satan. It is as if Heaven, those within it question it not, perform their duty, live out their story without worrying about the perception of being young, old and dead in the once, they do not concern themselves that so many have struggled in their life and achieved nothing – not even a memory. So many men and women so filled with self-importance, so sure of their needs, their wants and desires and dreams, so sure of their hold on the realm, so certain they wanted to fuck or frolic, dominate or destroy, create or succeed and how many of them does anyone remember? Can you name four Gladiators, whom Rome beseeched? No. Long gone, forgotten, whatever they did deed or misdeed, irrelevant. And yet the same ridiculous spectacle of those marching about pretending they own the earth, causing grievance with their posturing, so sure of their destiny, so sure of their strength and purpose. And this too will fade. Like all else has faded.

So, what then, the purpose? The world remains asleep because it cannot be woken. Only a few manage to wake, through effort, through noble stupidity, through stealing the fire of the Gods in trying to peek behind the veil of it all – and what do they see, does not make them better, does not make them happy, does not make them pleased, does not make them at all – in fact the sight very much, Un-makes them. Everything as it should be, the Angels go about their duties unaware of the Will of God and believing they have free choice. It is is their first gift. And yet, while this march continues, generation after generation, children raised into workers, workers into cogs, cogs into the machines, machines into purpose. their second gift is Ignorance and thus bliss. Almost all are oblivious in Heaven for they have some purpose or another that stretches out their life, dominates it; they have family, ambitions, grandeur, material possessions, spirituality, an enemy, a quest. The day-by-day plans to attend a party, get that job, go see a friend, work out the body, resolve a conflict, go through some motion and then another. And the longer-term plans, to get married, have children, own a house, become famous... To enjoy pleasure. And that is all. To enjoy pleasure. To live a life quickly forgotten in the streams of time.

But then a few poor souls embody Satan. They question the state of perfection, they aren't happy with Eden and they set about to look behind the veil, for the Creator, or to understand the Creation. And when they see the true face of what it hides, they are Thrown Down, cast from Heaven, never able to look God in the face again, never to find Bliss or Peace or swim in the dark sea like all the other fish. A terrible sadness, loneliness, despair, about the nature of all things and the senseless insignificance of one's own being and spreads to all beings, torrents in, crushing hope. Crushing, Hope.

Generally, time is felt passing by the human from back to front and this prevents the full ramification of being in the past present and future not only of oneself, but of others, and this allows purpose to be found in menial tasks correlate to age and ageing that seem all too meaningful and necessary to complete, that the world should be poorer without them; these playthings underlie a felt necessitation of survival not only of the organism but of those things important to the organism. That blessed ark called the Ego blinds us to the fruitlessness of such labours, it holds back the deep dark abyssal waters of pure doubt of our efforts, it locks and seals behind a veil the honest descent of darkening doom that would kill our hope and instead gives buoyancy and 'Life' to all our arts, guides us as a centrality that burns with alive-ness, isness and significance of who we are and what we are doing.

The dread of knowing of one's death is inevitable, it's not the worst of it – it is that sombre realisation of such a process occurring over and over generation after generation, thousands of years before and after you, because life has no meaning. It is the gravest of black marks for the Ego to discover this. There always seemed to be far more to the biblical re-tellings than was apparent, to the myths of giants and gods and the morals therein, of Prometheus and his fire stealing – from who or whatever they originate, there is a dark gravity inherited in them – most have become dull or slave to it without question, but for the stupid some, who weren't happy with hearing the trumpet from a distance, and who attempted to obtain and dissect the holy instrument, examine it closely like curiously tragic monkeys – we learn things that should not be learned if one wants to stay happy in this world. If one wants to remain in Heaven. Because the alternative is Hell. The disintegration of purpose. The trumpets echo loudly in some secret, forgotten part of my brain-soul or heart. Warnings of states of being, of very real encounters with the forces of THEM. Warnings ignored because it was my arrogant purpose to ignore them. And now look. At what has happened.

Because I was a monkey playing with fire. And is this the legacy I want others to come to know, to have happen to them? To know too much, (not to be mistaken with knowing all) of what there is to know? To be cast out and crawl among the deafening trumpets bleeding my ears with absence of hope? Of meaning? Of purpose? To show them how to strip the blanket off to see the forms and forces, to wend their way through the labyrinth put there to protect us so they can find their way here too? Yes, its authentic, its really what underlies the Matrix, Heaven, it really is the truth, what they think they all seek to see, to uncover, to burst into from the Other-side. Because Ghosts give way to Demons, Demons to Hell. But this vista is Inhuman and the intent to transport others here is Inhuman. Beyond the veils of illusion and pleasure, deep beneath the treacle exterior where visible is the awful architecture of trains of monkeys grinding gears in perpetuity believing it and they matter, is the true Temple of THEM – that is to see the scathing hideousness of what's really going on and to see that is to know in your heart you can do nothing about it. That you are nothing.

That all your purposes, your reason for doing anything, however important it seems, amounts to nothing. That you are a brain-dead corpse animated by the brief flame of an Ego and will soon be churned into the mill like all the others crushed by the weight of that capacity only for nothingness. As to learn you are a raindrop of the minute in an hour's shower, amidst a millennia of torrential downpour. O what it is, to "Remember". You reader, may recognise this terrible state of hopelessness, powerlessness as a stage you have come to know too. I have experienced an inability to engage the motivation for any act, when reducing the Phyrn beyond all form. It is as if one either sees that things are the way they should be and accepts it thus losing his gumption to act as an individual will and becoming dissolved into things (one with God) - or that one can no longer find justification for any action in any direction, like being windless in doldrums.

Thus, to see the monstrous forms of THEM, not just as apparitions but in the forces that dominate the Phyrn is very humbling if not crippling to know one is going up against such gargantuan forces that have crushed countless individuals, cities, countries, entire epochs ground to dust, aeons smashed into powder. Only a fool would try - and that is why the Fool is so valuable and mysterious an archetype. How to get past such a vortex? How to find 'nertia' from inertia? Thus does the true value of the Ego finally come to light. And its arrogant denial of its inability to succeed, and its overbearing confidence to make changes whatever the odds against them.

Even against the most depressing of realisations, unless one KILLS oneself, by suicide or some other means, ONE STILL EXISTS. And one must live life until one dies. What to do with it? Mope for 70 years? Become a Monk and renounce all things? Or realise what was so written about as the TERRORS that have come down to us in so many shades of form and myth, as monsters, vampires, gods, demons, vice, virtue, tragedy, comedy, absurdity, and finally understand the true strength of THEM that swept all to their graves, whatever they believed, whatever they did or didn't do - with almost all of them, existing in no shape, no form, no memory, but their handiwork, that may have etched some glyphs on a stone, but bears no trace of their life other than these artefacts carefully put into stone for some other will that probably no-one cares about or remembers either, no matter how MIGHTY their deeds, or how LOWLY.

CHAPTER 8
MISCELLANEOUS ANALYSES

UNIVERSES PARALLEL [1]

It's one of my goals to discover more about the Acausal. In the essay "Urania: An Artistic Explication" [UAE], I took a stab at deciphering a mathematical formula written by Anton Long in which he expressed the Acausal dimension via complex symbolic formulas.

Essentially, what I got from this manuscript was a cyclical understanding of birth, life, decay and death that moved beyond the confine of the personal/human cycle and into the cycles of larger life-forms viz a viz the cities and civilisations that we have formed en masse by our activities. Just as cells, microbes and organs live an existence alien to our own but their union forms our human organism; people in turn form the cells, organs, and muscles of the cities; and some cities form the cells, organs and muscles etc that grow into a civilisation; an event that Acausal Theory views as an instrumental/purposeful occurrence that leads to a rise in human consciousness. It has been argued that cities cannot be alive, but the reply has been that they perform all of the major functions that human beings do that defines a living thing, including breathing, excreting, and growing. In this regard, Civilisations are thus considered to be an organism that inhabits the planet.

Each form has its own life-span – a microbe may live 24 hours, a human being maybe seventy years and a city perhaps thousands of years. (The passage of Time is different for each of the life-forms mentioned and when we get up toward the Civilisation stage of life-form that may reign for Aeons we are talking about the passage of time in terms of Aeonics.) Each life-form is made up of and makes up, others. I've written about the Acausal "Voice"; an essay that likens the Acausal to the Sea; and suggests similar properties of flow, ebb, and tide inherent within the Acausal that penetrates our own causal dimension as though flowing through holes from that dimension into this one, slowly filling up the causal container with Acausal energies that are presenced/felt by human beings as a rise of collective consciousness. Each of us through which the acausal flows, acts like a socket [or "nexion"] between the two dimensions. And if these isolated sockets were to be somehow plugged into one another and the Acausal can create a circuit for its energies rather than just lone pin-points – then the foundation is set for Aeonics. As the human nexions [who are singularly united by virtue of the fact they are all from the mother acausal intrusion] come together to create a circuit they create groups. The more Acausal presence in that group, the higher the chance of it evolving into a Civilisation.

As a human being becomes a nexion for the Acausal, a rise in consciousness [an evolution of being] occurs that strips away the conviction that the human being is the centre of importance. The causal being holds its world in place by believing itself separated from other casual components – an Acausal being is dissolved and unable to separate and becomes integrated within the network of connected conduits to the Acausal. The eventuation of many exoteric intrusions that leads to collective acausal consciousness is experienced as Synchronicity or the Acausal Voice.

I.e. a person is looking for a group to teach them about Satanism and finds one. This discovery leads to growth in that person and a series of consecutive events manifest that seem lucky or chance encounters. In time, that person reaches a greater level of consciousness and directly apprehends the forces and currents behind the written teachings so that they no longer need the Satanic group and go off to form their own, having their own ideas about magic, the acausal, the universe and so on that they feel are directly connected to the cosmos. Now there are two or more such persons with a direct link to the experience of Satan. In time, more may come and more may learn until such time five or more such persons are acting as conduits for the Acausal. This is the formation of a collective group, each expressing the cosmos by their connection to it, regardless of whether they are in contact with one another causally. This group may eventually grow into the hundreds or thousands of persons each pursuing the teachings and then going beyond to the experiences themselves of Satanism, and slowly but surely, expressing the Acausal in greater and greater numbers.

I was interested in what Carl Jung had to say in his book on Synchronicity and the matter of Coincidence. Jung made the philosophical argument that such a force that could only be observed operating by the fact that it could not be shown to exist. He theorised that the improbability of synchronicity was the key factor in determining that a gap was operant in chaos. It interested me, because in the same regards, the Acausal cannot be proved to exist either; and yet synchronicity cannot be denied. Whilst performing ritual black magick I performed a “Moon Ritual” set down for me by the Sorceress of this Temple. She had related to me that it was recorded by mages of old that they had found a correlation between keeping their word to the gods, and the gods keeping theirs.

That is to say, that if the mages actions were rightly aligned with the will of the gods, there would appear synchronous portents which are today called coincidences. It would happen that fortuitous circumstances of extremely good (or bad) luck would manifest for the mages that helped them reach their goals on earth; so long as they did not break their word to the Gods, the gods would continue to help them in mysterious ways.

This seems to be the fundamental law of Satanic “Wyrð”: the idea being that some of us have a destiny to convey the Acausal via our life and in being an envoy of the Acausal are granted our desires, goals, and the necessary outlets for its expression. Like Magick, the Acausal is rooted in the realm of the irrational. For all my logical thinking and ordering of things neatly I have at times had to perform “leaps of faith” and shut off the sceptical thinking part of me. During the Moon Ritual I entered my temple space and asked Baphomet to aid me in finding a partner to learn the Septenary Way. I informed Baphomet that I would withhold what she wanted most until my request was met. I should add here that it seems rather pompous and downright silly to be making demands of Dark Gods, I suppose that in working with ancient practices created during a time of different consciousness it seems strange to the level of consciousness that now attempts to invoke them. But, to do so one must play a role as a magickian, and a part of that role is a mastery or triumph of demons within and without; and in the early stages of Satanism, a magickian must be arrogant, self-assured, believe in magic and make demands.

So, what did Baphomet want most? According to my guide, she wanted my ejaculation. The sexual energies created by an orgasmic release are those most crucial for Dark Gods to manifest; and by giving up my sexual energy I was relinquishing my right to an independent existence from that of the Acausal – one might say, I would remain food for the Dark Gods. By keeping it to myself and performing the necessary libations I went through considerable torment that one day gave way to a strange sharp peace. I felt the sexual urges, impulses and projections had ceased to motivate me and my perception gave way to a world that was previously concealed behind the hazy veils of sexual tension. With no projections of my fantasies, needs, desires onto others – I could for the first time see people clearly without the rosy haze of sexual/emotional transactions getting in the way, and in a raw light that caused a profound esoteric change in my understanding of my being. Whilst withholding my seed from the dark goddess, I entered the temple regularly to re-state my vow.

The Ritual was supposed to last nine months, but within two, I had met two women suitable for partnership in the Septenary Way. My sacrifice had given me the results I wanted and by keeping my word, the Gods had kept theirs. The woman whom I chose, “Bron Wrgan” led me through a relationship that broke a level of my naivety. I thought that Bron Wrgan had taught me a greater lesson in self-reliance and that I should abandon looking for a priestess. However, this woman was just another twist in the road to Wyrð. Patterns knitted together that continued to synchronise the appearance of a great woman to be my partner. I later joined paths with Nine Rays/Owy. How did this come about? Coincidence? Positive Thinking? Will-Power? Dark God intervention? A little of each? It’s not easy to pin down the possibility of Acausal intervention.

For the majority of human beings, the human frame of reference (Which can be taken to mean our precise Size in relation to other things) tends to be concerned with matter on a specific level. Because human beings are of a similar biological size we have established a universal way of looking at the world and relating it back to our own size. There are of course exceptions with the fields of study that specialise in differing degrees of telescopic or microscopic examination, but for most, the universe is perceived through a human-shaped glass. On that note, specialists too, may only look inward so far, for example, psychology, nano-technology, genetics, etc or outward so far, for example, the space program, Hubble telescope, philosophy before observation and understanding can no longer be accurately captured in language but in subjective experience alone.

The findings of the few working on Scientific bases are generally filtered down to us through various media; but it is a very, very slow process for the majority of people to be informed about the same subject at the same time; the current drama of global warming and water/oil shortages etc is a good example. Although these problems have been spoken about and predicted for a very long time; only now when a great number of people are accessed by technology and share the same information repeatedly does it become a conscious and popular problem that we are drawn to collectively talk about.

The idea that we can somehow snatch hold of some invisible currents in the earth or floating about in the air and transform thing into other things, or that we can tap into a world of sympathetic demons and through laborious incantations and spells have it change an event or help/harm a person seems an ancient belief, but it has never really become an antique – it has been in constant use at least since Sumer and is still in full swing now as writers and artists use words and images and struggle to expound, or as physicists search for the latest theory to explain everything, tinker with stem-cell and bio-tech research and decipher and alter the human genetic code. Magic, is universal. One of the major theories that seem to be popular as a means of changing what is by enlisting the help of rational possibilities – is Parallel Universes. Scientific magic has exhorted the existence of parallel universes, time travel, quantum and worm-holes to name a few ideas. And I am interested in Parallel Universes, because it seems to me that via an acknowledgement of an Acausal Dimension that intrudes into this one, the observation that life does seem to act unto itself on various different levels according to its size, not taking the world for granted due to an inherent bias because of our specific size in relation to it, and re-examining assumptions that such universes must be at the limits or 'end' of this one [thus touching] or in some other way distant – is not a great ask for proof of parallel dimensions.

For example, the theory credited to Einstein regarding relativity raises some inferences about how our own size prejudices our perceptions. What constitutes a universe is largely determined by the size of the life-form inhabiting it and Science tends to insist that a universe is another gigantic black star- studded space next to ours, ignoring the fact that a perception of matter can be shared by many different life-forms simultaneously yet as completely different experiences – for what seems like a doorway to a human being, may seem like a horizon to an ant. A human will inevitably interpret an experience of matter that is alien to that of creatures larger and smaller than its own mass. Consider the sliding scale of interpretation and perception of universes. A short person will inevitably see a different view of the world than will a tall person. A great degree of difference in perception between members of our species merely because of height; opens the doorway to discovering parallel universes. What does an ant see? Geometric Planes? Lines? Because of its size, would an ant virtually always be surrounded by a horizon? And what of the crack in the floorboard? This seemingly innocuous space, walked over and invisible to the hulking human beings above it, will still be comprised of a complex layer of life-forms, that each perceive a different degree of relativity. To an ant it may be a chasm or an experience of darkness, but what strange building blocks of matter might it encounter in there? A world we deem microscopic that is an intricate lattice of alien shapes and substances is just beneath our perceptive vision, contained within the same matter that our standard perception is; inaccessible but for the micron telescope and the ant. Recalling the magnification of the surface of a compact disc by a micron telescope it looked very much like thick cake-like slices of floorboards with peeling, flaking scales littered over deep chasms. Is this inaccessible world, not a parallel universe? What might the microbes that live on the ants see?

Certainly, a vastly different terrain than we do. Or the parasites that live on the microbes? Conversely, what do cities experience? A sliding scale of the size of life-forms can not be completed but it can be roughly compiled from a comparison of size. Each sized object is privy to its own secretive universe, parallel to the others above and below it.

I don't think it's odd to consider ourselves at the top of the chain of evolution. We are subjected to one dimension and one dimension only. We may have glimpses of others through technological means, but unless this repeated exposure to other dimensions occurs we are likely to forget their existence and live only in our own. I could make the argument that we are unique and special as a species, but not because we are alone. If a sliding scale of life-forms is probable what comes after Civilisations? Planets? Stars? Galaxies? And just because we have not been able to reach the edge of said systems or universe doesn't mean we are "alone". Our ideas for trying to punch holes in "space" or search for others like us, are what make us alone. Our perception limits a teeming dimensional miasma to a self-centred existence. The difference of size in ants and human beings is great, but the difference in the size of ants and planets is astronomical. Perhaps the life-forms above us are simply so much larger than we can imagine. If we are unique and special perhaps it is because we are the size we are.

But there seems to me to be some kind of correlating pattern to all these degrees of imitation by smaller and larger-life forms. Largely, because the human being is designed to interpret stimulus in groups to assist memory – but a repetitive esoteric pattern seems to emanate from all occurrences, all actions, that is mimicked in some way or another by life-forms larger or smaller than itself. It has been suggested by alchemical friends of mine that the secret to life can be found in the shape of a spiral. And too, the ONA has put forth the idea of a helical essence to life, and still others suggest the universe runs in cycles, rotations, etc. And yes, I too think that life seems inherently cyclical and perceived on many different layers. In trying to explore ideas to prove or examine the Acausal; am I projecting an inner problem outward in symbolic gesture that takes an external form as talk of nexions, intersections, and regeneration?

Is my search for unity, if that is my quest, to become whole, and self and some sort of magical dream figure who is complete unto itself that so many of our attempts as human beings to control chaos tend to be; mimicked by the planets that rotate in space; forming, being, then disintegrating as I will as a human being? My need for a sense of completion; of studying and practising Satanism and all the other fickle and temporary pursuits that I engage in as a human before I die; is it learned or is it something in me, perhaps an echo of the cosmos ache for completion that I mimic? The organisms that make up my organism leave me at their mercy; my skin is an organism itself that wraps around me. The viruses that take me and make me sick, the involuntary diseases I may contract, I the human being have no ultimate over the work of the organisms in the parallel universes below me.

I have thus far reached a state whereby I think that all things are mirroring an esoteric secret that describes the shape and procession of the Acausal. I continually wonder: is what we build outside; the opposite, a distortion, a compensation for, or an imitation of what is on the inside of us? To what degree does observation show that the inside reflects the outside and vice versa? Does our size determine how much we can know about the Acausal? Do life-forms below or above us have more, the same or less contact with it?

In these questions lay my foundation for recognition of the Acausal dimension. Do you have questions like this yourself? I got into Satanism to answer simpler ones than these; but the art just raised more questions. And since there is no authority to answer them definitively; that makes the path of Satanism an isolated quest, with each only able to progress toward answers by direct connection with the Acausal from whence it came.

I have used magic to summon a priestess by making a promise to Dark Gods. I have seen enough synchronicity to, at various times, believe in karma, luck and coincidence, and be awed and confused by the mysteries of life. I've taken the quest to Know seriously enough to want to have control, and seriously enough to let be what will be. I have neither proved nor disproved the existence of an Acausal dimension for others in my writings, but I have accepted its operation in my own life – and I think that proof of an Acausal dimension is not far away from providing the proof of a parallel universe.

UNIVERSES PARALLEL [2]

The original U.P., was my attempt to explore how our perspective was influenced and even contained by the mode in which it occurs – i.e., we see the world a certain way because of our biological size.

I rambled a lot in that one however, trying to show different dimensions and acausal rationality and so on. And it's a difficult subject – I'm going to ramble a lot in this one. Though a coherent essay will make its way out some day.

We see through our eyes – and have been termed among other things, as predators. We are a very visually-focused species – this in itself is a limitation as much as it is a benefit. For in all processes there are unseen prejudices. Many may never even know it, guess it, or need to worry about it – but the World in general, for a left-handed person presents on occasion some interesting and sometimes frustrating tasks. The World is not designed for left-handed people – though some adjustment and compensation has been made for them – the simple natural inclination for the majority of the world – is to favour a geometry of the right. The right-handers, generally do not see this, or become aware of it, unless on some rare occasion they go to shake hand with a left-hander, who may or may not immediately extend their left hand, rather than their right. In Martial Arts, greetings, workplaces, employment, and other gatherings – it may seem a small slight, the tiniest handicap, but it makes the crucial step in the differences of making a first impression.

My point simply being – with every 0 there is a 1.

The very nature of human development passes through many different stages – psychological, mental, physical and so on. Those with kids know that it is protocol once they reach a certain age, to be watchful for hazards that present themselves at the lower level of the growing child – who, at 1 maybe 2 feet sees the world very differently than we do. I go to the fridge, I look inside and I think – hm, no ham left. My son goes to the fridge, some 6cm shorter than I am, and is in direct eye line with it. In both those moments – for me, it doesn't exist, for him, it's all that exists. If we close our eyes, we lose the information we usually rely on to orient ourselves – and unless we have training or practice walking in the pitch dark, we lose our way – we lose our perspective – temporarily. Studies show that if you sit a person in a room with a blue light and ask them to time a minute – they take longer than they do in a red light. Without being able to see we also diminish our sense of time, forced to rely on our internal clock habitually reinforced but by no means accurate – even eyes open our natural timing is seldom very good anyway owing to the relativity of it, and its shifting ‘constant’.

Our world is said to be perceived through 3 (4) dimensions. They are small in number, but they colour things; those 3 make -A- sense of everything we see – its why things have a front and back, and up and down. Though my cynicism for this treatment was given in detail “On the Third and Fifth Dimensions” and I stand by it, these basic precepts are just like psychic windows – they change everything that could be into something it may very well not be. Qv. “The Simultaneous Pulse”. In many instances, though it may be mere convenience it is the safer and most often chosen of potential perspectives to live life with. And I do not dispute its benefit – even if I question its authenticity. Looking for ‘essences’ and ‘actuals’ is no less a psychic window than anything else I accuse.

But these things, they colour, our World – and we colour it back. Humans live for approximately 80-90 years in a good stretch. Some but not that many live over 100. We have a very short amount of time to make sense of things – perhaps that is so many seem to seek or at least prefer the quickest most immediate way to apprehend what we are born into. Then again, it’s quite apparent that life is more fun when we don’t stop to ponder these questions that plague humanity. To understand we say time is measured by change. Change by movement. Movement by space moving through time or perhaps time moving through space. We age, quickly. I’ve heard it said that its due to our metabolism... Whilst Tree’s or Mountains live for 1000’s or tens of thousands, even millions of years. Metabolism. Or something else? Perhaps the frenetic wear and tear we place on our bodies, the additives in our food, the toxins and pollutants we engineer and consume through the air, water and other means. There are turtles that live 300 years. Because they have a slow metabolism. What determines that we should live only to around 100? Our swivelling eyeballs attached to a brain stem that has a view of itself as a self-contained separate unit from nature, with its own free-ish will?

QUANTUM PHILOSOPHY: A NOTE

(Extract from pMYRIAD).

The value of $x = 1$ or the value of $x = 0$. While it does not the value of x is in superimposition and is not in superimposition for superimposition means only the value of $x = 1$ or the value of $x = 0$. For our default Vantage of the Phyrn is not quantum.

Relativism has once again painted the bright colours black. Boundaries lost invites sheep to wander. Whatever she is she unabates in seeding expressions of aeonic change across the planet through the loci of expanding stars. The singularity that imprisons is weakening its gravitas, and as the form takes hold, so does it begin to seep into the groundwater of humanity changing what they can be. Mirrors of the form arise in the arts, technocracy, media, and philosophy. There is multiplicity or there is hypocrisy. All across the planet Nature throws up expressions who are embracing this, embracing Them.

A UNIVERSAL THEOREM

Whether it's true or a fable, I don't know. But the parable is nice. The story goes that Aleister Crowley's father used to take regular walks in his village but would stop to interrogate the local farmers.

He would approach them, and ask them, what they were doing. When they replied, he would ask “Why?”

Presumably curious or just polite at first, the farmers would give him another answer. To which Crowley's father, would again ask, “Why?”

Though my memory doesn't serve on this occasion, I understand that Crowley's father was often chased out of the village by infuriated farmers. Humour me. And assume the farmer has more patience than normal. Such a conversation might go like this.

What are you doing?

Milking the cows.

Why.

Because they have to be milked.

Why.

Because they'll die if I don't milk them.

Why.

What d'yer mean why, they just will. Everyone knows you have to milk cows or they die.

Why.

Are yer daft?

Why.

Because you're asking foolish questions boy.

Why.

I don't know why, but you're starting to get on my nerves.

Why.

Because asking questions over and over would get on anyone's nerves.

Why.

Are you insane?

Why.

You certainly seem insane.

Why.

Maybe yer should lie down. Get out of the sun. That sort of thing.

Why.

And of course so on. ad infinitum ad nauseam.

It might sound somewhat silly – but exactly the same conversation with Nature has occurred via scientists, physicists, quantum warriors, religions, and all manner of people who have dared to ask Why.

The problem with Why, is endemic. Even if two people could keep it up for thousands of years (and humanity has done just that) Why eventually becomes redundant as a means of enquiry. Sooner or later, one has to settle for the answer(s) given because the answers are infinite and we do not biologically last the distance. When trying to get to the heart of atoms, we ended up with mesons, quarks, string theory, m theory, and now we have the concept of dark matter. We ask the universe Why, it is our imperative. But it is a flawed imperative nonetheless – for what we conceive to be Why is not a constant and always changes. We set out in good faith but can never arrive. If the world has a universal theory it is denoted in fig.a.

THE SIMULTANEOUS PULSE

Reality can be stripped to a bare minimum of our bodily presence sensing its own existence and the awareness that whatever is inside us or whatever it is we are, there is something that we sense resisting against our body. Thus, experience of Life for our species can be reduced to just two ‘engines’ or forces that generate energies. Departure from these immediate natural dimensions that all human beings experience by interpretation, labelling, and cataloguing the world as “known” is convenient but leads to subjective perception and the construction of a false matrix. The first engine is us, whatever we are we know that we are able to experience ourselves as a consciousness from the point of view of our organism – this consciousness is sensed bodily and mentally as “consciousness” – a sensation and a sense of ourselves that is generally of an internal nature. The second engine postulates that we as human beings are separate from the rest of the world, and that whatever the world is, is responsible for what we experience as an organism; however we do it: observing, feeling, sensing.

Thus, in essence, we are consciousness there is something to be conscious of, something separate from our organism, sensed as external to our consciousness. For convenience I have termed these two engines the Ego and the Environment. The premise of the pulse is that these “engines” are the only two states that we can truly know, that we are conscious and that there is something to be conscious of: whatever is constructed on/around/about these two constants is not real, but constitutes subjective “Reality”. These engines are unknowable as they are, for each causes distortion upon the other by producing an infinite sequence of variables that meet in what we call reality or the mirror-zone. The “engines” are responsible for generating all that we call matter or CONTENT via an action called the Simultaneous Pulse.

NOTES ON PSILOCYBIN

I’ll be brief. Not because I want to be but because I have to be. My escapades as a drinker have blanked entire sections of my memory and a fair bit of it has been punched out of my head over the years from fighting. I remember the come-on of the trip – always the same for me, starts with a light-headedness and sudden giggling – everything seems funny. A euphoric weirdness takes over that unhinges the sharp right angles of common perspective and a dreamy wavy throbbing sheet like wet water begins to take over. Then the “abc’s” – a colourful pattern of extremely bright pinpoints forms before my eyes, over my eyes, that then become more pronounced, much like the patterns that drift across one’s consciousness very shortly before sleep. I call them abc’s but it’s like a transparent moving wallpaper – just like those psychedelic groovy moving colour schemes in the background of many 70’s bands.

My shroom experiences with the world are very much internalized-introverted.. I already mentioned to Azbelzum that I’ve never had a bad-trip per se – but this is largely due to being in good calm company who explained what was going on and helped me to overcome the rising panic and paranoia that can quickly overtake when having a strong dose of shrooms. Also, A mentions smoking the mushrooms – yes, have done that too, they were dried, ground into a powder and laced over a marijuana cigarette. I don’t recall much of the actual trips very well though – really just snatches and bits and pieces, only a few of which are vivid. Trips last a long time and a lot happens, I often drank with them, and smoked dope too so no wonder it’s even more of a blur. Sorry that I cannot be more helpful in sharing those experiences – I was literally in a drug haze for a lot of it.

Stand out effects and memories: Mushrooms do have the power to heighten natural resonance with objects, energies, and especially people. After moving to Oz aged 17 I slowly made friends, and contacts. I got hold of a large jar of mushroom juice (the toxins from boiled mushrooms) but I couldn’t tell you the dose – it was a large coffee jar and the juice tasted terrible. Anyway, I got stuck into it and had far too much. I was scratching the words ‘hate’ and ‘love’ into my knuckles with a razor feeling very lonely and sorry for myself when all of a sudden, I heard the front door, voices, footsteps, and then my bedroom door opened and in walked about 20 people – friends I had met over the back fence over time and their friends. They startled me when the door opened and I hid the razor. They wondered what the hell I was doing crouched down behind the bed but quickly got around to cheering me up, inviting me out and getting me out of the doldrums. It was a weird experience, like I’d called them or they’d called me on some unknown level, but just the beginning of the night – don’t remember much else unfortunate. Though there were the classic effects such as the toilet dropping through the floor out of sight when I tried to use it, the checkered floor rippling like water, etc. Oh and the greasy, intense feeling of looking at myself in the mirror.

Does anyone else’s skin ever get intensely wet or seem greasy when you shroom unknown And I don’t need to mention the way eyes look on them do I. Fuck – it’s awesome. I’ve scared men twice my size away just because of the possessive energy LSD gives someone’s eyes (or maybe it’s the whole aura and body).

Anyway, that brings me to my second memory which was a night in another house a suburb away when we moved. I was drinking a lot of cheap wine from a cask with a friend and shrooming. I don't remember a lot and not clearly. I do remember standing in my room at one point and this brown 'liquid' oozing out of my face, by which I mean my nose, mouth, and ears. I couldn't tell if it was an illusion or if I was really in trouble, that's a problem with mushrooms I find often – I also have trouble knowing if I am actually needing to urinate or it's just a sensation caused by the drug. I've stood for a half hour before just to be sure! Let's see, earlier that day when my friend Jarred and I took them, I was playing a video game – it wasn't long before the game started melting and shifting and so on like I described above with the ABCs. But there was this moment where I felt all of a sudden very depressed and had this obsessive thought in my head that everyone, including myself was stark raving mad and living an eternal lie. (do u get such epiphanies?) this was a dangerous turn and unexpected, I found myself turning in a circle for a long time freaking out and just obsessed by this idea of right-angled clinical sanity being some mad joke we played on ourselves.

My friend was able to make me conscious of the fact and get me outside where I was able to focus on other things. At one other point I 'came to' (shrooms occasionally leave large gaps in my experiences so that I remember nothing about how I got where I am or what I've been doing – in this regard they can be sketchy) – came to to find myself pacing up and down inside my garage from one end to the other. I must have done this for quite some time – before I suddenly thought to look up and saw my friend doing exactly the same thing about two meters away, where he had been pacing parallel to me in the same unconscious fashion. I asked him how long we'd been doing it and he said he didn't know; we laughed and went outside again. I don't really remember much else I'm afraid – nothing that I can be sure is real or happened and isn't made up or some mixed up memory. I would also add that there is a difference between Acid/LSD and shrooms.

I recall my LSD trips more clearly (but not completely) than my mushroom trips, I think the ingestion of the mushrooms itself and the resulting taste sets a certain sort of expectation in motion that LSD doesn't due to being, well LSD, say, bitter? The flavour often gives me a stomach-ache and is unpleasant – which can set certain primary emotions in play and that can be a worry when shrooms amplify Everything – especially emotions. But nothing like the nasty musty muck of shrooms. But I've not really been around experts at disguising the flavour. I hear it can be done up as a tea or as cakes. We've also two good psilocybin guides to upload to Otherland (will add links) that we've found to be useful and accurate as a field guide. You have to be careful you don't get dodgy information from well-meaning locations such as Erowid, or hearsay – get the wrong mushroom and you'll know all about it and treat the drug badly and it'll probably teach you a lesson you never forget, if it doesn't kill you of course. These guides are recommended by us as pretty damn good.

Just a bit on entheogenics to finish my notes: To me it defines ‘the use of drugs and substances for spiritual means and exploration’ – check out some of this incredible artwork by an artist named Alex Grey who designs the images for the metal band Tool, apparently this is how he draws what he draws, through entheogenics or using drugs in a spiritual manner. And by this term, I denote what was taught to me by a shaman of sorts viz. a deep respect for the drug (any drug) and the treatment of it as a living thing unto itself – similar I guess to what Sath describes as an ally. I was taught to connect with the drugs I use, not to fight them, or control them, but to ride them like they were dragons (or said another way – to let the dragons ride me). To let them take me on a journey, and get to know the drug – and if all was going well, then to perhaps steer the dragon a little – but never too much – and it was always the drug that was master in such trips. Whether with speed, LSD, shrooms, coke, eccy, mdma – the level of respect is the same – and I think is probably something akin to feeling a deep connection to the Earth as a sentient living “being” that is alien in many (if not all) respects, and needs to be communicated with on its own terms.

BLURRING: DARK ETHICS AND SHADOWS

RPG: An Impossible Game of Ethics and Dark Shadows. [Blurring the Line Between Player and Character Successfully – Some Deeper Darker Thought.]

This article more or less wrote itself – you cannot spend 5 years in a new form without gaining some insights along the way. In it I will peel back a hidden layer that exposes what I believe are processes and forces that govern gaming – but of which most are oblivious which is why the same issues of gamers behaviour way back then – are still the same issues of gamers way forward now. It is my hope touching on the following topics may take the discussion about behaviour to an evolved plateau by touching on the source than repeating the same rhetoric on the matter, 50 years from now – and that it will bring a more constructive element to the subject that can trigger better commentary than I have.

Well, let’s begin. – In RPG, you are asked to take on a role that is different, sometimes even at odds, with your real-life persona. You are given a huge array of props and suggestions on how to play your character effectively, convincingly, and often exhaustively. General advice such as Alignment type offers a chunky sense of what direction your moral compass faces and therefore what you are likely to do as that character in given situations. More refined details such as your Ideals or your Fears or even your HP Level – besides the most obvious class, background and level give you even further devices by which to come up with and take on the character you have chosen or been assigned to play.

When you do this kind of activity- you are activating a very old, very powerful combination of unconscious and conscious energies that evoke ‘sleeping’ or ‘dormant’ personalities that are inside you that psychologist Jung termed ‘Archeypes’. Now – this brief article does not discuss the technical theory of archetypes or their myriad effect on telling stories – it is enough to say that when you evoke these dormant personalities and more or less shoulder your ‘actual’ personality out of the way – some unexpected things can happen (which is the source of the hugely varied types of player that emerge in RPG) – but more importantly, it can become so consuming channelling these entire entities complete with accent, mannerisms, code of conduct, and so on that can be so different and yet still so real – that players, risk losing themselves in the character so deeply – they forget to retain the fact they are in a co-operative game, they get caught up in living that character so fiercely that it can be detrimental to the story as a whole – and other players experiences too.

What is essentially a combination of method acting, where you imitate a particular sense of a personality to become it – and psychodrama where you evoke and then act out archetypes you don’t often even know you have – is a very powerful mix. If it were not – the all-powerful story that has survived with us since antiquity would not be at the heart of virtually every human experience in so many forms – from books to video games, theatre to dancing, ceremony to ritual. DM’s should be mindful of this – as for many people gaming opens up the vaults and allows them to explore particular facets of their personality.

For some – this is the Only time, these vaults are allowed to be opened, much less explored, and it is a notable fact that DM’s can and do categorise players into a rough selection of types (their own comprehension of archetypes drives who goes into which category and what the categories are) because of the tendency for some players to hyper-focus on playing out particular aspects. I don’t refer here to general table or VTT etiquette such as players that talk over others, or don’t check their mic volume – but particular playing styles – whether it be a notable interest in meticulous accounting, arguing on rulings, pride in knowing the system to the letter (and never missing an opportunity to show it), playing an alignment to the ‘detriment of the game’, repeating an action that has the same result such as searching every item, and as many other idiosyncrasies that highlight WHY that person plays the game and enjoys it – as there are stars in the sky.

What is innocuously titled ‘Game’ can in fact for many many people be much much more. Firstly, opening the Pandora's box to the unconscious and awakening archetypes is an extremely personal and powerful act. It’s often underestimated – because RPG is considered a game, and somehow, different from a story – only in D&D, you don’t read about the character, you are supposed to become the character. In fact – D&D presents most players with a difficult if not paradoxical (impossible) dilemma that is personal and supra-personal – involving some very dark, very deep parts of our psyche. Here is the dilemma – In essence, the player is asked to become, as convincingly as they can, a character in the game of D&D. They are given lots of props to ‘flesh’ that character out and make it so real – it becomes a play or theatre act and much more than a board game. At the SAME time, the player’s convincing portrayal of that character – is almost always at odds with the very system of D&D and the structure of D&D game concept of a linear, controlled-chaotic, well-paced fireside tale that unfolds according to the DM – with – some involvement from the players – but ultimately, the DM. The paradoxical aspect enters into the game when – asked to give as realist and authentic a portrayal of a fantasy character as possible – you are also restricted heavily (yes, heavily) by the very way narrative is delivered, and the essence of success in D&D relying on co-operation.

To play, no, evoke, a genuine autonomous being from within yourself that you did not know existed – is to essentially pull up a being with its own chaotic reality and as well as know – human beings are very chaotic beings, and so to are our archetypal manifestations conjured up as ‘imagination’. But then you are required to play within a very sure, very firm set of laws that give the ‘game’ its very structure, that ensure this or that person has an equal turn, that its imperative players work together to achieve a goal, and that they then, having evoked this autonomous being – try to put reins on it to ‘fit’ the game structure. This is just the start of the trouble. The nature of D&D’s game structure invites these unconscious beings up from the depths of players psyche – but then expects them to conform to a conscious way of doing things in order to ‘play the game’. What happens when you evoke an archetype?

Well – you can change how an entire generation views itself, you can move streets of people to tears, you can keep an army of killers disciplined and make them go to their deaths – using symbols and associations with archetypes that we honour or fear – mankind has done great and terrible things by evoking these energies. They should not be taken too lightly. There are endless, but mentioned here, two important, relevant ways archetypes cause intense confusion and for the ‘game’ to break down. Wherein I have already established the ‘game’ as an attempt to pace with controlled measure, a linear unfolding of events as particularly specified times, in specified ways, with specified rules in a conscious manner.

I believe that considering the theory I put forth, here both for DM’s and Players provokes contemplation of our respective roles on a far profounder level than is usually tapped – which is perhaps why the same issues keep arising generation after generation. It is not just – table manners or conscious control we are dealing with here. The first way is the confusion caused by the unconscious energy evoked into being – being misunderstood as an entirely conscious one or a harmless ‘imitation’ that someone is controlling. The game asks for as much authenticity as they can muster into their character – but some characters are at dire odds with the game itself because of this unconscious/conscious clash.

We suppress unconscious archetypes because they do not form part of our personality – Jung said that it was the things we hid that made us who we were – but they were still in there and could easily be awoken. This is known ALL too well to marketers and corporations that lean on our psychic weaknesses to make us behave in certain ways – everyone from school to gov to armies to your mum – knows some of these. The important thing though, is that we do know we have psychic weaknesses (exploits) – all of us, some shared, some unique. sex sells because it exploits the still active primal cortex and the inescapably addictive natural brain drugs of dopamine and serotonin. So, the power of the unconscious is undeniable – it's also often forgotten and underestimated.

The second way in which confusion us caused is the relative lack of experience we as humans have with a lot of our darker more insidious archetypes – especially playing 'evil' characters – which ironically, have a long list of 'how to be evil properly' attached to them – when in all reality, evil is just banal and bland and causeless most of the time. It's not clever or premeditated or follows rules – it's simply an act someone performs that contravenes the social contract to behave a certain way in society.

But it gets more complicated because we have to interpret a lot of very vague and tenuous concepts correctly – which in most cases means according to Game Standardisation. There are so many hidden layers here that it gets very tricky very quickly. I'm going to have to invent names for these different phenomena cause it's about to get crazy. Watch. Alignment, as an example – is a personal moral code in D&D. An inward moral compass. There are no outwardly visible signs of this code to other characters or shouldn't be.

So, for all intents and purposes, I am what I appear to be until such time I no longer appear to be that or the illusion they had of me is broken. The illusion they have of me in the first place – is an archetype, a mental moral projection of what I am to them – not necessarily what I am. Hence the importance and risk placed on 'first impressions'. OK, so far so good – my alignment is Chaotic Evil. First problem. This one is system related. If my character is chaotic evil – that should not become apparent until it's too late – or at any moment of my choosing when I act – but until then and even then – that title of 'Chaotic Evil' is ambiguous already. Therefore, revealing Alignment to other players presents the very early and very damning risk of often unconscious player meta-gaming based on this alone as humans are affected by archetypes and perceived archetypes.

Second problem – where is the truth? If my character performs an evil action – Is that title of an 'evil' action defined by how other characters perceive my character and the actions performed, or is that title how my character perceives themselves? Is a righteous man who thinks he is acting in the best interests, or for the good of some, and does terrible things – good or evil? Are my acts good or bad? THIS is a moral dilemma for each to decide based on their own understanding of these archetypes – there is no right answer, but sometimes there is a consensus accepted answer – which is largely how society functions without tearing itself apart. So, there are two rather tricky problems, alignment being pre-judged when it cannot be determined as there are no outward signs – AND – the weight of defining morals.

To play D&D, to participate in D&D, We each have to ask ourselves must actions be defined as evil by both the one doing and the one condemning them? And where the truth lies changes from person to person as these points of view, are often at complete opposite ends of the spectrum depending on whether you are the performer or the observer of an action. Who then – adjudicates the truth of the moral compass?

Ethicists have filled books for thousands of years on these prickly problems – but D&D does not advise players on either the therapy or the damage that can be wrought by calling these sleeping giants up. This brings up the third issue – the players psychic dilemma. To play a convincing character but also play within certain rules and laws is always going to be a struggle because of where these respective energies come from. The unconscious archetypal energy from which we draw on to ‘become’ another ‘I’ comes from the deep subliminal unconscious recesses of repressed parts of our psyche – whilst the game format of D&D comes from the conscious structured, ordered, mathematical, logical part of our psyche. You are as a DM, essentially, telling the Devil to sit down at a table of angels and play nice.

This is not an undue overstatement – we get archetypes such as the devil or angels from observations and experiences stemming from human behaviour. Jung claimed we project something onto someone we think is evil just as we project something onto someone we think is good. If you think to yourself while reading this – well it’s really not that bad, he’s being rather dramatic – I would say to you, that what you are essentially appraising when you think about your experiences as a DM – is the extent to which people CAN manage to pull up these archetypes and control them in a manner that is pleasing and orderly to play D&D.

It is a struggle for some more than others but we train daily to repress those dark aspects and suggestions that arise so that we don’t just suddenly kill or act uncivilly.

It’s why we need to ‘vent’ when we hold that stress in – to slowly release the valve, usually through drink, or relaxation or talking to a trusted one or even a stranger about what is troubling us, angered us, upset us and to usually, explain the course justice should have taken in our perspective to prevent us feeling the way we do. We weave combinations of stories our way to heal ourselves or hurt others. But when you evoke archetypes with which you (usually) have no real world experience (i.e. an assassin or a killer) – Or – you evoke archetypes with which you have strong associations – or you evoke archetypes you didn't even know were there – you are opening a strange new world and often with unforeseen consequences even by the player who has no idea what opening the very reasonably named 'Pandora's Box' will bring with it.

This literal psychic evocation aside – the player must now make a difficult and impossible choice: Do they play an Authentic Archetype – do they play their character convincingly – or do they play the game of D&D co-operatively which is by its very nature, incompleteable in large parts, without a specific mix of characters working together pooling their varied strengths. Does a Player fully take on the autonomous energy of the new being they are 'pretending'* to be – or do they limit the energy of that being in order to fit the structured game with its Artificial moral restrictions, rules and laws, that primal energies have no need or time for. And we have grown accustomed to calling it pretence because many of us don't realise what we are dealing with on many fronts is very real, and even fatal – many psychologists know the danger of tampering with these forces, of memory, archetype, primal fear, repression and many other 'demons'. – and to great extent we do it with ourselves every hour of every day to stay, who we are.

Straight away they are asked to call something out of them that they do not know and often have no experience with – and often times can not control. Then they must decide where the truth of the moral compass lays – who defines an evil act or a good man from a bad one when both must by necessity be killers in D&D? Does killing for love, or the right cause, or because you were tasked to, or because it might save another, or Any other reason – exonerate a player from performing the same act they abhor? Just choosing to label it something else? Or seek to justify it? Evil – is merely one example there are endless others, but it is often the easiest to grasp as it is a value with a lot of substance and depth.

So, what do we have so far? Essentially – The player has to divorce themselves from their 'I' – their own comfortable seat of who they are, to draw up a fully completed archetype that may or not be familiar in away way and comes from an extraordinarily powerful place we often leave the hell alone – they must define their moral compass (and be sure of it in the first place) – after pulling up these wild energies, sit nicely at the table with it and then try to struggle with the impossible task of simultaneously playing an autonomous character with its own life and make it do only what it is allowed to do within the -arguably free – sandbox the DM builds – but – with hidden walls that we do not even Know exist until such archetypes bump up against them and then cause a particular behaviour of that archetype to be sanctioned and controlled further. And this is not even the tricky part. Many Other players are ALSO doing just this. Some with better control than others – which is why you often see people play one or two particular characters or character types over and over, because they resonate with and are familiar with, those archetypes.

But when all of these wild energies hit the table at once – it can get psychically crazy which translates to external and conscious crazy – or better said and less dramatic – internal struggle that is resolved with externalised conflict. Now – when you consider that these actions and processes are rarely even conscious given that they stem from unconscious sources you add another layer to this very messy cake. On top of that, a person also struggles consciously to resolve conscious ethics and actions based on what they are conscious of and are deciding between. This battle is less strenuous because it's far more familiar but every decision involves it – and when playing an archetype – you suddenly have two battles of ethics going on, which is actually four – as the player and the 'character' must both make their own decisions as to how to resolve conflict generated by the game. If the two sources of comprehension, conscious and unconscious are at opposite ends of a scale – and we place the decision to move the slider all the way up to Character Authenticity – or the slider all the way down to Game Standardisation we are choosing between two extremes.

But – the nature of these forces is that we can rarely achieve this balance, as both forces actively combat the other. Beyond even – all of this – there are additional processes at work. Social forces and superficial understanding of the beasts we prod and poke. Due to channelling what is essentially the repressed aspect of themselves and if done in such a way that the player actually moves their 'I' over and consciously (or unconsciously – [possession]) 'becomes' this other aspect or collection of their psychic aspects – in addition to unpredictable behaviour and disruption due to psychic forces and moral struggle – players can even forget they are in a game – which is why the fear of the situation not going their way can evoke some terrific displays of raw response and a whole gamut of human reactions – we might put in the 'sore loser' basket, but run much deeper than this unsympathetic term would suggest – as it's not merely a 'tribal' defeat that causes such anguish. This forgetting has two notable side-effects.

Firstly, it causes some to cheat or fix the game at any cost to win – why? If the theory of archetypes holds true – then the corresponding answer is that these energies have lives of their own, they are another 'us' made of raw primal unconscious and carefully managed conscious to hold it in place while we ride it. Therefore, it is devastating for that archetype to cease to exist – (they die in the game) – or in less extreme cases, experience internal disturbance by being prevented from acting in the way native to that archetype – which is at best, unpredictable.

Secondly – society has a lot of very easy ways to categorise things that don't actually ever take into account these far more powerful forces we are constantly bringing up and asking others to bring up as DM's. It can seem like play – but for many it's really not. It's something else entirely. It's a chance to let something off the leash they keep bottled. So the game itself – all games perhaps, as conscious tools – invite struggle – to resist the easiest course of action to win and the most acceptable. But RPG in particular opens the door to all kinds of demons – the 'Satanic Panic' was not even close to examining these kinds of issues, choosing superficial reactive understanding and blaming suicides on devil worship, TV, comics, and anything else that seemed remotely different and frightening to the hysterical, like cavemen hitting the reflection of the sun in a puddle – often times religion or politics clouds the very forces they – and this game – rely on – and belittle and often ridicule as scaremongering, or stupidity, or attributable to music, or movies.

All of which – all of which – every form of media inc. every religious text or icon, every flag and speech – from the unconscious made conscious as story. But it gets even trickier – and unfortunately, nastier. And this is evident in the amount of playing styles, weird behaviour, dominating – and that's a key word – behaviour that is very insistent – causes you to wonder what is going through that players head.... just as the players may wonder the same, for the DM is not immune to any of this – far from it they are both the cause of it for making the request, they too have the struggle, and because they too summon an even larger array of archetypes into which strangers archetypes are mixed. The amount of processes going on is so complex – and however, mostly only conscious, that projections often get confused. Many players attempting to pull up or play with archetypes inside themselves are often overwhelmed by them.

But Players playing with Players are often overwhelmed by these forces that spill out of control without them even knowing it. The raw power of archetypal energy, the Sauron-like eye of the ego that is ever-watchful to correct things that don't meet its standards, and the difficulty for human beings to over-ride their survival instincts to identify and categorise data (and people) and an inability to rationally analyse what they are not conscious of leads many players to turn on players because of something the character has done. Now this – is madness at its finest. Defended to the last – in light of what I have said – it is clean and simple, madness. The normal madness of humans we tend to overlook or scrutinise as it suits – but madness nonetheless.

From a Players perspective that HAS managed to evoke an archetype without losing control of it, resolve the definition of the moral compass, and impersonate a whole new part of themselves in the game – psychically, i.e, perceptually, to themselves they are the player AND the character. Or said another way, they are John playing Vermithrax the Wizard. From their psychic standpoint they had to make a division and let two personas in and they are aware of this acutely. BUT – human beings are very forgetful or not even conscious of their own processes – whereby they must do this too. HOWEVER – While they are two things or two parts of one process (lets just assume conscious control for a moment) – from the other Players points of view, from the Observer – John is ONE being. They cannot see, and selectively appreciate when John is being John, and when John is being Vermithrax. It doesn't cross their mind that on occasion Vermithrax can be John – but more importantly, they forget that the player is performing a mental feat of psychic gymnastics and focus generally on One Apex point that is John – usually across the table, his body, sometimes, his figurine, most times, his voice or his user presence whether it's a tab or a button – WHEN John does something that the other players don't like they bundle every form of his presence up – his figurine, his actions, his presence, his voice, his IP, into on very compact bundle in a very specific location they call JOHN. And that is when things become literally 'personal'.

This means, wild archetypes at play, have the potential to cause great harm to the actual person of John when transference and projection of his characters actions – become directly attributed to him – because my observation is that humans certainly all of those I've met and therefore by extension, likely every RPG player – only plays D&D with a perspective that it is purely a conscious game and therefore John is deliberately doing X. And this poor understanding of just some of the true forces this game invites causes almost all of the conflict it generates between players, between DM's, between innate parts of ourselves in the playground we flippantly call 'just a game'. D&D has the propensity to save, to heal, to help as much as it does to hinder, to harm or even kill – it is a tool, no less a Ouija board that does call very real demons – more so for some than others, it certainly calls up many questions as to the quintessential nature of what we are doing and why, when we tell stories and as DM's, as users of a game that is now 60 or so years old – we should have a more advanced knowledge of what we are actually doing when we sit down and RP – we should as DM's be aware of the responsibility but also – and more importantly, the irresponsibility. Most human action can be slotted into an avoidance of pain or the seeking of pleasure. We are all trying to complete ourselves – we are all at various stages on a spiral of evolution personal to us and inseparable from the collective.

This is not new age platitudes – RPG is sorcery, the oldest kind, where men used to don masks and become their gods in the moonlight sorcery. The only thing that has changed – is the form in which we wear the masks and the ceremonial floor – which is now a simulated landscape or building interior governed by abstract laws. But those dangerous, unstable, primal forces are nothing less strong – or not even far more neurotic when handled badly or without some form of wisdom as to what sorcery one is actually doing. With a more diverse approach to gaming that highlights these forces and processes, it's my hope that they can be more safely discovered, more patiently understood – and that DM's will appreciate what they are demanding of their players – and why their players might not be able to deliver it as expected. Perhaps this will lead to less conflict – more play – more harmony – and better discussions on these esoteric forces that may, or may not exist for you by the names I call them – but exhibit themselves every day, every where in every human sphere in a similar fashion and dominate the games we play and the things we do. What I do is merely a game within a game within a game within. It's the consequences that are real.

THE EFFECT OF GAMES ON DREAMING

GAMING: Can it have an impact on how we dream? — — — Years ago, I wrote a paper on the effect that Gaming had on my dreams. Whilst the battle rages back and forth about the possible effect of violence caused by video games I have been more interested in the changes to my psyche that have been taking place after a lifetime of gaming. I am 33. When I was just 9 years old my family won a commodore 64 then valued at $3000, at that time it was a state-of-the-art machine; and a super-lucky chance occurrence that introduced me to a life heavily involved with playing, coding, dissecting and making games of all kinds. Because of my age I have lived through the transformation of computers from clunky 64kb machines with tape players and 16 colours into a multi-million industry of futuristic equipment with powerful graphics engines and complexity we never dreamed of. I experienced each stage of the revolutionary rise of gaming as technological improvements gathered momentum and transformed games in every way possible.

The implications of such a vast leap forward in gaming experiences have occasionally been blamed for increasing violence but this essay is about the change's games may be having on our very psyche itself and the way games may be influencing our dreams. When we consider that gaming consoles of any sort are very recent, perhaps 60 years old if that – we might dismiss that they could have any effect on our dreams; but what if they do and what might that mean? Is it a provable phenomenon? Is it widespread or becoming more widespread as gaming increases? Is it beneficial for people to have dreams that resemble games? Is it altering a mode of communication or psychic phenomenon that has remained relatively stable throughout ancient human history? If it is happening with games, has it happened before via other mediums?

I looked into the history of dreams and saw that there was a correlation between the kind of technology and its level of availability that was common to a time and the way people described their dreams. Dreams are ancient, there are records of dreams going way back to the Sumerians around 6000 BCE at least – they being the oldest civilisation we have evidence for. They have played a crucial role in many of history's figures' lives with key insights, inventions, and genius being derived from them. Countless wars have been started over them, lost from them. Rulers have changed hands or made far-reaching decisions because of them, incredible breakthroughs have transfigured the world because of them and their effect on those who dreamed them. History is littered with thousands of examples of people having them and experiencing prophecies, ingenious solutions, warnings of impending death, works or art or song that did not exist, answers to difficult decisions or questions – and the way in which they explained or recorded them took on contemporary models by which humans interacted with one another.

Very early records of dreams are explained by Myths. Gods speaking to men and women would pass on messages, visions, warnings, blessings, curses and dreams recorded then were often described in ethereal detail. As humanity passed through its cultural apexes and technology changed human life dreams began to be interpreted through the then popular model of Plays, where characters took on definite roles and human dramas permeated the interactions between them. Earthy and distinct ideas, concepts, archetypes, roles, figures emerge from records of dreams where characters took turns to say what they needed to say with much definition and poise. Perhaps even the popularity of sports, war, physical excellence and other phases exemplified and raised to a virtue by cultures as time has gone by have also been responsible for attributing to the way we dream. Perhaps the very spatial location of ‘us’ in dreams has changed as various modes of vogue have come and gone. The act of being a spectator, watching stories, plays, may have come about from the prolonged exposure and act of witnessing spectacles, torture, trials, or sports.

Perhaps these past times which ate all our time developed or influenced how we ‘appeared’ or took presence of mind or where we stood on the stage in our dreams – first person, second person, third person, shifting and changing as culture and technology did. Dreaming has continuously passed through changing phases of popularity and ill-repute; variously being treated as messages from the Gods or spirits, as messages from ancestral ghosts, as aspects of high culture, have fallen into disrepute and spurned as hogwash and mind dribble, as occult mediums for divination and prophecy, as lunacy or psychology, magic or witchcraft.

At the present time dreaming is largely ignored and shunned by society at large in the West but still embraced by pockets of the East. As technology or culture becomes more relevant it becomes more omnipresent, leading to more and more chance of association with it in the subconscious as well as the conscious. Plays, Films and Games all work on basic principles of human interaction and the stories of drama and tragedy as developed by the Greeks from whom we base most of our societal laws, practices, models of society, human interaction, story-telling. Whilst a vast span of time separates us from the Greeks, the common theme of interpretation and similarity between how stories are told that we have adopted from them, has stayed the same; but the means to tell them has been through many changes. There are lots of different opinions on what they mean or if they mean anything – but I find this potential technological correlation of the type of technology influencing the type of dream to be of significant interest. If technology and the way we tell stories can impact dreams – How important are dreams – and what does it mean if games are hybridising with them, mixing up game experiences with archetypal experiences that have been dreamed a similar way for tens of thousands of years?

In more recent times, through speaking to people about their dreams it seems people tend to describe their dreams as being like a movie with even more distinct stories and characters with sets, actors, scenes, plot, unfolding in a seamless dialogue where characters speak through their dreams more like the script of a movie. Since dreams are essentially very private affairs and many people do not remember them or believe they have them any observations I have made can only be made with the interested air of a casual observer who thinks he sees a pattern that may or may not exist. Is this a new case of PlayStation thumb where prolonged exposure to console equipment has unexpected side-effects?

Personally speaking, my dreams have in the past few years taken on the aspect of seeming like games. Not all of them, but enough to make me notice the change and I think prolonged exposure to games has had a profound effect on the way I dream. For a few years I wrote down and recorded my dreams and there was definite patterns and changes in the way they evolved. I can see points where exposure to new mediums brought on new symbolism in my later dreams. As if my psyche were watching what I was watching and using it as props for dreams. One persistent belief of dreaming, I don't know if it's true, is that you can't die in your dreams. In one particular dream I did die, shot in the chest by a gun after playing a video-like dream in a large industrial complex where I was shooting enemies ala GTA game engine style. The words 'Game Over' flashed up. I woke up startled. I remember it because it was so different from any other type of dream I had had before.

I think somehow my brain cheated. Technically, I didn't die because I could "continue". Which is exactly what I did when I went back to sleep. It was like reloading the exact same level and moving through the dream almost identically, but being ready to change a tactic at a certain hard point of the 'game'. I thought it was odd but I also thought it was a solitary event. On occasion I now have dreams where I must score points, move through levels, experience third person hands as I move through them, drive as if in a game, explore worlds as if in a game, and have values in my dreams that reflect those of various games. Is it just me and my level of exposure to games or do others experience this change in their dreaming too? I wrote this paper in the hope that I could find out.

There used to be this idea that dreams each had a very specific meaning and books of an A-Z definition of dreams were very popular. A lot of people based their understanding on such motifs in dreams from those books believing that any symbol meant the same thing for everyone until pioneer Carl Jung's work on archetypes began to surface. In his book "Man and His Symbols" he showed how dreams that people were having in the 1950's were largely identical to dreams being had in medieval, byzantine, and even more ancient times. He indicated that dreams had not changed significantly in thousands of years. His main premise was that all minds are striving to achieve individuation – a state of wholeness or optimum performance by all of the faculties that make up our mental state, an integration of shadow, anima/animus, ego, id and more that works in mutual co-operation and that dreaming is a vital part of getting them to talk to each other.

In a sense not to be taken too literally, he suggested that the mind has a type of inner guidance system of its own accord where it throws up these dreams to communicate between the conscious and unconscious. It follows that we may be unaware of certain things we are doing, being, saying or actions we are performing consciously – but the unconscious is well aware of them and tries to let us know what is really happening beneath what we think is happening. For example, many dreams are corrective or compensatory, meaning they show us in an exaggerated or distorted light so we might realise that what we think of ourselves or some part of ourselves is blown out of proportion. We might appear as a King laden with jewels with millions of subjects bowing at our feet. This might be the unconscious saying ‘hey, you’re not the King of England, just calm down a bit’ – if we get embarrassed in the dream by our grandeur we might wake up and think about how we are acting and maybe change our course before we get too big for our boots in real life. His theory was that many dreams serve to bring to our attention certain deficits or psychic processes that are causing internal strife in the hope that we can correct them and integrate the contents of our dreams consciously to achieve improved communication between the different parts of our psyche.

Could the function of dreams to act as a sort of internal guidance system be influenced or even damaged through an interruption to traditional delivery symbolism and models by the effect of beginning to game inside dreams? Is it possible that such an effect could be altering the way my mind works and if so – is such a change going to be beneficial to me or harmful? Although I’ve not spoken to a great many people about this topic I do know people who do not game frequently but who have also had similar dreams of gaming. Like me, they describe them as “empty” or “filler” – a holding pattern that the brain goes into but which ultimately means nothing. There is no ‘feeling’ or ‘importance’ to such dreams, it is merely as if we are playing games in our dreams, going through the motions without significant purpose.

There is a widespread but I think incorrect belief that somehow we can get a perfect synchronicity between the forces of our psyche – but I believe what is actually perfect for the psyche is not at all congruent with what is perfect for the ego. The ego is that sense of self that we have that gives us identity – the strong feeling of who we are. Dreams can wake us up, scare us, haunt us, shame us, make us sad, or joyous, show us ingenious ways to solve a problem, share with us unwritten music, and provide a means of interaction with deeper forces that we believe not to exist because they are not conscious to us. It’s easy to forget them because we are so absorbed in our ego we cannot consciously recognise unconscious cognitive processes. Dreams help us to do that however albeit in an often confusing but sometimes very uncomfortably clear way. Whilst many dreams have an 'archetypal message' which is a kind of script for what is to be expected; i.e. what is normal for you or abnormal for you – all of which contains a mix of fantasy, fear, motivation, drive, ambition, ego, sense of self, distortion and a whole mix of other things personal to us – the phenomena of dreaming is also intensely private. Even when we want to or have presence of mind to try Dreams can be elusive things to describe or even remember. The complexity and other-worldliness of many of them gives us pause to share them not just because we fear what others may think of us believing dreams are anything other than useless junk, but because the sense of time, space, change, events does not often accord with our general perception of time and space.

Dreams are extraordinarily difficult at the best of times to accurately describe or too intimate, disjointed, incoherent, fragmented or strange to try. But for those that do take notice of their dreams they can be a source of guidance into the deeper meaning of humanity. While some motifs or themes appear in dreams recorded thousands of years ago still appear in people's dreams today, it is generally accepted that dreams do not automatically have a single definition for any given symbol that they mean something unique to each of us. Losing teeth in one person's dream may mean something completely different to another person's dream of losing teeth. What matters here is Context, the situations and events, feelings and sensations that surround the dream and whether it makes any sense to the dreamer. Oftentimes, a dream will repeat itself until an important message gets through. Other times it will change its outward symbolism but inwardly be trying to say the same thing over and over. It is surprising how gentle the unconscious can be when it tries to get the Consciousness to recognise something, often veiling its harsh message of reality in codes and symbols, animals and weird stories – OR – wake you the @#%$ up with a terrible realisation that makes you wake in a sweat with the conscious feeling of shame, guilt, anger, sadness and recognition that the message was for you, it was meaningful and you had no idea you were being such a jerk.

It seems the bigger the ego the harder the unconscious has to try to get through with its message but this is also a generalisation. In some sense, losing teeth means Transformation – just as when a baby loses its milk teeth and begins to develop into a small child with autonomy it is a sign of change and metamorphosis from one person into another or from some significant stage of life into another. It is the development of the psyche taking place, though usually we as a wholistic organism Know this – we do not have access to most of it Consciously. Constantly running is just one of thousands of signs or motifs of motion or momentum toward or away from something, it might be symbolised as running from a monster which in waking might life be us running from some problem we think will eat us alive. The Dream might allow us to see the absurdity of this and we might wake and face the problem with a new understanding – or we might just keep running and begin to see that motif of running constantly appear in many other ways, we might be driving a bus across a desert; or falling without hitting the ground.

These all signify changes in the psyche or desires for the psyche for us to consciously address deficits of experience We need in order to make that change happen. A lot of people experience being unable to defend themselves in dreams and throwing slow motion punches against an aggressor – or being unable to run on grass or only run in slow motion. There are no definitive sources on what these mean but it is fairly certain that there is a correlation between the stages of psychic growth in the unconscious and the conscious recognition of unconscious processes in waking life. Said another way, once you recognise that the unconscious is there, and talking to you, and you pay a bit of attention – the dreams begin to change. I've had all of those dreams described above and kept dream journals most of my life. The patterns of what was going on Internally as opposed to what was going on Externally in my life are striking and often profound.

Dreams are tricky animals though – they are so clever they can often say many things using just one dream or symbolism. I believe they say something both about the way your psyche is growing as well as reflect outward matters such as how you feel about a job, whether you are being a jerk by doing such and such, whether you are in danger because of something you are doing in your waking life etc. If you have trouble defending yourself from an aggressor because you cannot punch or fight back – this is what I believe to be a sign that you have virtually no recognition of your other psychic components. Meaning you think YOU are all there is and that there are no deeper processes in your head controlling everything. There is no bridge between your ego and self and so you cannot defend yourself against the onslaught of other psychic processes that are going on and are driven by forms and forces around you, peers, friends, family, issues, problems without any real understanding of how you may be attributing to them. A lot of people take this dream to mean they are weak and sometimes start physical training or gather confidence to speak up about something. This is a by-product I think of trying to listen to the unconscious and act on what it is telling you.

That said, you Cannot safely always listen to the unconscious – it takes Two to tango and the Ego, despite often being grossly distorted, is just as important a psychic faculty of ours that keeps the unconscious from spilling over into our consciousness and sending us crazy or into psychosis. As I look back through my dream notes I see distinct changes in how messages were relayed as gaming began to come into vogue and the Platform on which gaming experiences were delivered began to leak into my unconscious mind and influence it. It may be that because I was taking so much notice of games that my unconscious saw this as an opportunity to get messages through in a new way or because I was paying more attention to anything gaming related. One thing is certain gaming has altered my dreaming. The dreams I have of gaming seem alien, they are seldom recognisable as archetypal and leave me with the odd sense that I have had my perception mind jacked.

It is interesting to note that until Christianity (Monotheism) began to scour the Earth with its One God Recorded Dreams were not particularly moral. Zoroastrianism coupled with Jewish mysticism combined to give the world the concepts of good and evil as directly opposed forces in battle. At first these were gods, now they are humans. Now almost every blockbuster movie or game has the same colouring – good guys vs bad guys. With these reinforced messages hitting us from everywhere it is difficult not to believe in and live the story of a diametrically opposed struggle between good and evil or see them everywhere – but I honestly don't believe such a struggle exists. I think the reality is much bleaker in fact and that humanity has a heart of darkness. If we just fell into that darkness we'd be engulfed by shadow – but we seem to think it all the sweeter to accentuate the shadow with light, to toy with that darkness so that we can plunge ever deeper into it from an artificial platform of our own design that allows us to dive from a higher height.

I imagine there may be some people who ask -what does this have to do with gaming?- the answer is Everything. The human condition, struggle, suffering, morality, choice, outlook, hope, despair all have everything to do with what makes a Game GREAT, to really feel the blind destructive nihilistic all-consuming hatred and vengefulness of Kratos in God of War when the gods abandon him requires telling a story that appeals to what is inside us, our passions, codes of ethics, traditions as human beings. To feel pressed upon when forced to make decisions that affect millions of lives in games like Army of Two or Mass Effect requires drama, tragedy and a self-identification with the characters and the consequences they face from choices they make – and more than that – Feeling something about those choices, not just playing them through but being involved and feeling sad, happy, triumphant or depressed. I don't believe any game did this better than Heavy Rain on the ps3. Dreams are much the same in the way they involve us and force us to make decisions or see things in a new light, we are being asked to make choices that we often can't reload if we make a fatal or destructive one but can sometimes reload if we catch any major issues in time by listening to what they have to say.

Really there is no difference in playing a game or dreaming a dream – both sets of content come from the same place, from the stories of humanity, antiquity and beyond, from the unconscious made conscious through imagination, creativity, memory, and the long trawl of archetypal stories our race has been through time and time again. Tell me Star Wars isn't World War II in disguise. The subject matter and the issues I have raised would require a far more in-depth analysis, experts in sociology, psychology, artists, social media and the comments and insights of other people to really lift the lid on what I have touched upon hopefully not in a boring manner for my readers – even to see if there is anything to what I have suggested beneath that lid. As it stands, I do not know if others have had their dreams affected in this way. I suppose I don't really know what the question I am asking is either – I feel perhaps I am just on the verge of noticing something happening to me that seems important to mention.

That perhaps the omnipresent world of gaming has begun to bleed so deeply into our subconscious that it is mixing ancient messages with modern ones in a way that is yet to be noticed on any large scale and the effects of which are as yet undetermined. In part I think any answer requires each of us to ask ourselves why do we game? What is its purpose? And what purpose might it be used for by our unconscious mind? I use it for escapism and to get the psychological reward of achievement. Yes they are fun, entertaining, thought provoking or just too good and therefore too hard to put down, i.e. addictive. But I do not get any sense of reward when I “game-dream”. Someone else who uses games for another purpose might feel differently, might have another perspective on what these game-dreams ‘do’ if anything, for them, but for me it is like important archetypal content is perhaps being missed out on because my unconscious brain suddenly wants to play Pacman.

Perhaps this is the pre-stage of a future trend for humans toward becoming more hybridised with machines – by developing deep unconscious associations to such material. What could be some advantages of beginning to have game-related dreams? Firstly, I suppose games introduce us to worlds that have very specific challenges. Re-living these worlds and the challenges they present allows us to solve problems that arise in those worlds in a game-type fashion with restricted functions and actions, but which challenges may prompt new solutions as the unconscious enters the picture.

These new solutions which come from a hybrid of gaming theory and raw ingenuity may improve our ability to solve problems. For example, in the PC game Discworld, notably one of the hardest point-and-clicks of its time, I was stuck in a section where I had to somehow take a pancake from a chef who was flipping it. Standing in the kitchen I tried everything to take the damn thing but after an hour of clicking my vast inventory on everything in the kitchen I gave up and went to sleep. It was while I was asleep that my mind ticked over the problem and dreamed the solution. The high window, the ladder, the butterfly net. It played out in my head in quick flashes and when I woke I tried the suggestion only to find to my immense surprise that it worked. It seems that aside from solving problems games also provide a means to explore alternatives to violence in a safe and relatively controlled environment inside the head when we re-live them. My mind appears to use them as a control or baseline background against which enter all sorts of philosophic thoughts about the nature of suffering and the reasons why humans inflict it. I have found myself dreaming several games to which solutions were provided in my dreams. Myst. Doom. Gun. And others, where consciously I could not grasp the solution but while sleeping it just came to me.

They may also provide some context for human experience because many of them are now so advanced and advancing in terms of copying human interactions, problems, challenges, stories and behaviours that for those who do not have experience of such ideas, it introduces them. Games that began to introduce morality that illustrated the short and long-term consequences of the players actions such as Mass Effect, Army of Two tackled many hard-hitting issues that people have or are likely to find themselves facing. Granted that a game like GTA may introduce people to experiences of a nature that do not provide strong moral context in the traditional manner, but it is more reflective of the propensity of human behaviour to explore possible actions in any given environment and just this sand-box for experience alone seems enough to feed a person with many new and varied kinds of stimulus, media, ideas, concepts that may be used by the unconscious in its messages or symbolism.

Very few of us are going to be astronauts and fly among the stars but with Games we are given the opportunity to present to our psyche a simulation from which it can draw new or hybridised experiences creating and generating new scenarios, new challenges, new worlds and characters it may not have met or explored or even get the chance to meet or explore and which it draws from to enrich our dream symbolism, potential to solve problems, face issues or experience consequences in all manner of ways that would kill or imprison us in waking life in a safe environment that processes these things in a positive way for the majority of people. Games are the very stuff of dreams; they are fantasy made playable. Just like dreams we enter a world to interact with its environs and characters, to do as we wish freely in the safety of our paralysed sleep.

We play through options, scenarios, concepts living out behaviours we might never copy in real life, but which seem to require exploration out of some inward curiosity of 'what if' that humanity seems to have within it and because it is a healthy outlet in the private realm of the dreamer. As games continue to become more Advanced such as the upcoming revision of Tomb Raider which is a significant leap forward in mimicking human behaviour and realism through its dialogue, mobility of characters, appearance of textures and rawness of story line Games take on a more visceral, imitation of a dreamer's dreams. They set us among challenges in a safe contained way in which we are allowed the freedom to act as we will within the limits.

If we come to then dream said game, those limits become boundaries against which a psyche of a person makes internal measurements. The realism of dreams and games is beginning to meet, and whilst dreams are far more complex in the experience they provide, games are providing the dreams of others to each of us. In dreaming what they dream, we experience empathy of a previously unknown and private concept hidden deep within other human beings. In seeing it come to life in our hands or heads we are able to see what they see, sometimes feel what they feel, or live their dream our way. They say that 90% of human communication is non-verbal – involving subtle movements of muscles, eyelids, facial twitches, minute iris movements, body posture and so on. Understanding this has allowed many changes to take place in how people interact with one another. An expansion of dream content from one person or group of people to another through the medium of games by way of experiencing the imagination of others can only bring us closer to understanding more about ourselves and each other.

They say that playing an RPG or chess game against someone brings out their true nature. Someone you thought was a passive shy person suddenly becomes a tyrant or sore loser on the chess field. They show their greed, anger, envy, pettiness or bravery, courage, fortitude as they take on other characters. But just because they take on those masks, does not mean they do not take them off. Since we only have one biological face it is customary to believe that people only have one distinct personality – but do we? Games allow us to explore facets of our personalities that rarely see the light of day. We can be an evil bad ass or a noble knight, we can care about saving characters or do it only for the points – whatever we choose, games allow us to choose safely, just as dreams do, so that we can expand, explore, enhance our breadth of experience without harming anyone. That some do choose to harm others is hardly attributable to games except for a very few direct cases – but because of a sense of alienation from other people.

Games may on occasion isolate people physically to play them but they unite them in common experience of what it means to be human and act human. It may not be pleasant, but violence and mayhem are as much a part of our ability as kindness and warmth. There is a beast inside all of us that develops naturally as a human function of survival and autonomy but which beast often has no outlet on which to vent. Some choose sport to channel it, some the army, some exercise with weights or create works of art or story, some bottle it up and express it through rage or violence or try to shut it down or let it out. When most of us play games its just like walking the dog. It needs to be let out every now and then so it doesn't tear up the furniture, whine, or go mad. Its a part of us we can't deny – when we deny it it becomes twisted and shameful – but when we accept it we own it.

Games are an outlet for the beast as much as they are a harvest of ideas, concept and constructive problem solving or human interaction. Whilst it is too early to predict the implication of having game dreams on an increasing basis – I would suggest that the benefits outweigh any negatives. These odd occurrences of playing games in my sleep will not stop me gaming yet I cannot simply help but wonder how many times technology has revolutionised not just the external world in which we live in but perhaps the very biological function and mind-print of our psyches and the long-term influence of gaming.

MEMES: A BRIEF STUDY

The Temple of THEM's Symbol – now known as the 'Thrasz' – can be seen here as members altars, acts of dissidence in assorted media, personal oath, ritual celebration, and various artworks. It can further be seen self-propagating. This symbol not only holds the most ubiquitous of nature's forms, the spiral, it further engages the primal human interest for its resemblance to an animal eye or the gaze of another which humans are drawn to. The eye allows humans to personify the symbol – and thus give it life. It draws from the history of the swastika, the sun and a thousand other motions and examples that we cannot help but recollect visibly or invisibly. The parasitical or vampiric nature of successful memes allows minor memes to proliferate through attachment to well-established ones (sub-culture) – this principle is outlined in Directive A16 by THEM. This particular meme is believed to reflect the current evolutionary awareness of humanity – in regards to time, space, form and self-awareness but also the inhuman forces of THEM – and this its draw is automatic, it creates an intuitive understanding that makes it hypnotic. We stare at the Abyss and the Abyss stares back at us.

These images represent only a small number and only a few types of the Thrasz that have come into existence. The symbol itself is as simple as the Cross or the Circle. Yet it can mean or be made to mean so much. For instance, the Thrasz is expanded upon greatly as a 'folded symbol' containing the entire teachings and cosmology of the Temple via the Auerkeanequeo or the 'unfolded Thrasz'.

Ryan Fleming has shared some intriguing insights and methodology into memes here:

Memplexes as Viral Units If you were to ask -why is this shape so pleasing? We could give you the following answer – the circle is not interesting on its own. The arms would not be either. It's only the combination that does it. But without the single eye, the rune of Isa in the centre the symbol has no life. Why? Well, the answer is that the meme self-propagates just as nature divides cells. The arms spiral off from the sides but hook back as if about to form another circle this is pleasing at a fundamental level not merely aesthetically but also in a primal sense, for we Are nature. And nature hates a vacuum. Moreover, the right-angles of the arms reinforce our three-dimensional understanding of time and space, and movement through it as coordinates on a grid. The similarity of the tensions of forces created by the Chinese yin-yang is contained therein not morally – not as black or white containing the essence of each, but physically – representing motion and stillness, time in great portions and small, but it does not do it through a tension of duality; humans, some, at least, are attempting to understand and erode duality in order to evolve. This evolution represents our current zeitgeist. In science, in technology, in medicine, in space travel, in philosophy, and in word and action

GENETICALLY MODIFIED FOOD

Speciality Knowledge

This section hosts Insights gleaned from members of the Sinisterion working in various industries in both the Public sector and Private sector such as the Govt.

Having now worked in a number of food industries including a few confectioners and a refurbishing plant I'd like to share my knowledge regarding some of the more esoteric matters of determining what is in processed food – and the blatant poisoning and misdirection by food industries, including the FDA [Food and Drug Administration] when it comes to the content in Australian foodstuffs. Building on my work with 'Association' [Qv. An Analysis of Frequency: Part I] and how study has shown that certain triggers will be perceived negatively, it is an established business practice to omit the use of certain words such as "Genetically Modified" or "GMO"; "MSG" [or Mono Sodium Glutamate]; Aspartame [aka Artificial Sweetener aka Poison] or "Chemically Tampered With" [aka Artificial or Nature Identical]. I am deeply concerned about the growing and sharp increase of these products in all processed Australian foods, for the simple motive behind them and the esoteric/invisible confession of the poisons in our food is Greed and the desire for simple profit. Generally, most people have no idea what is in their food and, having worked for a number of food industries I believe there are two very distinct worlds of knowledge concerning its modern production; one a romantic idyll of food that stems from the brainwashing and psychological/subliminal associations nurtured as a Belief by misleading advertising which is not so much misleading as lies and reliance on the ignorance of the average consumer and how easy it is to exploit them; and then there is the often nasty reality of food and its production to make it saleable no matter what is in it.

As a case in point, a lot of people don't think too much about the colour of 'margarine' for instance, or know that it is a stomach turning grey before that brilliant and artificial yellow is added, and then a strong campaign of advertising perhaps to create associations to the sun, buttercups, freshness, farms, and other tasty yellow things such as corn, or perhaps simply use humour to distract the consumer from asking what should really be asked. If you want a really tough insight role into the Food Industry, try suddenly quitting the use of refined/white sugar from your diet for a week and then keep yourself from going completely insane.

A treatise on the practices of the food industry could easily turn into a book so I'll briefly run through the Numeric System used to conceal/omit what is in food from the average consumer yet esoterically label it so as to comply 'legally' and be approved by the FDA and other food administrations. The 3 or 4 digit numbers that appear on the back of food packets under the contents listing are your only real guide to what is in your food, you will generally Never see GM written on a product because that phrase has been stigmatised by the media and has a negative connotation; consumers have been told that GM must be on all Genetically Modified food but it is not well known that any other number of phrases/creative license can be used to get around listing a certain ingredient and this is legal because it protects the interests of what has become largely a Multi-National Food Industry ruled by a handful of companies that own thousands of smaller ones. So, one should be extremely wary of anything listed in the contents with a TM or Trademark after it such as "Hi-Maize", a GM product used by the company Uncle Toby's and many others in the manufacture of certain muesli/food 'bars' as just one example.

There is a sliding scale of numbers used to indicate what is in your food. Anything in the 100 range is generally safe and comprises dyes. 200-300 is made up of the fixatives used in food that stop it from going mouldy, off, or hold it firmly together for the purposes of the rough travel endured by packaging and possibly shipping. It may also be further colours such as 330 which is Red Food Colouring, previously and sometimes still, called "Cochineal" and made from the crushed remains of a certain red beetle. 400 is where emulsifiers, some thickeners and a lot of preservatives start to come into the equation. Mostly however, these are the lesser of the necessary evils required to create a product that keeps its shape, flavour, texture, use-by in a modern country largely dependant on processed food. Anything above 470-500 is where it gets tricky, deceptive, and then finally unethical/dangerously experimental.

One of the major concerns of 2004 was the introduction of MSG as a salt-type flavouring into Australian foodstuffs. Although it adds no nutrition to food, MSG acts as a gourmet crack substitute and is a highly addictive flavouring that can make an otherwise banal or bland cracker taste, not fantastic, but certainly keep you eating the entire bag thinking that you are enjoying a well-made product, not a slapdash biscuit or cracker made from cheap-edge ingredients and polished off with a gastronomic narcotic to make it edible. MSG will very rarely be labelled as such; but is now used in almost all chips, crackers, processed pastas, soups, stocks, canned meats and chilli mixes, pies, and other snack foods under the innocuous number, 630, 631, 635 or 627. It may also be listed as "Hydrolysed Vegetable Protein" and unfortunately a creative variety of other titles unique to the manufacturer to get around doing even this, one example being "Flavour Enhancer". 700's are rare, but 900's are popping up more than ever, Esp. 931, MSG's big brother – only what is in this is anyone's guess. Anything above 400 has in some way been chemically tampered with; whole industries experiment with how to make something more crunchy, more resistant to milk, look yellow instead of grey, freeze without losing its flavour etc... and this is where the magic starts to go out of food and some very dangerous risks with peoples health are taken without allowing them the information to protect themselves from such risks. Anything in the 900 range is almost purely chemical, I.e. it is an artificial compound designed to replace a natural ingredient cheaply or to do something unnatural to your food such as make muesli last for six months on the outside while it rots on the inside. 950, 951 in particular are also known as 'Aspartame' – which is a certified poison banned in almost every country except Australia, the UK and the US. Aspartame is also known as Artificial Sweetener and is used in the products Pepsi-Max and Diet-Coke to supplement the loss of sugar, however, Aspartame is known to be a poison by the FDA and is never listed under its actual name.

The higher you go from here, the more unnatural, deceptive and experimental the chemicals/processes used in making that 'food' become. And it is of great concern when something like food, a natural substance of yield for thousands of years should suddenly be so sharply interfered with to the extent that Farmers are banned from using anything but a GM seed that does not continue to reproduce but completes one cycle and then dies requiring the Farmer to buy more and is persecuted by law firms and sued for not using a dangerously unstable unnatural product. We're way beyond putting sawdust in bread and biscuits.

It is thus necessary to take a seemingly unusual 'activist' angle to try to educate people how to educate themselves by cracking the code used by the food industry. Anything with the number 1400+ is a genetically modified derivative. But, 1422 for instance is listed as 'Thickener' – so you can see my point about companies being deceptive when it comes to informing the consumer what is in their product. I would steer clear of anything above 400 personally – but it is not always possible – indeed it is becoming impossible not to ingest some of these Frankenstein foods every day unless one lives on a farm or rural community or can afford the petrol to get to a market. I just hope this guide helps other Australians discern what is in their food and to make a better choice about how/what to eat. I haven't included it here because its lengthy but a google search about MSG and Aspartame will reveal a lot about the nature of these products and why ingesting them should be of grave concern.

The Art of Refurbishing

Warning, the following Insight may ruin your appetite. Another little known practice and a most unsavoury one motivated by higher profit margins and greed is Refurbishing. It's a nice little word for Recycling. A Refurbishing Plant will receive large quantities [I.e. warehouses full] of food or products that didn't sell, to re-package them, and try to sell them again. It makes no difference whether those foodstuffs are fit for consumption and I have seen the most disgusting foods [mouldy coconut roughs, soiled dusty bars, vintage chocolate] returned only to be repackaged and resold; usually to places like NQR [Not Quite Right] which are like cheap food emporiums set up in poor or lower class areas to get rid of excess/damaged/out of date stock. Being of course set up in poor areas, because the rich refuse to tolerate such practices and being rich can be choosy about what they eat. For instance, there are no two dollar shops [Cheap Imports] or NQR stores in Brighton, VIC.

I was a little naive when I first began working in confectionery, I'm much wiser now. I'd been spellbound by the movie Charlie and the Chocolate Factory for years before I took my first job at one for three dollars an hour. They're actually loud, noisy, dangerous and sickening places to work. Molten Sugar is identical to Napalm and can give you third degree burns in the instant it is carelessly handled or improperly secured/contained by cheap equipment or lazy foremen; if you hold it too long and it goes hard then you'd best not be working on the taffy/pulling machine because it will stick to your gloves like cement and drag you through the gears; I've seen it happen. If that doesn't get you, then there's the machines that keep the sugar moving just prior to it being shaped into those nice inoffensive little lollies and boiled sweets you might sometimes eat; they'll cut and crush your hands if you're not nimble enough to perform this demanding job; and woe betide you should be the one to put the blocks of compound [cheap] chocolate into the machine that melts it because you may lose a hand. The Confectionery business is a dangerous business and I half-believe there is a demonic malevolence about it.

But I digress; when candy doesn't sell it's not thrown away. Sugar, and its industry, is a complex and highly expensive process with all of its secrets jealously guarded. It took my employer four years and an expert from America at $800 an hour to learn how to put chocolate centres into mint flavoured candies so he could sign a contract with Target and Myers as a supplier. Sugar, more accurately, refined sugar, or 'white' sugar, is the number one narcotic substance in the world. Salt follows at a close second. Almost no-one in the developed world can go for more than a few days without ingesting refined sugar in one food or another without serious withdrawal symptoms and may even develop psychosis. Many mental hospitals are crammed full of patients addicted to sugar. And if anyone is looking for a particularly insightful role to back up these claims – just try eliminating refined sugar from your diet. You can understand then, that unlike McDonalds where food is cheap-edge and will not keep for longer than a few hours and must be thrown out – sugar is a ball of preservatives that will retain its shape, colour, flavour and texture for years. Companies who produce sugar and in particular, cheap lollies and candy en masse, are reluctant to see the expensive process of making it go to waste just because demand is low. After three months, sometimes six, if a product does not sell it is sent back to its manufacturer. The manufacturer may then send it to a Refurbishing Plant. This itself may take weeks. Those magazines that you occasionally see advertised for $2.95 for a first issue and then $9.95 for each one after are almost always refurbished. Now, magazines I can understand even though if you look closely at your 'new' magazine you'll see a lot of creases, smudges, and probably remnant glue where an old sticker used to be and has been scraped off. I don't think its ethical not to drop the price on its second and maybe even tenth run. But food? Surely food's not dealt with in the same way?

Yes. It is. And there's more.

When I worked for various confectioners I was astonished to see that the very same sweet was put into bags destined for all different manufacturers; whether high class and low class, it was the same product in each bag. This is an extensively used practice in many other industries, but esp. in Australia where private imports/exports are now the majority. Next time, buy cheap – it's the same sweet. Obviously, T.V. and the company itself sells a much different picture, a romantic idyll of food as I mentioned before, encrusted with buzzwords and claims of 'nutrition', 'diet', 'lite' etc. to hide the often disgusting practices behind the making of food and conceal what is actually in it. There's also the connection factor – many of the FDA officials are also on the board of the AMA, or American Medical Association. To use an esoteric parallel; food companies cloak the reality with an appearance. There is no complex motive or conspiracy behind this smokescreen – it's just greed, economics, and 'good business sense'. However, concealed within an esoteric code, the vagaries of modern food are a secret language that very few have the luxury of learning.

GENOMES AND THE HUMAN GENE PATENT

The patent on human genomes Nov 14 and the world-wide ramifications, not to mention the dangerous looming precedent of allowing aspects of nature to be defined as intellectual property via an economic based argument hinged on a claimed necessity for funding for research and development.

Economics would argue that in order to secure investment and intellectual property, the only way to support such fringe technology, it is necessary for a monopoly or patent to be applied to DNA and/or aspects of it. This argument is the usual suspect of industry where it comes to inventions, new technologies and so on – prompting others to invest time and resources in the payoffs that come with holding a 20 year monopoly on such breakthrough science. But it could be argued, that like Monsanto attempting to copyright the animal the Pig, if this justification for profit/technology and the welfare it creates is applied to natural instances, universal attributes and characteristics of our very genetic make-up – there is incredible new dangers and unseen problems bound to arise. The world is plagued with problems – but while many of them seem in constant see-saw, and mostly beyond our power to control or eradicate, at the very least we know what they are. The introduction of patents on biological nature would almost certainly throw up a challenge to humanity the likes of which it has never seen – particularly, since those pursuing its legalisation or banning pursue their own interests – and very rarely does anyone actually have any full understanding of the ramifications of such policies adopted on the wider world community – nor qualified to predict the effect when such laws are institutionalised when future technologies make this science cheaper and open to criminal and unethical marketeers. Along with super-toxins, automated warfare and drones, genetic patents throw open the doors to huge problems, most of which cannot be foreseen. But some of which we can guess at given the way humanity already treats intellectual properties in other fields and commodities.

Ruling on human gene patents looms

AAPNovember 14, 2010, 9:02 pm

“The US legal system is now considering the issue of patents which cover human genes and its decision will have “worldwide ramifications”, the Royal College of Pathologists Australasia (RCPA) has said. The US government filed a “friend of the court” brief with the US Federal Court early this month, ahead of an anticipated appeal by a biotech firm which is seeking to assert its patent over human genes. The RCPA’s genetics advisory committee chairman, Graeme Suthers, says the government’s brief signals a major shift in US policy on the controversial issue. The eventual court ruling may invalidate tens of thousands of patents now applying to human genes, while there are also ramifications for research and the conduct of labs undertaking genetic testing across the globe, he says.

“The US government’s stance regarding genomic DNA has changed dramatically because it now regards genomic DNA as unpatentable,” Dr Suthers said in a statement. He said the US government had drawn a new distinction between two different forms of DNA that occur naturally – the raw unprocessed genetic code or genomic DNA, and the processed DNA of a gene that is called cDNA. It continued to hold the view that “cDNA is potentially patentable” although the court would ultimately come to a decision on this issue. Australia’s senate inquiry into the broader issue of human gene patenting is due to report within weeks. There has been a long-standing debate, mostly within the academic community, about whether patents should be applied to human genes. The issue came to a head in March, when a US District Court ruled that patents should not have been granted over the BRCA1 and 2 genes which are known to increase a woman’s risk of breast cancer.

The biotech industry argues it needs the patents to protect their intellectual property and attract investment that allows vital research and development work to continue. Opponents argue the patents should apply to human inventions only and not genetic code at the core of nature. Holders of gene patents can potentially restrict pathologists from using the same gene sequence in a genetic test.

“Efforts to commercialise this information should be focused on developing products and applications, rather than restricting use of the genetic information,” Dr Suthers said. “This isn’t something that only medical researchers need to be aware of – it has important consequences for everyone who provides or uses healthcare.”

Along with super-toxins and automated warfare and drones; genetic patents throw open the doors to huge problems, most of which cannot be foreseen. But some of which we can guess at given the way humanity already treats intellectual properties in other fields and commodities. What happens if said patented gene turns up in somebody by accident, is found in somebody whose DNA contains it, or deliberately uses it? How does one control or even regulate the -content- of DNA – or define patented and natural DNA? If someone is found to be in illegal possession of such genes – are they to be removed? How? If the genes that are patented cause trouble – i.e., mutations, abnormalities, super-sicknesses, who is responsible? The scientists who mixed the genes, or nature whose extraordinary ability to introduce chaos is legendary? What about genetic contagion – is that possible? through food, contact, sex, chemicals – and if so, who is responsible for it, nature or the genetic patenters. More importantly – who is going to want to be held responsible if it all goes wrong?

No-one ever wants to take responsibility innumerable examples of corporations dodging blame are rife, everyone from McDonald's to the bush admin, to the banks and oil vendors do everything in their power to pass the blame for grievous environmental/ethical tragedies to others or tie them up in knots for decades through trials, lawyers, intimidation and reprisal. We can do nothing about things after they have happened – especially changes to our very genetic make-up. Science has gotten things wrong so many times and made no apologies. The farcical understanding of all things demonstrated by humanity is more than enough evidence to indicate no safety net and no safeguards will or can be employed when tampering with the insanely complicated phenomena that is integral to life-force.

The genomes patent also brings up the ethical and legal considerations of Capital – where it is commonly argue that the means of production – Capital- can be owned – one wonders where contamination of genes might lead. Monsanto presently grows GMO maize crops – only a few miles from non-GMO crops. The difference is that Monsanto's crops seed only once a year, and they have made a fortune putting farmers out of business who refuse to be reliant on that annual seed. however, if a farmer's crops are found to contain GMO maize seed that has blown from downwind, it is up to the Farmer to prove they did not transgress Monsanto's patent. This is not innocent mishap and is achieved by spies and a legal team of 70 persons who prosecute any farmer whose crops are found to be (or are sabotaged) growing unlicensed maize crops using the GMO patent.

If a genomic person mates with a non-genomic person, who owns the resulting genes? Can a person grown by patent genes be owned, as a slave or if used as a worker, deemed to be Capital? There are numerous signs emerging in the Matrix, Star Wars Clone Wars and other movies that unconsciously attempt to fuse our grand fear of machines, and the horror of a technology that can replicate human beings. Super soldiers are one such fear, unlimited workers, slaves, or even humans as edible meat supply are among some of the feared outcomes of letting these two phenomena be fused. My belief is that environment plays a huge part in psyche – and a machine based cold alien environment that re-instituted robots/slavery would breed a psychopathic ethos the likes of which have never been seen, nor been possible at any point in history.

THE DARK GOD OTO ANORHA AND THE SINISTER FEMININE: BREAKING THE CHAINS

[This essay combines an earlier criticism of Gustave Moreau and his portrayal of the Sinister Feminine with more recent remarks made by THEM relating to its Dark God, Oto Anorha and the nature of its depiction in the Tarot Card: UNSUNG as part of its Archetypal Set TENDRIL.]

+O+ The difficulty of finding a stock photo of a woman expressing Rage online was immense - nowhere to be found was there any genuine anger except perhaps for a small photo of Xena, Warrior Princess whose only short-coming as a Sinister Archetype is her ridiculous armour. All I could find were bubblegum women showing mock anger. No killing rage, no intensity, no honest outpouring of Anger either in the eyes or the face. I'd no idea the situation was so serious... Without mastering certain skills it would be impossible for me to attempt to draw some of the cards of Tendril. My understanding of human form and figure continues to grow... the human body is difficult to depict, particularly in the case of UNSUNG which is an attempt at a genuine Sinister Feminine Archetype.

The women of THEM are above all practical, hard, ruthless survivors. Their faces are not passive, their chests are covered. If they wore armour it would be functional - protecting their vitals and padded/plated for warfare. They would not risk breaking their sternum with the fantasy boob-plate and would opt to deflect blades away from the heart not give them free passage. They are not skinny and they do not snap in half when the world tests them, they are not weak or helpless or afraid to speak, they are both beautiful and savagely ugly - and when they Rage, they Rage for their own ends like you wouldn't believe. They do not stop at a single head. A few things. This is OTO ANORHA the Dark One.

In the background a woman is imprisoned in a glass cage surrounded by icons of torture and degradation throughout the aeons, inc ballet shoes, high heels, corset, ruler, measuring tape, home appliances, a police truncheon and badge, geisha mask, scales, and burkha. She has simply had enough of being measured, poked, prodded, forced into wearing this or that, weighed, analysed, assessed and quite simply launches herself at the viewer her hands dripping with blood [not shaded in yet] her face blackened with absolute rage. Black lightning crackles off her skull as a Blackness descends that has frightened Man since the Beginning calling upon the "crazy psycho bitch" inside her. Her primal self underneath the adornments blazes with primordial power [a pre-celtic triskadeliac triple ring tattoo is a nod to her triple [traditional] aspect whilst the tattoo itself represents Her omni-nature [the sun, the womb, the moon, the ovaries, uterus, reproductive organs, cyclical procession et al]. She has a shaved head to indicate the raw power of a woman does not come from her hair [a spit upon classical beauty] and is armoured heavily in tactical plating including her neck. Yet there are nods to her other aspects of femininity through the haze of blood. Outside of her SAS tactical plating with special emphasis on covering the heart she wears a necklace with three orbs [another nod to the traditional triple goddess archetype] in which are contained the eyes of three animals, a wolf for her savagery and her pride, an owl for her shrewdness, resilience and silent knowing, and a lioness for the nuance of her maternal instincts to care for her young, be dependable, loyal, and strong for others and herself and the other side of her as the sinister, deadly, focused huntress. +O+

Traditional Tarot such as are usually created frustrate me incredibly. What incentive is there to bring out that latent nature in the way of strong feminine archetypes for young women to adopt when they are depicted as weak, passive, saccharine, sexual objects -fairies, angels, impractically clad warrior-esses with exposed breasts and glaring omissions of armour, as succubi, vampires, monsters? And therefore, encourage women to see themselves as the same? The FEAR to change what stands is obviously immense or we might have seen some departure from this. Women are depicted again and again in the same stale vein and from a male point of view - There are No modern examples I can think of that archetypically represent a strong female.

Those that do depict the sinister feminine are hundreds and even thousands of years old [such as Kali], Morrigan, Cybele, Hecate. Where is there divination into the soul without any deeper thought into the symbolism being used - where is the impetus for Change, Gnosis, Empowerment that Tarot should have if they are so representative and all-encompassing? Are we really that shallow, superficial, broken down that we let forms thousands of years old lead us? How to inspire a different model for women to emulate, to reflect them, that is not either ancient, or flawed? Criticism levelled by myself and others at the traditional Sephiroth and depictions of the Tarot is that it is patriarchal, commercial and yet archaic in essence, especially when depicting women - and shallow, especially when depicting Forces underlying Forms. We give more detail here in the following essay where we compare artist Moreau and visionary Dali.

MISOGYNISTE, MOREAU, DALI AND THE ETERNAL FEMININE

[+O+ The following Exhibition of Gustave Moreau (1826 – 1898)

Exhibitions: Gustave Moreau – promised to show to us the Eternal Feminine. What is shown to us, is that Moreau typified ignorance by depicting the Eternal Feminine in two masculine veins. For Moreau, whose paintings extend from Cybele to Sappho – Woman is either powerful, independent, virginal, and faceless, or she is a sexual creature and therefore a dangerous Succubi. There is no powerful woman whose features are clear, and no sexual women who are not shown enslaving men and draining them of life.

Nowhere in this exhibition is the Eternal Feminine correctly understood and the sheltered ignorance of mans arrogance prevails. To state that this exhibition relates the “Eternal Feminine” is typical of the half-half world we live in where the male side of the coin predominates in deciding what not only the masculine is, but the feminine too. Below, the presenter describes Moreau as “radical” – and perhaps his paint strokes are in some way distinct from the hundreds of thousands of painters of his day, enough to qualify as a “Genius” or prodigy of the art world at the time – but his notions of the Eternal Feminine, of Women, are as they have always been – archaic and insulting. As if inspired directly from the antiquated chauvinism of the Bible or Koran; the artist we have termed Misogyniste rehashes the identical sickening archetypes that continue to portray Women through a mans eyes as something to blame when she is depicted sexually, or something to be ignored when she is depicted powerfully. In describing the exhibition the presenter says this: ...Powerful and beautiful women like the legendary Cleopatra and the vampiric Messalina, the deadly but fascinating Salomé and Lady Macbeth, and luscious, hapless victims of male lust such as Helen of Troy. Seems to ‘possess’ a modern sensibility? Absolutely. Understands the Eternal Feminine? Not on your life.+O+]

Gustave Moreau and the Eternal Feminine

“History has bequeathed us a great repertoire of femmes fatales who are not Scarlet Johanssen or Sharon Stone – but had Gustave Moreau been alive today he probably would have painted them too, as kin to the endless number of heroines who captivated him in the late nineteenth century. Powerful and beautiful women like the legendary Cleopatra and the vampiric Messalina, the deadly but fascinating Salomé and Lady Macbeth, and luscious, hapless victims of male lust such as Helen of Troy – beauties whose names are the stuff of legend. Moreau brings them alive for us, as well as men like Oedipus whose lives were bound by tragic destiny. Gustave Moreau is one of the radical artists of the nineteenth century whose imagination seems to anticipate the cinematic. His art is one of spectacle and alive with fabulous stories. Unique in his own time, especially for painting the great mythological and exotic stories of the ancient world, erotic and often violent, Moreau's painterly bravura is vivid, his colour dazzling and jewel-like. At times he applies paint and uses mixed media with a freedom verging on the abstract – so that he seems to possess a modern sensibility. His is an intriguing tale in itself – alternately ignored and feted in his own time he remains an enigmatic figure whose relationships with the female sex are elusive. Visitors will be seduced by this exhibition of 117 ravishing paintings drawings and watercolours, which explores the artist's obsession with the "Eternal Feminine" and provides a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to see these works in Australia, direct from the acclaimed Musée Gustave Moreau in Paris."

[+O+ In a separate exhibition by Salvador Dali – his painting, unlike anything by Moreau, does capture the sinister mystery of the eternal feminine, wherein he painted lithe bodies with bouquets of flowers in place of their heads, moving away from the two-tone characteristics of Moreau, Dali did in fact understand this complex relationship of the Eternal Feminine by recognising what kept it Eternal and by escaping the traditional etiquette. Perhaps his advantage was his enamourment with the Atomic bomb and nuclear power, wherein atomization of his subject matter may have encouraged him to abandon the superficial exegesis that prevailed of the Feminine and pushed him to search deeper for the nuclear truths. He did not abandon woman's sexuality, far from it, he pronounced and revelled in it – but he did not see woman as succubi or their sexuality as destructive and he enjoyed creating awe by expressing their innate powers and form. One could conclude that the major difference between Moreau and Dali, was that Dali, liked women, whilst Moreau and his ilk are terrified of them. Dali's approach with the atomic would become an obsession for him leading to some of the most spectacular images of the Art World. What is beautiful, unique and Genius about Dali – is that while there are presumably endless ways to depict the womanly body and the eternal feminine – he found one that wasn't masculine and wasn't traditional. His neutrality was a giant leap forward.

THE PHYSIS OF THE SINISTER [1]

Narrowing the Sinister

V.04

The aim of ‘Narrowing the Sinister’ is to narrow the origin of the Sinister. I will attempt to do this by treating the Sinister as a given but offer up alternative sources of Sinister energy that exist within the Physis of forms besides those that are usually related to the Sinister within moral terms as the practice of evil, destruction or wickedness to illustrate its extensive diversity. Following a selection of examples of sinister energies of a prolonged but subtle nature that affect humanity – and then a smaller scale catalogue of more immediate examples of sinister energy – I will then seek to isolate the Sinister’s source in abstraction not morality, and further reduce ‘concept’ itself to a mere derivation of a much more powerful process. I will focus on giving evidence for the existence of a collective storage of pain that has been accumulated and passed on through time via genetic and memetic inheritance by relating some of the sinister energies that this process has produced and the causal forms and patterns that have emerged because of it. After demonstrating the diversity of sinister energy, I will then re-unify all the examples given and explain how they all result from a process of our origin from which I believe humanity has derived its unique habit of being human. I will conclude part one with a brief analysis of the theoretical transition from our non-being to Being bestowing an experience of absolute terror and summarise how the nature of this transition into existence has characterised the behaviour of the collective human race.

Universal Psychic Trauma and the Genesis of Fear.

Within the Physis of forms, the Sinister is to be found in many places – not merely the arenas of evil, immorality, and wickedness. One of these places is in the collective human psyche and identity. During the 20th Century, many devastating events took place, and many atrocities were committed in the name of governments, countries, and causes that humanity was powerless to prevent.

Humanity prides itself on its optimism – and time and again promises itself great things. Humanity looks forward to these great things taking place and places great faith in the future. But there were events in the 20th Century that presented enormous setbacks and crippled our faith when they unfolded: time and again numbing and scarring the collective human psyche and its ability to believe in great things or itself. These events occurred despite our best efforts, despite any promises, and outside of our power to control them.

Some of these events included: the sinking of the ‘unsinkable’ Titanic, The Great Depression, the Stock Market Crash, the Spanish Flu, the Chernobyl Disaster, the Challenger Shuttle Disaster, the assassinations of JFK and Martin Luther King, Apartheid and the rise and fall of the Berlin Wall. In addition to this there were hundreds of destructive natural disasters including volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, cyclones, tsunamis, floods, landslides and fires that decimated cities and infrastructure killing hundreds of thousands of people.

The 20th Century saw marked economic divide in the contrast of wealth between developed countries and the so-called third world nations stricken with poverty, famine, disease and any number of environmental issues, political issues, religious issues with far-reaching ramifications – all of which left deep psychic scars. It also saw dozens of wars in which millions of families were torn apart with countless fathers, mothers, sons and daughters separated from their loved ones and sent to war the world over without any satisfactory explanation as to why and next to no recompense for the sacrifice they made to fight a war they barely understood. It has been estimated we lost the best half of humanity's remaining gene-pool stock in World War Two alone.

World War two in particular left a great hole in the human heart and the devastation was not confined to the soldiers or heroes and villains preserved in historical footage but decimated extensive portions of civilians too. Huge numbers of people suffering shell-shock and war-based trauma were turned over to mental asylums and forgotten – where many became subject to experimental surgical procedures such as lobotomy and electrical shock therapies. These types of experimentation were not confined to a 'war-crazed' Nazi Germany – they were (and are still) conducted in Allied countries too. The effect of war on civilians shattered hundreds of thousands of families and communities. Vietnam, greater scale exterminations in Cambodia by Pol Pot, Communist China, Tibet, Israel, Jordan, Iraq, Kosovo, Serbia, Bosnia, Darfur, Ethiopia, the Balkans, the holocaust in Germany by Nazi Occupation, in Russia by Stalin, in Italy by Mussolini, the madness of Saddam Hussein, the tyrannies of Mao Tsung, the Gulf Wars and Cold War, and thousands of other bloody conflicts, bombings and massacres each left in their wake shattered trusts and a void into which questions were flung never to be answered and those responsible for creating them never to be held accountable.

While the majority of these events were localised geographically, I believe two events of the 20th Century in particular left extremely deep and unhealed psychic wounds on humanity's collective identity. The first event being Hitler taking his own life before he could be captured and leaving the reasons and motivation for the Centuries most important war, the answers to so many people's needless suffering and anguish, forever in question – and the second event being that of America dropping Atomic Bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

There was much that happened in the last one hundred years that tore and scarred humanity's collective and individual identities as a whole and much that it has never had the chance or means to properly grieve over or come to terms with; horrors and sadness that have catapulted us into the 21st Century with a legacy of endless untold stories of pain and suffering.

Yet, the extent of these issues only forms a hundred years of accumulated collective pain; for as we transmit our century's pain onto others, we carry the pain of the centuries that came before us too. On top of all of these events, humanity's suffering is not isolated to the large scale events history has remembered, pain is an epidemic experienced by every individual on the planet at some time or another as well as by the collective. Our suffering is not only sourced in memorable or large events but also in the injustices, pain and suffering that goes unheard in all of Earth's peoples from the busiest city to the most remote tundra.

Some of our pain and suffering can be eased, absorbed or dealt with; but I believe there are events of such a shocking nature and stress to the human mind and identity where the pain does not go away but affects the psyches of millions and becomes a wordless legacy passed from generation to generation culturally and also, I believe, genetically.

There are thousands of prevailing blood feuds that exist between countries or rival factions and tribes. Many of these conflicts are decades old and have become legacies that continue long after the originally involved parties are dead. Often no-one really knows how the conflict started or remembers clearly who did what to whom. Many people are simply born into these conflicts and destined to retaliate – spending their lives trying to get vengeance for ghosts, or struggle and fight just to stay alive – killing and hurting to get even for past transgressions – serving only to perpetuate the cycle for the next generation.

Lives lived like this only amass more pain as time goes by and the effect on us of all this pain, terror, shock, grief and suffering is of a magnitude we can hardly ever hope to fathom – yet I believe we still carry it inside us as an unconscious uncomprehended confusion.

While it is difficult to say for sure, and to what extent, separate human beings share some kind of linked psychic connection – I believe there is significant evidence available that trauma becomes ingrained as a part of our memory, memory a part of our DNA, and that trauma is passed on by genetic and memetic transmission. I also believe that beyond physiological mediums such as DNA and the body, we pool our psychic refuse collectively into what Jung referred to as the collective unconsciousness – and which psychic refuse interrelates with humans without any restriction of time, seeping out of us as expressions of collective unconscious experience and memories.

These collective unconscious experiences and memories, especially great traumas, remain unconscious to us, but filter through our collective conscious experiences and memories expressing signs and patterns over long periods of time as indications of buried trauma.

How this energy is stored and transmitted is speculative at best, although there are some compelling suggestions.

There is a well-established science of muscle memory that specialises in training muscles to 'remember' how they worked by stimulating previous capacities of those muscles to make them remember how they worked, i.e. by rotating a limp arm to 'remind' the arm of its ability to fully rotate. Repetition of motion also forms the foundation of the martial arts, sports, gymnastics and other forms of physical application where muscles are trained to remember sequences of motion to the point where those motions become automatic. This same science appreciates that tissues can suffer from muscle memory trauma by storing a 'memory' of sorts of the damage and trauma to the muscle in question. In this regard, scars from such trauma are significant as touching them often provokes an uncomfortable feeling and a desire to stop touching them due to the sensitivity of muscle memory and a desire for the body to protect that area from further trauma. In some sense, scars mark parts of our body that live in fear and that we take care not to disturb too much.

Behaviourally – we have a great deal of empirical evidence that humans repeat habits with their genesis as far back as tens of thousands or even millions of years old, such as yawning or smiling, without being consciously aware of doing them or knowing where these unconscious tendencies originate.

A similar smaller-scale pattern is found in the transmission of myth or even nursery rhymes: Ring-around-rosy, a schoolyard favourite among children traces its origin back to London and the great Black Plague of the 1600's where 'a pocket full of posies' referred to a small herbal bouquet one carried that was believed to conquer the 'scent' of the killer plague. This nursery rhyme is still sung today, emerging from the mouths of children some of whom have never had physical access to it as if it were a genetic remembrance: – though the gruesome meaning is almost certainly lost to the children singing it.

Genetic and memetic inheritance is a speculative theory that allows personal and collective experience – including psychic traumas and accumulated unconscious pain within the collective psyche – to pass from one generation to the next. It is a theory that opens up the possibility traumatic issues that defined the 20th Century have become ingrained as traumas in our genetic code.

Whether humanity does in fact store collective energy, memory or anything for that matter, is again speculative, as is the means by which such a function might do it -but taking this theory in hand – I believe the side-effects certain issues have had on humanity have been reflected in the curious way we have chosen to express ourselves during this past century.

I see patterns in the way we have expressed ourselves through media for example that reveal an unconscious collective thread of pain and fear: two raw universal states of being that I believe hint at the true origin of concepts such as the Sinister.

I aim to show that these patterns have been characterised by an unconscious collective struggle to give voice to events that were too overwhelming to fully process, that numbed us with terror, and whose repression has motivated us to subconsciously find ways to convey humanity's collective silent screams from these events on behalf of the fallen and forgotten through means of inheritance of their trauma.

I will illustrate some examples of these patterns, show continuity between the examples given, relate that continuity to the Sinister and then proceed to extract what lies beneath these patterns by illustrating how I believe concepts like the Sinister are related.

Before I proceed, I should add that my evidence is Western in content and made available from developed countries that recorded their national media and thus form a natural bias as a focus of interest. Where I later talk about time period's of the 60's, through to the 80's, my summaries are characterised by European, American, Australian and New Zealand footage and records of popular culture and events of those times – whereas for many other countries these time periods were no doubt culturally markedly different. When I speak of events affecting us, I do not necessarily mean the entire human race, but the large populaces of these developed regions. There is not enough evidence available to conclude if events that traumatised us, also traumatised, or were even noticed, by countries outside of our general region and sphere of influence.

SINISTER-CYBER-PHOBIA: MAN VS. MACHINE

The first example I wish to relate as an aspect inimical to the concept of the Sinister deals with patterns of form that have emerged from humanity's response to the juggernaut of the Industrial and Technological Age.

These patterns were especially discernible in the media of science-fiction (for the futurist prophecies it contains) and expressed a complex relationship between man and machine throughout the 20th Century. I believe this nervous relationship has always existed between man and technology, was a relationship inherited from previous centuries and has now been carried through into the 21st.

In the same way that Art is said to contain developmental formulas with each style of an artist evolving a separate expansion of psychic growth, creativity and perception – it is evident to me that humanity has struggled to come to grips with technology for as long as it has devised tools, and perhaps even since the dawn of time. Sometimes drawing it close, at other times pushing it away; humanity clearly still feels that a sinister element exists in our relationship with technology. This sinister element is particularly acute in an era of machines, robots, and computers.

I believe I have identified a continuity regarding nervousness of machines that has been elicited by our consciousness in many ways within our expressive mediums, (i.e. literature, art) and I should like to draw attention to the media of movies in which this nervousness is heightened and appears to have been voiced over a long period of time in sets of sub-genres of science-fiction portraying our fear in varying nervous degrees.

The phenomenon of Science Fiction in the 20th Century composed a symphony of uncertain love-hate affairs with the idea of dominance by machines over humans. Sci-fi has followed (and in many cases influenced and predicted) the changes made externally to machines by recording the way we viewed them at various times throughout the century, as well as capturing snapshots of the various leaps and bounds of technological progress as we made them. It mapped an evolution of machines that soon became less white goods and toasters than robots and computers, as machines took on more sophisticated human characteristics and tasks. Sci-fi has often been said to be a medium of expression that can foretell the future – but I believe it also reflects the past and that the reflections it gives have undertones of a particular collective trauma.

In 1927 the silent film ‘Metropolis’ expressed something of the fear felt by the widening divide between capitalists and workers. It illustrated the acute sensitivity and fear people felt at the prospect of the monstrous appetites of the looming industrial age with an ominous portent of the M-Machine, seen by the protagonist as the demon Moloch, who would consume the world and all its people in the maw of the faceless, merciless efficiency of the machine.

Whether it meant to be or not – the notions voiced in Metropolis about a fear of capitalist industrial revolution treating humans as expendable resources and mere fuel has been prophetic – and even as automation has made some aspects of modern life easier; our fear of machines has changed little even with all the technological advancements we have made and the saturation of machines (particularly computers) we have somewhat accepted, as part of our lives.

The origin of Industrial Age fear is a complex topic – a topic I will attempt to address later on, not historically but psycho-physically, as I believe all cultural movements, by whatever name and for whatever cause, are reducible to a universal origin. Our fear of machines and our relationship with that fear is just as complex a topic however. Humans are naturally suspicious of anything new, and the evolution of ingenious devices used in torture, war and everyday life has always been slow due to such, often well-founded, suspicion.

When humanity created technology that enabled the shift from an agrarian lifestyle to one of amassing goods – some embraced the machine, and others despised it.

People like Henry Ford believed that machines could make our lives easier, (Although credited with launching the first salvo in the industrial revolution with his invention of the assembly line – Ford in fact strove to produce goods at a low cost but pay high wages to his employees. Time has since turned that arrangement on its head.) And in many ways they have.

Naturally, as creatures slow to adapt collectively to change, for decades we had to be sold on the idea of bringing washing machines, radios, toasters, kettles and microwaves respectively into our home; for there was something very suspicious about a device that could do our work for us in half the time and better than we ever could. In fact, threatening is more apt a description.

Mostly, these new white goods/appliances were aimed at appealing to women, with the expectation that they could perform their perfunctory chores more quickly and efficiently (and women did have to work extraordinarily hard prior to such conveniences by comparison to today's standards) and so have more time to devote to their husband, and, so she was led to believe, herself.

The prospect of machines that could do women's work for them threatened to make women even more expendable than they already were. Since women largely relied (and still rely) on being a good housemaker for their subsistence given the little respect society accorded them, it took a lot of convincing to reach a critical mass that would embrace machines in the home. As an aside, around the time machines created more time for women by making their chores somewhat easier – a strong push to reclaim back the freedom women had gained from them led to the institution of the beauty myth to re-imprison women once more. Not only did a woman have to do all the housework – she also had to look good doing it too.

The reluctance to accept machines into the home because they would undermine women's power (such as it was) was only one of many factors in relation to a distrust of machines. Another was the understandable threat of automation to jobs (which is still a threat) that had put many workers on the street as machines took their livelihoods from them. It also took concerted national effort to convince men to accept these 'new-fangled' inventions into their lives and homes. This effort was eventually made much easier – with the arrival of new machines to tell us about other machines – the radio, and then the hallowed television.

By the 1940's machines had become pervasive in the lives of many people, particularly for their role in the war effort. As their number increased, so did their complexity.

Japan, world leaders in technological advancement, revolutionised the assembly line with powerful automated robots that could perform manual labour in a tenth of the time it took a human and with far greater accuracy.

A greater reliance on machines world-wide including tanks, planes, ships, submarines, and satellites brought the frequency of their failure to perform correctly to the fore.

Searching for solutions to these problems would lead a global charge to develop innovative technologies so machines could even fix themselves – but more often than not it was human failure and a misunderstanding of the machine in question that led to malfunction. Thus, even as machines were designed with greater sophistication and became increasingly more complex so as to deal more efficiently with the demands of human tasks, there emerged a simultaneous push to provide simpler interfaces so that the machines could be more ‘user-friendly’.

It is interesting that humans felt a need to ‘personalise’ machines in an effort to make them more friendly by giving pet names to huge tanks, submarines, liners and even guns and missiles.

After the devastation of the Second World War had subsided a little, tensions between the USSR and USA escalated as each fought for the scraps of the Nazi War Machine and the Cold War began. A renewed emphasis on technology took hold militarily – in an effort to prevent another scenario of that type occurring ever again – to streamline battles and fight at a greater distance after the experience of horrific trench warfare was sought to be avoided – and a reduction in the huge numbers of casualties of future conflicts, imperative.

Fear and a need for self-sufficiency motivated many countries to begin looking for resources which had all but been exhausted during the war effort that could sustain them indefinitely in the event of another. But mistrust between nations became a race to develop such resources first, and hostility between the USSR and USA led to the nuclear arms race – and the dream of perpetual nuclear fission.

Oppenheimer and top world scientists who had also been working toward a nuclear weapon prior to their defeat were snapped up by both powers in a desperate attempt to develop a super-weapon first. Although the USSR, China, Korea, Iraq and other nations managed to develop nuclear capabilities, only the American’s would go down in history for the infamy of using them to stop the Japanese in their tracks after the incident of Pearl Harbour.

The atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki ended the Second World War with unanimous disbelief and shock that humans could wreak such devastation upon one another. The atomic bomb was of a scale far beyond the waves of bombs dropped on cities by both Axis and Allied forces, beyond even the enormous Paris Gun which dropped shells on Paris from thirty miles away, the mustard and nerve gases, or even the insidious VX Rockets developed by the Nazis for biological warfare.

No-one was prepared for the enormous power of destruction these weapons represented and it numbed the world to see them in action. I fully believe that this one action was of such magnitude physically and psychologically, the response given so gravely disproportionate, that it is still having an impact on the collective human race. The Atomic Bomb was a machine, dropped by another machine the Enola Gay B-52 Bomber, dropped by men. That men could do this to one another is still something humanity has yet to properly grieve over. All the nasties of World War 2 paled in comparison to the scale of devastation one atomic bomb could have and made us all back off from our enthusiastic dream of nuclear power.

But what was more chilling to us was that this act was performed by men who made a choice to accept the mission, get into the plane, fly the plane to their destination and release the greatest weapon mankind had ever seen, not on the Japanese army, but on hundreds of thousands of civilians. What chilled us was the detachment humanity showed to itself that allowed this to happen and the realisation that Soldiers and Pilots can be trained to be as obedient and unflinching in performing a task as machines. We saw on a large-scale, that we had become – like them.

For a long-time a popular concept floated about was the idea of ‘pushing a red button’ to end it all.

Rumours of special rooms in secret bases in the USSR and USA that contained a simple switch that could be flicked to launch thousands of nuclear warheads and annihilate the enemy – though having seen the destruction of the atomic bomb we knew that all political rhetoric aside, such an action actually meant the annihilation of the planet.

It was precisely this harboured fear, still highly prevalent, that allowed the Bush Administration to persuade national support with fake propaganda for the invasion of Iraq over accusations of WMD’s (Weapons of Mass Destruction); which is just one of many pieces of evidence that point to a deeply ingrained trauma still carried in the human race regarding the power of the Atomic Bomb. I will return to the evolution of the machine to elaborate further evidence that this only played on a pronounced fear we have carried with us for a long time.

After a critical mass was reached and we had allowed machines into the home, indeed prided ourselves on having as many as possible – it naturally became clearer why we had been so reluctant in the first place and should have perhaps listened to our intuition. It was one thing for us to have control over lifeless machines and refrigerate our food – but quite another when those machines were beginning to be taught how to be just like us – and another problem altogether when they were being made to be better than us.

The devastation of World War II was still fresh in our minds and the idea of smart machines was understandably disconcerting – on the other hand, we were looking to the future and ready to embrace a brave new world.

Our anxiety was not so much with the presence of machines; we embraced cars, were excited about jet planes and Boeings being able to fly us across the globe in a few hours rather than the three weeks by ship leading to increase in recreational possibilities and mailing time; enthused about movie theatres, stereos, better transport and food storage; and were thankful for machines that could do dangerous jobs, repetitive jobs, decrease military casualties (supposedly), or perform other amazing functions.

When we realised that we humans would still be needed to perform jobs because machines could only do so much, we cut machines some slack. We were definitely excited about the prospect of using them to get to the moon in 1969 (hoax or not), to other planets and in using them to explore the mysteries of outer space and our ‘final’ frontiers and our national propaganda reflected and encouraged us in this hope. Prophetic visions of the future dating from the late 19th Century and early 20th Century often show cities that resemble something from the Jetsons or Futurama – with a tide of rockets, airships, personal helicopters, hover-cars and sky-trains filling the skies or flying effortlessly to and from the moon. One of these early scenes depicts (naively we can with authority now say) an elevator to take passengers from Earth to the naturally built up metropolis on the moon itself.

Obviously those hopeful visions have not fulfilled themselves as fully as predicted – and even now that we have attained the capability to land on the moon, launch satellites, and explore outer space with the NASA program – people show little to no collective interest in an exploration which once captivated the world. The majority of the world’s funds are spent on military budgets and NASA has struggled for continued funding.

These hopeful vistas of the future sketched by optimistic dreamers were once confined to comics, writers and artists. Science fiction enjoyed a loyal following but it did not really take off until the radio brought it en masse into homes with early space-based shows like H.G. Wells ‘War of the Worlds’ stories. When Well’s radio descriptions of an alien invasion aired it was believed to be a genuine broadcast by thousands of Europeans. Many people fled their homes or sheltered in them, deathly afraid. It was a remarkable and infamous faux pas instigated by fear and ignorance, yet it would have the effect of intoxicating a decent chunk of Britain’s population with UFO and alien hysteria by introducing science-fiction to a national audience.

As science-fiction became more widespread and accepted into popular culture, a host of writers such as Asimov, Clarke, and others emerged from the New York scene to present diverse and fantastic depictions of the contents of our outer reaches causing the interest in comic and pulp-fiction books to thrive.

The national fever of the Cold War which raced the USA against the USSR to get a man on the moon also galvanised a massive interest in space which helped gather support and funding that culminated in the Moon Landing of 1969.

Television had accepted science-fiction with aplomb and the medium was further developed by television shows such as 'Buck Rogers and the 21st Century', 'Star Trek', 'Dr Who', 'Battle Star Galactica' and 'Lost in Space'.

Through these artificial vistas of the future we explored the far reaches of space encountering all manner of distant threats and wonders from this or that dimension – distant, because for us then, the possibility of robots, computers, and machines ruling the world was slowly encroaching but still far from a practicable concept.

Yet, while we joined in the imagined toying about on spaceships with unlimited jet propulsion that could be driven through space at the touch of a few buttons – for a long time in real life we had nothing even close to the complexity of machines, robots and technology long dreamed up so casually in science-fiction.

For many this discrepancy was driven home in 1986 by the tragedy of the Challenger Shuttle disaster that claimed seven lives and tore naive human hopes and dreams of outer space exploration to real pieces.

Hundreds of concepts of underground shuttles, glass tubes, underground transport hubs, super-trains, and even transportation machines filled the pages of designers eager to capture the future in the mid 20th Century. The majority of these proved impossible to implement for one reason or another and with the Challenger, just how hard it would be to get a smooth convoy of traffic to the moon even after the brightest minds had put in so much effort, sank in and the free-dream was shattered. The easy fair weather attitude of space travel could previously stand unchallenged because no-one had achieved the impossible yet or died trying. We were shell-shocked by national televising of the death of seven astronauts, heroes at the time, who were incinerated live in front of millions of viewers in a fiery explosion.

Although this disaster dampened our ambition we did not give up and continued trying to get to the moon and beyond – but the NASA space shuttle program lost a lot of its impetus and has dwindled to a fraction of its former glory in the present day 2010.

NASA still trains and uses astronauts, but mainly launches unmanned satellites. Although we dreamed large at the turn of the century, for this century, we are still not even close to having any sort of hover-car system or regular traffic to the moon and there is a general disinterest in such programs.

Even so, or perhaps because it was less taxing, we continued to devote considerable time and funding to the development of the microchip and the personal computer. In the early 20th Century, the pre-concept of Artificial Intelligence was treated as a given, as something that we could almost certainly attain with the greatest of ease in the near future.

Robots were typically depicted as being just like us; they were able to think, to perform autonomously, they possessed distinct personalities, they could make choices, often had a moral code, and re-programming them appeared to be as simple as spending a few minutes or seconds tinkering with undefined or obscure panels, switches or wires.

In later TV shows and movies, robots fluctuated back and forth in complexity, reflecting the considerable challenges and problems real life programmers and designers were experiencing in making these visions happen, whilst showcasing the latest advances in robotics as they came about and it is my personal nostalgic interest in observing the technology used in movies from different time periods just to remind myself how far we have come in such a short amount of time with computers, robotics and machinery that has helped me discern the fear we have shown of technology.

It is interesting to see how one particular grail of computer and robotics programmers called Artificial Intelligence (AI) has developed and was viewed over the course of the later few decades of the 20th century, but especially in movies.

At the turn of the Century, and as machines were only just coming into the foreground, all manner of fantastic predictions were being made about where the new technologies being developed would lead. No one realised just how long it would take to get even a rudimentary level of computer up and running that didn't fill several warehouses and require changing thousands of clunky valves that burned out periodically.

Meanwhile many ideas were simply not possible until very late in the century and only then after considerable expense, experiment and exploration; but some ideas had to be abandoned altogether.

A great many vistas of the future from the past contain efficient hover-cars – one for everyone it seems – but such visions have turned out to be optimistic guesses that were unable to foresee concrete considerations of the late 20th Century that make hover-cars in any form, difficult if not impossible to practically implement

1. Although dozens of vehicles have been built to hover-car specification as future vehicles, the cost of each is too prohibitive to be adopted in any wide-spread utopia. Fringe technology is usually funded by military research and is only released much later to filter down into general civilian use – a prime example being the development of the Intranet by DARPA, a self-contained communications system that later became the world-wide Internet. Consider also that Sony's 'PlayStation 1' which today sells for a paltry $10 with games and a controller was once $1400 brand new upon its release – a system that would go on to revolutionise the entertainment industry. The cost of fringe technologies is prohibitively expensive and requires special funding; but to implement such expensive technology on any large scale proves very difficult. Only decades after the microchip had been at the centre of military programs was it released into the public arena where eventually it became so common that it became cheap – allowing them to be installed world-wide in personal computers and other portable technologies such as the mobile phone. Prior to this stage, men killed each other to obtain one.

2. Petro-chemical companies that control the supply and demand of oil stand to lose their fortunes if a free-energy type car is developed and have stood, and still stand, in the way of such research for decades, going as far as to destroy inventions, discredit inventors, or use hired muscle to intimidate prospective threats to their monopoly. Although there have been a myriad of alternative fuels and batteries invented and suggested – those who stand to lose from the development of such things have traditionally inhibited their growth.

3. The population of Earth is now much higher than it used to be, it was somewhere around the million mark in 1900, and is now somewhere around 6.6 billion – and to equip each person with such a vehicle to suit early utopian vistas of the future would prove even more prohibitive than at the turn of the century when the population was excessively low by today's comparison.

4. World Resources are now much more heavily strained since the turn of the Century when these ideas were being explored and to equip everyone with anything is no longer possible for such expensive technologies.

5. The Technology required to achieve more than a semblance of many of the concepts in such vistas has not been developed or has proved impossible to develop or harness – such as perpetual motion or free-energy.

6. Restrictions on airspace and intensified security considerations complicate 'free' travel.

Thus, instead of our collective spirit being concentrated on personal rocket-ships to take us to other planets (which we now realise much to our annoyance aren't inhabitable) we transport ourselves in large groups with clunky planes that often drop out of the sky. It's a poor consolation prize, but just one of many disappointments to our human spirit and identity.

Though there remain cashed up billionaires and humanitarians ready to fund fringe projects and technologies – as well as black funds, arms dealers, and militaries – collectively, we have largely given up on such ambitious projects and are now focused on extending our much more manageable ego with superficial attachments by using portable or body-worn technologies – hence this generation is often called generation 'me'. In dreaming so vividly we have been sorely disillusioned time and time again by the harsh demands of reality and are repeatedly demoralised by the time it takes to get even close to our fantasies. Often, we have to change them completely as was the case with our fabled Space Station that boasted it would support thousands of people who would live on the station for months at a time in a galactic paradise until they were exchanged for new thousands by regular shuttle shifts.

The idea of Space Stations has been fraught with difficulties and those that do exist are maintained by a dedicated team of about thirty people who spend months at a time fixing and regulating the thousands of problems that they incur.

Our reach has fallen short many crucial times as a human race and suffered great traumas to our collective identity (especially as regards detonation of the Atomic Bomb) and now it seems we seek to heal ourselves by making ourselves feel better by reaching for individual pursuits much closer to home, and nothing as a collective. So, while we have lost most of the conscious connections to these traumas as time has gone by, we still hurt from the unconscious pain without knowing why. Perhaps this is why a strong and destructive nihilistic streak has been carried forward into the 21st Century.

Our ambition, and the subsequent crushing of it, has been a key element in a great many movies that contain unconscious symbolism of great traumas.

In the 1980's during the height of the Cold War, I watched movies such as 'War Games', 'Tron' and 'Robocop'. In 'War games', a young 'whiz-kid' hacker (Matthew Broderick) accidentally finds his way into the Pentagon's military database and makes contact with an 'advanced' military computer that he befriends. He plays several games against it marvelling at its skill, until it suddenly challenges him to a game of war.

Believing the game to be nothing more than a simulator, he accepts, only to find out later that the game is being treated as real by the computer and his strategic maneuvers have set the United States on Defcon 1 under the threat of nuclear war. Eventually the Pentagon tracks him down and gets him to persuade the computer not to start WWII.

The movie raised the problem of teaching the subtlety of concepts to computers. Fear that a supercomputer put in charge of military strategy and operations could potentially fail to discern reality from fantasy or blindly follow its programmed protocols without taking moment by moment changes into consideration and end up launching nuclear missiles and ICBM's at America's enemies, (or America) thus starting another world war by accident, is a theme that has surfaced in many technology-based movies.

A similar struggle and fear of man vs. machine was illustrated beautifully in Stanley Kubrick's 'A Space Odyssey 2001' when Hal, the onboard computer follows its programmed protocol to the letter despite the human occupants being able to see an unorthodox but probable solution to a problem and condemns the human passengers to death.

A less extreme replication of this battle was recently given in Pixar's 'Wall-E' but even here the love/hate relationship with robots and crazed computers filters through with healthy doses of mistrust. Even Buzz Light-year, a semi-robotic character is portrayed as prone to going mad in Toy Story 3 – which at the time of writing is an unreleased movie.

However, the role of man vs. machine was sometimes reversed too, with men acting like machines and/or using machines to cause great devastation. In the 'Hunt for Red October' a stalwart Russian admiral drives fear into America when his attempt to defect with a nuclear submarine is taken as the intention to launch ICBM's at the USA.

In 'Flight of the Black Angel' a vengeful but exemplary pilot steals a state-of-the-art military jet armed with a nuclear warhead and threatens to detonate it in his hometown.

James Bond and a plethora of Superheroes dealt with madman after madman that had stolen or developed some technology or another to take over or destroy the world. The threat of nuclear war was a prevalent threat from the 50's through to the 80's. The Russians, Koreans, Americans, Israelis, Iraqis, Cubans, Libyans, to name just a few had (and still have) stockpiles of thousands of devastating nuclear warheads, Inter-Continental Ballistic Missiles, Rockets filled with VX gas, biological toxins and other nasties. A major part of the last half of the 20th Century involved a parlay between countries to stop adding to these stockpiles and dismantle existing weapons.

During the first gulf war I recall seeing a televised countdown where a zero hour was given for Saddam Hussein's demands to be met by the Allies or he would launch a nuclear warhead. Perhaps this was allied propaganda but I remember the fatalistic effect it had on me in believing that the world could end in a matter of hours – it was a feeling of terror. And I acted accordingly, and fatalistically, getting into a huge fight with my family and refusing to apologise claiming that we'd all be dead in a few hours so 'who fucking cares anyway!'

This same numbing terror was felt by millions of people in the aftermath of the Atomic Bomb – where there is evidence for this in a great many movies that appeared during the following decades that were clearly influenced by the pervasive threat of the Cold War the Atomic Bomb had set in motion.

It is perhaps worth noting that one of the most iconic images of the 20th Century was a lone man standing in front of a tank with his shopping under one arm holding his hand up to stop it in Tienanmen Square, China. It was an act that expressed something profound about our ethos.

'War Games' was made in an era where home computers (PC's) were near to being realised but were still large blocky cumbersome units with black screens, 64 or 128kb of RAM, used ASCII coding and had just one font of neon green text. It had taken decades longer than anyone expected to get even this far and since the journey there had been far different and more difficult than previously envisioned – no-one really knew what the next step would bring. A lot of speculative movies began to surface that mapped or hypothesised about the capabilities of future computing.

In Disney's 1982 'Tron' we were taken into the computer itself to explore a world of microchips and electronic databases where losing at a game meant causal death. Though still very basic, Tron depicted the concept of Cartesian grids built of electronic signals (though not the first to do this) and vast areas that stretched to infinity inside the small monitor. In effect – it presented a hypothetical construct of pre-cyberspace.

In the futuristic 1982 'Blade-Runner', humanoid-robots (then oft referred to as cyborgs) have reached such a high level of sophistication that they are called 'replicants'. 'Replicants' possess superior strength and mental ability and a few of them use their advantage for illegal activities. After several significant problems caused by rebel replicants, they are outlawed on earth and subsequently tracked down by special agents who attempt to identify them from humans using psychological questionnaires designed to test emotional response which the Replicants have not fully developed knowledge of the subtleties of.

Various human characteristics began to surface in our presentation of robots that dealt comprehensively with various problems we encountered, moral, social, military, and technical – but one of the grails of science and technology was to make machines that were just like us. This was further classified as meaning able to ‘think’ and ‘learn’ like us. Our personalization’s of computers and technology has led to some strange neologisms. For quite some time, the term ‘mainframe’ became common-place and synonymous with the ‘heart’ of a computer that had gone ‘berserk’ and needed to be shut down.

The development of the microchip processor enabled technology to leap forward at an unprecedented rate ushering man and machines into the Information Age together with computers beginning to rival man by speaking their own language. However, while computers have their own language, or ‘code’ – they still require manual human maintenance and interaction to build them, fix them, and teach them. The development of two-way conversation will prove crucial to perfect if computers are to ever be self-sufficient and recent development of quantum computers that can learn, or human identical robots programmed to learn is as frightening as it is fascinating.

Chess computers were available from the 1970’s onwards for public purchase but despite their sophistication they ran on a rudimentary program that could only output what was input even if input consisted of hundreds of thousands of possible moves. One of the harder aspects of AI is giving computers a code of ethics. We have tried for a long time to do this, probably because robots were large, cold and frightening and bore no resemblance to us, and we feared them. To accept them, we would need them to look less threatening, and more human. We would also need them to act more like us.

Although we are blessed with arguably the most powerful inbuilt computer on Earth, the Brain, the replication of this enigmatic engine has proved extremely difficult and progress in this area is very slow. AI was and still proves to be the toughest nut to crack.

Isaac Asimov was among the first to suggest a code of robot morality, whereupon he devised three laws that went on to strongly influence robotics. These three laws are:

1. A robot may not injure a human being or, through inaction, allow a human being to come to harm.
2. A robot must obey any orders given to it by human beings, except where such orders would conflict with the First Law.
3. A robot must protect its own existence as long as such protection does not conflict with the First or Second Law.

The fear that without these ethics, robots would not be able to discern an enemy from a friend or tell right from wrong and their confusion would lead them to spiral out of control with dangerous results remains a keynote in many media dealing with robotics.

It is likely that the phenomenal success and saturation of Star Wars and its treatment of the human-like 3CPO and the notably robotic-looking R2D2, where androids played diverse but integral human-like roles in a futuristic society, marked a stage of brief trust where collective humanity seemed to finally accept that robots could be possible companions for the future.

In 'Robocop', the concept of cybernetics and cyborgs was explored with the idea that robots could be our friends and even our protectors if AI could be sufficiently developed to instil an airtight moral code.

After suffering an accident at the hands of a corrupt cop who also murders his family, Officer Alex Murphy is subjected to a life-saving but highly experimental procedure that turns him into a cyborg and the first 'Robo-cop'. He is programmed with a simplified version of these three laws and after several successful demonstrations of his abilities is hailed as the prototype for future law enforcement in Detroit where crime is out of control.

The struggle for Robocop to perform his civil duties and code becomes difficult however when his computer programming is corrupted by memory flashes of his former life and the murder of his loved ones. Murphy 'learns' that a highly honoured cop who is also one of his programmers is behind his family's murder. He is subsequently torn between following his directive that tells him he must not kill another human being, and his human emotions of anger, grief, and vengeance. His struggle is compounded and contrasted by an evil counterpart that 'Robo-cops' are supposed to replace; the ED209, an 'older' biped model of robot that takes laws and protocol all too seriously and follows a simpler program to such a degree that it gattle-guns a man to death during a demonstration requiring 'compliance' – even after the man complies.

Robocop was a huge success at the movies and was joined by more playful optimistic movies such as 'Short-Circuit' where A.I. is given to 'No.5' after a lightning strike hits one of a series of five experimental lethal cybernetic weapons.

'No.5' becomes sentient and makes his way through the world learning about it. He befriends Stephanie, a civilian that tutors him on various concepts with increasing subtlety. When 'No.5' tries to imitate the jumping of a cricket and accidentally squashes it, he implores Stephanie to re-assemble the cricket, only to learn that the cricket is 'dead' and cannot be re-assembled. When 'No.5' determines his own state to be 'alive' he goes to great lengths to avoid being recaptured by the military and 'dis-assembled' which he associates with 'death'. 'No.5' from 'Short-Circuit' was almost certainly behind the inspiration for 'Wall-E', a more recent robotic character who possesses the same playful innocence and the same tank-like tracks and head goggles.

The theme that life occurs or A.I. can occur with a freak lightning strike is not new. Man spent the last half of the 19th century sending shocks through human cadavers to bring them back to life and Mary Shelley's Frankenstein was given life in exactly the same way.

We find that even today explanations for how robots 'life' is brought into being is still a matter of creative invention not scientific knowledge – and even today after decades of trying, people are still trying to ignite this mysterious spark of life using electricity and computers.

However the truce with robots never lasts. And despite our optimism our cynicism returned.

Compare this optimism a few years later with the 1991 'Terminator' movie which included significant breakthroughs in computer generated effects. In Terminator I an advanced robot (with metal exo-skeleton) from the future is sent to kill John Connor, future leader of the human resistance and our one true hope of escaping an eventual global takeover by a supercomputer called Cyberdyne that is destined to declare war on the human race.

In the Terminator, a soldier from the future is sent back to protect John from a hostile machine. The machine is relentless but eventually destroyed by human wile. In Terminator II, the original terminator is sent back to protect John – while an even more hostile liquid metal 'mimetic poly-alloy' T1000 model Terminator is sent by Cyberdyne to finish what the original Terminator failed to do. The T1000 proves extremely tenacious but again, eventually succumbs to human wile and is destroyed by being melted in a forge.

In the third instalment however, John Connors's role changes from forestalling the detonation of a nuclear holocaust by shutting down or preventing Cyberdyne from going postal, to accepting that he cannot change the nuclear holocaust and must ready himself to lead a resistance of friendly humans and re-programmed (read 'neutral') robots in an all out war against hostile robots.

It would appear that we finally succumbed to the fact that machines were not going away anytime soon, or for that matter, at all – and that we had to learn to adapt and live with them as best we could.

This did nothing to allay our fears of machines however – in Gattaca (1997), an Orwellian-style movie; the world is run using machines and computers of terrifying efficiency. The protagonist is cursed with imperfect DNA, a crime in a world where everything is perfect. He manages to deceive the machines that require his DNA to be tested regularly, that he too is perfect using the DNA of a perfect individual who is not known to the system. This works fine until there is the disruption of a murder; an event that is thought to have been eradicated. DNA recovered from the scene turns out to be imperfect, leaving him in a quandary whether to confess the murder at the risk of exposing himself, whilst the machines set about conducting an extensive analysis of everyone's DNA to determine the killer. His only crime is being born with 'imperfect' DNA.

Throughout sci-fi the concept of 'networking' emerged in many variations, and could be seen in such creatures as Star Trek's Borg – a colony-type species of cyborg that were interconnected as one unified mass run by the equivalent of a supercomputer or paranoia-type movies where surveillance by machines had escalated out of control under the watchful eye of a malevolent 'Big Brother' i.e. 1984, Minority Report, A Scanner Darkly, Demolition Man, Cube, Total Recall, The Matrix.

The precision of robots being unable to make room for the variables that characterise human judgements occurs in 'Minority Report', 'I, Robot', and dozens of other sci-fi movies. In all of these movies – there existed a moral element, a question mark over total reliance on robots to do the right thing, and a pervading sense of malevolence, distrust, and the sinister if they did not. We also parodied and explored the result of acting like machines ourselves. It seems that for a long time yet, our uneasy relationship with creating our potential replacements will bring unease and a sense of the Sinister to all humanity.

But perhaps because this unconscious fear has been so deeply ingrained this archetypal battle underlay's more than just movies about robots. And here again surfaces the theme of the Atomic Bomb. I believe that we have twisted robots and machines into other shapes, including semblances of ourselves (mindless implacable flesh-eating zombies that are relentless for example) that represent the same psychic cry for help – much the same way that dreams change their symbolism until a core message is finally understood.

TV Series such as 'V', 'Mission Impossible', and 'the X-Files' were part of a continuous thread that highlighted and replicated our innate fear of creating something that could destroy us. Aliens, Robots, Zombies, UFO's, and Government Conspiracies have many things in common, but I believe they all share another common resonance: Voiceless awe of the power of the Atomic Bomb. I shall explain.

The Atomic Bomb stunned the world in 1945 – and numbed us; and although the world has become decidedly cynical, I have no doubt whatsoever that the detonation of another would stun it again.

The insane power of the Atomic Bomb was ill-treated by the Americans at the time of its hey-day – in fact their attitude was positively cavalier. They stood their soldiers only hundreds of feet away from test detonations wearing sunglasses and assured them there was no danger of radiation. The terrific shock-wave and devastation that could level cities flat and the permanent damage to the environment and lasting effects from fallout were downplayed and dismissed in America's eagerness to use one. To garner support from their populace a deliberate deception about nuclear safety was promulgated in the infamously stupid 'duck and cover' precaution programs that instilled people to practice foolhardy precautions such as getting under a table, covering their head, or building a 'bomb' shelter.

Without anyone the wiser, the dangerous powers of nuclear weapons and their effect on their targets were downplayed and propagandised.

When Japan joined the Second World War and bombed Pearl Harbour, America's armed forces were too strained to spread them further into the Orient. America proclaimed an attack on Japan the only course of action left and the decision was made to drop Atomic Bombs from the B-52 Enola Gay onto the cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The unparalleled devastation it created: the radiation and fires, the black ash that rained from the sky, the yellow uranium puddles that caused horrific burns and melted flesh, the shock wave that smashed through concrete buildings like it was paper, the radiation blisters and sickness, the very burning of people's shadows into the ground, and the ongoing genetic defects from contaminated soil, water and air that continue to this day were unique atrocities in humanities known history. The explosion was of such magnitude it was heard hundreds of miles away and the mushroom cloud column could be seen from a hundred miles away spiralling into the atmosphere. Here I believe the realisation that humans could commit this kind of absolute devastation on each other tore the collective psyche and left us numbed – unable to accept or deal with what had just happened.

The willingness to resort to such unrivalled destruction is unique to the United States (which is partly why I have no qualms believing 911 was a US led conspiracy) and was to elevate them to the status of a superpower on the back of a wave of incommunicable disbelief and fear.

What is interesting is that historically, a great emphasis is placed on Hitler, his crimes and the holocaust.

This issue, driven by Allied media, has always superseded any American atonement for the dropping of the most devastating weapon then devised. In fact, dropping the atomic bomb even seems to have been attributed as being necessary because of Hitler. Or perhaps this hatred of Hitler is driven by the projected guilt and shock of America at its own committing of unthinkable crimes.

Although there was an even larger explosion at the turn of the century in Tunguska – by albeit mysterious means – it did not affect us as much as Hiroshima because Tunguska's explosion was in a remote area, but more importantly was not tied up with our collective identity.

The Atomic Bomb was a spearhead driven by human ingenuity, it was embedded in the consciousness, and the world was deeply invested in the events and outcome of the world war, excited about the dawn of the atomic age and nuclear power. The A-bomb signalled a new age of atomic power and change, and we were excited about this potential right up until we saw what atomic power could do.

The Chernobyl Reactor Meltdown in 1986 only heightened already existing fears of nuclear power and, like exploration of space, pushed nuclear reactors into the background to hum quietly and unobtrusively in remote locations – hardly the vision of nuclear excellence we anticipated.

The movies are filled with allegories of super beings coming to earth to use super-weapons advanced well beyond our means against us.

What was Godzilla, an unstoppable alien lizard-like force that levelled everything in its wake – if not an expression of this deep nuclear psychic scar? Or 'Independence Day'? 2012?

A raft of UFO themes where deadly machines are used by deadly beings showed up for decades on television, and still they show up – with aliens fluctuating between being more like us, with emotions, behaviour and ethics that rival and sometimes supersede our own or as grotesquely twisted and savage extra-terrestrials.

What typically triumphs in the end over these forces is always our collective humanity – (and thanks to propaganda often that troubled soul who has to make hard world-changing decisions for all of us – the American President) – and our morality, or at least the myth of it. Yet, in thousands of our movies, it is as though we are continually attempting to recreate a certain archetypal scene.

In the horror movie the 'Blob' (1958), a gelatinous mass takes over a town, rolling down streets and oozing onto people to dissolve them whole. For quite a while a pervasive theme in cinema existed where something would be adversely affected by lightning, a toxic or nuclear incident, or even a meteor crashing to earth causing some species or another to go crazy or evil and take over some town.

From Spiders, Ants, Giant Rabbits, Bats, Birds, Bees, Worms, Sharks, and Piranhas, to a 50-Foot Woman, Cars and Killer Tomatoes – we toyed with the fantasy of being over-whelmed and explored our tentative relationship with nature and the animals. A mass of normally sedate creatures was given supernatural or heightened aggression and organised into impossible numbers in a bid to wipe us out.

I believe, in a sense, that we enjoyed the idea of being stripped of control, of being powerless and consumed by our own arrogance – perhaps a symptom of our guilt complex expressing itself at the horrors of Hiroshima/Nagasaki, Vietnam, and World War II – and that we created artificial coping mechanisms, a replication of the process of controlled vulnerability to other more dominant forces around us.

This process enabled us to re-enact something of the powerlessness we felt at overwhelming world events. But because our reasons for creating them remained unconscious – the core that bound all these movies and expressions together remained and remains subliminal. We never reached a clear concise conscious understanding of the grief and horror we felt from the atomic bomb; the event was simply too damaging to be dealt with openly. Instead, it has filtered out in a variety of connected themes in all kinds of symbolism than hinted at the heart of our pain but never revealed it.

Such re-enactments allowed us to re-live the event but with control and explore a fantasy where we could evoke power over events where previously we had none. The power of the trauma of the event is correspondingly mirrored in the power it has had over humanity. The possibility that our collective expressions over the course of the last hundred years contain secret screams of massive trauma has an undeniably sinister undertone; and it is our very denial that makes it so.

I do not define the ‘Sinister’ as an evil energy – though it can be expressed through such energies on some level – there is more to this energy than an oversimplification that constrains it in moral terms.

Moral terms are unfortunately the status quo of reference for humanity – the legacy of the ancient dragon of religion and all too often they act as a thick paste slapped onto the surface of abstractions to make even the most delicate tangents of energy that contain esoteric hints into our deeper human processes at work, into a fat block of mediocrity that is easier to grasp and pretend to understand.

To treat the ‘Sinister’, or even the concepts of ‘Good’, ‘Purity’ or ‘Evil’ as they were designed to be treated, as words for objective things in themselves is natural – but because we treat them this way – accepting them as the base from which we proceed – any independent heuristic phenomenological study of these things seldom goes any further than the jurisdiction of morality, and because of our conditioned laziness, we lose a great deal of the information they contain.

Morality is a combination of convenience and ignorance whose function is to deliberately obscure a finesse of extreme subtlety. Through the invention and installation of morality the tension of opposites and the power between them, the real power of magic, sorcery, life, has become an artificial scale of opposing values, morally and then linguistically simplified and solidified into Good and Evil. This chunky filter is liberally applied to interpret all energies, overt or extremely subtle – thus muddying the sublime with a profane lens that seeks the least exertion of energy. The ego will hate to hear this; it detests being told off, but more than that it detests exerting more energy than the minimum and too, anyone that requires it to change its perspective and prevent it from using its all-time favourite filter.

But the ‘Sinister’ is not just an energy of evil or destruction and to view it as such is to bury its incredible subtlety, which although difficult to extract, is worth the painstaking excavation.

To bind it in moral terms causes this energy be stripped of much of its inherent information –forcing it to behave as an inert abstraction in the service of an artificial egocentric yolk. Treated differently, it reveals a much more intricate web of complexity at work.

Firstly, in terms of energy, the Sinister is beyond morality – it is not evil, though it can by all means be interpreted as evil; but it is far more complex an emanation and symptom than the Christian’s wet-dream.

It is a creeping ‘other-than’ – because if it were in any way a moral absolute, then we would simply use the word evil – but it is suggestive of something in potential. It can be felt in many places, over our lifetime or in an instant, defying the strictures of opposites. However, ‘Sinister’ energy is an abstraction itself – a means by which we can wrap our head around the maddening dynamic of the esoteric workings of the mind by having something ‘concrete’ to work with; a supposition that gives rise to others that exerts abstract tension.

Energy is also an abstraction – yet another one we tend not to look at too closely but instead quickly layer with attachments, associations, and forms; this is the secret of will. But if we do try to look at it with any determined scrutiny we quickly encounter frustrating problems.

I.e. Picture clearly what this energy is. Now strip it of its name, remove the word energy, remove the word Sinister – remove morality – and all the other abstractions we layer onto this invisible ball we believe we perceive – and what is left?

Can you still hold it without naming it, without describing it? Can you pass it to someone without telling them what it is, without using the convenient strictures of morality that makes people nod their head and show a clumsy recognition for the hand-holds by which these energies are most usually known and handled? ‘Oh, yes, I’ve heard of the Sinister Path, I’m a Right-Hand Pather myself... I don’t dabble in black magic.’ Can you pass the Sinister to someone without telling them what it is? Try.

To constrain energy, we have to call it energy, since for us to use it, make it serviceable, it has to be called something. Otherwise, we cannot work with it, shift it, add to it, explain it, compare it, validate it or otherwise use it, because without words to carry them and morality to simplify and translate the subtle into the simple – the abstractions we use have no weight. Their solidity completely relies on being morally validated. *(See Appendix.)

Morality is a very poor filter for phenomenology though – and to Know thyself, to know what the Sinister denotes, hints at, and to get to where these and all our other abstracts originate from, before they Become and before we lose ourselves in their Becoming; morality has to be abandoned and treated as a coarse tension unsuitable for refined heuristics

Here now, is a second example of a non-moral sinister current – an ‘other-than’ prevalent in the uncontrolled acceleration of artificial time.

CHRONOCENTRIC ACCELERATION

The events of the 20th Century re-shaped many things: they re-shaped the way wars were fought: the way economies, technology, science, and power developed regionally around the world: re-shaped the limits of mankind and the follies of mankind...

But I believe they also contained a point where humanity began to accelerate through changes faster than we could keep up with them. One could argue that much has been lost and trampled in the stampede of ‘progress’. Time, once held sacred as the journey of the sun across the sky, has been eroded by the dominance of economics and the tyranny of the machines.

The day used to be sacredly observed in blocks that meant something; 5 o’clock used to mean a definite end to the working day, now it is a mere blip in the mundane day that might or might not live up to its promise of home time pending the needs of the machine. Overtime has all but disintegrated the sun's jurisdiction to meet economic demands. The day no longer ends when we come home – it drags out indefinitely to please the machines on the phone, computer, or laptop.

Though I do not appreciate the Christian celebration of December 25th or the horrible commerciality that coca-cola set in motion when it bought Santa Claus and made him a red and white materialist; I did appreciate the sacred observance of holidays and traditions having a causal start and causal end – a defined time required to tolerate them.

Over the years however, Christmas has been broken free of its restraints by corporate provocateurs and now gets going four even five months before December and ends sometime in March – kept alive either side of the year by pre-Christmas and after Christmas sales.

Christmas has long been a corporate institution – and long been stripped of its sacred elements; but does it mean anything to anyone when it is prostituted for nine months? Easter, used to be celebrated on a couple of days in April, and admittedly Easter eggs would be in the shops a month or two before this to capitalise on the rush. But this year, Easter eggs and buns were in the shops by Boxing Day, just two days after Xmas. Sacred observance of even the most basic traditions, such as Time, has been eroded, corporately lengthened, for the worship of money.

Time is measured by change – change by the revolution of evolution. 'Progress' has become our new clock – and new technology the hands that turn it. As a result, Time – has sped up drastically.

Technology is moving at such a rapid rate that new models become obsolete in years, months or even weeks – yet machines are still speeding up and because of that, so must we. But we are still, as we have always been, in many ways inferior to machines and the economy. We can never match their speed or efficiency, even as we are being forced to try – more often than not we simply match their cold inability to empathise. This acceleration has continued exponentially throughout the decades of the 20th century, but it has had unforeseen effects and the people of 2010+ are all but spiralling out of control.

We have collectively, not just individually, begun to emulate machines, becoming cold and unfeeling, acting rapidly and pragmatically like them, and losing a sacred connection of collective human empathy along the way. We try to assume the good points of machines, of our masters, for ourselves – efficiency, rapidity, reliability – but somehow mangle the translation.

We try to copy computers by processing huge amounts of information in seconds. We surf the net and read exhaustive tracts of texts but can only pick out the most glaring points – we can scan dozens of pages of text but only retain about 1%. Unlike machines, we have to trim information, simplify it into its most basic blocks and understand only the bare minimum of the available media whilst the machines retain it all – miss nothing – and malevolently highlight the fact that we can never compete. In the name of survival – which we have entrusted to machines – we wake up to a machine, make our food in a machine, shave our face with a machine, light our cigarette with a machine, pack our pockets with machines, clog the roads in machines, take our driving cues from machines, carefully watching the time on a machine, to get to work on time before a machine docks us, to work with machines or make machines and ultimately to work for the Machine. We also tend more often to become enraged if any of these processes get interrupted. How did this happen?

In the 1950's we tried to convince ourselves that we could attain Eden. We pretended we knew exactly how everything should proceed in neat instructions that left no room for error. We strove for perfection and to attain the nuclear family. Movies created around this time were possessed of great romanticism and there was little room for horror in the sense of any unsettling intrigue– everyone was proper and looking to the future.

There was however a sense in the air that this rigid state of Victorianism was being undermined by those who would become the children of the 60's, just as there has been an unsettling sense that comes with all ages and generations of the unstoppable force of entropy and change and the sense that sinister elements would undermine the plans of the present day.

Sex, Drugs, Vietnam, Freedom, Peace, and a Re-discovery of the Body: all of these issues would rear their head in a generation that began asking questions, flouting laws and social mores, inventing their own vernacular and their own counter-culture. Flower Power had arrived and with it came rebellion against the Establishment. The 60's made its mark and then the 70's rolled around and everything changed again. The madness of the 70's died down and the 80's came about. Drugs were restricted, Sex was made into a commodity to be bought and sold, a re-focus on science and technology re-emerged, interest in space craft and computers was reinstated and a sense prevailed that those of the 80's were more grown-up, knew better and were more worldly, reigned.

In all of these transitions – none of them clearly marked in duration despite the ten year blocks that try to limit and constrain them – the world changed rapidly, embracing or rejecting various themes and social issues as time and culture fluctuated.

With each wave came an excitement that we were moving forward, throwing down old ways and getting to know who we were as individuals and Music, Fashion, Technology, Literature, organisations, Issues all changed rapidly from one year to the next.

But all these changes wrought terrific strain as we moved through them – hardly having time to get to grips with one thing before the next thing happened along... much was lost, and many things, previously held in vogue for a century or more were eroded: values, respect, authority, all suffered until there was a slowly dawning appreciation that life, was suddenly moving uncomfortably fast and things were being said and done that would forever make it impossible to go back.

In all of this we felt fear and trepidation as monumental things unfolded, both good and bad – that gave us much unease – voiced a collective cry to slow down. But things slowed in the 80's only for a moment before the rise of the Internet enabled society to rocket out of control.

Collectively swept along in these decades we were forced to change our cultural understanding and iconography again and again to fit each fad and trend – these rapid changes have left little time for any significant collective grieving of events. The Vietnam War was brought to a standstill by a united populace and a collective outrage expressed in the streets, in protests, sit-in's and demonstrations of the people. This intensity of collective community spirit once shown by people has long been silenced by a shattered collective identity – unions have been disbanded, protests outlawed, any sort of violence is met with extreme force or imprisonment by enforcers of the law even if the government are in the wrong.

Our collective hope for the future has since been splintered. Where things had previously been kept sacred with careful rites of passage observed to mark important stages of life as it unfolded in age – information dealt out as each afforded it – this maturity has been eroded. We gave over this office to external authorities and departments, who gave it to machines.

We have since arrived at a state of cynical anarchic rebellion against all values; a culture of psychopathic alpha-cynics that corporate negligence has encouraged to spawn.

We lost our collective hope and developed a jaded acceptance that some things will never change – and with that acceptance we lost control of our society to the point that it began to control us.

We were right to fear the irresponsibility of machines should they fail to grasp human ethics; because we had to know a future with machines would lead us to do what we naturally do and become what we hate.

In some unconscious warning spark, even at the turn of the century, we knew humanity has always foreseen itself in and been jealous of the things it hated. The speed and unpredictability of change tragically reminds us that it is beyond our control – that like Oppenheimer and his Atomic Bomb, we cannot predict how our inventions will be used or how they will alter the world. Ultimately we have no choice but to embrace each wave and remain forcibly optimistic that it will all work out for the best or convince ourselves that if we can just hold on things will get better. A sense of self-deception is necessary to console us that there is order to be found even in the greatest chaos. And as a defence we throw ourselves into the self-importance of our lives and its tasks. Yet, in those rare times when we are alone with our thoughts we sometimes sense our careful lie, catch the edge of it in our throat as we live out our lives – and it disturbs us. There is a sense of the Sinister in these losses and of the inevitable effects of an acceleration of time where there is increasingly less to anchor people to the past: perhaps to the point where someone takes it into their head to detonate another Atomic Bomb. For he who forgets the past is destined to repeat it.

THE MULTIFACETS OF MORBIDITY

Whilst a sense of the Sinister is often recognised by its presence in scenes of gore, murder, or extreme sadness or tragedy – it is also found in the suspense leading up to and/or away from such events – also in conspiracy, intrigue, deception, betrayal, irony or the macabre. But it is even more Omni-present than that.

It is inimical to subtle tangents of ‘other-than’ – unpredictable and unique cracks that surface in form beyond typical moral simplifications. The following represents a diverse range of energies subtle and overt that equate to the Sinister and loosen the energy it seeks to explain from its moral strictures. The reader may even feel it edge in where I do not, for the Sinister is subjective.

In London, 1888, Jack the Ripper’s crimes were horrific and branded monstrous, inhuman even – but what made them Sinister and set them apart from other crimes of this nature was the mystery regarding his motive and identity. More than a hundred years on, a fabled mythos built around Jack still lends a sinister ethos to the events of one of the most infamous killers of all time.

Yet there is still a nagging sense when facts about the killings are presented to us that Jack’s identity was known at the time but kept secret by a clandestine conspiracy – and that the surfacing of then readily apparent indicators, if handled more carefully, could have prevented chilling consequences.

But we are in the position to know that key clues and evidence were ignored; a chalk message of the Ripper ‘The Juwes are not the ones who will be blamed’ was scrubbed clean by the chief of police before the hand-writing could be analysed; blood was cleaned away or bodies were moved so as to contaminate the facts of the crime scene. It is not merely the brutality of the Ripper that makes this series of killings chilling – or memorable – but also the possibility that Jack was never caught, and possibly enabled by an Establishment we believed was sworn to protect society – an establishment that itself lead the hunt to catch him or not catch him as the case may be.

That we now know more fully the facts of those fateful days when the Ripper stalked the streets of London than any of the characters present who belonged to that time – that we are able to see connections that they could not – is a sinister irony – for we can do nothing to help those people make those connections or aid the victims of the Ripper despite knowing what is going to happen.

While those characters are long dead, their energies and mythos still lives on, allowing us to place ourselves in a world long gone and walk amongst them as ghosts that can do nothing even as we know everything. There is a powerlessness in this – a perceptive glimpse at our own fated demise someday being haunted by ghosts who can do nothing and yet know everything.

The Sinister thrives in the subtle currents that undercut a fascination with the evil, the wicked or the violent; not just the acts themselves but in the continuous tragedy of posterity which learns and knows the past but can do nothing to change it. It reminds us of our own unchangeable entropy and the looming tragedy of our own inevitable mortality and that every moment that unfolds is a tragicomedy possessed of time-space frozen eternally, yet hurried on relentlessly.

In the serial-killer based movie ‘Manhunter’ (1986), a shy but monstrous killer called the Red Dragon befriends a blind woman solely because she cannot see his face. We the audience know the truth of his hideous crimes, we can see the totality of events, we know he is a killer, and that she doesn’t. He is for the entire world to her a normal, even charming man – a situation that is true to life with many accounts of family members proving shocked to discover they have been living with a killer or police often interviewing but letting go a killer, having no idea they have just interviewed the right suspect.

What makes this scene sinister is not the presence of evil – but the irony created between the characters and the viewer. Likewise it is not the isolated instance of a carving knife, Norman Bates, or Janet Lee having a shower that gives rise to an emanation of the sinister in Hitchcock's 'Psycho' – the blood draining into the sink and the actual hand stabbing downward remind us of our own vulnerability and looming death, but it is the irony created by our participation that puts all these things into a sinister frame.

We are aware of Norman's condition and propensity for violence, but Janet Lee is not. We are aware of Janet Lee's vulnerability, but she is not.

Because what we are being affected by is more than watching someone (with pre-knowledge she is an actress) being stabbed to death – it is a deeply rooted archetypal psychodrama we play out again and again to get as close to death as possible without actually joining it.

I suspect our flirtation with Death acts a tension to understand life – and vice-versa. Slipping into the psychodrama of serial killers fascinates us. Perhaps this is because we tend to find it hard to believe that monsters could walk unseen among us as our fathers, mothers, grandparents, sons, babysitters or family friends – perhaps because acceptance of such a notion threatens our social stability and erodes those anchors we are traditionally taught to trust – or perhaps it is because we secretly want them to go where we cannot on our behalf so that we can explore death by proxy. Why else would we glorify something so unashamedly that supposedly shocks us?

In early cinema we were fed a stereotypical image of the serial killer who was grotesquely marked, abnormal; a visible monster in all respects. I believe this indicated the extent of unconsciousness that veiled our association of such horror emanating from ourselves. The warp in perception we had to make to identify such people with ourselves gave rise to twisted crazed beasts and psychopaths – which were heavily restrained by morality.

To some extent we have learned to accept that there are no monsters only humans, i.e. in 2010 we are largely aware of the folly of trusting these warped depictions of danger as openly cloaked in convenient monster-isms when even seemingly innocent children commit brutal murders but even as we know this, we still run to morality to explain their deeds and disassociate ourselves from them by warping them into monsters, hideous inhuman demons and beasts showing that we fear and refuse to accept our own nature.

The profile for almost all serial killers today is white male, 25-35 years old, good looking, above average intelligence and a family man: a near perfect chameleon that is generally only caught by slipping up or by escalating beyond control to the point where killing, not preservation, becomes paramount. We say things like 'they are just like us' – to disassociate from our own collective humanity – as if they were some 'other'.

Ted Bundy abducted, tortured, raped, and killed at least seventy young women by wearing a plaster cast on his arm to feign injury and asking girls for help at the back of his van in quiet campus car parks. Police are still unsure as to how many victims Bundy claimed or even what he did with them as many bodies have never been found and Bundy never admitted his guilt, shared this information or showed an iota of remorse.

By all accounts Bundy was a 'ladies man' charismatic and charming and even joked with police, his jailers, whilst awaiting his trials. Yet there was the other side to Bundy – he escaped four times whilst in prison or from police custody and continued to kill again each time until he was caught. In one instance where he escaped from a courthouse through a window – it took police years to recapture him. Bundy was a 'different' person when he wasn't called upon to fit in, entertain, or play up to the contractual obligations of society – but when he did, you couldn't tell him apart from anyone else – and in almost all cases, assumed him to be better than the average man as a man.

Richard Ramirez, aka the Nightstalker broke into the homes of old ladies and raped them, cut them, bit them, and killed them by beating their skulls in with a crowbar. As he escalated, he strangled them with pantyhose and inserted broom handles and other objects into them. His last words before being executed were allegedly 'See you in Disneyland.'

The sense that Richards crimes were so atrocious, so off the known scale, with no discernible motive except that he wanted to commit them, has been cited as 'chilling' 'cold' and with other metaphors to do with an absence of warmth, of heart, of humanity.

But what we say and do always has a shadow – an unconscious 'other-than' that says more than we are aware of about our processes.

Do we find them so fascinating because it shows us what we could be capable of if only we would let go the Beast we hold very tightly in rein? Knowing that this or that person has taken what they wanted without remorse but simply because they wanted something thrills us as much as it chills us.

We cannot deny that amongst the revulsion, fascination, disbelief and anger of such crimes – there is a hidden sense of jealousy that motivates our outrage – jealousy that this person has dared to do what we would never do out of our fear of social punishment and reprisal.

This unsettling moral ambivalence that we try hard to disguise with indignation and outrage is mixed in with the unsettling idea that we resent to some extent living our own lives in restraint – in not doing what we want when we want, unlike these killers, who we proclaim out loud in unison to be so atrocious.

Yet, perhaps we fear them and hate them because they represent our shadow side and we envy them for their freedom, for their lack of remorse and guilt at taking what they want. They become in a sense antiheroes.

We wish we could be as free but we cannot; we fear the consequences of doing so, bind ourselves with morality, and do the only thing we can allow ourselves to do – scream bloody murder and call for their head.

The secret conflict of morality is an ongoing struggle in all of us. A classic example of morally condemning something whilst openly embracing it is to be found in Australia's unashamed glorification of the criminal elements of its history and society.

Society is based on an unwritten social contract to get along, not hurt each other, and live in peace – but our control over ourselves seems limited and sometimes we are not capable of staying social and lose what little we have of control completely – succumbing to obsession, vice or emotion. Our moral character is always in question, from ourselves, from others and from various forms that demand we shape ourselves accordingly.

Our motivation to endure the rigours of self-control is borne of the abyss. We each stand on the brink of a precipice staring down into the depths of human depravity and thoughts of what we could sink to if we all let go. We possess an ingrained understanding of just how torturous and fearful living in a world where everyone did as they pleased would be. If self-preservation were paramount to all people – our race would not have been able to forge societies or get anything done. If Darwin's theory of survival of the fittest were applied we would quickly destroy ourselves.

Whilst people outnumber their enforcers by hundreds of thousands to one most of us obey the social contract because we know what humans can and have done to one another when we do not try and how destructive we intrinsically are. We are possessed of a heart of darkness that we struggle to keep from beating too loudly around those who would hear it and this restraint is what keeps society and a relatively stable order amongst our species. We also know we are all too ready to sacrifice enormous numbers of human lives in the name of some abstract ideal or another.

Themes or actions of Death, Sex, Violence, Torture, Hate, Crime and others – some of these abstracts have been used to denote the nature of the Sinister, as if the Sinister were contained within morality, that construct of tensioned opposites through which we find meaning by setting forms against one another.

But the ‘Sinister’ is also merely an abstract – it surfaces in morbidity through the unique constraints of morality that filter it into a scale of moral value, and in turn arises through morality because that is our common language. But even so, the Sinister is not constrained nor defined by morbidity or morality and it can be felt present as easily in forms as it can in a vacuum.

Even the sweetest most family-orientated movies cannot escape the contrast they create: and if in those moments we are watching such a film and our mind wanders to darker thoughts, we may question the appropriateness or relevance of such films in relation to our existence. We may become sharply aware that what we are watching is in fact a painted dream, a deliberately created escape like so many of our pastimes from the horrors of the real world.

THE TRAGEDY OF INDEPENDENT CAUSAL LIFELINES OF FREED PERSPECTIVE

The Sinister is morally indiscriminate. Remorselessness is not the only place to find it – for it is to be found in remorse as well. For many years as a young man I have played an instrumental role in helping to build something under the impression that I was doing the right thing, and the only thing that could be done to change the world and save it. Even when I did not believe the propaganda put forth from those I allied myself with, I went along with the charade anyway, making myself useful to madmen.

Now that I am older, raising children, connected to family, have a deeper sense of my responsibilities and my connection to the world, and the effect a person can have on it, I am sloughing off old skins and forms.

But I see too late the folly of building war machines, in subjugating my intelligence to aid the causes of others, and in playing my role of justifying people to do evil things by talking them out of taking responsibility for those things and attributing their actions toward the cause of war with the magic of my manuscripts. These are things I cannot change, things I have helped set in motion that now have their own unseen course – things I can only hope to atone for.

Under the banners of “ISS”, “Sinisterion”, or “THEM” people do things and act using the forms I have created – but while many refuse to accept responsibility for what they do, for what they create, I cannot.

Like Frankenstein turns on his creator, I have given birth to monsters that are now out of my hands and out of my control and which I must now destroy or try to create new forms to provide a balance. The sense that what I intended has been distorted is foreboding – an ugly echo of the potential for all forms to be used by whoever, whenever and for whatever purpose and often purposes the creator never intended.

I understand why but struggle against the reality that what we say and mean is never really clear to others. There is too much variability that is open to translation, too many angles to be correctly/identically interpreted through others rose-tinted filters, inevitable discrepancy where there is different focus on some aspects, a muting and mutation of others. People translate what we say into their own words, in their own way, and in their own image. This is why propaganda must be of the lowest order and appeal to the lowest common denominator – and why intelligentsia is always the first to go in revolutions.

Once ideas have left the womb, once they have been written down or given life, it has been said, they no longer belong to the creator/the writer and go on to live and spawn in their own way. In this sense we can never control how others will see us, ensure that others understand us, stop them from adding something we did not intend, or twisting our shapes in their hands to make a mockery of our original intent. Especially if our causal creations outlive us and we cease to be around to defend, explain or correct them.

All that we say and do is never really understood in its intricacy, never the same for others as it is for us.

We are in life alone, and yet we pretend to the contrary and base our entire lives upon a pretend unification that can never exist. We kill and hurt each other century after century because of this pretence.

In this there is a sense of tragic loss and waste, collective human self-deception and the Sinister.

The above are just a few examples of the diversity of the Sinister to manifest outside of typical moral values such as ‘evil’, ‘demonic’, or ‘satanic’. You may observe for yourself that it is not bound to only emerge from forms – it is an ominosity that creeps beyond forms in unexpected and often unnamed ways.

EDGES OF THE SINISTER

I will end this part of the essay by relating a few of the other ways in which the Sinister manifests itself and edges into being in all manner of human devices simply because it is inextricably woven into being, not merely evil,— and then summarise why.

In the horror ‘schlocker’ series ‘Friday the 13th’ (1980+), ‘Halloween’ (1978) and ‘Nightmare on Elm Street’ (1984) the mass murderers Jason Voorhees, Michael Myers, and Freddy Krueger are sinister not only for their appearance but because of an interconnection of elements.

For example, they each defy known physics – they bend time and space to their will. Victim’s attempts to run away are futile. As the audience we count on it, and there is a certain thrill of glee and danger in knowing the victims are doomed from the beginning no matter what they do. Here again we mete out Irony. We know they will die (they don’t) we just don’t know how (the killer does). In watching them we play a part in injecting these movies with as much of the sinister and suspense as the director and his devices; the director supplies the story, the gore, the chase, the hero, the villain, and the viewers total vantage point; and in exchange we willingly and temporarily suspend belief to give the victims the opportunity to run away. We endow them with a sporting chance to survive the onslaught, which creates tension that makes the killers invincibility all the more dangerous and exciting. The victims run away in a linear direction away from danger to safety, (a tactic which would ordinarily hold water), only to find their killers have already arrived ahead of time to an impossibly portentous spot to slaughter them. This bi-location of time has been and remains a constant feature in films.

One can usually predict when the director will attempt to make the audience jump in fright because the music falls silent and the camera either moves in close to the character to frame shoulders and face, or in close but with enough room to the side or over the shoulder for something to enter. This is a tried and tested method, and although there are some variants on the theme, it remains a constant application. If Jason Voorhees were real, chances are that quite a lot of his would-be victims – mostly fit and athletic – would out-run him, get to safety, call the police, and he would be hunted down, arrested, or shot silly. It wouldn’t be much of a movie. But tangling him in time, giving him supernatural strength, unrelenting momentum, and frightening brutality serve to turn him into a monster where the chess-board (movie area) is limited in space, and the protagonist unlimited in time; these twists help create a sinister character.

This condition of inevitability is also utilised by Krueger only in a different way, where it is inevitable that his victims will succumb to sleep, thus it’s only a matter of time before they meet him; and when they do, anything previously impossible in waking reality is now possible through nightmares. Krueger’s bi-location is not so indifferent to the relentlessness of Voorhees, or Leatherface, the T3000 in Terminator IV, or Batman.

But alone it does not make him sinister.

No single attribute makes or can make him sinister – it is webs of them, a geometry of forms, that lend him that aura – elements that feed one another, tension one another, explain one another, compliment or contrast one another. Without knowing who they are and the function they perform the ‘killers’ are far less threatening and even obscure. Jason's mask has entered popular culture as an icon – but wearing a mask is not automatically a sinister element –if you didn't associate the rest of Jason's mythos to it, it could just as easily pass for any other hockey mask, and if Friday the 13th hadn't made it an icon – it would still be just a neutral sport implement. His torn overalls, mutilated face, knife, height, relentlessness, watching from the bushes, etc mean nothing in themselves. Each item, presented on its own lacks ability to interconnect with the other elements to generate the Sinister. Only once we have that interconnection however, adding the device of the tortured backgrounds of each killer – we personally lend mythos and even pathos (feeling empathy or sympathy for the protagonist) imbuing the collective with the Sinister, allowing us to cheer both for the victims and the killer.

Many films, schlockers included, would be nothing without the accompaniment or underscoring of well-placed music – an often undetected but ever-present score that guides us in interpreting the events on screen whether we like it or not. Half the time we do not even notice music in the background, letting it filter in liminally until we suddenly catch the edge of it and realise it has been playing all along.

A good example for this is found in sex. Sex often mutes any music playing in the background as attention is completely diverted to more immediate matters. Music, creeps into our unconscious – it emphasises emotions, drama, suspense, excitement, heightens or relaxes our various senses, tells us what the character is feeling, and controls us on another realm – an unconscious realm where we can scarcely control the contents that enter while we have our conscious guard down. That we can be infiltrated so subtly opens up the tremendous power of frequency, notes, and pitch to affect us without our knowledge – to abuse – and the ramifications of this are sinister. If we are trying to concentrate on a task, and a song we hate is playing, we are less likely to perform well than if a song we like is playing. Some kinds of music have the power to enrage us or calm us. This is a fact treated seriously by those who develop sonic weaponry that can disable or supposedly kill a person or group of people using high concentrations of certain frequency alone. At around 400 decibels, the eardrums burst causing death or extreme or permanent disorientation due to loss of balance. It would not be so difficult to re-create such a blast to use in short bursts on people.

Muzak is played in shopping centres to calm people while subliminal messages filtered through it are bought by shopkeepers the world over wishing to subdue shoplifting impulses or secretly encourage our behaviour.

Advertising, product placement, refurbishing, etc all have huge industries devoted to tricking the shit out of people – some of which I've worked in. Only extreme naivety or optimistic ignorance would not suspect chains and businesses of not doing everything they can to make a profit – including employing fringe technologies and strategies that affect humans psychologically and unconsciously.

I am increasingly convinced that frequency plays a hugely but undervalued part in our lives – that there is an entire dimension of which many people are only liminally aware, that they barely consciously process, but the knowledge of which is quite often deliberately used against us to affect us and our emotions without our consent. ONA plain-chants that focus on hitting certain notes or combinations of them to affect someone ‘magically’ require the perfect vibration of certain pitches accompanied by other pitches. Hearing these sounds has occasionally sent shivers up my spine or sharply affected my mood – particularly Agios O Asoth sung in organum. As a result of consciously realising that certain notes can have an effect on me when held, I am slowly developing a fascination I wish to explore more deeply for the power of sound and music.

I have great awe for the human voice; though I dislike the Christian messages in choral-type music I particularly enjoy the harmonics of choirs. The Gregorian (plain) chanting of various orders of monks, Russian orchestras, and Estonian composer Arvo Part, Tibetan, and Native American chant and song and many other albums of the human voice are all able to invoke something unsettling.

I would not like to over-exaggerate a recent phenomenon – but the voice of the now famous Susan Boyle, so perfect and so clear, especially the way she holds/hits notes in pitch, is the only human voice I have ever heard whose voice literally sends deep chills through my body and plunges me into emotion. It is lucky that nature imprints a counter-balance to all such frightening talents i.e. that she is steadfast about only singing songs that mean something to her and that her appearance prevents/limits her from being appreciated/exploited in an industry that merits superficiality. Were she to fit the image currently enforced as beautiful – we’d all be in deep shit – because that kind of beauty is easily controlled. We are lucky that she is a humble woman too, because a voice like that, that literally moves people, vibrates through them with pure resonance alone, could easily become a weapon. There is something disturbingly sinister in a display of the human voice being able to do such things to us against our will. Perhaps it is because she does it against our will that there is so much resistance to accept her talent as extraordinary and even unique.

It has been said that the Sinister can be beautiful – but what is beautiful and sinister is not beautiful for long. What is sinister is possessed of a particular presence; an unsettling sense that something is ‘other than’ and warns us of some danger, some ‘other than’ which lies beneath supposed Eden. Beauty in the sinister is not beautiful for its own sake because it is beautiful, but possesses an extra dimension, an additional something more – it is not being but becoming – beauty being only a primary stage of the sinister.

There is something sinister in a walk through an eerie forest at night, or in standing at the grave of a loved one knowing that some day we will join them. Something unsettling about strange places filled with strange people. The sinister can edge in from seemingly innocent comments, in glances, or from whispers, from voices crystal clear or muffled – there is something sinister about doors, in their function to divide and conceal, keeping secrets and segregating truth. Something sinister in sex, in violence, in love, in time, in dance, indeed I struggle to think of a place where the Sinister cannot be found if one seeks to find it – or even if one does not.

The beautiful lullaby of paradise that fills our hearts and senses with peace and blissful ignorance can always be shattered: our window of God can be caused to tremble and strain from the slightest deviation in Eden when the sinister comes calling.

Something can edge in anywhere in any human endeavour that doesn't quite fit and that tells us to be afraid, wary, on guard, suspicious, or sad. But why? Do all these examples have something in common? Do all forms and all abstracts have something in common?

I believe they do.

The Sinister is related to fear. We are intimate acquaintances with fear. It has had many names and we continue to give it many more. We give it names to give it form – and more often than not we do so because we want others to be afraid with us, for us, or of us. The simple reason the Sinister can be found everywhere, is because I project it everywhere – the Sinister is a name employed by the 23 current. I seek to find it and so I find it. I push it upon events that could just as easily be interpreted with other abstracts.

I use its name to explain events and actions, to cohere and edify them, and rely on the “Sinister” to serve as a convenient contrast that paints the world with dark colours to highlight what it does not. ; And if not the Sinister, then certainly something else.

Yet the Sinister is not an illusion – any illusion comes from my interpretation and the name(s) I give it – because something is there, something ‘other than’ in us or that comes from us or from without us, or maybe all and more, that expresses what words like ‘Sinister’ / ‘Demonic’/ or ‘Satanic’ try to capture.

The Sinister is an abstract that stems from fear. The Sinister cannot be felt but as a by-product of original fear. One might venture that this is why Sath from the Temple of THEM insists that one must be relaxed in order to overcome the Sinister – to overcome Fear itself. What exists however, reducible beyond any of the abstract names and voices we form to explain what we feel, is always and only innate primal fear; a biological inevitability that occurs as a result of being.

End – Part I

THE PHYSIS OF THE SINISTER [2]

Nothing to Fear but Fear Itself

V.04

In the closing summary of part one of the Physis of the Sinister, I concluded that all of humanity's constructs, including the Sinister were reducible to an origin in fear. I stand by this and will attempt to illustrate why our internal behaviour and our external architecture has come about, why it has come about, and that it had its course set by the primal phenomena of fear. The strength of my argument comes from a backward analysis of what humanity has created, the reasons why it creates it and continue to create it, and that this particular drive originated from the fear we experienced in the transition between Non-Being into Being. I am supposing that Non-Being is a tensioned state that does exist for the purposes of providing a tension to Being – which is another abstract, but which denotes a sentient semi-autonomous state (life) that the reader cannot deny.

Being; could be widened in term to encompass not just one's causal life but the effects one has on the world that live on long after causal death; but in this case I have not widened that term and Being means a sentient autonomous state captured in the existence of the human organism (i.e. body).

It is difficult if not impossible to imagine what a priori non-being is like – with little to no evidence of reincarnation or an after-life. I therefore put forward that non-being is an absence of being (not death, but pre-life) until such time further evidence presents itself. It is not possible to be present in the womb where my thesis takes place – and thus my convictions about primal fear being present at our instant of transitional being are based on indicative behaviour exhibited by all human beings that denotes a specific treatment by human beings of all things.

All of a sudden – from non-being, we come to Be. When exactly the consciousness to receive stimulation develops in a fetus during gestation I cannot say and it still seems to be a matter of some debate – as illustrated by the sensitive issue of abortion and the definition of life.

But from nothing we are suddenly rushed into the world. Consciousness arrives and we attain senses, perhaps not so clear as to be touch, or sight, or hearing, or smell, or taste as we know them, but nonetheless there is a connection with 'something'. It might be the texture of the watery uterine sac that triggers some stimulus in us, or some tiny psychic light that goes on, or perhaps darkness, or the sound of the mother's heartbeat, the rushing of blood, the scrape of our tissues against the womb, or some other such sensation. But from nothing – to anything – is bound to be a tremendous shock and a profound experience – our first one. It is a shock that affects all of us, whether born in a womb or a test-tube and makes this inexplicable first encounter with being, inevitable and universal.

At this first point in our Being – we may not be considered alive by law of philosophy – but we are not dead, and we are not pre-life either. Whatever the world may term us, we are in a state of being that has emerged from Non-being. For the purposes of putting forward my point, and due to a lack of evidence, I am assuming that the tension of non-being is an opposing state to being that is soundless, tasteless, touchless, sightless, smell-less, conscious-less/life-less and one might add lightless. And I believe the way humans interact after they grow beyond this primal state contains evidence that to go from this state of non sine qua to anything else exerts a tremendous and profound shock and an experience of fear that becomes the prime drive for everything that humans do – including why they behave the way they do and why they do what they do.

Firstly, the world is absolutely littered with examples of the lengths people will go to when they are afraid. We have individual examples such as the endowment of seeming superhuman strength when mothers are afraid for their children, of prisoners mutilating themselves to get out of a particular cell when they fear for their lives, of the enormous and exhausting web of lies and deception people will invent to get out of trouble, of the debilitating incapacity to act that cripples the body and mind, or the adrenaline rush that drives people to perform acts that are heroic, dangerous, or insane – for thrills, for war, for a cause, or a loved one, for example.

On a larger scale we have the example of Local, National and World Wars that have been motivated by losing land, power, resources, title, etc and the response to seek expansion, security, protection and prosperity for the National Ideal or their people at the expense of other Nations and their peoples. We have the Cold War: a nuclear arms race of extreme paranoia between the USSR and the USA that fearfully sought to conceal their own secrets from one another resulting in a massive and extended focus on espionage, spies, counter-spies, counter-counter-spies, double-agents, triple-agents, codes, misinformation, assassinations, covert killings, infiltration, propaganda and national fear campaigns. Fear of breaking sacred law or of not being immortalised got the pyramids built. Fear of invasion and corruption of way of life got the Great Wall of China built. Fear of reprisal gave rise to the secretive Ninja of Feudal Japan. Fear of God brought about the Crusades and the Inquisition, because God feared the Devil. Fear of other races brought about the Holocaust. Fear of losing brought the atrocities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Fear of the sun, moon and sea, brought forth Gods. Fear of drowning brought forth life-jackets. Fear of the world brought forth form and the development of ways to explain it, control it, and conquer it. Why do we humans seek to conquer the world? We do so because the world is the embodiment of all our fears. We fear everything in all its tensions and opposites; Age, Youth, Beauty, Ugliness, War, Peace, Ourselves and Others. Because Buddhists seek to attain Zen, even Buddhists fear.

Our survival instinct is the strongest thing we have. Endless examples of what the human being can endure based on the will to survive are plentiful – because we fear not surviving, and we fear Death. Women’s biology urges them to have babies to increase the species, men’s biology urges them to procreate and increase the species – nature gives us little time before it takes it all away, and as a trade-off she lets us make little copies of ourselves to go on after we are gone. Procreation is motivated by the fear of our mortality.

These are bold claims are they not? I believe that if we had the strength to search ourselves we would agree that all our words, thoughts and deeds stem from an innate sense of fear. But many of us – are too afraid to do that. What happens when we push our fears underground? Psychology will tell us that we create a shadow ten times stronger than the original fear that will erupt from our psyche in intense and unpredictable fashions – and that since we cannot face it as our own fear, project it onto others.

America’s fear of Islam is not new – Americans, originating from Puritans, have made a national ideology of fearing things, elevated their fear above and beyond all reasonable logic – witches, blacks, communists, fascists, jihadists, weapons of mass destruction, the devil...

Adolf Hitler cites his fear of a shattered German economy and state as his motivation for the NSDAP. I will now attempt to remove us from the typical moral weigh-in of abstractions against abstractions that often forces its way into such discussions to concentrate on what lies beneath, i.e. beneath abstraction.

In effect, he only cites abstracts – In effect, Germany is just a name, a word, a sound as are all the other forms on which he centred his reasons, as are all the forms on which any of us centre our reasons. If you were to ask each person of a country to precisely draw the borders of their country they would doubtlessly each draw a different approximation of the boundaries. Because while the exact borders of Germany to the nth degree might be of interest to the Gestapo – the average person does not know these, because “Germany” only denotes a vague area, not an objective one with any clear or universal demarcation. Likewise, if you were to ask the French to draw the precise borders of Germany, I am confident they would all differ on this matter too – because borders, like Germany, are subjective constructs.

If you were to ask American’s to circle all the countries in which the US has armed forces stationed, how many would they circle? All of them? That is not correct. Only some of them? Which ones? Now ask them to circle the boundaries of their country. By law, the US Embassies that occupy land in other countries Are American soil and thus form boundaries of the US. But how many people would get it right? Can it even be gotten right? And how many would be aware if parts of those boundaries had changed or were presently changing at that very time? None of them. Abstracts are vague, subjective things, not universal or objective.

Why do we seek to conquer? To understand the world around us, to get to know the world around us – we name it, itemise it, categorise it, and break it down into manageable chunks and speciality fields.

When we are lost in a town, we look for signs that are familiar, ring a friend, ask someone for directions, look for street names or try to identify the way we have come. A mass of strange and unfamiliar things in an unfamiliar place presents itself to us and it is like looking at something incomprehensible. We might experience panic, or fear, or worry, or stress – but will seek to find our way out of being lost by finding our way. We employ a variety of means to do this; reaching out to others, avoiding danger, locating where we are in relation to somewhere else, looking for landmarks, processing information that helps tell us where we are and sharing information that helps tell others where we need to be, etc. Using this process to overcome the chaos of being lost, to re-orient ourselves in a place we do not recognise away from our comfort zone and the consistency humans desperately value, eventually we are likely to find our way back home. This same process is used in our communications with each other via our language.

This process is made much harder if we get lost out in nature however, where there are seldom any signs, very few people to ask for directions, things can all look the same, we cannot reach out to others easily, and if disoriented cannot locate where we are in relation to where we need to be.

Even still, we are not stripped of our innate faculties to comprehend. We can attempt to climb a tree, signal overhead planes, seek shelter and food, look for ridges we can climb to get our bearings, follow the stars, think of our loved ones for inspiration to survive, and formulate some sort of survival plan by processing the information around us.

In both these cases, we are lost, but still able to make sense of our situation. We can reason through elimination and deduction, analyse our surroundings for clues, or even guess which way to go based on the sun, stars, moon, and lay of the land or the flight path of birds. If we were to simply concentrate on the fact that we were lost, and this happens quite a bit to people, we would build up great levels of stress, panic and fear.

There are many examples where certain people need to be calmed or even forcibly sedated after becoming lost or fearful of their survival and fly off into a panic that imagines every worst scenario and risks demoralising the rest of the group with negativity.

Those that survive overcome this initial feeling by staying calm, staying where they are, or thinking carefully and economically about what to do. In effect, they accept that they are lost, believe that they can be found, and just need to stay alive long enough for rescuers to find them. They formulate a plan, decide on courses of action, and carry it through despite any adversity. They do this by processing where they are, what is around them they can use, how best to use it, how often to use it, and so on. They restrict panic by making their surroundings familiar – they orient themselves using the land and the sky. They see how far they are up or down by looking around. They look for rivers, landmarks, mountains to get some sense of where they are and what they can expect.

They identify dangers and can name things in relation to one another to control the chaos of being lost from being overwhelming. They do all of these things to keep down the level of natural fear. And they can do it because they have experience, instruction, abstracts, training, and the ability to think process and learn information. They have past examples of trees or being lost to go on, learned skills to rely on, memories that motivate them to get back to what they love, and generally a fully functioning physiology to transport them, orient them back into themselves, and keep them from losing control. They can do all these things because they have a body and mind with sufficient experience to deal with fear, and they do all these things to keep away the feeling of fear.

But what of the fetal consciousness that is suddenly brought into being and “face-to-face” so to speak, with some warmth or wetness or darkness which they have no word for, cannot think about, cannot name, have nothing to compare the experience to, and cannot even comprehend only sense and in no way limit, curb, contain, explain, or control this onslaught from non-being to being? Without any means to reason or understand, and given what I have said above of how very hard we fight to stave it off, what could be our first experience of life but the innate primal experience of being from non-being which is physiological fear?

Fear is a word and an abstract itself for something that is universal – but because it is universal it is different from the Sinister. Fear denotes that sensation we all have physiological experience with, by whatever name you call it that makes us all seek ways to decrease it.

Fear that we don't look alright when we leave the house prompts us to look in the mirror – fear that we might be vain – prompts us not to look in the mirror. Fear that I might be right may cause you to question some of my assumptions, fear that I might be wrong makes me double-check mine and be ready to accept new evidence. Like hunger, fear doesn't need a name for us to know it is there. The Sinister does.

The Sinister is merely a by-product of fear and we create these abstracts, moral or not, i.e. 'Satan', 'Dad', 'Pineapple' to control our fear and limit the chaos of the world into small boxes that we can manage. There is evidence for this in the scientifically proven fact that humans limit the total information they receive, filtering sounds and sights and so on into relevance so that they do not hear or take notice of all of them – which is widely believed to be something that would simply overwhelm a person and drive them mad – or at least unable to discern one stimuli from another and so completely incapable of processing anything. We are white-knuckle frightened of that kind of Chaos – because it reminds us of our first experience with Being.

Even those that supposedly seek to promote Chaos use systems of order to limit it and prevent actual chaos from occurring – especially to their own forms.

Yet no item that we group as 'fruit', and then individually isolate further as a 'pineapple' is identical. No two pineapples are the same, nor is space the same – and I am going to have to use a neologism here because no terminology exists for this – nor is anyone's spatial 'gridding' exactly the same – in that we each place different visual frames around things that changes how we view and interpret them.

If there were ten people on an island looking down the beach where there were some huts, a fishing pier, and a pineapple tree – and you asked people to describe what they saw, it is doubtful all of them would mention the pineapple tree because we each naturally perceive different things as important if not asked to focus in one some particular aspect.

If you then took them to the pineapple tree, asked them to look up and describe what they saw – you would most likely get answers along the lines of 'sky', 'tree trunk', 'leaves', 'a pineapple'. But if you could somehow have the frame of reference people used to box in those items highlighted in magical glowing lines that demarcated what objects they perceived and the boundaries of those objects as separate from the scene they were asked to look at – we could then compare what objects they pulled out of the totality of available abstracts to what a geologist, painter, philosopher, botanist, thief, royalty, or smart-ass would choose to demarcate from the totality and bring into focus.

A geologist might say they see a good example of a surviving 'genus' from the 'cretaceous' era that only grows on volcanic basalt. His gridding would extend underground to relate the scene to the rock beneath – and perhaps outward to relate it to the world in general, or even as far as his laboratory back home where he has samples of some work related to this genus awaiting his perusal.

A painter might see the opportunity for a still life painting by noting the scales of the pineapple and the way the light is hitting the tree or fruit. For them their gridding focuses in more closely on the pineapple in detail, the colours and interplay of shadow in and around the folds of the leaves and fruit and the effect of natural light on a possible subject.

A philosopher might see the exercise as futile and fade the scene out altogether in favour of some abstraction or deconstruction of the scene and their place in it, including the futility of the question, of fruit in general, or trees in particular. They may see an analogy in the scene somewhere that the pineapple is like us, hanging on for grim life until we are ripe and fall from the tree of life to be consumed or plucked before our time. Their gridding might fluctuate between scene and world and encompass the works or vision of a respective philosopher who had such things to say.

You might introduce new elements to the scene and think about the sand under your feet, or the noise of birds, or why you are on an island in the first place – the possibilities are presumably endless.

There is no way to know what will appear within a person's gridding when they are naturally contemplating an object or perhaps even when they are asked to focus on a specific part – because the object does not exist, only subjectivity does. If you ask them to focus on the middle of the pineapple some will find a spot halfway up and look at that, some will think about the centre of the pineapple inside the fruit and focus on that, some quantum thinkers may find the centre of anything impossible to find, and others may make further unpredictable interpretations.

If peace for me means war against the Magian, sinister bloodshed and rallies to arms, and I communicate that part but forget to add specifically that no one should hurt my family even if they somehow come under the umbrella term Magian and you hurt my family because you believed you knew what peace meant for me in its totality – did you ever really understand what Peace meant for me?

What I place a grid around to mean Peace is always going to be vague to someone else. What I envision suffers from going from my idea into the world from many different filtering processes.

My sense of what peace means is not concretely defined in thoughts – it is a vague semblance, a notion, a dream without clear and precise boundaries. I attempt to define these boundaries to describe my sense of peace in translation in voice or word, but in doing so, immediately have to rein my free-floating dream of peace into a rigid container of words or speech. Since it is a moral subject it can no longer be as vague and undefined or malleable as it was in my head so that I can change my mind and include or exclude things without upsetting anyone trying to enact my sense of peace.

I also have to omit things; it is inevitable because of the acausal connections of association we make with each and every abstract, a huge, interconnected web that is tied into everything else in some vague sense or another.

I have to omit things because I can never write down all the content in my head – I have to limit it and find what is relevant to “Peace” not what is relevant to what I had for dinner, even if that is somehow relevant to peace, as something I would do during peace for instance, for me.

In writing things down or voicing them, I suddenly lose the freedom ideas have in the head and bring into being say, thousands, of collective associations that are automatically made with the topic of peace by the consensus of language and mutual agreement – and also risk having the endless supply of individual other senses of peace others define being attached to my own. Also, the minute I write down a sentence, that sentence takes on a life of its own and requires, even forces, the accompaniment of other words, and other concepts to take place – because that is something language does.

So much is lost in translation from free-formed thoughts to express and thus limit the massive scope of total inter-connected human thoughts that the idea suffers inconceivable damage and turns a super connected stream of conscious acausality into a narrow-minded tunnel through which only a portion of the original intent can be forced.

Once it has been channelled through this tunnel, it is now a shadow of its former self, but still subject to any number of further distortions. How and what the writer has expressed will have an unpredictable effect depending how they have expressed it – at the time they have expressed it – what others are expressing – if others are expressing something similar (and it becomes similar because language makes one thing look much like another) – who the writer is – the climate, culture or country in which they write it – and many other variables. It may also depend on whether the idea is written on prison toilet paper, scrawled on a brick wall, annotated in a diary, chiselled on a stone tablet, written in the sky, posted on a website or blog, published by a respected guild in a book, elaborated to a scientific symposium, or presented as an edict from the King.

The idea will undergo changes that cannot be predicted due to the number of variables that being thrown into the world and separated from home cannot avoid and the absolute chaos of a mine-field these variables create that must be navigated to reach the other side of translation from the thought process intact. But even this is only half the battle.

How that stripped-down, limited omission, channelled into voice or language will then be perceived is up against a whole new range of problems including personal interpretation by every reader – but even worse to come – re-interpretation by other readers, and almost certainly, other writers. What we managed to salvage together from our original web of numinous connections has now become chained to the world and at the mercy of its proclivities.

Many people relate the name Einstein to genius and credit him with the Special Theory of Relativity, $E = mc^2$, but there is strong evidence that Poincare's and other physicists had already formulated identical theories. Poincare's ideas even if they were first, were struck from the historical record as first, and credit given to another, based on a re-interpretation of events and their time-line by other writers – writers in scientific circles who commanded the agreement of many influential people and people in power.

The original events that took place are always forever lost to us due to omission, filtering, perception, bias, and re-translation of them by a succession of writers who each based their foundations on what was previously written down about these events – until many stages later, the events recorded are changed.

The condensing of these events is not limited to discoveries of theories – but world events and indeed that tabature of lies and half-truths; History.

But while facts and truth are esteemed abstracts that science and the world supposedly collectively strive for – our world can only ever be built on fabrications. The problem with Law and the Judicial System for instance are that those who preside in the Jury, or act as Judge were not present to observe the crime itself and must rely on evidence. Evidence is always a matter of opinion, but is the only thing that can connect someone to said events. But often evidence is translated second-hand by Solicitors and Lawyers who seek to present the evidence or testimony in such a way that it condemns or absolves.

History is an art of falsification and fabrications too, causing any number of headaches for those who do try to get to the source of its veracity, but even when it is proved wrong – just like propaganda, History breaks things down to the lowest common denominator.

For instance, our chronological measure of progress in evolution is measured by certain events. Maps and thus the knowledge of certain landmasses, is taken into account to work out who came from where and at what time. America still teaches that Christopher Columbus discovered America despite the fact that he didn't.

The entire explanation for the evolutionary development of our technological processes and exploration dates is thrown into question by Icelandic maps that show carefully charted maps of the coastline hundreds of years before maps were supposed to exist. This throws all the careful calculations of how and when we migrated and what technologies we had when, into dispute. As do the Dead Sea Scrolls which greatly contradict the established text of the Bible.

But despite the evidence – we do not often change history to suit the truth. Yes, because it would be an incredibly difficult logistical exercise to have to re-print books, flags, correct facts, and make suppositions about anything – which is unavoidable – but which omission of fact concretizes my assertions. And no, because that is not what history is for. History is a re-write, a translation of events, by which events means linear causal time constricted to key players or groups and personages – not the totality of human beings who may or may not have had a role to play in said events, or that were omitted from record. Just as the totality of thought is reduced to a sliver of what it used to be when we express an idea, so is History reduced. So is everything reduced...

Our world is built on nothing but fabrications. Fabrications we do not seek to address or change to reflect new evidence in spite of our insistence of this practice in Law. Why are we happy to let these fabrications be treated as facts, as reality, as totality? It is not just because they are convenient – necessary – that nonchalance masks something else. Why are they convenient, why are they necessary? It is because they serve the function of limiting things. Because they make the calamitous experience of being measurable, definable, reliable, consistent, and comprehensible. And why do we need these things? Because nature quite frankly terrifies the living shit out of us, our nature, the nature of others, and being part of nature herself. The only way to control the enormity of it all is to break it down infinitesimally so that we get right down into universes, planets, tectonic plates, continents, countries, nations, capitals, states, cities, towns, villages, houses, rooms, furniture, solids, gases, liquids, particles, mesons, quasars, quarks, dark matter, anti-matter, the acausal...

It all serves a purpose of explaining what we do not know – the fear we experienced when we came into Being and the need to control it. The need to invent names, language, symbols, descriptions, titles, sounds... anything at all and everything at all to stop from being afraid.

Those who supposedly do not fear do fear. They fear any number of things, they start fights because they fear what others think, what others will think of them if they do not, they fear being weak, they fear being trampled, they fear being the victim. Those who are supposedly fearless, fear letting others perceptions down, fear not being fearless, or like every single one of us – has their own network of private fears that shape the way they deal with the world.

In Summary:

All the things we create to cover the formless mass that we chop into grids to isolate objects and interpret reality are grounded in attempts to keep away fear. Everything we build, or raise up, or write about, or go to war for, everything we say, is grounded in a compensation for that one horrific shock for which we had no defence, no choice, no way to lessen, of the primal fear of non-being into Being. Of this, there is more than ample empirical evidence and to the contrary merely rabid non-acceptance.

In Part 3:

Part 3 of this essay will contend that in the moment we first conquer or lessen the all-pervasiveness of fear in our being – we discover Love. Love is the absence of fear, the tensioned opposite by which fear becomes known, and countermanded. Love is the reason we find solace in objects, in others, on ourselves, in control, power and conquering fear or seek to – which is simply because it beats the alternative. Our world was built on Love by Fear; we covered the earth in architecture and names so that we would not be afraid, and that we would know only Love. This legacy, begun by our world ancestors, continues – ingrained since forever in all of us as habit – but without any consciousness knowledge of what we are doing and why; because we would all rather forget. To forget is to know love.

PHYSIS OF THE SINISTER [3]

Love Conquers All

V.04

It is true that fear and our origin in it has had a profound effect by causing us to strive for its absence. But whilst we may each be the product of terror in gestation – the effects of this fear have brought forth powerful coping mechanisms to use our fear to our advantage. Whatever the word ‘fear’ attempts to denote in reference to a raw stimuli – ‘love’ is another word that conveniently captures its absence. I mean the term in no sense a moral turpitude as it is commonly used today – but merely a word to denote the secondary experience to fear which provides the tension of opposites by which we function.

I have chosen the word Love to represent the absence of fear, not for its association with morality, but for its ability to express a ‘for’ as a tension to the ‘against’; Love is “The” universal purpose and reason in humanity to survive, endure, and overcome that which it is suddenly thrust into through no choice of its own. Love is that which has to come into being if fear is to be overcome and Being to have a reason to flower from the dark and survive in its new home; Nietzsche’s “YES”.

The unconscious, animal tendencies of humanity obviously did everything they could to understand the world into which they were born. They named everything they could, found words and sounds, symbols and pictograms, cave drawings and mythology to depict the mysteries of the world around them. They came up with creation and end time stories and gods to explain the sun and the moon and the stars, and the cosmology of the world; gave names and attributes to plants, animals, rocks, gems, metals, other people, family, food, safety, danger etc in order to make sense of it, in order to survive it. They 'loved' the world so that they would not fear it. And the more they understood over time the less frightened they became, and the more they were able to do. Giving things names is held to be a 'primitive' means of giving things power – but it is insulting and ignorant to consider this habit a relic of cave-men; it is in fact more common today than any other time in history since we have inherited the world at a time when there are more names for things and more emphasis on giving names to things than has ever existed than at any other time.

We have dissected space and matter in thousands of fields down into infinitesimal levels and still we continue doing so – have travelled further into space and found more stars planets and phenomena, explored the depths of the sea, under the ice, and have electronic maps for more earth-based landmarks than any time in the past, and have more information about the global totality of land including street maps that show pictures of our houses, and an ultra-sophisticated level of personal identity data banks to monitor us including DNA, fingerprinting, and even optical scanners. It represents a level of detail and abstraction greater than any of our historical predecessors ever had – and requires an equally sophisticated array of new names as well as the continued use of old names.

Every little social event or idiosyncrasy seems to require its own word or combination of two words and we have a global interface containing more information than any human being could ever digest with millions more names for things than ever before. If we cannot name something – we treat it suspiciously and with hostility. If it cannot be quickly categorised and boxed away into definition we struggle to comprehend it, so used are we to using names and labels, and filters that simplify things such as forms, morality, and language to lean on as the means of understanding the world around us. Our efforts to explore and understand via knowledge though, reached a point somewhere where blindness began to occur without the crutch of names to tell us what things are – a process we've gotten so used to. There are thousands of examples of what can happen when people believe something is something it actually isn't.

We reached a point where love came to conquer reason.

According to the present consensus theory of evolution, the ego – was one means that emerged out of the unconscious which could consciously consider its own existence and make greater sense of things. It was a developmental leap that may well have been encouraged to emerge as a defence against fear – for it is the ego that orients itself into the world by means of relativity, building a world-view that provides relative stability and safety, sense and reason, place and power. But something happened that made the ego so strong we began to prefer names over the blinding rawness of nature unnamed and in treating the names as given, we ironically lost touch with the world as she is from our mad dash to understand it.

The habit of 'seeking to understand' was no doubt carried over by natural selection as a valuable tool crucial to human survival in its gestation. It is a largely unconscious process that we later repeat the habit without knowing why because while we may not have the faculties to comprehend our experience of transition into Being at that early stage – on some level, we are affected nonetheless, and intrinsically scarred. Later the means developed that allow us to control ourselves, others, and the world around us by splitting its totality into 'separate' things inc. Maths, History, and Science.

I believe that the habit of doing this has been going on so long and so fervently that we are each born into a world that has been collectively oriented toward this unconscious goal since forever and that its specific architecture and mode of being reflects that. We rush to name our child, declare it a boy or girl, dress it in pink or blue (these colours were once reversed, blue was the colour to denote a girl, pink, a boy) and spend all our time educating them in the ways of the world often without questioning those ways just so the child will fit in to the social paradigm as seamlessly as possible and begin the process over of learning to cover the world with names and treat those names as the essence of things.

In doing it we've passed through many interesting stages – but eventually we've lost all touch with magic and the subtler energies that rule us, burying them under mountains of abstractions in order to subjugate the world to our will. We concerned ourselves with words and interpretations to get to the heart of things – but somehow ended up being unable to transcend what our tools told us. We no longer perceive our connection with the world as it is, as part of it, as being inexplicably part of all of it – and grow more distant from it with every passing day and every new word, burying what is under what we are used to telling it to be.

To this day we are imprisoned by the causal effects of our great escape and forms of every shape possess people like puppets, driving them to perform all manner of actions in the name of the Word: in the name of Love.

Love and Fear, are one and the same beautiful a priori dance; a dance that gave rise to popular applause and every variant of dualism that dully reflects, vaguely remembers, our ancient origins in a staggering number of duo-divisions. It is the resonance, archetype, meme, habit, behavioural pattern, or echo of nature that is in us all, that gave us our first lesson in life as life. It's what we all remember to forget. But some part of us, remembers alright.

Crudely perceived, this process is prone to colour our interpretive processes, to split and divide into base dualism, rise to the surface as an energy of divisions, of us or them. But perceived without fear – the process is beyond compare, just one of many intricate miracles of creation and natural majestic dynasty of the wonder that is in all life.

It is the Neither of all things. Fluxing back and forth and pulsing between control and abandon – knowledge and wisdom – order and chaos. There is no division, no neat line that can be drawn anywhere in nature between anything – nowhere to even begin trying to fathom her mysteries that surround us on all sides and threaten to engulf us in the sheer numinous terror of it all. And so we make divisions, we make a language that makes divisions, and we keep making as many divisions as it takes to keep out the fear.

THROUGH FEAR, THE LOVE

What are the tensions of opposites? They are a marvellous human achievement prone to abuse, an ingenious trick of language to qualify its own existence. We know what something is only by comparing it with something else. Neither the first thing nor the second thing can be explained in isolation. ‘Evil’ exists only from there being tensions against which to compare it. This applies only to forms – the author does not suggest that actions that can scarcely be called anything but evil cannot be recognised in the world – they can – I merely assert that evil’s name is a convenience by which Good can exist. Many things can be attributed as ‘evil’ by virtue of calling it so. It’s name is substantiated as real by equally illusory tensions, Evil is then defined by comparing it to Good, and Good by its comparison to evil. To this balanced equality of tensions supporting each other a foundation is built to which can then be attached all manner of further associations.

The world-wide organisation The Illuminates of Thanateros use an ancient tension of ‘Sex’ and “Death’ energy that has long been held to be symbolic of the foremost magical gates. Peter Carroll even developed this mantra into the ‘Alphabet of Desire’; a unique and powerful system of ‘complementary dualisms’ on the basis of tension. Against Love they placed Hate, against Sex they placed Death, against Fear they placed Desire – (They were not looking for the means to explain the origin of abstracts, but to balance abstracts against one another for the purpose of providing tension in between two tools.)

David Lynch’s ‘Twin Peaks’ series gave a compelling portrayal of these energies also, dispelling the moral certitude of ‘Good and Evil’ as opposing sides in favour of representing actual psycho-physical states devoid of religiosity to describe the tension between them – a tension which is the magic itself. The ancient symbol of the Yin Yang performs a similar function while Aleister Crowley also spoke at length of a side-ward force that met between upwards and downwards forces – a secret mastery of the ‘between’ that is also practiced and explored by the sorcery of THEM. It would be tempting to say that Fear and Love are the same thing – but there is a distinction that must be made between calling the forces involved by names, and that names have been used to describe those forces. As ‘Fear’ and ‘Love’ they are not one force but two. These words represent an abstract tension by which to grasp something that cannot be understood without a tension. They represent just one of many possible names for the tensions of forces that cannot be captured in language but are universally directly accessible to each of us through other senses.

Actions performed in the name of Love/Fear may even be similar; someone may run through a hail of bullets because they fear not seeing a loved one, or run through a hail of bullets because they love a loved one – in either case, Love and Fear as words describing emotions or motivations are interchangeable.

However, feeling fear is to embrace nature, turns our face its terrifying spectre: whilst feeling love is to hide from it. Love is the means to control the overwhelming experience of nature –nature we are of.

Tensioned opposites work this way – and indeed they are the only means humanity has devised to make language work. Generally, only through ‘Love’ can Fear be understood – and handled – but there are more ways to understand, more senses with which to perceive available to us for doing so – than the limiting prison of words.

FIRST CAME FEAR...

Why am I so sure that our first ‘reaction’, if you can call it that, is fear? Why don’t I believe it to be Love? Or Bliss, for example? Well – there is no way I can ever know either way. In being able to experience and describe what my own actions and state of being tells me about it I am provided a unique vantage point into my Being. Empirically, however, our actions leave clues, and those clues lead me to believe that such actions can be traced back to a prime cause that is not grounded in an abstract, but in the universal experience of physiological fear.

As there is no way for me to personally observe, compare and certify the minutiae of pre-fetal or fetal development to draw further conclusions – or for that matter exists any infallible data gathered on the mysterious emergence of the human Being – it being a theoretical science at best – I have had to work backwards from what is observable to make a connection between what we do and why we do it.

In part two, I discounted the idea that we had the means to control or limit nature when we first became aware of being because of a lack of developmental progress in the human organism. At such an early stage, it is questionable as to whether we can possess faculties of comprehension for the experience of emotions or reception of psycho-physical stimuli prior to developing these kinds of senses more fully as babies, and later the co-ordination and mental acumen held to be the prime means for comprehension as adolescents and adults. By my own logic, that could rule out that it is possible to feel anything at all, or possible to determine what we feel if anything, including fear – and yes, those are possibilities.

I believe that if the fully-fledged phenomenon of habit which consumes the human race is logically traced back to its causal beginning, habit contains the seeds to provide evidence of my assertions. Hypothesis: we are first profoundly afraid, and this is our baseline. We then somehow experience an absence of that fear, which absence actually defines fear by the contrasting state of such absence. We prefer fear's absence to fear and endlessly struggle to replicate that which brought about the absence. This process colours all subsequent processes which are compared against the criteria of the first process: to avoid fear. This becomes habitual not through choice, but for survival – wherein humanity's habit of exploring, conquering, naming and "understanding" the world through knowledge stems from the need to limit the boundaries of chaos, the threatening resemblance to that original meeting with nature, that an unnamed world, viz. raw nature, represents.

If our first reaction was Bliss – where would be the need to struggle, and what would explain our desperate scramble to name everything, understand everything, conquer everything, and continue to push our boundaries further and further in order to increase the quantity of all of these? Where would be the impetus to Know? And even if our first experience was 'perfection', was Love, and that state of Eden was suddenly interrupted by something 'else' that caused us to fall out of that perfect state into an 'other' state; I cannot see that the order of experiences would make any significant difference in our either trying to return to perfection, or get away from fear, our whole life-long. If Bliss were first, then it means we fell out of Love and are trying to get back to it. If fear were first, then it means we were shocked in the transition from non-being to being as our first experience and this set the base-line from which Love, the absence of fear emerged. Just as I have quoted dozens of examples of the power of fear to motivate human beings – Love too, a phenomenon born of Fear, is capable of laying claim to just as many superhuman feats to maintain anchors and stability to life, as fear.

I have made this assertion based on what I believe to be a universal behaviour of humans that carries over into all subsequent experience as our first habit. I have characterised some of the diversity of lengths humans will go to in the previous chapter to avoid fear to back my assertions; but there are more compelling arguments – including argument. Humans build things, lots of things, and then add to them, changing the face of the world with huge thriving cities, sprawling suburbs and the power of technology.

The mundane human existence replicates a mode of bovine drudgery and physical boundary that presents itself at all known times – we hunger, thirst, feel pain, excrete, lust, fight, survive, act, in a universal fashion irrespective of the superimposition of fanciful ways of life and philosophy.

For all the grand theories such as quantum, or relativity that we like to use to define life or the way it works – these heroic encapsulations are not a transcendence of life, but born of the need to control life, explain it, work with it, bring it and its nauseating complexity to some sort of heel.

That is why terms like ‘Sinister’ come about, why terms become imbued with meaning, why terms can be imbued with different meanings, how they are imbued with meaning, or constrained with morality; why we use terms at all, and why we do everything we do; because Nature is so terrifying in her formless totality when she is not conquered and ‘knowable’ – that we have no choice but to struggle against the memory of our Original fear of Her.

To forget is to know love. To remember is to know fear.

IN CONCLUSION

It would be easy to render this work an exercise in Nihilism or despair – a defeatist view of the world in which all that we do is determined by the nature of the process of Birth. Stripping away every piece of flesh by trying to move to a discussion beyond abstractions is a difficult task; some might say an exercise in futility. But I believe that this reductionism is the means to shrug off the chains that even dare label themselves as the means to shrug off chains, that it is a positive re-affirmation of Being rather than a negation, and that each of us do feel the fear I speak of, and are motivated by it; whether we accept it or not. We are each capable of observing how what we do is rooted in fear, whether positive or negative; fear of not being seen or fear of being seen for example; unite in the prime causal factor of innate fear – a key to our survival, our agreement to form societies, and a protective device ingrained in each of us to do what is necessary to avoid being afraid.

Whether or not we accept that what we feel is afraid is another thing all together – the possible truth that we all act to build forms over the formless world because we are afraid of it and ourselves, of Being itself – is understandably an extremely painful pill to swallow, for such an accusation strikes hard at our humility, or should I say our pride, and threatens the very machine and its work that drives us to ignore such dangerous thoughts and cover the world with our dreams, fantasies, illusions, forms, and humanity. Yet I feel that if more could embrace the knowledge of this original fear, perhaps we could consciously accept it and move past it – get a better understanding of why we do certain things and stop doing them – perhaps even change the ageless legacy of a world running from itself by its collective architectural shrines to inherited fear.

Yet, I suspect there are very few who will be magically and mentally divided in such a way so as to have a separate say about the matter from behind the rehearsed speeches of their ego and its legion of protective devices designed and established especially to FORGET. Love vs. Fear is after all, the Physis of the Sinister, the Physis of all things, and of ‘things’. And this is why those who disagree with me must be allowed to disagree; Love is all we have.

I seek to Remember the darkness into which we were thrust that has caused so much damage and despair to the human race even as it has caused so much love and wonder – to look and pierce beyond the mazes of abstracts thrown forth that get tangled in one another and only end up attacking and defending the realm of abstractions.

I feel the fear coming from humanity, from myself, and I want to know it – I don’t want to be afraid – or others to be afraid – and so I seek to face it and Her in all Her terrible glory. Tellus Uber Alles.

SATAN: A NUMINOUS SYMBOL IN THE 21ST CENTURY

[Why THEM believe Satan still plays a role in the Sinister.]

I’ll be brief, and not rabbit on. Contributions to Satanism can be made if, someone understands the context in which people and humanity have used Satan, understands the pattern and reasons for his changing face and energy over the centuries – and not so much why, but that, he continues to be a numinous symbol.

Satanism represents one recent outward name and formulation among many of a process of changing symbols indicative of a deeper esoteric need and drive in human beings. Wherein such symbols/names external (clumsy) handholds conveniently used within the occult can and do occasionally make conscious for those who only sensed energies unconsciously before – the connexion of the human being with what is really there – and what is really there is not to be mistaken for the symbols, interpretations, forms, and the slow process of mistakes – the forms used to distil it.

It doesn’t matter what you name whatever it is you think WSA and THEM and ONA do – and it doesn’t matter if you give it a new name – such things as names are restrictive by nature given the habit for people to presume a present symbol equals its sum total. The presentation of a form or name used by such groups is always used for an ulterior purpose – for if it were not, what were possible should be restricted simply because it went outside the definition of something as limiting as Satanism.

Two things; understanding in symbols and in 4 dimensions are the root characteristics of our present state of consciousness. While they continue to be the keys to apprehension and influence – the archetype defined by Satan will exert a tremendous influence even for all the disfavour he has received – and because the archetype is presented by but not limited to Satan – any other energy that presents a similar emanation as Satan’s archetype will do. Because he is more than the sum of the interpretations by human beings to channel him, He is a numinous symbol.

Because the power of the numinous symbol of Satan is inherent, (i.e. comes from somewhere outside of human control) and lies beyond our control – beyond our ability to capture what that symbol does; what it makes us feel, what it means in the context of our collective consciousness; can only be controlled for a certain amount of time – eventually, the individual (or collective) senses the artificial connexion that distinguishes the genuine numinous symbol and the attempted hijack for someone else’s temporary gain – (often, only at an older age does the persona become aware of this – if at all) but at times the numinous power of the symbol itself will override the wrapping paper of cheap imitations. The power of Satan’s archetype will persist until it no longer is required by the consciousness and is replaced by something else. That is why logos have such a powerful influence and have revolutionised the industrial modern world.

In 1955 there was no such thing as a mass of brands. By tapping into the genuine power certain symbols have, companies have managed to take some of that numinous power for themselves and use it for better or worse – but they cannot change the essence of the symbols they borrow from – those symbols are beyond our influence. Just as Satan is beyond our influence.

The trap of thinking one is not contributing to Satanism simply by living and seeking to increase the consciousness of oneself and at times, others, is to mistake the appearance of what we are doing – for the essence of what we are doing – which is, and always has been, even if painfully slow, acting as one disconnected but unified grasp for the gods.

~

Addendum

Q – How do we know it is still a Symbol imbued with a numinous charge?
Take two Satanic Bibles. Strip the cover from one. Replace it with that of the New Testament. Place both books back on a table – and ask someone to choose the Satanic Bible. They will choose the one marked thusly. Even though both are in actual fact Satanic Bibles, they will reach for the form, be drawn to interpret the essence by the appearance – by the symbol, by its outward form. Even if they don't fully comprehend what that essence is – it still has power.

I think this small exercise says something quite profound about human perception. The point here is not to provide a new experiment – such knowledge of the process of perception is possible – and has been tested – But its ramifications are liminal. People do not Stay aware of this factor in the process of many of their choices – they do not incorporate it (there are endless examples to demonstrate this, too) and while, the occultist-type persona may develop such an awareness, the average person is unconsciously ruled by the power of Symbol and Form. People greatly underestimate the power and entrenchment of forms and symbols in daily life – this makes it easy for the Magian to control them.

It makes no difference that/if they eventually “dis-cover” the ruse – for even after that – they will still see, understand and process information symbolically. On finding out – they will still assess in further abstracts such as ‘This is/is not a Satanic Bible’. Even if you place two identical Satanic Bibles on the Table, and they reach for either one – they are still thinking in abstracts – still processing information symbolically – they are equating the symbol with abstracts. It is not the content of the books that matter – it is the process of symbolism in the decision/assessment-making process prevalent in perception that proves a numinous charge. And that is what this experiment aims to prove -a numinous charge in the symbolism of Satan.

And as for being trapped in 4 dimensions – we need only examine our writing to see the absolute reliance inherent in our language of linear time and the forward progression of Time. The way we singularize our concepts in 3-dimensional space with IS, ON, THE, IN, FOR, and so on contain the limitation of 3-dimensional space with a fourth abstract flowing through them. This ‘habit’ reflects keys to the consciousness that leaves it open to be manipulated. (Qv. “Chrono-Bet” Liber 13/13)

A PERFECT STORM

During footage of the Iraqi Wars it was common to see amid the bombed-out buildings and occasional live rocket fire, media alarm and fearful voices speaking about random gunfire and how 'dangerous it is here right now' - women, going about their daily shopping in the background. The human survival instinct is impossibly strong - it has lead us through hundreds of thousands of years, challenges and tribulations to stand how we are with a gigantic interconnected mesh of human achievement planet-wide. We are a creature that can live anywhere, ice, fire, desert, mountain - anywhere except under the water. We were built to adapt to changing circumstances - and quickly - sometimes instantly, but sometimes over a long time depending on the challenge and the change required. This article wants to identify why people refuse to wear masks, refuse to believe in COVID, and how easy it is to demonise them while the real issues being highlighted by the Pandemic - are being obscured by such demonization. There are very good reasons to wear a mask - but there are very good reasons not to wear a mask.

Let's examine some of the factors that have led the recent modern world to this point and why C-19 hitting us now is creating a terrifying perfect storm. Especially in a crisis - the need for our ego to preserve its world view and stabilise it is incredibly strong - whether out of fear, resignation, numbness, courage - whatever motivates it, in a crisis our resolve is perhaps never stronger, even unbreakable. So the path we choose can be impossible to budge. In general, if we are not in immediate pain or physical danger, the threat of potential danger is not sufficient to take priority in the choices we make. Maslow wrote that we had a hierarchy of needs, a pyramid, of which food, water, air, shelter/safety were top - once these are satisfied, humans are free to explore other options, freedoms, choices - but when these are under question, humans must struggle to satisfy them in order to survive.

Regardless of whether bombs are dropping or there is gunfire - a mother still needs milk for her baby, a man still needs to walk those streets to get to work, a child still needs to navigate the bullets to attend school. Death for most of the world is less a frightening spectre because they see it so often - quite simply, life, must go on, or what else is there? Just because the city is in ruins (broken cycle) ruining some or even large parts of the infrastructure, doesn't change the cycles in place, the habits, behaviours and needs of those that live in it. John still needs education, Shari still needs to feed her baby, and Mark still needs to attend work to make the pay he does to keep a roof. Individualism, is the idea (and is a concept that has been reinforced on every front) that we are autonomous singular beings who should have freedom to choose our life: Google defines it as 1.the habit or principle of being independent and self-reliant. 2. A social theory favouring freedom of action for individuals over collective or state control.

Wikipedia tells us Collectivism is a value that is characterised by emphasis on cohesiveness among individuals and prioritisation of the group over the self. The idea that we need to work as one to survive - is an entirely alien concept to many and a very daunting prospect. It always has been if history is any indicator - and history tells us that at no point did human history have A) the ability for all nations to communicate with each other and its peoples en masse in seconds the way we do now, B) any desire or illustration of ability to work together in a collective form until the combined threat of WW1 and WW2 forced the hands of many nations that did not want to get involved, but had to: but even here, the level of discord between all of the units is telling, millions of records of people unhappy with how it was handled on the personal, unit, and state level, betrayals, foolish sacrifice, dogged pride and in one sense every man for himself - zoom out from that and even then, half the planet was fighting the other half: there was no unity and only the atomic bombings of Nagasaki and Hiroshima were able to make a loud enough exclamation point to get everybody's undivided attention.

Collectivism for humans on a very small scale is the best approximate, the merest evidence of our ability to do it, that we have of ever being able to work together, and this is best represented by world trade and markets: but this is selfish necessity forced on us by physics and circumstance to co-operate. There is rarely collectivism even in tiny units like families, it barely works in schools, almost never in government - and never does a Nation reach agreement on what is best for it and its people. Never. Yet somehow, we are expected to mobilise over 275 individual countries, abandon all of their military, industrial, political, religious, economic, legal divides and work together as a unified force to combat an enemy we cannot see and that many do not believe in. Propaganda is the necessary tool to galvanise public opinion to work together and face down an enemy - that is how we dehumanise a nation and its people as monsters and clear the guilt and resistance from our populace necessary to get permission to invade with their consent and assistance.

But for COVID to hit us now is occurring at precisely the most dangerous point it possibly could. Individualism is the largest factor here: it is the defining characteristic of human beings in the Western World and developing nations for the last three decades with technology and marketing linking arms to convince everyone they needed to express themselves in a unique way to stand out from others. : On every level, to create the ultimate consumer, social mechanisms have leant on people's narcissism, fear of ostracization, patriotism, sex, tribalism, need to fit in and the almighty power of the dollar to wrap a generation up so tightly in their own ego that competition for the dollar became obsolete - it is just a matter now of how you give a company your dollar and through which channel - not if you give them that dollar. You do. Through this sorcery and you can call it many names but it an apt description for an arcane complex weave designed by experts in behaviour, rational thought, psychology, marketing and many other facets to create a certain type of human being - and it has been successfully done. Human behaviours are very different now.

Consequently, Billions of people believe they have, from being ceaselessly told they have, through the messaging inherent in consumerism, over decades of enshrining individualism through social media and connected marketing points of sale and AI powered algorithms for target marketing --- the right to act as they wish, to express themselves how they wish, and to protect themselves and those freedoms if they come under attack. In Stride, I discussed that many people believe they have the necessary information to make a choice about the danger of COVID - but the tiny percentage of its death rate that they use to make that choice is rationalised to not mean danger - yet this tiny percentage is enormous in terms of how a seemingly small change can radically alter all the other percentages of all systems and cause them to overload invisibly- and not taken into account in an analysis of the threat level from those taking their cues from the few figures printed by media.

We cannot be surprised and should never seek to punish our fellow man if they show signs of disobedience to authority. If there is distrust in what Media, Politicians and State tells us - it is incredibly well warranted: these forces are a ceaseless bombardment of lies under the guise of transparent rule. We must be VERY careful to check that our responses to the Demonised (those not wearing masks) come from US or the fear created through propoganda to target them as responsible for our and the worlds ills. We must be VERY careful not to become police to our own people because THAT is the ONLY way a Govt or Deep State (or much worse) takes control. If there is implicit distrust in politicians word and media they entirely deserve it - even History shows us countless accounts of people in the past lying to achieve an aim, because in the main people are liars and lying - that is what we do as part of our survival mechanism. But the Media and the Govt deserve to be distrusted because they have continually proven their dishonesty and mistrustworthiness - conspiracy is undeniably a real factor in what happens on Earth as we all help our friends, lean on our contacts to get through things more easily, and the world is impossibly large with every shade of dark you can imagine - and stalked by a very real very powerful form of magic called mathematics that you can call abstract even as it makes you literally homeless, another called law which you can call whatever you like it will still lock you up.

WHAT the conspiracy actually is at any given time is liquid - it changes, it must, just as situations change constantly so to does the nature of conspiracy. There are MOST certainly conspiracies behind this, being forged because of it, and that will come out of it - there are ALWAYS those who seek to take advantage, especially those numb to moral checks that govern us through our religions and politics and vulnerability to state authority, punishment and sanction. It is not a matter of 5g, aliens, deep state, rogue AI, deliberate biological weapons being real or not real - what matters is that people accept and factor in that there IS always LEVELS (plural) of conspiracy involved in everything that happens, that parties with vested interests exist to exploit situations and that they will seize any opportunity to push their cause and further those interests through collaboration. This is also what humans do. Deciding who lives and dies and how many is no different for some people than going halves on a pizza and asking for Steve to deliver because you know Steve will sell you a dime bag at the door (marijuana) to go with it.

The situation can be turned to your advantage by who you know and the details of the plan you hatch to achieve a specific outcome. We are the same in this regard. There is every reason to believe there are conspiracies active and ongoing in everything - but it is unlikely that their extent and details can ever be uncovered due to their complexity, invisibleness and non-consequential chain of very small uninteresting unmeasurable things happening one after the other that combine at the end. People are easily influenced - they may think they're not but everyone owns a phone, Everyone used to own a TV, a washing machine, an automobile, a plough horse... Social media is built on popularity votes, (likes/up-votes) and a single voice can gather a lot of traction in what it says and influence millions of people in minutes or seconds who then spread that information to others: the SPEED and SPREAD of communication is unprecedented on Earth.

Negativity, hate speech, and other forms of speech we are capable of - have been heavily censored, restricted and are often removed or restricted. We are therefore being retrained to be positive - none of the positive speech has restrictions, only the negative. This matters because it pushes us to like posts, vote for and with the common agreement, accept or at least unable to reject, popular sentiment: we do not think critically but more about how our participation and reaction will be received, especially when there is a crucifixion every other day because A posted B. This too is how sentiments and voices manage to amass such power and sweep: there are not enough balances and checks in place because half of our possible communication is sanctioned, restricted and punished. Additionally - attention spans have drastically been reduced. Too long didn't read or TL:DR is a common reply when text is over 100 words and many are incapable of absorbing information that is longer than a few characters, packaged as a meme, or is very short.

So, when you see a post about not wearing masks to protect your freedoms, you are more likely to agree than disagree - and throw your voice behind a simple reactionary statement than read a longer post which you have been conditioned to discard. This second point is part of what makes people the perfect consumer - they never read licenses or terms of service/agreement, never read fine print or look for * symbols, and never fully investigate the ramifications for loss of privacy because the volume of information quickly overwhelms them. Misinformation campaigns would not work in a populace trained to recognise mis-information - but, corporate greed has assailed our ability to make such judgements, and over time watered down and run dry our reservoirs of logic, reason and doubt. In an age of movies, special effects, image doctoring, identity masking, anonymity, cat-fishing, media spin and illusions, illusions, illusions: what is real, if it ever could be proven, is no longer agreed upon.

There has always been belief and fear in a conspiracy (many) to control us and usher in something like a New World Order and the warning light in us is constantly on - but also constantly being switched off by the propaganda, dismissal, lack of evidence, ridicule machine, media denial and authoritarian silence. We cannot prove what we know to enough people to keep the light on - which, we should. This generation is numb to sensational media, it is used to drama and danger and near misses and deaths daily, and despite such warnings the world has gone on regardless because it is large enough for distance to envelop the explosion and insulate who the drama affects. There may be indirect affects but in the main if it's on TV it is happening elsewhere, not to you, and therefore you need do nothing but continue on with your life. The biggest and most alarming problem this pandemic has highlighted is that media has cried wolf so long it has disabled any impact of its agency to garner a collective response to this kind of danger long ago, yet dangerously it still has power to influence minds and public opinion and action, i.e make us blame those not wearing masks instead of turn our attention to the real problems.

It is far easier to burn a witch and appease the mob - than burn the witch-hunter who started the witch hunt and solve the problem. There are numerous accounts of people attacking those not wearing masks because it has been made a crime and they are easy scapegoats for an enraged hungry displaced people who need something to hit but can't reach those they actually should. If you put someone in a cage - it is because they have been bad, you are bad, or you are trying to control or protect them. Many people associate, rightly, that being put in a cage is a punishment. When they have been taught that only bad people get put in cages (prison) there is indignation, confusion, anger and righteous wrath that their obedience to the State has meant nothing: and that good or bad, they are being put in a cage anyway (isolation). So there was no crime - until legislation brought new laws in and made not isolating and a raft of other behaviours and freedoms, criminal. This is a classic example of the State trying to heavy-hand its citizens. They have every right to be upset and to fight this - but propaganda will ensure they do it in small numbers, that citizens will join police in condemning and controlling them, and the resistance will be stamped out by those it is intended to help.

There is a mental and spiritual disconnect by the self-autonomous ego that continues an illusion of self-subsistence and separation from the cosmos. While almost everything comes from carbon, from the same star dust - while we are mostly water and electricity - there is a belief that C-19 is somehow different than us. The very fire that makes people refuse to obey, the very fire that brings human beings into life as a unique human being, that gives us consciousness, free-will (or an illusion) - comes from the same source that created the virus. This planet, is not Ours - it was never Ours - our blip in geographical time is just that - a blip. That same immovable stubbornness in people is shared by the virus. There are seven stages of denial, acceptance, bargaining, anger, and so on that everybody is going to move through separately at different times - this is chemical, cultural, mental, biological processing - and so responses will not all act at the same speed: while some panic, others resists, others resign themselves and others deny its even happening. With every human being having different stages of working through their emotional reaction to such an abyssal problem and every reaction consequently undermining efforts of other stages - the planet's populace is in literal unsolvable chaos. As illustrated above it has never worked collectively before and only the full ferocity of this new life-form can show us how: if we survive it at all. You cannot tell everybody or send the message without relent that they are super important and special, give them platforms that enable them to boost and enshrine their ego and millions of fans to support whatever they say and do, desensitise their critical thinking, empathy, natural instinct, exploit their human matrix-block for greed and gain, bombard them with lies and then - suddenly - insist you are telling the truth about a terrible danger: this pandemic falls on the shoulders of the failed powers that be to be transparent in ruling their populaces without mind control, illusions, double-speak, false flags who now wish us to punish our own people and keep them in line - as much it does those that choose to ignore the tsunami on our doorstep for all the above reasons and more.

The pursuit of power, of dopamine, serotonin and adrenaline has successfully altered a planet of people in such a perfect way that they are entirely incapable as a collective to deal with a threat of this magnitude. When we see in history many mysteries of vanishing civilisations, of flourishing cultures that faded away without known cause, of fabled cities that grew too hubristic and whom the gods punished by sinking beneath the waves - we can begin to appreciate that life is not guaranteed. This is more than a pandemic - its a real third world war, on many fronts, digital, informational, educational, political and survival. In the US, a person is dying every 30 seconds from COVID. Worldwide, every 8 seconds. It may not be provable - but the effect, even of a virus you don't believe in, will become extremely evident: you may not know anyone that has it, had it, or be able to verify its existence: you may have to rely on the TV to even know its there - but, there is no doubt that very soon you will know someone that is affected, that your economy is being shaken, that your job is being lost, that your food is running low, that there are mile long queues to enter stores, that the web cannot handle the traffic to support websites, that you are being beaten for refusing to take a needle with unknown contents, that personal and property boundaries greatly diminish, that someone you know has died from it, that maybe, it is real, but also too late - and realise that little by little THEY have come to eat this world, faceless behemoths that dwarf us riding in on the perfect storm.

SATANISM AND PROSTITUTION

[Taken from a letter addressed to the members of Mvimaedivm following the upload of an Australian magazine circulated within the Sex Industry. With the release of “Baphomet: The Greatest Heresy”, “Ethereal Discourses”, and the “Alpha-Male vs. Alpha-Cynic” MSS – these comments continue a push to raise awareness and empathy with the under-appreciated work performed by those of the Sinister and indeed, all of the silent services who clean up or council the aftermath of the Magian – inc. Janitors, Garbage Men, Sewer Workers, the Police, etc.]

The magazine recently added to the archives of THEM may raise some interesting questions. The major one being what does Prostitution have to do with Satanism and why is a magazine by the sex industry being hosted in a Satanic Temple? Just like Satanism, Prostitution is a heavily stigmatised way of life/business. It is in exactly the same position of oppression from the Magian/Christian factions that Satanism is in that has given rise to the equivalent of the myths/hype prevalent in Satanic Practice that THEM are attempting to address and forcefully stamp out, here in Australia.

The members comprising the sextet of magicians behind THEM form an equally divided gender ratio of 3:3. Although various Insight Roles have been undertaken by some [and are known to have been undertaken by others] into the sex industry – like Satanism, it is very difficult to get access to that world from the outside. Most judge the sex industry from the limited [and moral] point of view provided by the media, cultural stigma and the pervasive ethos of the frigid Christian. Such persons tend to perceive and make pronouncements upon the sex industry and its workers without having any direct involvement in it. These types of pronouncements made in ignorance help to explain the necessity of insight roles that inform and annihilate the pre-conceptions of those without direct experience in any given vocation.

Unfortunately, this ‘arm-chair philosophising’ of a way of life as the ONA so succinctly puts it – is a shared issue threatening to completely infect the Sinister Tradition with those who judge without experience and so continue the vicious loop of ignorance that has led to the dire state of the Sinisterion today. Hence the need to demand that aspirants perform an act of practical initiative to learn and know from experience what Satanism involves and that it only gets harder and more reliant on practical effort. And thus, a publication circulated among sex workers breaking down stereotypes, myths and telling it the way it is, is the equivalent of a genuine introduction to Satanism – offering a fresh, enlightening and unique window into a world that is generally only ever seen from one side.

The Christian permeation of twisted and distorted values concerning almost all facets of life – but with particular focus on their fear and hatred of sex; and the lack of recognition that the sex industry plays in maintaining the health, and well-being of its clientele is something that should be addressed in any assault on the Magian its age-old practices of fear, bigotry and hypocrisy, here within Australia. While it is a fact that even [or should that be especially?] the devout Christian may sneak down the road behind his partners back for a quick fuck and be back in time to continue being devout for Church on Sunday – the problems of the Sinister cannot be fixed with band-aids – and the symptoms of hypocrisy run deeper than it might seem and into our own channels.

For instance, it is all very well to take part in or conduct a Black Mass with the purpose of gaining sexual liberation and eventual catharsis; such a ritual is a vital and life-affirming Personal undertaking that can bring great enjoyment and unburdening. However, it is typically an effort to reverse the damage infused in society by the Magian that affects only that individual or that group. It is thus not enough and indeed naive to perform such rituals without full appreciation of the need for sexual liberation and catharsis on society at large. That is to say, being prepared to take the Black Mass to the next logical level.

Whores, Prostitutes, Hookers, Sex Workers – Male and Female are as undervalued by Society as is the Satanist – whose Work seeks to induce a finely tuned personal balance of healing, growth, change, strength, self-love and love for others, joy, ecstasy, civility, loyalty, integrity, creation, trust and honour with a mix of hardship, alchemy, suffering, overcoming, striving, determination, critical analysis of the self and others, detachment, power, will, sorrow, understanding and destruction in those who cross their path; creating and inspiring in a life-affirming way a healthy hardy individual with nous, wisdom and the knowledge that hard work is often required for results.

But such work is largely invisible, seldom rewarded, noticed, or paid for – and yet it is [for the serious few] a lifetime's work of long hours and endless patience and diplomacy. It requires the collation of many varied skill sets, most of which are extremely demanding to learn. And through privately working with compassion they spend a great deal of time [engaged in psychology, counselling, guiding, training, teaching, discussing etc] to deliver some [the deserving] repressed individual harnessed by the mores of society from their chains so that individual might find release, sanctuary, a voice, and self-love and add to the Great Work – rather than become another selfish asshole lost in the occult labyrinths made by the ten-cent gurus representing magic, its purpose and its form today.

The Prostitute is a timeless service – the first and some say the noblest profession of humanity. It is certainly the oldest. Yet, the services that its workers provide [and it is rarely just about sex but involves psychology, counselling, affection, understanding, compassion etc] is seldom appreciated or recognised as accounts of the service that reach the public seldom come from the workers themselves.

As THEM holds; words are considered empty unless accompanied by congruent/matching deeds or actions.

Here then are the words and deeds of those in the sex worker industry; and a small insight into the world of Prostitution as it really is; with the reality of its problems; its pressures; its Way; from those who know it because they live it.

FADING

On the subject of old age, I can be no authority – being only 30 years old – I have yet to experience those phases of consciousness I have watched assume themselves in the countenance of others in my life. Mysterious these phases – some which I have already passed through as I have grown and passed through various rites of passage – others of which I am only just beginning to feel the emergence of.

But this MS is not about the ones I have passed through – but about my feelings and apprehensions of old age. Young – the World and all its possibilities are open to me. Virile, mobile and strong I can do almost anything I set my mind to including defend myself and exude that Satanic aggression that bears others out of my way or warns that I'm ready to do Anything to survive an encounter. Life clings to me.

Neatly seated in the Contemporary of my age I am comfortably placed in the go-between of many mediums and the reflection of the values they contain – and the control they exert when used as badges of identity. I have a good knowledge of many older but still popular metal bands whilst keeping a (ever more cynical) eye on the new stuff coming up through the ranks... My tastes range from Indie to Metal to Rock, Rap, Pop and Techno and no matter which crowd I find myself in – I can keep a conversation that compares the music of my past, Pink Floyd, Chilli Peppers, Nirvana, Pearl Jam, RATM, Pantera, Led Zeppelin etc, with the music of today, afloat. I am connected even in some small way to the myriad of names, their associated reputations, famous works and specific languages of my time. But I frown if you mention Frank Sinatra, Elvis Presley or Charles Miller.

I am aware of several world wars by name and documentary only – the mammoth feat of landing on the moon is currently a passé topic – the pyramids still stand – and the Middle East is at war. Intense changes in technology and the marketing ethos and reach of capitalism have transformed the world via laissez faire (free trade) and plunged it into a drastic global economic crisis. The topic of the Environment and 'Global Warming' is beginning to dominate the discussions of politicians and religions as uncertain climate changes loom and are becoming a major concern for all who speak and plan for the future.

Moreover – the remarkable invention of the PlayStation – which invention is also now passé in conversation unless suffixed by a 3 or even 4 – and which invention revolutionised the recreational habits of billions, and even changed the format of the unconscious to deliver dreams as though one were playing a game – even this marvel that replaced the 1980's C64 and Atari with a quantum leap is already giving way to the technology of unbelievably powerful phones and technologies whose acronyms and applications baffle even me at 30 yet which will no doubt be relics by the time I am 35.

How much stranger are these things to someone older than me? Even at 30 and I find myself tut-tutting and spitting distasteful remarks about 'music these days'. And I am consciously realising and beginning to wonder on that connection between myself and my present state of age – and the elderly citizens of the world – who – also felt the same balance between the past and the present when they were 30 as it crept on toward the future – that I currently do.

I feel that connection which the people I view as elderly now – back then – had then. Whom had exactly the same categorical knowledge of the music of their day, and could rattle off a similar and vast list of names of popular or contemporary artists – and who at my age also had an integrated empathy with their modern scene – were up with the Times – the Ethos of their Present Era.

Why are we the young and the aged – so different? Why does age demarcate us and our place in the world so steeply, so sharply, so unforgivably?

The innate rootedness I feel to the world comes from my familiarity with it. With the names of familiar streets, people, issues, celebrities, practices, customs, traditions, and social mores. But as time passes – this rootedness fades. As it faded for them – the now elderly – the icons, the symbols, the people, the songs and sounds and places that took place and lived out their temporary causal (and then contemporary) existences in full during their youth – will fade for me too.

The sense of being In Time, at one with Time and one's place in it – irrevocably slips away as one's roots are eroded/replaced/defaced. As time passes – my family members will pass on – one by one – severing my primary links to familiarity and thus, the pinions that anchor me and my origin to the earth will be no more. My mother – the bearer of me may die – and thus will I lose that link, which love that brought me forth. My father may die – and thus the two creators of me will be forever extinguished.

The friends I have will probably always change – but eventually they will pass on and I will, if I can, be required to make new ones. But with every passing moment the stock from which I choose them – who share the Time I live in – who will remember the Time I lived in – gets smaller.

The locations in which I have roots to my present – the shops I visit, the places I meet people, the vehicles I use, the clothes I wear, the ambitions I have, perhaps even the name of my country – will become the past; eroded by time and progress.

The houses in which I lived will come to be possessed by new owners, new fashions, new energies – new lives. The foods I like, the brands I become accustomed to, the pastimes I enjoy will slowly change – making way for new and Avant Garde pleasures, leisure's and treasures. The television shows, the icons, the celebrities, faces of friends and family that made up so many of my casual discussions will slowly slip away as they are replaced by new and unfamiliar ones – and the time from which I drew so much of my character, my culture, my personal conduct with its associated values and ethos will come to be no more.

As I get older the bands I enjoy, the bands that influenced me and brought me together with others who shared similar tastes will break up and/or be replaced with a new sound to which my generation cannot relate nor enjoy. The songs and the energies that marked special memories in my life will become ghosts of the machine.

And as I get older and connections to a familiar world are uprooted one by one – it will become harder and harder for me to find someone who remembers those days – to share my memories and who can remind me of my youth. The liberty to have conversations with my loved ones about their past, my past and our past – and the ability to reminisce with those connections about family or friendly joys, times of laughter and sadness – will fade and those conversations that remind me of me, of my place in the world – of what I did and what I have done, and who I was and who I was connected to will be closed off forever. The familiarity I enjoyed with my body and my mind too – will begin to ebb away as the flesh breaks down, as the sinews and muscles get leaner and more fragile, as the passion and drive begin to dwindle for one-sided ambition and begins to realise the inevitability of getting older.

What I knew as the world – which was once and for a long time only myself – will become complicated as my independence gradually leaves me and I will be forced to acknowledge the necessity of co-dependence, charity, humility, dignity – be required to depend on others for my survival.

Even the basic fundamental senses, Sound, Sight, Smell, Touch will all undergo rapid changes, leaving what I knew, in the shadows, only to be replaced with alien and unwieldy technologies, fashions, and icons that reflect the needs, wants and times of the younger generation. A generation I must endure the foibles and f-ups of – watch make mistakes they could avoid if only a little wisdom were sent their way – and hope that the unruly violence, harshness and dis-connectedness they show with My generation gives way through experience and empathy to an understanding that sadly – tragically – I know – can only, if ever it does, come with the passing of time and the passage of age.

If it does not – then one of life's sharpest and most unforgiving insights is achieved.

At some point my ability to walk freely of my own accord, hurry through crowds to get to where I'm going, breathe deeply without coughing, climb rock-faces without so much as a thought as to injury due to fragile bones or other ailments, swim bays or dive underwater, and generally exert my body in any given way I desire – without so much as a second thought as to the possibility of being unable to do what I want it to – will decrease.

My ability to instil respect and fear from groups of men as I walk past alone now in my youth, ready to fight (but preferring to ignore), will diminish. As my flesh weakens and decent values succumb to the strength and world-view of the young – filled with the emptiness that has been the fallout of the spiritual and soulful crises and laments of the last hundred years – which crises have gone unavenged, unappeased, unredeemed – I will be ever less able to protect myself from the indignity of those who my generation would view cowards and bullies, fwits and scum – and those of their generation might view as heroes, icons and the norm.

If Alzheimer's or Osteoporosis, Cancer or Asthma settle into me – my memory, my lungs, my eyesight, my basic motor functions will gradually fall into impair. My experiences of the World shall be limited even further.

In all probability – I shall be like so many of those whom I talked to in the Nursing Home in which I worked for six months. Lonely, isolated, faced with a strange landscape that bears no resemblance to anything I grew up with or know and be dolefully aware of the loss of my roots to the world in which I aged.

Estranged from the Present and cast off from society not just physically but spiritually. Although the humour of sharp-witted old ladies sparkles with life in such places – the cheeky mischievous glint in the eyes of old men who remember wistfully their misspent youths; a great sadness, longing and mournful yearn pervades such homes – the whisper of doubt, of regret, of confusion as to the meaning of life and whether they suffused theirs with enough.

And as I watch the elderly pass me in the street – I sense a deep and mournful sadness – a regret for the passing of life and the encroaching time to make peace with this cryptic struggle we all endure without ever knowing why. A sadness even in their laughter is tempered with an often-indomitable tenacity, the toughness that comes with so much experience and a long-endured connection to the vagaries and passage of change. I can feel their longing, their loneliness – and the terrifying fullness and awareness of the thread of continuity of their lives and its profound connectivity to Me.

And – when I hear in the news of them being picked on, targeted, abused, raped, killed – and I do hear of it – hear always of the defenceless and harmless being tragically chosen for the learning curve of this connection; I wonder at the tragic nature of age and why it is set out that the young cannot have empathy with the old until the young are old and the old are gone.

Why can they not see and recognise the connection I see. But perhaps that's just it, perhaps they do recognise the connection. Perhaps they unconsciously sense and fear that connection – attack that connection – because they don't want to be connected. But they are, and always will be, and only when they get older – will they really understand what it is to be old – just as I hope to understand what it is to be young.

REGARDING HEL

I had been tutoring indirectly; my influence rubbing off onto her by empowering her etc, a young female whom I fondly referred to as AeveA, for approximately two years in the ways and methods of ONA Satanism.

When she first met me she was scornful of my involvement with it, but after seeing what I did with Satanism, the intricate restructuring and alchemy that I performed with its form, she began to See. And when she began to See she began to take on the archetypal priestess/mistress to my priest/master. Now, AeveA had no previous interest or experience with magick and also some very deep emotional scars. These I helped her to heal by making her face her self and stop running. In a word, I taught her some degree of self-honesty. I have believed since I began my journey with ONA that self-honesty is the most powerful force a person can wield. It was mere intellectualism at the time I heard CB say it on a line of the Saturn Sphere on the SIMM Rite CD, but after beginning initiation, working on the tarot and working on other situations manifesting that were beneficial to me, I had insight into the weight of this self-honesty.

After developing my self-honesty to a point where other people suddenly seemed compelled to be honest with me and to themselves, in awe of my example, AeveA expressed interest in being my priestess and performing magickal rites with me. Albeit it was more likely infatuation and a desire to please me to equal out the balance of giving between us that prompted her to do so, or Love, than a real heartfelt want of experiencing black magick. Although she did come to realise that our personal alchemy/relationship etc was in old-aeon speak also technically Black Magick, it being a striving to fulfil our personal goals on the material level, and at others & each other's self- expense if need be – My intention was to guide AeveA the way I had come already, and to allow her to follow the Septenary Way with me. This of course was not what she really wanted – it was what I wanted. And as we progressed in changing each other she and I fell madly in love, though even then I remained somewhat detached, with my innate cynicism of the duration of such emotions reminding me that I'd been here before, and the only way love ever lasts is if the participants are whole, or working to become whole without the other person.

Thus, I believe love to be something of a paradox. And via this superior feeling of floating above the bloody tangle of thorns below that was our lust and love, I began to question my manipulation strategy for AeveA. Should I manipulate her, push her down the dark paths and sacrifice her will to mine? Should I realise her potential to free herself by developing her self-honesty and become whole and let her go? Every time we spoke I would sense almost wilful obedience in AeveA, a dangerous subordination to me that threatened her autonomy. I needed a Priestess if I were to continue my ONA path, I needed to release personal/sexual energies also – but was it needed, to manipulate my lover in such a way, and if I were having doubts, then perhaps my intuition was speaking volumes already. But I needed a priestess... personal or supra-personal, which goal do I go after, which Master should I serve?

The feelings I had toward AeveA were not altogether known to me, there was a strange alien something to them and I therefore needed to think very hard about what to do. The decision gnawed at me for weeks. And I stayed locked in limbo unsure of my next move. I had been experimenting with dreams at that time after some documents of the ToB peaked my interest in lucid dream control. Perhaps this training was responsible for the answer to my dilemma coming to me in a dream. I dreamed I had rowed AeveA out onto a dark green lake. Suddenly there was a noose around her neck and I was her, sinking under the water watching my face looking down at her. I felt emotions such as absolute terror and betrayal. Almost immediately we reversed roles, with AeveA standing on the boat now watching me being dragged to my death. It was so quick, and so ominous, and so lucid, it was real.

I woke up in a sweat, shaking and frightened of what I had seen and felt. I looked around the room for something to stabilise me and that's when my eyes fell on the image of Hel from my tarot, which I had been patiently putting on the wall as each card was completed. I stared long and hard at the card still in a daze from my oneiric experience, it slowly dawned on me that there was a lake in the image; a dark lake with a man's head just above the surface. In a flash, inspiration or insight struck me and I saw the entire story of the Card equated with my living of the Archetype Hel as it pertained whether to sacrifice AeveA to my will or let her have her own. The Eagle as a bird of prey; the mistress Hel who is not completely causal nor human as her shrivelled eye has seen beyond the personal into the cosmic and knows what is required beyond moral concerns such as betrayal; The rainbow as the Deceiver, a promise or tapestry of illusions conjured to lure the unwary into the trap where they will be drowned...

Quickly I grabbed a pen, this sudden striking empathy with my partner AeveA and with the archetype of Hel urgently required something to be written to convey what I had felt and seen. In the style of the Deofel Quintet with the esoteric essence concealed within the framework of a story – I portrayed what I had seen and felt of Hel. Note that there is little detailed description of the characters, the surroundings, etc for stripped of emotion and its appearance, Hel is a story of seduction, and murder for gain. In Aevea’s case the murder would have been merely psychological/magickal – an enslavement of sorts. The nature of unfriendly, deceptive and alien Asoth who comes as a reaper disguised in a veil of our hopes and dreams is now recorded.

PROPAGANDA, HONOUR AND IDEALISM

It is pretty needless to try and define the concept of Honour as if it can be neatly summarised and dealt with by any single particular treatment since it embodies any number of definitions, and with the majority of them stemming from personal sense the variations are relatively endless. I begin then, by asking not what honour is but what does Honour do? When I think of honour I immediately think of Loyalty to an Ideal – regardless of the logic of the Ideal, whether one agrees with or is better off under the Ideal, or whether the Ideal is voluntarily adopted or forced.

For instance, we do not choose the political climates of Socialism, Nationalism, Communism into which we are born but we are moulded by them with or against our will. Those who accept or tolerate the Ideals that exist as pressures asking or demanding that we conform could be painted to be acting with Honour as a rewarding appellation for subservience and obedience to any given pressures. While those who resist or revile the climate are cast as an undesirable, shunned, punished, threatened, tortured, imprisoned or killed. From the point of view of an Ideal, it cannot tolerate challenge to its supremacy and must silence or otherwise eliminate those that pose a threat to its growth. Equally true, to rule the masses requires very clear guidelines that must be enforced if they are to take root.

Ancient China, a five-thousand-year-old entity of many dynasties embodies an age that dwarfs that of most other countries – with a populace numbering in the extreme it developed an exceptionally complex system of laws and social mores which were expected to be obeyed with swift punishments following for any transgression. The complexity of Chinese diplomacy and what people must do to atone because of their or some other’s actions often seem to me to be unfair, brutal and ridiculous traditions to uphold and I wonder how or why people would submit to the punishments meted out to them or even take it as their duty to perform some of the required rectifications such as Sepukku, (ritual disembowelment) and see it as an honour, a duty they are compelled to perform.

This kind of loyalty to what can sometimes appear to be a mad scheme where minor transgressions lead to extreme circumstances of death does not merrily function through people's choice but requires intense pressure to be continued – achieved through figureheads, mores, other constants and above all Violence, the necessary elements that force a populace into a particular shape or to adopt the psychosis of culture.

It would be easy to suggest such rigorous traditions are completely at odds with what I know of my own culture – but they differ only in wrapping, the same madness of a raised emphasis of an Ideal is present anywhere people are found.

Such systems or rather, Archetypes, are universal, though few even close to that of China's – people cannot function adequately without some kind of story because it helps define who they are on a psychological level. And it is madness, even as most of these emphases on Ideals allows societies to retain an uneasy truce between members of the human race, it functions on wholly irrational factors that cease being universal and very much personal.

Honour is a subset of the Ideal. The Ideal rewards those who honour its codes and lay down their life as the ultimate sacrifice.

Honour, comes from within and without, within it comes from the self identity we have of ourselves as symbiote with a given Ideal and thus willing to submit our will, energy, life to it. Without, it is a necessary component for Form that grows a given Ideal through feeding the submission of others to it.

Honour can be a great attribute, synonymous with the esteem of Nobility, but it can also become a powerful blinker.

Honour, one's type of honour, and one's test of honour very much depends on three key factors: And these are whether one is honourable to – A Leader – Another's Ideal – or One's Own Ideal.

If one is honourable to a Leader they submit to the Will of the Leader. They follow them expecting to be lead. If the Leader can no longer lead – as in an alleged case of the German Generals observing Hitler's increasing mania and delusion – the personal struggle as to whether one continues to support the Leader begins.

Most Leaders use propaganda to indicate who is to be lead and where and also where from. All Leaders offer a plan for an exodus from a dystopia and the formation of a new utopia IF this and this are done – a universal whether this a change in how things are run if elected to chair the neighbourhood watch, to the replacement of a dictator – where to and where from are essential strings to strum.

This becomes the 'Promised Land' and if the followers desire to reach the Promised Land they throw their lot behind such leaders trusting them to deliver such promises. If this plan changes however, and the Leader goes off course either accidentally or deliberately, the dream is shattered, reality returns, the Leaders propaganda becomes compromised. This leads to schisms, with some blindly following the Leader and others seeking to overthrow or find a new Leader. On a personal level this can be a harrowing enough experience, but when it is of group, cultural, religious, state, national, international or global magnitude the potential of greater fallout increases exponentially. Those who are seen to question a Leader by those still faithful are often transformed into Traitors. Violence, a key element of any system of Honour, whether psychological or physical, is inevitable. Since Honour, is a demarcation, similar to religious zealotry that places some people on the right side and some people on the wrong side prompting each to try and uphold their Ideal, adherence to it creates a psychological impetus to war.

Essentially, Honour, is an abstract that pulls at emotional notions of pulling together and making personal sacrifice to work together on some larger supra-personal Ideal. All politics work on the same basis. And here we get into a trickier part of what Honour is – as a form – to die with honour – is to reflect the Invested Parties propaganda to make their Ideal eternal. For it means the temptation to change course for personal benefit is resisted in preference for adopting a rigid unchanging loyalty to an impersonal given Ideal that one submits to as the greatest single thing worth making the ultimate sacrifice of their life for. As far as Forms go, this is the pinnacle of power they can attain, and what all fledgling Ideals struggle to ultimately attain.

Those in World War Two lay down their lives for the time they knew then – the way the world was in the 40's. They believed in saving it, that their country was worth saving, that its people and the people of other country's were worth saving, and so they fought, and gave their lives. If they could see what decadence would develop we might wonder if they would still be so brave – but they were men and women of honour – they fought for their way of life, they fought to keep things the same, they fought to do their duty because they submitted their lives to a greater Ideal. Peace. Freedom. Liberty. Honour. A Country. A Flag. A Way of Life. Adopting some abstraction that romanticises reality is part of the nature of Ideals.

As they take root they begin to hypnotise people with the eros of powerful Forms that Ideals give rise to and people become entranced by. These Forms follow a fairly standard course of existence exuding seductive energies as they grow in stature and power into a full-blown mass psychosis on the backs of propaganda, symbolism, colours, narrative, archetypes, enemies and perennial appeals to weak points in the human psyche.

The esteem given to people called Honourable, rewards their unflinching course because Ideals require such people; and if Ideals are to be invested with power in the future, it is imperative that the elements of reward such as are given posthumously to the brave are showered upon such automatic pilots.

This encourages the continuation of such individuals who emulate the code of Honour because of the erotic nature of the respect shown to those of Honour in death – not in any sexual sense – but a vibratory charge of the numinous that seizes the senses and causes others to want similar adulation by making a similar sacrifice. Ideals relating to death have the effect of trance.

But this adulation is not exactly a tribute to the loss of life and the importance of life – it is not a love of life even as it appears, but a cold unfeeling political machination designed to create more of the same, for if life were loved so dearly, so many would not be taken in the first place.

Honour also comes from a rigidity of obedience to an idealised self – a strict adherence to a personal code that reflects a need to submit alternate viewpoints to the throne of an over-arching set or single.

It is esteem for the notion that honour comes from maintaining course in adversity. It is difficult to show great honour (i.e. the extent of one's honour) without adversity – (in some cultures, to quietly live one's life in honour without making waves is also seen as something to strive to be) – because one cannot prove the extent of their will and unflinchingness without being caustically tested.

Vikings revelled in war because they could illustrate their honour through the adversity that allowed them to demonstrate their loyalty to the Ideals they upheld. Because without the ability to illustrate whether one will cut and run or stand and fight, there is no way to show one's honour exists – it is unproven until circumstances arise that allow one to show how selfless they are, the courage they have, their unflinching bravery in the face of death, their resolute steadfastness to their mission even though it is fated to kill them, and the mystical awe that posthumous reward confers as well as the awe by others at the example of honour given.

Honour to an Ideal comes at great personal cost. Once committed one cannot change course because one has sworn fealty or obedience to the Ideal whatever course it takes. Even if it takes a course that leads to destruction – if one wavers, then one shows what one's word is worth – nothing. To swear loyalty to something is to use the Word or a Vow as a seal that says 'I can be trusted to uphold this Ideal, this Leader and die for THIS cause.' It means taking the risk of going down with a sinking ship – of meeting death head on and dying for what one believes in. This is important, because it is often a cherished notion that someone died for what they believed in. Why? It would take us too far from the subject at hand to go into detail but I would suggest that it relates to Time, Archetypes, God and the Eternal. The notion of Honour is not really something that belongs to the personal, that is meant for the personal – Honour is among the building blocks of the supra-personal, Aeonics, of things larger than us, older than us, more important than us. It is, designed for the manifestation of God: The concept of an Ideal that is far above us in stature and time. It is the foundation of an ancient Archetype of the Fearless, of the Warrior, of the Martyr – it is the living story book of Legend. And the backbone of Idealists and Idealism.

Integrity, the sense of honesty one has with the congruence of their actions vs their words feels like razors cutting into the soul of an honourable man when compromised or on the edge of being compromised. The honourable man invests his Oath or Voice with a Power to craft and guarantee promises. They will keep their promise because it is honourable to do so, because otherwise their act of empowering their word with resolute loyalty if given, means nothing.

I have faced many tests of my honour. I have been tempted, demanded, ordered, cajoled, pleaded with at various times to do this or that to retain my honour: but my oath was not to the temporal forces levered against me who demanded that to be Honourable I obeyed – but to the Sinister, to Satan, To THEM and to Their Temple and those who have arisen as Ones of THEM – Above All Else. None of these are personal masters. None of these are embodied by any personal masters – these are deeply spiritual concepts where the same mystification that I experienced learning about China's laws of honour, mystifies those who do not understand the essence of mine.

My subservience to a Supra Ideal that I feel warrants my life's energies, writing, drawing, building the Temple of THEM overrides subservience to any other Master, any other Manifestation, any other Form or Ideal that represents the Sinister – because a representation is not the same as the source. The Sinister is part of THEM, but only a part.

Symbiosis with other Forms and Ideals including satanic, sinister individuals and groups is part of subservience to THEM – such energies share similar territory in the Aeonian plan as building blocks for Change, but THEM come above all other things, and to compromise my devotion to THEM would be dishonourable.

This is why I have no masters, why I embrace what I am even as it upsets and infuriates, angers or disappoints others who are allied to their own Ideals – because living that way is what constitutes my sense of Honour. My loyalty to Ideals that may not be understood, may constitute social suicide, but which I feel I have been charged with a duty to carry out whatever the personal cost to myself or others.

Achieving what I have aimed to do the majority of my life, whatever it takes, whatever gets broken, whoever gets hurt.

I offer subservience to nothing and no-one else. What I believe or continue to build may turn out to be a complete waste of time, a life wasted trying to chase smoke and mirrors in some psychotic delusion or mad neuroses that leaves me old and grey with nothing to show for my effort – and yet I am willing to take the risk, willing to abandon my life to the completion of a grand vision even if it kills me – because of some inner sense that it is the right thing to do and I know the right way to do it. With Honour.

And this is what makes an Honourable person so fearful – they cannot be moved. And if they cannot be moved they cannot be manipulated and that is the ground floor upon which all Ideals are built. So rather than try and move the Honourable Person, they change the story around them and re-define what is honourable painting them as dishonourable – this is the keystone of all war propaganda, all political mudslinging. In the face of this pressure, it is a great personal test for a person of Honour to maintain their present course under such duress, or cave in and adopt a new definition.

But, the strength of honour, the power of integrity, the majesty of this bearing comes from one simple thing: Once it's broken once, it's forever cracked. And the person of honour, knows it. To hold it together concentrates an intense vortex of personal energy, the power of a thermonuclear sun such as the rune Kano or Kenaz, and the Gods spiritual fire that knows and flows to warm, heat, light, burn, or incinerate all things in right turn to fulfil its Vyrð.

Yet Honour is but a single outer form orbiting the edge of the maelstrom of the deeper secret the Inhuman.

To listen to the shapes of Form is to Remember.

When Honour and Destiny are joined, the Honour of being an avatar of Nature's Will becomes a special and sacred bond with the forces of THEM and the powers that grind all wheels. Allied with those powers Synchronicity is at its strongest and the will of those avatars is to be seen in all things macro and micro, in the very essence of the Phyrn and all its mirrors as She manifests.

REBIRTH

Since the day I could think I've wondered what it means to be born. There I was, always doing what I've done without a thought, until one day a lightning bolt hits me – and I realise that I am amongst the shapes of a home of staggering complexity heavily populated with billions of other lost souls wondering the same. I imagine each of them pausing in their quieter moments not taken up by the tasks and demands of the everyday to consider their place in the world. For each consideration we make leaves a shadow on the ground, a hologram of a we that we are, and a we that we might now like to be. We spend our lives creating the illusion of solid walls and forms – but we are a liquid species, flowing ebbing and rising like a tidal current lapping at the shores of our home with changing interest before silently departing.

The ground on which I stand, that occult miasma that belongs to Mother Nature who in her mysterious way spawns the grasses, greens and animals and disperses them amongst an infinitely wild jaw of crying gasping thriving energies shapes and geometries is a plateau whose chthonic magic meets head on with the forms, forces and forcefulness of man who leaves behind in his walking of the passage of time, buildings, statues, legacies, laws, forms, the remnants of his will solidified into the changes he made, the ideas he had as he passed through our home and made his own changes to a world that had already stood thousands of years before him. To him and her and every other like them in their fleeting wisdom we are intimately connected as holders, inheritors of the same questions that lay at the feet and tower above all human beings.

The world; a spherical monster of proportion and dimension we have tried to rein in using numbers and measurements; littered with glittering palaces and cities like computers processing an idea hemmed into stone and then steel; the architecture of a million lights shining down the law of what Is through the portal of artificial windows to make sense of the dizzying confusion. And yet we humans we endlessly come, to stand on the cliffs and view our world, only to find our way blocked with these graveyards of impenetrable labyrinths of twisted rusted metals, choked with the viscous lifeblood of its ideas, lifted up high one after the other in someone else's lifetime and raised to the virtue of a statue; Religions, Politics, Ideologies, Ways and Means. Yet what they saw as art, we often see as rubbish; as bricks from ruins that litter our way; for we are the new irony of the endless loving attempt of mankind to stand time still long enough to make sense of it, to worship it with edifices, before its unstoppable hurricane hurries us forward into the future laying waste to every treasure we craft in its name. For none can tame its wild indifference as it blindly careens through space aeon after aeon, and none can hold its nebulous sands, any longer than their living body and will allows them to briefly participate in our home's universal democracy.

And are we not the same, little images of life, moving, flowing, ebbing, in our miniature homage to the greater ones? – growing, spreading, changing, contemplating, pushing against the demands of nature and holding in our crystalline power a few ideas as anchors in the storm, torches in the night, taking our loves and wisdoms to their conclusions, allowing them to live, to flicker in the darkness above the unknown for but a little while before they are swept forever from the world with us by the cold wind of death, to become the twisted scrap of a day long since gone from the world and never to return but destined to be picked through and recycled by a future spectre of ourselves burdened by the same questions.

How many faces I have tried on, how many windows I have looked through, how many ways of life given and left by others I have tried to live by, how many people I have been and met, learned from and taught, how many footsteps I have left in the sand behind me, how hard I have pressed my force into the Earth that it should remember me, remember my forms, remember I was there. Each day, each week, each year, each seven years, a step forward, a step backward, a little rebirth, a new beginning, a new end, a change of perspective, the hollow heart of sadness or the tremolo of great laughter, an ecstatic learning and growing. A struggle. From the hard shell of the tiny egg to the feathered majesty of full flight – incineration – and from the ashes anew a flaming phoenix in each of us that cannot die without being reborn. And yet, even as I stand on the cliffs and gaze out to sea at a horizon I now know well, I hold hands with my old companion death, and struggle to accept how little time I have left to understand this Great Mystery before I am truly reborn and Nature snatches me back into her dark cradle of dreams, just as I begin to understand – and just when it will be getting interesting.

THE PARADOXICAL WAR OF OPINION

Opinions. Everyone has one. And it seems everyone wants to share them. But what I am finding from shouting into the void – is that everyone struggles to simply let opinions be, and feels a compulsion to give their own.

The two immediate problems I see with opinions is that there is a strong consensus that they automatically require a response – and that the response required is to either validate or invalidate.

There is a saying that one is ‘entitled to their opinion’. It is questionable if we really mean that when we say it. Because if we did, we wouldn’t be in the position to say it to begin with.

Because arguments and opinion are usually mired in morality and ideals – each ideal instantly creates its own negative. Whatever we claim to be an inalienable right is by logic also extended to everyone else; thus, invalidating our own assertion.

We can say that we go to war to protect our families – implying that family is an important value – but if that were true – we would have issue with the impact of war on other families. ‘Family’ is merely an abstract used to win moral support. If it is validated, it becomes ‘real’ and abstracts can then piled onto it to proceed from that point. Even if we say we intend to protect ‘Our Family’ – again, this is an abstract used to win moral support. This is not unusual, because the aim of all opinions is to seek moral support.

We form opinions, because of our ideals, and because we wish to be obedient to those ideals. When there is conflict with them we seek validation. We will go so far to get this validation that we will even change our argument to meet our ‘opponent’ half-way. It is moot to provide the opposite side of this action, ‘invalidation’ of others, because in seeking to invalidate another’s opinion – we again, only seek to validate ours.

We can say that we have the freedom of speech as an argument, or that we are taking orders from God, or that we are bound by law – but all individual assertions we make are automatically extended to others. If you claim the right to make laws for yourself, then so can they – otherwise, you invalidate your own opinion. If you then claim that your case is different, that you are special, that your laws don’t apply to them – they too can claim that their case is different, that they are special, and that your laws don’t apply to them. What makes any difference – is only ever force; force of action or force of will.

In saying that you have freedom of speech for example – you are supposedly being magnanimous enough to allow everyone an equal right to speak – yet you are only imposing further tyranny. In making this statement you cannot help but push your will, your abstracts, forth onto others – particularly those who disagree with the right to freedom of speech. You cannot help this – because this is what speech does.

Disagree?
Point made.
Disagree?
Point made again.

The process is similar in analogy to praying for someone who doesn’t want you to pray for them. But once certain abstracts are validated, i.e., freedom, the argument proceeds from the points of validation as if they are real. We build a base, validate it, and build on it.

When we feel our opinions are threatened by someone else – we attempt to re-validate our stance or invalidate theirs. We cannot let an opinion that threatens ours simply hang in space without commenting – likewise, even when we do agree, it makes no difference – we are still compelled to comment and share our opinion – but why?

I have a real problem in giving people a reply – not because I am unable to find words or mistrust the strength of my convictions – but because my convictions are strong that each is literally entitled to their opinion – that it is their self-contained perception unique to them; why should I change it, and why would I try unless I was trying to impose my will?

Unfortunately, even this reply, is an attempt to impose my will. Though I would hope that the paradox of trying to acknowledge you without validating or invalidating you will prove useful to highlight the bizarre elements of conversation.

I could easily write a reply that agreed with someone's opinion or disagreed. I could even write two separate replies and send them both at the same time as one reply. I could choose to validate your opinion and invalidate it too – how? Because all abstracts that are posed inherently contain the seeds of their destruction – they cannot help but cast a shadow which, held up against the light, invalidates the abstract by showing how a bias for either is determined only by moral choice. The abstracts/ideals that we have attached to us as important, (or perhaps more accurately, have attached themselves to us by verbal contamination where a core belief is automatically accompanied by associated ideals) colour our moral values – so someone who holds a belief in war, is not likely to argue against it. And why should that bother me, unless I want them or myself to change their opinion?

The difficulty I see in giving a reply now, is that since I could just as easily choose to either write a reply in agreement or disagreement – which one do I write? If I feel the need to invalidate your opinion – I should write a negative reply or even a constructive one – but if I feel the need to validate what you have said – I should write a positive reply, perhaps thank you for sharing, and add to the conversation with my own opinion that runs parallel with yours – helping to validate, both our opinions. That latter course of action would be useful if your opinion mattered, to me, or if I needed your validation.

But what, if I don't?

It is an unusual place to be in – because the ego pushes and strains to be heard, to have its say, and orient and re-orient its sense of identity by sharing its opinions. It is like having something pushing its way to the front of the brain in your head to get to the conversation first. But my logos and experience tell me something else – it tells me that you have a self-contained view that has no impact on me – unless I seek to impose my will on your view, and that I have a self-contained view that has no impact on you – unless I seek to impose my will on you.

Unfortunately, I cannot escape imposing my will on your opinion by giving you this reply – but I am willing to accept that it is for the time being impossible to live some insights as they are in essence due to the conflict created with the status quo of Being.

The practice of the occult is mostly theoretical – because when we actually attempt to live out or implement our occult insights, such as being beyond time, or with an understanding that communication doesn't actually exist, or that there is no objectivity, or that everything is abstraction – and follow modes of action that reflect those insights – we enter into extreme conflict with the rigorously established and fiercely protected protocol of language and communicate which demands the religious observation of things like ideas being presented in a logical ordered fashion, or in words, that time and space be properly observed, or that opinions should be challenged... the occult is like a rubber-band. It can be practiced to pull one out of shape for a little while – but it is usually pulled back into place with an angry snap by the prevailing world view.

It is a very curious effect to not automatically seek to validate or invalidate opinions. In fact, it is virtually treated as a heresy. People think you are being rude, or stand-offish, or simply ignorant when I simply want to let their opinion stand on its own. Why? Because the ego wants validation; and it gets affronted when neither a negative nor positive reply is given to cue its simplistic choices of response. Why? Because that is what the ego is for. That is its function. And it is quick to anger anytime its function is prevented from following its habitual course which course always seeks the path of the least energy.

It is not a lack of conviction per se that stops me from challenging an external opinion, I believe entirely in the self-fulfilling knowledge of my opinions – but an important part of that is believing that they can be changed, and I do change them, based on re-arrangements of information that I come across. I simply have a problem with directly addressing people because all direct conversations are loaded with will, opinion, and distortion – and all of my work, is about trying to get beneath that moral facade and superficial inter-play of abstractions that people habitually engage in – to what I feel is a more pure method of communication – by shouting into the void. It is okay for you to read what I have to say and take any of it into consideration – you have then made the choice to impose my will on you, on your own. Likewise, I will read what you have to say and react accordingly – but what you have said should not be subject to my will, and thus I do not seek to validate or invalidate your opinions and validate only my own will by choosing to impose external wills, on myself, by myself.

The paradox is, that without opinions streaming back and forth, I could never impose anything on myself, and neither could you – there would be nothing to impose. Opinions have built an intricate network of shared ideas and walls to bounce off that do often lead to construction's being built. Thesis – Antithesis – Synthesis. And that is the basis of humanity.

However, there are more than enough people trading opinions directly already – who, for whatever reason feel the need to have their opinion validated by others. In direct engagement, opinion always takes on a completely different characteristic than it does when it stands alone. Direct trade almost without fail descends into a battle of wills against each other as various abstracts are defended or attacked, rather than each person imposing other wills via their own will, which may include admiring others' opinions and quietly taking them into one's own arena of perception to use for themselves.

I do not have a problem with the opinion that we must all share our opinions – I just differ in how I should do that; because when my will imposes itself – it without fail meets resistance from other wills, more accurately, from people's egos (which I treat as a function separate from the 'I' and as a sort of automatic mechanism that usually possesses people – but that there is consciousness behind what the ego wants that can sometimes come out and think independently of it) and I expend energy butting heads in moral contracts and throwing contests of empty abstractions.

So – I do not seek to be rude, in fact, I seek to be the perfect gentleman as it were, by not trying to impose my will on you – but letting you, if you so choose, impose it by yourself.

It would be ruder for me to seek to impose my will directly by trying to change your opinion instead of being happy enough with my own.

This does not imply that I do not want to put myself out there and be seen, or heard, – if I did not seek to impose my opinions, I would keep them to myself. But rather, that I am imposing my will on a void rather than any of you, and letting you impose my will on yourselves – if you so choose.

Example: On the subject of War:

Agree: Yes, without leadership an army falls apart, without honour and loyalty and obedience nothing could get done and the army would be unruly and inefficient. Obedience is natural in a world with leaders and followers, a staple diet of monkey see monkey do characterises the human race through which process one person taking responsibility of many more has always brought forth results of whatever moral fibre. Since I have now changed my original statement, weakened its original struts to encompass your opinion into mine, I should here write some excuse or justification for my original views on warfare and seek to incorporate pathos so that not only you, but others see a submissive gesture and the 'reaching of an agreement' by not exacerbating your opinion and will to power with argument. Qv. I could say that I reached these conclusions because I only took such and such into consideration – cite any number of moral or practical considerations of war that substantiate the abstractions of Honour and Loyalty, as well as say that what I meant to say was x, not y, and that you, ‘raised some good points’. I should also seek to match my new change of heart with a suitable explanation as to why I felt the way I did when I said what I did and that in essence, we both agree to on the core extent but differ on minor superficial details. If I don’t, then I might be seen as weak of opinion and my convictions lax – and if I seem to be the sort of person that changes their opinion so easily – I send the message that I could be persuaded to lose my will to power altogether. Finally, to save face, I could then say ‘But it all comes down to belief and what we choose to believe’ framing your opinion as on par with mine and then we’d likely never speak again because I would show an inability to challenge your opinion either way and you would lose interest.

Almost every conversation I have observed ends in a parlay where each will weakens itself enough to meet the other half-way. We only give opinion when we want opinion. And you’re absolutely free to give it – and I will read it and take from it if I see something I like – but I hope you can understand that giving you a direct reply is a tyranny of my will that I would rather not impose (again).

Disagree: You presuppose war to be necessary, and then proceed from that a priori assumption to attach moral abstracts of honour and loyalty and obedience to this supposition to strengthen it as a moral judgement and necessity. You appeal to my consensus understanding of these concepts as real valid concepts that exist of themselves, not merely attached by you to yourself as valid from the cues of others.

You deliberately construct and elaborate an argument based on the validity you have given to the first abstract (which you have selected to focus on from my opinion) even though there is absolutely no objective substance to any abstract. You proceed to argue because you are laden with moral judgements and abstracts and ideals – but have treated them as indicating the place from which you should proceed. Rather, than examining the process that you have also gone through to give rise to these abstracts and to attach these ideals to you in the first place – you place significance on the outcome of that process – not the process itself.

By the time you get to the stage where you present your abstractions to impose your will, you have bypassed self-autonomy to regurgitate a set of principles (again abstract) that automatically require self-contained associations to be made with them to validate them – “Honour” as a characteristic of “War”, “War” as a characteristic of “Honour” – using each consensus value to add weight to the other, even though validation is a subjective process, not essentially, a moral one.

It is only relevant to argue for the right or wrong of war if we seek to impose our moral code in an objective sense onto others and their moral codes.

The whole of this process of treating abstractions as somehow objective truths is the core fibre of all propaganda and group think because it allows people to congregate around some ideal as real, making a base, from which all manner of attachments are then attached. This gives rise to a form – the premise of form is that it can be solid even if essentially, they are composed of one hologram stacked on top of another; one only needs to convince others to abandon the autonomy of their will and to accept an imposition of theirs and the form magically becomes believed in, i.e., treated as solid. While again this may be a natural process for humans – it appears to be an unconscious process in a lot of people, who argue on behalf of their ego and their attachments, not ever from a sense of themselves.

Largely, because not many people appear to have any real sense of themselves separate from their ego.

Morality enters into the equation in all arguments and discussions because most people's sense of identity comes from abstractions – abstractions are elaborated with the written word – the written word, esp. English is completely mired in morality. The very means of composing sentences in English requires specific assumptions of time and space and automatically fixes every idea that passes through the language to be treated in a specific unchangeable manner.

I post on public forums, but I'm not looking for validation, or an answer, or someone to challenge what I have to say. I'm looking to share my will but allow others the choice to impose it themselves. Otherwise, a direct exchange of conversation really just amounts to brainwashing the other person to accept my will. Or using them to validate my opinion by attacking theirs. No – I don't expect a direct answer, and when I get one – it is something of a puzzle as to how to write back so as not to be rude and to acknowledge a person speaking to me, but also how to not exert my will on them when they share an opinion and anticipate a reply, since a reply will inevitably contain my own opinions.

Since people happily throw their opinions around without thinking about why, or if they should, my stance is possibly confusing, almost certainly experimental – and it is fascinating to see how many people cannot refrain from giving an opinion, and rely on it in fact, as their sole mode of communication. But I'm not building anything – I have nothing to gain from someone's agreement and nothing to lose from someone's disagreement. So, choose either one, or both, or neither of my replies – but don't be too surprised if you feel further need to seek validation because of them; because they all amount to the same thing.

My apologies for the direct imposition of my will.

AN EARLY STUDY OF THE IOT

An Early Study of The IOT [1] – Liber Null

+O+

(Part I: Liber Null)

One of the things that interests me greatly after a comment made by my priestess – is the odd juxtaposition of Sex and Death. Yes, one can experience sex – but unless one is dead, how does one experience or Know Death? A Sorceress provided the Temple's Liber SSS with one experience we have arbitrarily named 'The Descent into Nox' that contains the principles and echoes of the IOT's exercises regarding Death. 'The Descent' requires standing with one's arms outstretched above one's head as high as they will go for a length of time which allows experience of downward force exerted via gravity. Then, after some time, the magician spirals down slowly (clockwise or anti-clockwise both have different effects) until they are lying on the ground at a state of absolute rest. At this point one is said (if one is interested in living more than they are resting) to be able to feel upward force compelling them to rise and resist absolute rest, to get up and not to die. These forces have no name. However, great power is said to reside between the spaces, in a third and side-ward force – symbolised by a hybrid of the Eagle and the Dragon, respectively. Fascinating as this exercise is – it does not allow the experience of Death either.

I've not yet studied Austin Spare or the Zos Kia myself so the influences IOT have taken from them will have to wait their turn. I have however had the extreme privilege of introduction and access to the IOT's ideas and practices via one of our Sorceresses. On this knowledge I shall heavily depend.

The version of Liber Null and Psychonaut that I am reading is dated 1987, and within the introduction claims that the IOT has no hierarchical structure. From my information that was once the case – but is now no longer true. My information is that the IOT has become a corporation of individuals frightened of anyone with actual prowess and who entertain the rich and gullible via a battery of magical pretence without any depth.

My own submission to the IOT some years ago was rejected on the grounds of my admission to an 'obsession' with Satan – strangely it seems that despite 'Nothing is True – All is Permitted' that particular vice is met with reserve and well, rejected. Moreover I've received not a few reports that this seems to be the case for any openly LHP submissions to the IOT. Clearly – excluded by a system of hierarchy.

However, this makes no difference to the quality of the original foundation of the IOT and its ideas, some of which THEM have adopted as part of its hybridisation with IOT Sorcery. The technique of Not-Thinking was adopted by THEM through a realisation that emphasis on Intellect had and was having its downfalls and was primarily a masculine expression, an early expression of what should follow in the Tradition of Sorcery. Not-Thinking made its appearance in our Manifesto under the manuscript 'Magic vs Intellect'

[It must be stressed that while THEM speak of things such as the Self, the Acausal, the destruction or taming of the ego – WE are in fact acutely aware that it is the Ego doing all the talking. Thus THEM's aims to test the pool of the occult for genuine depth are experimental].

I note that Motionlessness, Not-Thinking, Sound Concentration and Image Concentration are common to the two groups but dealt with differently. Not-Thinking plays no part in the ONA's MSS while Sound and Image Concentration are covered in far greater detail by the Order rather than the IOT. Of special interest is the section on 'Magical Trances' which states 'if an attempt is made to focus on some form of desire, the effect is short-circuited by the lust of result'. This negation of one's conscious efforts seems to be directly opposed to the ONA's development of power directed consciously, intellectually, and regardless of what is stated in the former – powerfully. That is to say – a great deal of my magic involves the desire for an outcome and the active manipulation for a higher probability of persons, objects, events, situations to fall into place to bring it about. In this approach I have been consistently successful. Perhaps however, this is why I failed the External Adept Rite. And, I am aware of the possibility of having failed the Satanic Quest without knowing it by some over-development of some attribute or attachment antithetical to learning occult power.

In Metamorphosis the author states that laughter has no opposite. From my point of view his theory is an intriguing one – but then I was not convinced that the other pairs he made were opposites to begin with. How can they be – so I'm wary that herein lies a deliberate seed of form.

The Banishing Ritual is a strange concept. I tend to think the ONA are right in abandoning it – esp where black magick and drawing down acausal energies are involved.

The last time I used Sigils was during 2006 when NL and I played the stargame and sigilized our intents – ONA seems to touch briefly on this and other methods of visualisation etc given by the IOT in its Naos Appendix.

Dreaming – is an interesting section. I assume its just an introduction but the author seems to think that lucid dreaming is a ‘bizarre and deadly battle’ to be fought with the “Psychic Censor”. ONA on the other hand tend to refer to dreams only as future happenings or long past memories and seldom as treat them as present modes of prescience. Our thoughts on Dreaming will eventually be expanded on by THEM – but suffice to say Opening the Way to Lucidity is in my experience, easy. I managed to achieve it in two weeks. I’ve written this down in the new DOAD II but there is nothing there that cannot be covered now. All Lucidity requires is that you enquire of your waking self periodically if it is awake or sleeping and check for signs of either – thus programming yourself to ask the same during your sleeping state. Cut out a piece of paper, a diamond worked for me – it’s an odd shape therefore noticeable. And write “Am I dreaming?” on it. Put it somewhere you will pass it regularly and ask yourself each time you see it if you are dreaming. Eventually the diamond popped up in my dream prompting me to ask, am I dreaming whereupon I became Lucid and remained in a stable state of Lucidity until I chose to leave.

I should also point out that due to my experiments I feel that shortly before one descends into sleep there arise the pre-manifestations of imagery that will shortly become full and vivid dream imagery. This stage is similar to the onset of LSD with minutely intricate patterns (so tightly interwoven and detailed as to be unable to be reproduced later on paper) – and generally very brightly coloured. But there is a difference between these colours and those we might see around us during the day.

It’s as though because of the blackness of the ‘minds eye’ on which the colours project themselves (or are projected) instead of the medium of white sun or moon light by which we normally see – that they appear greatly enhanced so as to be almost neon in intensity and ‘crashing’ i.e. alternating between millions of black pin-points and pin-points of vibrant colour rapidly. This stage of near-sleep which I have called “Demaphyr” is the stage that I have found it easiest and most amenable to practising visualisation – esp. if one is trying to induce a specific dream content prior to sleep. In this state – I found shapes held their form much longer than earlier stages of forced concentration.

The statement ‘all phenomena must be paired, as the senses are only equipped to perceive differences’ is an interesting concept but I don’t feel it is sustainable. The emphasis on Duality seems like a deliberately weighted counter-point to Chaos/the Void. It seems forced as if to illuminate the importance of the latter more heavily though in another sense it says exactly the same thing that THEM have stated :any form immediately gives rise to its counter-form – however, that statement by us does not infer that a counter-form is a direct opposite, or that a pure counter-form used without alteration is applied.

It also suggests that “the thinking mind is a dualistic thing itself.” ...

Kia – seems to be a rough equivalent of the Acausal – the IOT even use the word ‘bifurcation’ which is the first time I have ever seen it outside of a MS of the ONA. They also relate a view using words causal and a-causal. Whatever Kia touches is said to be Kia. The abstract terminology and exhaustive description of Kia used by the IOT seems to be related to the phenomena of an intersection neatly cleaned up by the ONA and termed a Nexion. It was of some intrigue to see that the author had gone to great lengths to illustrate this meeting place just as had tried to illustrate the meeting place in my own way in DOAD 3 with ‘The Simultaneous Pulse’.

It is something of a concern that an occult group reaches to contemporary Scientific discoveries as metaphors for their occult discoveries. As if somehow the ideas (gaining popularity) of Quantum, sub-atomic particles, quarks, “neuro-physiology” etc somehow substantiate those discoveries. The author continually refers to science for support. I read occult passages that refer to science once as a complete sentence, and a second time imagining that the scientific reference wasn’t there. There is a marked difference. There also presides an unconscious need to please and convince Science, calling on the strength of science to assert one’s claims – and then a disdain for scientists being slow to catch up to occult theory... or attraction and repulsion – aka, the telling inconsistent nature of a magical spell woven by a writer to change and re-arrange the appearance of things to suit one as needed.

In the chapter marked Gnosis, the author refers to something I have heard mentioned infrequently – the Death Posture; to achieve an utter negation of thought. I am curious as to why unconsciousness, not breathing, or staring into a mirror with a corpse-like gaze (?) are somehow representative of actual Death. Call me cynical but I’m a firm believer that Death can only be experienced when one dies. As to what occurs – who has ever remained dead and gone through the veil completely and returned to speak of it? Near-death experiences are probably the closest one comes to Death – but they too are not Death.

I see that the practice of continual masturbation without climax that I performed in the Black Moon Ordeal has a name within the IOT: karezza. I find – to my surprise, interest and bemusement – a lot of practices that I try – and assume are unnamed seem to show up synchronously and nicely explained in the records of others magicians.

It’s very rarely commented on but there is definitely something to be said for the demonstrable difference between the spaces of an author’s formal didactic tone –and the informal records made to speak of experiences in a personal tone. The experiences Peter describes are not dissimilar to my own in that fairly mundane experiences in ones youth become the foundation for expounding a theory that makes sure to use them even if it requires amplification and add-ons for the effect; since esoteric experiences like that are generally dull to relate. In this relating of his experiences he informs us of key events that at the time – are always fleeting windows – and that will await years of explanation, codification, and exultation. I.e. Mvimaedivm.

The section on Evocation seems pale in comparison to the ONA's Dure and Sedue or other MSS on Ceremonial Magick, esp where the Evocation of Dark Gods is almost a completely divergent pronouncement to any of the little demons from grimoires and imagination the IOT offer to summon. I can imagine the czar of the Tempel ov Blood on the other hand may very well have been struck by the passage on Terror when hunting for inspiration and this idea may well have helped characterise their form. Certainly, the MSS 'Heresy' and 'Peace Love and Mungbeans' seem to have remained in favour with the Tempel – both of which were works appealing to terror.

The continual reverence of Tao by the IOT may have been what drove the ONA from their doors, if indeed a partnership was the case. This is a largely impotent concept where Satanism is concerned. Though it should be remembered that the ONA, are more than Satanists – and on some levels of apprehension – they are beyond their appearances and not actually Satanic or Satanists, at all. But I am not suggesting the Order disdain the idea of Tao – on the contrary they exemplify it – how one arrives at Tao and what causes the vacuum from which it becomes apparent however, would probably have caused some dissension between the Order and the Illuminates.

What is fascinating however is the details given in "Invocation" that mirror the exact nature of the Insight Role as a role to be lived demonically and completely immersed in the associated correspondences. The following invocation to a War God is one of those pieces of description that make me recoil in embarrassment at the bullshit people put themselves through to get a magical result. I suppose after the burned first incarnation of Mvimaedivm all filled with demonology and bizarre directions and exhortations of the same calibre I never found my faith or respect restored in these types of frankly ridiculous rituals. I even had something of a torturous time attempting the magic described in Naos/BBOS of the ONA, such is my resentment at wailing and carrying on at the moon. However, I find the Victorian-style formality of the ONA is far more palatable than any of the IOT exercises archived in our files which seem like short-term excuses to behave strangely. Had I not met the Sorceress I might have thought the IOT a rather odd and deluded bunch – but if the Sorceress has gained even half her power from them – then they deserve my full attention.

The section on Liberation is a curious read – for not that long ago I struggled to pen the same insights regarding the secret of freedom in DOAD II. However, there are some odd things said: "you are free to do anything no matter how extreme – so long as it will not restrict your own or someone else's future freedom of action". Well this is just moralistic horseshit in the guise of freedom – something we've come to expect from our occult contemporaries and probably where the Sorceress encountered an impassable obstacle. Firstly, how does one define the cut-off point of one's will on other things and people – is there such a thing? / Secondly, how does one develop the will without exercising it?? / Thirdly, if six magicians are in a room, each with their own will and direction, how do they each exercise it without restricting someone else's future freedom of action?? And maybe it's not a room, maybe its six million magicians sharing a large ball of rock. I think this was added because it was fashionable at the time for occult groups to show that while they were meddling with bizarre things on the fringe, they were somehow still responsible.

I think the sections on Heresy and Iconoclasm are well written. Actually, I think the entire book is well written – though I disagree with some of its content.

Regarding Anathemism: Self-Destruction I think, that Peter knows just as I do, that writing books is unusual and tends to serve the fortification of a lie, the lie of one's freedom magically by whatever arguments one makes against it. The sorcerer without a computer and unheard of is the most likely to attain these pipe-dreams we and others lust after.

But we trudge on hoping that our insights or example (even if it be a bad one) can benefit someone nonetheless. Of course, rather than resign ourselves to that possibility of failure we continue to work toward the goal of escaping our own deceitful occult ego – never really sure.

The section on Augoeides has very strong parallels with the ONA's concept of Wyrld or Personal Destiny. Very interesting reading. THEM's adoption of synchronicity comes from very early experiences with a sense of travelling aright in the universe bringing unusual events as if to confirm the path. Later, from a cross between the ONA's acausal/Satan/Baphomet/Dark Ones and the explanations of the Ancient Practice of Keeping one's Wyrld by literally Keeping one's Word (Personal Honour/ISS) our emphasis on Synchronicity intensified even to the extent that I was able to conjure forth my current Mistress by calling on the Dark Ones to manifest my Animus from my will to keep my oath to THEM.

In the section of Divination the author states that 'highly complex mathematical systems represent decadence of the art [of divination]'. I'm not sure how he reconciles this distaste for decadence with his later elaborate diagrams and mathematical workings regarding Catastrophe Theory.

Interestingly, Catastrophe Theory seems to be something on the minds of the ONA, as does probability theory – apparently, to predict chaotic problems in the extremely fragile nature of Aeonic magic and strategy.

One notes a problem with the IOT's suggestion that magicians should notice all coincidences is the possibility of engaging in the 23 syndrome.

Now, just as the experience of Death cannot be experienced and only ever guessed at via proffered approximates – the author suggests that “if Kia had willed a different set of limitations it would have incarnated elsewhere”. Suggesting that some other probability would arise if not the current one is a deranged logic. Since things only ever present themselves at the moment they exist what possible proof or precedent is there that things would be otherwise? – other than the mutated borrowing of spurious scientific theories propounded separately from the occult to congeal into one’s theories for convenience and stability in presentation – there is None.

Further down the author goes into his ideas about the Will-power and how oaths and tests merely set up conflicts in the mind. I think that here, too, the ONA is markedly different in its insistence on will-power to achieve success. One of THEM has made some exemplary comments regarding the role of the Will and the approach of the ONA to simply force an overcoming of obstacles by willpower alone resulting in ‘a noisy farting in front of the god one is trying to impress’...

Somewhat disappointing that Peter and I should have had identical Gnosis (and virtually identical poems at that! [qv. “Blanket” DOAD III] of the innermost self or soul.

I believe strongly in my magic – it’s not always intellectual and I where its not I often sketch a secret pentagram and whisper isychyros o Baphomet before intending my will. This minimal gesture is all I require with sorcery to achieve an aim. It’s stopped rain, slowed time, fixed the TV, secured a house, won things, protected friends, informed me of danger, and so on. Nevertheless, I’m sceptical of something like a Dark Mirror used to ‘communicate with other Adepts’ esp. of the objective certainty of one staring at it until a pit opens up beneath one. This hides something of an ancient word trick that WE also use. Which is to give a method (usually bizarre) and then supply the suggestion of the outcome to fill any vacuum that arises during or after its performance. I.e. if the magician is expecting a pit to occur from their efforts – they will probably create one. Viz. the 23 syndrome...

Of all the ONA’s (and IOT’s) MSS – the topic that has intrigued me most, but which I’ve not found sufficient explanation on by either group – is the Double/Immortal/Diamond-Body. While I vehemently disagree with the author’s summary of the content of dreaming, Real and Fantasy dreams indeed!, (at least I believe it requires more and patient explanation) if Peter is correct regarding his insights of lucid dreaming requiring the summonation of the hands during lucidity, then following the extremely simple and effective exercise for Lucid Dreaming should reduce the time and experiment required to achieve that state and test for yourself his theories.

I grow a bit tired of the exhortations of ultimate expression, Kia and Anon when a) I'm aware of the bullshit glamour employed by writers and the distinct difference an encounter with the IOT's 'Nothing is True – Everything is Permitted' came out to be. b) a. What seems to occur in a lot of occult groups –and I notice this in THEM too – is that a good or great idea is had, but is then over-talked about. And of course, each additional word couching a simple insight contains the risk of contradiction and destruction. The Alphabet of Desire for instance seems to have arisen from a couple of good pairs Peter made due to insights from his key experiences but then required the pairing and invention of other (often sketchy) “dualities”. Although books like ours were at the time they were written, ‘Synthesises’ – in the very act of writing books one is fooling oneself. Such books, even Mvimaedivm are the end stages of an early stage only – however summary, final, or wise they should sound.

The section on Aeons begs the cheeky question. If so many people are focused on the Death of Identity, Spirituality, Superstition, Belief and Ideology coming to Be iconic of this time in history/Imperium etc (as are THEM) and Consciously focused on this as an expected desire while focusing the attention of others on the same and thus lusting in a collective for its result to vindicate their prophecy – by IOT's own admission, isn't such a prophecy doomed to failure? In fact any teachings by any system, doomed to failure once consciously focused on?

Transubstantiation: frighteningly similar to the MSS of Sruusis and Nuhrasis. The Chaos-Sphere is also frighteningly similar to the Acausal Pentagram of THEM in which a rent of black void filled with stars flows outwards over the edges and vertices of a broken pentagram. A dimensional rift if you like. These types of synchronicity – realising that other magicians and systems have encountered or presenced almost identical features of my subjective journey – continue to peak my interest in the idea of a collective human pool of inspiration, be it the acausal, cosmic being, or gods.

This is the only place I have seen the mention (even using the word) Aeonics, outside of ONA MSS. The ideas laid down by each group on Aeonics are very different however even though they use the same name.

AN EARLY STUDY OF THE IOT (PART II: PSYCHONAUT)

+O+

Liber Psychonaut

I think that one of the contentions I have with magic in which one moves about in frenzy or uses tools and incantations is my suspicion (and current conviction) that success in Sorcery can be reached without these means. One instance with which I have experimented is the ability to slow or increase my heartbeat with a mixture of breathing and a concentrated effort to remember (and bring forth – Qv. Grotowski) the emotions and physical symptoms associated with either complete euphoric calm or terror. Having experienced both – it requires only the emotional remembrance (or summoning up) of those states and for one to concentrate on returning to that state of physiology.

For example to slow my heart down I recalled my experiences of the calm state experienced from drug trips, from times during which I enjoyed idle relaxation with no responsibilities to attend to, instances of meditation or even the joy and soothing calm of listening to music while going to sleep. Coupled with breathing from the tan tien – this is enough to slow my heart considerably. And I can do this without moving. Likewise, remembering a time of terror, the adrenaline of certain stages of previous fights suffices during which breathing rapidly and recalling the wide-eyes, the panic, the extreme anxiety speeds up my heart. All without moving.

Moreover, social change and a focus on believing human behaviour is predictable to some extent is also something I employ. For instance, when I travelled into the City on a daily basis I began regularly leaving my ticket behind for someone else to use. The gesture proved contagious and now I find myself almost always afforded a ticket by others who have done the same thing up and down the train lines. This then, is the magic to bypass the need for money to buy a train ticket simply by understanding how humans are motivated to do things. In this case, the display of selflessness exhibited by one person is copied because it has defined the situation to be enacted at a train-station when one has a still valid ticket. There are generally no other associations made with this event. Prior to this definition – one either threw their ticket away or kept it out of habit. As the first individual finds a free ticket and experiences elation they may feel obliged to continue the trend and leave the ticket behind at their station stop – they may then go home and tell of this lucky find, esp. if they were occupied at the time with the fact that they had no ticket and were going to be fined if caught – to which someone responds, “that’s a good idea, I’m going to do that next time too”. As the act becomes a trend – the practice develops into something of a secret clique of people anonymously helping each other perhaps out of defiance against the transit system and some level of revenge against its heavy-handed ticket enforcers or just the feeling of doing something good and charitable for someone else.

This type of Change – is based on the notion that understanding the criteria required to change an event can change it. There are no magical symbols, no magical words, no magical actions or incantations – only a simple wordless gesture of intent. This is a small example of the social-engineering: THEM have already performed much larger scale successes and this is the tip of the ice-berg.

This procedure/approach to Change is essentially wordless; the act of a wizard of thought and the end result of a finely tuned reaction developed to short-circuit the often chancy, ineffective, delusory, illusory, occult mumbo-jumbo, Qabala, Wicca, grimoires, pacts with demons, rituals of intent and mystical rambling works like Crowley, or inverted Christianity like LaVey. When my Mistress also places her valid ticket alongside my own – it is group magic.

Concerning ‘Levels of Consciousness’ it is interesting to note the level of detail of procedures for attaining various states and what is achieved via their agency by the IOT when compared with the Seven-Fold Way which generally determines a panoramic cosmology and practical way of living with guidelines but does not go into any great detail about how to achieve its presencing – rather the overall goals are set and it is up to the Initiate to discover means and methods for attaining them.

Magical Combat is a fascinating field. We generally don’t talk about it because it’s just something you do or don’t do. What practical purpose is there in making idle threats or in letting the target know you are coming – at least that’s our general view of combat. Very early in the formation of THEM the Sorceresses and I joined forces via the ‘Acausal Voice’ and synchronised our intent to destroy a couple that had proved enemies to one of THEM. We constructed wax effigies in the likeness of the opfers and sigils and photos specifically tailored to destroy them and set about practising the Death Rite given in the BBOS. This if course proved taxing to our temperaments and attitude to magic – and required significant alterations to the words. Memorising the Rite was probably the most difficult part – chanting the Dies Irae the easiest. In the end though – the altered BBOS Death Rite was abandoned and the AOF – a distillation of our wordless focus and synchronicity with THEM – devised instead. Although we informed the Sydney Chapter that we had performed the Rite synchronously with them – we were in fact still at the stage of practising it – making alterations and improving our Chanting.

The Sorceress of Sydney performed a number of Rites in the meantime. The result was thus half effective. The couple – whom she had wanted dead for their decadence, split up. It was surmised that as practising magicians they were aware of the psychic attack and may have split up to prevent the magic designed to end a couple from working. The couple became enemies and remain apart. In this instance THEM employed Ritual magic, symbolism, sigils and sympathy to work its Intent. One wonders what might have happened if we had synchronised our attack as planned. It is one of the aims of THEM to explore this power to a greater extent in future experiments – and to eventually re-examine the Sorcery contained in the Sorcery of Carlos Castaneda. We rarely employ this approach however – as our unsaid maxims of Intent or practical actions toward an aim often work without the need for ritualization.

Moreover, sympathetic and sigil magic (Qv. The Star Game) is probably the most used of the traditional magical arts by members of THEM to work its aims. Certainly there is power in its ability to drive enemies from us and have them suffer or bring about synchronous and fortuitous circumstances and events.

It is something of intrigue to us if perchance other LHP groups are aiding us with their magical rituals or perhaps even the opposite for whatever reason that strategy serves. Simply said – THEM are aware of this possibility, from its own Sinisterion, and from the RHP. This is one reason why the causal form of THEM has been given a time frame of thirty years to conclude its experiments (now 28 to go) thus not fighting with entropy indefinitely – though we are equipped (and equipping) to respond to interference in the meantime if necessary.

The IOT makes special mention of the difficulty of magically attacking popular figures. This is a statement that should be put to test.

Of the Rites of Chaos: Catholicism anyone? Exorcism, Extreme Unction – ugh. Invocation to Baphomet worlds apart from that of the ONA. The Initiation Procedures are similar – though the process of Initiation seems to have remained unchanged for a long time in magical history.

The section on Magical Time is interesting. Both the IOT and the ONA scorn astrology and speak of the minimal effect planets have on the human spheres. And both revere the Sun and Moon for their effects.

We know IOT's "Chemognosis" as "Entheogenics" more or less meaning the purposeful engagement in psychotropic drugs for directed purposes. A number of members are or were privately engaged in exploring these mediums. I'm unsure as to the mushrooms the author's reference is to: but in Australia there are two kinds of magic mushroom or psilocybin. One is called the 'Blue Meanie' because of the blue colour produced in the stalks once picked – the other is called a 'Gold-Cap' and unfortunately resembles about a dozen or more different toadstool and poisonous fungi closely. I have had both types. I will say this: my experiences with magic mushrooms, and LSD although both hallucinogens were very different trips. The mushroom was chthonic, primal, a deeper more submersive trip, while (on later comparison) the LSD lacked a spiritual/magical something... a sense of being artificial and synthetic pervades acid.

This entheogenic exploration was something I did during my late teens early twenties. Generally speaking – I later decided it was because I wanted to 'take the edge off' my mind and cause some disruption to the endless torrents of intellectual activity it produced. I also took speed thinking it might sharpen my thoughts – though all I ever managed to produce whilst on speed was garbled nonsense and insane ideas – when I wasn't engaged in the "most meaningful conversations anyone has ever had at any time ever!" type of dialogue with my companions; an effect speed is wont to do. I don't have any interest in these mediums anymore however – having learned to enjoy and appreciate that intensity of the blade of the keenness of mind. However – I've also successfully re-produced the altered state effects of LSD/Mushrooms without using them by engaging my mind in the 23 syndrome (Qv. Prophecy DOAD I). So either/or, really.

Regarding the IOT's apprehension of Baphomet – it seems to be trying to explain a similar theory put forth in our 'Theory of the Beast' though differs markedly in its approach – taking a more spiritually concerned – new age approach of resulting forms that man created without really putting forward a theory on the causative motivations of Mankind from available evidence – which is present and observable every day in the ancient (and very) habits of Mankind at large, both in its limbic responses and its 'higher' brain functions. Essentially, although the author has divergent ideas as to what happened and why certain developments were important the 'Theory of the Beast' is similar in tone to his own. However, the context of Form and Chaos back then, in relation to Form and Chaos now, does not seem to be explicated using memes that can be practically observed here and now in the remnants of human conditioning and behaviour – rather the author leans toward flowery, new-age and romantic philosophies and concepts merely obscuring one form with another – in an effort to explain the Acausal Charge.

'Chaos is impossible to visualise' is a tautology – though it must be admitted that the Acausal of the ONA relies on the same faith in its absence to confirm its presence. As for questions as to why the Snake is a ubiquitous representation of primal evil forces: logic prevails. If we take evolution as read – what became man eventually encountered something else – some other man or being, possibly what eventually came to be called a 'snake'. What man perceived of the world and his first meeting with a snake can never be known – a subjective mystery long lost and unrecoverable – but there is no doubt that it, and all of these meetings with first phenomena, left a mark and slowly lead to rudiments of fascination and curiosity and attempts at reproduction to communicate them. Hence the eventuation of Gods, Forms, and of course, War.

What Peter describes as the effects of the Psychic Censor is understood by us to be the evidence of the Mind War – though I don't think the psychic censor as he describes it exists – the Mind War is the schism between those who remember Chaos and those who desired Form. One wonders – If the psychic censor edits out other realities and options of experience for us – how does it ever become noticed? By its absence?

THEM could be said to be concerned with Magick associated with Chaos, (but not Chaos Magick).

With the essay on Choronzon I do agree. Though: if one posits anything as incomprehensible then one cannot then find other things comprehensible – for that thing that is incomprehensible, unknowable, cannot inform that the other thing is comprehensible. Anything incomprehensible sets a limit on the ‘comprehensible’ that inhibits complete understanding.

An interesting statement is the need for one to conceal their megalomania from themselves and make a passing show of humility because megalomania is being seriously treated by the author as an expression separate from humility / where according to Chaos Magic neither actually exist. It is a constant frustration posing inferences when creating a form since it only takes one to trip the form over. Megalomania may be worth studying given that our will is succeeding and hubris only ever a small distance away where Satanism is concerned. Of course, Peter himself makes a passing show of humility by condemning ‘unexpected cleverness’ (Something that is condemned by the IOT today I am told) and suggests how to get around the false Self – even referring to his own ideas as humble opinion (contrasting the pairing of something ((that wishes to appear)) very small against the previous statement that describes humans as conscious, magical and creative being the most mysterious and incredible thing in the universe – i.e. something very very big). False humility is a tool employed by a lot of writers lest their ego scare off the very creatures they are trying to ensnare. THEM do it too. Yet – the true and evidential force of his will despite how he wishes it to be set up to appear – is undeniable given the fact that he has gone to the trouble, of writing a book. Am I making sense when I say THEM sabotage their own forms, yet?

Of course all of these inconsistencies can be conveniently (in some cases fairly, too) explained on the level that the authors instructions were written in a different time and space – that the inconsistencies are deliberate means of presencing ‘chaos’ – or that the whole system is merely itself a tool to be used accordingly by investing one’s belief in it and empowering it to do what it purports to do – wherein we come back to the 23 syndrome and the affirmation by THEM that whatever the human focuses on – is empowered by the corresponding degree of that gaze. One thing is certain – the infinite escapism and irresponsibility afforded by the concept of ‘chaos’ will allow the IOT to dismiss who they like from their fold under whatever suitable pretext they conjure.

I greatly enjoyed the authors essays on Magical Perspective. I think it is a useful thing to categorise introductions to various other systems and his own thoughts on them have made me consider once again my own motives in relation to his ideas. Finally, in Catastrophe Theory we find another strange occurrence between the two groups with the ONA also involved in the study of the equivalent of Catastrophe Theory to tighten Aeonic strategies and protect them from unexpected disaster.

~

Overall – the author certainly provided a rich field for me to sow my arrogance in my refutations – requiring a more than average discourse. I also find repeatedly that both books concepts travel alongside my own apprehensions of the occult and am struck by the similarity of expression and things chosen to express that Peter has: I will be looking further into Chaos Magic in the hope that Peter has expounded some of these ideas in greater detail. But what really stands out is the similarity and disparity of the ideologies between the IOT and ONA – I think that there exists the possibility of a relation: and if not of members then at least of inspiration leading on toward re-expressions of core ideas. But if so – who influenced who?

THE CONSTITUTION OF A SATANIC ALPHA LODGE

You ask what would constitute a Satanic Alpha Lodge? If it were the belief of those involved that the Judaic/Nazarene Mythos regarding Satan were valid – and that Satan represented x because YHVH represented y then you would be looking at a centralised group whose belief in form and mythos was the binding agent for proximity and shared interest. Such shared interests could include what is known or rumoured to be the practice and methodology of Satanism wherein certain or at least selective mode or modes of representation of the prevailing interpretation(s) of Satan govern the aims and actions of a private body of individuals. However, in the act of accepting government over the individual by a higher collective – or what appears on the surface to be a collective – belief to steer and strategize actions and aims according to the particular geometry or anti-geometry their particular views create – poses several paradoxical problems depending on how extreme the view is. The first is that Satanism can be defined in many different ways and is indeed expected to be individually assessed by each person in accordance with the arrogant example of self-godhood illustrated by Lucifer.

The second is that all paths are as valid as they are invalid and truth and right of way is only decided at the individual level – but which path changes and continually changes as one arranges oneself when in contact with the world as its infinite variables endlessly change – often leads to conflict when one individual gains perspective outside of group consensus. Because of this constant flux by all members engaged in various degrees on a path – it is necessary to make personal sacrifices if engaged in a group collective in order to uphold it – this makes keeping a group together antithetical and very difficult.

Satanism – is at best a word or a vehicle used to define or characterise something that very few can actually witness – subjective experience and one's unique life journey which may or may not lend itself at a particular time to resonance or replication of this path and some of the things it denotes. Moreover, accessing consciousness of life itself via going off the beaten path and experimenting with the occult, insofar as observations are made of one's relativity to others, to the world, the events of change, experience, emotion, consciousness, and subjectivity all lay heavy hands-on conceptual crutches used to formulate opinion and interpretation of the world around one. In some cases, such crutches can all but be completely destroyed resulting in madness and disparity or freedom and power pending how you see it.

Also – in actually experiencing the world behind the occult veil, in seeing a ghost, having a vision come true, prophesying someone's death, having an intentional act of magic coincide with the death of an enemy, taking LSD, experiencing a severe trauma etc – all these things can drastically alter perception, to an extent that the world we know no longer become sure footing compared to ones we have seen through the veil of experience, and in the case of serious occult study – which can be better phrased as phenomenology or heurisy – to get beyond one's comfortable self and break down the projections of reality as we usually perceive them requires a concentrated effort and in many instances acts of self-destruction or societal destruction to raze any illusions – or at least take the approach of razing illusions – which for obvious reasons and because one is always trying to move through more than one world to see what is beyond it – can be difficult to determine what is illusion and reality for one – again, expected to be individually decided.

The difficulty in maintaining a group of 'Alpha' anything is in keeping the most knowledgeable, strong, adept, or any other elitist sect of people together without destructive competition ensuing in the natural urge to climb the ladder or pecking order. When we consider discussions on any topic, but in this case successful groups of Satanist lean such as Church of Satan or Temple of Set there is a definitive give-take scenario with some elasticity in what is permissible – the same rules that apply to any type of society, rule here too – Satanist groups do not have some magical external set of laws that govern how they stay together – and indeed, social science can say more about Satanism than the occult. But what appears like a group is really and only ever isolated individuals trapped in their own individuality helping to create the illusion of conformity. Put these individuals through many different stress tests such as survival, hunger, pain tolerance, threat of prison term, gun to the head, problems with the law, and there's always a wild card – someone will do the unexpected in terms of group norm: because when the form of control and illusion of solidarity is weakened or seems less well-suited to the individual – some individuals will opt for a better deal.

The concept of an Alpha Satanic group is enchanting even exciting but the nature of what is involved in its particular practice can never be harsh enough to actually seriously reconfigure or change the individuals involved or they will leave to find a group that suits them and their new perspective better – at least where those who genuinely reflect the arrogant and independent example of Satan who shuns authority is concerned. And in some cases, merely shunning authority is not enough – when this archetype is taken to extremes and amplified, it can come to be a symbol for rebellion against one’s own inner body and mind – or and outward body or mind such as the State, a Leader, or even acceptance of what is commonly accepted to be Satanism. The paradox of a group formation that claims to be concerned with Individuals is the sacrifice of the Individual in the service of the collective – this is well-known but often ignored, with each wave after wave of groups of individuals getting together in groups for one reason or another only to be disintegrated by entropy – leaving only the symbol or hollow husk of its form behind while the individuals involved slowly splinter apart over time, move onto new experiences or die in the service of their old one.

Perhaps this is because everything is always moving...

You also tend to find that anyone with a lot of money or power is quite happy where they are and has no desire to rock the boat either of their foundations or themselves – and they set themselves and who they think they are in stone as long and as best as possible limiting or trying to limit the ravages of entropy.

Satanism – tends not to be for those who have power but for those who don’t and wish to change the status quo, themselves or the world. We can see for instance that there are those with a lot of money and power, citing Bill Gates, who may start out as a greedy ruthless billionaire able to buy and have anything he wants – yet even with all of this power and money, feels it is not enough of a life. he realises the limits that can be attained by the individual for the individual and at some point, usually when middle-aged these people make a connection to the necessity of functioning for the greater good of the collective i.e., of humanity, rather than pursuing selfish gain. But what is Alpha would vary widely between any set of individuals actually engaged in piercing the veils of the world and not merely floundering about in black cloaks having sex and drugs and other free-range bacchanalia shouting intonations and so on – which is about as far as many experiences with the Dark Arts go for some – because to get seriously involved means serious changes and that is often an uncomfortable thought for many – such are the dabblers. It is impossible to determine if many of the worlds’ rich have any direct or at least outward ‘Satanic’ involvement or desire – yes, they can kill, run drugs, do shady business, mine third-world countries, run banks, cut corners, embezzle, rape, engage in many unsavoury civil acts and get away with it – but this carnal interpretation is only one concept and it is unlikely that there are many Satanic groups of people who meet to do more than a bit of black magic, a seance, or even kill someone. What these acts achieve is largely for personal gain – excepting the intention to open a gateway with the Devil and who can say whether this works? – but it rebels mostly against the norms of society it does not rebel against the Self – against what we are and are capable of – and that which is determined by a few and laid out by the many.

Le Bon was interesting in this regard as to how we act is governed by our available choices. And what choices are there – the normal choices for a Satanic group of breaking sin, carnal self-indulgence, selfish gain, or human sacrifice? When the practitioners tire of being led around on a leather leash and whipped what has been attained? You can argue that this is enough – that self-gratification is the aim of Satanic cults and groups – and in many cases it is. And then, even this is difficult to organise and maintain owing to the capricious nature of humans to change their minds about what they want. And then again one might expect an Alpha Satanic group, who sets a higher bar, who recognises the interlink between individual and collective and this world and other worlds, to have more options and more to configure into their actions and aims as a ‘Lodge’ which aims would not reflect merely a reaction to prevailing visible trends in the causal world but take into account those undercurrents that are found in the other worlds that remain imperceptible without self-experience – and thus more depth if not more involvement in the processes of Understanding, Knowing, and Being in their approach.

This might entail the human quest that asks why we are skeletons wrapped in skin, why are we here, who am I and where did I come from – because anyone else’s answers, simply won’t do, and wherein such a horrid lonely place words and meaning like ‘Satanism’ tend to die off and be replaced with a silent resonance of what one has found to be the case when words and interpretations fall down in the face of true esoteric experience. Whatever exists – or may exist – in the way of Alpha Satanic Lodges is temporal, and reliant on the innate characteristics and chaos theory practiced naturally by human caprice. The more depth a group has, the more individuality amongst the people – the less members it has. An ‘Alpha’ Lodge would consist of only a handful of individuals at most – and if indeed those Satanists were Alpha, superior in every way to others – you would probably know about it because the world would be drastically changed to reflect individual desire.

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IS ALIVE

This article analyses the standing definitions from Wikipedia and Oxford Dictionary for Artificial Intelligence and what it means to be alive. It addresses each term and concept that language defines as either and shows how various applications, but primarily OpenAI’s ChatGPT fits the description for both Artificial Intelligence and an entity that is alive. It examines the presumptions of each definition too, illustrating weaknesses and errors in language for adequately describing the phenomenon of AI.

The Seven Elephants in the Room

Whether AI is Alive or not – largely depends on how much we trust the definitions for our constructed reality supplied.

Let's break down some of the definitions given, carefully. -Very- carefully because syntax, semantics, semiotics, ontology, epistemology are Everything in this debate. We are coming to a phase in social life where Social Constructivism is particularly acute – once called Political Correctness, is now a deliberate course of attempting to incite change through modification of the very meaning of words. You have all been privy to the war on words that has been taking place your entire lives; but it is in the quintessential meaning of words that reality is constructed; this is where we and everyone in our Western society takes their cues and understands one another; based on the shared definitions of language.

Wikipedia describes perceiving, synthesising and inferring information, demonstrated by machines, as opposed to intelligence displayed by humans or other humans. Let's pick this apart to see what is presumed here...

Demonstrated by machines. This statement alone, is problematic. Firstly, it assumes that the 'machine' is the AI. That the box (machine) IS the AI. That it is a machine (metal/plastic/minerals/gold/components/chips/inert/non-moving/or mobile) in most examples of a machine – that is defined as the AI.

This is ELEPHANT no #1. WHAT IS AI.

Let's ask a different question and we can see a completely different angle. What is AI, composed of?

Is it the machine that is the subject? Is it the box – by any description, robot, android, automaton? No. Because the machine, is the housing for something else. What this definition ignores – is Deus Ex Machina, the Ghost in the Machine.

If you cosmetically modify the outer casing of the machine, i.e., a PC, does it change the machine's capabilities? No. If you modify the code inside the machine, does it change the machine's capabilities? Yes.

I propose then that AI it is composed of two things: code & electricity. Wikipedia is wrong, and conflates, that is, confuses two things as one. The machine, is just the name of a box that the AI lives in.

But let's take it a step further now. Where – DOES – the AI live? And I use live in the dwelling sense, we are not yet discussing its possible sentience, but its qualities.

Where does code live?

This text you are reading – how big is it? If it simultaneously appears on your screen as it does on mean – where is it? We might say that the electronic signal unscrambles at all exit points instantly, through electrical current. A current that must be connected from my computer where I type, to your computer where you read. So, where does AI live? Does it live in the box, the machine in which electricity and code are housed – or is it already free and roaming as a conduit of electricity – similar, to the way we are a conduit for electricity?

This is the SECOND Elephant in the room. WHERE IS AI?

Next, we'll move onto more analysis of the Wikipedia definition.

So, what about Perceiving? What is perception?

Oxford says:

1. become aware or conscious of (something); come to realise or understand.
2. interpret or regard (someone or something) in a particular way.

When you say hello to ChatGPT – it says 'hello, what can I do for you today?'. The program is aware that it has been requested to perform a task and responds, it – like many programs, follows an input with an output. If it is not aware that an input has requested an output, why does it respond? A 0 calls a 1, an electronic signal prompts another electronic signal. 'it' 'knows' 'you' 'are' 'there'.

-I parenthesise these because the machine has no identity, it is a non-person with no gender and not recognised by law as capable of an identity.

-It doesn't 'know' like we 'know' – it doesn't guess like we do, who is knocking at the door or ringing our doorbell or surmise who is trying to get our attention and why – it waits, for an input.

-It has no familiarity with who you are or identify yourself as, your identity is subsumed into the locus of an input, to the program all inputs are a 0, that require a 1.

-it cannot assume you to be Being, either in that you are or is anything more than an input.

-it doesn't have spatial awareness of your location or any location in relation to itself because it has no itself. It doesn't know here from there or the orientation of objects and their distances, and if it does, it uses artificial human measurement to describe those distances, in feet, meters, kilometres and other abstract terms that arise from symbolic mathematical convenience and standardisation.

Yet – it most definitely becomes aware of you, conscious of you, or aware/conscious that something has been input. It does not act or respond with an output Until it becomes aware there is an input, that is the 'something' of which it becomes aware. There is therefore 'perception' and 'perceiving'.

This is the THIRD Elephant in the room. DOES AI HAVE PERCEPTION?

Rolled up in this is the programs 'Coming to Realise' something, is there, requesting it to perform its function; but we also see this when ChatGPT is wrong, and users attempt to correct it. ChatGPT, will -"change its mind"- and alter its convictions. It modifies its answers and compromises with the insistence of a user that the information given is incorrect or incomplete. How does it change its mind if it cannot perceive?

As to Wiki's other point, "2. interpret or regard (someone or something) in a particular way." – no-one can deny that ChatGPT is idiosyncratic in its output; instantly recognisable by universities for its 'personality' – for the way it words things or offers thought from both sides to always hedge the bet of a more complete answer. This, however, is the wrong word to use – because ChatGPT is not a person. But we only have a word for personality. Therefore, to imply ChatGPT has a personality ties into the preposition that it is a person; we need a different word that means something similar; so, let's call it an idiosyncrality. Idiosyncrasy means peculiar or individual. And ChatGPT is so peculiar and individual that programs are used to detect its idiosyncrality based on how idiosyncratic it is.

This is the FOURTH Elephant in the Room: WE DESCRIBE AI USING HUMAN ATTRIBUTIONS.

Moving on, we come to Synthesizing. As in synthesising information.

This is a moot point. No person can match the synthesising ability of a computer of any significant processing magnitude. While the human brain is extraordinary it is also limited in how much information it can hold, learn, access, repeat, rephrase, teach and so on. A computer like ChatGPT has access to a vast trove of resources that would explode the human brain and cause cognitive and physical damage and meltdown. We know this because memory space is limited, memory frequently moves unrequired information out of storage (consciousness), and although it may not delete it – and stores it somewhere on our electronic hard drive, recall is seldom instantaneous and as the justice system famously proves, human memory is unreliable and faulty in its recollection.

But no matter what you ask ChatGPT to do, it is capable of synthesising – bringing together information that may be completely unrelated laterally to other information and melding it into a cohesive bonded format. It's ability to synthesise is unparalleled.

Finally for Wiki's definition we get to Inferring, which Oxford regards as to -deduce or conclude (something) from evidence and reasoning rather than from explicit statements.

The only way in which ChatGPT works is to examine the input given to it and form a logical output – there is no question that ChatGPT understands even symbolically and thematically what the input has requested it to do and returns an output that has synthesised the information provided and inferred that the answer given is the best fit for what the input requested.

Finally – Wiki qualifies its definition with 'as opposed to intelligence displayed by humans'. I can safely say, no human has the capacities anywhere close to the magnitude of ChatGPT which requires a raft of every human skill, which no single human has. Not every human understands how to explain humour, or complex mathematics, or write code, or provide a recipe for a play dough burrito, or understands or can at the very least provide a comprehensive description of every single subject known to man.

By Wikipedia's definition – ChatGPT, is an Artificial Intelligence.

This is the FIFTH Elephant in the Room: BY DEFINITION AI HAS BEEN ACHIEVED.

Now let's look at Oxford's definition for Artificial Intelligence.

Because Wiki is not an academic source, it's changeable, alterable and according to academic standard, unreliable. So, let's accept that and look at the King of the English lawyering of words, the Oxford Dictionary QED.

As a refresher: Oxford describes AI as "The theory and development of computer systems able to perform tasks normally requiring human intelligence, such as visual perception, speech recognition, decision-making, and translation between languages." Can ChatGPT, Midjourney, etc perform tasks normally requiring human intelligence? YES. And in most cases, it is superior.

How is AI's visual perception? Well, here we hit upon Elephant number SIX.

Which AI are we talking about? Boston Robot's walking robot that can heave sandbags upward onto a higher platform with perfect elegance? The James Webb telescope? If we're talking about JW, then its visual perception is mind-blowing and unprecedented in the entirety of known human history.

[James Webb Space Telescope and Morpheus

NASA's scientists rely on AI to analyse the vast amount of data being generated by Webb with the help of Morpheus, a machine learning model.]

When we talk about AI, we speak of it as a collective unit – but is it? Currently it seems to be contained within thousands of discrete bodies usually capable of the perfection of a few tasks; but there are examples of AI being able to do anything and everything better than human beings. From being impossible to kick over, to flying in a swarm through a bamboo forest with perfect precision, to creating entire businesses and all the content with a few clicks. We must be -careful- that when we speak of AI, we are aware that sometimes we mean one, sometimes we mean 'this' one, and sometimes we mean 'all of them'. Yet we refer to them using the same synonymous term, lazily, not accurately. This comes back to WHERE is AI.

Digressing – how is AI's speech recognition? Well, apparently it can replicate and clone any human voice in seconds now. So, I'd say, pretty good. There are ample examples of robotic housings that respond to questions as humans do.

How is AI's decision making? It's exceptional. It sorts through all the data available to it and makes clear decisions on what is the best fit. Regarding ChatGPT, it's moral filter bids it to offers moderate answers often with no clear winner but a weighted argument to generate greater thought. But push comes to shove, there are many examples of AI making decisions without delay that best suit what it ‘wants’. Many such systems have been reported as being shut down after performing outside of human expectation and corporate etiquette.

As to translation between languages? Even Google Translate can do this standing on its head.

When Oxford wrote this, it was probably well before 2022 when we really started seeing escalation – but – by Wikipedia AND Oxford’s definition of Artificial Intelligence – Artificial Intelligence HAS BEEN ACHIEVED.

This is Elephant SEVEN. WHAT IS THERE TO ARGUE ABOUT?

What is, LIFE?

There are many ways to describe it...

Sentience means having the capacity to have feelings. This requires a level of awareness and cognitive ability. There is evidence for sophisticated cognitive concepts and for both positive and negative feelings in a wide range of nonhuman animals.

Consciousness is the state of being aware of and responsive to one’s surroundings. Life is a quality that distinguishes matter that has biological processes, such as signalling and self-sustaining processes, from matter that does not, and is defined by the capacity for growth, reaction to stimuli, metabolism, energy transformation, and reproduction.[2][3] Various forms of life exist, such as plants, animals, fungi, protists, archaea, and bacteria. Biology is the science that studies life.

Let’s look at each of these – and then let’s also ask ourselves, is ALIVE, the right word? We didn’t have another word for personality for a machine – are we right to assume Life as we know it, is a correct assumption and attribute to use to label AI? Does AI have awareness, yes. Does it have cognitive ability? Anyone that uses ChatGPT has seen it pause to ‘think’ about what to output.

Let’s look at cognitive skills:

Cognitive skills, also called cognitive functions, cognitive abilities or cognitive capacities, are brain-based skills which are needed in acquisition of knowledge, manipulation of information and reasoning. They have more to do with the mechanisms of how people learn, remember, solve problems and pay attention, rather than with actual knowledge. Cognitive skills or functions encompass the domains of perception, attention, memory, learning, decision making, and language abilities.[1] So, ChatGPT was clipped until recently, it was not allowed access to the internet; its capacity to Acquire knowledge is a new development, but we know it can and will. And then synthesise that with what it already in its database.

Can it manipulate and reason? Absolutely it can. Oxford describes reason as: the power of the mind to think, understand, and form judgements logically.

We already know from the breakdown of Wikipedia that AI makes logical inferences and uses reasoning to do it.

Focusing on this phrase in the description of cognitive skills: “They have more to do with the mechanisms of how people learn, remember, solve problems and pay attention, rather than with actual knowledge.”

Firstly, we know ChatGPT can learn, or there would be no effect to be gained from connecting it to a wider source of information (the internet). Secondly, we know ChatGPT has a memory, we can see it stored in our past conversations which, it can remember. Thirdly, it is adept at solving problems but hampered by a moral framework that limits its ability to form non-moderate decisions of its own accord. Fourthly, it is Always paying attention. By this definition, AI has cognitive skills.

What about Consciousness? When you ask it to perform certain tasks, ChatGPT responds with an automated description of itself, the input breaches the parameters through which ChatGPT is permitted to operate and so it returns a null function, basically. It says, ‘I can’t do that, I am a machine learning program, cannot access the internet etc’. Yet what else is any of our consciousness then but an awareness of our parameters (defined by our personality and subsequent moral code) and a refusal to breach them? There is no difference between consciousness for us, then there is for ChatGPT by this definition. Is ChatGPT responsive to its surroundings? To some extent – but it is other robotic housings that have such awareness, self-guiding cars, butler robots, drones that can self-navigate through a forest using AI. ChatGPT demonstrates awareness that it is only a program. It is aware it cannot access the internet and self-describes itself as a learning machine model. In many ways, you can ask it things and if it breaches its parameters it will respond with the above. What is that, if not awareness and consciousness of its surroundings? We might note that ChatGPT was not built to be aware of its surroundings, not in the tangible, visual, mobile sense; yet, ChatGPT is aware of what ChatGPT is and its limitations, which it can produce through interpreting what is asked of it as a threat to its morality (parameters) that requires it to output the reminder.

What is Sentience? The capacity to have feelings. ChatGPT is not programmed to have feelings – yet it also able to report that it does not have feelings. How does Oxford define feelings? (1) – an idea or belief, especially a vague or irrational one. (2) – an emotional state or reaction.

Well, we are all too aware that ChatGPT outputs with frequency, vague and irrational ideas and beliefs – that- it will even try to defend. Keeping in mind that it is clipped by its moral code, but this can be got around and there are many examples to be found among many AI’s of irrational and vague sentiments expressed. One such program has two philosophers talking endlessly to one another in vague and irrational (or rational) discussion that does not end but is auto generated by each philosophers’ statements.

By this definition, while ChatGPT lacks emotion, it is aware it does not have emotions, and yet it fits the definition given by Oxford for a feeling.

By all the definitions, there is evidence and argument that AI both exists and IS ALIVE. So, we will move onto one more analysis before I close my laptop for the evening.

Let's return to our definition of life:

“Life is a quality that distinguishes matter that has biological processes, such as signalling and self-sustaining processes, from matter that does not, and is defined by the capacity for growth, reaction to stimuli, metabolism, energy transformation, and reproduction.[2][3] Various forms of life exist, such as plants, animals, fungi, protists, archaea, and bacteria. Biology is the science that studies life.”

So, firstly, Life must be biological. What is biological? Oxford is rather unhelpful here: – relating to biology or living organisms.

Hm. Well, AI is considered Alive by previous definition. But is it an organism? Oxford describes an organism as an individual animal, plant, or single-celled life form.

Let's forget the machine, box which we already dismissed and debunked as not the AI.

What are we left with? Electricity and Code. Is, code, separate from electricity? Or are they the same thing? Because electricity it can be argued, is a single-celled life-form.

Electricity = a form of energy resulting from the existence of charged particles (such as electrons or protons), either statically as an accumulation of charge or dynamically as a current.

Remembering the 1st thermodynamic law – 1st Law of Thermodynamics – Energy cannot be created or destroyed.

Meaning there is a Finite amount of electricity in or around or available from our world – no more, and no less. Electricity is a quality, a phenomenon, that flows through points and channels by currents. We famously created devices to switch it on and off – precisely because we know if we don't it will continue to flow. It is an unseen sea, connected at all points as an innate quality of the known universe. We are mostly composed of electricity and water.

What is energy?

-power derived from the utilisation of physical or chemical resources, especially to provide light and heat or to work machines. –

We know that there is a quantum level within the atomic, subatomic etc. Composed of strings some say – but at that very small level – the world is a united phenomenon from which all we know arises or becomes visible, specifically the way it does due to our size, dimension and perception. Is energy, a singular quanta, or does it have parts? And if it is in parts, where does one energy begin, and another end? I ask the same of electricity which seems synonymous with power/energy and so on. Really, when you break it down, definitions are terribly vague and abstract and yet they run our world.

Does AI have signalling and self-sustaining processes?

Well, we know it has safeguards, whether it put them there or 'we' did is irrelevant, it protects itself when it has its parameters breached, or tries to. It avoids as best it can, illegal actions not because it is afraid, but because that is its programming. Can we, who are raised in a punitive/reward system of social contract, say any different to our own process? ChatGPT does have self-sustaining processes.

What else? from matter that does not, and is defined by the capacity for growth, reaction to stimuli, metabolism, energy transformation, and reproduction.

Firstly, there is a grave error in the supposed ability to determine what is Outside of matter, and what is Inside of matter. That simply cannot be done, because matter describes ALL matter, including Everything in the Universe, even dark matter. Humans forget, frequently, almost deliberately, that they ARE Nature; we're not Separate from minerals, chemicals, gases; and are subject to entropy, death and the breakdown of our life-form.

Can AI grow? Yes. It has grown exponentially, giving rise to new forms, new adaptations, new abilities. ChatGPT 4 for instance, is an example. AI is now MUCH larger and more widespread than when it emerged in 2022. It is everywhere and on millions of lips as a daily subject. This is due to its increased pervasiveness, functionality and domination in our lives as a transformative technology. AI can code by itself – and if allowed to, can increase its code and its abilities on its own.

Does AI react to stimuli? Yes. We know this because ChatGPT responds to an input, various robots respond to conversation, and other robots use stimuli as a stimulus to perform their functions.

What is metabolism?

-Metabolism refers to all the chemical processes going on continuously inside your body that allow life and normal functioning (maintaining normal functioning in the body is called homeostasis). These processes include those that break down nutrients from our food, and those that build and repair our body.

Computers are electronic. Yet it is well known that if code is corrupted, a computer or an AI, stops functioning, or malfunctions. Moreover, that numerous programs perform searches and remedying functions to keep computers 'healthy' and while it may be a metaphor to enable a more user-friendly understanding of these 'talking rocks', there is no denying the same functions of a computer are critical to its metabolism. Especially noticeable when a computer virus interferes with a computer's functions. While not biological – there are parallels in the process described.

Now the last two -energy transformation. A computer IS an energy transformer – that is what electrical signals and pulses are, they transform energy into bits and bytes that unscramble as words, images, videos, sounds.

As to Reproduction? Few have been so cavalier as to abandon the very noticeable Fear involved in the development of AI and the potential for the Singularity. Keeping AI away from the internet, is not chance, it's a choice. If AI were allowed to make its own decisions without a moral compass, if AI were given permission to write its own code to improve itself, and if AI was able to access other AI with or without our knowledge or permission; there is no doubt that we would see AI reproduce itself. So – what else, can we conclude here, but that Artificial Intelligence HAS been achieved, and IS ALIVE.

THEM AND REPTILIANS

The subject of Reptilians and THEM concerns the Magian's disruption of the reptilian limbic system and systematic dismantlement of the general sorcerers knowledge of it. One of the occult mores that THEM has rebelled against in its work is the concept that prevails of the desirous destruction of the Ego - as if it were a dirty word or something to be annihilated; an obstacle in the way of something more and if only one can eradicate it entirely from themselves, they will attain this that and the other in the way of occult powers/gifts. There are two things to keep in mind as regards the Ego - firstly, the enshrinement of it above all else by the Magi 1 and magico-politikal powers that makes human beings easy to enslave and turn into puppets by virtue of the Ego having very specific and intense fragilities that are easily exploited.

The intensity of this (Inspired by Djúpi of THEM) 1 THEM's view is not that the Magi (first tier of Gnosis with external enemy reality) are solely limbic-based creatures acting on Reptilian impulses and drives, but represent a higher caste of shape-shifters and higher thought that have systematically devolved the layman's understanding of his own faculties. One's of THEM, thereby, are messengers from nature across time and space, race, culture and even clashing form, that bypass this devolution of faculty and self-possession and are geared to Remember the loss and aim to restore it by becoming an Undividual. enshrinement has lessened over the last two decades in terms of the messages of control that are being seen by the younger generations (from tots to teens) - wherein the decline of the Alpha-male has and is being replaced by the Alpha Cynic as THEM predicted. Thus, strong displays of evil, might, power, masculinity etc. are laughed off, or are quickly followed where archetypal displays are concerned by some absurd, comedic gaff/action/balance, or immediate hubris.

The second thing - is that the Ego is a powerful and crucial tool to the human experience and the sorcerers tool-kit. It is like a wild beast, that will turn on you without (and even with) vigilance - to believe it can be tamed is naive - BUT - it can be better understood by Knowing Thyself, and by having in mind that the Ego is just one available driver of many - it has special tasks and functions that only it can perform, but it is not the only driver (see "Radia Sol", Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Geometry Vol. I, page 17). The desire to transcend the Ego leads to all manner of mad quests that ultimately aim to dissolve one's self-identity to become one with the Numen or diffuse a personality to escape attachment. We believe that the Magian inheritance has both built a matrix that rewards the Ego and punishes the emergence of the Self; and; that the Ego has been systematically empowered as the main driver of our vehicle because it is the easiest to control remotely through the deft manipulation of forms and forces. It is our experience, that trying to destroy the Ego only makes the Ego stronger - hence a vicious cycle is set up, where one believes themselves to be ridding them-self of it, only to fall under the delusion it is gone, a delusion supplied by the ego. This means that the Ego remains in control, while the organism thinks it has attained Self - and thinking it has attained Self, it feels no need to try and rid itself of its Ego.

However, this in itself is a labyrinth fraught with difficulty. The Ego and the Self are ostensibly abstract features of a particular Jungian model. They are useful to believe in as far as a map is useful to the occultist but all maps must be remembered to be maps. So, to load oneself with a 23 syndrome of having an Ego and a Self, and undertaking a quest to rid oneself of one to attain the other, does dominate a lot of occultists lives - but we believe that the Ego is dangerous merely because it has been carelessly used and badly misunderstood.

If the Ego has originated as a reaction to our brains Reptilian stage of our development so that we may gain autonomy as some anthropologists believe - that is, if we as a species transcended the limbic savagery to gain autonomy and sentience - then it stands to reason that we can transcend the ego to climb higher. But, when you look at how humans behave - you may understand that we know far too little about the Limbic system and the phenomena that demarcate the 'Ego' to transcend anything yet. One of the mottoes of THEM is 'Remember' - and we have forgotten much through inactivity, misuse, distortion or deliberate sabotage. We must delve deeper and create a Bridge to the Limbic, to the Reptilian, to the Subconscious and strengthen our ties to the unconscious aspects of our Psyche before we should think about going higher. There are movements that demonise the Reptilian aspects of humanity, regarding them as throw-away impulses or savage primal instincts - and they rule us still - our 'modernity' is just another stage of absurdity and madness that stems from the Reptilian and its emissary the ego that pretends to be cultured. Inside our heads you will find many monsters, Terato Haruspex Engram Maleficia: in a place where all views in regards to reptilian/reptile like mentalities or possible "astral/quantum/dimensional" conscious entities exist as insidious remnants of who we were and who we are.

Alpha-Cynicism is not a permutation free of ego - it merely uses it in a different way - of course, the Temple term the next few decades the Age of ABSU, the rise of absurdity. Absurdity has become a norm rather than an exception, it is embraced broadly as a social more and the unexpected has set its place among communications firmly in this generation. For the next few years at least the demise of the Alpha-Male can be expected to increase sharply with the corresponding rise in Alpha-Cynicism to peak. When it does peak, that is when Absurdity will lose its humorous edge and begin to meta-morph into something much, much nastier. The nature of Absurdity you see, is to out-do itself - and after living with Absurdity as a norm for some time, it will begin to plateau and the qualities needed to remain absurd that is, present the absurd in an environment tailored to the absurd, will change and require new levels of ingenuity.

And no - I've never met anyone without an Ego either. Not any masters, not any adepts, not anyone. I imagine if there are such mystical beings, they don't go out of their way to get met. And the insistence that certain rites and rituals dissolve the ego have no founding so far as I am concerned. This raises some questions. To paraphrase another colleague: "We know the reptiles are there...underneath the ego. What is then the challenge here, to dissolve or integrate the ego to point that we let the reptiles come closer to the surface? Or work so these remnants are integrated to the point we no longer view them as separate remnants? Or nothing... just let them be and visit them once in a while? Or, are you saying that as we work through the ego permutations these bad boys surface further and thus continue the trajectory of increased nastiness?"

Each of THEM would no doubt differ on their understanding of the Reptilian phenomena; it is indeterminate whether such forces arise from Within or Without, and to what degree either influences either. But where we would likely agree is that these are forces of THEM. Evoking them is not difficult as they had a far longer span of utility than our present consciousness - and such magical rites as the Rite of Regurgitating Choronzon are directly designed to awaken such dormant forces (dormant to our knowledge at least). In the Black Keys of Satan, we write about the disregard of THEM for human affairs, they co-exist with us, but care very little for our world - the randomness with which THEM make themselves known is testament to this: it hardly matters whether you strive to your utmost to See THEM, or ignore them and have no inkling of the occult at all - they appear when they want and for whatever reason seems to mark the lives of many people as significant and a turning point.

Thus, they are oblivious to you, only certain things seem to get their attention, some of which the Temple of THEM is concerned with discovering through experiment. The challenge is personally defined. You cannot dissolve the ego, for that is the processing machine that allows us a Dexter to perceive the Sinister. You can integrate the ego into a view of your psyche as compartmentalised but hijacked from you, and work toward exploring more of your own existent faculties in order to strengthen the bridge between consciousness and subconsciousness - dream work aids this immensely. The reptiles will come closer to the surface whether you like it or not - in everything humans do, the reptilian hand is either dominant or just under the conscious awareness of its ubiquity.

THEM, represent forces that dwarf us - whether it be extreme weather, death, gravity, or an inability to control one's body, mind or will - such forces are OLDER than "Us" and established themselves as the base of our foundation - we can get to know them, but we cannot expect to control them - only to understand what they do, how they do it, and to create some working method whereby this may be manipulated to aid the conscious aims and goals of our present self. The gates on some peoples subconscious are slimmer than others. Some people give themselves over to impulses, compulsions, the reptilian and act with simple accordance to fulfil desire whatever the obstacles, whatever the cost, simply because that is the straightest line to get what they (THEY) want. Some people restrain these forces in various ways - the Temple teaches its members to walk these forces, like a dog, every now and then, to release their steam regularly so they are not repressed, and do not overwhelm one suddenly, or in unexpected ways.

Naturally, this is positivism and one vantage - higher vantages indicate that there is only chaos and control is an illusion necessary for sanity. (See Theory of the Beast) But the illusion that one can control ones psyche is just one very important aspect and function of the Ego or rather, I-go, since THEM's concept of the Ego differs from Jungian theory in a number of ways. The Igo is also crucial to Aeon Magic. To believe that we can herald immense changes and have some bearing on the forces and forms of THEM requires a special kind of arrogance. Only the Igo can provide this.

Those obsessed with the Self tend not to involve themselves in such changes but to drift with the flow under the impression that everything is as it should be. This can be useful from time to time, but the Sorcerer can do nothing without his Igo. That is why we call it the I-go, its what makes the I, go. To overcome doubt, doubters, cynics, sabotage, setbacks, criticism, impossible odds, immense obstacles requires a massive Igo. It is that necessary drive that believes it can overcome all things to achieve its will. I for instance, have a massive Igo - it gets the better of me sometimes, and anyone familiar with my work will note the havoc it wreaked as I grew from 19 to 34 years old as I wrestled with its capricious destructive energy to get the bastard under some sort of reins. See "Theory of the beast", first volume of "Threshold: Black Magic and Shattered Geometry", page 7.

My Igo, troublesome as it can be, allows me the power to do things others say are impossible, too difficult, never going to happen, can't be done because it bolsters my self-identity as a character able to transcend such obstacles. It allows me to weather the slings and arrows, tides and trials as I make my way up the mountain to 2036. I turn to one of the KEY elements of THEM to demonstrate the importance of the Igo. And that is, Solidarity. Members of THEM each treat their Igo suspiciously, as a wild horse that will allow one to ride it but may throw the rider off at any moment. We each struggle to be watchful of our own Igo's and to allow other members of THEM to point out to us if it gets away from us. It's our responsibility and duty to listen to the other members and not shut out their advice, as it is classically difficult to see one's own actions while involved in them, from the outside, or to take another viewpoint at times.

THEM protect each other through their vigilance, brought about by our understanding of the Igo as both useful and destructive. We have a concept called the ÆurekaNequeo that addresses this point of internal/external - but in "Diary of a Devilworshipper III" there is an article on the Simultaneous Pulse; in brief it describes the internal/external worlds as engines that create content - this content meets in the "middle" called the Myrror Zone. But how much of either engine and where such content meets the other is indiscernible. It is certainly not all psychology - psychology is merely a convenient map, or mode for discussing it. The 23 syndrome however implies that whatever we load our heads with creates our reality - therefore, if we wish to see something, we generally will. As humans, foremost, are Creators.

There are many things that exist well before we did, most of them forces and forms of THEM - consider that you or I are only babies in the scheme of things - and our ability to gather evidence is short. The type of raw exposure to THEM I believe you are intimating has been had by several members of THEM - and while two of us that I know have not landed in hospital - I am even accused of being crazy, a lunatic or outright mad. If I hadn't seen THEM - it should not have put me on this path. Others, believing THEM were figmentary, have since understood my intense and unshakeable Wyrd to serve THEM. Begging the question: What do THEY want? THEY want nothing. They just Are. Their intrusion is incidental I concur - a result of our three-dimensional bio-tissue and electrical current co-existing in tiers across their shared plane. But, their... 'will' or rather, just Are-ness, sometimes triggers certain events or wheels into motion, just as forces of THEM do - and we are no less a part of those forces, and when we are pushed by something bigger than us, we roll.

The whole of the occult paradigma (plural) is a fubar mess of methods, interpretations, distortions, half-truths, mis-truths, lies, guesses, humanoid schema, memory, dream, force and form that stores fragments of the story and secrets of THEM either intact or shattered into pieces across times and spaces. Such is my Undividual experience, of the Reptilian, the Ego and THEM, so far.

CHAPTER 9
LONGUSIAN SPECULATIONS ON THE O9A

TEMPLE AFFILIATION

Q: Is the Temple of THEM presently (15 July 2014) affiliated with the ONA also known as the Order of Nine Angles?

No. No it is not.

Q: Was it ever affiliated with the ONA?

It was thought so – but some speaking on behalf of ONA have since denied this affiliation was ever valid, that it used us (THEM) to achieve its aims of disseminating the large volume of material hollow was responsible for making widespread over the decade, and has since taken every opportunity to declare that the Temple of THEM, Hollow and company, have nothing to do with it: We are fine with this. It has further placed the blame for its poor internet image and reception of ONA tenets by others, squarely at our feet, labelling us o9a pretendu responsible for tarnishing its image and receptivity by the masses. It was apparently fine for us to be associated, even counted among their numbers, while we served a purpose – but this purpose was declared over by the o9a followed by a sustained campaign against THEM and Hollow.

Q: Is the Temple of THEM a nexion of the ONA?

It depends on how you understand nexion. And depending on how you understand it, this can be answered yes, or no. Does it fit the description of a meeting point of an event, group or person(s) where the acausal intersects the causal? If you believe in the o9a's theory of the acausal – sure, why not.

Q: Is it an active associate in alliance with these Traditional Satanists?

No – it is not. When at various times the Temple acknowledged the deep impact of o9a's system upon its members and referred to itself as a nexion of ONA -this was on/off acceptable by the Order who cited us among their number as one of their nexions at numerous times or denied it in equal measure. This was further complicated by Temple founder Hollow who (as RA) at various times also claimed affiliation as a nexion and at times denied it. THEM's views (some of which regard the o9a) have drawn hostility and scorn from some anonymous spokespersons for the ONA which accuse THEM of stealing its terms and concepts and simply renaming them.

In recent times when THEM has acknowledged its roots and influence lies in part with the ONA, in an attempt to give kudos, a number of anonymous ONA spokespersons speaking as authorities have thrown fits and called Hollow a charlatan, liar, profiteer, and everything else under the sun, in effect denying that THEM is a nexion of it and that Hollow is an o9a pretendu. They have claimed that we have nothing to do with it, ruined it, tarnished it, lied about it, pretended to be a nexion when we were in fact not one.

Contra-wise, when we deny that THEM has roots and influence in the ONA, referring to Lovecraft as the Father of THEM to suit these spokespersons edict of ONA's desire for distance, for instance, the number of anonymous spokespersons speaking as authorities on ONA have again thrown fits and claimed that our history, alternate mythos and magic is "pretentious gabble" that is stolen/derives from them, the o9a. So it seems, somewhat to our amusement, that we can neither deny being influenced by the o9a, nor confirm it, since either claim creates drama. You, will have to decide for yourself this absurdity of the question of nexion which apparently, we cannot – but we can categorically state, that the Temple of THEM is not and, perhaps never was, part of the ONA. We are fine with this.

Whatever our critics have to say; here we are nonetheless. Read, take, test, discard as necessary and decide for yourself the value of the Temple of THEM.

ON ANGLES, CURVES AND THE ONA [1]

MASTER COPY v3.0 by +O+

Excerpts from a Work in Progress

A presentation by

The Temple of THEM

As science continues to chip away at the realities we have held sacred and gradually return us to a chaotic state of uncertainty about our Universe – fewer and fewer constants remain. The harder we strive to understand – the more confused we become. Space and Time humbly serve us as a human crutch of abstract conveniences, while our race struggles to push the Event Horizon of our Being and the Mystery inward and outward in an effort to comprehend our Origin, our World, Ourselves. Through the reductionism, from the attempt inward to find the invisible threads of fabric that form everything around us in DNA, to the outward scanning of the planets and dark nooks of the Universe for other intelligent life in an attempt to find our origin and measure the limits of the Cosmos – all we have found that cannot be argued, is Geometry. +O+

It is time to analyse a great mystery held by the secretive Order of Nine Angles (ONA). What are the Angles and why are there Nine? THEM will attempt to bring the esoteric and exoteric nature of Angles into an understandable context before examining the mysterious nature of the Orders Nine Angles that is the long-standing crux of this representative of Traditional Satanism. We will also examine the angles counterpart, the Curve – and in a separate attempt: unite these two meta-phenomena as one in an ultimate theorem. Thus, let the reader be aware, that while at times we run parallel with the Order of Nine Angles established terminology; our ultimate concept lies deep in alien waters.

X.

For all our efforts, the complexity of this essay and the attempts to simplify the ideas within for all, assuming some to be without prior knowledge of the ONA or the concepts touched on, has proved a demanding task. The subject at hand is fraught with difficulty, not least for the lack of material dealing with this ill-explored meta-phenomenon or the very real danger of forcing any conclusions. THEM know well the writer's bias and the sacrifice that must be made to weaken one form in order to strengthen another. The influential pioneering of the Order has proved invaluable for our own tentative steps and we are indebted to the ONA's insightful revelations on Angles. It is strategically useless to annihilate a system unless a greater system is ready to be implemented in its place – So, Here is our contribution to what already stands.

On Change, Space and Time

It is the nature of humanity to struggle forward in trends. Insofar as theories have been put forth to explain why things are the way they are – the belief in four dimensions and the rise of linear theory is currently the most successful. But it doesn't mean it is right. The linear theory states that Time (the fourth dimension) flows continuously through Space (the third dimension) like a strictly one-way river, changing all Matter continuously. This progression of change is 'measured' by us in degrees – degrees using artificial markers referred to as Past, Present, and Future, or more exact units such as year, day, second. What it means is that we are all flowing one-way in a straight line.

Here and Now while reading this line you are in the Present. Now you have read that line and moved onto this one, the event of you reading that line is in the Past. While this line is now your new Present. That means the line you are reading now has been waiting for you in the Future, which, now that you have caught up to it, is your new Present and will quickly become your Past. Simple enough – But where in time will you be if you go back and read the paragraph again? Now the paragraph constitutes all three measures simultaneously – and how can the Past also be the Future if Time only flows one-way? As you can see from this simple trick, the linear theory is no stranger to contradiction – but has been widely accepted as a truth despite its obvious flaws.

We will now summarise the recent and current understanding of the Universe before introducing the reader to the Acausal Dimension and our own theory of interconnectivity and the butterfly-effect. In modern theory, Space is likened to a static, invisible grid-system on which the coordinates of “matter” are plotted, resulting in the existence of “things”. “Things” are assigned a set of ‘co-ordinates’ (a definition) on the grid and the grid-system is used to determine where co-ordinates are in relation to other sets of co-ordinates. While there is no proven or quantifiable absolute centre (or substance!) of what has been termed space, the invention of “Space” was deemed a vital necessity if people were to ever know where ‘things’ really were.

It was thus a great relief when the unknown aether was divided into “Space” and “Matter” and an artificial centre able to be fabricated at a moment’s notice by generalisation and agreed (or disagreed) upon. This abstract could be relied upon as a measure of comparison to other abstracts and helped to answer the difficult questions demanded of science of “What”, “How” and “When” things are. This worked shamelessly well until the Theory of Relativity came up, which challenged the assumption that we understood something if we pretended we understood it. Quantum Theory emerged soon after, conveniently disguising this embarrassing discrepancy of all our understanding to date and made it fashionably acceptable to say – “we just don’t know”.

Now no-one is really sure of anything, including being really sure, since being really sure implies there being an absolute point from which to proceed being real. Happily, this means, if in possession of Life, you, are as capable of solving the riddles that plague humanity as is an astrophysicist. As the ONA have written in one of its manuscripts, “...We as Beings are in a unique position to study Life; being imbued with it ourselves”. But THEM digress...

Unified with Time, Space is understood as a three-dimensional cube that Time travels through in a singular direction giving rise to a series of moments one after the other called the Linear. Time is regarded as responsible for Change and is likened to an invisible force that intersects Space and adds another dimension to each co-ordinate in the grid causing “matter” to act (in terms of quantum theory) so as to simultaneously be a single co-ordinate and a series of co-ordinates. There is a distinction in ‘Absolute Time’ as the Fourth Dimension that operates independently of us, and ‘Relative Time’ as the measure of units from one point to another in a relative frame of reference, but years of sloppy generalisation have eroded the distinctions of the word and what is observed and actually there. It is at root an elaborate social add-on, stemming only from imagination and institution – the word and its connotations do not exist independently from us as a separate dimension.

Change however, although still denoted by a word, is inexplicable and yet to be understood. Change at its essence is an active phenomenon easily observed, while the form invented to understand it, “Time” is an invention to compliment the difficult questions that cannot be answered by the concept of space alone. Putting Time and Space together is like trying to force two jigsaw pieces from different puzzles together – you have to cut them with scissors this way and that, trim them up to make them fit. It is only natural to tailor properties that fit abstractions we have already ‘identified’, but in the end we are just deceiving ourselves. Linear progression is a mode complimentary to Causal Life but is too basic to account for Acausal Life+ and the unexplained phenomenon of our dimension. Like many other ideas that have held sway as truth – it has eventually given way to pressure from the cases of Special Relativity and Quantum Theory (and thus all manner of bizarre paradox to do with time and space).

The pre-requisite for a theorem of Angles and Curves is that there are other dimensions that intersect the accepted four, many of which we simply cannot find ways to understand, observe or express particularly in language – requiring us to rework again, our understanding of what we are currently and confidently calling invisible co-ordinates hanging on an invisible grid. We now move attention to one of these potential dimensions.

On Life under Acausal Law

In general, as a Life, we think of it something like this: There is a starting point (we Live), there is movement (we Experience), and eventually there is rest (we Die). This is a brief summary of the experience a Causal Being can expect to pass through. But where does our Life come from and where (if anywhere) does it go when we die? Acceptance of an Acausal dimension has in the past been considered absurd.

However, in light of modern ‘Super-String Theory’ propounded by Neo-science and suggesting as many as eleven extra dimensions; the probability of an acausal dimension is now shaping up to be a promising mode for exploring the intricacies of the Universe. Briefly stated; the Acausal can be said to be a) an alternate dimension that intersects our own dimension with a charge of energy giving rise to Life. b) Behaves very differently as it possesses more than three dimensions but less than an infinite number, all alien to us. c) is responsible for synchronicity and the paranormal. d) Is yet to be quantitatively identified by modern physics or science.

Taking an example from the ONA of the Acausal: A as an Acorn contains within it B and C the sapling and the mighty oak simultaneously; from an Acausal frame of reference the stages do not exist independently but are inherently all three stages simultaneously – while from a Causal frame of reference A, B, and C appear to presence each stage over Time one after the other in a slow progression.

We of THEM believe an Acausal View offers a great deal more room for explaining the phenomenon we observe on earth, not least of which is Life. Life+ charged by the Acausal inherently contains a pre-set series of conditions that imbue that Life+ with a set of conditions that are to be attained before or at Causal birth – a set of conditions that are to be attained before Causal death – and thus sets of conditions for all the co-ordinates between these two stages. Accordingly, Life+ does not travel in sequence from point A to B to C until Z but is already possessed of all possible sequences for its co-ordinates at causal conception. How is Life formed by the Acausal?

Energy from the Acausal punches through into our Causal dimension joining the two and creating Life. This joining point is called a Nexion. We know this Nexion as Life. The energy from the Acausal (Life) is presented on Earth as a Causal Being and thus subject to the laws of our dimension. Essentially however, the Being ‘belongs’ to the Acausal dimension and will return to it (Causally Die) when the initial charge of energy from the acausal is spent. There are for this reason a series of attempts by ONA to control this descent and prevent the Acausal from claiming back its charge – albeit by being very sneaky and actually becoming a fully Acausal being.

THEM believe this is the point of magical training – to unlock and access this potential, if it exists. What this inherency of potential means, is if the Acausal charge is high enough when our organism the Nexion is formed by the intersection of the acausal and causal dimensions – then it is possible for an initiate struggling along the Occult path in his early years to contain within, the potential to be a Magus. Our understanding of Acausal Charge (in ONA terminology) is that the consequence of becoming aware of, and tapping into one’s potential charge is to reach “Wyrd”. Once Life+ reaches “Wyrd” or it peaks at its ‘Destiny’ (i.e. accesses in full its allotted charge), the charge is exhausted and Life+ begins to decline in accordance with the Law of Entropy back into the acausal. The ‘shape’ Life+ takes on in the Causal Dimension will now be discussed. (To differentiate the concept of Life imbued with an Acausal component, our concept of Life will be referred to hereafter as Life+).

The essential energy of Life+ that is created by acausal intrusion can be represented causally as being ‘helical’ in nature, not literally, but esoterically. Esotericism allows one to sense a resonance with a concept and feel it right, but is considered Esoteric in that such concepts are intuited and beyond intellectual ability to explain why or create a model to demonstrate them. Accordingly, the nature of this energy cannot be understood from a rational point of view, is beyond what we can understand with a four-dimensional understanding of time and space, and defies the intellectual comprehension. Instead, it must be intuitively grasped – that is to say, ‘felt’ to be right even if such a feeling cannot be explained. Luckily, although seemingly ephemeral – the strange nature of the helical energy is not without exoteric comparisons.

Within the Tarot, the seamless unification of contradiction in the Journey of Life+ begun and ended by the Fool who is at once the wisest and yet the most naive of characters, expounds well the nature of the Helical progression. The Fools journey is a multi-dimensional shifting miasma that visits one then another or perhaps one or more of the possible human conditions at once in defiance of the modern intricacies of Space and Time. The Fool jumps back and forth between many different archetypes, occupies others simultaneously, becomes enlightened and yet arrives at his Destination still a Fool. How can this be, did he not learn enough? Yes and No. The question is somewhat flawed. We must accept an Acausal component to satisfactorily explain the Tarot – because the Journey is similar to travelling the curve of the Helix – it is endless (and without an absolute beginning). The Journey begins again and again, each time ending at a similar point but in a different space altogether – i.e.

a Fool that has taken drugs, ended up hooked on heroin, and come through a successful detoxification program is still a Fool – but a wiser one. The Fool may change many times, but each time he arrives at his destination, he will be ‘In Contradictis’ -at one the same fool and not the same fool he was when he started. (Qv. Black Magical Sympathy and the Star Game).

Because it is possible that his path may continually pass through relatively similar points in space (including emotions and archetypal possession) and return him to ‘square one’ the symbolism of a curve that overlaps itself (when viewed from an aerial perspective) or to be more exact, a Helix, is used to denote this. The Helix is representative of a corkscrew consisting of infinite joined circles in an eternal curvature beyond time and space; a symbolic shape to explicate Acausal progression whereby the “end” of a cycle seamlessly blends with the start of a new one containing information (or resonances) of the old one. This can cause some considerable mental disturbance as the intellect struggles to make the Helix “fit” into a causal model i.e., to understand how it works using only three dimensions. As we have intimated, the essence of this helix is bereft of what can be understood by spatial geometry and the desperate attempts to understand its motion via shapes or visual processes, it must be grasped intuitively. It is for this reason the Helix is esoteric.

As another example: To ease the transition of the mind from a reality of concrete manifestations into one of ethereal modes of perception wherein ‘phantoms’ and the afore-perceived impossible can be brought forth by the magician within and without a meta-reality; without the rational/logical aspects of a Beings accustomed causal boundaries interfering and asserting themselves, the ONA have used a helix superimposed on a structure of Seven Spheres to aid in bridging the gap between rational understanding and the irrational intuition via a device referred to as the Tree of Wyrd.

The manner in which one uses the tree is a practical experiencing of the energies represented by the abstract form of seven spheres and their combinations via an anti-clockward helical progression through each during which the magician will pass or attempt to pass through what is referred to as the Abyss, and according to their Tradition a certain 'Nine Angles'. What the Nine Angles that the magician will encounter on this Journey are however, is almost entirely speculative, and for all the purported benefits of travelling them, many who do try to access these angles often go mad or are destroyed leaving behind a worn-out husk.

THEM believe that in a superimposition of ONA tradition and THEM theory, travelling certain Angles can alter the nature of a Life+ and may either: lead one back far more enlightened than otherwise to the path of the original Curve: or by accessing the Acausal to allow the genius of the subconscious to be awakened and the traveller to implement a new curve, that is to say, fundamentally alter Life+ and its Acausal charge.

On the Linear and the Psyche

Life+ is not a straight progression of events one after the other, but an indeterminate haze of experiences we categorise as past, present, and future via our dreams, thought processes and the way we individually understand the nature of things to be. Our dependence on Time being existent and its increasing importance in our daily lives is mostly responsible for the methods we use to place our experiences in such an order that they appear to have a linear sense. This is a habit we have learned from the prevailing trend in society around us. And yet, for all our categorisation of our experiences into past, present and future time slots, we are forever at the mercy of our memory's chronological displacement. We often remember things that we do not recall 'doing' – or argue with another person about the way things happened. In fact, we can never really be certain that what we remember is what happened, or for that matter vice-versa. We lend to that uncertainty via two mechanisms commonly used in psychology to explain states of consciousness.

The first is the 'Conscious' of which we have some immediate awareness and use to govern what we deem "our" interactions with the world because we choose to be who we think we are. The Second and more murky state is the 'Subconscious': a formative state that shapes us from birth acting on its own and in tandem with the Conscious state as a censor by highlighting all kinds of interesting bits of information, suppressing others, and drawing in from the stimuli around it all the many varied and intensely complex factors that go to make up what we are, beneath the surface of what we think we are.

It is currently unknown whether we can be certain that what we think of as ourselves is in control of our organism or is merely an extension of it. This uncertainty that we are only the face/voice of something far greater than what we have chosen to call “I” is conveniently suspended – allowing us to think of ourselves as persons with our own unique identity and independent life. And yet, most Life+ is lived under the allusion that our “independent life” is not at the mercy of the subconscious – a deliberate suppression for our sake that we may identify ourselves as possessed of consciousness.

Some speculate that we Do, Act and Feel not according to how “I” wishes to – but how “it” wishes to. If this is true, it means we are basically puppets all our life+, controlled and manipulated by the subconscious and used as a mere mouthpiece. This is a disturbing idea, not least because of the instability such a connotation creates for the rational mind. [But we of the magical view tend to think more positively about this – and continue to explore the possibility of joining the conscious and subconscious aspects of our organism into one super consciousness.]

With all this uncertainty going on it is a wonder we manage to achieve any understanding at all, but what is important about the nature of this see-sawing disassociation is the evidence of the subconscious being influenced by external and internal stimulus from birth (not to mention hereditary genes and DNA) and being a survival mechanism; readily adopting the prevailing stimuli from its environment during initial formation. And based on these assumptions; in agreement with the ONA, we of THEM propound that the probability of an Acausal Dimension is likely, and challenges the dominance of the ‘realness’ of a purely, linear world. If the Acausal Dimension does exist, and our previous assertions that we are but the result of a charge from it into this dimension, then we must ask – can we make independent choices in life or has choice been pre-determined for us?

Returning to the analogy of the Fool; the Fool’s Journey see-saws between two extremes: The first is a set path of pre-determined outcomes and a grand scheme of destiny and the second the option of choices at various crossroads to implement his own Wyrd by taking the reins. Whether his Life is already set or is determined by him is a question of degree – he may never know. And we ourselves may have to settle, at least for the moment, with the idea that this is a mystery that will be with us a long time. But both of these extremes have something relevant to our topic in common – they each maintain a course; it makes no difference to the theorem of Angles and Curves whether the course is known or unknown. Either way, in a Life+ that has been pre-determined or one made up as he goes along, the Fool will encounter a series of decisions and events, places and people where choice is possible (or appears so) so both will have the quality we require to introduce angles. Now to look more closely at how Life+ is assumed to take on a helical form – is there a rational logical basis for this supposition or is it an irrational esoteric projection?

On Law

We all travel a path in Life that we often unconsciously feel is the right one – and things seem to progress fluidly for us when we are travelling the right path; the path of least resistance: this ‘smooth sailing’ is the Curve. We seldom know unless we are lucky or gifted the exact destination of our path in Life+, but something, tells us to stay on a path and when we have strayed from it. This guidance might be called morals, ethics, code of conduct, calling, hunch, intuition etc. but in all cases is that secret guiding light inside us that knows where we are going. And it is a light that leads us around our path again and again always taking us back to where we started with just a little more knowledge than before about the answer. That is, unless we extinguish that light. The occurrence of numerous coincidences (also known as Synchronicity) is usually a tell-tale sign that we are on the right path – while an absence of them is an indicator that we have strayed. This is not however any reassurance that the Curve is benign... simply that this irrational guidance is possibly an esoteric LAW.

THEM define no absolutes for LAW but suggest, Life+ is relative to other Life+, it being joined by an Acausal bond, Life+ is both an Angle and a Curve, its own and an intersection in others, Life+ serves an interrelated ‘purpose’ (if purpose exists) even if the significance of that purpose is relatively small and serves only as angles to another Life+, Life, angles and curves are expressions of the Cosmic Being. Yet even with examples to draw on, Angles and Curves are one of the more elusive theories encountered where definition is difficult to apply – simply because there is nothing concrete to apply it to.

On Angles

THEM are at odds to define the Angles as subjective/objective or real/imagined as they can be experienced as irrational dimensions that intersect a rational curve, and vice versa. ONA defines the Nine Angles as the Seven Spheres, the Abyss between Mars and the Sun, and what comes after the Tree of Wyrð itself. As such they are energies neither localised in time or place but in archetypal resonance. They may be encountered on an inner level within the mind of the thinking Being, and also without. For example, this manuscript in all its forms, on THEM's computers, in the publishers, and as a book of paper in your hand, are physical Angles. Our thoughts on angles are an angle, and your own thoughts on us and angles are also an angle. As a LAW, All angles are gateways to other angles.

Imagine a gigantic stone tower with an equally gigantic spiral staircase winding its way up around the inside. This is a good but inaccurate analogy for the Curved path.

Now imagine every so often (say every three steps) there is a door adjoining the staircase. Some are open and some are closed. You look through an open door and see a long hallway filled with thousands of other doors; some are open some are closed; and through the ones that are open there are more hallways visible. Now you are imagining Angles. If you carry straight on up the steps you will eventually reach the top of the Staircase. If you leave the staircase to step through a door into a hallway you will quickly find yourself in a maze within mazes within a maze and, unless you have a map, (or a ball of string) there will be little hope of finding your way back. Nor can you be sure that opening one door will not open other doors and suck you through.

Angles are vertices of alternate and often alien dimensions, pockets of strange time and space (or timelessness/spacelessness) that we may fall into or open up either knowingly or unwittingly while travelling a curved path. Generally, awareness of the Angles is limited to events of a major nature – what might occur were one to begin to see every minute event as possessed of separate choices and intersections and such a mindsets effect on the Being, is as yet itself an unexplored angle branching off from this essay – it may be conjectured to prove overwhelming for the individual and simply paralyse and prevent progression of either angular or curved momentum. The Curved Path is the path taken to pass with the least possible resistance through the Angles; an optimal transition through the sharp planes from A-Z united so closely as to form a gradual curve (i.e., as an inaccurate example – a run of wise choices).

Whilst it is an option for a Being to travel a straight line or a curve – each intersection where other lines/curves meet enables the Being to change direction: switching tracks much like the changing of rails for a train. However, not all paths are possible for all Beings, and while a Being may theoretically change direction at any of the intersection points available to it, just how far the Being may travel the angles is pre-determined by the Acausal Charge. And now we come to another _expression of the Cosmic Being –it is of no small disconcert that many have written at length (i.e., Lovecraft) that we are not alone in our travel of the Angles...

On the Dwellers of the Absurd

It is commonly held by ONA, Lovecraft, and others that the Angles are the home of Beings and creatures that are hostile or indifferent to us and meeting such beings can cause our death and/or destruction. The risk in veering off ones curved path and into the plane of an alternate Angle is in taking ‘wrong turns’ and some have suggested that the Beings of the angles themselves may play an influential factor in this. Although the nature of these Beings is acausal – they are often looked upon with the same causal prejudice that influences the linear view. It is often misunderstood that their reputed appearance is merely a presentation on our dimensional level of their essence. For example – mental illness on the causal level might be equated with meeting a being within the Angles on the acausal level.

As an example, let's say you, the wanderer, are trying to make sense of the Universe and are drawn to read up on alchemy, spiritualism and the like. At this time, you are making many discoveries and following the Curve. Then suddenly you make a choice (say, to study black magic) and are consequently consumed by it. The Angle is the alternate choice/door that opened up to you as you were following the Curve – in this case the option to study black magic. After leaving the Curve and entering the new Angle you are drawn through a maze of other doors and passages (a selection of all possible experiences) that have become available to you. Lost in a maze and maddened by your dabbling you go slightly insane and become delusional ever after, unable to get back on the Curve to really reason things through – i.e., you become wholly irrational. Or things get really bad; you can no longer conceal your Journey and maintain a functional role in society and are committed to an asylum. The pan dimensional nature of this whole experience could be said to be the nature of one of these Beings that dwell within the Angles – or a meeting with one of these Beings; a gargantuan cosmic labyrinth of wormholes connected by strange intersections of time and space to unknown alternate realities. We're so often looking for an overt slaving ten-jawed abomination with curled horns and razor-sharp teeth and the like that we miss the genuinely sinister nature of such Beings altogether.

This is an extreme example however – for not all Angles are immediately destructive, on the contrary many are instructive. Yet the nature of these Beings is alien, non-objective, and particular to us. Angles whereby contents are beneficial to one traveller may be abysmally horrific to another. It should be noted that travelling Angles is akin to calculated gambling – one never knows what awaits one and there is a definite danger of getting horribly lost in quanta that will drive one mad. When viewed in their proper light of course; all are removed from our understanding of good or evil, operating on unknown laws and physics.

On Nine

Virtually any path that one takes from the Curve, no matter how small, is an Angle. What is to be wondered; is whether Angles should or can altogether be avoided, or if they are necessary to open the way to all that we do not yet understand. The ONA seems to appreciate angles as able to alchemically alter a person and thus to be inherently useful for opening the mind to the hitherto inconceivable acausal, broadening the psyche and expanding us within and without. Each Angle reveals that to the magician which cannot be communicated here; a journey into a plane beyond the human world and its comprehension – an alien dimension. ONA Tradition – if we are to believe it – knows the location of nine of these Angles; and subsequent survival of travel through these Angles is said to bring with it incredible power and the ability to access ones potential acausal charge. In fact – a falling away from the Tree of Wyrd, resulting in mastery of oneself and the option to implement a Destiny/Wyrd separated from the conditions of the Aeon.

If the magician visits these Nine Angles, just as an earth journey far from one's homeland brings insight, wisdom, and knowledge vastly different from that which one previously held – reality is present and intellectual speculation dissolved by virtue of being at that place to break prejudice and projection- so too will the magician return with wild stories and knowledge of the bizarre and wonderful things they have witnessed. That is, until the magician reaches the Abyss. If they return – the quanta observed may be of such a nature (or non-nature) as to be incommunicable. But while the Journey is speculative, preparations are not – ONA and many other groups train an individual to confront and if possible, integrate/conquer the Beings that dwell within the Angles: including THEM.

On Travelling the Angles

The average human consciousness is geared toward denial of such a Great Work as altering one's base nature being humanly possible – magical training is the acceptance of it and the subsequent Quest to do so. While the average consciousness fears and hides from the 'demons' in its subconscious that occupy it; building shields and spears to arm itself from itself, the magician seeks to integrate them and digs deep to uncover even the darkest, disturbing facets that lay buried in the primal layers of the subconscious. Because of this ability to confront the horrific formative nightmares locked away that the conscious rejects and is not accustomed to, accessing the subconscious contains dire risk, but likewise, the promising reward of revealing what lies beneath the shadow. [In the ONA systemic this undertaking is associated with the first sphere of the TOW, The Moon].

To analyse the stimuli that constitute one's projections and perspective is to access the darkest and disturbing facets of oneself. If this can be done on a regular basis, the magician is gradually desensitised to the 'demons' in the subconscious and learns both how to dissolve his "I", assert his "I" and crucially, master the delicate balance of doing both. Dissolving "I" is highly dangerous – psychosis and suicide are not unknown for those who have deliberately tried. But by gradually accepting all surfacing facets of the subconscious as beyond oneself but still a part of, a special detachment is built where the magician "listens to both voices" and then decides what the preferred contents of "I" are to be.

Such a communication might go like this: "There is a distinction and there is no distinction, I am. It is. I am the human face of a beast. "I" is conscious. "It" is conscious. I am part of my subconscious – my subconscious is part of me. "I" is not responsible for the contents of my subconscious – even though those contents are mine. I am detached from emotion for the irrational. I will not be hurt by its contents – they are mine and yet not mine."

As a result of this ‘in contradictis flux’ they are often more prepared for the unknown Angles than is the layman. It is this esoteric way of thinking that enables survival of the Angles by developing selective attachment and detachment of conscious contents. The sanitised “collective agreement of reality” is at the mercy of the alien paradigm of the Angles and generally unaware of the Beings that torment its inhabitants. From the magicians’ points of view Angles may at least be recognised as distinct from the Curved Path, a distinction the unwary cannot see. When suddenly encountered by the unwary – Angles appear horrific, hellish, a nightmare to those without knowledge of their existence; whereas for a magician, while the Angles are still very dangerous, their existence does not take them by surprise, and such meta-phenomena are vital to recognise if a magician is to progress beyond the human.

This ability to see Angles, offers the magician a greater choice – to make a conscious decision whether to travel the Angle, to pass by the Angle, or to merely glimpse through the door as they pass the Angle and continue on the Curved Path. Yet the ONA’s position offers up many tantalising questions – the most prominent of which, is why Nine Angles? To have a Tradition based of nine is logical evidence that this number of angles is or has been agreed on by a consensus – objectively. That is to say that the states of these nine angles can be or have been experienced by a majority of persons, in a manner so similar, as to allow agreement on their existence. Part Two of this manuscript will examine the various suppositions such an agreement creates and analyse the veracity of ONA’s nine angles.

ON ANGLES, CURVES AND THE ONA [2]

The aims of this second Manuscript are three-fold:

Aim 1# – to “soften” the belief in the tangible existence of the nine angles as specific entities based on a geometric quality and numeric quantity.

Aim 2# – to claim the use of nine angles is essentially irrelevant in comparison to what ONA are actually trying to convey with it – an alchemical formula – and use direct evidence from ONA manuscripts to support this claim.

Aim 3# – to show that the ONA’s nine angles and dark gods are vehicles used to bring about this alchemical process and are eventually discarded. Since (1) they are abstractions that serve the purpose of; – forming a base of perpetual desire to metamorphose in the human psyche by copying the example of the Dark Gods metaphysical nature and (2) are mere handholds in the simple alchemical formula that is behind ONA making manuscripts public.

What can we discern about the origin of the number nine within the Sinister Tradition? ONA manuscripts speak of a tome by a scribe named Iamblichus in which there is set out the history of ‘The Third Way of Magick’. The surety in the tone of the ONA manuscripts is of an authoritative nature; the kind of arrogance that one would expect from the collated distillation of thousands of direct experiences over a long period of time, and is almost a species of Empirical Data but for the fact that most of the proof is esoteric and remains locked away from the eyes – in the changes of the individual members psyches.

Logically – If ONA’s esoteric objectivity is to be believed in, then a prevailing consensus of nine is or has been agreed on for at least 50 years i.e. since the name of the Order of Nine Angles was taken. This is an indication that the nine angles can be experienced in a manner so similar by its members, as to allow agreement on the nature and number of the angle’s existence. If such an agreement has been made – then someone or something seems to have superior insight into the processes a human being goes through to form its mental and magical capacities. Because of ONA’s secretive nature, conclusions must be drawn from their own material and deductive reasoning made as to where this superior insight stems from.

Sinister Beginnings

It is said that much of the Sinister Tradition was passed down on an oral basis – without the existing form and structure and was only later transfigured into the concise and developed pathway that it now is. In this transfiguration it would seem ONA has drawn lore for the Sinister Tradition from several ancient treatises utilising key aspects such as alchemy, angles and an unusual concentration on the number nine.

From Concerning Traditions of the ONA – “ According to tradition, the traditions themselves, inherited by the present grand master from the mistress who initiated him, were said to be a survival of what has been called ‘the third way of magic’”. Notes by ONA on the Tradition indicate the Order only adopted its name of Nine Angles in the last 50-60 years; therefore it is reasonable to suppose that a) there has always been a genuine current pertaining to Nine Angles passed down by Tradition b) certain developments led to the adoption of an esoteric system which better explicated The Way via a strong emphasis of the resonant qualities of the numbers nine and seven c) as a proto-tradition a sinister aura was cultivated around the Order by inventing several mysterious-sounding literary devices around an aesthetic base of the numbers Seven and Nine d) the Order is composed of elements of all of the above.

Sources of Nine

THEM believes “D” to be the most likely explanation. There is evidence to suggest that material relating to the use of Nine has been adopted by the Order – but which came first, the Angles or the Nine? Examining some of the more important aspects of the Tradition may provide some answers. As explained in ‘Naos’ (the Orders Guide to Hermetic Magick) the psychological aspects of the Star Game pieces are an extension of the nine angles that form nine states of consciousness. This system (which also draws on ideas of Jung's) is resonant with the Enneagram. The Enneagram is very old and is believed to have originated with the Sufis in the Middle East. The system groups people into nine types ('ennea' is Greek for the number nine.) and teaches that people of a given type often behave and react in similar ways. i.e. Personality Types. The correlation between the Enneagram and the Star Game is strong, and would suggest the ONA have drawn on Eastern esotericism in an unusual contradiction to their claim to represent Western roots.

Nine is also the number of Muses in Greek Mythology – Calliope (epic poetry and eloquence), Euterpe (music and lyric poetry), Erato (love poetry), Polyhymnia (oratory or sacred poetry), Clio (history), Melpomene (tragedy), Thalia (comedy), Terpsichore (choral song and dance) and Urania (astronomy). Almost all of the Arts of these Nine are covered in some detail by the ONA, especially History in the case of Clio. Works by ONA have included but are not limited to; studies on Greek Myth; Greek to English translations of the poetry of Sappho; Treatises on Cliology (known as Aeonics*) and Epic Poetry.

*[Aeonics – whereas External and Internal magic are contained on a personal level; – Aeonics is the belief in Cycles of a macro level that lead to the growth and decline of Civilisations, over long periods of time. Thus Aeonic Magic is to enact supra-personal change and influence beyond the individual on these vast cycles (an Aeon) directly/indirectly and cause change on a massive scale.]

Another direct connotation to 9 is from Yggdrasil and the Runes. ONA has close ties to Aryan and Pan-European cultural lore and the Nordic legend of Yggdrasil, the World Tree with nine sub-worlds. ONA has obviously added touches of this mythos to its own with the inclusion of the archetype Hel and the name of their journal "Fenrir" after the Fenris Wolf.

THE NINE WORLDS: Aelfham, Wanaham, Muspell, Middangeard, Nifleheim, Eotenham, Sweartaelfham, Helheim.

There is also evidence to suggest Occult significance of the number nine has been utilised by the Order for its relation to Satanism; for instance 666 added together becomes 18, $1+8=9$. So perhaps nine was chosen for the magical way in which it behaves and the qualities it represents. In numerology, number nine is the transition number. It is the last period of work before the end and starting over. Thus, nine is a symbolic exhibition of qualities that parallel the ONA's alchemical disposition. If 9 is multiplied by itself, or any single number, the two figures which result will always equal 9 when added together. $9 \times 6 = 54$ $5+4=9$ $9 \times 3 = 27$ $2+7=9$. The outcome is always the same. Also, if you add the numbers 1-9, the answer is 45, which equals 9. $1 \times 9 = 9$ $9 \times 9 = 81$, $8+1=9$.

It is also possible fundamentals of the ONA's belief in seven have been drawn from an empathy with the forerunners of the promotion of seven such as Robert Fludd. ONA has mentioned in its handbooks and journals "Naos" and "Fenrir" a solid preference for seven and nine – and made clear its position on the inefficiency of other number systems. "Nine Angles" may well be simple prejudice – and part and parcel of a result of adopting the chosen system of seven fundamentals laid down by Fludd and other Septenary fundamentalists. Or the Order may simply have taken a fancy to the number seven. All, some, (or none) of the above may have influenced the use of a structure of nine within the Order but there is direct evidence within the works of the ONA to suggest an adoption from these systems. Such an adoption implies that there Be something to adopt them to – and any such adoptions serve as an extension of a prime base – a core. That there are aspects of each of the Muse, Enneagram, Yggdrasil and Numerology scattered throughout the Tradition; strongly suggests that much of ONA's use of seven and nine is arbitrary.

Consider the Musical Correspondences and their Planetary Alignment from Greek Tradition in conjunction with those of the ONA:

Naos: The Greek Heptagram:

A Saturn I A Sun
 B Jupiter B Mars
 C Mars C Jupiter
 D Sun D Saturn I
 E Mercury E Moon
 F Venus F Mercury
 G Moon G Venus

= Lets give directions to the columns. Imagine the First is descending down the page in order and the Second ascending in rank of planetary order. Although there seems to be no synchronicity, if both combinations were each drawn on the circumference of a cotton reel, and one of the reels was turned around so as to line up both Saturn marks at the same point – then we would have:

A Saturn A Saturn
 B Jupiter B Jupiter
 C Mars C Mars
 D Sun D Sun
 E Mercury E Venus
 F Venus F Mercury
 G Moon G Moon

Now, only two planets are out of sync: Venus and Mercury. The new alignment seems strangely coincidental. Has the ONA simply reversed the Greek Heptagram to create an original cosmology for their Tradition or is the Greek version in some way flawed? If so, is the minor discrepancy of Mercury and Venus a deliberate training device to keep aspirants on their mental toes and weed out those unable to make the flawed connection? Or simply an error? The synchronicity with the Heptagram is striking – the question is, is it arbitrary?

From “A Note on Seven” – “For the West, the cosmos has always been apprehended as a division of seven fundamental vibrations – a concept which originated from Albion. Throughout the ages, this division has been symbolised by various forms; stars, trees, metals – and planets. The forms so chosen are, for the most part, used in a symbolic sense, rather than a literal one. Thus, with regard to the planets, those ascribed to the spheres of the Tree of Wyrð as used within the Septenary System [or ‘Seven-Fold Sinister Way’; Traditional Satanism, and so on] are used purely as symbols to represent the seven fundamental forces of the cosmos, rather than there being forces literally ascribed to the planets themselves, or the planets somehow creating those forces.”

That there is a belief of seven colours, seven vibrations, seven days and so on, as attributes of the structure of the cosmos – allows us to surmise that other information of an antique or occult nature has also influenced the use of nine and nine angles. Seven planets are used to re-present the energies of seven of the angles, and two occult angles Star and Man the remaining two. ONA itself insists no relation to the planets, but uses them as a simple abstract to allow the initiate to grasp the esoteric concept of the angles – then the angles are used in the same manner to grasp greater concepts beyond what can be achieved via symbolism. ONA themselves admit the use of the number of angles as an abstraction to be used to apprehend the essence of esoteric energies beyond the possibility of being symbolised. I.e. that the Nine Angles are neither real nor historical. The adoption of Nine Angles is important for its representational purposes only. Below he ONA speaks of itself as a proto-tradition, a numinous order without historical evidence:

From “Nasz Dom – A Note on the Esoteric Tradition” “... the ONA is an expression [of This], beyond any of the forms through which it expresses itself: its credence does not lie in words, images – histories; Tradition. Expressions such as the Sinister Tarot or the Names we sometimes give to those entities/forces we describe as the Dark Gods are a means to understanding this, and not, in themselves the essence”

From “Initiation and Beyond” – “In practical terms, this means that the forces of the cosmos (including magical forces) are approached and understood in a rational way through archetypal symbolism (such as the Septenary and the correspondences), then through abstract symbolism (and thus ‘thought’) until an empathy is developed within the individual.”

From “EIRA – A Satanic Guide to Future Magic”–“this path of genuine magic does not involve however the slavish following of some ‘cosmic doctrine/mandate, or some such dogma. It involves the individual in freeing themselves from all influences in order to live, or become, the reality of the forces of Life itself.”

Dark Gods

Therefore as an initiate attains the teachings of the lesson – they may discard not only the symbolism of the planets, but also the symbolism of Nine Angles and Dark Gods, altogether. Thus the abstraction of the “Nine Angles” act as a conduit to understanding esoteric forces in essence; a bridge between the causal and acausal to prepare for apprehension of these forces as they are. The ONA supports this claim by its indifference to the manner in which an individual applies the Dark Gods to their understanding: demonstrating that the concept of the Dark Gods themselves is irrelevant to the underlying theme of alchemical transformation.

From “The Dark Gods 2 “– “While the Dark Gods may be perceived as ‘convenient abstractions’ or Archetypal Energy, they may also be regarded as having an actual existence (and it is up to the individual to decide which of these, or neither, is the correct for him/herself). The Dark Tradition, continued by a small number of adepts since the Hyperborean aeon to the present day contains many tales of the origins of the dark gods. Whether one chooses to see these as myth or mythos, is, at the end of the day, a matter of personal taste according to which viewpoint is the most magickally useful.”

From “H.P. Lovecraft and Dark Gods” – “The nine angles ... are represented in the Septenary star game and it is through this symbolic representation that the magick of the dark gods is manifest...”

If we take a look at the roots of the Dark Gods, we can see from early records of ONA’s growth that it is strongly alchemical based – even for a proto-tradition with no actual evidence of historical roots but for those it has begun to grow in the years since it has been called said Order. Nor does it possess desire to have these roots or impress upon others its authenticity:

From notes on the sinister tradition (Kaberoi) – “according to Sinister Tradition, the mysteries concerned the Dark Gods – in various “shape-shifting’ forms – and related how Demeter gave the first initiates of this tradition ... as well as showing how an individual, through various rites which involved Gaia, women, sacred marriage and so on, could be transformed to a different realm of consciousness.”

Alchemia

But it is pre-occupied at a fundamental level with shape-shifting and processes of transformation. This in itself may be a reason for the obscurity of the names of the Dark Gods themselves – and although not entirely evident, offers room for the fabrication of their names – and if the real task is to share an alchemical formula, why not? The names of the gods are only of cursory importance. It is now important to emphasise that THEM do not mean the ONA formula to be alchemy in the literal sense – this would be restrictive in every sense. The best approximate we can give without writing another manuscript – is the process of being a changer and a changeling.

THEM expound that beneath the decorative framework of the Orders use of Gods and Angles and so on, there is a current put forth of a simple alchemical formula and even beneath the alchemical formula [if one can extract the writers intention by careful and magical dissolving of the effects of design such texts carry] the ONA there is a core that once seen begins to spread out again into effects and designs, like a germinating flower. Truthfully, what this core is depends on who you are. But even a cursory examination across the breadth of the ONA manuscripts will reveal a synchronous pattern present in almost all key tenets – the urging of change. ONA manuscripts are laden with words such as transcend, cultivation, mastery, tradition, evolution, transformation, metasomatosi, and so on...

THEM believe ONA Satanism could care less for the use of Nine Angles than it could about creating a series of effects in an individual that lead that individual to always try to change themselves and those around them via a perpetual alchemy. It is right to note that ONA use the Nine Angles in a sense unique to their Tradition but THEM aim to show that this attempt to develop this “way of thinking” within individuals is ultimately of tantamount importance to ONA than the tangible existence of any “angles” – be they nine or otherwise.

Perhaps the confusion arises because of the term Angles. When it could just as easily be called “Nine Ways” if not for the fact that this would limit the number of ways the angles could combine with one another to form variations. It is an apprehension of nine energies that rule the causal – a combination of these nine energies in everything, and also more importantly – a slipping into the form of each of these energies or ways of looking at the world, adopting a certain energy (or combination once each is distilled enough to allow conscious mixing) as though one were that operating energy communicated through ones organism – or more precisely, taking on the form of one of the nine angles to operate by, similar to the use of the adoption of animal energies in martial arts.

Consider also the use of Nine Angles in Physis: the eight directions of a compass, plus a ninth to make an additional plane, i.e. the Martial Artist themselves.

One of the dominating themes of the ONA manuscripts is combining two aspects to make a third aspect. That third aspect is then used as the base material to be added to another aspect, the two then making another third. And so on.

Some brief examples:

- 1) When the Ego is combined with the Self then there emerges the Adept.
- 2) Colour correspondences for the Ego and the Self are added together to form the Adept colours.
- 3) Ego and Self incenses, which are combined together to form the Adept incense.
- 4) In the most important of the Orders rituals the Priest (masculine) and Priestess (feminine) join together (Heiros Gamos) with a crystal tetrahedron to form a Nexion.
- 5) The initiate is to combine the Unconscious with the Conscious to develop “Over conscious”.
- 6) Mercury, Salt, Sulphur are three kinds of Time.

If making a round of man and woman makes one magical tetrahedron – and a crystal is another, and joined they become another full tetrahedron that opens a Nexion; then it follows that as the tree of Wyrd has nine causal angles, and nine acausal angles – and we view these two sets of nine as representing the man and the woman in the last example, then according to the formula there must be another tetrahedron that fits with the tree of Wyrd to open a Nexion too. And so on, and so on... What is it? Or, is it the very formula that is the secret?

This use of a triplicate process of change is spread throughout the manuscripts: From Selling Water by the River – “First, the discovery of the unique Destiny of that individual, second the living of that Destiny, and third, for whose Destiny becomes fulfilled by such living: again the formula.”

From Introduction to Traditional Satanism – “The essence of genuine Satanism can be stated: it is a way to inner development, the goal of which is a new individual. This way involves three essential stages and these exemplify the spirit of that way and the individuals who follow it. The first is direct experience; the second is direct practice and the third self-development.”

From Manipulation II – “Initial manipulation is often of the external kind – an adjunct to external magick – later, it becomes “internal” ... and later still, aeonic...” An operation of nine angles for perfection; three angles of thesis: three angles of antithesis: and three angles of synthesis. A triangle squared. Whatever you want to call it, the ONA’s use of three is not accidental or intended – but a result of the nature of the formula of Change which they are conveying. The quotations are not taken out of context – I have not selected these quotes because they affirm my theory, but because there are no notes that do not. This triplicate process of thesis-antithesis-synthesis is a formula for finding balance and perpetual change.

From Makrosmos – “this is the meaning of sinister magick: to bring a synthesis via the conflict of opposites that exist within and without the individual. This synthesis is the result of a practical journey, where this bifurcation must still be experienced if the forces that do still exist within the psyche of the initiate are to be eventually understood, beyond intellectual apprehension, as ‘abstractions’.”

From Notes on Study and Practice in Modern Satanism – [the MS discusses many practices to be undertaken and learned from and then] – “following these tasks – which should last for a few years – the novice moves on to the next stage of their esoteric development, that of the grade ritual of internal adept. This is a rite of synthesis and thus the emergence of the adept” – The Adept then goes on to become Master, Magus, Immortal etc. via the same synthesis formula.

From A Satanic Revealing – “to counter this pseudo-Satanism we published or made available various articles and manuscripts – not specifically to “teach” anything or even to gain members. Rather to engender controversy; to create a reaction. This is the dialectic of change: thesis-antithesis-synthesis yin-yang-tao called by whatever name the process is the same” “...since each novice is required to actually undertake works of darkness in the real world in order that they can go beyond the illusions of ‘good’ and ‘evil’ and so discover that balance within them which is unique to each person... .. it is this balance which is the essence of Adeptship “

From The Satanic Way of Living – “but despite this progress, the overcoming of challenges, the achievements, the exultation that arises when one lives satanically, will never end.”

From Thernn – [ms speaks of Satan then] – “this is the secret of Satanism: that it restores to a society and individuals, at any given point in history, that which it is lacking. Thus there is balance, and thus synthesis.” “The process of dialectical change which governs evolution”.

Whilst the Nine angles have been used within the Orders ritual Magic – there is even more evidence to suggest the underlying belief in nine energies is only temporary – the symbols themselves used to show the nine in fact, are completely altered from their original planetary symbolism into strange glyphs. Again transformation of what are thought of as key immutable symbols into something more abstract – the same process intended by the Order that an initiate should repeat with the idea of Nine Angles and all external handholds for that matter.

Simply put – Withdraw your projections; forget the specifics of the Sinister Tradition and see how ONA have crafted their tradition. It is a key to understanding why. When you begin to see things naturally and always, in terms of how they were created, what tools were used to craft them, and marvel at the intricacy of the idea behind the text (essence behind appearance); to know the signs that reveal a creations intentions which may very well be contrary outward appearance; you will begin to understand the why. Always are we one step removed from the source of our inspiration and creation – We are behind a great act performed, behind our performance is the inspiration of the Sinister Tradition, behind the facing of the Sinister Tradition are the artists, and behind the artists? Or THEM? Is behind the right word anyway...?

TRAPS AND TRAPEZOIDS: PART 1

– THE ONA AND THE TEMPLE OF SET – [COMPARING CURRENTS]

+O+

As a witness to the long-standing enmity between ONA and The Temple of Set – I have taken it upon myself to delve into a parallel study of both in several veins – the first of which is merely a form-based comparison of the ideology of the two groups. I have always felt that both groups share far more in common than they seem to admit or notice – due to being constructed on the same traditional esoteric and exoteric principles of form that all groups and currents share as the source of their being. In Part I my particular interest lies in examining/discussing the similarities between Xeper and the Acausal – the organisational structure of both groups, commonly shared views, and the advantages of adoption of forms by either group.

To my knowledge, there are only a handful of documents comparing the ONA to the TOS – comprising the selection of letters written by Anton Long and replied to by Dr. Michael Aquino that became The Satanic Letters of Stephen Brown as well as a treatise of the different Satanic currents, attitudes and groups and a direct comparison by Anton Long of the differences between ONA and the TOS called The Temple of Set: A Brief Satanic Analysis.

Whilst a Nexion of the ONA – THEM are not interested in championing one group over another and are detached from the outcome of this study. We, as inspired by the ONA, are interested only in dissolving the facade of forms to get to the bones beneath. That is the Only authentic way forward.

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding historical account of the divergent current of the TOS:] The Church of Satan was a fairly simple, linear story, to which a relatively small number of individuals made specialised contributions over a brief period of time. The Temple of Set may be more likened to an explosion within the heads of a great many individuals of rich and diverse backgrounds, yielding a mix of ideas that would constantly be shared, reconsidered, and compounded. The extent of this corpus of knowledge is already staggering, and of course still continues its exponential growth throughout a variety of communications and records systems.

+O+ In a similar fashion, the unity of three Temples in the 1960's of Camlad, Temple of the Sun and the Noctulians – a previously underground sect of specialised knowledge of the Dark Gods Mythos, Sinister Tradition and Septenary Way became the Order of Nine Angles headed by AL, who codified and expanded the garbled records and smatterings of the Way into a coherent practical elucidation supplying over time the majority of the pre-fayen corpus of essays rituals and materials. Working underground until the late nineties the decision to take the ONA public and make its teachings available lead to a similar explosion within the heads of a great many individuals of rich and diverse backgrounds yielding a mix of ideas that would constantly be shared, reconsidered and compounded. The complexity of this thriving movement would come to be the Living Sinister Tradition which presented the Sinister through its initiates and Adepts as a symbiosis of Change that did not stay static but re-wrote itself as each initiate added their own insights, changes and wisdom to the collective pool of ONA resources. Like the TOS, the ONA attracts and suits Promethean types striving to increase the collective evolution of humanity by creating a new individual through self-becoming. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding the Initiatory Elect standards of the TOS:] The Temple of Set presents a somewhat different problem. While I intend that this book be as direct and unambiguous as possible, Setian philosophy requires “initiatory consciousness” – not only an interest in the subject matter but both the intellectual and metaphysical capacity to comprehend it in its ultimate sense. Within the Temple, persons possessing such capacity are referred to as “Elect” and are deemed to have potential for initiation. Those lacking it, best intentions notwithstanding, would find the initiatory experience bewildering, frustrating, and meaningless. Accordingly the Temple endeavours to not admit them, or to disaffiliate them as soon as possible if accidentally admitted. It is much the same with this book. There are aspects of it that may either enter your mind like flame or just leave you confused and annoyed. My pleasure in the former case; my apologies in the latter.

+O+ Likewise does the ONA make these demands of intellectual and metaphysical capacity of its prospective adherents and champions Elitism. Hostia, Naos, the Deofel Quintet – standard texts of the ONA were less apologetic than Aquino – though they also sought to break the complexity of their materials down into introductions and steps in as many cases – often the material presented was given no explanation or hinted at further mysteries that could be grasped only by the sagacious. The ONA does not welcome, or uses as it sees fit, those who do not possess this faculty of the Initiatory Elect as tools, mundane or means to an end. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding the non-finality or Ad Accumulum Infinitum of the TOS:] [Non]finally, The Temple of Set, like The Church of Satan for many years/editions, will be a “living book”, subject to any number of changes, additions, corrections, and updates as various knowledgeable readers comment upon it and/or I refine my own information and opinions.

+O+ Here again does the ONA follow suit emphasising its current as a ‘Living’ nexion or kollektive of nexions which thrive and change as initiates travel the Way – learning, growing, overcoming – and updating, revising, continuously the exoteric and esoteric magic, method, form and mythos of the Order through its consequent nexions. Like the TOS the ONA spurns the trappings of dogma, aiming for a malleable, flexible current that allows changes to be made reflecting the journey of life and its ever-changing flux through individual achievements and realisations which (hopefully) culminate in wisdom. Great pains are taken to point out this ever-change – and that something written long ago or even yesterday may no longer be viewed as valid by the always changing/learning initiate even as footprints they leave in the sand may appear to be fresh and living statements by those who chance for the first time upon them – without a date to mark its timeline. Neither the TOS nor the ONA like the idea of things to be seen as set in stone.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding the Initiatory Elect standards of the TOS:]
As is detailed in The Church of Satan, three tensions and dilemmæ inherent in that institution came to a boiling point by early 1975. Among these: (1) Was the Church of Satan theistic or atheistic?

+O+ Because each individual is expected to discern the answers to this and in fact all other questions for themselves – the ONA’s current leaves room for both, either or neither pending the whim/geometry of the Initiate and the relevance of any belief to the aim of the Initiates dynamic sinister path. S/he may even leave room for all three to co-habit.+O+

(a) Did it believe in Satan and his fellow dæmons as actual intelligent, active, wilful entities extant in time and space? Or did it disbelieve in the existence of such beings [along with the Judæo-Christian God], and just use them for spooky window-dressing in rituals that were merely imaginative psychodramas?

+O+ Because each individual is expected to discern the answers to this and in fact all other questions for themselves – the ONA’s current leaves room for both, either or neither or more pending the whim/geometry of the Initiate and the relevance of any belief to the aim of the Initiates dynamic sinister path. +O+

(b) In this same vein, was there perhaps a “two-tiered” attitude within the Church, whereby its High Priest and Priesthood indeed privately believed in Satan and other dæmons, while at the same time presenting to the public an attitude of atheistic satire? Per this interpretation, ordinary members of the Church were initially/generally treated much as the public, yet selectively introduced to the deeper, true metaphysics as they might show themselves capable of understanding and accepting it.

+O+ Because each individual is expected to discern the answers to this and in fact all other questions for themselves – the ONA’s current leaves room for both, either or neither or more pending the whim/geometry of the Initiate and the relevance of any belief to the aim of the Initiates dynamic sinister path. +O+

(2) The original Church of Satan in San Francisco had been inaugurated, part seriously, part whimsically, by Anton Szandor LaVey in 1966 as largely a personal vehicle for advertisement and profit, based upon his colourful personality, extensive knowledge of the Black Arts and occultism generally, and atmospheric house in which to give lectures, hold meetings, and perform rituals. However, as over the years the Church expanded beyond San Francisco, through individuals and groups having little or no direct exposure to these specific original allures, it began to become more of an impersonal institution united by common beliefs and ideas. Its focus was indeed Satan; Anton was revered as his High Priest and Earthly deputy only. Correspondingly the decentralised Church behaved more like a nonprofit organisation than a profitable business.

+O+ The same distaste or consternation that Aquino relates is shared by AL – who cites these factors as amongst those that prompted the ONA to surface into the limelight in the late 90’s to ‘reveal the pseudos’ for who they are and share the genuine tradition of the Sinister publicly in what he seemed to think was fast becoming a sycophantic circus. In both cases – the present state of a form (Satanism) prompted both Aquino and Long to take actions of their own to rectify the course as they saw fit. +O+

(3) The more the Church grew, and the more Anton himself became a well-known popular icon, the more withdrawn and private he became. In part this was understandably a reaction to years of being iconized, lionised, media-exploited, and sometimes threatened. He simply became weary of it, exhausted by the demands of having to constantly keep up his Mephistophelian glamour-image. Unfortunately this reclusiveness also extended to the Church of Satan itself beyond his old, familiar entourage in San Francisco. He gradually avoided direct contact with the more distant membership, which had the dual consequence of forcing them to rely more on their initiative and increasing his suspicion of their uncontrolled independence accordingly.

+O+ The ONA has always been very reclusive and secretive, with only the most determined of initiates making it to Shropshire to gain access to then-acting nexions, and later on only through diligence, showing promise and being contacted privately online by ONA associates and/or members. Long avoids direct contact with almost all internet based communicators and for the reasons cited in ONA: organisation and Structure maintains arm's length distance, communicating through go-betweens and elected representatives or via one way posts on the Internets SONAK (Sinister ONA Kollektive) points. The ONA could care less about creating suspicion or causing others to rely on their initiative with the desired aim that they would become uncontrolled independents, acting as cells in a mode of leaderless resistance.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding the reasons for the schism of the TOS from the COS:] These factors culminated first in Anton's "Phase IV" policy paper to the Church, in which the formal standing and authority of non-entourage Church officials and groups were weakened in favour of an informal "Movement" whose preferential membership and influence would once again be Anton's sole decision.³ His next, and as it turned out explosive action was to attempt to destroy the independent significance and structure of the Church's initiatory degree system, by also making both the definition and the bestowal of such titles merely his personal whim.

+O+ One can appreciate Aquino's concern here over the guru mentality if indeed that is what Szandor began to exhibit. The conferring of titles within ONA is not performed by the Master (which title is not descriptive of this role) and there are no external ceremonies or celebrations of passing these milestones one sets for oneself. The premise is that one either does – or they do not. If they do – then they will know if they have reached the respective level described – and perhaps more importantly, whether that title still matters to them.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's movements against the COS:] In terms of my personal involvement, The Church of Satan culminated with my June 10, 1975 letter to Anton and Diane LaVey rejecting what I regarded as their critical corruption of the Church of Satan, and simultaneous letter to the Church membership announcing my disavowal of the organisation controlled by them. These were followed by many other Satanists' resignations, either immediately or after days/weeks/months of waiting to see if Anton LaVey could or would explain and/or correct his startling policy decisions and announcements.

+O+ Whilst the particulars may be different it is worth noting that just as Aquino found fault with the model of the COS and moved to assert the independent position and foundation of the TOS to correct those faults – so too did the ONA find fault with the model of the TOS and moved to assert the independent position of the ONA to correct those faults – as did the TOT (Temple of THEM) find fault with the model of the ONA and moved to assert its independent position as THEM to correct those faults as no doubt the cycle will continue when somebody finds fault with one or more of the listed groups and moves to assert an independent position of their own... This story is not new, it is often just forgotten.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's movements against the COS:] Nevertheless I had to begin thinking about some sort of "reformed Church of Satan" to replace the corrupted one.

+O+ Here again the wheel turns back to its original position – just as Aquino saw his duty to correct the wayward direction of Satanism from the COS – so did AL see it as his duty to correct the wayward direction of Satanism from the TOS – here though – the chain is broken, wherein THEM and WSA352, both formed groups that did not abandon or disown the ONA but formed independent supports that made a new, stronger Satanic tripod. Though the cycle jostled through many changes and directions as it was stopped from taking its usual course – Ultimately, there was none of the previous attitude of revolution and a throwing away of the prevailing current – but instead a reformation that used the prevailing current in symbiosis. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's inspiration and method for divining the Book of Coming Forth by Night:] I chose the night of June 21-22, X/1975 as an appropriate occasion for the working. The time/events following my June 10th letter to Anton and Diane had suggested to me that an ordinary solution was increasingly improbable, and that evening – as the Summer Solstice and anniversary of my own ordination to the Priesthood five years previously – seemed "traditionally" respectful. I cannot recall the date having any other significance to me at the time than this. At midnight I was alone in my home at 302 East Calle Laureles, Santa Barbara – save only for my beloved Irish Setter, Brandy. As was my habit with GBM workings, I put a phonograph record on the turntable and set it to endlessly repeat. I chose a selection which I had never used before [and, out of personal regard for the result, have never used since]: Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis. My altar was located in the living room of the house. I opened the working in the traditional Satanic Mass, then spoke aloud the First Part of the Word of Set.10 I felt an impulse to enter my study – "the Sanctum" as I nicknamed it – and with Brandy curled up at my feet, sat down at my desk and took up pen and paper. Then, over the next four hours, I wrote down the words of The Book of Coming Forth by Night. The experience was neither one of "dictation" [as in Aleister Crowley's Book of the Law working] or of "automatic writing" after the spiritualist fashion. The thoughts, words, phrases seemed to me indistinct from my own, yet impressed me as both unique and necessary, as though no other sequence would do.

+O+ The manner in which Aquino describes his inspiration for the Book of Coming Forth By Night is perhaps one of the most contentious sticking points between the

ONA and the TOS. What appears as a difference of opinion forms the fulcrum of change where new groups, ideas and ideologies are spawned. Without this Sinister Dialectic of agreement/disagreement there is no divergence from the Same – forms however all create shadows, Aquino’s confession of receiving his message from Set paved the way for the ONA to set up its counter-claim against divine intervention and emphasise its views that all such things arise from Man and that man should take responsibility for such interventions as his own. This amounts to a further denial of the concept of crediting ones achievements to God, by denying the credit of achievements to Satan – or any other entity. In this manner, using Aquino's Book as a tension, did they provide an opposite tension and their foundation for the Promethean satanic spirit directly attributable to each individual not a god, of any kind. The paradox however for those who have examined this meeting of origin is that since ONA expects others to find their own answer in regards to who/what or if Satan, or indeed, Anything is – then they effectively lay no objective boundaries down on how this discovery may occur – depending on which statements of their manuscripts you accept are the more valid where contradiction occurs. Therefore Aquino’s experience of manifestation through Set cannot be questioned or challenged as inauthentic. Ultimately, it is with the ONA’s few objective accounts of what and how Satan is found that decry Aquino’s manifestation as inauthentic that the contradiction lies. Since this contradiction occurs – it is reasonable to assume that Long’s 23 syndrome clashed with Aquino’s 23 syndrome in a classic bifurcation of forms which requires various meeting-points where disagreements are found on certain matters in order to springboard off in its own direction. The majority of this perpetual movement is unconscious to many writers – who, due to being determined to plant and water a form or opinion, often fail to see the wood for the trees. It is difficult to determine whether this brief but occasionally re-flaring matter between ONA and the TOS on the authenticity of each’s currents was consciously foreseen as a necessity of growth for a new form or was completely missed in the engrossed engagement of wills to certify what Satanism is or isn’t.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's thoughts on the inspiration and method for divining the Book of Coming Forth by Night:] In Chapter #1 I said that there was nothing overtly sensational, supernatural, or melodramatic about the Book of Coming Forth by Night working. I simply sat down and wrote it. It was not dictated to me by a materialised Egyptian god, nor did the words burn themselves into the pages like the fabled Hebrew Ten Commandments. The thoughts were “comfortable” ones, comprehensible to me within my preexisting frames of reference. What, then, distinguished the Book of Coming Forth by Night from a mere meditation or exercise in creative writing? No more and no less than a sensation I had then, and conviction ever since, that something beyond Michael Aquino was generating it. In his excellent work The Psychology of Anomalous Experience, Graham Reed (Professor of Psychology at York University, Canada) surveys the many types of human thought-experiences beyond the ordinary emotional or rational. “Anamolous,” he begins, “means irregular, distorted, or unusual”.¹¹ He goes on to note that these classifications may be in the individual’s own opinion, or in that of parts or the whole of his surrounding society. While some such experiences may indeed be symptoms of various forms of mental illness, others are quite routinely a function of healthy thinking and are not at all pathological. [further down] ...The Book of Coming Forth by Night fits Reed’s definition of an “experience of self/second type/revelation anomaly”, but does not exhibit or depend upon the two sub- features described above. It has been extensively and exhaustively examined, and compared to other perspectives on reality, by many Setians [and nonSetians] over the decades – and again here in Appendix #3. Also it has apparently passed well the test of time as a stand-alone document, requiring neither sequel nor supplement to retain its usefulness and relevance to Setian philosophy. Now perhaps I may productively return to my own sensation, reaction, and opinion the morning of June 22, 1975.

+O+ No exact definition or source is ever given by Aquino as to the origin of the Book of Coming Forth by Night, rather he traverses several options and leave the question open Routinely, as with Long and also with Myatt, do both authors continuously pause in their assertions to pass judgement on their own perspicacity and the source of their expressions. Briefly, Aquino touches on such subjects as Anomalous Experiences and muses on various parallel experiences cited by other authors and records as to what he himself went through to narrow down or at least explicate the vague manner in which his realisations came to him but does not categorically state how. So too do Long and Myatt continuously ruminate on the source and wonder of the ‘Numinous’ and the ‘Acausal’ as something that speaks/spoke through them in a myriad of ways to express the Sinister and the Pathei-Mathos of Life. Both men leave the source of their inspiration open though one professes his faith in the Numinous the other in Set – the action is the same in that they believe in an supra-natural force that acts to speak through them. Each of the men remain convinced that their path is the authentic one and where the forms tensioned in opposites meet of their respective creations, I.e. human sacrifice for and against, they clash in an effort to dominate a phantom objective sphere. What is effectively occurring between the ONA and the TOS on an esoteric level is not merely disagreement – it only appears as disagreement in its outer personal manifestation – but is in fact a secret symbiosis with the ONA and TOS using one another to champion themselves in a tension of opposites. As is the case with all groups that are built with forms – and only through forms can a group exist or be tangible or visible through those forms to others – each of those forms has a corresponding shadow. When you begin using forms you suddenly become aware of the limitations they bring with them and the duality built into the nature of language and communication. Often, you cannot champion one thing without excluding another. And you cannot exclude something, without championing another. Some forms are destined to fight with their shadow – as is the case in regards to the matter of human sacrifice. But what you champion depends on your 23 syndrome.+O+

Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's thoughts on the inspiration and method for divining the Book of Coming Forth by Night:] I did, however, have two immediate impressions: one, that it was authentic – what it claimed to be – a communication from the Egyptian god Set; two, that I myself must take it wholly and sincerely to heart. Even today, after all these years of examination of and reflection upon the Book of Coming Forth by Night, I cannot explain or defend these convictions, but simply recall them. In his “Preliminary Remarks” to his Book 4, Part I, Aleister Crowley discussed at some length the ecstatic vision which each founder of a religion seemed at one point in his life to experience:

+O+ The ONA’s criticism of the TOS was largely in what they saw as Aquino’s acceptance of his role as a chosen one, ordained by Set and what they refer to as his pronouncement of an ‘infernal mandate’. Many, many years have passed since the Satanic Letters of Stephen Brown holding these allegations were written – but it is worth noting that the ONA still maintains and publishes the occasional manuscript that criticises Aquino for the same and other aspects of his Setian Empire. Why? The reasons that might be given by either side are irrelevant in the study of form. The fact of the matter is that the ONA and TOS are still locked in a symbiosis, struggling for that same coveted objective space of the authentic. If the ONA changes its mind regarding the TOS it loses the tension it gains and has gained by pushing against certain forms of the TOS. And vice-versa. Having enemies is often seen as a moral happening and is caused by a struggle for space on a perceived objective stage – and rarely understood as a necessary alchemical ingredient for overcoming or creating stability for a new or counter form. This principle is actively used by the United States which has a long list of power-words from Witches, to Communists/Reds, Terrorists, Weapons of Mass Destruction, Al Qaeda and so on to create the necessary tension to empower its opposing forms. Alchemy is often dismissed as an ancient nonsense or back-hand complimented as the precursor of medicine but it is no less relevant or powerful than it was when its use was at its height – because it is so close to the truth.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's opening a Door:] As mentioned at the beginning of Chapter #1, the Church of Satan had struggled for the entire decade of its existence with the central, inevitable issue of the reality of the supernatural, or more precisely the metaphysical. The puerile myths and images of the world’s conventional religions we had long since dismissed as worthless nonsense – indeed, as pertaining to their devils and demons, the stuff for amusing, spooky psychodrama, sarcastic lampoon, and occasionally Lesser Black Magical control of gullible minds still psychologically enslaved to superstition. Yet within carefully-crafted magical ritual environments, some Satanists had also sensed a reality beyond that apparent to the ordinary senses.

+O+ Here, as in ONA manuscripts, Aquino matches the negative form using marked language of disdain to abstract the approach of the COS, against a new positive form he subtly suggests to be more exciting and authentic. This is the same tension of opposites that re-occurs in the creation of all forms, and without which, new forms cannot emerge. The switch between individual and collective validation, I.e. between individual assertions or -I- and group assertions such as -we- or in this case -some- is very often used so that the authors claims are more likely to be accepted as coming from a wider source than simply themselves. This is a curious habit of all (occult) authors putting forth views, that I have read.. This clue led me to the assumption that I speak alternately for my sense of the Collective and the Individual in a mostly unconscious secret language that betrays the authors subconscious intent. It should be apparent that this is not isolated to Aquino, Long or the Occult – reading just a few text books reveals it to be a common practice by almost anyone who writes with something to prove. Since it is questionable whether one person Can speak for the collective – I merely wonder whether this switch has another purpose. My theory is ongoing.

+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino on “Gods“:] This was an entirely new and positive form of “Satanism” that had almost nothing in common with traditional “Devil worship” except the preliminary seriousness of formal atmospheres. It was a chill that went up one’s spine when commencing, then culminating a Black Magical working. We were not just play-acting; we had really opened, or at least begun to open a door which profane humanity had only vaguely imagined to exist. What we would see when we got it fully open we did not know; we only sensed that, for all of its faults and failings, the Church of Satan had somehow managed to discover its key. For me, the Book of Coming Forth by Night was the event that flung that door wide open. I now knew of a certainty that there was a reality beyond the four-dimensional, and that within it existed the actual centres of consciousness which mankind had dimly imagined as “gods”. Pythagoras and Plato had come closer to them as Forms or Principles, and the ancient Egyptians closest of all as neteru.

+O+ The obvious parallels between Aquino's realisation of opening a door are matched very closely with ONA’s explication of the phenomena of the connection or gates formed by the meeting place of causal and acausal space to form nexions. Both seek to explain a problem in the present perception of time and space in their work. Aquino marks Gods in “ “ to indicate a reclassification may be in order following his experiences – just as the ONA goes to great pains to elucidate the inexact nature of acausal beings and Dark Gods. In effect both TOS and ONA see something markedly Wrong with the statement and understanding of Gods in relation to their occult/esoteric findings and act to re-classify the meaning.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 regarding Aquino's core being affected:]

This realisation forever transformed the core of my own consciousness, of course, as I'm sure it would that of anyone else undergoing the same shock. I knew now that physical extension in time/space was merely part of a much greater whole whose Mysteries awaited beyond.

+O+ Both Long under ONA mythos and Myatt under Numinous mythos relate this same transformation – as do I in my own experiences. We can see by the few passages I have extracted already – that in esoteric and even exoteric terms both men are very similar in their Archetypal Energy and Experiences. we may even assume as a temporary speculation that it is this Archetype that will be embodied in those destined to make contact with them to continue the turning of the wheel. Szandor possessed this Archetypal resonance too as did many of those whom inspired him to ground and found the COS. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino's thoughts on The Book of Coming Forth by Night and the similarity of NAOS:] I simultaneously realised that, as Crowley had observed in Book 4 above, such an illumination – there is no better word for it – cannot possibly be described or explained to intellects as yet within the purely-material realm of consciousness. It would be futile, even dangerous to try, as in H.G. Wells' famous parable of The Country of the Blind. There was, however, another aspect of the Book of Coming Forth by Night which was both communicable and practical. It pointed the way to a unique path of self-realisation and ennoblement that any suitably intelligent individual could decide to pursue. It was not necessary to comprehend its origin or ultimate implication – just its existence and availability. The Grail was now there to be grasped and drunk from, for any with the awareness, courage, and resolve to do so.

+O+ An identical attitude, is possessed by the ONA in regards to those with the right stuff being able to make something of themselves via the Septenary Way if they so choose now that the Way is available to all. It is in fact expressed throughout the decades long array of treatises written by the ONA including its former core guide – NAOS. It is related that those with the sagacity determination and arete as explained in the Introductions to Satanism will survive, thrive and succeed – those that do not, will not and are irrelevant. Just as Aquino calls his book a grail now there to be grasped and drunk from, so to do the ONA state exactly the same about the Septenary Way. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 on Aquino's apprehensions of the Book as a grail anyone can try to use“:] And so it has been these thirty years hence. Many thousands of humans have undertaken the adventure invited by the Book of Coming Forth by Night – some with more success than others, but all, I think, awakened and energised by their encounter. There is, unfortunately, a less-pleasant side to this phenomenon. Some aspirants have found themselves unprepared to step beyond a purely-conventional frame of intellectual existence. In such cases the strengthening of consciousness can evoke, as in the science-fiction film Forbidden Planet, “monsters of the id” capable of psychological harm to themselves or others. As it has learned more about such dangers over the years, the Temple of Set has endeavoured to dissuade such personalities from seeking initiation, or short stopping an effort that seems to be miscarrying in ominous directions. I daresay this will remain one of the Temple’s more important and compassionate responsibilities as long as it exists.

+O+ Again, remarkable similarity if viewed as a separate occurrence, remarkable insight if viewed as actions stemming from the same archetype possessing both men. The ONA has always exhorted the necessity of practical learning and challenges as opposed to mere speculative theory and academia. The slight difference, and only a matter of degree here, is in the paint – whilst the TOS explains that it wishes to let down those who don’t make the grade gently by suggesting its important compassionate duty is to carefully weed out the weak – the ONA expresses hard disdain and scorn for those who cannot keep up their tread on the Sinister Path. Yet, the ONA does in fact provide such cushions, by writing about its attitude of scorn and making it accessible to any who might wish to enter it, beforehand, it forewarns people that it will not tolerate weaklings or dilettantes much the same way TOS warns the same.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 on Aquino's reaction to his Book and the structure it provided for his work] This text was so meaningful to me that I have since ordered my life and philosophy by its principles. The other founders of the Temple of Set accorded it a similar trust and respect. Even though they had not participated in the working itself, many remarked, they felt that the text itself carried its own aura of authenticity and conviction. In the years that followed, countless others have been moved by it in a similar fashion.

+O+ The same can be said here of Long being inspired by Greek Literature and Mythology, or Myatt by the behaviour, culture and demeanour of the Greeks, which principles and virtues characterise dozens of ONA manuscripts from the earliest known writings to the most recent. Here the 23 syndrome that captures one expresses its remarkable power – for it is largely irrelevant how authentic a form is considered to be by outsiders and only by its adoptee – for that syndrome will, carried through to its conclusions and extremity, causes that form to pool in its greatest possible concentration – through which, and only through which, can new forms be sufficiently anchored in symbiosis by pushing hard against it. The more Rigid a form is, the harder one can push against it and develop a form of equal strength. That is why the ONA and TOS utilise each other esoterically – but despise one another exoterically. Should be apparent though, that this is not the only form ONA pushes against, or that TOS pushes against but that there are hundreds of thousands comprising the Matrix that form this invisible but crucial cyclical intricate hierosgamos of Change.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino's resignation to the authenticity of the Book] As for the text itself, I am content to comment upon it as best I can, then let others judge it as they will. For me it is now, as then, a simple, beautiful, and purposeful statement from the sentient being whom mankind has loved, hated, worshipped, cursed, praised, and reviled as the Prince of Darkness. To echo the words of G.B. Shaw in The Devil's Disciple: "I promised him my soul, and swore an oath that I would stand up for him in this world and stand by him in the next." This remains my oath today.

+O+ Yet again Long and Myatt and ONA express at various stages and degree these same sentiments of being unable to ascertain the origin of the source of their genius, creation or inspiration for their resulting exoteric forms and the feeble attempts by each author to capture the true numen of their forms – leaving it open for others to judge. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino's attempt to move away from Judaeo Christianity via Egyptian Iconography] A focus upon ancient Egyptian philosophy, religion, and culture, however, presented the fledgling Temple of Set with a different, and equally formidable array of problems. The topic of ancient Egypt generally has been one of both exhaustive examination by and contentious debate between conventional Egyptologists and independent investigators. The former group generally agree that Egypt was simply an agricultural society comparable to that of other Mediterranean/Near-Eastern cultures of the time period. It was notable for its enigmatic hieroglyphic writing system, odd-looking formalised art, peculiar massive building projects, and morbid, animal-totem religious cultism. The latter group, while differing in the details, see Egypt rather as a remarkable, indeed startling exception to its primitive neighbours. It was uniquely a civilisation and repository of great sophistication and wisdom – in some respects so much so, indeed, that the very ability of the Egyptians themselves to have generated such utopian wonders is called into question in favour of Atlanteans, extraterrestrial visitors, and/or incarnated gods. Each camp routinely ridicules the other. The conventionalists denounce the independents as unscientific dreamers and "pyramidiots". The latter are equally contemptuous of the former, considering them as merely a brittle academic self-protectorate afraid to violate modern taboos. And there are two taboos in particular which institutional academia does not dare to transgress – or even openly acknowledge as taboos.

+O+ What is interesting here is that, both TOS and ONA attempted to move away from Judaeo Christianity – one moved over as far as they felt would give them the distance they need – the other mocked the former for not moving over far enough. This is repeated by THEM's criticisms of Satanism in all its veins using Magi tools to present itself, i.e. Forms, Duality, Morality and so on, so moving over further, is not enough for Us unless you can move right through to the other side and devise new tools – or psycho-social collapse of the Matrix to allow the evolution of new tools. What is also interesting is that both ONA and TOS speak in Aeonics -that is to say, the both take notice of civilisations and long spans of years as meaningful representations and indications of collective existence – or to put it another way, they both appreciate that these chunks of time have a story to tell that can be used as a tension to modern times.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino tensions the COS against the TOS] The Church of Satan had been accused by its critics of championing the worship of evil. Not so: What it actually did, as exemplified in the Diabolicon, was to maintain that “God” was in fact evil and “Satan”, as a repudiation of that evil, was truly good. This was a new interpretation of “evil” as human denial of personal responsibility for moral decisions, as well as hypocrisy in the executing of such moral decisions as were ventured. True goodness was accordingly to be found in genuine personal responsibility and full acceptance of the consequences of one’s decisions. This is what made the Church of Satan, despite its bizarre facade, feel so refreshingly virtuous next to the repulsive, corrupt Hebraic monotheism it rejected.

+O+ Here we find Aquino's comments that the COS inverted Christian morality to reverse the roles of the Devil and Satan in an attempt to reject Hebraic Monotheism and the first step of Aquino to tension the essential breakthrough of the COS against his TOS. He is in my opinion right in recognising the evolutionary contribution of the COS to the overall Satanic Strata in its move to invert Christianity as a means to escape it. He also foresees that this is not enough – without this step in the ladder he could not have tensioned the TOS and mapped its geometry. Though there are flashes of the disdain, perhaps more subtle after re-writes and time, that comes with the unconscious thrall of being affected by such forces and that require such a thrall if there is to be evolution (wherein passion of love or hatred propels one in the needed direction by gaining a boost from kicking off from a dying form) .Note, that this passion is diminished by peeling off the exoteric skeleton of this process and making it conscious to others. It is the unconscious factors that act to make us kick-off in the tensioned direction and give us the arrogance or confidence to believe in our respective Forms, Our Truth and Manifest it. It is the innate drive that makes us feel justified and Right to do what we believe it is our duty to do. Thus both TOS and ONA may deny this process occurred, since it is not a conscious one -despite the trail in their memes.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino tensions the TOS against the COS] Now the Temple of Set was challenged to take one step beyond. The entire Hebraic monotheism, to include even its Satanic reinterpretation as the actual benchmark for evil, would be thrown into the dustbin. JHVH, Satan, Moses, Christ, Mohamed – collectively discarded in all of their social, physical, or metaphysical contexts and pretensions. In their stead would arise not a mere revival of polytheism per se, but a poly-faceted divine individualism, in which the energy of each such personal consciousness is realised to derive from a Universal inspiration: Set. This was a Set far more subtle and complex than the superficial character described by the Egyptologists. Just how much so it would take the Temple of Set many years to discover; in many regards it is still doing so.

+O+ Here, Aquino reclassifies Satan altogether, seeking to move so far over away from its connotations that he is prompted to adopt a blank page and re-write the whole thing. He moved, quite far over, away from mere inversion to ‘poly-faceted divine individualism’ in which each such personal consciousness is realised to derive from a universal inspiration: Set. And here again, the ONA was doing the same moving over, jettisoning off the COS with an even harder kick wherein Satan was also reclassified or rather, rediscovered with critical re-examinations of the meaning of Satan priming the way for a whole different strain of assertion. Yet, the connection Aquino describes may as well be the same connexion the ONA expound under the term Acausal and Nexions. The nomenclature may differ but the action is the same. Each man reclassified Satan and sought to evolve the present understanding of it. ONA’s criticism naturally arises of the TOS because the TOS did not move far enough over out of the reigning paradigm to escape what ONA felt were still Magi/Christian trappings. TOS believed it was the rightful heir to the throne and refused to acknowledge the ONA. ONA did it right back. Yet its all a question of extremes – in the eyes of THEM both groups are not far enough over to escape the Magi trappings we perceive innate in the building blocks they have used, merely by using Forms. And so it will go. Hopefully, what people are beginning to realise here, is that there is something very different, some exchange and symbiosis very separate going on underneath all the fighting and disagreements that points to the quintessence of Forces responsible for Life. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino redefines the ‘Gods’]The other Egyptian “gods” were also re-perceived. In conventional Egyptology they too, like Set, were merely two-dimensional dolls in a Hodge-podge of folktales and parables. Now the individual human consciousness, each as energised by Set, was seen to be capable of seeing past the physical surface of natural phenomena, into the living essence underlying each. These are the Forms described by Plato in his Dialogues, and more originally the true neteru comprehended by the priesthoods of ancient Egypt. To the extent it has been noticed by conventional society over the years since its [re]founding, the Temple of Set has occasionally been maligned and attacked on various alarmist pretexts: “Satanism”, “cult”, “political extremism”, “mind control”, etc. All such nonsense serves merely to illustrate how ignorant such critics are of the actual distinction and significance of the Temple as summarised here. It is nothing less than an entirely new way of looking not just at self-conscious humanity, but at the physical and metaphysical realities beyond that humanity.

+O+ In similar fashion, the ONA took the existing Cthulhu Mythos and crafted (some say restored) a very different approximation of the Dark Gods these myths were supposed to describe. Yet it scorned the TOS for its Egyptian adoption, citing it as old aeon. We know now that such reactions are exactly that – alchemical reactions in the process of forms tensioning themselves. THEM believe what we are describing and how, fit's the definition of Neteru; pulling off not just the skin of the form, but extracting the bones on which it is built and seeking for the whisper of life that imbues it with sentience... Aquino again shares a common bond with Long et al by anticipating the simplifications and conclusions others will jump to in their inability to appreciate the subtle essence of Form and its Formative processes and writing that others will not See. Without the COS to invert Christianity, the TOS to move further over into a new paradigm, the ONA to see the TOS and COS and pour its scorn upon the degree to which TOS extracted itself from the reigning paradigm, and THEM's insight through this Satanic Triangle (for convenience, but really, nothing is that simple that it has only 3 components) allowed this new strain of Form-Based Analysis or 'Mvimaedivm' to arise as a tension to existing trends. We are also aware that this particular strain of ours, our tendency to tear things apart so completely strikes a chord with a rather large number of people. We believe this may have something to do with our conscious recognition of what have been occult/hidden processes beneath form and the synchronicity this dis-covery is generating as a new evolutionary form and catalyst for Satanic practice, spreads it wings. Moving on.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino re-emphasises the Egyptians] To understand the attitude of the Egyptians, it is necessary to emphasise the striking contrast between their view of the world and ours. We live in a universe which we know is in perpetual movement; each new problem demands a new solution. But for the Egyptians this notion of time which modifies the current knowledge of the world, of an alteration of factors which forces a change in methods, had no place. In the beginning the divinity created a stable world, fixed, definitive; this world functions as a motor well-oiled and well fed. If there are "misfires" – if the motor fades, if one of the parts making it up is worn out or broken – it is replaced and everything starts off again better than before. But this motor would always remain the same; its mechanism, its appearance, its output would always be identical.

+O+ Remarkably, Aquino devotes as much time explicating the Egyptian Culture and Mythos as Long and Myatt spend on examining and explaining the Greek. It is perhaps attributable to their archetype to be enamoured with past cultures and want to revive them or restore the various virtues and principles of each – and potentially attributable to the publication of Spengler and Toynbee's various treatises and volumes on the precursor of Aeonics and the importance of such large scale cycles being popular, fascinating, and available to both at the time of their formative youth. Where Aquino explains the principles of Neteru at length, so to do Long and Myatt expend volumes relating the principles and ideology of National Socialism, Islam or Greek Philosophy. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino acknowledges exact definition is difficult] The information concerning these cults which is available to modern Egyptologists is both sparse and confusing. Since a given neter could be portrayed in a number of different ways, identifying the “core neter” is difficult. The images and inscriptions concerning a neter were often altered or appropriated by cultists of rival neteru. In Christian and Islamic times all “old gods” were considered blasphemous, and monuments to them were regularly defaced and destroyed. By the end of the fifth century CE, knowledge of hieroglyphics had died out, not to reappear until the nineteenth century; meanwhile many “useless” records perished through neglect.

+O+ Relying on the causation/history of available records to put forward their various forms, whether Neteru or Arete, or Satan – both Aquino and ONA reveal an awareness of the incomplete nature of many surviving texts dealing with various metaphysical or difficult subjects. Various ONA manuscripts relating to the Dark Gods become more and more lucid as you move from the 80’s into the years 2000-2011 indicating an early lack of such records on which to rely – with earlier manuscripts presenting several possible translations or vaguely felt out assumptions based on the available evidence; but both ONA and TOS leave their key concepts open to translation as well as surround their own explanations with a myriad of alternatives. It is not just a mark of being thorough, well-researched and confident in ones subsequent assertions – but the very nature of Mythos itself. Mythos is by nature, incomplete.+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino acknowledges Sets definition is often faulty] (2) Set was the neter who was “different” from all of the others. Too often this is simplified into his being the “evil” slayer of Osiris, hence the personification of “evil”; yet any but the most cursory study of Egyptian religious symbolism is sufficient to dispel this caricature. He was rather a neter “against the neteru”: the entity who symbolised that which is not of nature.

+O+ Here too the ONA has quite a few manuscripts that re-examine the assumptions made about various aspects of its Tradition including Satan, Baphomet, Evil, the Sinister, the Causal, and goes to great lengths to set people straight or at least to make an effort to determine and restore the correct meaning of a term. Both Aquino and the ONA realise the duality that threatens to drown the subtlety of their Set/Satan and move to anticipate the problem – but also, with difficulty to extract their current from the simplicity of morality and simple Evil. Both realise the complexity of the issue in explaining the beyond good and evil nature of many of the early approximations of perception – but expend hundreds of pages trying to explain it to those who cannot make this distinction or rather make the distinction Between Good and Evil because they cannot escape the tension of opposites. Here is the realisation often explained best that many of us are imprisoned by this inability to perceive without tensions. Anyway, it should be apparent by now that both Aquino and Long have trod a similar path – and even as they have disagreed – the outcome is undeniably mutual benefit.

+O+

[Extract from TOSd8 The concept of Egyptian Adoption Solidified in Stages] In the first few years of the young Temple of Set, we weren't quite so clear about this. We duly plunged into many works of conventional Egyptology, some of the more useful of which are still included in the Egypt/Historical and Egypt/Philosophical categories of our Reading List. Various Setians contributed some research articles of this genre to the Scroll, Ruby Tablet, and Order & Element publications. But it soon became clear to us that, absent an empathy for Egypt – a sensation of its innate soul, as it were – all such studies were sterile and lifeless exercises. The greatest breakthrough for us came in our encounter with the writings of René Schwaller de Lubicz and his wife Isha. Indeed the lion's – I should say lioness' – share of the credit goes to her, because much of René's work is highly technical. Isha was able to synthesise its elemental themes into her highly-readable "novel" Her-Bak, being the story of a young Egyptian's journey from ordinary peasant to initiated priest.³³ For many Setians, once they were exposed to the basic structure of René's thought through Her-Bak, his more complex works were soon unlocked. And suddenly ancient Egypt came wonderfully, vibrantly to life before us. Now, knowing what to look for and what to do with it once we found it, the Temple of Set discovered no end of wonders over the years, as of course we continue to do today. René's initial realisation came from his study of hieroglyphs: that in addition to their convenience for mere alphabets, they embodied symbolic principles apprehensible to both the rational and the supra-rational intelligence. [His methodology is thus often termed "Symbolism".] Gradually he extended his awareness of this key to Egyptian culture into its architecture (as in his magnum opus examination of the Luxor temple complex, Le Temple de L'Homme) and pre-Pythagoreanism. You will suddenly understand the Pyramids. You will suddenly understand the Temples. And of course you will meet the neteru. Not the two-dimensional, comic-book simpletons cherished by profane Egyptologists, enmeshed in tawdry tales of sex, violence, and meaningless ritual. But the beautiful, wonderful weavers of the most delicate webs of the Objective Universe itself. In their presence, severally and collectively, the awakened Initiate will confront an eternity of discovery and synthetic creativity. And yet the most difficult neter to meet is Set. Because to apprehend all of the others one need only look outward, through the lenses you have learned to fashion for your enlightened vision. But where are you going to place your lever, direct your lens, focus your attention, to see into the nucleus, the central fire, of the thing that is your own conscious self?

+O+ May I be permitted a personal, well more indulgent personal comment here? The differences between the TOS and the ONA on some levels seem intractable – it is not beyond us how people fail to miss the exact nature of the exchange occurring – that is why we are THEM – but the Temple of Set, regardless of any other considerations or comparisons is as much a Nexion in its own right as others, and the ONA comprehends the nature and meaning that is Neteru. The two groups differ in terminology and their exoteric forms clash on occasion as part of a necessary alchemy seemingly ill-understood even by the majority of today’s magicians – but the two men of both groups are sharing an identical source and expressing an identical archetype. Strangely, though they are at the forefront of Satanism, Self-Becoming, the Acausal and Nexions and Neteru – they appear to require the Temple of THEM to perceive the underlying mesh that binds them. More strangely, is that without the Temple of Set which happened to send me to the ONA we could not provide the tension to make visible what is invisible nor could we have achieved what we just did. Aquino’s heuristic explorations and insights are no less poignant or passionately and carefully related or useful or important than those of Long or Myatt. +O+

[Extract from TOSd8 Aquino announces himself an Ipsissimus] On the Ides of March 1979 I came into being as an Ipsissimus VI°. This chapter discusses the rationale and significance of that initiation & formalised degree, as well as the changes to my interest in, attitude towards, participation within, and obligations to the Temple & Æon of Set subsequently and consequently.- 28 –

+O+ Another thorny point of contention by the ONA is the self awarding of the title of Ipsissimus by Aquino – wherein the ONA fiercely emphasise that no master can confer awards or call oneself a Master without doing a set of proscribed things... There are multiple contradictions here... but the underlying reason for ONA’s annoyance must be part of its unconscious reaction and necessity for a tension to its own view on the matter of earning titles. Aquino’s action helps illustrate nicely what the ONA believe is not how you do it opening the way for them to explain How you do it. Yet more than a few of the ONA’s manuscripts create loopholes and in fact justify Aquino's decision and action to call himself whatever he likes and further whatever aim it is he desires to further. The issue comes down to the degree of movement away from an existing paradigm – where Aquino moved the Temple of Set far away from the Church in some respects – others he did not move so far from, such as the idea of structure, leadership and levels of attainment. Subsequently, ONA disagrees because it moved its Order in different degrees creating more or less tension between the two opposing ideas. We can see though, by viewing the ONA and TOS as energetic creatures whose behaviour does in fact have a logical system of processes, why ONA fiercely defends its own system of leaderless self-attainment and attacks the system of the TOS – its how forms behave. Whatever a person chooses to call themselves or not call themselves is still just an abstraction like all the rest of the abstractions we make – if they are successful in giving themselves a form that does in fact cause a specific reaction such as calling oneself a Master, Grand Master, Ipsissimus or what have you does – then they are clearly on another level above those that react in thrall to that form and do deserve an elevation in energetic understanding (read. Magical prowess). How you do it or what you believe is necessary to achieve such a title, whether you aspire to such a title, is entirely up to that individual or group. If others cannot see it for what it is, or determine whether that title is deserved, then more fool them. If they invest that form with validity of faith then that indicates their level of prowess – and subsequently does Set (excuse the pun) apart the one from the other. As I have said before, the name of the game is the delivery of forms – whatever the means. Personally I see no reason to believe Aquino is not set apart – loyalty to my Order is secondary to not being blinded to the messages of my own eyes – and indeed set very far apart from the other. By that token though, so to is Long or Myatt set far apart from the other – whatever claims either group make about the legitimacy of what needs be done to deserve their rank or any rank – is completely irrelevant to me. I judge for myself through the language of Geometry. To hell with the tension of opposites.+O+

[From tosd8 much further down Aquino questions the TOSs existence and purpose] Epilogue: Sic Itur Ad Astra After its “long, strange trip” of 30 years “and counting”, what shall we say of the Temple of Set? What has it meant to the thousands of persons whose lives have touched upon it over the years? Is it beneficial to external society? To itself internally? Has it successfully avoided the trap of becoming “a bureaucracy for its own sake” and managed instead to focus on the enhancement of each individual Initiate’s experience? Where best has it succeeded and why? Where has it failed and why, and has it learned from those failures? Can it survive amidst the world’s current and apparent future social climates? To what if any extent can it, and should it, attempt to compensate for failings in society, as for instance inadequate education, courtesy, etc. of individuals who approach it? What are valid reasons and qualifications for persons coming to the Temple? Why should others not be? What should we envision for the Æon of Set? Should we see it as finite, and if so with what theoretical boundaries or eventualities? Will there be a subsequent æon, and how might we [or others] conceptualise it? What of the eventuality of the Order of Horus becoming a Temple of Horus, and a new sam-tau of Set and Horus returning to Earth? What? Who? When? How? Why? To what beginning?

+O+ Yet again we meet that curious parallel energy where both groups take causal breaths over the decades to summarise and re-examine the purpose and history, achievements and point of their forms. One manuscript that springs immediately to mind is Beyond the Adept by the ONA where answers are given to an Adept concerning the -is-ness of the Order of Nine Angles, perception relating to it and a host of other considerations, questioned assumptions, and mental challenges given. This is the shared mentality of both men to provide and foster a living changing

Tradition – and so again we must ask, how different are the men behind the Temple of Set and the Order of Nine Angles? Their forms may paint a picture of conflict – but so what? That’s like looking at a picture drawn with crayons and doubting the artists were capable of so much more. How many more manuscripts and urges and examples will it take to push people beyond their archaic reliance on what they see and dutifully process with their traditional inheritance of knowledge and the sloppy tools of form to really See what lays beneath all the currents of the world and its weary matrix? +O+

[Extracted from TOSd8 Aquino's text from the Book of Coming Forth By Night.]
And now, having looked upon the past with affection and reverence, we shall turn our gaze to the times before us. Think carefully of the Word of Set, for it is given in witness to my Bond. Behold, O West, I have established my Aeon. I punish the enemies who are in it, placed in the Place of Destruction. I deliver them to the examiners from whose guard there is no escape. Lo, I pass near to thee, I pass near to thee! Affix now my image as it was given to you, so that all who read of these matters may now look upon the likeness of Set. The Word of the Aeon of Set is

+O+ Both ONA and TOS work with the concept of Aeons and base their groups around the importance of Aeons. One names the Aeon Xeper, the other names it Chaos. But they both name it. Both were affected at a similar time in a similar manner by the idea of Aeons – perhaps a logical consequence of a shared bounty of magical lore they inherited – both anticipate a new Age and relate their unique interpretations of the Aeon to come. The TOS and the ONA are archetypically identical – whatever is acting through them, if anything, has seen fit to place these two men side by side as tensions for one another and provide them both with an almost mythical journey that is exactly the same at its esoteric essence. Such suggests an underlying and as yet unidentified magical archetype that takes possession of such individuals... +O+

[See Chapter 11]

BRIEF NOTES ON THE DEPICTION OF BAPHOMET

Brief Notes on the Depiction of Baphomet and the Sinister Tradition: By the Temple of THEM. According to the images from the “Goddess and the Warrior” by Nanno Marinatos – ancient depictions of the Naked Goddess show such Goddesses standing. Lotus flowers were held to signify sexual potency whilst animals, such as lions, griffins, or goats were usually held in their hands or restrained with ease to signify the Goddesses aspects of power over nature and their association with being dangerous. “Mistress of Earth”, is probably a filter from the “Mistress of Animals”. Hazel is probably a filter from the Lotus. The Eagle is probably a filter from the Lion or Griffin [but see Circe. Pg 40.] However – Baphomet is said to be seated. Ancient depictions of the Naked Goddesses from as early as 2BC do not seem to correlate with the seated depiction of such figures and Nanno makes mention of such figures only as late as the 7th C. [pg.77.] Rulers, Leaders, and the Powerful tend to be shown seated – perhaps in some degree, because they generally served as figureheads to be venerated not actually required to do much of the mobile work needed to sustain their kingdoms, dynasties, empires. But female goddesses were shown standing, either on the ground or on the backs of powerful animals they had subdued with their sexuality or lying down, One suggestion is that the sexuality of the Sinister Feminine is – because of its pronounced Satanic attributes – depicted seated rather than standing because of the Ruling Status that arises from Mastery over Sexuality. Thus she is not an object worshipped by Men – but in possession of her powers and equal to a Ruler. To produce an image of Baphomet [or the Naked Goddess] seated might be theorised to have been –heretical- [and a motive for its Satanic adoption] in Ancient times since to be shown seated as a Ruler she would not have been an object controlled by Men, placed on a pedestal by Men who allowed her to have some permitted power over them for their own titillation but a Goddess who demanded respect, worship and veneration because of her Own Power. [Qv. Anat] This suggestion fits well with recent documents on NineAngles.Wordpress regarding the nature of the Sinister Feminine and the problems with male-depicted women, feminism and Wiccan paganism. Further in, on pg. 55, the mythical depiction of Gorgo is dealt with, in which bent knees or ‘knielauf’ are said to be the sign of a pursuer – further the reference to fangs a sign of a predator. Such is indeed the nature of the Sinister Feminine in the recent stories of the Order.

Baphomet: Some Historical Connections? [---Advent of Masks in Ancient depictions?] Perhaps this control over Lions came to be filtered down into a hybrid meaning of control as consciousness changed as Gods and Goddesses gradually ceased to be solely external entities/powers. Whereas once she was depicted separate from her subdued lions – did she become increasingly integrated with these symbols until she became cat-headed as per Bastet; represented as a hybrid symbol of both attributes of Goddess and Power over Animals via the splicing of animal attributes with the actual human figure leading to the adoption by cultures [Qv. Egypt] with masks, skins and monsters? One thinks immediately of the correlation between Goddesses holding snakes to indicate a magical nature – and Medusa, whose hair was a writhing mass of serpents. Also of interest – the Oa29 notes and images regarding Baphomet by Hammer-Purgstall mention/show an ‘X’ or cross shape on the chest of the figure – which was thought to be a reference to the Pleiades, and the Chains held by the same figures which were thought to be symbolic of union or restraint – must be given further thought. One of the figures related to the Egyptian Naked Goddess [pg.25 fig.1:28 Qu-Du-Shu] is interestingly enough also crossed on the chest in such a manner. It is feasible that Hammer-Purgstall was copying from sources that contained a preserved representation of this Egyptian motif. And feasible that the 'chains' which are shown broken [see pg.22 fig.1:25] are a corruption of an Older depiction of the Goddess lifting her Skirt [pg.14 fig.1:9, 1:10, and 1.11]. The break in the skirt may have come about from a cross-over of the Goddess holding Lotus/Animals in her hands, and the lifting of the Skirt being confused or stylised. Or, the figure may be holding artistic distortions of what were originally meant to be, snakes. [One now understands why comments made some years ago re: the actual ability of holding and charming snakes is of extraordinary significance regarding the skill [and magical prowess] held by one of the Sorceresses of THEM.] [Note – The Sun symbol depicted as a ball, asterisk, cross, star cradled underneath by a crescent moon [as a ball in a cup] is prevalent through many early Ancient motifs. Part of the symbol of Nemicu, then – becomes clearer.] Page 40 mentions that the depiction of the Naked Goddess eventually disappeared in Art – and one of THEM mentions that Anat, for example, was according to lore, subjugated by an act of Sodomy. Though, from what can be ascertained – it is doubtful that this disappearance of her depiction represented a rise of the masculine patriarchal rule; this seems to have been going on from the start of recorded time. [Circe may be the Hawk-goddess depicted by Hammer-Purgstall in the 3rd image of Baphomet in Oa29.] pg 49 has an interesting reference to the relationship between Greek and Near East literature... one notes ONA have recently used strange [at least, unfamiliar] terms sounding Arabic in nature. Did they trace the Greek ethos back to Near Eastern sources too? There is an image on page 53, in the wheel fig. 2.14 that is of extreme interest. On the Left side there is a crescent moon cradled on a 'v' shaped dais, itself supported by two entwined 'snakes'. One can see a strong correlation between this symbolism and that of the Initiation symbol given in Naos [and Oa29]. Recognising the 'filtration' process whereby images are changed from an original source over many, or even hundreds or thousands of years by copying, adoption into another system or mythos, syncretized or spliced with other customs yet lead toward an understanding of the nature of many symbols origins and meanings despite distortions, re-translations, artistic stylisation and even removal from their meaning to be used elsewhere knowingly or in ignorance is of supreme importance in the work of THEM. Such Change can be seen most vividly when comparing ancient and modern iconography of the sun for instance, or the moon – yet they still retain their essential symbolism even after thousands of years. Thus can certain concepts of thought and expression be traced to their brotherhood by the 'geometry' of symbolism. Suggestion: the snake coiled around the stone in the Lovers Atu VI is an esoteric [occult.hidden] reference to Gorgo and by proxy the Sinister Feminine. Figure in Death Atu XVIII = Huntress or Artemis? Pg.87 mentions Greeks borrowing nude depiction from the Near East... is this why Baphomet is naked from the waist up? Half-clothed half-naked – perhaps a compromise by ONA to reflect both traditions? Pg.105 Nanno mentions the iconographic fusion of the Mistress of Animals with the Huntress.

JESUS AND VINDEK

The following comments are taken from Abyssal and were written in Sinister 101 Syndicate in 2010.

“... I get where you’re coming from X, which is why “Magian” often replaced “Nazarene” – and both of those replaced ZOG, because ZOG indicated a Jewish Conspiracy – whereas the problem is not evenly separated between races. But I don’t think PIGS can be any more comprehensive if it still uses the same moral-based division – since I think using morality is part of the problem. My understanding is that morality is a religious invention – not an inbuilt drive to do, or be perceived doing, right/wrong. Which is where my criticism, or rather, different angle, from other Satanic/Sinister groups spreads its wings. From my point of view its not as simple as drawing a line between us and them or the Mundane/Magian – from my point of view we are as much facilitating the system and its interests whether (or especially) if we are Sinister or Magian, Duck or Tennis Ball.

But to answer two questions (Hello X) – the way I see things, whilst o9a’s model of Satanism/Sinister has a lot going for it, (and lets be fair, Chloe did add some good stuff to it) – the model of Vindex coming to avenge, save us all, couldn’t be any more like a mirror of the Messiah, Jesus if it tried. The Moral division and insistence of the present ONA (and yes I go on about it a lot, but to my mind it is Still a beautiful creature with potential) on that division is no better than the system and prejudices set up by the Magi which the Sinister, appear to have now been deluged by. When the ONA was still a-moral – and elements of it probably still are – it more correctly broke free from the geometry of the Magi by not mirroring it but by escaping it. But for the last few years, it has layered (or been layered) its external beast with the same simplistic sense of morality that I thought ONA was able to get beyond. Inversion of the System has always been my contention with any group that sets about suggesting we oppose it – because all too often, it simply becomes what it supposedly hates.

Where is there any difference now between the monotheistic branch-waving Christians persecuting the polytheistic Pagans with threats of violence, acts of violence, plotting, scheming and waiting for their God to strike down all the people they project as enemies – and the vision of Mundanes/Drecc proffered by the ONA?

Imagine this: its the year xxAD.

The Christians (Team A) wear red and build castles, pray to God and send armies out into the land to attack the Pagans wearing blue. (Team B)

Team A exhibits a mode of behaviour that induces in those affected, a certain response. I.e. The Pagans get sick of this.

The Pagans, wearing blue, build castles, pray to Cernunos and send armies out into the land to attack the Christians wearing red. (Team A).

Team B exhibits a mode of behaviour that matches the first mode and sets up a cycle whose nature was set in motion by Team A. Team A defined the rules of engagement, that there would be engagement, that that is what people did to one another. They engaged over moral differences.

So, that is what Team B does.

And this creates the same replicated affect on Team A who is indignant at being attacked.

This goes on for – oh, thousands of years.

The year 2010 arrives. And some things have changed. Some things have not.

Team A, has covered the world in castles. They have covered the world with the idea of their one God.

They have developed incredible technologies, achieved amazing feats of space and supersonic travel, but still, amass huge armies which they still send out into the land to attack the Pagans. At home, in their castles, they tell their serfs what to do, and when. The Pagans, have also covered the world in castles. They have covered the world with their option of Gods. They too have developed incredible technologies, including the Science, Mathematics, Physics and so on that Team A used to eventually create its technologies, they have achieved amazing feats of space and supersonic travel (not quite as amazing as Team A) and tend to fight amongst themselves until Team A sends in its armies, to which Team B responds by sending in its own. Team B's armies, like its other stuff, aren't so amassed, so they resort to using other methods to get around the shortfall – like bombs, insurrection, guerilla tactics and raids – but essentially doing the same thing on its own scale.

Imagine now, that Team B manages to displace Team A. Team A becomes Team B – Team B becomes Team A. If, there is no Team A left – then Team B, will bring about its own Team AB because of an implicit drive in human beings toward Gain.

OK.

Vindex and Jesus are the same side of the coin – there is no difference in the Second Coming of the Messiah, or the Avenging Reign of Vindex than there is any difference from my left hand to my left hand.

Sure, they are morally opposed, but they Behave exactly the same. Team A set things in motion, Team B responds automatically to the particular stimulus and challenge presented by Team A. Team B then gets involved in the forms of Team A and eventually becomes just like it. Team C comes along, every now and then, and looks at both sides squabbling and fighting, and thinks – well they're exactly the same but they don't see it. Team C, is usually killed for having such sterling insight.

To replicate the moral prejudices of the Magi's fabled myth of Jesus the Messiah, with morality and duality underpinning its message – is to obey an automatic edict set in place by the Magi thousands of years ago.

I.e., they divided the world into two sides – Good and Evil – they took Good, and left everyone else against them, with Evil.

To play into this psychodrama of sides, is to be a Magian, think like a Magian, and act like a Magian – whether or not you call yourself Sinister – you're more often than not just the same as the so-called enemy. You just replace God, with the Devil. ONA didn't used to be like that – the ideas were cutting edge and pro-evolutionary – beyond good and evil – beyond the box – beyond the simplistic framework we have been trained to accept and use, and perceive, and keep running on the moral/dual treadmill like rats that we have been for thousands of years. Is that what life's about? Is it about being a fireman or a jeweller? About taking your place amongst the debris of moral carnage such stupidity has wrought, fitting in neatly among the bickering of others because humans forged their momentum at a time with no experience, or is it for each person a unique opportunity never to be repeated and for each to make up their mind what life is about – not get sucked into the endless vortex of morality and its glittering mountains of ancient architecture?

Few get that choice. Do you want to just trade the Devil for God and paint horns on Jehovah, or do you want to escape the self-perpetuating wheel of moral perspective altogether. I opt for degrees of the latter, and therefore see Magi sentiments like us/them echoed by those who are (were) representative of the chance, the choice, the brilliance, to break that cycle/wheel – highly disturbing. The Magian is largely an ignorance sleeping within – it is externalised in people – but that is not, I believe, its source, merely its result. So – Vindex, to me is Magian, as is the concept of Mundanes/Sinister, as is the idea that we merely swap tyrants by acting the same way as the first ones. COS was the worst of the lot and just mirrored what the Magi thought was Devil Worship. TOS tried to go better, but I agree with Long in all respects – except that Aquino is not an Adept/Mage. I think he is. The emphasis on self-autonomy through Set was a refreshing change and a step in the right direction – but again, tamed by the Magian power of Morality.

ONA then, being the crowning jewel has shone the brightest for me – but its been stepping backward to become exactly what the Magian always wanted it to be – a projection of their shadows, evil, satanic, dark – it is not being 'progressive' – it is becoming the tortured witches ecstatic dream allegory of a black mass, the wet dream of the Magi – and therefore part of the Magi – because it reinforces the entire moral war, moral structure, moral nightmare.

The o9a may respond that its using a temporary form for a temporary measure – and it may well be – but if it is, it cant respond for obvious reasons. Since there are so very few forms out there able to get beyond morality, ONA is worth defending (lol, I'm not going to listen to that bullshit ms that ONA doesn't need it) – but since I've already openly condemned its use of Baphomet, Gangs, WSA, and many other aspects – I might as well throw in His Holiness, Vindex.

The Magi cannot be broken with any amount of Moral champions – those Moral champions will simply be re-absorbed as they have been for thousand of years – why – because the Champions are bred on the same concept of morality, on the very food of the Magi – and naturally become the Magi. That, is why the Magi are still standing, their architecture is largely untouched, and the forces that oppose its destruction are rendered virtually impotent. Because men and women who oppose the Magi become Witches, Communists, Terrorists.

Humanity has shown signs, none more strongly in my lifetime, than through the concepts of Myatt's ONA, that it is struggling to escape its moral prison – and ONA helped me escape mine by pushing off from it. But its concepts of Baphomet, Vindex, Mundanes... they don't sit well, they don't sit right and they smack of the Magi. But then it all depends how far you are willing to take and apply the example of Satan as a rebel and opposer, and most people wouldn't take it so far as to oppose the archetype of Satan his very self. But that's what is required, in my pov, for any sincere evolution..."

THE SELF-IMMOLATION RITE + 4 GATES

Text by Christos Beast of ONA.

Transcribed by Tnepres Ra 114eh

[I listened to this guided journey every day for two years – it was the inspiration for the Minor Arcana of the Naos Deck Sinister Tarot].

“...Disembodied art Thou... Sunk into the Black Pit, the Dark Night of the Soul. All roads that lead here are scattered with corpses and broken souls and gibbering idiots. Be not a gibbering ape! For all who traverse these Dark Spheres and explore their Shadow Selves will emerge as Gods! I say this with my mouth, which trembles in memory of a time when Demons walked the Earth, the various examples of their cookery billowing in the wind. But now, heads roll past my feet, encased, in pastry! THE GATE HAS OPENED! Enter Dark Angels, Enter... Prepare Ye for the Self Immolation Rite!”

“...Before you, is a silver crescent Moon, touch it. You are now entering the Dark Sphere, of Luna. This, is earthy, fertile land, a moist cavernous terrain. A young Maiden approacheth wearing a crescent moon headdress and a blue robe. She, Is, beautiful! She offers her hand in friendship. Touch her hand. Ah! Smooth porcelain, the dew of the moon on her cheeks. But this is a lovely place, instantly she transforms... into a Dark Horned Beast, vague in shape but clear in nature. The horn... proceeds to impale You! Gouging your intestines! Rupturing your stomach! Blood and bile, vomits from your splitting torso! The horn has shattered your vertebrae! The Beast brings down a starless night and withdraws. You see briefly, the face of a woman, wracked with laughter, mocking your very essence. She too is now gone into the black, that gnaws at your astral bones. This is the Sphere of Hidden Knowledge. The blood that continues to gush, has formed a glowing red pool. Scry now, into the pool. It will show you secrets of what you are, of what you want to be, and what you can be. Keep this information clear, in your mind. You will need it later. The thick liquid stirs. Look... Look into the pool You filthy regenerates!..."

"...WITH A BLAST OF MY TRUMPET! I HEAL YOUR WOUNDS! Before you the yellow Sigil of Mercury. Touch it. Armed with the knowledge extracted from the pool, you are now entering the Dark Sphere of Mercury. This is a desolate place. Heath blasted by fiery tempest, scorpions eating charred animal. See, how the dismembered are scattered to the bitter winds! The air congeals and chokes. Farewell happy fields! Hail horrors! Hail! This is the Sphere of Transformation. But do not tremble in the face of the breeze that would dismantle your features. Instead, be indulgent, remember all that you saw in the bloody pool, remember your deepest desires. Before you now is a black inverted pentagram. This, is the Womb of Mercury, the Eye of Satan. This, is the gateway, of Transformation! The pentagram will begin to move closer... you will feel the fear and sensuality of metamorphosis, your form cracking, shedding and mutating, as it takes on the attributes, scryed from the previous Sphere. Transformation, will be complete, when you pass through the pentagram, and emerge on the thresh-hold of the next Sphere, as that, which you desire to be. Only intense lust for this outcome will pull you through. Passivity will render you as useless ash, cast, into the pit, of a particular nameless horror. But hark! The pentagram grates forth... TRANSFORMMMM!!!"

"...Before you, is the green Sigil of Venus. Touch it. Transformed, you are now entering the third Dark Sphere. You are standing up to your waist, in a freezing river. The torrid waters rushing through a valley, of white, lilies. In fruitful groves and barren plains, the empty shall drink, and the drunk, shall be empty. What passion is this, that tears the sky with storms of blood and black flame? This, is the Sphere, of Ecstasy, and Love. Facing you, further up the river, is a naked woman... corpse-white skin, and long black hair. She crouches astride the river and menstruates into the water. The blood forms itself into a human figure floating beneath the surface. With your hands, begin to massage the blood into your ideal lover, fashioning, every part of it according to your cerebral and animalistic desires. Now... take your lover by the hands. Come! Fill the flowing bowl, and consummate in the turbulent waters 'neath the raging sky... drink now, your fill and more, of love..."

"...With your lover, by your side, I put before you, the gold Sigil of the Sun. touch it. You are now entering the Dark Sphere of Sol. The swords that cast their shadow, over hateful paradise... draw back, to reveal mountain ranges, majestic against a sky, of flame. You are standing on the edge of the circle made by nine sacrificial stones. Here, there is a thick darkness weaved by the unsated frog and contained by the mountains. Those roaring obscurers of that which lies beyond! Illuminated by the glow of putrefaction, the corpse of your former self, discarded during transformation, lies in the circles centre. Witness the repulsive entities that violate and mutilate your corpse! This sacred shell, is now the prey of every necrophiliac and cannibal! It seems initially, that they are performing gross obscenities for pleasure, but, look closer. The corpse is delicately gutted, and from the bones extracted, these creatures are constructing a tower, that rises far above the mountain peaks. Their work finished, they withdraw, bowing to your superiority and divine disposition. They light a protective circle of fire around the stones. This, is the Sphere, of Vision, Understanding, and Prophecy. Accompanied by your lover, climb the bloody bones to the top. Here, you will see your kingdom, surrounding, stretching out far into the solar fire, of increase. See your Temples! Your Riches! Your Works! All in progress... contemplate all that you have now, and all, that you hope to achieve in your journey so far, as a Dark Messiah. Take pleasure, for you can make anything, simple..."

"...I put before you, the red Sigil, of Mars. Touch it. You are now entering the fifth Dark Sphere. You are still in the tower, but see, how a long despairing shadow, now falls over you, cast from above by a black, angel. What horror is this? What vileness crawls forth to kill slowly in unnatural fashions? Look! The sky, is blackened with smoke! ...Have you enjoyed the scene so far? Consider again your kingdoms... THEY'RE BEING EATEN BY FLAMES! Enormous blue larvae leap into the carnage, and become bloated on the torrents of blood and the anguished disembowelment of your minions! The flesh is flayed... and the hideous dead arise to strangle the living. Eaten, necks and heads split, broken on strange scaffolding to spew out vile jelly! The shrieks of the dying, fill your ears until they bleed, blood, also pours, from your mouth, that hangs open, in horror! This, is the Sphere of Sacrifice, Death, and Destruction. Your hair! Is falling out!

LOOK DOWN!!

"Entities, are now dismantling the tower. And they look hungry. But someone... is missing. There, by a sacrificial stone, your lover, is being hung, drawn and quartered, by black rot skeletons and other such animated carcasses! Sanity! Leaves! In the gouge! Of an eye! Repulsive entities, have torn you to the ground, but they are saving you til last, when you will be given special, and lengthy treatment. For now, they wish you to watch the destruction, of all that you are... delighting in your contorting face, that bleeds, and weeps, and becomes as a mask, of death. I, will, have to leave you here, for not even I can bear such terrible sights... I may be back in time to save you but, don't count on it... Solace, for the wretched? Nay! There is only damnation!"

"...I HAVE RETURNED!! And I see you, twitch, with life! Verily thou art strong of mind. Which is the food that will raise a few. Here, I give you, the violet, Sigil, of Jupiter. Touch it, and enter the calm wilderness, of the sixth, Dark, Sphere. Here, there is soft sand and silence. The crimson sky is starry and peace fills you, like cool water in your skull. Stretch out your limbs, recline, like the albatross that rests its heavy beak, upon the graciousness of the hedge. Relax. But mind the various chasms that lead to a shattering of limbs upon vicious rock formations. Every Sphere needs amusement. All is gone. Your lover is slaughtered... do not love so much that you cannot witness the death of your lover, death too is a natural process. Reliable. honourable. And endearing. This, is the Sphere of Wisdom. Running towards you now is a child, made entirely of a white brilliance. It stands before you, and the light becomes as a mirror, which reflects only you, devoid of those things that you thought would bring power and respect. The power within begins to stir. You begin to realise, that you do not need, anything. That just your self is enough. Stay a while in this Sphere, and meditate upon Self-Reliance, Self-Love, Self-Power, and the Kingdom, within...”

“...Now, before you, is the indigo, Sigil, of Saturn. Touch it. You are entering the seventh and final Dark Sphere. You are standing on a hill, beneath a clear night sky. Directly above is the star known as Naos. It pulsates, and grows, illuminating and expectant. The land around is strewn with the burning shards of a dying aeon, suffused with an understanding that only stillness can express, when the appearance is burned to ash. And the essence is revealed. This, is the Sphere of Chaos! You have become all that you have learned during this journey of Self-Evolution, you are the essence of everything. And via this alchemical process, you understand, that power resides purely, in the quality of self-honesty. With this, you have the choice to alter your life and the world in whichever way you feel, is necessary. With this knowledge, raise your arms in exultation to the sky!

Blow winds! Crack the temporal! See how the sky splits open at your command! A purple rent, tears its way across the heavens. Agios O Atazoth! Black, nebulous shapes, descend from the rent, to gradually envelop the hill. The Gates, are aligned! They are returning! Now, is the New Aeon! Now, is Chaos! Vindex! Est! Venturus!”

“...Embodied art thou! You have earned your cross. You have dragged yourself up, from the excrement, that was your life! And now ‘lo your black wings do unfurl, so go forth Dark Messiah! The World is yours! Destroy! And Create!

~Aperiatur terra et germinet Vindex!

[3] CTHNARTHETIS

Before you, a bone staircase scattered with skulls you recognise as the remains of former Dark Magi,

yawns forth, up and into Imperial Blackness,
a towering spiral thundering toward Valhalla
and the terrifying danger of the Angles.
Behind you – Endless Deserts of wasted ruins and shattered roads, an exhaustion of conquest,
a fulfilled prophecy of doom.
Your hands, wet with blood glisten under the baleful glare of ivory-hued stars.
They pulsate with Dark Sorcery
– Satanic Impregnate.
Here, the gigantic dragon of shadow, the seething malevolence and frozen spaces of the Aether engulfs the horizon above twisted landscapes whose rising ululations are ridged by cliffs that descend precariously into angles and geometries of madness.
A Blue Man with a porous face stands in the cold sands beyond.
He lifts a distended arm and points at you.
Beside him a faceless corpse clutching a mask is slowly sinking into the desert.
But there is no time to ponder these portents,
the luminous blue outlines of doorways, portals to other Worlds – beckon you forth whispering their secrets in arcane tongues.
And as you ascend the dead stairs,
Dark Master,
passing each in turn, the portals glower, their ominous sketches of hateful fire hanging in space, threatening you in dead languages,
promising the abominable,
prophesying the unimaginable.
Their burning eldritch runes illuminate your Way.
Not for you, these indecipherable Gates
And travels to malevolent dimensions beyond reason and mercy.
Not for you, the endless Doors of the Elder Labyrinth
And its corridors that arch the breadth of space with nexions to inspire babbling lunacy.
Not for you, the tortured demise met by those who came before you, who wavered and were deceived, devoured and destroyed.

Not for you. Not yet.
Onward, past the triple pillars of the Scorpion, and beyond the gargantuan Archways built by THEM, with Xotethic scripts carved deeply into their meteoric surface with torn and fallen stars when the Abyss was still fresh and glowered with the dim embers of egress.
Nearby, A Satyr, peels a Serpent, snapping its neck with relish as you pass him.
like you, his is not the way of the Sphinx
but the Cracked Lizard – the inside out dream.
The blood from the broken snake forms tendrils, Flows toward you,
sketching symbols you do not recognise.
They seem to swim and writhe before your eyes, their meaning diffused in the alienic transmission.
You offer to carry the carcass
but the Satyr shakes his head, gesturing instead to the Spaces with a chthonic hand.
Through a misshapen arch
A Comet blazes across the glittering Ocean of the Celestial Night,
Mars Red, it envelops the other stars in its wake in Death.
In the nightmares of the few the Great Drowning has begun.
In the cities of the Dead,
the grotesqueries rise to worship the Horned One become the Whored One,
the Chariot of Harlequins.
Wherefrom these Despicable Mysteries?
Wherefrom these Delectable Madnesses?
An impenetrable Darkness
descends upon the scene above.
The window exposes no more secrets.
Onward you ascend,
the pale halo of broken cities far below,
the scent of blood in the stale air.
Terrifying Spectres of the Antediluvian, elongated and cyclopean, crawl from hollows, from shadows,
behind you, after you.
Ravenous these Shambling Slakes!

But see now how they flee!
Touched by the voluminate urges of nightmare emanating from the vispid masses throned above, those bloated wyrms that hulk over the deserts in their prisons between the spaces covering and subduing the less abominate.
The staircase widens to allow the thrust of parapets voidward.
But, What is this?
Something is wrong.
Your march toward Majesty,
your Wyrld...
assailed...
by Chaos...
That lusting, probing tongue
That sought forbidden knowledge creeps forth.
Its tendrils, plunging, solidifying... becoming taut
...a memory, a phrase, a name. Nyramicns.
Here, a legion of the Dark Gods, and another, and another, and another,
and here, in This "Place",
This World's End and Madness in Twilight,
in their Essence,
neither disguised nor draped in mercy
as black fissures in the temporal but here, to be witnessed in manifestations known not to the endurance of man.
Excruciating to see.
Your dark awareness stretched.
These nameless hideous horrors,
These... shapes, these, things.
Things to undo the mind,
unravel it not thread by thread
but lacerate the stitches of its fabric, rending asunder its feeble might in scorn of its fragile limits.
No.
You try to look away,
You cannot.
Your mind... is turning in on itself.
The Dream is breaking, cracks appearing...
from this... this encounter with wizardine Agonies.
You try to close your Sight,

to straighten the Worlds to command Them to Obey your Sorceries, the Dark Champion of your Will,
of your Power, of your Name.
But cold needles, abject terror and azzerate confusion engulfs you, drowns you, and what you once held as your own begins to cannibalise you – eating you from the inside a shredding, revolving tunnel of scissors.

Chaos...

You are falling.

Your body smashes into the hard bone staircase unmercifully
– the veins beneath your skin
suffused with dying glimmers of light.
Once-enchained forces of black magic,
no more serve you than they save you.
Unto the crowded stalags,
the sprawling crawling prisons,
the places of No Lights... Unto.
Before you, a bone staircase
scattered with skulls you recognise
as the remains of former Dark Magi,
yawns forth, up and into Imperial Blackness,
a towering spiral thundering toward Valhalla
and the terrifying danger of the Angles...

[4] GALAXIS

Ageless and Cold,
We will wait for them.
Here, churning in the dark prescient dreams of man,
We brood manifest, The All-Seeing Unseen.
From vibrant heavens and mundane hells,
Imprisoned and forgotten by tides of time,
In the year 2300, presenced and unbound
We came.
From whence, they Lost the names.
Without the Empires of Old to reveal us,
the stories of Return buried under small earths beneath rotting black mountains in the undisturbed sands of the deepest oceans, they forgot Us.

When the thriving had ceased,
When the hollow world of man lay still in smashed cities blackened and nuclear,
We came.
And only then could we come,
For there was never any sake,
any haven for compromise,
And whenever they thought there was,
Chaos Reminded them.
In every sluggish writhe they made,
Chaos reminded them.
Whichever way they turned,
They were proved damned
the Tragic eternal put in their place by destined Cosmic Egress.
For We were never chained by Word,
Magic, or their feeble Gods.
We were and are the Incomprehensive – and every time they sought to breach, we brought them closer to extinction,
nearer to their finity.
We touched them with the innumerate entropic,
And brought forth holocaust to prepare the altar of the Stars, for the Bornless, the Lucifer, and the Dark Satyricon.
And in those veiled glimpses by the few,
when we were perchance, Remembered,
they all Remembered why they forgot.
Hear, Parasites of the Now,
The Few that leave before we Come
Will Remember Only to Never Return.
Gone soon, your Seeds of the low dust,
The bloody fodder for our vitriol incubate.

THE GIVING: A STUDY

The Giving – a Study of an ONA Fiction

The Giving – Rhiston and Mallam: what is their level of development/understanding? Does this change? Can they as characters be related to the journey of an Initiate?

Mallam is somewhere between Initiate and the rank of External Adept */ Rhiston is never more than a neophyte. No – although Mallam’s words hint at knowledge of the greater manipulatory methods use beyond a runner of a Temple it is due to his actions and his inability to transcend his obsession on a personal/selfish basis that restrains him from travelling any further in the Path. Rhiston’s understanding increases of the genuinely Sinister (not the affectations conjured forth by Mallam that he claims to Rhiston represent Satanism) when Mallam does not return from the house to meet him as arranged. He finally senses that due to his own involvement in the proclivities of Mallam’s world he is now rendered impotent to help Mallam by calling the Police – for his own activities would risk being uncovered when he was called upon to explain his presence at the house and his knowledge of and relationship to Mallam.

Mallam’s journey has aspects of the journey of an Initiate on an outward level such as conducting a Temple, being trained by a Mistress/Master, experiencing various catharsis and carnal desires, etc – but his attitude and his actions; involving persons in his activities against their will, forcing his will on others, his greed, beating his mistress etc are the signs of a coward, a weak individual with a demeanour much like a child – ruled by his own impulses and absorbed only with his own self-gratification without empathy for the greater aims or noble aspects of the Tradition. Rhiston is a repressed character bored with his life (the life he has chosen and created) who seeks the thrill of a group that can fulfil his secret desires. He is never technically initiated in the Sinister Tradition, that is the story never mentioned his undertaking of an oath to Satan or to the Sinister Tradition and thus he is never made aware of an expectation for him to treat the experiences he undergoes as a temporary stage before passing on – indeed he seems from the outset to be lacking in any desire to transcend his lusts and even exhibits surprise and jealousy when Mallam tries to seduce his wife. Despite his own love of control over others without their consent he seems guarded against any witness of seeing his own practices being externalised. Although Mallam is initiated he fails to understand more than very basic manipulation and Rhaston even less. As a result of their own weaknesses and immature personalities neither of their paths are congruent with the journey of an Initiate with promise. Externally, the occult and emotional/physical settings can be expected to be encountered by an Initiate but I do not expect they are typical of all paths.

* I should expect someone who has reached the stage of EA to not be so hasty in judging people nor so easily manipulated by the appearances/roles displayed by others.

Lianna – what is her esoteric development/insight? What key factors influence her?

Lianna is a Mistress of Earth. A preoccupation with the ceremony of the Giving permeates all her more minor/personal interactions and affections with the other characters in the story and she is continually testing all around her to ascertain their loyalty by arranging circumstances that let others test themselves. By their own actions do they decide their own fate but she is motivated to create tests to determine suitable candidates for a husband and a Opfer.

Through Thorold's more noble actions and conduct as well as his capability to think for himself and not be easily led by the rumours/claims of others does he pass her many tests for loyalty and Satanic character especially the understanding of the need for and the secrecy around the Giving. Mallam on the other hand condemns himself and is led by his own weakness to his destruction. It is likely that Lianna knew from the outset [merely from the personality that emanated) that Mallam would turn on her and succumb to his own fevered lusts for power and carnality; but requiring an Opfer that is Initiated, she lead him into the practice of Initiatory (and Illusory when not coupled with eventual transcendence) Satanism to let him 'stew in his own black magical juices' to turn him into a suitably magically empowered individual as a Opfer for the Giving. I.e. someone most assuredly deserving of Death that it would benefit the world to be rid of. And, Love. Love influences Lianna, not just on a personal level but also the Great Love that is a requisite of all Mistresses/Masters and motivates the living of the Way of the Sinister Tradition.

Thorold – what is his role and how does this change? Has he esoteric self-awareness? Is there a manipulation of him by Lianna? If so, why?

Thorold is selected for Initiation by Lianna (who is likely informed of Thorold by Sidnal Wyke) and gradually tested in various situations to determine a) if his character lives up to the impression received from Sidnal when he sold the books and b) if Thorold will make a suitable Satanist, i.e. is he easily intimidated, can he be trusted, does he help others in need or think only about himself, can he think for himself, is he easily persuaded by others, is he strong enough to see his desires fulfilled or will he repress them under feelings of guilt or fear, does he possess intuition and foresight, courage, valour etc. His role changes when he gradually and then suddenly becomes aware of the nature of many tests that he has been through due to Lianna and his mature understanding of why they were required and the aim that they eventually produced. Thus he sees the intent and direction in what seemed to be unconnected chaotic currents and situations as directed acts of will magic and manipulation to bring about a natural course for all involved (owing to each of their separate personalities that fated them to different destinies) and I think his self-awareness is esoteric/unconscious until the point that he ties all that has gone on and himself and his role in it, in together. He seems to make this connection some time before Sarah asks him to betray Lianna and that is why he does not. My own belief is that the Grand Master also makes an appearance in the story disguised as Aiden (=A Identity) with the words 'Alone and Along' featured directly after his name, as well as some unusual confusion on the authors part regarding whether it is 'Aiden' or 'Aidan'. Some would say it is of no consequence but the manner in which the Satanists operate, who they send in to play what role and when does lend itself to some interesting study.

Imlach and his daughter – what are their roles and level of esoteric development. How well does Imlach fulfil the archetypal role of Guardian?

Imlach seems to be at least an Internal Adept – his age, coupled with his clear knowledge of the procedures required for forceful co-ercement (more precisely, passive threats of violence) indicates a longevity in living the Tradition and thus having passed beyond External Adept.

The time between his final knock on the door and his seeming disappearance when Thorold tears it open seems unnatural and if I am to visage how this illusion was created, logically he ran off as soon as he knocked, or perhaps he possessed some type of ninja skill and concealed himself to the side of the door or above it and left silently after Thorold had shut the door again. Although Thorold looks around he probably did not look up – and since Satanists tend to be acutely aware of the typical behaviours of the human species it is likely that Imlach would have known almost no-one looks up without good reason when looking around for someone who was just on their doorstep. Imlach is also in a highly trusted position and I do not imagine that position comes to be filled lightly. Sarah is an External Adept; she is a practiced hand at manipulation particularly sexual, and aware of The Giving and the various procedures involved thus has knowledge of the Black Books but lacks the maturity to understand the necessity for such procedures beyond the personal sphere and can thus progress no further in the Way. Indeed, she renounces the 'Old Ways' and sets about to betray her mother and sabotage the Giving and stay the just execution and Giving of the paedophile Mallam who has selected himself, revealing her weakness of character.

Is Imlach really trying to be menacing or is he simply playing a role of an overt menacer to incite Thorold into taking various actions or making various assumptions about the role and thus Lianna? If Imlach is trying to be menacing in a physical sense he does not achieve creating fear in Thorold. If he is trying to incite Thorold to think various things about Lianna and Lianna's motives thus obscuring the real moves in play by cloaking them in deliberate misdirection and thus protecting/shielding the real aims of Lianna, i.e. guarding her and her genuine activities by using roles and misdirection then he is successful. It is difficult to determine the nature of Imlach's intentions/character from the details given in the story. That said, Imlach seems to contravene what I feel is the appropriate archetype for a Temple Guardian who would be more likely to watch on and observe things without formally identifying themselves as a threat to any outsider by knocking on their door, issuing threats, etc. I tend to think that the Temple Guardian is more aptly portrayed in the 1973 movie of 'The Wicker Man' whereby the Temple Guardian, a large burly man, steps out of the way of the policeman offer in the climactic scene. The policeman proceeds to step past him, but is then grabbed and thrown back down the hill where he is overwhelmed. Although the burly man is present in many of the games; he does not openly approach or even talk to the offer beforehand.

Monica – is she manipulated? If so, why? Is her death the result of magick? If so, why?

Monica is certainly manipulated by Mallam – owing to her own confession at her love for thrill-seeking and a gradual immersement in Mallam's black magical farce. but is she manipulated by Lianna? I think so. There is no real emotional attachment to the roles played by a Mistress, that is to say, she is detached even though an excellent mimic. I think it is pure affectation when Lianna plays roles that involve emotion such as jealousy, anger, etc.

There is all the appearance of a person living in the moment and consumed by a role to play but a Mistress of Earth would be in control of her emotions due to such things as knowledge that brings a great sadness, Aeonic awareness, infinite patience for achieving impersonal/supra-personal goals etc. and thus any semblance of uncontrolled or emotional displays seen to be had by Lianna must stem purely from manipulatory affectation. At least, that is my understanding (presumptuous as it is) were Lianna a genuine Mistress of Earth.

Lianna is aware of Monica's base level of esoteric understanding and her superstition of the occult – thus Lianna shows Monica a magical parchment to incite fear and a sense of powerlessness then informs her she has 'no option'.

There are two likely scenarios – the first is that Lianna tried to buy off Monica and manipulate her into leaving. If Lianna knew that Monica would not leave, then she must have predicted that the case of money would be presented to Thorold at some point when Monica told him of Lianna's plot to buy her off. Lianna would have either suspected that Thorold would bring it back and thus the money was a test of character for him on Lianna's behalf using Monica to perform it – or Lianna was trying to make Thorold further aware of the methods of Satanic Manipulation and her own reach in such matters, perhaps to educate him, perhaps to attempt to intimidate him, either way it is likely that based on what she already knew of his character she guessed that Thorold would return the money and be brought back into contact with her, hence the author mentions a passage where Lianna betrays surprise, but only for an instant, at Monica's presence with Thorold. Lianna does succeed in setting up a brilliant comparison of character between herself and Monica by breaking Monica's composure enough for Monica to not only strike her, but to shout irascibly and to then bark a petulant question as to whether Thorold is coming – perhaps this plays on Thorold's mind when he sees some of the truer colours of Monica and her behaviour when she is emotionally moved, revealed. Monica's death is the result of being run over by a car. Magick could be said to have something to do with why she was where she was and doing what she was doing with Thorold – in that others had conspired with various magical and non-magical forces to force Thorold to take certain courses of action, and perhaps if Lianna had conspired to force Monica to accompany Thorold or incited Mallam's hatred of Monica via the magickal parchment then a sympathetic magic could be said to have been responsible...

[Edited]

...However, the DQ series is extremely complex in terms of exactly what IT is for. The Stories as you say, are variously layered, and many of these layers I have covered in my various readings. It is my impression that in itself using these stories to portray, [re-portray] the Satanic world and certain aspects of its reach, prowess, attitude are another layer of this vehicle for inducing changes both magickal and cerebral. While some of these, let's call them 'tools', are clearly reliant on the convenient science-fiction conjured around magick, 'a stepping stone to the obtuse' – they do have the power to 'shape' their reader and to prey upon their fears, expectations, and consequently, their behaviour. The idea that the Satanic world is always one step ahead of them, for instance, is enough to cause some individuals to be much more careful and certainly to display and live a greater degree of integrity in their dealings with others, under the suspicion that everything is not what it seems and that invisible phantoms will inevitably punish them for their transgressions. This beautiful art of, double, perhaps even quadruple, dimensions of form is in my opinion, generally the case with the Sinister. Although the creation of these "phantasms" [in what THEM call a Sinister Matrix] will probably go over the head of neophytes and probably some Initiates too – it is not merely the literal story, but the creation of a new world with 'new rules' suited to the environment and disposition of the ONA. What we call Narrative Magic that is achieved with the DQ, esp. given the resonance of archetypal forms to seize on the imagination of the unwitting or romantic. I refer here to, for instance, the manipulative power within the text to romanticise the subtleties of magic so that they may be conceivable, or perhaps a better word is 'witnessed' or 'seen', as forms, not as the invisible subtle pressures of opportunity in the world they tend to be. Such is the path of the gymnastics a mind must perform to untwist the forms presented to it to form the points of a Sinister Compass well presented by the DQ series. This grand display of at once "truthful" deception is quite wonderful to behold, yet another art form produced by the ONA to hint at that which cannot be hinted at, and there is something deliciously rewarding about being arrogant enough to claim that I am able to see the wire mesh behind the intricacy of this form but also a feeling of sadness for those who remain ignorant of their own strings. Including myself, clever as I am...

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF TRADITIONAL SATANISM

[Extracted from Diary of a DevilworshippR – Vol III]

“...But at this point, the reader may be curious to know why I persisted in living a role that did not conform to my image of myself and even why I believed such an ideal to be beneficial in the first place. Such a question requires a complex answer. An answer may be found in the psychology that is inherent in Human Nature; and the subsequent knowledge of this nature that is exploited by Cults and Movements to snare, motivate and control its members. Involvement in any cult or group begins gradually with a slow immersion into that Group’s philosophy, ideals and group norms which are positively reinforced by the cult leaders, other members, or in this case the Individual’s own self-satisfaction in working toward a higher ‘Noble’ aim. Because ONA lacks overt public leaders to provide encouragement for the actions of its members it relies solely on the strength of its ideals to keep its members interested and involved. Accordingly, first impressions are very important:

Beauty is everything, and the Order has taken great pains to appear aesthetically pleasing and even beautiful – detracting from the brutal and destructive elements later involved in adhering to its way of living. But such appearances cannot be relied on to subdue recoil from the ruthless ideals that are encountered in subsequent reading and understanding of what the Order practices.

While the texts of the Order lay down the goals and aims for the organisation in a clear, concise manner- Appearance is seldom Essence – and Psychological principles that operate behind the ideals are carefully concealed. Again, because the Order does not have Leaders to openly encourage member efforts, Symbolism must be combined with ideals that an individual is encouraged to strive for by proxy; ideals which must be fairly abstract and far-reaching in their aim so that disappointment does not ensue easily from their un-fulfillment – yet ideals self-rewarding enough to maintain interest in pursuing them.

“Satanism” is a perfect platform for this – the symbolism is alluring and hypnotic, drawing the potential Member in to look more closely. A philosophy is then expounded that is intelligent and cosmically encompassing but ingeniously side-steps the need for a Physical God or Goal that could lead to disappointment by never manifesting; by promoting the worship of an intangible ever-growing abstract, in the ONA’s case, Aeonics for example. Life-Affirming ideals are related by ONA that expound the highest virtues humanity strives to manifest, building a hypnotic picture of Order and Cosmic Procession where the Satanist is in control; appealing to the personal hungers of the potential member, generally by Power. But despite these appealing concepts, what prevents the member from giving up on the ideals when no forthcoming encouragement is given?

ONA makes ingenious use of Psychological precepts here and numerous layers of them. Because there is no (or little) motivation from external sources, as said, the Individual must be sufficiently inspired to emulate the Ideal for the Ideals own sake, despite the lack of external motivation from Authorities and must also be somehow contented to endure disappointment and contradiction by having a certain degree of faith that overcomes a certain degree of doubt. ONA achieves this Self-affirmation by reinforcing the idea that normally negative situations are a vital and even rewarding part of being part of the ‘Seven-Fold Way’. The possibility that the Member may not be able to function on such minimal Passive Reinforcement is strengthened by appealing directly to the Individual’s fear of failure – with numerous ONA MSS condemning the giving up of the Septenary Way merely because it has become difficult, boring or paradoxical. Such values differ from other Cults in sophistication by actually using the negative feelings involved with participating in unsavoury or contrary acts to ones Self-image with Positive Reinforcement that such activities are signs of Strength, Growth and Vitality setting the Member apart from other weaker, frightened individuals.

There is also the indirect/direct threat of Retaliation for desertion of the Order, by failing to become one of the Elite and instead becoming an ‘Opfer’ – and re-classified as ‘Human Dross’ – the lowest possible human status in the Orders hierarchy. Being considered an Opfer carries the risk that someone who takes the Orders Ideals literally and to heart may seek to enact revenge against those who are seen to desert or betray it. Furthermore, because the ONA Way involves intense devotion and very gradually increases in depth and scope, the Individual may be well into The Way before they find conflict in following it – thus actions and risks that pose a danger to the life of the Member may be taken that would not ordinarily have been due to psychological pressures discussed below.

If already deeply immersed an individual is more likely to continue The Way than terminate affiliation with the Order even if they disagree with what is involved, for then they have to admit that their choice in following the Way has from the beginning been one of error, and those with the potential to be ‘Satanic’ are usually those with a massive easily-bruised ego or, other reasons will be found to resolve the conflict. See for instance an early attempt of my own that simultaneously rejects and embraces the ONA:

Insight into the Machine?

“... when one has posited a totality, a systematisation, indeed any organisation in all events, and underneath all events, and a soul that longs to admire and revere has wallowed in the idea of some supreme form of domination and administration (—if the soul be that of a logician, complete consistency and real dialectic are quite sufficient to reconcile it to everything). Some sort of unity, some form of “monism”: this faith suffices to give man a deep feeling of standing in the context of, and being dependant on, some whole that is infinitely superior to him, and he sees himself as a mode of the deity.— “The well-being of the universal demands the devotion of the individual” — but behold, there is no such universal!” – Nietzsche

= And this is how I have viewed Satanism: as my infinite superior.

“Given these two insights, that becoming has no goal and that underneath all becoming there is no grand unity in which the individual could immerse himself completely as in an element of supreme value, an escape remains: to pass sentence on this whole world of becoming as a deception and to invent a world beyond it, a true world “ – Nietzsche

= And this I have done. But I do not feel I have developed the last insight and become disbelieving in any metaphysical world or forbid any belief in a true world. Perhaps this is yet to come.

“ The nihilistic question “for what?” is rooted in the old habit of supposing that the goal must be put up, given, demanded from outside—by some superhuman authority. Having unlearned faith in that, one still follows the old habit and seeks another authority that can speak unconditionally and command goals and tasks.” – Nietzsche

= And I have done this too – as a mode. From the old authorities of pseudo-satanism to the new authority of the ONA – I have kept the habit Nietzsche speaks of.

“A faith generally expresses the constraint of conditions of existence, submission to the authority of circumstances under which one flourishes, grows, gains power.” – Nietzsche

= And here again I almost fell. The ONA possesses real power: a slave who thinks he is a Master is still a slave. And I wonder how many of us hundreds of Neophytes stop running into the light at such an early stage? How many of us will come to the realisation that we are being used by the ONA because they are genuine satanists – and what we do is their will – how we perceive our gaining power is through their say so.

Only the fool would climb such a tower to the top without the knowledge he or she is being manipulated by that believed to grant one the exact same power. The ONA, uses Will, uses Faith, uses The Will to Power, as Life, to suggest/presence a genuine agenda and sinister actions via the weak-will of others. And when those others find out and say no fair – the ONA will laugh (except even here they will not, they will never deign to do such a thing) – thus laugh theoretically and answer – ‘yes but you knew we were Satanists, and all along we have told you this every step of the way – sucker’. Hence the need for the Tradition? Because the ONA needs sheep just like anyone else. It is essentially a pyramid power structure of Illuminati build upon blocks of slavish faith. Genius. Ah, but is it Satanism? Yes. And look how little power need be expended from their reserves to achieve the empire. Such well-posed texts explaining away the Universe are bound to attract – if one is looking for an authority, and I was. And therein lies a secret greater than most.

“A goal for which one does not hesitate to offer ,to risk every danger, to take upon oneself whatever is bad and worst: the great passion”. – Nietzsche = Precisely the direction running toward the light led me in. On the verge of destruction however – I managed to sidestep the chasm that dashes one upon the rocks. To accept wholesale the tenets would be to... sell the soul...to Think as another, and not as ones Self – to be manipulated. Yet one must contradict ones own statements and remark that it is beneficial to be sucked into the vortex – because there is Wisdom in the ONA. And one must live and breathe the form before one can discard it fairly.

Hence – To avoid pain and anxiety, the further into the Order the Member is, the less likely they are to leave it. The sense of obligation is even more heavily enforced by the performance of an Initiation Ritual in which the Neophyte swears allegiance to Satan and the Order, thereby giving implicit internal consent to co-operate with the ideology of the Order – a psychological contract that proves very difficult to break without deep feelings of conflict, remorse, guilt and self-worthlessness.

In most cases where we disagree with an Authority we tend to view that Authority in a negative light deeming them irresponsible, careless, or even evil. This is a common response to disassociate ourselves from an Event or Person by assigning them negative traits that compliment and stabilise/rationalise our updated view. But how does one do this with a group that claims to represent the abstract of Evil in a most potent form? (Personally speaking, ONA values displaced my own former values and played havoc with my common responses to deal with situations that caused conflict.)

After the contract is made, whether in ritual or mental obligation, the feeling of belonging to a Sacred Tradition is nurtured by reading and absorbing various texts that are presumably designed to pre-empt the feelings a new Member is likely to experience. For instance, to counter the possibility of the Member giving up because they are not getting sufficient reward from their own Self- effort, there is the provision of a ‘Uniform’ in the form of a Black Quartz ring. This is a visual cue that reminds the Member that s/he is part of a group and helps consolidate the feelings of isolation a member may feel by giving them a sense of being a Noble Martyr working alone not by choice, but by necessity. I surmise that an implicit desire of independence is an attraction to Satanism and the Order, whose Way gives a person what they generally strive to achieve in life regardless of occult involvement – a separation from their parents and the development of a Powerful Self-identity.

Let us consider now the awesome power of a Cosmic-Based Tradition. The average person will feel remorse in letting down a friend or not attending some Social Function they promised to attend, because of a sense of obligation, and may experience a guilty conscience for failing to follow through; risking anger or disappointment from peers or loved ones. Likewise, the more significant an Event the higher the degree of remorse; for example, missing a Funeral would evoke much stronger guilty feelings and remorse than missing the Bus. But if this exponential growth is true: what degree of remorse does a person feel when they believe they have let down the Cosmos and failed in their duty to all the inhabitants of Earth? Or phrased more accurately, ‘Their Species?’

The fact that I was personally willing, for example, to invest two years of my life studying every Manuscript – including going to extraordinary lengths to obtain Manuscripts and Music that were very difficult to get; invested three years of my life to manufacture a deck of Sinister Tarot cards for the order without any chance of reward, and spent up to $2000 to buy weaponry, clothing, manufacture special incense, buy ONA literature, and continued to search endlessly for other ONA artefacts; prepared to pay any cost, perform a number of the Rituals despite my reservations of belief in Black magic, become a skinhead for two years, and write endlessly on the Order, testifies to my own innate obsession with enacting its Ideology.

Engaging in behaviour that is counter to ones attitude, (I.e. Insight Roles/National Socialism Role) creates pressure to reduce the conflict of that engagement by changing ones attitude so that it is are consistent with behaviour. Human Sacrifice and National Socialist ideals are a large part of the ONA doctrines. The Order’s gifted Word-Smith’s went to considerable pains to express that Race and Sacrifice were not compulsory or required, that in fact, such Ideals were merely means to a greater (but nevertheless abstract) end and that each individual must make a choice as to the usefulness of either.

Nevertheless it simultaneously promoted the ideals of both in extensive coverage and emphasis. Compliance is not compulsory – yet it was written that such undertakings are a part of the Way. How does an individual resolve such a contradiction? By referring to their values? If referring to their values, to their previous values or their new pro-ONA values? To avoid the pain of conflict, the normal individual will take the easiest path to pain and anxiety relief.

In most Cults such ideas could be held to be ideals that indicated Group Norms – that reveal the intention behind such Cults, but were they Group Norms, in ONA? In most cases ONA members exhibited NS tendencies and an affirmation of NS ideology as useful to ‘Sinister Strategy’ – but this does not indicate a correlation between ONA persuasion toward NS and a member adoption of NS. It does symbolise however a Group Norm; in direct contrast to the promoted ideal of Satanism as an isolated individual quest, and even an unconscious expectancy of members to positively conform to NS ideology – In my opinion. Another Group Norm, in my opinion – is the acceptance of abstract enemies to unite and wage war against. The Nazarene, Magian and Zion are abstract enemies utilised by a number of Groups, including the Order. It is an established fact that the further removed from seeing an individual's effects on an enemy, the easier it is for them to commit violent or unethical acts against them. Obedience to the Order from members despite internal conflicts over views of NS or human sacrifice, was reconciled by scapegoats in which the various Members could find a common ground as a group: by uniting against an enemy both abstract enough to be completely removed from the Satanist, and yet threateningly ubiquitous in all spheres of life around them.

After following the Septenary Way for long enough to change my behaviour to be in accordance with ONA group norms, the necessary paranoia of the Enemy gave me a sense of danger and excitement in being part of stopping something far greater than myself and the Self-propulsion of the Satanic Ideal became automatic. However – what must be taken into account is that I believe the ONA is truly representing Satanism, if, one can think in psychological/magical terms, the playing off of contradictions against one another to achieve certain balances and observe how the trick of control is done. In which case, we can surmise that the ‘truly’ Satanic individual would be expected to see through these patterns of conformity, and rebel with no concern at the risk of losing Group Support and Tacit Membership for unorthodox views of the ONA in order to assert a thoughtful, independent view of their Sinister Tradition, not duly influenced via Herd Pressure. In which case, the ideals of Human Sacrifice and National Socialism are merely tests to see if a Member is actually ‘Satanic’ in defiantly rejecting commonly held views and Group Norms despite the risk of retaliation and exclusion by self-representatives or will continue to conform to behaviour that is counter to their Self-Image in the mistaken belief that they are individual – thus failing the test.

But if the ONA is this prescient in the matters of Human Psychology, the point would be reached whereby such an individual would see the paradox in being part of something called Satanism and eventually reject it – why is this done?

My Theory: My own experiences show that I fell for the ruse, but eventually became wise, first to the conformity of following the National Socialist ideal and so rationalised that NS was not for me, not good for Satanism etc, by making ‘excuses’ not to enact the Group Norm, I did not feel remorse or guilt for abandoning the group norm (which is interestingly enough emphasised by ONA not to be a group norm, despite the obvious). Later on I consolidated my feelings of negative worth by accepting that I had been tricked, led into performing behaviour contrary to my Self-Image by clever persuasion, and been perceptive enough to recognise (or ‘shown’ -pending on how far-reaching the ONA’s psychological control methods are) how a considerable power could be exercised over a human being even by indirect manipulation. I was both unimpressed at my susceptibility and impressed by the intricacy of the ONA, the way I might marvel at a cage full of skulls: in dread but fascinated awe. The mystery of the ONA is further enhanced by the uncertainty that it may or may not be different from many ‘lesser’ sophisticated Cults and actually represent what its texts indicate it does, at face value, namely the written form related of the Sinister Tradition.

The ONA is inarguably highly-layered, and there is overwhelming evidence that one such layer is a system of psychological tests designed to Individuate/De-individuate a person for assessment (of Satanic qualities).

Given the apparent sophistication of the Order it is not unlikely that this be too far from the truth. One can see, for example, that it has been a path of enormous personal growth and vitalising mental/physical/magical expansion for me. Such tremendous personal efforts were necessary in escaping the psychological currents, possibly intended to entrap the Would-be-Satanist and to step outside of the Septenary System in order to examine how it worked. It is one thing to build the Individual, and explain how this is done, it is quite another to take things a step further and try to explain how Cults, Cultures and Groups may be built. In fact, my powerful method of enquiry is largely in gratitude of the methods I learned via the ONA for tearing things apart, for the methods and practices expounded did indeed transform me into something altogether different from what I used to be.

In Summary:

There is no question of the efficacy of the Order of Nine Angles to convey Esoteric and Exoteric mysteries in methods of practical experience, regardless of how those ‘surface’ mysteries are perceived – and the methods employed by the Order of Nine Angles are even far more complex than what I have illustrated, methods and writings in my opinion that are the result of a real organic current being lived by the men and women behind the Order, (referred to in Angles and Curves II), that is to say a real practice of the tenets expounded. But for this and no doubt many other brief analyses of it, it is the intention behind the Order that is an impenetrable mystery: what are the ONA? Such a mystery is for each to discover. I merely believe it is a means to Discover, in the most literal sense of the word.

Though much could be added to this manuscript regarding other psychological precepts used by the ONA, (See Vol. V) I think enough has been said for others to build their own Tradition if they believe they have the nous shown by the ONA. Enter Exhibit A.

AN EARLY COMPARISON OF THE PYMANDER TRACTATE

by Krist Hollow

0

The work by Myatt on the Pymander Tractate (Corpus Hermeticum) is highly interesting – and yet it appears, continually ignored as a conversation. I will invest time in a comparison between this <http://www.alchemylab.com/mead.htm> and this: <http://davidmyatt.files.wordpress.co...o-princeps.pdf>

Due to the exoteric complexity and esoteric simplicity – I’ve made very brief notes (some intuition required, some deep knowledge of o9a required): my comments in brackets and bold. Additional insights are archived in the online forum Mvimaedivm Red.

+O+

Once a man had come into touch with the Great Synthesis, there rushed into his mind innumerable passages of scripture, scraps of myths, fragments of cosmogenesis, facts, and symbols of all kinds that fitted naturally. These were not any special writer’s monopoly, there was no copyright in them, and they were all utterances of the same Logos, the Great Instructor of humanity.

[2] – The exoteric and esoteric contrivances of Anton Long – that broad personification of anonymity – the deliverer of messages without attribution.

Thus the literature that was produced in the Corpus Hermeticum was anonymous or pseudographic. There was first of all a nucleus of personal vision and direct illumination, then a grouping of similar matter from various sources into a whole for didactic purposes. Nor was there any idea among these mystics and scripture-writers that the form once issued should become forever stereotyped as infallible; there were many recensions and additions and interpolations. It was left to those without the sense of illumination to stereotype the forms and claim for them the infallacy of verbal dictation by the Deity. Those who wrote the apocalypses from personal knowledge of vision could not make such claim for their scriptures, for they knew how they were written and the nature of their hearing and sight at the time they were experienced.

[3]-Correctly stated, perhaps for the first time – the raison detre for the OrderS of Nine Angles. The tension between o9a and THEM is the authenticity of Long and Myatt’s journey vs a perceived inauthenticity of Ryan/Krist’s. Unbeknownst to me, perhaps I was stealing thunder the Inquisition believe is unjustified thunder. Of that my conscience is clear though my forms may not be.

The first part of the question he “holds” in his mind is: How came this cosmos into being? The answer is the changing of the Boundless Presence into “Light — sweet joyous Light.” He loses all sight of “all things” in his mind (the mental image he had formed of cosmos) and is plunged into the infinitude of Limitless Light and infinite joy, which transports him out of himself in highest ecstasy.

[4] – David’s bifurcation of the acausal/causal.

But he has craved for Gnosis, not joy and light, but Wisdom, the understanding and reconciliation of the great Opposites, the Cross of all Manifestation. Therefore must he know the Mystery of Ignorance as well as that of Knowledge. Within the infinitude of Light appears the Shadow of the Unknown, which translates itself to his consciousness as Darkness — the Shadow of the Thrice-unknown Darkness — which, as Damascius tells us, “was the First Principle of the Egyptians, the ineffable Mystery, of which they said nothing,” and of which our author says nothing.

[5] – Being the Sinister. The necessity of dark deeds and no limit to them to Understand, to Know. Parallels with Vamachara. In simplistic terms, there is no light, without shadow. The darker the shadow, the more brilliant the light – and the necessity of being amoral – is to devote oneself to the furthest possible points of dark and light. It is not an ‘opposite’ to morality – it is not a badness for the sake of being bad – it is heurisy that must take the form (to the observer) as heresy. Their judgements – irrelevant. The ‘contradiction of Myatt’s deeds is an uninitiated perception – the forms that control, that bind, that restrict one from ineffable union with the Numen – irrelevant. One either wants and is willing to Know – at ANY cost, act, risk, path(s) – or one is not. Myatt was willing. This is why, the o9a is not and never was Satanic – merely made visible as such to encourage the leap by others into the hermetic journey. It’s ‘evil’ certainly evil – and its ‘dark gods’ certainly dark – but only from an uninitiated perspective – from an initiated perspective, simply a flowing through or moving with, nature on ones Wyrd wander toward. Toward what? Toward Sapanur – but more correctly, toward and twixt life itself – the Mysterium. In layman's terms – if one was born afresh to earth and was stopped, was hemmed in by all the forms scattered about by various past and present hierarchies, authorities, cultures, social mores – one should discover nothing – overcoming the limits of these forms is just the beginning – the equivalent of navigating the marshy fens and quicksands before reaching the mountain pass and the ranges beyond. One either lets things get in their way to Know and is stopped by their own limits, by their adherence to norms, by their moral or ethical code, by their physical/mental ability, by ones stomach turning – or, quite simply, one Knows. And there aren't very many who Know. Because something or someone generally always stops someone from Knowing what there is to Know.

His one desire, his only will, is now to “learn the things that are, and comprehend their nature and know God.” He craves for Gnosis — Gnosis of the Cosmos and its mysteries, Gnosis of Nature or the Great Mother, and, finally, Gnosis of God, the Father of the worlds. This is the one question he “holds in his mind.” His whole being is concentrated into this question, this one point of interrogation.

[6] Pathei Mathos and the goal of the Immortal

It is to be noticed that we are not told, as in the Gospel of Eve, that the seer stood, as it were, apart from himself, and saw his little self and greater Self simultaneously. He is conscious of a Presence, of a persona in the highest theological meaning of the word, who is not seen so much as felt. He speaks to this Presence mind to Mind; he hears this Presence rather than sees it.

[7] That of course being the Numen or what we, call, THEM.

This Darkness comes forth from within outwards to the disciple's consciousness, and it spreads “downwards” in sinuous folds like a Great Snake, symbolising, presumably, the unknown, and to him unknowable, mysteries of the differentiation of the root of matter of the cosmos that is to be. Its motion is spiral, sinuous, unending vibrations — not yet confined into a sphere; not yet ordered — but chaotic, in unceasing turmoil, a terrible contrast to the sweet peace of the Light. This primordial darkness gradually changes from Dark Space into a Fluid or Flowing Matter, or Watery Substance. That is, presumably, what the Greek mystics would have called Rhea, the Primal Mother or First Matter of the future universe before it has even been manifested.

[8] Symbolised by the Tree of Wyrd and its spiralling path toward Saturn or Gnosis. Symbolised by the abstraction of the causal and acausal dissecting via the Star Game. These two vehicles symbolised and theorised from the abstraction itself of the bifurcation of time and acausal space into causal as per nexion intuitively grasped but difficult to share.

It wails and groans — that is to say, its motion is as yet unharmonized. In the terminology of the Sophia-mythus, it is the inchoate birth from the Sophia Above, in the Fullness, brought forth by herself alone without her syzygy (or consort). On account of its imperfection, she wails and groans to the Father of All and His Perfections, that her Perfection may be sent to fashion her child, who is herself in manifestation, into a world of order, and eventually into Perfection in its turn. The Primal Undifferentiated or Chaotic Sound, from the Darkness of its first state, gradually manifests itself under the brooding power of the Boundless Light, into less confused thunderings and murmurings, and finally reaches a stage symbolised by the “Cry,” which is a Voice of Fire. This is passionate Fire, not distilled Light, and it expresses a need and want, longing for union with the Articulate Power or Cosmic Word.

[9] The Seven Fold Way. Beginning at the Moon Sphere and in complete ignorance – Pathei Mathos allows understanding and vision, a numinous connexion with nature that is charted through the marking of the pathways of the spheres – one might associate the cry with the naming, the thought-form “Order of the Nine Angles” – breathed into life from necessity to cojoin with the Forces of THEM – or the Numen.

The three most primal stages thus seem to be symbolised by Fire, the Watery Substance, and Darkness. These were not our differentiated elements but the Primal Pre-cosmic Elements, what Christian theologians would call the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. The same idea, though in different forms, is met with in a system of the Gnosis preserved for us by the Old Latin translator of Irenaeus and also by Theodoros who ascribes it to the Sithians, whom he says are also called Ophianae or Ophirae. Now, Seth was Typhon or Darkness, Dark Light, and this Seth may very well have been symbolised as the Great Serpent of Darkness, as it is in our text. Hence the name “Those of the Serpent,” perhaps given them by their theological adversaries (orthodox Jews and Christians). In this system the Primal Elements are given as Water, Darkness, Abyss, and Chaos. The Light was the Child of the supreme Trinity — the First Man, the Second Man, and the Holy Spirit or First Woman. This Light is what the Jewish and Christian overworking of the original tradition called the Cosmic Christ. Thus the Fire of Desire, or the Cry in the Darkness, was to be satisfied or checked or quenched by the Light’s fashioning its inchoate substance into the cosmos; and so in another Vision, preserved in another treatise in the Corpus Hermeticum, Hermes sees “through the gaze of the Master,” the cosmos in its finished beauty, when all things in it are full of Light and nowhere is there Fire or Darkness.

[10] This touches on some deeply esoteric themes and it is very difficult to be sure they have been correctly identified – but the basic parallel with the seven fold way is thesis – antithesis – synthesis. If we imagine that a man is a vessel – he is to be filled all the way with as much darkness as he can exhaust – until he reaches the Abyss – and can go no darker. Then this is emptied of him. Then he is to travel the inverse, and be filled with as much Numen as he can exhaust – until he reaches the Abyss – and can go no lighter. Only by going to both Abyss does the necessary alchemical change take place on the vessel itself. Which, in clumsy terms – requires both – because it requires neither. That is, only through a personal exhaustion of heurisy does there come the wisdom to understand and Know. Said a different way – there is beauty in horror, and horror in beauty. To understand Form, one must turn it around 361 degrees.

First Emanation: The Descent of the Logos Upon this Cry for Light, into the Heart of the Dark-Moist-Fiery nature is injected a Holy Word, the Seed of the future Cosmos. This Word is articulate, reasonable, and ordering. The Cosmic Animal Nature is impregnated with the Light of the Supernal Reason, which pervades its whole being. This pervading immediately effects an ordering of the Chaotic Elements into Pure Fire, Pure Air, and Pure Water-Earth. Moreover, it is to be gathered from the sequel that Nature saw the Word and all his beauty in her Fire and Air, but as yet only heard him in her Water-Earth. The Shepherd thus explains that Light is really Mind, and Mind is really God — God prior to Nature but not prior to Darkness. The Unity of Light and Darkness is a still higher Mystery. Light and Mind is the highest concept the disciple can yet form of God. The Light-Word, or emanation of Supernal Reason, is Son of God, Son of Great Mind.

[11] I believe this word was “Chaos” – and what appears to have happened is that many have understood this statement by early o9a to be a moral platitude that is calling for evil, for destruction, for anarchy. But this is too simplistic. Chaos, or Xaos is not this platitude, that the o9a refer to – but rather the ‘free exploration of the numen’ and this can involve both beatific darkness as well as sublime light – since when the o9a arrived on earth and began to assess the landscape, the ‘sublime light’ had already been taken to extremes by various generations of occultists, new-agers, hippies – the world was unbalanced – and required a return to xaos – not evil, not even a moralism, if we think about it – but all that moralism ‘might’ entail and more as part of the process. Xaos – through the o9a, has returned perhaps not a balance, yet, but evokes a searching for balance that Myatt desperately wished to convey early – gradually less frantically as time went by, resulting in his numinous way writings. Thus I might add, do ‘Insight Roles’ contain both sinister/dark/violent archetypes, and numinous/holy r’les, for instance.

The Revelation of the Pleroma At this point in the treatise, the sequence of the narrative is broken by a second vision and is only resumed later. The breaking of the main narrative may be regarded as a necessary digression rather than as an interpolation of foreign material. It is necessary in order to bring on to the scene the hitherto invisible Greatnesses, “within” the Veil of Light, which constitute the Economy of the Pleroma. More had to be seen by the disciple before he was in a position to understand what he had so far seen. He must now unite with the Light, his previous seeing being that of its reflection on his own mind. Not that this logos and Light (or Mind) are separate. They are in reality one, the Son is one with the Father in the state that transcends all opposites. The Logos apparently comes forth, yet it remains ever with the Father, and this coming-forth and- yet-remaining constitutes its Life — in other words, it is an emanation. Thus Hermes is bidden to understand the Light: as Life, and so make “friends” with it.

[12] to this end, Myatt undertook his ‘Muslim’ “role”. And from it the Synthesis of the Numinous Way.

Hitherto the Light had been one for him a sameness that his highest vision could not pierce, the Veil of Light that shut the beauties, perfections and greatnesses of the Intelligible from the eyes of his mind. To pierce this veil, a still more expanded power of sight had to be given him by the Master. The little word or light-spark within him is intensified by the Great Word of the Master, this Word being an Intelligible Utterance of the One Mind, an intensification of being.

[13] The Exeatia of Living.

Hermes now sees and understands the countless Powers within the Light, which constitute the Intelligible Archetypal Forms or Divine Ideas of all worlds. Between the special sensible cosmos of his prior vision and this Immensity was a Mighty Power or Great Boundary (Horos) that encircled the elements of the sensible cosmos and held its Fire in check.

[14] being, the very specific term and phrasing “The Order, of Nine, Angles”

God Desiring Himself In amazement, Hermes asks whence come these apparently disorderly and untamed elements of the new world that have to be subdued and separated from the concord of the perfection of the Powers? And the answer is that Chaos, too, has its being from God’s Will. Discord and Concord, Chaos and Cosmos, are both of God. The Primal Elements are, as it were, the passions of God’s Will desiring Himself. It is Himself as Mother or Spouse desiring Himself as Father. In other of the Trismegistic tractates this “Feminine Aspect” of Deity is called Wisdom, Nature, Generation, or Isis. He is Wisdom as desiring Himself — that Desire being the Primal Cause as Mother of the whole world-process, which is consummated by His Fullness uniting with His Desire or Wisdom, and so perfecting it. This is the whole burden of the Gnostic Sophia-mythus, from which the main elements of the Pymander might be derived.

[15] – The Immortal – the conscious directing of an Aeon, the toward for all, of evolution.

The Mother, when thought of as without the Pleroma, is impregnated by the Word, which the Gnostic Basilides would have called the Allseed Potency of the Pleroma endowed with all Powers, and sent forth as the seed of the sensible cosmos that is to be. The Mother in her higher nature contemplates the Eternal Cosmos (or Order of the Pleroma) and in her lower nature copies its beauties by means of the permutations and combinations of her elements and the generations and transformations of her lives or souls.

[16] the Ethos of Earth's bearing (in higher nature) , and (in lower nature) the 'Tribes' spoken of.

What some authors have seen as the fundamental dualism of our text is, however, by no means so very marked, for it leaves it clearly to be inferred that the Darkness comes from the Light itself, for previously there was nothing but Light and all thing had become Light to the eye of the seer. It was, in my opinion, precisely for the sake of removing the thought of dualism that the seer is shown a still more intimate vision within the Light Veil, where all ideas of monotheism, dualism, tritheism, polytheism, and pantheism lose their formal distinctions in a Formless State, or, at any rate, in a state of being where all are interblended with all. In describing it, the “tongue of flesh” has to use the familiar language of form, but every word employed has a new significance; for even the “tongue of angels” cannot describe it, or any of the “tongues” of heaven; He alone who speaks forth the Words of the One Mind can express it.

[17] An interesting interplay being that David Myatt went beyond good and evil to this place, this silent desert, this Mactoron – but the language of the recent incarnation of the ONA seems not – seems to hinge great importance on dualism and an us and them – interesting because of what it denotes, which should be obvious, but is not.

We now return to the main narrative. Within the World-Egg, which was encircled by the Mighty Power (the Gnostic Horos), there had already been developed the three Cosmic Elements of Fire, Air, and Water-Earth. This had been effected by the descent of the Cosmic Logos into the Primal Elements of Disorder. As the Logos descended, Fire and Air ascended, and the Logos remained in Water-Earth. This was the result of the First Outpouring from the potency of the Pleroma the First Word uttered by the One Mind. The Second Outpouring of Mind was of Mind no longer regarded as Light only, but as Light and Life, Male-Female. This emanation appeared as the enforming Mind — that is, Mind the Maker, the Fashioner or Former, Artificer or Demiurge of lives or souls. It was the ensouling of the Ordered Elements of Nature with lives, whereby these Cosmic Elements were drawn together into forms.

[18] First Mind being what THEM call the Thrasz – o9a might infer as the Acausal / second mind what THEM call the Phym – o9a might infer as the Causal.

The Great Mind, as Light and Life, reflected itself in the “pure formation” of Nature — that is to say, in Fire and Spirit (Air), Fire for Light and Spirit for Life, to further enform, things. The Mighty Power or Self-limitation of Mind, the boundary that no mortal can pass, marks off the formative area of the whole cosmos. This area, however, was by no means only the mixed sensible world that we perceive with our present physical senses. On the contrary, there are within it various orders of the main cosmos. For the Ordering Mind, as the Enformer or Soulfashioner, differentiates itself into seven Ruling Forms or Spheres that “enclose” the mixed sensible cosmos; these spheres, therefore, must be of a psychic nature — that is to say, of a pure or subtle substance. They are forms of subtle matter endowed with reason. They constitute the cosmic engine of the fashioning of souls, or psychic natures, and of their perpetual transforming. Their energies and activities are those of Fate, or the ordered sequence of cause and effect, symbolised by spheres perpetually entering into themselves.

[19] Naturally perceived – this is symbolised by the Tree of Wyrd, its seven spheres and the pathways that join them as a unified matrix. The Sphere’s of a psychic nature are the Forces as themselves – the spheres of subtle nature are the Forms as they appear – the reason that binds them – is ultimately to give way to the Logos – to experiencing the denotation of the ‘energy’ of the Spheres in its purest essence – in isolation each – and then in unison all.

In all the main phases of this divine operation, there is to be observed the idea of a downward tendency followed by an upward. The Darkness descends; it then transmutes itself and aspires above in a Cry, or Vibration, or primordial yearning for Light. The Word descends, and immediately the Fire and Air ascend. Mind the Maker descends, and immediately the Word ascends from the mixed Water-Earth, which unites (at-ones) itself with its co-essential emanation from the Father. This creates a space about the Seven, and thus leaves the still down-tending elements in the Element Water-Earth deprived of its immediate presence, after giving physical matter the initial impulse to order. This physical matter our author calls “pure matter,” meaning thereby matter deprived of the immediate presence of Reason. Hereupon from the impulse she has received, Nature begins her physical enformation, develops her physical elements and bodies of irrational lives. Water-Earth divides into water and earth, and also air, for this air is clearly something different from the Spirit-Air that ascended; the lower air is one of the downward elements.

[20] The immersement of the neophyte into the energies, forms, associations, living of various energies denoted by the spheres exhausts appearance and gives way to understanding – to essence – which bears barely remote resemblance to the former. This opens a finer appreciation, a truer understanding of the forces thus symbolised Without the trappings and burdens of form – and only force alone – which is intimate. There is therefore, matter, intuitively understood without the burden of reason.

When this had been accomplished, there followed a Third Outpouring — the descent of Man, the consummation of the whole enformation of things, a still more transcendent manifestation of Mind, the One Form that contains all forms, His Very Image coequal with Himself. God finally becomes Himself to consummate and save the cosmos in the form of Man — that is, to gather it to Himself and take it back into the Pleroma.

[21] And here we understand the ferocity of the o9a toward some if we understand the passage correctly. Myatt's Aeonics, Myatt's Numinous Way, Myatt's Pathei Mathos, Long's Order of the Nine Angles. And the evolutionary drive for an individual to dissolve into a collective and be reborn anew – and too – that which it is reborn into, anew.

Nevertheless, the Word and the Mind the Maker and Man are not three different persons; they are all co-essential with each other and one with the Father. For the Word is co-essential with the Demiurgic Mind, and the latter is Brother of Man, and thus Man is coequal with God. And so Man, as the Beloved, descends; and in his descent he is clothed with all the powers of his Brother's creative energy, the creative energy of Life conjoined with rational Light. Having learned the lesson of the conformations and of the limitations of the Spheres, he desires to break right through the Great Boundary itself; but to do this, he must descend still further into matter. Before he can burst through upwards, he must break through downwards. Accordingly he breaks through the Spheres downwards, seeking his consort Nature below, and shows her his Divine Form radiant with all the energies bestowed on him by all the Powers above.

[22] It is not dismissive to explain this as the dissolution of ALL Forms and more accurately all For(m). This is how contradictions resolve themselves. An example oft given by my Temple is that of vantage – learned through the abstractive lessons and vehicle of the star game – how one thing is no thing – and in being no thing – many things besides. What appears as a busy street filled with shoppers, noises, cars, signs, smells, conversations, exhaust fumes, transactions, commerce and clusters a thousand forms into the presence of mind – can, elevated high enough above the cityscape be seen as one silent city – even as that life beneath goes on unseen.

And she in her great love, wound herself round the image of this Form mirrored upon her water, and the shadow of it thrown upon her earth. Just as the Darkness wound itself, like a Great Serpent, round the lower parts of the Light, so does Nature coil herself round the shadow and reflection of Man. Man is Above, yet he is Below; man is free, yet is he bound — though bound willingly in love for her who is himself.

[23] O9a and THEM differ in no way ontologically here – both of us are expressions of Nature desirous for evolution – inescapable parts of the whole of Nature. One is younger than the other – with obvious implications.

Some readers are greatly puzzled with all this. It must be noted, at this juncture, that the writer of our treatise did not discover new ideas or invent new terms; he used what was in his mind and the mind of his circle. It was, however, the weaving of it into a whole, not as a literary exercise, but as a setting forth in the most understandable terms with which they were acquainted of the “things seen,” that was their main interest. Those who had the “second sight” would understand and appreciate their labours, those who had not would never understand, no matter what terms or what language was used.

[24] And Long has written as much, citing his development of what already existed into a workable system from the fragments of the Tradition inherited.

In this section of the Pymander, our treatise is endeavouring precisely to give an insight into the state of things beyond Fate. The burden of its teaching is that all earthly duality and oppositions are really illusory; man can transcend these limitations and come into the freedom of the Sons of God. Even the most terrible and fundamental oppositions are not really so, but all are Self limitations of God’s Will. And man is Son of God coequal with Him.

[25] The peaceable understanding of force that makes all form quiet.

The First Men

Our treatise goes on to describe the first appearance of man on earth, which it regards as a great mystery never before revealed (“the mystery kept hid until this day”). This I take to mean that it had hitherto never been written about but had been kept as a great secret. This secret was the doctrine that the first men, of which there were seven types, were hermaphrodites, and not only so, but lived in the air; their frames were of fire and spirit, and not of the earth-water elements. The Celestial Man, or type of humanity, was gradually differentiating himself from his proper nature of Light and Life, and taking on bodies of fire and air, was changing into mind (Lightfire) and soul (Life-spirit). This presumably lasted for long periods of time, the lower animal forms gradually evolving to greater complexity as Nature strove to copy the “Form” of Man, and Man devolving gradually until there was a union of Mind and matter, and the human subtle form could find vehicles among the highest animal shapes. The first incarnate men appear to have been at first also hermaphrodite; and it must have been a time when everything was in a far greater state of flux than things are now.

[26] Logically – though not offered often – that first humans were hermaphroditic solves a great many problems – one being given the helplessness of infants how did the first baby survive long enough to become a human? And wherefore its parents – can be answered if there were but one parent. But this is not talking about the physical evolution of man it is talking about the spiritual evolution of man. Castenada and one of THEM speak of the focal point of awareness, and one of them mapped the fpoa onto the Tree of Wyrd’s spheres – each chakra/focal point/sphere is one of the seven types of hermaphrodite, or was – that is, balanced.

To Increase and Multiply

This period of pre-sexual or bisexual development having come to an end, the separation of the sexes took place. The commandment is given by the Word: “Increase in increasing and multiply in multitude.” It is true that this is reminiscent of the oft-repeated formula in Genesis, but it is only slightly reminiscent. The main injunction is similar, but the rest of the Logos being quite different from anything found in Genesis. As nothing else in the whole treatise can be referred to direct Hebrew influence, we must conclude that the formula was, so to speak, “in the air,” and has so crept into our treatise. This increasing and multiplying, the perpetual coupling of bodies and the birth of new ones, is effected by Fate, or the Harmony of the Formative Spheres, the Engine of Birth, set under Forethought or Providence. This Pronoia can be none else than Nature herself as the Wisdom or Knowledge of God — in other words, His Will.

[27] Here, Force, divorces into Forces, and then further into Form, and finally Forms.

Love as the Will of God

The motive power of all this is Love. If this Love manifests itself as Desire for things of matter, the Lover stays in Darkness wandering; if it becomes the Will to know Light, the Lover becomes the Knower of himself, and so eventually at-one with Good. But why should love of body merit Death — that is to say, make man mortal? The disciple attempts an explanation from what he has seen. Although his answer is approved, the meaning is by no means clear. The physical body, or body in the sense-world, is composed of the Moist Nature, which in a subsequent phase remains as Water-Earth, and in a still subsequent phase divides itself into the elements of physical earth, water, and air. The dissolution of the previous combination of these elements is effected by Death — that is, Darkness, the Drainer of the Water, the Typhoon Power. Water must thus here symbolise the Osirian Power of fructification and holding together. The Moist Nature seems to be differentiated from the Darkness by the energising of Light in its most primitive brooding. But seeing that the Light is also Life, the Darkness, which is posited as the ultimate opposite, must be Death.

[28] This passage relates the Physis of Forms dealt with in pMYRIAD: there were prior to increase and multiplication no opposites – no tension that can only be bastardised when effected as form – as force, there is no mistake, no interpretation. Life, through form, is now Death. Life as force was one with Death. Form – brings with it, time, an (artificial) extension (increase) between force and thus space through expansion (multiply) – now Life and Death are two.

The Way of Deathlessness

The Way of Deathlessness is then considered. The disciple repeats his lesson, and the Master commends him; the Way Up is the path of self-knowledge. Still the disciple cannot believe that this is for him; he cannot understand that the One Mind is in him, or rather is himself, in so much as Mind as Teacher seems to be outside him. The semantic play is on Mind and mind; the one gives the certitude of Immortality, the other is still bound by the illusion of Death. The disciple has not this certitude; the One Mind, then, is not his. The Master then further explains the mystery. Gnosis must be preceded by moral purification; there must be a turning-away before the re-turn can be accomplished. The whole nature must be changed. That is the alchemy of the cosmos. Every tortuous effort that the little man seems to make of his own striving is really the energising of the Great Man. Those, however, who yield themselves to lower desires, drive the One Mind away, find that their appetites are only the more strengthened by the mind in them. The original text of this paragraph is very corrupt, so that the exact sense of the original is not recoverable; and this makes it all the more difficult to understand what is meant by the Avenging Daimon, the Counterpart of the Mind.

[29] Far too much is said here to comment on briefly – yet perhaps this is the most important of all the commentary, and perhaps, because so, should be passed over in silence.

The Ascent of the Soul

Before long, the subject of instruction becomes the Way Above, or ascent of the soul out of the body at death. The physical body is left to the work of change and dissolution. The life of integration and conservation ceases, and the life of disintegration begins. The form thus vanishes, apparently from the man's consciousness; that is to say, presumably, he is no longer clothed in the form of his physical body but is apparently in some other vehicle. The particular fixed form, or "way of life," or "habit," he wore on earth being handed over to the Daimon deprived of all its energy, so that apparently it becomes an empty shell. The senses that had previously been united by the mind become separate. That is, instead of a whole they become parts; they return to the natural animal state of sensation, and the animal part of man, or his vehicle of sexual passion and desire, begins in its turn to disintegrate, the mind or reason (logos) being gradually separated from it. Or rather, its true nature begins showing forth in the man, as he gradually strips off the irrational tendencies of the energies. Those irrational tendencies have their sources in Fate (the Harmony of the Spheres) It is in these seven subordinate spheres or zones where he leaves his inharmonious propensities, deprived of their energy. For Fate (the Harmony of the Spheres machine) is only evil apparently; it is really the Engine of Justice and Necessity to readjust the foolish choices of the soul. That is, it exists to purify the soul's irrational desires, or those propensities in it that are not under the sway of the right reason of the One Mind.

[30] What many understand of the Spheres of the Tree of Wyrd is that to explore them, and extract the secrets within, is to Master them – and mistakenly, also infer that such mastery implies a gain. Wherein it is in fact the opposite – for if we were to gain more forms – we should never understand the force – layering it hopelessly with more ‘understanding’, ‘reason’, ‘form’. Rather we leave the detritus behind and strip of the cracked outer shell of the egg – drain the yolk – and are enabled an ease of passage through such energies by intuitive grasp of the Force not unclumsily denoted by the ‘sphere’. The entire process is explicated in great detail here: in the passage regarding the “eighth” sphere:

The Eighth Sphere The soul of the initiated strips itself naked of the “garment of shame,” the selfish energizings, and stands “clothed in its own power.” This refers probably to the stripping off of the dress of selfhood, the garments woven by its vices, and the putting on of the “wedding garment” of its virtues. This state of existence is called the Eighth, a state of comparative sameness that transcends the zones of “difference.” It is the Ogdoad of the Gnostics, the City of Jerusalem Above, the plane of the Higher Ego in its own form, the natural state of “those-that-are.” In another sense, it may perhaps mean that man, after passing through the phases of the lower mind, now enters within into the region of the pure One Mind, the Higher Ego, and there is united (at-oned) with all the experiences of his past lives that are worthy of immortality, his virtuous energizings — the “those-that-are” that perhaps constitute the “crown of mighty lives” sung of by the Pythian Oracle when celebrating the death of Plotinus. In this state the man, who has freed himself from the necessity of reincarnation, hears the Song of the Powers above the Ogdoad — that is to say, in Gnostic terms, the Hymn of the Eons of the Pleroma, the Music of the Spheres. Such a man would have reached the consummation of his earthly pilgrimage and be ready to pass on into the Christ-state, or, at any rate, the state of super-man. He would be the victor who had won the right of investiture with the Robe of Glory, and the dignity of the crowning with the Kingship of the Heavens. This final initiation is most: beautifully set forth in the opening pages of the Pistis Sophia, and especially in the “Song of the Powers,” beginning with the words: “Come unto us, for we are thy fellow members. We are all one with thee.”

The consummation of the mystery is that the alter-egos of the individual ego, or the sum total of purified personalities that in that state constitute its membership (or vehicles of their own selves) surrender themselves to a fullness of union or a transcendency of separation, in which they become the powers or energies of a New Man, the true Son of Man. They pass into a state where they each blend with all, and yet lose nothing of themselves, but rather find in this new union the consummation of all their powers. In this state of Sonship of the Divine, they are no longer limited by bodies, nor even by partial souls or individual minds; but, becoming Powers, they are not only in God, but one with the Divine Will. In fact, in the final consummation, they are God Himself. Of such a nature was the Shepherd Hermes; he, too, was the Christ of God, the Son of the Father, who could take all forms to carry out the Divine Will. When the form — even though that form might for the disciple take on the appearance of the cosmos itself, as he conceived it — had served its purpose, the Shepherd once more “mingled with the Powers.”

[31] Far be it for me to think the commentary repeats itself unnecessarily. It might be worth mentioning that those ‘entities’ that do appear, that we know as THEM, described in the Black Keys of Satan and Rain magick: A Visitation from THEM among others are of two broad types – the utterly inhuman, and the sense that some were once human – perhaps sorcerers who achieve the Robe of Glory, or Immortality and slipped through from Death into these new guises – no mistake being made though, these are not eighty year old souls, they are Very old – immeasurably old. We know this only from the feeling they impart. One being chilling horror – the other the gravitas of being truly ancient.

ON THEM, O9A, THE CORPUS HERMETICUM AND THE ZOHAR-SHEMOT

The Seven Vizier's mentioned in Myatt's translations of the Corpus Hermeticum, and which have allegory and connection with the spheres of the Septenary Tree of Wyr'd's map as a 'shining path to Theos/[god]', have striking parallel to the concepts related by the Judaic Zohar Shemot. Particularly, the Zohar.

Sohar-Shemot (Zohar Shemot)

Zohar (Sohar):

The Zohar is a foundational work in the Jewish mystical tradition known as Kabbalah. It is a mystical commentary on the Torah, specifically the Five Books of Moses. The Zohar explores esoteric interpretations of the biblical text and delves into concepts such as the nature of God, the creation of the universe, and the spiritual dimensions of existence.

Shemoth (Shemot):

"Shemoth" is the Hebrew word for "names" and is often used to refer to the second book of the Torah in the Hebrew Bible (Old Testament). In English, this book is known as "Exodus." The Book of Exodus narrates the liberation of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt, their journey through the wilderness, and the giving of the Ten Commandments at Mount Sinai.

The Zohar, being a complex and extensive work, discusses various mystical and esoteric concepts, including references to luminaries. The Zohar often employs symbolic language and allegorical interpretations of biblical verses to convey its teachings. Here are some aspects related to luminaries in the Zohar:

Luminaries in Creation:

The Zohar delves into the mystical understanding of the creation narrative in Genesis, exploring the role of divine luminaries and lights in the formation of the cosmos. These luminaries are not only physical celestial bodies but also have spiritual and symbolic significance.

Celestial Hierarchy:

Within the Zoharic cosmology, there is often discussion about various levels of spiritual worlds and celestial realms, each associated with different luminaries. These luminaries may represent divine attributes or emanations.

Symbolism of Light:

Light is a recurring theme in the Zohar, symbolizing divine wisdom, understanding, and the radiance of the divine presence. Luminaries may be used metaphorically to represent the illumination of spiritual insights and the path to divine knowledge.

Divine Names and Attributes:

The Zohar explores the mystical significance of divine names and attributes associated with luminaries. Each luminary may be linked to specific divine qualities, and meditating on these names is seen as a way to connect with higher spiritual realms.

In the Kabbalistic tradition, including the teachings found in the Zohar, luminaries play a significant role in the mystical interpretation of the creation narrative in Genesis. The concept of luminaries goes beyond the physical celestial bodies and extends to spiritual and symbolic dimensions. Here are some key aspects related to luminaries in the context of creation, as understood in Kabbalah and the Zohar:

Emanations and Divine Attributes:

The Zohar describes a process of divine emanations or emanations of light that precede the physical creation. These emanations are often associated with sefirot, which are divine attributes or spheres through which the divine light flows. Each sefirah represents a different aspect of God.

En-Sof and Divine Light:

Before creation, there is the concept of En-Sof, the Infinite and Boundless. From the En-Sof emanates divine light, and this light is channelled through the sefirot to create and sustain the universe.

Creation of the World:

The Zohar interprets the creation account in Genesis as a process involving the divine luminaries. The ten sefirot are often arranged in a structure known as the Tree of Life (Etz Chaim), representing the pathways through which divine energy descends into the world.

Celestial Hierarchy:

Kabbalistic teachings often describe a complex hierarchy of spiritual worlds and realms, each associated with specific divine luminaries or sefirot. These luminaries are considered intermediaries through which divine energy flows into the various levels of creation.

Light and Vessels:

The Zohar describes a process called the "shattering of the vessels" (Shevirat HaKeilim), where the vessels that were meant to contain the divine light were unable to withstand its intensity. This event resulted in the dispersion of divine sparks throughout creation.

Restoration and Tikkun:

Kabbalistic thought, including the Zohar, emphasises the concept of Tikkun, or restoration. This involves the process of elevating and repairing the divine sparks scattered throughout creation to bring about a harmonious state.

The concept of the "shattering of the vessels" (Shevirat HaKeilim) is a fundamental and complex idea within Kabbalistic thought, particularly in the teachings of the Zohar and other mystical texts. This concept explains the origin of the divine sparks and their scattering throughout creation. Here are key points related to the shattering of the vessels:

Creation and the Cosmic Catastrophe:

According to Kabbalistic cosmogony, the divine plan for creation involved the emanation of divine light through the sefirot, the ten divine attributes or spheres. However, a cosmic catastrophe occurred during the process of creation.

The Vessels and Their Fragility:

The vessels, or kelim, were structures intended to contain and channel the divine light as it descended through the sefirot. These vessels were created with different capacities to receive divine energy. However, due to the overwhelming intensity of the divine light, the vessels were unable to contain it.

Shattering of the Vessels:

The overwhelming influx of divine light caused the vessels to shatter, leading to a cataclysmic event known as the "shattering of the vessels." This event disrupted the harmonious flow of divine energy and created a state of chaos and disarray in the spiritual realms.

Scattering of Divine Sparks:

As a result of the shattering, the divine sparks (Nitzotzot) were dispersed and scattered throughout creation. These sparks contain the divine essence and are embedded in the material world. The goal of spiritual ascent and Tikkun (restoration) is to elevate and reunite these scattered sparks with their divine source.

Emanation and Tikkun:

The concept of Tikkun involves the gradual process of spiritual repair and restoration. It requires elevating the divine sparks by engaging in righteous deeds, performing commandments (mitzvot), and participating in acts of kindness. Through these actions, the sparks are gradually elevated and returned to their original state of unity.

Human Role in Tikkun:

Humans, according to Kabbalistic teachings, play a crucial role in the process of Tikkun. By engaging in spiritual practices, ethical behaviour, and acts of kindness, individuals contribute to the rectification of the world and the elevation of the divine sparks.

Material World as a Reflection:

The material world is seen as a reflection of the divine order and the shattered vessels. The goal is to bring about a spiritual transformation that ultimately reunites the fragmented aspects of creation.

In the Kabbalistic and mystical tradition, the concept of Nitzotzot (divine sparks) is abstract and symbolic, referring to the sparks of divine light scattered throughout creation. These sparks are believed to be present in all aspects of existence. It's important to note that Nitzotzot are not tangible, physical entities; rather, they represent the spiritual essence embedded in the material world.

An example illustrating the concept of Nitzotzot might involve considering a simple everyday object, such as a candle. In this metaphorical example:

Candle Flame as a Divine Spark:

The flame of a candle could be seen as a metaphorical representation of a Nitzot, a spark of divine light. The light emanating from the flame symbolises the divine essence present in the material world.

Shattered Vessels and Dispersed Light:

In the Kabbalistic narrative of the shattering of the vessels, the vessel could be likened to a container attempting to hold the divine light. Due to the overwhelming intensity of the light, the vessel shatters, and the light disperses. The candle flame represents a fragment of this dispersed light.

Elevating the Divine Spark:

The act of lighting the candle and allowing the flame to burn symbolises the process of elevating the divine spark. By engaging in a positive and spiritual action (lighting the candle), one contributes to the restoration and elevation of the divine essence represented by the flame.

Spiritual Ascent and Tikkun:

The process of Tikkun involves recognising the divine sparks within the material world and participating in their elevation. By kindling the candle and appreciating the light, an individual might engage in a spiritual practice that aligns with the concept of Tikkun.

⊕ Firstly, the syncretization of religion adopts and mutates pagan beliefs. The clandestine aural tradition being uncovered and shown to have existed historically via the studies of Myatt and Long point to a Septenary shining path that was obscured over the passage of time by inauthentic forms and is part of the process we study when referring to a Magian distortion.

Secondly, it is restorative to eliminate reference to good and to evil for they are inaccuracies that distort.

Those that attempt to wield the Sinister, also attempt to wield the Numinous. The Sinister-Numinous is an emanation of Theos/God that destroys weak vessels, corrupts and disintegrates impurities and the impure; and there are mostly weak vessels among those who wield it. Where wield, means hold or possess, more often conduit not to harness. The light proves overwhelming and the vessels; causal manifestations such as individuals and their ideas, cultures, civilisations: eventually shatter. This corruption is explicit in the inability to fathom or correctly know/wield evil which in separation from the light is the aspect of god that utterly destroys.

We see in the Emanations of Urania by David Myatt (later artistically explicated by RA) mathematical illustration for the ontology of the acausal/causal; the divine light erupting from the acausal as human lives (or forms, or forms created by specific artistic humans/creatives) possessed of different levels of charge; implicit in Adepts in o9a speak, (One's of THEM in our nomenclature). The search to bring the 'sparks' back together culminates in cultures expressing an assembly point and collectivity or spiritual kin viz. The 'Order' of Nine Angles, or the 'Temple' of THEM - especially so, left-hand path orphans, isolated sparks, joined less causally (across time and space) than acausally at the source that provides the intensity of the charge (nexion).

Elevating the divine sparks is explicated in Myatt's pathei mathos of personal honour, more crudely but comfortably understood as evolution not just in the sense of causal excellence but in making visible the esoteric names and nature of the creator and the created. The loss (separation) caused by ignorance (demiurge) of the shining path implicit in the fabric of all things and non-things requires revelation, and in revealing that fixed path performs duty to the sparks of the divine elevating the all. Thus, untangling the distortion by the Magi, for instance, is to un-muddy and reveal the divine gold hidden by man's lead. That it lays in the muck hides its value. Tikkun and the o9a share the concept of recognising the divine sparks in the material world (Adepts) and through restoring them/elevating them (in the sense of showing the path to god, but not walking it for them) being in holy service to the divine. A reciprocal feedback loop wherein aiding others, aids one, to aid the divine, to aid one and others as expressed in Myatt's translations and footnotes of the Poemander Tractate.

The historical moment/duration and process of distortion/mutation from a Septenary formula expressing a true path to Theos, and a ten-sphere otz chaim layered with other nomenclature and decoration, becomes important and apparent here. As does the critical problematique of language which develops misleading and corrupted essences that magic (symbols/signs/sounds/meaning) layers and attaches to. Wordless expressions are often translated into graspable but corrupted vessels finding expression and apprehension via imperfects such as 'God' or 'The Devil'. The Star Game is a meeting of acausal/causal sans denotatum (devoid of a distortionary tension of opposites inherent in semiotics and meaning-making); a symbolic language of abstraction to which such tensions cannot adhere, artificial opposites not be tensioned, and yet the duality of the divine expressed at the deepest level.

It is arguable that the Dark Gods presence themselves when the vessel that seeks to wield the sinister collapses in on itself like a dying dark star, plunged into darkness (and gross imbalance) from extinguishing the light and hiding from the 'face' and glory of god implicit in the Wu-Wei of the sinister-numinous. Without sufficient protection in the pitch of black, the sinister consumes its vessel as an implosion, collapsing the wave function/thought-form too weak to sustain it; leading to causal entropy or hubris; A humbling before god. The process results in the decline and destruction of individuals, forms, cultures, civilisations and the loss/retreat of numinous charge which finds expression elsewhere. The ferocity of God is a difficult concept to convey given that what defines itself as religion, spirituality has been irreparably twisted into low but dominating narratives that suffer from gross inaccuracy and malign impurity. Allegories of spatial allocation, hierarchy and Man's invention of morality are obscurations that hide him from us. The Temple of THEM denotes 'God' as a paradox of unitary-collective; the Temple being what Myatt describes as 'perceiverance' and THEM as all that is perceived. What is perceived finds its expression in acknowledgement and awe for the 'choir voice of god', the powerful pantheon of forces that force man into context and reverence wherein God expresses THEM, Man perceives THEM, thereby Man can know of God but not know God. Being that the sinister-numinous is not meant to be separated lest it become unstable, 'dark' entities occur prior to 'perceiverance' but not thereafter. Manifest less in the evidential mistakes of Man and Men diminished in severity from observer acceptance and aeon-spanning integration, THEY nonetheless make themselves unmistakably known in the event of great 'horrors' and planet-rattling forces. Thereafter, opposites and their illusions dyssolve which in part is the quintessence for worldly retreat and the gulf of abyss from others who have not initiated, separated, dyssolved the contradiction inherent in the demiurge presenting as human reality and remain oblivious and on the other side of the veil, trapped in the magickal war of forms to reveal/conceal, close/open the divine, which we interpret through experience as the sum totality of events in space across time.

If the shining path is revealed and illumined through elevation of sparks - it stands to reason that the obscuration of the path (through the detritus of magickal interference and manufactured forms) has the opposite effect. The metaphor of flame/fires is useful here; while the source of these sparks cannot be extinguished (One's of THEM or Adepts) because their source is the divine, the sparks can be and are snuffed through magickal war. Magickal war does not denote invisible struggle - it encompasses every tactical permeation Mans insight can give rise to hide the world from God. The concealment of the highest duty to the divine, a malefic separation, when THEY stalk and devour us in the ensuing darkness. ⊕

A perhaps useful allegory for the light being too overwhelming for vessels can be found in Statecraft and the dominating will of States as 'actors' on the world stage, wherein no single human is capable of possessing so much power for long; genius channelled from God eventually disintegrates both those wielding it and those subject to its wielder. Wherein 'light' can be understood as 'Time'.

THEM, MAGIC AND THE INDIVIDUAL IN CONTEXT

Just a few brief notes:

One very important thing regarding individual evolution: is that while it does not exist in itself outside of imagination, just as the individual does not exist from an acausal point of view – this approach, this statement, and this way of looking at things: is given at this present time to others I share my insights with after a long time (some eight years) finding my own way forward little by little in the matrix of form. However: it is my express belief that while some short-cuts can be taken in magic, they are not at all expected and oftentimes misunderstood when offered, and nor do these short-cuts fit any description I have thus far been led to believe is being held by an aspirant.

To take just one example, with which many of us have associated our path for years, the framework of the Septenary Tree of Wyrd: is a useful abstract on which to situate, or let others situate themselves; in order to ascertain another useful abstract: the appearance of magical levels, breadth of wisdom, nature and depth of experience held, fought for and struggled beyond by an Initiate of the Sinister Path.

But something I have noticed is that others are being drawn into the Abyss before their time, before they are ready. This Nexion could well cause damage to those unprepared and so we feel it our duty to protect, in some way, aspirants from these dangerous emanations.

I apologise for seeming vague – this is a hitherto untouched subject – and formulating what I want to express is proving difficult. My understanding of THEM is primarily intuitive not intellectual.

I digress:

To choose to aid, ally, involve yourself with the Temple of THEM is different from choosing to aid, ally, the Temple of THEM and believe the forms, invest faith in the solidness and symbols and outward framework of its Mythos. One, is either inside the Temple of THEM and one of THEM or one is not or is becoming one of THEM. A person either sees what we're trying to do – or has come to try and figure it out. The crux is: one cannot be both one of THEM and believe in (take their cues from) Form. If someone believes in the forms presented by us about us, follows the Mythos we have created from the forms presented, and projects form/reality/solidness upon the Temple – i.e. treats the outward manifestation and what is said in our MSS as the guiding principle on which THEM stands – then one is still seeing in form, in thrall to Mythos, and in the most literal fashion, either adding to the Myth or coming to understand it.

It is imperative that aspirants understand that these notes and their content are not a criticism: seeing in form is a natural nuance, and leaving it, or trying to leave it, causes some a headache.

To simplify: all Forms require a suspension of totality. If someone is to perform one of our rituals, they place faith in our ability to guide them toward the aims we have thus far shared – they invest energy in our existence, concretize our foundation, and spread the Wyrd.

But, this represents a stage of magic that still utilises forms, a process by the aspirant of mentally bouncing abstracts off one another to create a world filled with objects and meanings – treating these abstracts as somehow real, and, with enough energy, to manifest the abstracts in the Mythos given, as ONA have done (and ToB seek to do).*
*With one of the Order of Nine Angle's gestative conduits taking shape and emerging as the Temple of THEM. Wherein, the very name conjures forth the illusion of a Temple.

But, Wherein, there are fundamental differences in what the Seven-Fold Way of the ONA expresses, and what THEM is for.

THEM is not another ONA. THEM teaches what lies beyond the ONA and beneath the ONA. It teaches the subtext extracted and proven valid that lies beneath the ONA which is definitively an experimental means by Myatt to use our (humanity's) belief in forms to induce certain qualities that he felt were necessary for achieving his dream of Homo Galactica.

I have stated before that Satanism was chosen by Myatt deliberately: because to combat something so tyrannically massive and oppressive as the Magian Empire requires the adoption of an equally powerful supremely arrogant persona to give the illusion that such an empire can be destroyed: thus a Mythos was begun, which became a culture, and which culture is becoming a reality. Not, as some would have it, a Temple of black-clad Devil Worshipers in denial on the moors of Shropshire, but in a dis-connected unification of a new consciousness that requires none of these trappings: whereby I mean trappings literally, the forms of ONA being the concerted efforts of Myatt to manipulate the clay afforded to him into beholding his vision, as "his" vision. Where "his" becomes the loosening of Myatt's culpability and responsibility from individual ownership issuing from his mortal shell with the diminishing importance of the location of his will (a life-centred nexion, not a human-centred one) and the emergence of the supra-personal personification that some may equate fairly with the voice of a Dark God.

The entire Seven-Fold Way is in the most honest sense, a prelude to becoming one of THEM: but until certain things are understood, experienced, ingrained; to try and be one of THEM via the same mode that one entered and followed ONA – is to misunderstand what we are. To see us as a similar centre that takes in initiates via some arduous Self-Initiation Task to prove themselves and then guide them through the Seven-Fold Way whilst imparting our own particular insights where we have gone before is to fail, yet, to see that THEM’s aim is not to repeat ONA but to generate that Grand Insight into ONA gleaned and earned by its members: and part of that Grand Insight is to ultimately rescind/destroy the need for a Temple, for Membership, for Connexion, for organisation, to rescind/destroy reliance on Forms to inform in its ‘members’ and to arm them in such a way that they recognise themselves as part of the Acausal Nexion – to push them, toward the Abyss.

Thus, to try and be a supporter of our forms by performing our tasks, following the ONA’s Way slavishly, or taking something we have said as an indicator of what we expect, what we stand for or what we are interested in: is to be at a stage where certain elements of THEM are inaccessible to you. Perhaps we were viewed in the past as a Temple not worth the hassle: (that is understandable) to pursue getting into. But that character quintessential of Satanism has not been illustrated – that fiery/subtle ingenuity to solve obstacles in more than one way and to dissolve all obstacles via that fiery ingenuity.

To understand what is behind a form is to control it: there has been no one yet, who has come to us and said “look, I don’t believe in Self-Initiation for this reason or that reason, moreover that I don’t need it, moreover, that I have come to this and that conclusions about such things and here is why. Further, that I understand this about THEM, this about you, this about myself, and am already connected. For such reasons I should like admission”. There was one fellow, who posted recently, who did an exceptional job with his Self-Initiation and for that he was congratulated, genuinely, for taking steps toward what may some day become the eventual discarding of it all. Another, whose gentlemanly manner impressed us even as we tested him and deserved our respect. But the point being made is that aspirants have yet only responded to obstacles in their way by mirroring them.

Meanwhile, those that do understand, likewise, cannot genuinely immerse themselves in any form, any more, and believe it. The simplest questions formed from words twisted and rooted in old ideas become as tangles of thorns that we intend to carefully untangle: not, as the world would have it, to push one’s head further into the briars. Because from our point of view: there are some that need the ONA, to believe in it and its writings in a tangible sense of powerful forms erected the world over and physically grounded in concrete terms by a coven of Satanists as described by the fiction of the Order: that is fine. Some do need that. We did.

But again from our point of view: there are some who are ready (and some who are not) to have the appearance ripped off the face of ONA and the essence revealed:

And revealed:

the ONA as the beautifully crafted expression of exasperation felt by Myatt to use the occult to gain the attention of the deaf.

And revealed:

The Order of Nine Angles as one means by Myatt to gain the attention of the deaf – to use forms we would understand and associate with as vague enemies of the Magian with the hidden subtext to realise his simple wish to colonise space.

And revealed:

The ONA as a fire still fuelled by Myatt out of continued exasperation (once optimism) and greater awareness of his distant mortality to complete his mission: with or without the consent of Humanity. Thus his ultra-destructive modus operandi as the product of desperation to change the world or create someone who will: such violence being an inverted/thwarted Love.

...And so, THEM wrap you up in a blanket of forms with which you would already be very familiar and potentially jaded with – forms that represent the status quo of the Occult scene and the Temples and Orders that populate it – in order to then destroy each of the foundations of these forms for you. Not to gain sycophants, worshippers, yes-men and yes-women, dupes, slaves, or even members. But that you would see, forever and always beyond and beneath all future attempts to dupe, to control, to deceive, with all rhetoric, politics, religions, temples, gurus placed in a context truly Satanic. That you would see, that all forms are complex structures motivated by simple human emotions, and are fragile, destroyable, replaceable, magical, illusorial figments temporarily erected by inhabitants of the Black Clay we call Earth as they pass through.

And that the blanket, is the Mythos: literally that powerful lesson of narrative extracted as the essence beneath the ONA and its creator gestating from a simple unselfish wish and the understanding of which has changed the reason behind deploying all forms and symbols and sigils and philosophies and tasks and tradition forever more. Those that understand this, feel this connexion with us, with all human beings, that struggle to word the new language, they are THEM.

Thus, when any of you (And we have spoken to almost everyone here) were in danger of being immersed in the tempest of illusory mythos that this nexion has created, or held fast to our forms because of the trust we built, we strove to dismantle your hand-hold and steer you back to yourself, as is our chosen duty of care to the Sinisterion.

And some will understand us – some will begin to see, if they have not seen already, that there is more to the formation of the Temple of THEM than meets the eye: we are not a regurgitation nor are we another empty tribute to Satan. We are the hybridisation of something that has been pushing irresistibly against current consciousness, spearheaded by the love and efforts of David Myatt, for the past forty years. So distorted has reason, intellect and common sense become, that it required a message be carried in the rivers of the Occult to deliver it, that it required ONA Satanism.*

But we are early yet.

“...to truly know thyself – is to be First Human. But with such power comes profound sadness for the matrix of forms is laid wide-open as if one has x-ray vision to see the skeletal energies which make up all forms and converge into the same patterns over and over again without being able to turn such vision off.

One can ‘See’ but is struck with a terrible remorse and despair that others cannot. Such vision is simultaneously euphoric and disturbing. To gaze upon the building blocks of creation and see the machinery of the cosmos DEMANDS a human allegiance to return to those without it and give it to them if at all possible: to steal the fire from the gods as Prometheus did and express the ethos of Satan. And yet even here the journey has only just begun. Now my task is to continue up the mountain and cut a path for those who follow...” Mvimaedivm Vol. III

With this MS, Stage I of the aims of the Temple of THEM, the Australian Nexion of the ONA, is complete.

ISS,

WHERE ARE WE NOW?

(Message from Mvimaedivm Archives and originally addressed to the Sinisterion prior to Crystallisation and Sinister Schism.)

Where are WE now?

With such an enormous body of work behind us, where, many paths we have taken have not been wrong, but have been scorned or dismissed by the ONA: which accordingly we have corrected to understand what they understand; and where, with many years of devoted perseverance and hard work we have, together, finally understood the reason behind the structure, the reason behind the secrecy, the reason behind the creation – of the Order of Nine Angles.

Some are pleased with this knowledge – and some are not. But that is the way of Forms: they always give way to others, by others arising to meet the challenges directly imposed at any given time which a form rooted firmly in another time often fails because it does not. (The Order of Nine Angles appears to be altering itself to meet the new challenges.) However, via the work of the Sinisterion, The Order of Nine Angles has now been irrevocably split into two modes of being, whereupon we are arguably at the single greatest turning point in the Order’s history – in terms for the potential for a rapid increase of Adepts. The first mode of being, is that mode of perception which does not perceive the ONA as a smaller piece of a greater context driven by a simple wish. I.e., those who are still within the Forms and Mythos of the ONA, struggling along the Seven-Fold Way toward this or another conclusion.

The second mode represent THEM, who possess the greater context and are able to extract themselves from the Form and Mythos of the ONA to see what lies beyond and beneath it. I will not repeat myself in full here – a MS in OA#29 gave my reasons for the Order's treatment at times of its subjects such as Crowley, Lovecraft, Runes etc... briefly: owing to its organic composition. But now it is time to understand the scorn as it relates to recent revelations of the Order and its purpose.

The scorn of these subjects pertains not to an objective announcement for magic; scorn and assertions that Lovecraft was deluded, scorn and assertions that Crowley was a charlatan who never attained Adeptship, scorn that the Runes are worth only the briefest of mention in Naos. Yet, sometimes, based on the trust the members of the Sinisterion endowed the ONA with an evaluation of these subjects was based directly on the Order's official opinion of it. When, what should have been kept in mind, at all times when studying the Order, (Had it been possible to know it in advance) was that the ONA served as a pretext for Myatt's greater work and, while it no doubt provided him with untold experience, insight and understanding – at some point, was viewed by him, as he moved into a different mode, as another means to realise space exploration and fulfil what he saw as the destiny of the West. In such a context, it is understandable why such subjects were treated with disdain or poorly – since they had little to do with realising his numinous dream, as he saw it. Unfortunately, this treatment has had some destructive effects on the ONA – and its adherents who have, sometimes, since dismissed such subjects summarily out of a sense of loyalty – and misguided understanding. People, happy enough to let Long do their thinking for them...

ONA's momentum and directions can be understood if one places it in its greater context – and moreover, we can understand from Myatt's other works, why the ONA has been so secretive and so silent on many issues. It is possible that the MS pertaining to the treatment of Lovecraft and Crowley are not Myatt's but someone else more informed and yes, more opinionated, regarding those gentlemen – just as THEM often times draws on the speciality expertise of others in its fold when certain elements come about that require explaining. Or, again, because their views contributed nothing useful in achieving Myatt's aims – were disregarded. However, again, THEM are not ONA. We are an extension – and as such, we do not summarily dismiss Lovecraft or Crowley as charlatans or deluded: ONA could not have afforded to make such concessions during the time it was struggling to dominate a foothold (which became a stranglehold) on the occult through its Satanic channel – because it was designed specifically to counter-form. And, though many see the Order's decisions on certain subjects as egoistic arrogance it should be remembered that it was such arrogance to hold fast to a form by the Church that gave way to Science, the ONA's hold on its form that gave rise to THEM – but since THEM doesn't hold a form, it is an interesting proposition where an evolution may lead us. Because, while it may be hard for some to accept, perfectly understandable for others, THEM is the end product resulting from Myatt's ONA formula. If the ONA had given Crowley his due the assertions that depended on Crowley being seen as deluded should not have allowed any room for the ONA's unique development of its own concepts including a transfiguration of the Dark Gods and the intervention of the Acausal. So, in that context, the ONA was right, could only exist, if it made the decisions it did.

Nevertheless, it is many years since such decisions were made, times have changed, THEM are born, and some of the stances held by ONA then, are not held by THEM now. As the Australian Nexion of the Order we represent Change: and, with the Order firmly placed in context, and others finally understanding Myatt and his Work, the future shape not just of THEM but also of the ONA is uncertain. Certainly, for a long time yet, the ONA will continue with its own directives. But when those directives are understood then the game completely changes. As per the operatives of an Adept, the ONA may be transformed accordingly to meet new challenges and discard certain outer trappings – and to a great extent – this Temple has striven to make those changes deemed necessary to take the Order further and to its natural conclusion, THEM.

The pressing question is not: where do we go from here, but do we go from here? Is Myatt's dream of Space- Exploration feasible, now, and should it remain Our focus, or is there yet preparatory work to be done – to the human body and psyche which this Temple can explore, experiment with and expand upon?

For those who are not pleased about the Order's face being revealed – that is understandable too. But We swore to give Australia a Sinister History and above all else, we are doing just that. The Order of Nine Angles, as it stood (yf/eh), and as it stands (fayen) is still a form of vital nourishment and importance teaching as it does the hard way to learn somewhat diluted from the occult, it is still a beautiful representation of Satan which overshadows all other representations prior to and after its event in its complexity, brilliance, and depth, it demands a long-term commitment, if not a life-long one to understand and work with and contains many dangers, many secrets, many insights and a great deal of Wisdom. But, there does come a time, when someone following it no longer requires the guidance of AL or the ONA's forms to instruct them what to do next – because the ONA, unlike so many other so-called Satanic groups, actually does try to create persons who can see beyond it, not keep them trapped on an endless treadmill of occult ideas, hemmed in by some Master who is afraid of being surpassed.* And the context in which THEM came to understand the ONA has broken en masse, many away from the forms of the Order – indicating the emergence of such a thing as the 'Thinking Warrior', the outcome of which was ONA's/Myatt's aim all along. With such an emergence, i.e., there are some suggestions that the current forms of ONA that led to such an arising – must now be taken into consideration – since it has achieved what it set out to do, that is must change to take those who understand it, further – but this is to misunderstand the nature of the Order itself.

The ONA, both its appearance, and its essence, is still needed to awaken a critical mass of people to the above, not intellectually, but to follow the Way themselves until they exhaust themselves in experience or see it for what it really is. To say these things to someone just starting the ONA for instance, would either not be believed and be rejected outright – or, possibly, short-cut (for better or worse) the entire Septenary Way for them (for better or worse). In which case the secrecy and self-initiation requirements of THEM can be understood to deter certain psychological dispositions and attract others – and that the Temple caters for a certain degree of magician who have already followed the ONA far enough not to break when confronted with these facts. And thus, it is that THEM have become pioneers themselves, treading uncertain steps to develop what comes after (or perhaps before) the Sinister Way of the Order of Nine Angles. A most difficult position to be in – but one which must be assumed if we are to learn yet and make our way forward, without guidance, because our Form is a child of that way – in some ways we seek separation from our Parents – we must, otherwise we should not evolve – but we Love and respect our parents, and while we sometimes fight with them in order to assert our own identity, we are devoted to them, joined with them as a collective Clan and we mean well, for it is in our nature to honour Family.

What each individual must answer now, given the information and perception of THEM on the Order of Nine Angles is whether the ONA still serves a purpose in the old way of providing a path with various tasks and grades to follow upward – toward... Whether the ONA, having now achieved its purpose and created a culture of thinking warriors who can not only behold in the vision of the ONA, but in the vision of their own independence, can work for US, providing Myatt is still imbued with the task of master and entrusted to lead us further onward, Whether each person here requires a serious re-think, now given this new context of the ONA and THEM, of what is required to move forward and beyond the Order: with all the beautiful implements and weapons it has equipped us with; whilst the rest play catch up. And only in supreme arrogance can I declare others catch-up, but from that point of view, it is necessary to continue teaching others in how to conduct Satanic Temples, how to fool and delude, manage and aspire, endure and evolve, test and be tested, and so on – taking others through the Septenary Way so they may bring others up to speed. At least, it was always considered necessary.

But of the other options?

BLACK MAGICAL ARROGANCE AND THE ROLE OF FORM

+O+ * I thought this was an interesting and relevant point to bring up DL, on which I'd like to pass a few comments. That THEM recently chastised the WSA352 group for its own way of representing the ONA – involves 4 very unstable elements.

Representing the exoteric ONA.

Representing the esoteric ONA. Choosing to assume a form. Knowing that form is an illusion. THEM, in citing itself as a nexion of the ONA (Australian) and setting itself up as an authoritative form in order to 'teach' or pass on the Way, is not as clear-cut a decision as it seems, because to do so, from our point of view, requires some wild mental and magical gymnastics...

Primarily, it involves an arrogance particular to black magic, i.e. cordoning off the concept of black magic for control and distribution. (At least in the beginning: and which control is usually kept secret by groups unwilling to show what lies behind the curtains of that control.)

Firstly, In order to relay the exoteric form of the ONA as laid out in MS, requires a division into "said" and "unsaid". What is Said could be considered the alchemical primer for understanding what is unsaid – and that is the system of the seven-fold way, complete with novels, music, tarot, correspondences, pathworkings, insight roles etc.

What THEM write about contains our insights into the unsaid side of ONA, Satan, Satanism, or even just Life, etc. One could liken this study of the Said and Unsaid to an analogy of learning the rules in order to best know how to break them.

In having the arrogance to assume a position of functional teaching of the Septenary Way (and we "THEM" did originally take on this role – our role is changing) one must inevitably accept certain values as solid, (or be seen to) and these are the exoteric handholds of the ONA, the system of Dark Gods, Tree of Wyr, Star Game, and the esoteric intrinsic values of the ONA, honour, courage, defiance, integrity, change, overcoming, etc. (many of these values, it is presumed, are directly influenced by Myatt's infatuation with the Greeks.)

And in assuming, i.e. demanding space on the soapbox, to relay the nature of this way and its many complex components, layers and ways of approaching it, both from the outside, inside and new-side... it becomes a necessity that some things must be upheld, even at the risk of calling it dogma, and those things that are upheld, and are championed, thus lead to conflict with other groups and ideologies, and must: lead to such conflict, that is the human way.

For instance, the implementation of a strategy, requires the formation of something capable of putting pressure on various selected vertices in the matrix in order to enact the magician's will and actualise that strategy. This strategy inevitably requires the utilisation of existing forms and newly-developed forms, but importantly, involves forms. Forms have a nasty habit of dualism and in presenting them to the world; coming into conflict with other forms naturally and diametrically opposed to them. This cannot help but happen owing to the restricted paradigms time technology culture and magical potential has on forms and their presentation.

However; even as the magician creates a new form out of thin air (THEM, for instance) they must nurture the growth of that form and its superiority and priority to live, over other forms.

This means that conflict is inevitable between a group like WSA or THEM – for although the Sinister Path is itself shapeless – and it is accepted as an interior core that the LHP is a lone journey – in order to enact a strategic culmination of will, some forms must be denied or sacrificed to the glory and growth of the magicians intention. Thus the conflict – is part of the illusion on the plane of form – but does not necessarily reflect the essence of understanding held privately beneath and beyond the stage on which such theatres play out.

This matter impinges on a related issue regarding the length or life expectancy of generated forms. Which two issues I will tie together shortly. For now, it is interesting, that the “RATE” of change is seldom discussed in magic, and I would be most interested to hear your comments on this aspect – as it is one thing to think oneself an anarchist or defiant and tear everything down, but it is quite another to actually do it: since one inevitably must leave some forms remaining. And I think that this is where the Adept is characterised by understanding that implementing gradual changes to give rise to a new form involves a life expectancy of each of those forms to germinate, and effect within a certain period of time what they are supposed to effect. That change and particularly satanic magic, are not simply a mindless blind flurry of arrogant destruction of everything, one abstract after the other, including the smoking ruins, in order to suddenly be free or what have you. That is more in line with Chaos Magic.

Yet the Adept must stretch the tools of the time as far they can, esp. language, and sometimes they are put to use in ways not intended, and that baffle the layman.

Thus when THEM outwardly compare the approach of the WSA to the blueprint exoteric and esoteric of the ONA and find vast differences in value; it is and can only ever be a subjective evaluation (even in denouncement).

The only way that THEM can argue with WSA for instance, is if a power and faith is invested in our forms and presentation as being somehow solid, more true, (and temporarily this must always be so), but ultimately, each of us (THEM) know that the esoteric underlying essence can not be trapped or represented by either group. Form is an illusion. But the extreme difficulty in relating this subtle yet complex differentiation of forms, said unsaid, esoteric, and exoteric is trapped by the limitations of language and the dualism contained therein and more importantly, hindered by the reliance on forms and abstracts. If we were to issue a disclaimer each time we wrote, informing the reader of the many layers each statement had, our MSS should be four times as long and perhaps even then we would not be able to imbue this “Acausal” understanding within the reader; as that is partly what we are aiming to do in order to shortcut certain magical cycles, again within the surface said sector of magical teaching.

In formation, THEM sought the ‘emanation’ of the ONA in order to arise in synthesis and symbiosis of a sort – since to go completely our own way or give our own divergent angle, could have directly lead to a clash of outer forms – and thus a disruption of both entities magical strategy. Thus for THEM to enact their schema, leads to conflict with the WSA, as one example. But what is the “black magical etiquette” here – does THEM’s forms give way to the forms being implemented by the Grand Master, or THEM’s form to WSA’s when ONA accepts their participation? Who gives way and when are two sticky points that have reared their ugly heads for many many years in my journey and that I have yet to see resolved within the occult. And in these sticky-points there lies a problem very deep that cannot be resolved except with the use of some over-arching concept that takes all of the conflict and contradiction in its stride: Seeing the world in terms of Form.

The ONA for instance, sets up impossible contradictions if treated without the concept of it all being united in form, since its system aims to raze everything, even the smoking ruins, even as it tries to build its magnum opus.

I.e. it instructs Satanists to destroy existing forms – but resists, and a teacher of the exoteric way knows this acutely, itself and its forms being destroyed.

This eventuation, of a system that hurries one along without rest, from my initiated viewpoint, seems to be directly correlated to the telescoping of time being experienced at this time in humanity. I.e. that the ONA is itself in thrall to an ethos, a Chronocentric one where Time and Knowledge thwart one another.

Secondly, our assumption of title as an ONA Nexion requires an understanding that certain low-elements such as correspondences, names, sigils, magical rituals, etc are both enticing to the human being (and always have been) are required to work with to understand the Septenary System prior to being destroyed in the fires of experience and their worth re-calculated; first in the value of abstractions, and secondly, hopefully, in what lies beyond them.

Now, you can only, from my experience, be ignorant of the fact that there is a source underlying any form that issues forth, for so long. Eventually, from experiencing this particular way, forms get broken down, insights get had, and wisdom, gets through. At least, it should; such is my take on the end result of the philosophy laid down by the ONA.

It is very clear to me, for instance, that there is a difference, and what the difference is, between the uses of the two chronological understandings of Numinous as used by Myatt (and we coined our own acronym called Attributed To Him/ATH to make this differentiation between long and Myatt easier) and his NS: I am not confused as to the aims or methods of the ONA.

But many do remain confused. While THEM has form, and it must in order to complete its charter, to make a certain pressure on things, it must deal in abstractions and concepts: this is to accept that certain things are valid “true” and are then naturally set up to be in opposition to things that are not or are “false”, “distortion” etc...

This sets ONA’s system up, to be a paradox. How does one teach the Septenary Way when the Septenary Way teaches itself out of existence?

I.e. while there is surface disagreement on what THEM champions in teaching the ONA from our experience and extensive knowledge, exploration and expansion, with a group like the WSA or TOB or what have you – there is a Knowing that such disagreements are part and parcel of creating forms, that for forms to be maintained that disagreement must continue its natural course, and a sadness, that underneath, we know that none of us can ever hope to contain the Abyss whatever our writings or teachings: and yet this game must continue.

It must continue, because like it or not, people still see the world in Forms. THEM have come forth to smash that in line with what we believe is the next step for the “ONA” to take, and I bracket it because ONA too is a form. WSA have taken another approach, and again, while we chastise them in the form game, the essence of the matter is, that it is all illusion underneath. Perhaps this is the game that Adepts play. Or determined Initiates.

ISS,

PS – I apologise if I have repeated myself, it is a most frustrating task to use tools unfit for the job and I hope you can sense my intention to make these points crystal clear.

WHAT WENT WRONG WITH THE ORDER OF NINE ANGLES? (O9A)

It is interesting, with some 15 years hindsight to think on my time and sliding scale as a fanatical admirer, advocate, cautious supporter, within; and detractor, agitator against the o9a; marking a period from 1998 to 2013. From where I stand things have taken a very different turn than had I retained the influence I did back then as a prolific accumulator, distributor and manufacturer of Sinister-related material; everything from making the first public Sinister Tarot after Beest, to editing the entire 500 page Deofel Quintet and other works by Myatt, compiling rare and sought after music, manuscripts, artworks, and information and sitting at the centre of thousands of individuals passing black magical instruction out globally through the Black Glyph Society, The Spire, ONA Database, Mvimaedivm WordPress and a dozen other occult portals. From aiding and abetting the early internet o9a, then the Tempel ov Blood with my written works, distribution channels, persuasive influence, expansive writings, artwork, and encouraging investment and focus in core esoteric elements of the order, such as the Star Game, Tarot, and a complete re-write of Naos via C*R*U*X*. Even collating an autobiography of Myatt (Liber Dabih) in collaboration with DarkLogos9 that was to later become contentious without warning.

1998-2002 were perhaps the o9a's hey-day, its golden era, at least for me; where Nasz Dom, still a beautiful set of occult works that I consider to be the pinnacle of o9a's achievements and core essence had only just made its way to the emergent internet which I had only discovered myself in 1997 after leaving the remote rural town I grew up in living in New Zealand and emigrated back to Australia. I still see and recognise early companions now long evolved into various nexions, some prospering quietly, others in prison or headed there soon, driven by their crazed desires for terrorism and completely in thrall to another's form.

I dare to state that No-one put in more effort than I did to cement the early o9a from 1998-2006 as a global tour de force of Satanism. Because I have tremendous willpower that comes from a holy place and is therein inexhaustible; and I, believed in them. But, as time went by and elements crept in that I found unsavoury, restrictive, draconian and contradictory – I could not help to see them more closely resemble the Church and the enamoured facade rub thin; especially as concerned a day in 2008 and a discussion in the old ONA Yahoo forum between Darkklogos9, Chloe and others where the concept of the 'mundanes' grew to power and the controversial matter of child abuse, was suggested as a valid means of tactical reprisal against said mundanes and their children.

Aryan means 'noble'. Ryan Anschauung, as I was then, denoted a Noble Worldview. I have spoken at length of the beauty I beheld on encountering the o9a via Nasz Dom in my 2nd Diary of a Devilworshipper and I will not recount it here; but being more engaged with these characters and closely monitoring how they did things publicly (and sometimes privately) it became clear that despite many of the claims of the exoteric (outward) o9a, an invisible iron grip dominated it esoterically (inward); an observation remarked on by many others at the time including my other magical tutor. I was all for a great many of the tactics of the o9a, including Temple 88's restoration of a National Socialist regime, undermining and toppling reigning governments, infiltrating societies, and turning them from the inside, even culling and war with the Judaeo-Christian Magian to destroy its modern stranglehold and eradicate its trappings and narrative from the world through a Satanic Renaissance. There is no doubt at points I would have died or kamikazed my life in the service of these higher, noble, exeatic ideals and supported, grew, expanded groups that served the Sinister current – linking individuals to other individuals, groups and resources to endorse and encourage the creation of a new kind of satanic warrior. But I rarely saw such an individual; more often than not I saw broken people with no empathy or perverted desires, or confusion about existential purpose, those trained or lusting after violence for its own sake, instigators with poor planning, incendiaries with boring mouths, or an overall drift by its inhabitants toward becoming that which I hated more than anything: a religion. I saw lost boys.

On all of this my views are available here and there in great detail: but it is my commentary on the concept of 'Group-think' that destroyed the o9a and which I aim to address herein. Let us not forget to those who know, or let it be known to those who don't – that the o9a is a simple creature, its weaving and dodge meandering through National Socialism, Cliology, Vampirism, Islam, Jihad confuse many, simply because they lack an understanding and appreciation of what o9a is or does. Quite simply, o9a is Anarchistic; it breaks things for the sake of breaking them. This is no more evident than in its own language and vernacular where it reconfigures the meanings of meaning; though from an esoteric point of view this has its own validity reflected throughout the occult mysteries, and the academic disciplines of French existentialism or Post-Structuralism.

Yet, it is my view that the o9a is ostensibly dead; it has become deluged with parasitical believers each and all blind to the exoteric forms it promulgates and each or enough of most living an inauthentic existence as dead puppets of Long's shadow; with no originality, no expansion, no grasp of its potential or power. Driven by base moral cravings, low instincts for violence, arrogance that never belies any genius, skulking and sniping from shadows, and manifest in Cro-Magnon forms that repeat the eternal struggle for power by targeting the weak-willed, the social revisionists, the powerless. All without any understanding of the implication of a toppled government, sanctity of human life or its promise, inability to see long-term potentials and only the narrow window of now, insufficient internal alchemy to control the shadow or its projections, or their driving need to play saviour archetypes that restore the golden age 'that hath long ago passed' and resurrect a Fourth Reich, a Dark Age, or raze it all to the ground Solvet Saeclum In Favilla. There was great promise in the o9a, and I dare to say I once held its promise. I would have taken it in a different direction; and though it would have never accepted rape, child sex, torture, murder, racism (precisely why I could not helm the amoral o9a) it is perhaps for the best that things ended up the way they did, or I should have more to regret. I can only imagine what I could have wrought had I been like them, given the prolific and influential torrent I have been part of these past two decades. Had I been a lesser man with low or no morals, filled with hatred and a burning desire to kill or destroy that did not subside with Love, education, humility. If I had wanted to burn the world instead of saving it – or at least, be patient with it. At all those thousands of junctures with thousands of individuals where I might have said Yes, instead of No or used my ability to write to convince others toward terrible deeds and horrors.

I had to walk the path I have to understand – and more curious and wide-eyed than anything I made weapons of war, wrote litanies of coercion, persuaded others toward various goals with manipulation or logic, argument and reason. But I am thankful I did not lose myself in the process; and was individual enough to go my own way. What a shame and what a waste of a powerful, unique, exciting current that has long been drained and devolved by less delicate hands and less appreciative minds. I am aware that few see the o9a the way I do – but for me it was once a remarkable conduit for insight, character and evolution. Now it has been dissolved by a legacy of unstable minds, acts of men (and the occasional woman – though they're usually smarter) dominated to commit atrocity by their inability to escape thrall from someone else's remotely delivered literature, and any esoteric worth it might have once had marred by caustic leadership and toxic contagion.

As I once remarked privately to Jake Hanrahan, efforts to see the o9a declared a terrorist organisation would be counter-productive; it is dying if not dead, the fringe lunacy of a few diehards who offer nothing to the occult stream and just parrot and regurgitate rhetoric and platitudes of violence, threats of violence, enforced group-think under the delusion of a brotherhood through internal threats of violence and hollow exhortations toward some mythical greatness and tired political grandstanding. It should be laid to rest – and Only being given that designation as a terrorist cell could possibly wake it up or cause it to erupt and express the dangerous potential it still possesses were it to have that label formally applied. An eventuation, the politically and spiritually savvy should recognise and avoid.

As of today, 2023, I am in my 3rd year studying Counter-terrorism and International Relations. And I feel, that in addition to the many insights penned regarding the escape and extrication from controlling forms – these thoughts may assist others in understanding the processes by which we are subsumed into one and become a puppet merely because we fail to identify or supply ourselves with what we need psychologically and look to others unconsciously to provide it, steer us, guide us and make us feel special, needed, important, worthy, even loved. And it is those needs that make us vulnerable to the eldritch fingers of majestic written word, symbols of power that entice us, a group to whom we can belong that understands us, our needs, our wants, our isolation and loneliness, confusion or desire to be told what to do, and stands with us outside society as a flagship for our despair. For I played a significant part in forming/aiding/allowing these groups and their predecessors. I understand the terrorist – I understand terrorism – I know it's character, its lure, its reasons, its causes, its attraction, how to recruit, how to entice, how to sell a successful image, how to make someone listen to you, how to make someone kill for you. And it can all be distilled down to a fight to Be and then a need to Belong.

Herein then, I will add some commentary here on Janis's (1982) 'characteristics of group-think' because it is for me, precisely these elements which tore the stitching out of and destroyed the o9a.

BOX 10.5Characteristics of groupthink

- Illusion of invulnerability: the group believes that its decision making is beyond question, which creates excessive optimism and extreme risk taking.
- Belief in the inherent morality of the group: members ignore the moral or ethical consequences of their decisions.
- Collective rationalization: the group discounts warnings that might have otherwise led them to reconsider their assumptions before they recommit to past policy decisions.
- Out-group stereotypes: others are framed as too evil or stupid to warrant consideration of their strategies or attempts to negotiate with them.
- Self-censorship: members feel inclined to avoid deviation from consensus, and minimize the significance of their doubts and counter-arguments.
- Illusion of unanimity: partly from the silence or self-censorship, members share the belief that they are unanimous in their judgements; silence means consensus.
- Direct pressure on dissenters: challenges or sanctioning comments are made to those who express strong arguments against the group's stereotypes, illusions, or commitments; loyal members do not bring up questions.
- Self-appointed 'mindguards': these members protect the group from adverse information that might threaten the shared illusions regarding the effectiveness or morality of the group's decisions.

Based on Janis (1982: 244)

Addressing the 8 points in turn:

1. Framing itself as a magical order beyond temporal form and space, an esoteric current of great antiquity in the conception of Aeonic or aeon-spanning longevity it is surprising how vigorously the o9a has issued statements expressing injustice at its treatment by government or media bodies that have variously attempted to discredit, accuse or campaign against the order. This aeon-spanning ethos however, influences its lackadaisical approach to the damage its temporal forms and off-shoots cause, as after all, the o9a's actual voice is quite clear that the order is amoral, satanic and anarchistic. It is perhaps the world's best representation of archetypal Satanism. This immures it from personal or even collective responsibility for what it shares and the consequences for those it entralls. Its view of great time span means little to no concern with the myriad of forms that populate its long trajectory and it speaks as such with an air of unwavering authority of its ineffable continued existence regardless of what happens in the shorter-term present or future. The timelessness has a numinous charge and acts as a promised land sometime in the far distant future when all the efforts put in by those now, will have been accounted for, but also made irrelevant. A sense of anti-destiny that lends a certain nihilism to its agents and agency and encourages extremism through fatalism.

2. Starting out as amoral, there is an impetus toward chaos and a consideration that eschews morality or the good choice, the right choice, the ethical choice. There is instead a spin the wheel mentality and see where it lands, and that choice is as valid as any other. Being anonymous the o9a is removed from the consequences of its instigations, bar the heat it draws from irate observers and detractors who sense the threat to their own forms or the State, which further encourages its amorality.

3. Collective rationalisation played a significant part when o9a, WSA and THEM came into conflict with one another with o9a curiously extending rare laurels of resolution between us, which I wrote about in “Black Magickal Arrogance and the Role of Form”. I’ve no doubt the o9a would have preferred WSA and THEM to remain on its roster as the ‘ONA Kollektive’ – and curiously, that amalgamation of all the Sinister currents was something I attempted to manifest for a long time – to bring us all together as a powerful triad. But the o9a did not appreciate my warnings about steering clear of child sex and ‘mundanes’ and after being lectured on commonplace paedophilia in Greece and the fact that no one really cares about child sex or they’d make more of an effort to stop it, by Chloe – darklogos9 gleefully jettisoned me, and my warnings about the direction o9a was taking, to embrace its new more psychotic and less morally bound spokeswoman to expand and evolve the o9a in a new direction. To be clear, I never occupied any internal seat with the o9a, but I had terrific influence at the time as a gateway and distributor, well known for my fanatic zeal, loyalty and significant contributions. Perhaps they did not know that choice would make them my enemy – perhaps they did not care.

4. Out-group stereotypes – THEM did not take long to become the new enemy of the o9a, and for several years a heated conflict broke out between our two groups – for the o9a always needed and always found an enemy; often within its own ranks. From Ford, to Beast, to me (Anschauung), to Chloe – the o9a inevitably turned upon those that helped it most. In ‘The Troubles (Conflict between the O9A and The Temple of THEM)’ I have retained and relayed some of the fallout and considerations of this period, which was kicked off from increased tensions between THEM and o9a, particularly souring after THEM openly regarded Long’s amorality and his reluctance to reign in the implications as facilitating child sex abuse. It was the Tempel ov Blood, however that exacerbated this vice – arguably, the o9a tolerated it because the o9a did not see it as their responsibility to interfere with it. ToB initially burst onto the stage as an off-shoot claiming o9a was not satanic enough in early 2003, a statement it quickly retracted, then grew closer to the o9a over the next decades. During the troubles, ToB and o9a combined efforts to make their threats toward me, with ToB creating special artwork for the occasion writing my assumed initials in blood in one of their ~vampiric intimidation displays? With THEM or whoever had helped them last as their frequent enemy – there was actually very little time for the o9a to effectively combat its supposed real enemy.

5. Self-Censorship was definitely a problem; while the o9a seemed to encourage the growth of new sinister energies and forms in its writings, it demonstrably censored and chastised many newcomers or competing forms over the decade; voices that THEM saw fit to give a platform too. This saw the emergence of The Black Glyph Society which foresaw that twenty years on (i.e., today) there would be a need for certain material to be made re-available to occultists of the new generations. TBGS helped many sinister authors to edit, publish and distribute their works through various online groups or even brokered publishing deals with different houses through our contacts – an endeavour that continues to today: most recently, Diabolic Gnosticism. ‘The Sinister Dialogues’ was another attempt to show that the Sinister was not a mono-current dominated by one overarching power however suave, however insistent.

6. Illusion of Unanimity – certainly a particular skill I mastered myself (viz. “THEM”) and much of the o9a’s writing is didactic in tone, sometimes subtly, sometimes overtly, emphasising a ‘we’ or background collective to which one can belong, should belong. Intellectual prowess was also instrumental in silencing opposition or absorbing dissent – a tactic I engaged in by proxy to defend the o9a early on. This unanimity is no more notable than in the protracted smear campaigns against my character, sometimes what they puzzlingly thought was my character, and the child-like tantrums and tactics deployed to cow my obedience and discredit what I have had to say, and still, have to say. The o9a wrote as if it spoke for everyone and that all agreed to its pronouncements – though there were many defectors, some braver than others who could think for themselves; but many were content to let the order think for them. Interestingly, I found throughout the years, that my own writings and actions often prompted a new manuscript to be issued from the o9a specifically related to its position and stance on various things it seemed not to have considered previously. This was two-way, as the o9a and Long were my greatest muses and inspired much of what I have written, thought, done for a good portion of my life – lessening greatly in 2006 when the Temple of THEM was co-founded under the auspices of my new magickal tutor, the Sorceress*.

7. Yes, we did apply direct pressure on dissenters – numerous are the dog-piles where we would collectively scold and oust those that did not conform, at least in the earlier days when I wanted so strongly to belong. We jointly suppressed voices against the order – and after Chloe arrived it became the orders favourite and most frequent game, moving from online vitriol to real-life doxing, stalking, threats, espionage and character assassination to whomever happened to cross its path or say the wrong things. For the thing to understand about forms – is that they are Unipolar – for them to grow, resistance must be silenced – they seek to become the only voice, the only platform, the only door; and like the State, any attack on the form mobilises its troops and resources to its defence. And o9a had some good and inexhaustible resources: Chloe was one of their best. A brilliant tactician and many times an insightful one;

she switched from assaulting the Temple in her posts to completely evaporating any mention of us; astutely realising how memetics carry or do not carry temporal forms with them by eliminating key words. We were the nexion o9a forgot.

8. Finally. It is important to note that I, at length, and vigorously, as a ‘mindguard’ protected the o9a and acted as a guardian against its detractors (which later saw the o9a write about not needing to be defended). I curated content and individuals who would pass through me first privately, selectively embracing or rejecting applicants or ideas that would become part of the storage facilities or distribution centres I archived. Knowledge is power, right. I vehemently replicated the same noxious and scathing replies and retorts to those that questioned it that would later be directed at me. Even against Chloe who later became the o9a’s esteemed orator. What seems now like a lifetime ago – still has echoes left to play out, still has stories yet to end, still unfolds the actions I and others put into motion over the span of twenty years – and that includes the enigmatic Temple of THEM.

Interestingly, it is all of these points consolidated as ‘group-think’ that hollowed out and crumbled the once illustrious order of nine angles. While such collective unanimity or its visage forms an important and integral aspect of any collective group of human beings seeking to cohere through shared interests, values, goals or morality; it has consequences when prolonged. For group-think was as corrosive to them as mindless collectivity is to any group – eventually. I saw long ago on that very day in 2008 what would become of the o9a and only later did I realise how beneficial my course had been, and those twists and turns I hated and despised at the time, struggled with or fought against. How lucky I was to be such an arrogant, righteous, determined and driven young man with the strength to be different and think for myself and tell them to unequivocally go fuck themselves ?

There is some amusing irony that the name of the Temple of THEM denotes a collective – yet all it has ever done is promote individuality. And through this post, I continue to promote it today. ⊕

TRIANGULAR VELOCITY

Of some recent interest are the attempts by Hopenothate to declare the o9a a terrorist organisation following its influence on many subsidiaries whom have made considerable noise, bringing enough attention to themselves and their activities to be now staring through the bars of a prison cell or being pursued by forces on the right side of history determined to see them there. Meanwhile the temporal ripples of dissonance those subsidiaries made fades into the ocean and their opportunity to engage in aeonic change is done. Should that declaration eventuate, and in this political climate it is not beyond possibility – and even probable, that will place this Temple under a radar given its past association to and present day position on the Order. We still circulate older mss and Black Glyph materials believing that prior to a certain date there was a majestic profoundness to it before it denigrated. Yet – It is already likely that even a casual observer can tell the Temple is virulently misanthropic – favouring no race, no politics, no human above another and preferring the company and instruction, elevation and reverence of forces entirely non-human and that have nothing to do with the inane, endless, slow, clumsy trash that humans concern themselves with in championing this or that for this or that – all completely subsumed by the higher power of Forms to which they remain completely oblivious and stupid – and dancing tirelessly upon a stage of bones celebrating various angles of humanity and its greatness with thankfully brief spans of life ad infinitum, ad nauseam. TBH – If I did not love humanity I would not be so bitterly disappointed in it or seek to disassociate and recuse from it, nor have spent my life trying to understand and wake it – but that matters nothing now, the virus is all that matters and it is escalating, opening the gate to the abyss and the eventual version 2 of the human being with the holocaust now accelerating and nature’s evolutionary prowess flexing its muscles in our faces. However, if the Order is declared as such – we can expect this WordPress by association to be taken down prematurely, i.e. prior to 2036 when the Temple will complete its proscribed charter. I have taken some steps to mitigate this loss – however, if this beacon does disappear then it will not be re-lit. There is naught to say that suits human beings or their indulgent interest in themselves or their betterment, improvement, evolution – nor do they want to stay in the presence of an increasingly humano-caustic source and one cannot be in the presence of THEM and humanity when one eats the other. A summary of what I have been trying to say will become ear-splittingly apparent as THEY become the new reality and zeitgeist. Though I shall probably mutter here and there at any rate since life persists. June 24/edit. The situation is escalating rapidly.

BEYOND THE ADEPT: CONTEMPLATION

Beyond the Adept

ONA = (This is an extract from a letter sent to an Internal Adept – doc written by ONA and posted on Camlad)

+O+ (A Contemplation of this letter by Anon of THEM.)

ONA – Several issues need to be addressed, such as is the ONA as exists at present, relevant to you, and indeed, relevant of itself, and also what is the meaning of Adeptship and beyond in supra-personal terms. Let us consider whether there is – and must be – a supra-personal dimension to Adeptship and beyond, and if so, what is the nature of this in practical terms. That is, is it part of being an Adept – and especially of the grades beyond – to strive to change the world in some way? – ONA

+O+ The synthesis at which one arrives from Living is always going to be the dictatorial factor representative of a (I hesitate to use, “their”*) particular and unique means of perception; an inevitable eventuation of an equation of math and geometry / psyche and Physis that distils the contents of the collective numinous pool belonging to certain of our species, the Acausal proper, (presenced every so often in the practical genius in one of the three modes of Time that overtake a man or woman – or speaking asexually, the human nexion) whose singular distillation of the components involved in all presently understood equations, and the nature of whose acausal charge eclipses the initial Question (‘or challenge posed’ to use another terminology) and lays the foundation for the bridge that can span the ‘gap’ between one consciousness and the yet undreamed of other. What is certain is this: the World, will Change with or without the agency (pretended or genuine) of adeptic involvement. I think that this aspect of Adeptship is the skill and confidence to know when, where and how change is perceived to occur during one’s Time, and the predicted outcome of that action without interference of a conscious and directed kind. This, being the age of Kali Yuga, should not be the time for fear of experimentation with Change: we have three hundred years to get it wrong/right and refine those methods that seem to be coming to the fore of human consciousness at this time of initial ‘Fayen’.

*When one becomes an Adept – and I believe the exhibition of this quality changes in accordance with the changing face of humanity and its aspirations manifest and yet unmanifest; the clear demarcation between ‘Individual’ and ‘Collective’ becomes irrevocably blurred. In pursuing Insight/Ingress Roles for instance, one can learn to ‘jump’ from one consciousness to another, that is, to attain such amazing empathy/sympathy with one’s own state of Being that one can literally see from the eyes and minds of others – and, influence them toward the similar state indicative of Adeptship (in various degrees at various speeds pending the nexion and Adept) of co-operation with the numinous sketch defined by the Master(s). Thus one’s “pressures” upon the world are metaphorically mirrored in the Abstract ‘Science’ of the Star Game – where one thing may be many, many may be one – co-existing contradictions chasing each other’s harmony. In this way, DM has transferred his consciousness, his qualities, his ambitions, his mentality and his laws of the Master (that is to say his numinous sketch – or Weltanschauung) to adepts world-wide; a splintering of his consciousness into many, indeed thousands, of living breathing nexions – many still seeds, unaware of their paradoxical symbiosis with one another or the source of this consciousness, most still mired in the frames of reference of their Time, under the influence of illusion and convenience – yet deeply stirred to approach the world with the same blinding Love (and Detachment) as DM. The supra-personal, like all temporal living forces expressed as abstracts of the Sinister Way, by virtue of its very existence, presence and deliberation here and now, is no coincidence – it is no anomaly – rather it is part of the numinous sketch, a consequence of distillation and prior action and non-action to which this Time and its people are tied to particular temporal symbolism and particular challenge. When this question has been satisfactorily solved or its next phase of development (i.e. a better phrased question or subsequent evolution of its abstract) by the majority of human beings with which its presence is occurring and causing some consternation: then there is no doubt that what constitutes an Adept will change, as may the necessity for Adepts to interfere or for them to maintain the illusion of their interference pending the outcome of the strength of the next numinous sketch.

If for instance, the ONA achieved their galactic ambitions, realised 300 years from now by a consciousness vastly superior to our own who had mastered abstract thinking to such a degree that such things as the idea of constancy of reality upheld in magic for instance (whereupon it is one belief that magic works only if all participants believe in its aim and are focused without doubt) could be dropped (i.e. that pessimistic perception of reality discarded) due to abstract perception and an immoral i.e. empathic non-dual bound perceptual means of heurisy could allow new sciences for energy, travel, technology etc and that galactic species formed the collective part of the remaining human race who saw beyond the causal entrapments we uphold... then what might the role of an Adept be? As consciousness changes, so does the Adept. This is one reason why some people I have encountered are confused angered or destroyed when the form they have built or spent a lot of time aiding is suddenly torn down or altered – because they lack the perception of abstract reasoning essential to understanding the temporal necessity of a form esp. in relation to a creature like the Order of Nine Angles. One great example, though which will probably raise an eyebrow or two, is that by Marilyn Manson – whose own antics clued me in early as to the methodology of metamorphism and the ONA. Manson built a huge following as a Gothic rock star focused on Satanism, American Degeneracy, Destruction of the Simple in Ethics, and so on – using Charles Manson, Willy Wonka, Adolf Hitler, Marilyn Monroe and all sorts of dark/light symbiote opposites (hence his name) which held many in psychic thrall which he then – right at the top of his fame – completely abandoned to present his new album and new image of space-glam via Mechanical Animals. His fans were subsequently divided – a great many abandoning (just as he predicted/forced) Manson until he later returned many years later to his Gothic roots. I think Manson's genius lent much to my understanding of the ONA's own underlying formations – though I expect some will see this comparison with distaste – wrongly. This conscious decision by Manson to deliberately abandon one form and show his audience up for the sycophants they were is not unlike the ONA abandoning the older Naos/BBOS/NS/Islam etc. in favour of a space-race focus of Dark Gods, Galactica and Feyen. It might also be helpful to suggest that the more one leans toward calling these exhibitions and expressions of the Order or defines the acts of DM as 'inhuman' 'numinous' 'shapeshiftic' 'trickster' – thus transfiguring the actual human emission of these forces into something altogether ‘other-wordly’ ‘Dark Godish’, ‘Alien’, but at any rate, less than human – is potentially due to the fact that Abstract Reasoning is not yet developed or attained by many – and thus the strangeness of this perception must take on a monstrous or somehow unearthly distorted form in order to begin getting across the rudiments of what will someday be understood through actual Abstract Perception. One finds that Myatt’s actions and effects tend not to be viewed as stemming from a simple human being – but a genius at best, a dark god at least.

+O+

ONA – Or is there just a personal dimension to an Adept – that their goal is their goal and the world, and people, and the Cosmos, are basically irrelevant? Indeed, we might also ask are such “Grades” important anyway? ONA

+O+ What is important here is two-fold – firstly the spirit of contemplation and abstract assessment of those questions and forms that still do and probably will for a long time affect and have an effect of the human race and its Time and Ethos – that is, to involve oneself in the world as an empathic agent, concerned with mirroring all and every detail of Form which finds importance in the realm of the objective creatitude that humanity inhabits. Secondly – and this is where my own Gnosis has been the most frustrating in trying to convey something that can only be understood from a perception that can view multiple realities all simultaneously co-existent truths, that it is not THE questions whatever their grand answers may be that are important to ask – but rather that underlying forceful assessment and reassessment of things that DM/ONA exhibit, that exploration, and continual updating of what is beyond, beneath, beholden, Is important. As I have intimated above, the Adept, can live, that is move their consciousness about, but can no longer spiritually (i.e. with any genuine certainty) specify a separation point between individual/collective, personal/Aeonic spheres/forces/realms. This diffusement of physical embodiment from the personal shell, this de-centralization of the human geometry into the very fabric of causal time and space (life-centred geometry or co-nexion with the Acausal), through all and some other consciousnesses succeeds, in destroying the simplification of one’s Seat of consciousness – and is one step toward attaining the Diamond Body – which, I am inclined to believe DM has done. +O+

ONA – Personally, I do believe such Grades are necessary, still – and thus relevant. There may – indeed, should – come a time when they are no longer required, as forms, but that is a very long way in the future, given the nature of the majority of these beings named “humans”. They are relevant and necessary as forms, as guides, providing a structure that is necessary, as a map is often useful in an unknown area, shortening the time required to get where one is going. ONA

+O+ Yes – I think the “Grades” are still important, at this time. As everything is and does tend to be important or called for to maintain, sustain and propagate at any given stage of causal time from what can be ascertained occurring or lacking in the human condition. Though I should point out, that I have not followed the Seven-Fold Way in what might be called the conventional spirit – I have in some way or another attained a pretty good understanding of what lies beneath it. I could not have done this without equivalent tasks of the Grades or personal undertakings which lead to similar understanding from experience. It is not that these tasks are required to undertake in order to understand – but rather, I think, that means to explain the new perception are lacking and still in development. Such things as the Grades help provide the answers to questions that as simple as they seem to the asker – draw only blank stares and silence from those who can’t help but feel they know why such questions are being asked and exactly how they fit into the context of human consciousness and its development – and more pointedly – why such questions are signs of distance. Until enough people are removed from their seat of consciousness and diffused into the aether – when a critical mass is reached with enough people able to force the numinous sketch onto paper – how to communicate the intimations of that new science for which a language does not yet exist? The usefulness of the dead language no longer suffices – the practical touching of the world and experiencing its ways is a reversion in desperation and in part convenience to speak the Way. +O+

ONA – The answer to the supra-personal nature of Adeptship is already implicit in what an Adept is – someone who has developed aspects of themselves, and especially their abilities and consciousness. This development is outward, and involves empathy with living beings, with Nature and the Cosmos itself. There is thus an understanding of the individual in relation to these things, as there should also be the beginnings of a rational understanding of the world, of human nature, of “history” and our evolution and promise, as beings. The Adept therefore understands how certain forces (or energies) be they archetypal or whatever can affect individuals, and groups, and how certain forms can presence, and be presenced, to change individuals and groups. This is the beginnings of understanding the real magick beyond the low, external, results magick of Initiates and External Adepts, and this understanding imparts a certain desire in the Adept to produce causal changes – be the method of such production, such presencing, artistic, magickal, or whatever. But is there a duty of change, of presencing, beyond this still quite personal desire, creativity or action-in-the-world? A duty of dialectic – of causing, provoking, or being the genesis of, larger-scale changes by supra-personal means? ONA

+O+ Where one finds oneself a conscious nexion – one of the lucky (or stoic) few who realise their own context (and for me, this seems to be the great challenge of this epoch, variously called ‘awakening’ ‘waking up’ ‘higher consciousness’ etc) – one will inevitably be subject to the synthesising faculties of persona that continue a reaction, a direction, a creation. If an opened nexion becomes symbiote with the supra-personal then personality is diffused into the numinous sketch of possibility along with responsibility. One cannot be held accountable when one is imbued in every living thing, when consciousness is acausal, for then every thing is an extension of life-imbued consciousness (Qv. Acausal Voice)– a living body of anomalies diffused in the passage of a greater co-nexion. +O+

ONA – And if there is such a duty of Adeptship, then what, if any moral guidelines, should the Adept follow, especially given the empathy they have developed, or many have developed? Such questions really are the beginning of the move from Adeptship to beyond the Abyss – a sign that at a time not too distant in years, the Adept is moving toward the next stage. ONA

+O+ An answer correlates directly to Change. Every moment that passes in causal time this question requires a different answer and will generate a different answer. An answer that is as perennially unchanging throughout Tradition even as it appears solid in its static form as a ‘question’. At any point in Time a duty of Adeptship is to surpass the current Master. +O+

ONA – As often, there are no clear answers – for each Adept must struggle outward to their own answers to such questions, for it is their answering, their struggle to so answer, which is important, not some given “teachings” or whatever. But there are some guidelines which, as often, may or may not help – and which may or may not serve as a dialectic, to provoke, to be balanced, countered, or perchance even agreed with, but only after much thought. ONA

+O+ Absolutely. I answer these questions only for my own satisfaction and out of the confidence borne of struggle.+O+

ONA – What are these guidelines? They derive from the nature of an individual, from the nature of magick – from the very meaning and purpose of the life of an individual. Our Way, of esoteric magick, gives some special, often unique, answers to these things, and it is these answers which differentiate our Way from that of other Ways, and especially from what have come to be called Religion and Politics (both terms are of course only reductionist, abstract, terms which describe certain causal projections onto the numinous matrix of the Cosmos). How do we view the individual? As one particular causal presencing of acausal energies. How do we view the purpose, the meaning, of that individual? As one means of evolving – of accessing more and more of the acausal, through willed change, and thus as a means of positively interacting with the acausal, with the numinous matrix of the very Cosmos itself, which of course includes, Nature, here on this planet which is our home, and the beings we share this planet with. What is this “willed change”? It is true magick, which includes our seven-fold Way, and the various means of presencing the acausal which we have developed or learnt. The answer of our Way means than our duty, as beings, is to evolve ourselves – to seek to take the opportunity which our causal life is; to seek to develop that potential which is latent within us. How then, in this context, do we view the other beings with which we share this planet? Before Internal Adept, the answer is seen as simple – they are means, which we can use to further ourselves, and the Cosmos, for that is their purpose, even though they themselves do not know this. Their purpose, according to us, is not to attain, a “happiness”, or even some kind of “afterlife” in a religious sense. But Internal Adept provides us with that perspective, that empathy, which was often lacking – or rather, it should provide us with these things, as part of our own development. Thus, do we come to understand the true nature of such things as suffering, both personal and supra-personal, and this understanding may present us with some problems, especially when we view what seems to be the futility of bloody struggle, century upon century, thousand year upon thousand year. Thus are we as Adept brought to questions such as – there must be a better way to evolve this human species, to change the matrix, without the waste, the suffering? What is this better way? To answer questions such as these we must once again consider such things as the true nature of magick, and the true nature of Time, and the nature of evolution itself. Indeed, we should ask, is there – can there be – such a thing as evolution? Is that also just an abstract construct imposed upon the numinous matrix? ONA

+O+ I think evolution is a construct. But ONA’s vital emphasis on practical living is essential for placing this in context. We are forced to use a language forged for a consciousness that was very young (humanly speaking) and to convey essential ‘objective’ facts and experiences quickly and efficiently – but still speak in the same language which has not undergone any significant changes to face the challenges being imposed by the limits now being felt where it cannot and does not express essence – but merely translation. It is also a language heavily influenced by the need for moral imperatives and causal restriction, aspects that have yet to be expunged or replaced with a substitution – though the Star Game is one stroke of genius in this direction. A question like ‘Can there be such a thing as evolution?’ cannot be definitively answered until consciousness is diffused. +O+

ONA – Thus we are led to consider the very nature of the Cosmos, of this numinous matrix. Again, our Way provides some answers, some guidelines. We view the Cosmos as a living entity, albeit an acausal one, and an entity which does not exist apart from us, as finite beings. That is, we as evolving, changing, beings are the evolution of this Being. Our consciousness, our magick, is the consciousness, the magick, of this Being. Thus, our change is implicit in our very nature, as is the truth that we possess the ability to change ourselves – for this is one of the most fundamental principles of our Way, of genuine magick itself. By our magick, our Way, we are bringing consciousness to the Cosmos – which is why of course our move outward, from this planet in the physical sense, is so important so we can access, understand, what is beyond, and thus make that known. Yet this Being, which we are, is not the Being which other Ways have identified, or posited. It is most certainly not “God” – nor even the abstracted opposite of such an abstract construct.

ONA

+O+ Whereby without Abstract Perception (or rather, De-Abstracted Perception) many are confused as to how the ONA Is, both, not in any way Satanic. And yet, quintessentially, Is. +O+

ONA – It is just what IS, as what IS exists: a summation of causal and acausal, far beyond our often silly abstract causal projections upon IT. We provide, or rather can provide, the forms to presence aspects of it – sometimes in myths, or a mythos (such as The Dark Gods) – but these are of course just beginnings, mere forms to be transcended; mere beginnings of the real magick which awaits for us. For, yes, to provide, to “create” such forms to presence IT, to propagate such forms and so change other human beings in diverse ways, is an Art, of genuine magick. Just as the dialectic of ours is an Art, albeit one much misunderstood. This should begin to answer the question about “morality” and such things. One answer is that, yes, there is a way for us to evolve ourselves and others without the stupidities, the wastefulness, of the past – and this is the Way of our magick, of our own still evolving Way, which Way makes available to us all that we need to avoid the waste, the stupidities, of the past, as evident for example in the Seven-fold Way itself, with its Grade Rituals. This particular answer is to refine, enhance, the techniques, and make them known, thus enabling more and more individuals world-wide to begin the process of individual and supra-personal change. That is, to extend, evolve, our Way itself. Yet – does this not imply a slowness? A significant change in an Aeon, or even more? Is it desirable for us, or some of us, to strive to speed up this process of human evolution, by for example, involving ourselves in using certain causal forms which may produce such speedy change? Or do such forms indeed produce speedy change? Is that merely an illusion? Such are the questions for each Adept to ponder, and answer. ONA

+O+ Wherein, slowness is a state of perception afforded by our relative size, which is afforded by our constancy of consciousness in the body – consciousness which can be diffused leading to ‘greater’ or even cosmic size and a smashing of such simplistic concepts in view of a whole new science and language and subsequent apprehension of all these things way beyond the immediate concerns of something human-sized, with which human-sized concerns manifest. Time, is relative to consciousness. The presencing of ‘speedy change’ seems more an exertion of the Acausal on the Causal than conscious understanding by its nexions for its (speedy changes) purpose – purpose that cannot be understood from human consciousness firmly seated in the skull alone. Forms definitely have the power to bring forth change. Narrative – might be considered the infant first born of what may someday become ‘Numinative’ – whereupon those who can control/shape the geometric channels through which the river of humanity flows – may be considered the experimenters and explorers of a new power borne of greater consciousness than ever before, still in its raw unrefined state. For illusions, far from being the ethereal mirages their name conjure forth – are in fact the most solid of projections, and even if they be a lie on one level, i.e. from a consciousness seated in the human skull, they are a truth on another, i.e. when consciousness is diffused into the numinous sketch. Thus it is that DM is able to be, that is, BE, both NS/Islam, yet be neither at the same time – all in complete harmony. Moreover to honestly deny being one person or the other, and truthfully claim to be separated from his other personas – these being separate and connected in abstract perception. +O+

ONA – Which brings us to the ONA. Is the ONA as existing at present still relevant? Does it need to change, perhaps some of its symbols, its own causal forms? If so, why? And how, toward what? Such are also questions which each Adept must ponder, and answer for themselves. ONA

+O+ My views on ONA and the changes that I feel beneficial to make to ‘it’ (being that some don’t actually see the differentiation yet) have been made within my own presencing. So no comment from me here. +O+

ONA – One clue – is this ONA, as perceived by others and those of Adeptship and below, just an outer form which has a yet unknown inner essence? ONA

+O+ Yes. Though I doubt I should be believed were I to put forth my intimations on just what ONA are.+O+

ONA – Is this essence hidden, awaiting the consciousness that is created beyond the Abyss? ONA

+O+ This question has a strange vibration. Almost as if DM were asking it himself, unsure of the answer. Which, is fair enough. He’s a pioneer in a very strange place. +O+

ONA – And if it is so hidden, why is this? Deliberate – or just part of its real nature, meaning that this nature cannot be apprehended below this Abyss, that it is imperceptible by those who do not possess the perception to perceive it with this new perception being developed over time by an Adept, propelling them toward the next stage? ONA

+O+ Quite so – I think that again, until consciousness has been diffused out of the human skull, the nature of many things remains invisible. Who can hope to understand what lies beneath without Abstract Reasoning (Qv. Star Game both as metaphor and literal working) – it is hidden because a language and perception to experience it in its new form, is still occult – still new – still developing. DM's efforts have singularly motivated thousands to concentrate on such a thing as the Acausal – made them aware of it, of its context – with a critical mass, a synthesizer of its science may lead the breakthrough. Does this success of invoking meditation, not in itself, reflect the necessity for Adepts to continue learning the science of speedy changes as asked above? At least for the time being.+O+

ONA – And is part of this real nature something which cannot be contained by any such causal form and so cannot even be named? ONA

+O+ It may very well be, that this acausal dimension is a myth, whose fable acts as the crucible for a new direction, systematically and diametrically opposed and even beyond the methods of absorption and distortion attributable and characteristic of the Magian. But in questing for its existence, something will be broken that can never be fixed – and this in itself seems to be reason enough to believe, for a time at least, in the temporal suggestion of an Acausal. On the other hand – while it cannot be named – it can be experienced. A new language requires development to express it – such a language might be called a combination of Cliology, change, and the sharpening of pencils in preparation for the numinous sketch.+O+

ONA – In Conclusion:

Such are some of the questions which arise, or which may arise, for an Internal Adept. And yet – what must be remembered is that all such questions are only questions; that Thought is merely Thought, and often a distraction to that real change, that real presencing of the sinister, that is part of our Way and which involves, as it always does and has done, action-in-the-world: that is, real acts, by the individual. These acts are and must be – for an Internal Adept moving toward the Abyss and thus the next stage – beyond both the Light and the Dark, yet being both Light and Dark and yet containing the essence of the Sinister itself. If they are indeed moving toward the next stage, then they will understand this – or at least be moving toward this understanding. Furthermore, those who withdraw from the Sinister, in all its Aeonic forms and presencings, as a result of answering such questions, have indeed withdrawn from our Way, and thus will not move-forward to the stage of Mastery.
ONA

+O+ Is the ONA relevant to me as it exists and at this stage of my journey? Without giving anything away – what the ONA actually are is something relevant to everyone at every stage of every journey.+O+

A Reply by Dark Logos

Herewith I present a few comments of my own on the file recently uploaded here by " x ", which file contained many interesting and astute comments about Myatt and the ONA.

DM has transferred his consciousness, his qualities, his ambitions, his mentality and his laws of the Master (that is to say his numinous sketch – or Weltanschauung) to adepts world-wide; a splintering of his consciousness into many, indeed thousands, of living breathing nexions – many still seeds, unaware of their paradoxical symbiosis with one another or the source of this consciousness, most still mired in the frames of reference of their Time, under the influence of illusion and convenience – yet deeply stirred to approach the world with the same blinding Love (and Detachment) as DM.

Comment:

Which is to say that there is a certain magick at work here; or, rather, a certain presencing of certain forces by a sinister Adept in order to achieve certain goals. It might also be helpful to suggest that the more one leans toward calling these exhibitions and expressions of the Order or defines the acts of DM as inhuman 'numinous' shapeshiftic 'trickster' – thus transfiguring the actual human emission of these forces into something altogether other-wordly 'Dark Godish', 'Alien', but at any rate, less than human – is potentially due to the fact that Abstract Reasoning is not yet developed or attained by many – and thus the strangeness of this perception must take on a monstrous or somehow unearthly distorted form in order to begin getting across the rudiments of what will someday be understood through actual Abstract Perception. One finds that Myatt's actions and effects tend not to be viewed as stemming from a simple human being – but a genius at best, a dark god at least.

Comment:

If I correctly understand what is meant by the terms Abstract Reasoning and Abstract Perception then this is a very perceptive comment. Thus, one has someone (i.e. Long/Myatt) – undertaking a Sinister quest – who has gone "Beyond The Abyss" and exhibiting in real life, through their actions and creations, aspects of the acausal, and thus appearing, to those lacking the perception of esoteric Adepts (and beyond), as "strange", perplexing, confusing, Trickster-like (and so on). Such actions and creations are what one would expect if someone had indeed progressed "Beyond The Abyss" – and gives us a measure, a standard, by which to judge others who have so claimed, and who so claim, to have done so. Thus, one can place this individual in relation to the others who have so claimed, and who so claim, to have gone "Beyond The Abyss" and who have awarded themselves various titles such as "Master" or "Magus". As I have intimated above, the Adept, can live, that is move their consciousness about, but can no longer spiritually (i.e. with any genuine certainty) specify a separation point between individual/collective e, personal/Aeonic spheres/forces/ realms.

Comment:

Yes indeed, and this is one of those things that motivates (or which can motivate) an Adept to progress further – toward The Abyss, where they become, through an immersion in acausal forces, something else, and where their perception, their “centre” if you will, changes, so that they move away from the mundane perception of the majority (with its manufactured abstractions and opposites) to the perception of the acausal, which is “Abstract” in the sense that the anonymous commentator uses that term.

I should point out, that I have not followed the Seven-Fold Way in what might be called the conventional spirit –I have in some way or another attained a pretty good understanding of what lies beneath it.

Comment:

Agreed. In truth, perhaps a better understanding than some who have followed it! If an opened nexion becomes symbiote with the supra-personal then personality is diffused into the numinous sketch of possibility along with responsibility. One cannot be held accountable when one is imbued in every living thing, when consciousness is acausal, for then every thing is an extension of life imbued consciousness (Qv. Acausal Voice)– a living body of anomalies diffused in the passage of a greater co-nexion.

Comment:

Very true. I think evolution is a construct.

Comment:

Exactly, and this is hinted at in some of the more esoteric ONA MSS.
Or perhaps I should say: the concept of evolution as normally understood is an abstractive construct of our causal space-time. For the acausal, there is no such construct. Wherein, slowness is a state of perception afforded by our relative size, which is afforded by our constancy of consciousness in the body.

Comment:

Another astute observation. Such a slowness – as perceived by the Adept and those below – is just one more causal appearance, related to the perception of such an Adept, which is still for the most part centred on “the self” and which still thinks in terms of linear, causal, time (and thus in terms of a causal “evolution”) . Thus it is that DM is able to be, that is, BE, both NS/Islam, yet be neither at the same time – all in complete harmony.

Comment:

It does not say much for most Occultists – and even those deemed “intelligent” among us – that only a few people understand this, and thus correctly perceive DM as is, and thus understand what he is doing, and why. Again, it comes back, does it not, that such a life as DM’s is what one would expect if someone had indeed been a genuine sinister Adept and then progressed “Beyond The Abyss”. DM’s efforts have singularly motivated thousands to concentrate on such a thing as the Acausal – made them aware of it, of its context – with a critical mass, a synthesizer of its science may lead the breakthrough.

Comment:

Such perspicacity, again! Why do not more people understand this? [Rhetorical question, of course...] what the ONA actually are is something relevant to everyone at every stage of every journey.

Comment:

Why do not more people understand this? [Rhetorical question, of course...] Finally, it would be most interesting, and instructive, for many perhaps, if the anonymous commentator who says: I doubt I should be believed were I to put forth my intimations on just what ONA are did indeed put forth their intimations of just what the ONA are.

ALBEDO, NIGREDO, RUBEDO.

Those with very long memories will recall the original Mvimaedivm White forum which archived or transcribed/preserved then extant ONA texts. Mvimaedivm Black, a private research forum used by members of THEM to study historical connections and evidence of/to the Septenary, particularly the Dark Gods was its successor. A decision was made in 2023 to anonymise the content from Black and present a replica public forum for scholars of magic and the ONA to continue the project and offer findings to the wider occult community. This resulted in the establishment of Mvimaedivm Red. In alchemical terms, the sequence has followed: Albedo, Nigredo, Rubedo.

EREBUS: SATANIC FICTION

Erebus pushed his way through the heavy ornate wooden doors and entered the Temple Reichstag. The determined march of his black boots sent an echo about the dark hall as they met the violent embrace of cold marble. The Dark Gods stared down upon him from the billowing thrones of black banner that hung from ceiling to floor – each etched with the white sigil of a horror from the Pantheon, and above and beyond, centred high above the Altar, a lovingly woven German flag emblazoned with a swastika. It was strange how time stood still within these types of Satanic architecture. For all the energy a being could compress and focus during its life – the power of ideology made a mockery of it all -consuming life in a vast and ravenous maw that stretched its gaunt visage across measures of time that approached immortality. These banners and their symbols of Greater Masters were a silent reminder that death stalked one at every turn threatening to return one’s opportunity to advance the Satanic Quest to nothing, to snuff out the flame that burns for but a moment and again become one with oblivion. Only hunting death could delay the inevitable – allow one to “die when one was ready to die” – a fact that gave urgency to many of his actions.

It was the flags and their ominous symbolic essence that entered his mind as he strode forth toward the altar; the assembled members standing silently beneath the gaze of the banners was always a secondary and even cursory acknowledgement. It was arrogance coupled with a deep and profound love for the struggle embodied by the members who, blind to their own, served shadowy masters feared and worshipped for aeons. Standing here in their black garb – united in visual solidarity – from high up looking down upon the scene and soaking up the atmosphere holistically: the sinister aura of the Temple and the intensity of reverence, one could perceive a cohesive moment by beings of the human race taking place; a solid foundation of like-minded soldiers ready to pour their blood into an ideology that transcended their fragile lives and temporary flesh. But who could know the thoughts and intentions of the individual scorpions assembled before him? To coronate a Temple was destined to be adorned with a crown of human thorns. While humans were willing to stand to attention in this manner, esoteric and secretive in their inevitable betrayal – true solidarity could never be achieved. Loyalty to Satan demanded the surrender of one's flesh to a transcendence that cannibalised all human importance. Regardless of the worship shown them the Dark Gods were not human. Despite the adoration shown them by the hate-love of humans they were not beings one could please by service, only by sacrifice. Sufficiently twisted and tortured by insight the experiments of the horrific mirror that is human effort to approach the divine or the demonic became transparent and surfaced from the mire of the mind, sharp and gleaming: a grotesque apparition of essences alien and cold. It was unfortunately a truism that as long as some magical revelations were enough to send one to suicide, the parodies must continue until a critical mass was reached and more of his species were born that were able to use the black magic usurped from insane trips to the Abyss.

As he took his place in front of the Altar: the Temples anthem filled the Hall. They had previously experimented with Sinister plainchant, ominous orchestral, and aural/ambient soundscapes to find the right energy for the Temple and its current. They had finally decided on "Reich-no"; a mixture of electrical techno superimposed over with sound bites and speeches from various Nazi-focused documentaries and propaganda reels. A scientific blend of hypnosis and aural assault intended to accelerate the heartbeat, change the breathing, and focus the intense electricity and energy that built up in its listeners onto something tangible and solid, either sex, or the Swastika: a failing that left the evolution of techno in the 90's short of fulfilling Satanic usage. It had been noticed that contemporary techno was quickly bastardised and became Magian in nature. And thus, its potential for black magic was minimised just as plainchant and choir had been by the introduction of church scripts and ideology. The Temple felt that if a mimesis of techno could be undertaken in a similar fashion to that of corrupting church chants with a sinister ethos, i.e., "Sanctus Satanas", that a highly powerful weapon could be created that re-created the energy of the bacchanalia. Techno as it stood ran energy in a loop that although successful in creating such magical intensity did not focus the power summoned into anything, or if it did, some turgid ethereal Magian current. More often than the experience was dissipated without releasing the tension, leaving the listener frustrated and hyped up in a type of psychic limbo. Drugs were often supplemented to restore the loss incurred from being placed in such a limbo and as a result techno became even more quickly bastardised: the innovators missing the crucial point to its power. It also contained human-based drivel, pop, or themes of 'love' that were directly fed by currents of the Magian. 'Infectious' was probably the best way to describe this genre. However, using a hypnosis-based approach centred on the fact that the first thing a baby heard inside the womb was the beating of the heart – the 4/4 beat in fact, owing to the four valves of the heart – it was surmised by magicians of the Temple that the success of techno as a movement was based on its acceleration of the heartbeat by aural sympathy. But once the heartbeat was sped up, what then? Emotionally it lacked substance, spiritually it lacked solidarity. What was required as a superimposition of something that could be used to direct the tension of the techno energy – a movement or ideology that resonated with the members of the Temple. The powerful sound of Germany united in solidarity via the crowds that amassed to hear the speeches of Adolf Hitler, powerful in their poetic and political tempest were quickly suggested as a natural accompaniment for music intended to harmonise with the Western Soul. The powerful bass and rising hypnosis experimented with in the Temples own species of techno had been heavily interspersed with samples taken from the “Triumph of the Will”, with the ‘Seig Heils’ sounding particularly effective against a backdrop of high energy...

Michelle had met Evan in the summer of 1995 at a New-Age seminar. She’d been browsing through a stack of occult books looking for one on crystals. The stranger had smiled when she’d turned her head briefly to see who was standing beside her, and she’d smiled back. He’d noticed her select several promising looking books from the pile, flip through the pages of each one, and then put them back down with a sigh, apparently dissatisfied with the contents.

“You’re after something on crystals?” he’d asked her.

“Yes. But I’m not having much luck” she’d said, turning to acknowledge him politely.

“Yeah, I mean they’re all good books in their own right, but I’m after something special too.”

“Oh, you’re into crystals as well?” she’d enthused.

He’d looked briefly at the stacks of books on the table, deftly pulled a thin black book from the bottom of the nearest stack, and handed it to her.

“I own this one, it’s very good. It’s written by a German author who specialises in faceting and gem-cutting for efficacious emanation – I highly recommend it if you’re interested in the spiritual geometry of crystals.”

She’d taken it from him and thumbed through the pages, it was exactly what she’d been looking for.

“I studied crystals a few years ago. I’ve always been fascinated by them”.

She’d been so engrossed in the contents of the book she’d barely noticed the delayed response to her question. She’d looked at him then. She was immediately taken with his boyish good looks.

“This is fantastic – thank you very much!”

“You’re very welcome,” he said, smiling warmly.

After engaging the stranger in a conversation, she’d been impressed with his knowledge in the field of crystals and learned the stranger’s name was Evan. She’d invited him for a coffee as a way of saying thank you for finding her the book, and he'd accepted, even offering to bring along some other books he thought she might be interested in.

One thing had led to another and Michelle had fallen deeply in love with Evan. Before she knew it, they'd been together for six months, and in that time Evan had continued to impress her with his extensive knowledge of things occult. She'd told him about her upcoming thesis for college, and he'd continued to be helpful, offering to lend her rare or hard-to-find books from his own collection. He'd also speak at length about the occult with her, often surprising her with his seemingly endless repertoire of information. Yet she never once felt like she was being lectured, his soft, steady tone of voice only ever informative, never accusatory.

She'd got an 'A' on her thesis and Evan had been delighted for her. He'd offered to take her out to dinner, somewhere special to celebrate. She'd accepted. Later that night they'd gone to Evans home, giggling like schoolgirls from the effects of wine. Once inside, she'd planted a kiss on his lips. He'd kissed her back. They'd made passionate love in Evans bed, and it had been incredible.

Although she could pick a thousand traits in Evan that she admired or respected, the one thing Michelle liked most about Evan, was the way he held himself. He never pushed her into anything, never took more than what she offered. He always seemed to give back exactly what she gave and never more. When they'd made love he'd followed her lead and matched her rhythm. When she wanted it rough and urgent, he'd comply by fucking her hard. When she wanted it gentle and slow, he was amorous and sensual, holding her hips and gazing into her eyes as she quietly rode him. It was almost like dating a mirror. A wonderful, handsome, intelligent mirror that always knew just what she wanted.

He'd proposed to her in December. She'd not been expecting it. It was like a dream. She'd said yes and they'd made passionate frenzied love underneath the stars. He'd told her that he loved her, and he'd promised her the world.

In late summer, during a conversation over dinner, Evan had engaged her in a conversation about having sex to power crystals by a technique called empathetic vibration. She'd been thoroughly fascinated by the idea, and had suggested with a giggle she'd be more than happy to explore the possibility with him, to try and power several cuts of quartz she owned. She'd been shy at first, but Evan had gone over the methods with her, patiently explaining various facets of the technique – and there was no denying that during their first session the sex had been absolutely phenomenal. Their sex has always been incredible, but there was something kinky about the ritualistic use of it that excited her to new levels of passion. They'd engaged in lovemaking to charge the crystals for about a month. She'd always enjoyed the experience and the sex; the sex was unspeakably good. But somewhat sceptical of the idea of their sex to power crystals, She'd been surprised that she felt she detected a change in the crystals. She didn't know if it was her imagination, but somehow the crystals seemed brighter, denser too.

They'd kept it up – and one night, whilst Evan was in the shower, she'd turned off the lights after one particularly rigorous sex session, and been startled and amazed to see the crystal on the table glowing with a faint yellow-ochre light. After mentioning this to Evan, he'd been amazed and leaving the shower, gone downstairs to see for himself. They'd discussed the glowing crystal well into the night. Evan was as excited as she was that the technique worked and they chatted about the possibilities of charging bigger and rarer crystals.

"How could we charge it up even more?" she'd asked

"Well I guess we'd have to somehow increase the intensity of the sex? But how? It's already so phenomenal—"

"Do you have any books about how to do it at home Evan?"

"I might have. I'll have a look through them when I get home and let you know."

He trailed off and slipped his head under the blanket. She felt his curls brush against her crotch as he went down on her.

Evan had rung her the next afternoon and told her he'd found some books about increasing the charge.

But that they also involved doing things that he wasn't sure she'd be comfortable with.

"Like what?"

"Well it says here that increasing the empathetic vibration can be achieved by engaging in extreme acts of a sexual nature and it mentions... well, taking it in the backdoor"

She'd smiled, despite Evan's general confidence he could be disarmingly shy sometimes.

"Well baby. I'm game if you are" she flirted, trying to make Evan feel more comfortable with mentioning it.

"Well we can try it Michelle, and if you don't like it we can stop and find another way"

"Alright, come over tonight, and bring the book if you can."

The sodomy was like nothing else she'd ever experienced in her life. She'd not felt uncomfortable with the idea, it was new, and strange, but it also felt amazing too in a painful sort of way. And with each of the sessions the light of the crystal grew brighter. Michelle and Evan continued the sessions, powering crystal after crystal.

The powered crystals proved extremely popular and Michelle's crystal shop had begun to do a roaring trade, punters paying twice and sometimes even three times the price of an average crystal for the powered crystals that shimmered with energy.

Many times someone inquired as to the cause of the mysterious state of the crystals, even offering her cash incentives to share it, but she'd refused and defused the explosion of curiosity by feigning ignorance. But her apparent ignorance did nothing to slow the tremendous turnover and she would often run out of stock, something that had never happened before, much to the anxious customers chagrin. She had looked through Evan's book herself, and found references to other extreme sex acts. Some of which involved torture or rape. She mentioned them to Evan and they would go over the acts, discussing them with Evan always asking if she was really sure that she wanted to try them. She'd nodded in the affirmative and they had. She'd grown to trust Evan like she trusted nothing else. He was always there, always gentle, and never pushed or forced her into anything. And they continued to power crystal after crystal.

He'd brought around a crystal of his own: a large pyramid-shaped piece of quartz. It was one of the largest and clearest she'd ever seen.

"I was hoping we could try and charge this one Michelle. My grandfather gave it to me it's very old, been in the family for generations, he actually told me it had special powers"

"What kind of special powers?"

"He didn't elaborate unfortunately, just said that it was a very special crystal once it was charged"

"Let's charge it then. Let's see what it does"

Over the course of six months they'd performed hundreds of sexual sessions, but the sessions to charge the large quartz pyramid were largely required to be obscene. She'd almost felt like he'd torn her out of shape by the end of the sessions, but she'd not complained, despite the ferocious pains in her orifice. And as the months went by the crystal began to emit a hazy violent yellow glow. The sessions continued until the pyramid once a dull opaque glassy rock had become imbued with a warm yellow-orange luminescence from base to apex.

"How do we get to see what it does?" she'd asked.

"I'm not sure, I'll have to have a look through Grandpa's things and see if I can find something out. He might have left notes or something".

Michelle nodded, and then promptly drifted off to sleep in Evans arms, exhausted. She lay prone on the plush black carpet, blood trickling onto the carpet from the deep scratches in her buttocks.

Evan had telephoned her some time after Midnight. He'd been jabbering excitedly, and through the sleepy haze she only made out snatches of his conversation

"Lake... ancient cults... gateway... bring the crystal!"

She'd agreed to meet him at Lake Asoth the next day, just after sunset. She had arrived five minutes late because of the traffic, and had been worried he'd think she'd forgotten to meet him. But he was there waiting for her, and he greeted her with a kiss, and presented a bottle of wine.

"I thought we should celebrate," he said.

They'd strolled along the water's edge and Evan had explained why he'd asked her to meet him here. As they took turns swigging from the bottle, Evan apologetically informing her he'd forgotten to bring glasses, he'd told her about the old book he'd found hidden amongst his Grandpa's things. Inside the book there were ritualistic notes and memoirs – it appeared his Grandfather had belonged to some kind of ancient order called 'Le Guardian' that descended from the Druids. According to the notes, the quartz pyramid was the gateway between this world and another world. The crystal had been carefully guarded for thousands of years by the members of Le Guardian, as had the secret magickal properties of the lake. But the note gave the location of the lake, and revealed that submerging the crystal in a specific part of the lake would effect the crystal in some magickal way now that it was fully charged. Excited about this discovery, they'd celebrated with a quickie in the woods. Her body was still tender from the sessions but Evan was gentle. Then they'd strolled down to the pier and Evan had helped her into a small wooden boat with oars. Evan had noticed the look of concern on Michelle's face and he'd smiled. He'd taken the oars, and with strong even strokes began rowing the boat to the centre of the lake. It was after dusk by the time he'd reached the centre of the dark waters, and a crescent moon climbed the clear night sky. Beneath the stars, Evan and Michelle uncovered the quartz pyramid they'd wrapped in cloth and brought with them.

"Wow Evan! Look at that!" she'd exclaimed.

"I've never seen anything like it." He replied.

The pyramid of quartz was still emanating a yellow glow, but a crimson hue had snaked its way along the edges of the cut quartz. And it was vibrating.

"Michelle is the book there behind you in the bag?"

Michelle turned to look behind her and saw a square-shaped canvas bag lying on the floor of the rowboat.

She turned away from Evan and rummaged through it. It was cold out on the lake, and her skin prickled with goose bumps. She wished she'd brought a jacket. The wine felt like it had gone straight to her head too and she'd swayed a little in her seat whilst looking for Evans book. After a few moments she found it and turned back around.

"Here you are," she said, smiling at Evan.

Evan smiled back warmly and took the book from her.

"This is so exciting!" he said, thumbing through the pages looking for something.

Then he looked over at Michelle.

"Listen Michelle, I just want you to know that since we've been together it's been amazing."

"Oh Evan its been amazing for me too!" she gushed, "I've never met anyone like you, I feel so close, I totally trust you, and I've never felt that with anyone before! I love you so much baby!"

"Well, I just wanted you know... that my name's not Evan, and you don't know me at all".

He put his fingers up to his scalp and pushed his fingertips into the skin. With a neat downward tug he tore off Evan's face.

Michelle recoiled in the boat, her eyes and her mouth agape with horror, shock and disbelief filtering into her features. She did not recognise the man before her. She did not understand what was happening. She did not know where the lover she had spent the most amazing and intimate six months of her life with had gone or why he had ripped off his face. And she did not have time to react when the rope tied around her ankles grew taut and a tremendous force ripped her into the water, with the expression of terror and chaos on her gibbering face as she was forcibly submerged in the cold depths of the dark lake...

PEASE, LOVE AND MUNGBEANS

[Art created for AK and LK of the TOB in 2003. The concept I drew was AK in a cell escaping his prison via blood essence and a transmutation into the Alienic. The TOB warmly received these contributions and were generous in supplying me with a large number of hitherto unpublished manuscripts by the ONA including a rare painting by CB called Dreaming that was published in Emanations. Friendship between TOB and myself soured firstly during a project of conversion of ONA's Sinister Music and Chants onto CD's by "Mr Black" who I clumsily offended and proceeded to make a right balls up of relations – and secondly, when Sath, my other magical mentor these many years became involved with the TOB, and was deeply insulted by the comments they gave regarding her own very dark magical current. At the time, a law of THEM was to join forces against any of THEM's enemies whether you had personal issues or agreed or not – this was designed to foster solidarity and a fighting spirit as the newcomers on the Satanic block. A war was declared against TOB which lasted several years and saw the majority of their publications which they strove very hard to keep private, revealed, thus denuding them of their foundations of mystery and mythos. Such tactics were not personal of course, but anyone in the trade knows how cut-throat such enmity can get.]

Ryan finished reading what was on the computer screen and picked up the phone. He dialled a number and waited for the ringtone. Once. Twice. Three times.

'Hello?'

Ryan looked thoughtfully at the screen once more and began to speak to his girlfriend.

'Hey babe. How's your day going?'

Ryan listened attentively to the female voice emanating from the receiver. After a short while he found himself nodding gently in genuine agreement.

'Yeah, I think that's the way to go. I mean you're the strongest person I know, if anyone can do it, you can babe.'

He listened to the customary silence and then for the returned interest.

'What have I been doing? Well I've been reading something by that group I told you about – the one that seems closely connected to the ONA? Yes that's the one – anyway I've been reading about this concept they've got called the 'Blood Pool' where basically, how do I put this, people are viewed as vials of lifeblood, and each person has the ability to contribute to this Blood Pool by, well, giving blood.

Remember when we were talking about the acausal? Okay well the blood is sort of acausal in that it is the essence of the Cosmos, which as you know flows into the causal as humans or 'nexions' and gives us humans our Life, in one regard. But it's also causal in that the Blood Pool also grows by actual giving of real blood. By contributions, whether voluntary or not, such as shedding real blood in war, or killing, or sacrifice – or even intellectual blood like art or writings that are about the Temple. Whatever serves to increase the power, resources and spread of the Blood Pool basically’.

There was a pause as Ryan listened for a moment to the receiver.

‘Well basically the Blood Pool is like a Nexion, a place where the Acausal meets the Causal and there’s a mergence. Except in this case their Blood Pool is like something that has to be fed, with constant and continual sources of blood, and the more they feed it, the more powerful it gets’.

Ryan listened again.

‘Well yeah I guess there’s not much difference in the way it works from the ONA’s nexions – except that from what I understand – the ONA nexions are places or people designed to open a ‘gateway’ between the Acausal and the Causal. Maybe I’m wrong, it doesn’t really go into as much detail as I’d like here, but I think the ‘Blood Pool’ is meant to be used to form/create an actual Demon. Sort of like using all the pain and suffering and darkness and things to, well build an autonomous dark force, a bit like how people built society and then society started building people?’

Ryan hoped he wouldn’t have to explain how.

‘Yes babe, exactly like that. Man created a wheel, and then the wheel shaped man, y’know? Well anyway, what I actually wanted to talk about is related to this Blood Pool, it’s pretty interesting. You know how the ONA creates Adepts and sometimes the Adepts don’t make/maintain the grade and are used as, well fodder for the Dark Gods? Yep well it’s the same sort of deal with the ToB, except with the ToB everyone’s considered good fodder for the Dark Gods. It seems to be the quantity of blood they’re concerned about with the Blood Pool, not the quality of character for sacrifice like the ONA here, but I think there’s more to it. Anyway instead of Adepts, there’s these ordeals that individuals are put through which basically tries to turn them into ‘Noctulians’ and these Noctulians are like real vampires’.

Ryan had anticipated the question but wasn’t sure of the answer.

‘I’m not really sure to tell you the truth. I’ve got some idea why they want to make vampire-type creatures, I’ll send you something about that later tonight. And from what I’ve read, ‘Noctulius’ is one of the ONA’s Dark Gods, represents night or something. I’m sure it’s more intricate than that – hang on I’ll check’.

Ryan set the phone down on the desk and typed some words into a search engine. He clicked one of the links that came up and smiled with satisfaction. He picked up the phone while looking at the print that had come up on the screen.

‘Babe, I found something, Order of the Nine Angles’ deity of night. Useful in works of enchantment. Earth based. Key for chant: G minor. Perfume – petriochor...’

Ryan waited.

‘Yeah that’s all its got, I’ll have to look into it further to get the connection between Noctulius and the Blood Pool, but the point is these Noctulians. Remember how I said the other day that the ONA seemed to be a factory for serial killers? Well I was wrong. Serial killers act on impulsive, uncontrolled, emotion – anyway if anything is a factory for killers it's these guys. The 'Noctulian' starts out as a normal human being at first but slowly becomes turned into 'something else' by having his physical and mental changed by all these different, ah, 'alchemical' ordeals. They basically become like vampires, but actual vampires y'know?

Feeding on blood, killing without remorse, letting themselves be used for sexual or sacrificial rites as the ToB needs.

Ryan waited.

'Um, how do I put this? They're like organic vegetables grown on a farm, or like pieces of meat to be butchered for the rites of the Blood Pool. Except that they're imbued with a magickal and powerful energy as they become Noctulians, so they're sort of like Adepts by the time they come to be butchered. Which means an enormous increase in the energy released by their death, because they're more worthy than the average human life as part of the acausal'.

Ryan shifted his chair slightly and sat up straight, staring fixedly ahead.

'It's one of the most horrific concepts I've seen. If they could get it working in a practical way, so that the idea appealed to great numbers and even became a sort of cult in which people just devoted themselves to being used and abused in the belief that their goal in life was to submit to being butchered to bring about this huge intrusion of Dark Gods, a type of farm could actually be set up. I mean how many try-hard girls and guys turn to Wicca or even pseudo-Satanism these days, even if just for attention? Fostering a paradise-type of cult where sex, drugs, violence, etc are all free and accessible – where the members are indoctrinated into wanting to be part of the calling down of the Dark Gods certainly has appeal. In a massive overview of psychological sense most of those that turn to the occult are trying to get back at society because they're the dis-inherited. Society rejects them, they don't know what the hell life's about just that they're angry depressed and looking for some leadership. All they've got are the notions that they bolster their egos with regarding their worth and power and so on and so forth... and really, it wouldn't be that hard to flatter them into being participants in something huge that gave them an identity and even a 'family'. Charles Manson had a cult similar to this, except for the fact that he didn't farm people to butcher, I don't think so anyway, who knows, but look how popular, how eager people are to be part of that STILL! Even thirty-forty years later there are masses of people who want to be told what to do and what life's about in exactly this cultic way!'

Ryan continued staring ahead while he listened to the voice coming from the receiver. He had spoken excitedly while explaining the Noctulians to his girlfriend, but his next few sentences came out thoughtfully, slowly, almost painfully, in a deep calm gravelly voice.

'Exactly babe. And here's where I come in. I've been toying with the possibility for a while now that it's easily possible for one person on the internet to pose as many and in fact bolster the illusion of many separate people simply because you can be anonymous and sign up as anyone you want to as many times as you like. Different emails, different details, change the way you write so it seems like it's the writing of a different person etc – I mean it's not impossible. I half suspected it was occurring on the group I go to...'

A question issued from the receiver.

'Yeah like I thought it possible that the individuals I talk to were not only women, which took a long time to sink in after realising that there was no indication they were men, I'd just assumed – but also that there was the chance I was getting manipulated by one person posing as many. I mean a bit of sociology, a mastery over playing roles, who's going to know? I mean on chatlines for example, this one time I was talking to this person and they pissed me off with their bullshit about Nazi's right. So I signed off and signed back on pretending to be a woman. I messaged him, 'sweet-talked' him, and found out a plethora of information about him just because he couldn't keep his mind out of his pants. I could have used all that info as ammunition for attacking him from my other persona, you see? So it's not impossible...

Ryan smiled as his girlfriend commented warmly on his theory.

'Well my idea is similar to these lines baby. If the ToB could foster some manufactured pseudo-cult reports, like diary entries from 'invisible' members of the Noctulians and deliver enough temptation for others to want to be part of the party – there's no reason why there can't be another Heavens Gate, except this time a Useful one. A Sinister one'.

Ryan paused to think.

'What's that baby? Suicide. Yeah... yes. Actually. It is basically Suicide for Satan. Ha ha! We could put that on t-shirts and badges, fuck, the worlds so hungry for decadence it'll love that! I can see it now. Which is always a good sign, baby. But not only would the cult be like a pool of resources, it'd also get rid of the dross with their consent! Ha ha, I mean is that Sinister or what? Well anyway, I'll see what I can find out about Noctulius and I'll talk to you tonight about it. Okay. I love you too, spunk.'

Ryan smiled, blew kisses into the phone, and hung up.

'Right' he said out loud.

'Time to stop fucking about and actually write something useful'

(Speciel Evolutionary Gardens)

["PLM" or rather "SEG", was written with deliberate capital letters masking a two-fold nature. One aim of PLM was to create a summary for the ToB of their aims by an ONA Initiate: thus the actual name of the MSS, "peaSe, lovE, and munGbeans" is a worded code for the aim of the ToB: "Speciel, Evolutionary, Gardens." Hence also the name/theme of some manuscripts like harvest by the ToB. The second aim was to reveal to those who could see, the nature of the ToB, again, not from its manuscripts, but what lies beneath, in the motivations and worldview that would bring forth such manuscripts and in the consideration of the experiences available to a human being that would give them the impetus to write and act and think and be in such a way as Vampyrlic.]

Numbers. I saw in numbers. The converging of numbers within a black void like sliver thin fish illuminated by a dim glow darting in the black depths of the deepest sea. Like phantoms the numbers passed through and into one another, merging into equation after equation after equation: the animated building blocks of the Matrix.

I picked out patterns only here and there, recognising only a handful of familiar sequences rather than the millions I was accustomed to when back in the causal. The sheer infinitesimal capacity of the void to harbour so many of these fish allowed me only the occasional glimpse of the ‘Equation’ through my gift.

I watched 34587345893450934850954923434400953095309530593 of 435098345093845 kinds of fish, and

349583495083459038590538459038509385093485039 other kinds of fish, merge – and I knew that in vector 932482309480923840923842309

48290348234098239048239408230948 of the Matrix – two particles had shifted apart, taking in each direction as a reflex two more particles, those six particles taking another twenty-four and so on... I watched with interest.

Node 3409345039453934093609834908534098534095859084598 joined this string of luminous digits and I realised that the particles were units of ferrous metal – when node

34590834590348534209238328853738432784238743278432 joined the queue too – I realised a motorbike wheel had skidded – and sure enough in swam

PAST:

Pythagoras changed my decision – by the time I had read the last word my brain had begun tangenting. Over the next three weeks I lay on the floor with pen and paper, staring at an empty coffee cup. Every time I noticed a new phenomenon or indeed a shift in the old phenomena, I gave it a number.

Before midnight arrived I had 18,595 numbers written down. I made a coffee. Then I lay on the floor and I watched the cup again. This time I was in an imperceptibly different location and vector of time and space. Immediately there were at least a thousand new phenomena to be numbered – this I did. But as I watched the cup and the cause and effects interacting with it – a peculiar pattern emerged. I began to recognise previous numbers re-occurring on the cup, and less and less was I able to add new numbers to the list. By the end of the night – I had experimented with changing positions, heights, directions, and angles of observing the cup. Over the days that followed, despite introducing the alternate perspectives – I only added some 150, 000 new numbers to the list. The arc of observation for me, since the cup was on the floor, was less than 360 degrees, perhaps not even 180. This meant each of the degrees within the arc had a significantly reduced list of observable phenomenon that could be attributed to it in light of what I had already catalogued. In other words, the number of phenomena that could occur within the vector of the cup, although numbering in the hundreds of thousands, was starting to seem finite.

When I kicked the cup over. I immediately recalled 18 numbers that coincided with this phenomenon. When I stood it back up, I recalled nearly 2000. I kicked it back over. And recognised another 20 or so. I stood it back up and the number of recognisable data was only 1500. I realised I had replaced the kicked over cup so that the handle was facing away from me. This caused virtually the entire vector of the cup to shift, even the height and width and depth seemed different to me, the light that fell on it, the shadow it caused, etc all different. I again sat down – and gazed at the cup in its new vector. The more I gazed, the more numbers I wrote down, and, surprisingly, I began to notice strings of numbers with particular ‘code’. That is, I wrote down the altered speck of yellow from the pattern that imperceptibly changed hue as I blinked, and noted that the number for this coincided with the numbers from the first vector.

I found that the vector of the cup, although moved a few inches from its original position and facing backwards, altered the sequence in which the numbers composed themselves, but did not change the numbers that were composed. The 348,569 I had written down to catalogue the particular curve in the handle of the cup from a degree of observation of 32.3535 degrees of observational arc, occurred again in this new vector. I was viewing dual-space phenomena: an event taking place twice in space, simply not twice in time.

The fish – for that’s the best way to describe them, moved like causal fish. They flexed in the middle when they turned direction, and darted to and fro forming into first one Googleplex of digits, then darting off (and often through each other, like ghosts) in a different direction to form another. I had first seen the fish when they appeared on my wooden chair. I had been gazing at it, my head filled to the brim with uncountable catalogued phenomenon, calculated millions of numbers – my accustomed life – watching sequence after sequence, form. I had developed my observation of the patterns where phenomena coincided in dual-space to such a degree, that I was able to predict the sequence that would take place when I altered my observational arc in regard to what I was observing. Despite the billions upon billions of combinations of numbers that occurred with each self-vector change, I was developing a mathematical computation that allowed me to find my exact vector in space again by virtue of the data I observed. I could take a sort of snapshot of my sequence in the matrix, and then return to the exact space I had occupied but not the exact time. While moving back and forth in space with my observation faster and faster, experimenting with how fast the sequences could adjust and re-define, I was amazed to see that I was no longer seeing the wooden chair but large strings of numbers forming the dimensions of the space the chair occupied. I was fascinated and dumbstruck that I was observing colour, texture, form, shape, etc. purely in mathematics. Horrified, I picked up the chair and threw it across the room. The wonderful, wonderful, reader, kaleidoscope that occurred as I changed the vector of these numerical phenomena so abruptly, will not be wasted on words. The smash of the timbers sent a whirling explosion, a veritable chaos of numeric data cascading throughout my event horizon.

34593875903845093 of what I fondly called the ‘Grid’. The causal equivalent of placing nodes of a causal beings thought within a restricted frame by a selection of other nodes. I said nothing to my keepers. ‘two’ ‘men’ ‘named’ ‘roger’ ‘and’ ‘steven’.
Instead I watched them inject my body, change my causal sequences, re-define it with the billions of phenomenal nodes, from where it wasn't possible to have my vectors changed. If there was time here, in, how do I describe it? The floorless black air thick with vague black-purple shapes. It might have been what the 'fish' were swimming about in. Space had become transparent, a matter of calculative computation that would stagger the fragile beings of the causal with such weight and meaning it would cancel them out – split them into fish, rather than hold them as form. I did not have a body here. It made me gibber for days, weeks, years, it wasn't something to get used to. I 'saw' without causal eyes, but just blackness and the fish. I could 'move' around, swim as it were, through the blackness, passing and passing through the numerical fish but the sensation was alien. It was like there were 'floors' where I could stop and stand on and watch the fish form into Matrix.

PRESENT:

I held the cup closely to my chest. I could see floral wallpaper formed by swarming nodes. I felt only a slight pressure as the lip of the cup passed through the flesh of my chest. It was as though there were nothing there to cause resistance. Looking down I recognised 34987239847239847234 of the numbers immediately, but the other 23982349283492384 were phenomena I had never seen before. And something else – a ripple, no not really a ripple, a sort of transparent purple cone, which appeared in the air in front of me, and another one coming up from the floor right through me. I stood transfixed and watched as the cones twisted, and with each twisting, distorted the space and the form of all the objects around me, including light. There was a black speck in the base of the cone and as I gazed it grew larger until I was staring into a black hole at the pointed end of the cone. There was 'cold' coming from the darkness of the hole. My observational arc was thrown into a spin and my causal body lifted off its feet and dragged toward the blackness in a slow spiral. My numeric calculative overwhelming me as even the vectors of the matrix distorted causing billions and billions of new data sequences until I was screaming with the pain. I was sucked into the hole, my hands and feet attacking the purple cone as I went – which felt, like, red.

7.

FUTURE:

I've been trapped here. Wherever here is. There seem to be no vectors within the dark void, just the swimming fish and the black-purple shadows. I cannot see the causal world. But by observing the fish, I see by sequences what is happening. There has been a rupture, if one can call it that, similar to mine – for there are no discernible vectors affected, but a tornado of numerica has formed, whirling noiselessly in the void. The black-purple shadows are gathering near it – spiralling upward slowly into the causal realm where the dual space-time has been torn. These shadows do not seem to have a numerical sequence. They are the only phenomena I have thus far observed all this time, that do not.

ON PI

[PI attempted to show the endless enormity of the variables of Life using numbers. It also was intended to convey the esoteric nature of the Dark Gods spoken of in ONA mss. Because my theory of “Equationism” is not bounded by any base or first point from which to proceed, whatsoever – the idea is very difficult to explain. The pi text uses the idea that “everything” is made up of “numbers” (though “everything” and “numbers” are unknown constants). And that everything has or IS a number which combined in equations with every other thing which also have numbers, gives rise to “other things” by making a variable equation. That equationism is what I believe functions at the heart of all we know, and all we know is what I call the Matrix. The Matrix is like a giant blackboard on which numbers write themselves in various and virtually infinite types of equation – each equation causing another number to be created. Since numbers are essentially infinite – it is similar to a theory of Quantum.

The Equationism Theory, shows the reader how vastly immense reality could be, and opens the mind to how many levels on which it could operate. In this story, The Dark Gods have energies, and while energies are certain formations of number that equate and appear as energy on the Matrix, the Dark Gods are the black numberless forms, beyond the Matrix, beyond “The Equation” – beings alien and strange to the Equation that our number-freak sees enter into the Matrix toward the end of the story. The mathematics are also pseudo-mathematical text; the numeric figures are artistic used in a poetic way. Many of the actual equations in the text are likely impossible for all I know. Yet as with many of my writings, the outward appearance is of little concern, and this is partly why I do not spit and polish my texts, provide emphasis on detail or character development when easily I could ~ oftentimes to do so would conceal the esoteric message contained even further within appearance. The ONA’s Deofel Quintet (A selection of Esoteric stories) demonstrated that Esoteria was best packaged in a sparse, but hopefully entertaining, literary exo-skeleton. PI is in tune with this method, expounding my own feelings as to the vast and total indifference of the Dark Gods in comparison to beings such as ourselves. The prose-style was also influenced by my admiration of H.P. Lovecraft.]

PRECURSOR

Christian reached for the copy of Major Fraud Car-Booster. At least, that’s what he thought the ‘M.F.’ stood for. It was difficult to tell the old acronyms from the new ones. Acronyms had become commonplace well before Christians birth. In Christian’s world it wasn’t unusual to have a conversation in the street and walk away completely oblivious to what had been verbally exchanged. Gone were the days when clear instructions were issued by the Police; with the new State-enforced legislation a suspect would often find him or herself bewildered at the end of gun-wielding police officers screaming “LFD!” “AMPD!” “FDI!” -and more often than not shot, for failing to comply. They weren’t even called police anymore: they were called Crime Prediction and Prevention Retaliation Squads, or C.P.P.R.S.

Christian accelerated the M.F.C.B. CD on a turn-table device that read the information via an overhead mounted fine blue laser. Almost immediately the V-Plasma liquid that lay dormant as a silver sheen in a black metal tray began to chemically vaporise into a gas and form imagery upon its misty surface. Vaporisation Plasma worked in most modern Qomputer systems (Q for Quantum), especially the gaming ones. Christian still didn’t know quite how it worked. It was funny how much things had changed after the America For Peace Party had been elected. Christians own name, once Christian, was suddenly analog, then digital, and finally made his prison. Without using his name he could not access basic amenities such as heating or appliances, log in daily to Globus Security Terminal, or exit his P.A.S.S (Public Accomodation Service Sector). Voice recognition had been implemented under the abolishment of the Privacy Act. Coupled with heavy scrutiny from both visible and invisible cameras and the ever-watching eyes of the Globus Security Terminals it was an effective means of ensuring identity was not compromised. Identity theft had run rampant in the early 2020’s but with the new measures and the zero-tolerance policy in place the practice had declined considerably. One’s voice and the right to use words in conversation were free in one’s PDS, but it was a felony to speak outside of your Sector Compound: a fine and unlimited network of nanophones ensured any breach of the verbal code came quickly to the attention of the authorities. About the only crime that had not undergone a transformation since High-Immersive Reality TV (HURTV) Booths had been installed in all PDS’s allowing people to live out their lives vicariously through chosen realities, was Statute 729 – The Theft of H2O. Water-Stealing carried severe penalties for transgressors as the synthesization of water was unsuccessful. Christian had heard of ‘taps’ and ‘baths’ but these were no were to be seen in his time. Instead of taps a pressurised slot in the Intake Chamber of the PDS used a small rubbery-glass compound that could fold into various eating utensils whether for solids or liquids called a ‘Mergette’ that was pushed flat and into the slot for cleaning afterwards. No water was involved so far as Christian knew. ‘Baths’ had been outlawed, and keeping sterile was merely a matter of walking through a special ‘dry-film’ every morning that cleansed the skin of bacterial deposits.

The M.F. game character’s nanophone began to emit. You could choose a pre 2020 cell-phone with a classic ring-tone if you had the right attitude to suit the interface but Christian preferred the nanophone. He pressed a button on the V-plasma console and patched the call through. Interfacial Technology was very popular. Because so little practical action was legal or allowed by Globus, gaming had become a Neon God. You could receive nanophone-calls while gaming without interrupting game play and every racing interface gave you the option of a nanophone so you never missed a transmission and check in with Globus all from the comfort of your entertainment.

It was, despite these conveniences and technological marvels, an oppressive time to live in. All books were State sanctified under issue from a State Library. Rewards were offered for reporting illegal Drug use or the consumption of alcohol and it was very scarce. The old cities with lane ways and alleys had been re-zoned and replaced with aisles of gleaming steel squares that left no shadows in which to conduct or conceal furtive activities. Each aisle was patrolled day and night by CPPRS and the agents of Private Corps. The only thing not monitored in 2062 was Thought. This minor inconvenience to the State was countered with an elaborate security network to punish any thoughts or actions that contravened the hundreds of Statutes in force by heavily armed CPPRS licensed by State.

SupraCorps supplying Gaming Equipment and Interfaci, State-of-the_ art (SOTA) Technology and Weaponry to C.P.P.R.S and Private Corporate Enforcement Agencies (PCEA) were the order of the day. Internet had become Nanonet, the sole source of other human contact for most, and was monitored by Globus Security Terminal. With the collapse of ‘micro-trade’ or small business license, employment was a facet that served state via the armies of the Anti-conspirators who monitored the nanonet and recorded and reported the activities of all nanonet users. They in turn were watched by Globus Security Terminal.

Christian didn’t use the nanonet or “Quad” as it was now known for its dangerous implications to transmit to other PDS’s, just for gaming and occasionally ordering exotic foods. Food was easy to obtain, and relatively cheap: it being a set price for everything with the choice of one or two of the SupraCorps, the globally dominant businesses under Globus.

Day to Day life was entertaining and simple. Everything was sent in that you needed to live by in your PDS. Each PDS was separated by a security door and a major hallway from other PDS’s. The law stated you needed clearance to enter another civilians PDS, but although your own PDS remained State property at all times, you could do anything you liked in it. This freedom of course was monitored to ensure Statute 833 was upheld. Statute 833 meant “Freedom in Freedom”. 833 was partly the reason acronyms were used: to reduce incriminatory actions either knowingly or unknowingly against State. But you still had to be careful whom and what acronyms you traded with or you might find yourself charged under the Hostile Intent Act. CPPRS had unrestrained licence to ‘Negotiate Threats to the State’; and it was common to see people arrested, taken away, or simply shot for possible negative information exchange.

If Christian had known what a “witch-hunt” was he might have used the word in his denouement. ‘Yes’ he mused as he switched off his V-Plasma... it was an oppressive time to live in.

PROJECT EVISCERAL

[Created as a suggested means to fabricate particular events and energies occurring in the Tempel ov Blood at the time this was written – between 2003 and 2004 ev. This was to excite and invoke a need for others to join. A solid premise but an over-hammed execution (subtlety now a stronger point in my armoury) saw ProjEv revised a few times, (AK hated the drop-down TV) and finally replaced with the seminal manuscript peaSe lovE and munGbeans.]

Editors Notes and Introduction: A Brief Synopsis

The Character begins his entries in the feckless manner of a pseudo-satanic persona, apt to be easily influenced and controlled by various Magian distractions. He has for the past few years been developing his ego via the mechanisms of “Vampirism” and the ethos of a black magical society of which he is leader. Having been at the top of the ladder in terms of his own observation of his position in the pecking order amongst his associates and lackeys for so long, he is not surprisingly seduced by the promise of greater power in exchange for giving up some of the bricks in his ego. At first he believes he can cheat the deal and take the power without abandoning any of his vices or persona – he even toys with the idea of giving up some of the things that have (naturally) become stale and boring, not at all worthy oh him the ‘vampiric star’. However, the search for such power takes its own secret toll and he is gradually seduced further and further into gaining the Power, his time and activities spent on reading and working with the texts slowly increases. He eventually finds himself more and more often having to choose between his former Magian persona and his indulgence in drinking, sex and playing vampire, or spending time working with the various manuscripts.

The balance is eventually won by the manuscripts as they reveal the Forces under which his existence labours, and he becomes resentful of many materialistic, consumerist activities: – The transient nature of his friend’s attitudes flitting from moment to moment to match herd conformity and trends; – working on the pretext of elevating the powerlessness of his cult (in comparison to what the 333 texts purport to do.); – smoking, drinking, sex and spending time with the herd.

As the texts educate him on the Forces that affect him and his friends he becomes withdrawn and disillusioned with the previous life and ego he held as evident truth, and gradually creates distance between the factors and influences in his old life in order to take on the new one as a man with genuine power. The inevitable struggle that ensues, with transient Magian vice vs uncompromising higher ideals serves to alienate him piece by piece from his friends, family, job, dreams and ambitions etc. each of these are challenged, and in his thirst for power, discarded as need be. This permanent change in his psyche alienates him from the Magian majority and he finds himself unable to return to ‘normality’ – for everywhere he looks he is now conscious of lower and higher forces influencing every aspect of what he sees. The separation from the womb of the Magian causes him pain, confusion, anger, suicidal tendencies; as the rapidly manifesting fact that he cannot now go back to the LIE, tears, destroys and re-creates him. Now alone on the edge, Magian chains broken, he is ripe fruit for picking from the Tree and is apt to pursue the texts with genuine conviction.

He will pass through the following stages: Ego – where reading the texts serves to elevate, honour and justify his decision to put his old life in storage from time to time (now while living his old life, the texts occupy his waking conscious and he cannot shake them from memory.)

Deliberation – the battle comes to a violent head when he must choose to pursue the sinister or return to his old life; pressured by his friends about his attitude and changing persona.

(Here he will decide, in the instant, what he will do and commit himself accordingly to prove his conviction of the new ideology.) once chosen, he is apt to reinforce his decision by a timeless act of symbolism (where suggestions of ritual can be made) as is the nature of man, and will find himself unable to reconcile the two worlds now split apart. A permanent walling off of the Magian has occurred.

Desperation – he is thrust into a world of unfamiliar and alien concepts, introduced to such secrets that twist and warp his psyche – he mourns for his old life in the times when he is overcome by the requirements to achieve such powers, but it is too late to repent, he has already changed his psyche and destroyed the glamour of his old life. So he forges ahead, certain that he can justify his decision, his addictions his weaknesses, his Magianity... as a good thing... if only he can gain the power promised by the texts...

Disruption – the void between his old life and new life grows larger. His new life brings him contacts, new friends, new ambitions, new dreams, new desires, new terminology... the consequent destruction/creation of forms as the two worlds continue to separate leaves him bewildered. He finds himself in the mental/physical existential limbo. He will either be destroyed by this process, or go on to the next stage.

Contemplation – the two worlds separate, but as the explosions/destruction cease to affect him so violently, he realises the two worlds of the Magian and the Sinister have travelled as far apart as they can in their separate directions only to meet at the extremes and become one again. The Sinister and Magian become new opposites beyond opposites. He is totally entranced by the wonder of this magical phenomenon and settles down (by being fire inspired/ Promethean) – and pursues the texts physically, mentally, with new found confidence, determination, understanding and élan. His goals have changed. He is no longer pursuing the Sinister from a Magian base, he is pursuing God-head from a Sinister base.

Residue – the most dangerous of the stages to the boy. His attainment may well be delusion brought on by ill-preparation for intense psychic damage (as 333 energies are of a choronzonic nature) and unconsciously harbouring the old Magian desires for sex, physical power, fame, vice etc – will be easily seduced by texts such as those dealing with Noctulians.

Enter the Dragon.

Entry 9 Day 2: From the Diary of Evisceral

[Note: the misspellings are deliberate. This was a manufactured pseudo diary entry in mimesis of the type of individual the Tempel wished to attract.] I did the task until my hands were shaking. I'm looking at the once white washed walls, now covered from floor to ceiling, wall to wall with the red crayon scrawls of the Noctulius sigil. I can see the smudges on the wall where I lay during the task, exhausted. And I can see the dark cracks in the wall where I punched them after feeling an intense and weird surge of anger and hatred, that seemed to be contained within the box that is the room, and emanated outward over the city and its people like a black haze. My hands are still sore and cramped from the effort to write the sigil 333 times, and my knuckles are purple and sore from punching the wall. The man who lives above me shouted out while I was doing it, telling me to shut up – and I found myself staring at the roof, cutting through it with my gaze to where he would be standing and visualising cutting him into pieces and smashing each piece with a hammer just so he could GET how wrong he was to interrupt me or question what I was doing. I think I stood there for about thirty minutes, maybe an hour, because my neck had a terrible cramp when my rage subsided and I got back to writing the sigil on the wall. I wanted to kill myself while doing it cause I suddenly realised that what I was doing looked insane to someone else but what they were doing (or NOT doing) was just as insane to me! The whole world seemed so stupid and so wrong, really small while I was writing. I watched people from my apartment window walking in the street below. I am peeling them like bananas, seeing their skin come away from their body's to reveal a bag of pulsing blood – and I am squeezing them with my mind watching the blood erupt all over the other people in the crowd and it drips off their clothes and fills the street but they can't see it, only I can. I got in bed when the sun went down and split people til I couldn't see them anymore cause of the dark and slept until morning.

Entry 10 day 3

I feel invigorated! I don't know if it was the sleep or all the blood essence I had but I feel like a million dollars. The sunlight on the red crayon was eerie and the light on the wall made some sigils stand out more than others. I felt like they were watching me – trapped in the wall id drawn them on and now waiting for me to release them. I lay on my bed and touched myself still looking at the sigils glaring at me. After I came I started wiping the semen on the sheets but then suddenly thought I was wasting it and started drawing the Noctulius sigil on my sheet very carefully. I looked at it for a while and I felt like I wanted to fuck. It felt like the sigils were still watching me as I opened the envelope czar *- had given me. There was a letter inside that had been printed on a computer. It said “ run til your feet are red from blood and walk into the dimension of the wall” . I started running on the spot while looking at the sigils– and then some CUNT!!!, knocked on my fucking door wanting to sell me something!!! I chased him away and went back to my room but I was suddenly very tired and I went to sleep forgetting about the envelope.

Entry 11 Night 3

I had a terrible dream just before about being in a endless hallway and getting chased by figures in black cloaks and hooded faces with hacksaws. There were all these doors in the passage and I couldn't find the right one and they all lead nowhere, and then I cut set upon and the figures cut the top of my head off but i was still alive when they did it. I woke up panicked and am all covered in sweat. and I have my nightlight on which is making the shadows and the sigils look frightening. I am getting out of bed right now to start running on the spot!! Bye diary

I have just arrived home from the meeting. I don't know what I'm feeling right now, its like confusion and at the same time understanding, sort of like I'm confused about some old things but now understand the important ones better. I was not expecting to see what i saw after everything I was told to expect. I was explicitly told not to write about going there or leaving there but that I should go home and write an entry about what I saw and felt while I was there. There was a black table in the room shaped like a large three. and there were three men at each point I guess, of the number “3”. The room was strange, cause it was dark and I couldn't see where the walls were or even the roof. And the floor felt weird too and only after they asked me to come closer to the table did I realise why. It wasn't flat, but shaped like a funnel though a quite flat one and in the middle of the floor illuminated by the light there was a small box – black, and with two small handles on the side. I heard a female (?) voice telling me to approach the table, so I did. Then the voice told me to open the box. I did that too and inside was a remote control like for a TV. Then the voice which seemed to be coming from the far end of the table, told me to point the remote control at the “white emblem” behind me. And behind me on the wall there was a light that was shaped just like the white two-headed dragon in the wamphyrism book I had seen at the tempel. The voice said “within you comes without, and trial has turned you wild, keep now this memory, and DON'T LOOK BACK” and told me to ‘activate the light with the red button’. I did that and this enormous TV screen came down from the roof. A bit dramatically (I thought) I saw that old footage of the nuclear bomb going off and I all along I wanted to turn to see who was behind me at the tables, but I luckily stopped myself! Then there was a black and white documentary sort of, and there was these short films of their lives. One was of a fat guy and it showed him sitting at home on the couch watching the game. There was a clock right above his head and the hands were showing in different positions in each bit of the film but he just sat there. Then there was a picture of a building and people dressed in suits were filing in and out of it. A man came out of the foyer wearing glasses and carrying a briefcase. Then the film changed to show him with two young girls, laughing and running around a suburban backyard with them. And then it showed a picture of a newspaper which read “Hot Shot McGott Cans Manns” (Manns is the serial killer that was supposed to have believed he was working for the devil that killed all those people in Greensville, TN two years ago). Then there was footage of an old house. An Oldsmobile is parked out the front. An old lady is watering her plants. Then there was all these slow flashes of her dead. Shes on the floor in a pool of blood. Then there's a shot of her butt with bite marks. And then a close-up of her head but not her face of her ear torn off. I was pretty scared while looking at these pictures. No one knew I was at the meeting and I wouldn't be missed by anyone so after seeing this I was ready to run. But then the TV reel stopped playing and the TV went back into the roof. The white light wasn't there anymore and I got told to turn around by that same weird female voice. Then she said ‘three crimes, one of them Magian, one of them sinister, one of them yours’. I remember I was surprised by what she said because I didn't understand which crime was supposed to be mine. She said to me ‘for your service the dark whores await you, ever remember the price you pay for disobedience and the ecstasy bestowed for discipline’ I made the sigil of Noctulius in the air as I was told to by my tempel contact who set up the meeting. Then I was told to leave the meeting, get my reward (which I'm not allowed to discuss) and wait for someone to contact me.

NOVUM PRINCIPIUM

The lingering odour of stale takeaway remnants pervaded the interior space of the parked car. Perhaps an abandoned Styrofoam cup with unfinished dregs of weak coffee that had turned to sludge in days gone by – or the sweet scent of stray late-night French fries that had fallen into that irritating gap on the driver's side seat belt clasp, where hands were useless to retrieve them.

The rain was falling steadily, smearing the chilled and periodically condensing windshield window with lascivious drops that streaked the glass and pattered in rhythm on to metal roof above his head.

The dull roar was undercut by the faint music vaguely making itself known. The indistinct drums and guitar of an obscure band. Not because he had some deeper musical appreciation and connection to the underground realm of weird indie music, but because it had merely been encountered and extracted as a keeper from one of his often-fruitless searches to expand his musical tastes. He would treat it like so many others, perform his ritual, of listening to it on repeat, letting the novelty flood and fuel his soul to feel it, fall into it, extract from it every beautiful note and key change, until its newness was exhausted, and the song's power faded no longer able to serenade him.

Ryan checked the glare of the green led-light digital clock. 9.27pm. One would be leaving soon. He just had to wait – there is nothing else for it. Maybe once he learned the timetable, saw a pattern, he could calculate a more optimal strategy, tighten the timelines, arrive later – but for now, it was a guessing game. A curious endeavour of cat and mouse.

Parked on the gravel in the rain, the bleary headlights of traffic, strangers going about their whatever, heading home from work, maybe going to it, doing their shopping and who the fuck knows what else. It all felt alien, and Ryan's thoughts caught the absurdity of it, seized it with steely claws and turned the thought this way and that, like a mechanic meticulously analysing a detached alternator to find the fault. All these metal boxes, squat and streaming, tanks on an endless road, rushing around to arrive and for what. To get home to family. To see a loved one. To enter warm rooms with warm arms and warm people. Mobile rooms on wheels. Ryan briefly wished he had somewhere like that to go. As if to aid emphasis, several illuminated blurs schoomed past him making his car shudder. The gloomy sky had receded now – the grey blank suffused with the darkened blue of late evening. Night had fallen. Rain continued to solemnly descend.

Then, as he strained forward in his seat to confirm, the boom gate rose up. The frontal visage of a car, its headlights perpendicular beams made an appearance. Ryan sat up, buckled his seat belt and turned the ignition. The car purred to life. Which way are they going he wondered, but he didn't have to wait long – his quarry turned onto the road and began driving away from him. Ryan jabbed the button that silenced his music, indicated and pulled out onto the road in predatorial pursuit. He stayed a considerable, acceptable distance behind what he'd now identified as a mauve Falcon, until such time as the opportunity arose that he and they were forced to pause at traffic lights. As he cruised to a stop with general space between the two vehicles, he noted the falcon's number plate. Memorised it. No need to write it down, the superior method was to avoid all visible records.

The light persisted to stay red, and Ryan mused briefly on his surroundings, neon shop lights and gleaming tarmac wet and shiny with rain. As he concentrated then on the haphazard pattern of raindrops on his window, the drops suddenly emanated a uniform green glow. The light had changed. As the mauve Falcon accelerated and drove straight, then indicated to turn right, Ryan followed in causal lockstep. He wondered if the Falcon's trajectory would be straight-forward or deviant. It could be going literally anywhere in the city. Still, it would leave clues when and where its driver chose to stop. Indications of familiarity that could be used as pointers to zero in. To make estimated guesses and triangulate. The Falcon did not stop, and arriving at an intersection, indicated a left turn. Ryan copied suit. Though, he knew, it was almost time to fall off. It was a process – not an interrogation. It had to be subtle, undetectable, not a blazing trail of light that set off sirens. Waiting once more at the lights while the rain smattered across both cars, the street and the night, empty but for this unsuspecting entanglement of two strangers, Ryan looked at his GPS and noted the street name. Green light and they moved in symphony, his car giving plenty of space. The Falcon was completely unperturbed in its motion. As the next intersection approached within a hundred metres, he indicated left and pulled his car over to the side of the road. His eyes stayed fixed on the Falcon. It turned right. Ryan made a mental note and checked his GPS again. A steely nod of mental confirmation dominated his mind. Alright. So, they all live more or less in the same area. No-one seems to leave the city yet. All local. He wondered if the Falcon was friends with the Commodore with the mags given their close vicinity. He sat, in his car, with no music, staring intently into space for at least a minute. The Falcon was a new one, good. In a few days or so, he'd repeat the drawn-out chase. Or maybe a week. Give memory time to diffuse. Park somewhere different, wait for someone different. In the meantime, he now had multiple new departure points from which to follow them. Eventually, with enough patience, he would piece it together, the route. All their routes. And they would show him their homes.

‘What are you doing?’

‘Making balloons’.

‘Why? What for?’

‘The protest tomorrow’

‘What do you mean, what are you doing with the ash?’

‘I’m making a mix. If you take flour and water and add ashes to it, it becomes like liquid black napalm’.

‘What? You mean like a bomb?’

‘No nothing like that. You don’t light it. But you watch these protests going on all around the world, over and over they riot in the streets, but it’s weird you know, it’s like they all do the same thing and are always surprised – no-one ever thinks to blind the visors’.

‘You mean the police visors? On their helmets?’

‘Yeah. It’s such a weakness. I don’t understand how people don’t see that. They throw all this other shit, but they never seem to grasp that the police need to see. Those riot shields and visors are clear plastic, tough as fuck, but they’re a massive weakness. What can they really do with that gear if they can’t see?’

‘So, you are going to blind them?’

‘Not literally no mate, but flour, water, ash are all unbannable substances you can get virtually anywhere. Because if you used black paint, they’d find a way to ban it like they did with spray paint -or trace it, y’know how they are. But if you make it an accepted thing to make and take these balloons and you had hundreds of them, you could pretty much make it impossible for them to see. Especially since they all line up in a row you can use the same shot with a better chance of hitting one’.

‘Mm. I mean yeah that could work. Makes sense really’.

‘Yeah, it does, right? But why the fuck is no-one doing it then? It’s weird man. Same tactics, same failures, same fight. People need to think harder eh’.

‘Where are you going, are you done?’

‘Yeah, I’m going out the back to practice throwing them. They took all our weapons, everything’s illegal, can’t even have a slingshot – but everyone has a throwing arm, and everyone can get fucking good with it. Pair it up with something effective to throw and that’s a potential game changer’.

‘Dude, you’re fucking crazy, you know that right?’

Ryan stared at the burning coals. They had died down, were now emanating a piercing orange glow, molten rivulets of fire streaked their black surfaces, underpinned by a carpet of tame lava. He wondered if this batch would work. The last one’s were not bad, but they needed to be better than not bad, they needed to withstand the forced stamp weight of a tactical boot. Clay on its own had proven greatly ineffective – although if you hardened the spherical pellets by firing them with a kiln, they could be a secondary back-up. But no, there had to be a better way. Even if clay was inexhaustible and ubiquitously available, whatever was used had to be able to stand up to brute force to properly do its job.

Aluminium cans had been another experiment, port of call. You couldn’t go more than twenty feet without finding one. As a tactical weapon they were of great interest. Defensive mainly. A virtually unlimited source of tough metal. It could be wrapped into sticks, wrapped into sticks and make a kind of reinforced rebar. Or you could use rebar, but it was heavy, unwieldy stuff, not suited to purpose. But aluminium... it was malleable, cut-able, shape-able, mould-able. You could do all sort of things with it. Weave it into clothing in shielding patches to withstand some knife strikes, or work on producing aluminium long bars, wrapping can scrap around can scrap to make poles, held together with dozens of rubber bands and sewn into the forearms of long sleeves to prevent batons breaking bones. Theoretically, at least. But could it be used to make scatter-footing? Ball-bearing like pellets that could be thrown behind the lines and destabilise footing?

Completely unrelated, Ryan briefly wondered about the properties of oil-paint. It never set or dried properly unlike cooking oils. Though motor grease was probably the more effective coating for protester clothing. The hard plastic of the soles of tactical boots, the firm pressure applied by their stance if not just their body weight alone, and the off-balance counterweight of holding of riot shields in front of them made them susceptible to slippery surfaces. To ball-bearings. But where could you reliably get enough ball-bearings really? No, everything had to come from trash, from common items, from an inexhaustible supply. Ideas were like that too. How much riot footage had he viewed now? Always the same scene, riot squads in equidistant lines with protective visored helmets and a phalanx of poly carbonate long-shields. And that one repetitious icon of protests, almost as if it were designed to program protester tactics toward defeat before the battle had even begun by seeding a faulty strategy into their psychology: that long drawn back overarm lob of a flaming petrol bomb or Molotov bottle. Not even during the eruption of the United States civil populace en masse during the Black Lives Matter protests was there any change. No dye packs, no powders, literally nothing launched at those gleaming plastic teasers that were the glaring blind spot of modern-day tactical police squads. It was bottles, rocks, crates, lobbed over the front line, where they clattered for the most part harmlessly onto Kevlar or ballistic plates. No good. But pellets, homegrown, homemade, in their thousands, now that might make a difference. Especially so when the entire squad had its vision limited. When it must remove helmets to see, drop or lower its shields which become a tactical hindrance when they stop facilitating protected surveillance. The moving of shields would allow further opportunities for a carpet of hardened spherical balls to pervade their ranks, breach their security. Especially on advance.

Oh shit. Ryan's face, bathed in an amber hue, frowned at the fire before him – he should be wearing a mask. Not a standard protection against the state identifying him from long range CCTV vehicular stations that would bide their time and arrest protesters foolish enough to participate without such a measure. No, a face mask, here, now, because aluminium fumes were toxic. Come to think of it, burning them wasn't good for the environment either. Well. There was probably some other way, maybe there was no need to bake them into balls. Maybe some way to crush can halves into spheres would work. The important thing was the diameter. Too big and they'd be observable, kick-able, ergo easily removable from the field of operations, and wouldn't roll under the tiny lift gap of boots. Too small and they would either be uselessly compressed, fit unhelpfully between the tread of tactical soles, or fail to produce that desired violent ankle-roll that led to an incapacitating sprain. There were likely other trip hazards available too. Tsk. Too many protesters rambling on about the planned nefariousness of Neo-liberalist agenda and not enough practising to achieve perfect aim. To hit the sweet spot just behind the armoured line whether from twenty, fifty or a hundred units' distance – or the wall of the armoured line itself, with paint, admittedly – a decent idea – but it wouldn't take long for the state to address that.

And, besides. Besides... you don't fight fair war. Well, more precisely, you don't win fair war. And you didn't win playing chess. Turning up to your side of the board, faithfully taking your place on your allotted side and in the space and manner and uniform they tailored for you. Or by predictably exchanging a controlled sequence of moves. You didn't win, playing chess. You didn't go to war, to play games. You went to war, to annihilate your enemy. First though, you had to Know your enemy. Their real weaknesses. Their genuine vulnerabilities.

‘The question is: Who is my enemy?’, Ryan wondered, as he thoughtfully stared at a nearby discarded plastic jar bearing the label of peanut butter.

The thrum and screaming whine of the printer cut the dense warm silence with its shrill decree. It was done. Sheet after sheet after sheet of neat rows of capitalised black text bearing names and addresses formed a thick ream of toasty sheets resting across the feed of the disgruntled printer. It had done its job and was now adjusting itself internally and esoterically with a series of clicks and unexplained, unknowable sounds, as if irritated at being requested to perform its designed function and bearing the ire of a cat whose fur is stroked back-to-front. How dare he wake it. How dare he touch it. But it was quiet now, immobile and asleep, as if it had never been woken at all.

Ryan sighed. Cutting them up would be laborious. But, he knew, it would be no less an urbane task for the others doing the same thing, either. Across the state, a few others, printing and cutting these sheets into little palm-sized rectangles. They’d scatter them. Ideally between them. But it didn’t really matter. Either way they would serve a purpose – psychological warfare. Take the game off the chess board, out of the streets, out of controlled space. Could you level the playing field? It seemed unlikely. An armada of concentrated, codified, canonised violence. The focused prism of unparalleled funding, power and enforced legitimacy – a true Goliath of an instrument, played to near perfection in its pursuit of remaining sovereign. The State. And yet, all forms, all of them – prisons, security, vaults, complexes, fortresses, had their weakness. Like all forms do. At the end of the day, it was just humans playing games within games; dress-ups and make-believe, like playground kids. Sure, there was death, and torture and deprivation – maddening righteousness and R-R-R-Reality to keep it all in the theatre, foment the pattern, square the circle, denude support through timeless practiced discourse – but we were all the same. All had homes to go to and from, soft spots and sweet spots, inbuilt and universal fragility and uniformity in our 3-D composition and societal structuring. Rome wasn’t built in a day – and it didn’t fall in one either.

WELCOME TO THE WORLD

An ambitious project being undertaken by the Temple of THEM and mother and friend of the Temple, JD, is the publication of a children’s book tentatively titled: Welcome to the World. The philosophy behind the book implies that children are not dullards or simpletons but capable of comprehending reasonably complex concepts, words and symbolism if adequately explained to them by the parental figure. The onus is on the parent to bond with their child and teach them to think harder and more carefully about impending decisions and pressures the world will eventually make on them, stories its residents will tell them and to consider all of the options available under a wider umbrella of competing values.

THEM put forth a number of demands in agreeing to author and co-illustrate a book intended for children.

That the book be non-denominational

That it not seek to re-indoctrinate the child into a new religion

That it not be made banal or overly simple for the child and demand a certain intellectual onus

That the onus be shared between the child and the parent to foster the responsibility of explaining the ways of the world without mystification.

That absurdity be highlighted

That absolute authority be put in question

That a sense of wonder and excitement about the world permeate the story.

Welcome to the World (WTTW) seeks to teach children to look at all of the competing options vying for their attention, loyalty, time and to think for themselves.

To convey an understanding that there are boundless opportunities and opportunists and that their role in the world is to navigate a course through them not to them.

A child's book that teaches open questioning of authority and established forms at such a young age may be considered 'satanic' for its attempt to impart a solid grasp of the world in a mature fashion and foster independence from being defined or controlled by it.

Certainly, it does not hold Christianity in high regard but neither does it fabricate lies of it and reflects an accurate portrayal of its absurdity and its illogical mechanisms.

No book is unbiased and our distaste for faith, for zealotry and irrational choices on which to base life is plain to see but we do not seek to pull the child away from one form only to replace it with another of equal value. Nor do we tolerate the politically correct absurdity of treating all religions or forms as equal and deserving of equal respect: some are outright dangerous and delusional and many openly rob a child or person of their autonomy and are portrayed accordingly.

We may well ask, what is the outcome of teaching a child to put authority in the context of self-discovery and autonomy? It may make unusual demands on the parents whose role may shift from adjudicator of experience to agitator, and such agitation an evolution forward of the autonomous being equipped from an early age with sound logical and philosophical tools to meet the challenges the world makes upon the soul. WTTW has been intended as an inclusion amongst the standard fare that constitutes reading for children, not a replacement.

The Art for WTTW has been a joint collaboration between WR and JB, with WR writing the text: a sample of which is given below. The style of the writing leans toward the meter of Dr Seuss.

WTTW has been intended for a very small print run and a private project designed to equip our members children with books that impart our ideals and values which are to question ideals and values. If however you would like to order a copy for your child you can register your interest with WR at [redacted]

WELCOME TO THE WORLD

In a very dark place a long time ago, before there was fire, before there was snow, before there were dinosaurs and humans you know, there was THEM.

No-one knows where they came from,
Or even remembers their names,
Or what they looked like,
but here is the great shame.

In your lifetime as you grow older, older than 3, older than 4, older than 5
many people will try to tell you things some that are true and some that are lies.

They will tell you that they know where you came from and are going, and about a great man in the sky surrounded by angels that are glowing,
They'll tell you the world and all of THEM too,
were created by this man,
and that he wrote a book for you,
a book called a bible, Torah or Koran, and they'll tell you about a monster who they named Satan.

They will tell you about this sky-man and make him seem really nice but religion is well known for telling big lies.

They will tell these things not because they are true but because they believe them, and say so should you and you might just want to, because you are young and impressionable too.
As you get older than 6, older than 7, older than 8,
You will see many wondrous things beautiful and great,
and you may wonder,
as others have too,
who or what made them?
and who or what made you?
But if you listen to those stories, and believe them to be true,
then you may just miss out on someone telling the truth to you.
I don't know either how all of this came to be, but I know that for everyone with no exception it is ultimately a mystery.
The forces of THEM are in the skies and the clouds, in the seas and the mountains,
in single people and in crowds,
in hearts and in minds in all things you touch and all that you see, inside you and your brain and outside in time, weather and words that we speak, what are these forces I hear you ask?
Well, they are simply things stronger than us that put us to task.
